Debate in House Arouses Great Oratorical Combat

Premier Borden Makes Masterly Reply to Sir Wilfrid

SPEECH FROM THRONE SUBJECT

R. A. Bennett Moves Reply--Bills to Amend Election Law Introduced

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—When the house met, E. A. Lancaster, M. P., for Lincoln introduced three of his bills, one to amend the marriage act, one to amend the Dominion elections act and the third to amend the Railway act.

The first bill, Mr. Lancaster explained, was intended to provide that whenever a marriage took place in Canada officiated by any clergyman, or others authorized by the Canadian law to officiate thereat that mirrage could not be declared illegal by any association, church or tribunal. A certain legal decision had been given. Mr. Lancester said, which seemed to render this matter, which never should have been in doubt doubtful for the moment. Hence, it was well that Canada's attitude in the matter should be defined to the world.

The election bill provides that for Dominion elections no voter can vote except in his home constituency and that no voter can have more than one vote.

The railway bill is a duplicate of the one regarding the revision of the payment for railway crossings, which the senate threw out last year.

Reply to Address From Throne.

R. B. Bennett, of Calgary, then arose to move to reply to the speech from the throne.

Mr. Bennet made an effective speech which was listened to with great attention. He began by saying that his selection for the important duty which he was now fulfilling was a recognition of the fact that his constituency was the third largest in Canada west of the great lakes. He also recalled the fact that this was the first parliament of the British empire opened by a governor general who was a member of the royal family. The Duke of Connaught was welcome to Canada not only because he was of the blood royal but because of his fine record on the burning plains of Egypt and in Malta, as well as in Ireland and England, and in every other place in which he had labored for the empire. The speaker also referred to the fact that an additional welcome to the duke was extended on account of his near relation to the late Queen Victoria.

West Melting Pot for Immigrants.

The Canadian people had made it clear that they would never have anything to do with anything that would run the risk of changing the Dominion's relations with the great empire of which she formed a part, or render more difficult of accomplishment the hope, that was in the breast and heart of all, that same day there would be a commercial and organic union of that empire.

Mr. Bennett congratulated Sir Wilfrid on the fact of reaching his 70 birthday, and expressed the hope that he would be long spared to lead the opposition. (Laughter).

In discussing the defeat of reciprocity, Mr. Bennett said that from the western viewpoint such a defeat was extremely fortunate. The west was the melting pot into which all the nations were poured and thousands of settlers had come from the United States. All those American settlers had started out to support reciprocity but, when they realized the genius of the Canadian people was against reciprocity they too, to their credit, turned and voted as Canadians would have them vote.

Urges Large Grants for West.

Mr. Bennett made a plea for large expenditures in the west. Roads were needed on which wheat could be carried to the elevators. The continued fertility of the soil had to be provided for. He hoped to see a depratment of public health in Canada. The government should turn its attention to human preservation.

The speaker was pleased with the policy of the government in connection with the terminal elevators at the head of the lakes. No mistake must be made either, regarding the Hudsons bay terminal elevators. No profit company should get hold of this great trade route. Elevators were needed at Vancouver and at Prince Rupert also. Even at present wheat could be shipped from Calgary around the Horn to Liverpool as cheaply as by the eastern route. The opening of the Panama canal would make the need of the elevators on the Pacific coast more keenly felt.

The tariff commission which the government was to appoint would be of great assistance to the west and the east alike. He hoped that this body would take up the question of the increased cost of living and do something.

No Connection With C. P. R.

The census results were disappointing, and certainly Calgary had 6,000 or 7,000 more citizens than the census gave it, although Calgary grew so fast, that these might have come in after the figures were taken, (Laughter). He believed that future returns would not be disappointing. Canada had passed the worst point. Mr. Bennett devoted the remainder of his speech to tariff matters. The west was willing to bear its share of the burden of the tariff.

He also believed that the government should provide some means to limit the issue of securities by the corporations. (Mr. McLean—Hear, hear). (A voice—"It is the C. P. R. speaking.")

Mr. Bennett said he was glad this accusation came early. He had been C. P. R. solicitor, and gave this company his best. When he became a member of parliament he resigned all connections with railways, and was now prepared to give Canada his best services, (Cheers).

In conclusion he thought that Canada should first seek her market within the British empire and so strengthen communities. He congratulated the present government on having already taken steps in this direction.

Albert Seveigny, of Dorchester seconded the address with a brief speech in French.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier arose to speak at 4:30. The fact that today marked his 70th birthday was made an occasion for a special demonstration by both sides of the house. His desk was covered with an enormous bouquet of roses, a gift from his fellow members.

Sir Wilfrid began by congratulating the mover and seconder of the address for their eloquence. He congratulated the seconder of the reply for his speech today, and contrasted it with speeches delivered by the same gentlemen before Sept. 21. If the electors of Dorchester had been present today they would have said: "Can this be the candidate we elected two months ago?" Sir Wilfrid thanked Mr. Bennett for his birthday congratulations, in fact he wished to thank all the members of the house and especially those on the opposite side for their kindness in this respect. The member from Calgary had wished him to remain long in his present position to judge and criticise the government of the day. Well, by the way the government had begun the task, he feared, would be too great for a man of his advancing years.

Sir Wilfrid paid a high tribute to the way in which the Duke of Connaught had already endeared himself to Canadians. He was taking up the work with the same zeal and enthusiasm shown by his predecessor. His gracious consort had already won all hearts by the simplicity of her manner, her dignity of bearing and the kindness of her disposition. These qualities were appreciated in every walk of life and had a double charm when found in the highest rank.

Criticizes Speech.

There was not much, the ex-premier continued, in the speech from the throne to invite great discussion at the present time. The speech had promised improved roads, aid to agriculture and the establishment of a tariff commission. It was impossible to estimate the value of these things until the character of the measures providing for them was known. They could mean much, or they could mean little.

There was, however, in the speech from the throne words placed there by the honorable gentlemen in power at which the members of the opposition have every reason to congratulate themselves. It spoke of the spread of continued prosperity, and the increasing revenues, revenues better than anything in the past, and they hoped such a state of affairs would continue. Fifteen years ago such a compliment could not be paid to an out-going administration. Fifteen years ago agriculture was discouraged and commerce was disturbed. Today, how different things were. Today, agriculture flourished and industry was never more active. Fifteen years ago Canada was in a position of a poor colony, now it had reached the dignity of a nation and upon it was fixed the gaze of the world.

"Never did an administration come to office as we did and 15 years later go off as we did with so much accomplished. In fact, the opposition have told the people that they had better put matters in less enterprising hands than ours. I do not wish any better epitaph of the administration that the one given by the present advisors of his excellency and when they go out of office they will be fortunate indeed if their successors will speak so well of them.

Trade Development.

"In the speech from the throne it is announced that an effort is being made to develop trade between Canada, British Guiana and the West Indies. My honorable friends must know that not much trade can be obtained in that direction. The minister of customs knows it. I do not say this to disparage the work of my honorable friends. On the other hand I approve of any attempt whether in British countries or others, to find a market for Canada's surplus products. The present administration rejected a recent trade agreement on the grounds of sentiment, but I fear that there is more sentiment than anything else in the present proposal.

"As regards reciprocity, I wish to speak frankly, I frankly think the voters of Canada have made a great mistake. Nevertheless, we accept their decision loyally and uncomplainingly. What is the situation? We negiotated a treaty with the United States to remove all obstacles, so far as they bore on natural products, in order that these might flow freely from one country to another. Such arrangements are not new. Arrangements of such character have been made a part of negotiations of every nation. When Sir John A. Macdonald advised the Canadian people to place a high tariff wall between Canada and the United States, he did so with the idea of making way for some negotiation such as that we recently entered into.

More Necessity Arguments.

"Canada is an agricultural country. Sixty per cent of the Canadian people get their living by agriculture. Each year more and more land is being devoted to that industry. Each year more is produced than Canada can possibly consume. We had this condition in view when we entered into the British preference arrangement. The result of our policy was a great increase of trade between Canada and Britain. Then the Japanese treaty, the French treaty and other treaties were entered into with the idea of getting a market for our surplus product. While the demand for an American market came chiefly from the west it did not find any favor with the party now in power.

"It did not meet with objection from an economic standpoint, but solely on sentimental grounds. During the late election campaign the nearest to any economic argument was a speech from Hon. Clifford Sifton, which I read because the remarks from that source are usually worth some attention."

Sir Wilfrid read a paragraph from Mr. Sifton's speech telling how the United States was now confronted with an unemployed problem, with a problem of exhausted resources and with monopolistic tendencies characteristic of the country.

Contradicts Hon. Mr. Sifton

"What," asked Sir Wilfrid, "are the chief causes of these tendencies. It is the high tariff, now in force in the United States, which makes trade from outside countries impenetrable on any fair terms. That high tariff has now arrested her development, made her fields deserted, congested in the cities a larger population than ever before. It has put the United States at the mercy of the monopolists. This is the cause of the United States' problem and the difficulty is now how to get rid of these causes which lead to the present condition. Now compare our own conditions to the conditions in the United States. Do we see much difference? Are we free from monopolistic control? Do not trusts and mergers flourish as luxuriously in the Dominion as in the United States? Mr. Sifton, in saying we would involve ourselves in the problems of the United States, is singularly mistaken. If it is true that the meat trade packers in Canada are organizing to raise prices to the consumer, we have already the first proof of Canada's mistaken decision on Sept. 21. It is not yet two months past and the Canadian people are already about to suffer for listening to the voice of passion and not to the voice of reason. Opponents of reciprocity say the established connections would have been endangered thereby. There is a large class in Britain, a class of British imperialists who hope to build up a united empire, not by removing the present shackles but by creating new ones. This class hailed the defeat as a great victory and expressed the hope that the English manufacturer would be admitted to Canada to compete freely with the Canadian manufacturer.

British Trade

"The idea of British imperialists is to have British goods compete freely with Canadian goods. There are at the present time on the sea certain British imperialists and they will learn on their arrival that there is no more hope for British competition in Canada than there is for the United States competition. They will learn that if they are to reach the goal of their ambition they will have to come back to the Liberals.

"To my friends in Calgary, I say that the last election was carried under false pretensions. There are men on the other side who truly believed that the rejection of reciprocity was a great service to Britain and the British empire. With respect to their views we will not quarrel; their eyes are blind; there is no use to try to open them at the present time. We are as yet too near Sept. 21; but so far as helping Britain is concerned, I believe the defeat of reciprocity has done an injury to Britain and the British empire.

The old civilization is going—the new civilization is now fully established. The old empire of aggrandizement and power of conquest is passing away today. We have so far advanced that there is no general conflagration over the conflict of Italy and Turkey, or of France and Germany in Morocco. The new civilization is so far advanced that the voice of the people is heard; that there is no general war. In view of the situation in Europe, the friendship of the United States would be a big thing for Britain.

Attitude Towards United States

"Mr. Borden says that in the rejection of reciprocity there was no hostility to the United States. I do not believe that any Canadian was influenced by hostility to the American people but

PHYSICAL CULTURE FOR SCHOOL GIRLS

Class Will Be Trained at Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium

TEACHERS ASK HIGHER SALARIES

Domestic Science Teacher Resigns--Position Will Not Be Filled

As a result of an arrangement between the school board and the directors of the Y.M.C.A. a class of girls from the high school will commence to receive instructions in gymnasium and physical culture work next month according to an announcement made at last night's meeting of the trustees. About 20 girls are expected to take advantage of the opportunity. It was explained that two lessons per week for three months would be given for $50, the class paying this amount to the Y.M.C.A. physical director through the school board.

The board received the resignation of Miss Cecilie Cowap, domestic science instructor and decided that the position should not be filled at present. A request from the Nelson Operatic and Dramatic society for the use of the public school assembly hall for rehearsals was refused.

Dr. Annie Verth Jones protested against the minutes of the meeting of Oct. 23 being ratified on the ground that she received no notification of the meeting. The meeting, she said, was invalid. She accused the board of "juggling" the date and hour with the object of preventing her from being in attendance.

Dr. E. C. Arthur—As for the date that was published. There was no juggling. As for the change in the hour, I admit that.

Dr. Jones—I was not asked if a week after the regular date would suit me.

Dr. Arthur—No, nor was anyone else.

Dr. Jones—Trying to get me by telephone was not a proper notification. The meeting was not legal.

A. D. Emory moved and R. G. Joy seconded that the minutes of the meeting be confirmed.

Dr. Jones—I don't think that right. If you pass that motion you can hold meetings at any time without me and then confirm your actions.

The resolution was passed, Dr. Jones protesting against the appropriation of $75 to cover the expenses of Dr. E. C. Arthur's visit to the coast to attend the meeting of the provincial school trustees.

Want Higher Salaries

The payroll amounting to $1780 and accounts aggregating $580 were passed Dr. Jones observing that she saw "lots of insurance on the finance committee's report," and claiming that the expenditure was not provided for in the estimates.

Dr. Arthur—The insurance must be kept up, I presume.

The board laid over a letter signed by W. E. Hoadley, A. H. Webb and Alfred Cullin asking for a higher rate of salaries for male teachers, until the next meeting.

Dr. Jones—I believe Mr. Webb gets $70 a month. Who told him to teach drawing at the high school? Which member of the board told him? I thought that Mr. Goldfinch was supposed to do that work.

Mr. Joy—I am in favor of an increase

The chairman—Yes, but we can do nothing until the next estimates are prepared.

On motion of Mr. Joy, seconded by Mr. Emory, the matter was left over until the December meeting.

Dr. Jones—After the communications are dealt with I would like my questions answered.

Miss Mary I. Messenger wrote from Vancouver asking for a position. The letter was filed.

Miss Messenger mentioned that she had bronchial trouble and was compelled to leave the coast which caused Dr. Jones to remark that all teachers had to be inspected by the medical inspector and to declare that all the Nelson teachers had not been regularly inspected. Dr. Arthur said that they had been inspected last year. The discussion brought forth the remark from Dr. Jones, addressed to Dr. Arthur, "A Scotchman always asks another question when he does not want to answer one."

Dr. Arthur—It happens that there is no Scotch blood in me. But there is considerable Irish fighting blood in me

Use of Assembly Room

Dr. Jones moved on the reading of a letter from George A. Brown asking that the Nelson Operatic and Dramatic society should be allowed the use of the public school assembly room, that the request be granted. She thought the school assembly room should be thrown open more frequently to the public.

Chairman Irvine—If the performance were for charitable purposes I would agree but in this case it is different.

Dr. Arthur—There is a resolution on the minutes that the room be allowed to be used only for school purposes and for the public library and hospital, which are allowed the room once each year.

The chairman, Mr. Emory and Mr. Joy all expressed regrets at being compelled to refuse the request of the operatic society but explained that in view of the former motion no action could be taken.

Miss Cowap in a letter resigning as teacher of domestic science, thanked the board for the kindness it had shown her while she had been a member of the school staff. The motion to accept the resignation and that the position be left vacant for the present was moved by Mr. Emory and seconded by Mr. Joy.

Dr. Jones—Now that the communications are dealt with, I'll repeat my question. Who told Mr. Webb to teach drawing at the high school?

The chairman—I believe it was the secretary at the request of Mr. Smillie.

Dr. Jones—I think it was a mean advantage to take of a $70 a month man. I have heard complaints that he has been out of his room too much.

The other members of the board said that they had received no complaints.

In reply to a question from Dr. Jones Dr. Arthur stated that the holding of the promotion examinations at Christmas was in the hands of the principal. Dr. Jones contended that the law had not been carried out in this respect and that the children should be examined every six months for promotion and be promoted for length of service at the end of every year in any event.

Physical Culture for Girls

Dr. Arthur told the board that arrangements had been made with the directors of the Y.M.C.A. whereby a class of girls from the high school could receive physical instruction at the gymnasium for two hours every week for three months for $50. Each individual pupil would pay her share of this cost. About 20 pupils had already joined the class. The collection of the money was in the hands of Mr. Smillie, principal of the high school, he said.

Dr. Jones—Are they to be chaperoned?

Dr. Arthur—They are.

The motion confirming the action of Dr. Arthur in making the necessary arrangements was moved by Mr. Joy and seconded by Mr. Emory, Dr. Jones voting among the "ayes."

The secretary and Mr. Joy were asked to look into the question of the construction of storm doors at the public school in order to make the building warmer and to cut down the fuel bill.

FOREIGNERS MASSACRED.

PEKING, Nov. 20.—Chinese officials confirm the report that a massacre of foreigners as well as Manchus has occurred at Sain-fu. The legations believe that the report will prove true.

There were 40 foreigners in Sian-fu and many missioners in the smaller Sian-shi towns. Up to the present only Chinese reports have been received regarding the massacre. There has been no telegraphic or postal communication with Sian-fu for more than three weeks.

MAYOR SELOUS BACK FROM COAST

Municipal Clauses Act and School Act Discussed at Convention of Cities at Victoria

Suggested amendments to the sections of the Municipal Clauses act relating to local improvements and changes to the School act were the subjects which received the greatest attention at the recent meeting of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities at Victoria, stated Mayor Selous yesterday on his return from the gathering.

Many changes were advocated in the Municipal Clauses act, said his worship, some of the critics of the statute suggesting that it be divided into three separate and distinct sections, each dealing entirely with one of the three forms of cities in the province.

"The school question aroused a great deal of interest and some important discussions," said his worship, "and it was finally left to the executive committee to take action on the matter."

While in Victoria the mayor with Harry Wright, M.P.P., paid a visit to Hon. H. E Young, minister of education. "The interview proved a very satisfactory one to me," he said, "and I have strong hopes that the city will succeed in obtaining from the government a grant of $5,000 to assist in meeting the expenditure over and above the grant made by the council, on the schools until the end of the year."

ROOSEVELT FOR REPUBLICANS

Garfield Club Sounds Tocsin of Taft's Recall

COLONEL NAMED FOR NOMINATION

Speaker Says People Await President's Return to Private Life

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Nov. 20.—A call for Theodore Roosevelt to bear the standard of the Republican party in the struggle for the presidency next year was voiced at the banquet tonight of the Garfield club of the ninth congressional district of Ohio.

John J. Sullivan, former United States district attorney, was the speaker who named Colonel Roosevelt for the nomination of his party. His speech was made at the club's annual celebration anniversary of the birth of the late President Garfield who attended congress from this district. Concluding an arraignment of Mr. Taft as president, Mr. Sullivan said:

"To the president the Republican party and the American people are now sounding in his unwilling ears the tocsin of his recall from power and are awaiting his return to private life with the open arms of a hearty welcome."

WOMEN TO WAGE WAR AFTER DARK

Plan Great Demonstration Against House of Commons—Will Force Way to Floor of Parliament.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The suffragists are preparing to renew their attacks on parliament with a battle tomorrow night. A few days ago a delegation of suffragettes interviewed Premier Asquith to obtain a pledge that the government would undertake the passage of a bill giving equal rights to both sexes. Premier Asquith declined to make such a pledge and told the women instead that he had always been opposed to women suffrage.

At a subsequent meeting the suffragettes decided to inaugurate a war of demonstration in Parliament square on November 21. They have summoned all their followers to assemble around the parliament building at 8 p.m. The fact that the gathering is fixed for after dark may make unusual trouble for the police. Mrs. Pethick Lawrence explains it thus:

"The gathering has been arranged at that time for the express reason that the decent, honest working men will be in the streets. We have found that their presence affords a woman moral protection against violence by the police."

Miss Chrystabel Pankhurst declared tonight that the women certainly will push their way to the floor of the house of commons this time, to make their protest "against the great insult Mr. Asquith has given."

CONGRATULATIONS FOR SIR WILFRID

Lloyd-George, from the premiers of the different overseas dominions, from Ambassador Bryce and from a score of prominent men throughout of the world.

Characteristic messages came from Lord Strathcona, from President Fallieres of France, and from various provincial premiers of Canada, irrespective of politics. Just before the house met at 3 o'clock the members of the press gallery and visiting editors, irrespective of party, called upon Sir Wilfrid in his office and extended to him their congratulations. The ex-premier thanked them for their courtesy in a few well chosen words.

SHAREHOLDERS IN RUBBER COMPANY WANTS MONEY BACK

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The shareholders of the United Malayslan Rubber Company, Limited, a concern floated in London in 1910 by the American Malayslan Rubber company, today invited the American vendors to refund 1,000,000 out of the 1,600,000 shares paid to them for the formation of the company.

When the company was floated with the names of Cornelius Vanderbilt and Robert W. Goelet on the prospectus there was an enormous rush of subscribers. The prospectus promised a profit of $800,000 for the first year, but the actual results of 18 months working has been a loss of $205,000.

WHISTLE OF GRANBY HEARD

Half of Drills Are Again in Operation After Many Months of inactivity

(Special to The Daily News.)

PHOENIX, B.C., Nov. 20—The welcome sound of the Granby whistle was heard this morning after a silence that was becoming painful and which has lasted for some months. Half of the compressor plant is now in operation and a small number of men have started work. The nucleus of a staff are on hand and all that appears to be necessary for the commencement of operations is a supply of coke from the Crow's Nest. Rumors are rife that the company intends to mine this winter on a scale never befor reached. The Rawhide mine, the property of the New Dominion Copper Co., is also awaiting the arrival of coke.

Work Resumed on Crow

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Nov. 20—The coal miners of district No. 18 who have been on strike for the past eight months, returned to work this morning at all of the different camps in the district at 7 o'clock when the big whistles called the men to work.

Between 4,000 and 5,000 men will be given work and before the week is over the number will be increased to between 6,000 and 7,000 men, the number that were employed at the time the miners walked out.

Everything is in readiness for the men to return to work at the mines of the Alberta Railway & Irrigation company's mines here and at the Chinook Collieries. All of the boilers at the big plants which have been thoroughly overhauled during the strike, were connected up yesterday afternoon and are now in readiness for the work that will be demanded of them.

PERSIA PLACES HERSELF IN HANDS OF GREAT BRITAIN

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Persia's reiterations that she has been badly treated in the crisis with Russia have resulted in her placing her case in the hands of Great Britain. Diplomatic relations with Russia have been interrupted. Persia has asked Great Britain to advise her as to the course she should follow and has promised to abide by the advice. If necessary, Persia is prepared to comply with the demands of Russia on the condition that the Russian troops, if they have already started for Persia, shall return to Russia.

WOMEN DEJECTED AT LOSING FIGHT

Had Great Hope of Defeating Democratic Candidate—Contrary Mary in Trouble.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The election with its excitement, its surprises and disappointments is a thing of the past and everything has resumed its normal state throughout the city. However, there are some exceptions and one of these is the headquarters of the Woman's Political union on Madison avenue. The women, unaccustomed to the disappointments of political campaigns, are still suffering from intense chagrin over their defeat in the thirtieth district. For many weeks the women had carried on a most strenuous campaign against Louis A. Cuvillier, the Democratic candidate for the assembly from this district, who had aroused the ire of the suffragettes by voting against women's suffrage during the last session of the legislature.

The suffrage women had declared war against Cuvillier, and had concentrated their campaign work upon the thirtieth district, with the openly avowed intention of defeating the "undesirable" candidate. A small army of suffragettes mounted on automobiles, invaded the district, harangued the crowds on every street corner. Tons of literature, intended to prove the unfitness of Mr. Culvillier for the position to which he aspired, were distributed in the district, and even on election day the women did not rest, but made the most determined effort to influence the vote of the district by personal appeals to the voters. In spite of all these herculean efforts Mr. Cuvillier wes elected—with a somewhat diminished plurality, it is true—but undoubtedly elected. The women are still dejected over their defeat, which came to them as a perfect surprise. They had been absolutely confident of success and seem to be unable to understand why their strenuous efforts did not meet with success.

It is fairly safe to say that Governor Wilson has, by this time, found out that it is not all "beer and skittles" to be governor of the commonwealth of New Jersey. The governor had the reputation of being a great reformer and it was for that reason that the people of New Jersey elected him to the governorship. He continued to talk reform after his election as he did before, but the people of New Jersey, who had evidently expected more from Mr. Wilson than lung exercises, soon grew tired of his utterings and, at the recent election manifested their disappointment by electing a Republican legislature. To cap the climax the New England Society of Orange held a meeting the other night and, afte ran acrimonious discussion which lasted until after midnight, passed a resolution with nine preambles, calling upon Governor Wilson to drive out or exterminate the mosquitoes which, as the resolution states, "cast reproach upon the fair name of the state." The resolution does not suggest any method and does not indicate whether the members of the N.E.S. of Orange expect the governor to talk the moskuitoes out of the state or dispose of them in some other way.

This suffragettes agitation seems to have a demoralizing effect upon women of all sorts and conditions. The other day one of these rampant suffragettes was the complainant in an assault and battery case before a police magistrate. She was so impudent to everybody, including the judge, that the latter finally warned her, saying: "If you persist with your impudence I'll put you in jail."

"I just guess you won't, and I'd like to see you try it," was the militant suffragette's retort, whereupon the judge sentenced her to 30 minutes in jail and ordered a police officer to remove her from the court room. The assault and battery charge was promptly dismissed, as the judge evidently consider the woman's sauciness a sufficient provocation.

The board of education of Moonachie, a borough in Bergen county, New Jersey, consists of nine members, one of whom is a woman, whose given name by a strange coincidence is Mary "Mary, Mary, quite contrary"—as the nursery rhyme says—has, ever since the first session of the board, blocked all business. Her opinions invariably conflicted with those of the other eight members. It would have been simple enough to outvote her, had it not been for her aggressiveness and her obstreperous tactics which made all progress impossible and threatened to wear the patience and endurance of the other members to a frazzle.

In their despair the male members of the board came together and unanimously issued a resolution stating that "Whereas, Miss Mary—has shown herself to be contrary, and the majority of the board finds it simply can't get along with the lady member; resolved, that Miss Mary— be asked to resign for the sake of harmony."

"They seem to know me, but they don't know me well enough," said Miss Mary, when asked whether she intended to resign, "They will have to offer some more resolutions before I'll quit."

"The rights and duties of the aforesaid married people and of the children of such marriage shall be absolute and complete and no law or decree or custom in any province of Canada shall have any force or effect to invalidate or nullify any such marriage or any of the rights of the said parties or their children in any manner whatsoever."

ELECTRIC POWER FOR CROW'S NEST

Chicago Syndicate Will Generate Ten Thousand Horse Power on Bull River—Line to Frank.

(Special to The Daily News.)

FERNIE, Nov. 20.—Developments of vital interest to this district have taken place in connection with the Bull River Power company with the result that Fernie may now anticipate Bull River hydro-electric power by January 1, 1913.

George Henderson and Herman Shultz, formally in control of the company, have disposed of their interests to a syndicate of capitalists headed by M. A. Devitt and H. W. McCoy, of Chicago. These gentlemen are already interested in hydro-electric propositions to the extent of $12,000,000 and they propose to spend another million here in the next 12 months. The new directors were here on Tuesday. They were accompanied by Professor Mead, of Winconsin university, an electrical engineer of national reputation, who is acting in an advisory capacity for the new board. The company talked over the situation with representatives of the city and local business men and they are well satisfied with prospects for business in this district.

The company will erect a six-strand duplicate line on steel towers from the plant at Bull river falls, over the Lizard pass to Fernie, and continuing on through the Crow's Nest pass to Frank, The line will cost approximately $5,000 per mile. They will immediately instal a plant sufficient to generate 10,000 horse power and this will be added to as business warrants.

The superintendent submitted figures showing the cost of producing power by the city's steam plant. The company are prepared to supply power to the city cheaper than it can be generated by any modern steam plant.

A representative of the company will be here from New York to take charge of the preliminary work in a few days.

ORE TEAMS CAUGHT IN SNOW SLIDE

Wagons Buried but Horses Escape—Outlook Bright for Three Forks and Sandon

(Special to The Daily News.)

THREE FORKS, B.C., Nov. 20—The outlook for Three Forks and Sandon is better now than at any time for years. With a resumption of work at the Slocan Star and Payne mines and a continuance of operations at the Rambler-Cariboo, Lucky Jim, Idaho-Alamo, Joe Joe, Silverite, Cinderella, Richmond-Eureka, Reco, Twilight, Surprise, Noble Five, Sunset and other properties, the prospects are very favorable for the ensuing year.

E. W. Zwicky is doing considerable development work on the Rio and Rambler-Cariboo Extension properties situated near the Rambler-Cariboo.

The ore teams from the Rambler had a narrow escape on Friday. A snow slide caught them on the switchback near the Lucky Jim wagon road. Expert horsemanship on the part of the teamsters saved the horses but the sleighs were covered up and were dug out next day by a crew of men from the mine.

A heavy thaw has set in and will be of immense benefit to many properties operating here. The effects of the dry fall was beginning to be felt in reduced water power.

Wood is selling here at $7 a cord.

On the Batchelor claim Cameron & McCurvie are putting a water blast in the long tunnel preparatory to driving ahead.

Anderson & Co., are to be congratulated on the good sanitary condition of their construction camps. There has been only one case of sickness since the camps were started, and that was pneumonia.

Alfred Anderson of Anderson & Co., arrived from Spokane on Friday's train.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING—SHOP EARLY

Christmas is scarcely more than a month away, the stores have taken on a festive aspect, their counters are stocked with seasonable wares, and advertisements that are a directory to the articles appropriate for gifts and that contain useful suggestions for the Christmas shopper have begun to appear. It is not too early to give attention to the approach of Yuletide, and to begin the pleasurable tasks with which it is associated.

"Shop early" is an admonition annually addressed at this time to the public, and its observance is a boon to merchants and to their clerks and of real advantage to the purchasers of holiday goods. It is obvious that when stocks are complete, before the most desirable articles have been selected and bought, the choice available is wider, and the prospect of making satisfactory purchases better than when the array of suitable goods has been depleted by two or three weeks of Christmas shopping. It is evident too that at this time better attention and advice can be obtained from the experts in charge of the sale of the goods than later on when the stress that immediately precedes Christmas prevails. Those who wish to do their Christmas shopping in comfort and to the best advantage will seize the opportunity that now exists.

But apart from personal advantage or selfish motives, consideration for others should be sufficient to impel the public to commence early their holiday purchasing. The days before Christmas are for clerks of stores a period of long hours of labor and of almost incessant strain, so much so that weariness makes the joys of Christmas a mockery for many whose duty it is to serve the purchasing public. The labor that the season of Yule entails for so many can be materially lightened by doing what is possible to relieve the hurly-burly of the days immediately preceding Christmas. Those who commence their shopping early will be performing an act of consideration particularly appropriate to the season of good will, and at the same time will best consult their own interests and convenience.

A PERMANENT TARIFF COMMISSION IS REQUIRED

During the discussion of the Reciprocity proposals the lack of definite information bearing on the subject, that it was desirable should have been in the possession of the Dominion government, became strikingly apparent, and the advantage possessed by the administration at Washington through the reports prepared by the United States tariff experts was a conspicuous feature of the negotiations. The board of investigators on whose assistance the Washington executive relied had provided comprehensive details bearing on every aspect of the proposals, while the Ottawa ministers conducted the negotiations unprovided with the data necessary to a thorough comprehension of the probable effect of the agreement.

A similar contretemps will be impossible if the proposal to appoint a permanent tariff commission forecasted in the speech from the throne becomes an accomplished fact. Such a commission would make available facts and figures that would be invaluable in the case of tariff negotiations with other countries and that would enable the Canadian government to enter upon negotiations upon more equal terms than in the past.

The chief object of the commission will be "to ascertain by investigation and enquiry such information as will furnish a stable and more satisfactory basis for tariff legislation than has hitherto been available," and its labors will be productive of desirable results even when negotiations with foreign countries are not in question. It will aid the government in framing tariff proposals upon a scientific basis, and will enable members of parliament to discuss suggested changes in the tariff intelligently and with a knowleige of their probable effect.

Ten Years Ago.

(Extracts from the Nelson Daily Miner of Nov. 21, 1901)

No ore came down from Kaslo yesterday, it being the first day for some time that there was none shipped.

Several of the members of the first Nelson contingent, who went to South Africa, received their medals yesterday.

Beginning with Wednesday next the C.P.R. will run a heated car service from Ontario to British Columbia points. A man will be in charge so that the temperature will be kept equable, and perishable goods will be in no danger from heat or cold.

This Date in History.

Sir Thomas Gresham, English merchant and ambassador, died in London in 1579 on this date. He was born in 1519. In 1552-74 he was royal agent, or king's factor, at Antwerp. His advice to Queen Elizabeth to restore the base money has by later economists been properly called "Gresham's law." He was also a banker and goldsmith, and devoted his wealth to public uses, building the Royal Exchange during 1566-71 for London merchants, and establishing and endowing Gresham's college.

J. E. Annable May Bring up Question of Dominion Experimental Farm in Kootenay

It is likely, according to a statement made last night by J. E. Annable, one of Nelson's delegates to the Conservative convention at New Westminster this week, that a resolution will be placed before that gathering regarding the establishment of a Dominion government experimental farm in the Kootenay district.

These farms have been established at some points in British Columbia, such as Agassiz, and various other places in the Dominion, and Mr. Annable considers that if the department of agriculture can see its way clear to make the necessary arrangements an experimental farm would prove of the greatest value to the farmers and ranchers in this district.

Already the provincial government has established small experimental farms at a number of points in the Kootenays and Mr. Annable believes that the Dominion farm would serve to complete the work carried on by the provincial enterprises.

Duncan, commander of the department of Texas, to enforce the laws with vigor and move troops under his command, within divisional limits, without awaiting orders from the department. Duncan that he would not lack for cavalry and infantry needed to prevent the organization of expeditions against Mexico No additional troops have yet been ordered to Texas.

UTICA FREIGHTING MUCH RICH ORE

Value Nearly Double Last Year's Output—Whitewater Finds Five Feet of Ore

C. F. Caldwell, manager of the Utica mine, near Kaslo, announces that work is progressing at a lively pace there. He is now shipping and rawhiding ore to Trail, the third carload having already been sent and another being ready, and he expects to have two loads a day going out all through the winter. The ore shoot is over 500 feet long and the ore runs around $2,000 per car, he states, which is nearly double the value of last year's ore. Mr. Caldwell says that the Whitewater mine has found five feet of ore on the 1,300-foot level and is making important strides on other levels. It has 45 men at work and several carloads of winter supplies already in.

The Cork mine, on the south fork, has arranged to begin operations before the spring and has a developing fund of $50,000.

The Eureka mine, recently purchased by Spokane capital, has collected its winter supplies and started to tap the ore bodies at the lowest level. Mr. Harvey, formerly superintendent of the Granite-Poorman, is now manager of the Eureka.

DEBATE AROUSES ORATORICAL COMBAT

I regret that the language of certain newspapers and public men during the campaign was not such as to promote the friendliest relations with the United States. The American people can find no fault with us if we took the attitude of rejecting the reciprocity pact. It was our right and privilege. Nevertheless, I think we have lost a great opportunity of trade and of increasing friendship between the Canadian and American people."

Sir Wilfrid went on to quote the New York Times of September last in which it was intimated that because of the Canadian result, President Taft's arbitration treaty between England and the United States would be defeated.

Hon. Mr. Foster—Does the hon. gentleman support that sentiment?

Sir Wilfrid—My hon. friends well know that the passing of reciprocity would have helped the passing of the reciprocity treaty. I still maintain that the Canadian people have done nothing at which the United States can take umbrage. Nevertheless my hon. friend knows that human nature is human nature.

"He knows that this treaty would have been made easier and the friendship between the two people made closer had reciprocity passed.

"There are some in Canada who feared annexation; there are some who dread it. I have, however, sufficient confidence that the manhood of a proud people will not be cajoled or coerced into a step contrary to all desire or expectation. There are members on this side not afraid to do their best for their country without fear of the consequences elsewhere. In the recent election the Liberals lost ground in every part of the country, and especially in the eastern provinces. The men of the west heard the call and responded to it."

East and West.

Sir Wilfrid continued that it was plain at present that there were echoes in the western press to the effect that the present government policy sacrificed western interests to eastern necessities. This feeling was more to be dreaded than any fear of annexation, a great danger more to be dreaded than outside danger was a Canadian cleavage of east and west. The speaker said he would some day enquire as to what the present government intended to do to compensate the west for that which it lost in the defeat of reciprocity.

Nothing had been heard recently of the naval question in spite of the fact that three months ago the house unanimously passed a resolution which Sir Wilfrid read. He also read Mr. Borden's amendment to the late government's proposals to the effect that the Canadian navy should be part of the British navy and that unity of command and effort were essential. Sir Wilfrid continuing, said:

"In this amendment was laid down the policy of the present administration. He found fault with our proposal because there was in the bill introduced by the government of that day too much autonomy and too little imperialism. Upon the present occasion one would have expected, seeing that the government are now meeting parliament for the first time and exposing their policy, to hear an announcement that of course they intend to follow upon such an important question as that. Yet, they are silent, not a word have we heard about it. What is the reason?"

Mr. Borden Replies

Premier Borden, who rose to reply at 5.40 o'clock, got an ovation from the Conservative members. He joined in extending his congratulations to Sir Wilfrid Laurier on having reached his 70th birthday and expressed the hope that the ex-premier would be spared for many years of usefulness and happiness. After congratulating the mover and seconder of the address he paid a tribute to the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. A distinguished feature of the lives of the duke and duchess, he said, was the high and earnest sense of their duty and responsibility.

Regarding Sir Wilfrid, Mr. Borden first touched on the former's references to the prosperity of the Dominion. He seemed to be possessed with the idea, he said, that he had created all the prosperity of Canada. As a matter of fact the prosperity of Canada was not due either to Sir Wilfrid Laurier or to any measure introduced by his administration, but to the splendid resources of the country and to the capacity of its people.

Singular Self-appreciation

After the verdict of Sept. 21 Sir Wilfrid should have realized that the development of the country was not due to himself. His remarks afforded an apt illustration of his singular self-appreciation. Sir Wilfrid has solaced himself with the observation that he desired no better epitaph than that which has been given to him by the new government. He was glad to see it recognized that the verdict given on Sept. 21 was a suitable epitaph.

Dealing with the opposition leader's references to the reciprocity agreement Premier Borden said he had taken vigorous opposition when it was intimated that the people had no right to reject the pact with the United States and that they could not give a proper verdict on this question. For 20 years Canada had a standing offer of reciprocity on its statute books. It was there until changed by the Liberal government, and during all that time the American people had not been denied their right to decline that offer. Surely the Canadian had the same right.

Grounds Were Economic

The leader of the opposition, when he appealed to country, had made the boast that he would sweep the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He had advised the young men of the country to follow his white plumes, and had intimated to the young men that they would do well to place their money on the "old cock." Many who had taken his advice were today sadder but wiser men. Premier Borden vigorously disputed the contention that the Conservatives had not combatted reciprocity on economic grounds. He quoted from a manifesto which he had issued during the progress of the campaign to show that he had dealt at length with the economic aspect of the question, and declared that the verdict given by the people was the result of a well reasoned consideration from a national standpoint.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier had declared in the course of his speech that the trusts were flourishing in Canada. If that was so what had he and his administration done to prevent it?

Surely they had not come into existence on Sept. 21. If there were trusts in Canada it was a reflection upon his own administration, and he proposed to put a stop to it not by legislation but by opening up the markets of the Dominion to the depredation of the trusts of the United States.

Friendliness to United States

If there existed in western Canada any such sentiment as had been alluded to by Sir Wilfrid Laurier it was there, said Mr. Borden, because of the teachings of the Liberal leader and his supporters.

"I hope that friendly relations with the United States will always be maintained, and that the approaching anniversary of 100 years of peace will be celebrated in Canada as well as in the United States in a manner worthy of the occasion.

"Canada would lose neither the friendship nor the respect of the United States by a determination to retain the control of her own affairs," Premier Borden declared. Proceeding to criticise the references to the cabinet, Mr. Borden said:

"The right honorable gentleman dealt with the construction of the cabinet and expressed very great dissatisfaction with it. Indeed, in the closing part of his resolution he adopted the most extraordinary course, one which I have never known to be followed in the house before of submitting to his royal highness the governor-general that the construction of the cabinet ought to receive the disapproval of this house. I never heard that it was the duty of the King's representative to concern himself with what should or should not receive the approval of parliament. My honorable friend has launched an unconstitutional idea in asking his royal highness to pronounce upon such a question.

"I have always understood that under modern systems of constitutional government these were matters which had been secured to the representatives of the people in parliament, free from interference.

Ancient Idea of Constitution

"My right honorable friend, in the course of his speech, supposed himself to be what in days gone by was described as a scrap book. It certainly was refreshing to find that he has not only gone back 15 or 20 years for the purpose of bringing matters to the attention of this house which are more or less irrelevant, but he has gone back about 250 years for his ideas of constitutional government. I would like to explain to my right honorable friend in the first instance, lest there should be any misunderstanding on the subject, that this cabinet was not concluded with the idea of satisfying him.

"Before we proceed perhaps it would not be out of place, and conducive to a better understanding of the present situation, if we ask ourselves what is the character of this administration. If I am to judge of the character of the present administration by that resolution I have judged wrong. From the speeches made before the election and the solemn declarations by party leaders I would judge that the present administration is a true blue Tory administration, tinctured and saturated with sound imperialism as they understand imperialism."

FREAK OFFER FROM PARIS BUSINESS MAN

Will Give $5,000 to Person Who Will Enter Catacombs at Noon and Emerge at Midnight.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Who wants to make $5,000 in eight hours, the American labor union man's working day? A Paris business man announces that he will give that amount to any person who will enter the catacombs at 4 o'clock in the afternoon alone, and appear in the streets again at midnight, having emerged by a door other that that by which he entered. The only condition is that the winner shall carry no candle or other light. He will be permitted, however, to have a whistle.

The offer has been standing two weeks, but so far there has been on wild scramble for the prize, in fact, the first fortune seeker is yet to present himself.

The catacombs are one of the mysteries of Paris. The entrance is at the Barriere a'Enfer, or "Gate to Hell," not an inappropriate place to start such a journey when one comes to think about it. Ninety spiral steps lead to the depths. Tourist parties, directed by guides, emerge by another staircase, reached after a tramp of nearly two miles.

Passages Contain Six Million Bodies.

The catacombs are a series of tunnels and compartments known to extend beneath the greater part of Paris south of the Seine river. The narrow passages are lined on either side, from the floor to the low ceiling, with human bones and skulls, representing according to the last census, 6,000,000 bodies, so underground Paris is about 4,000,000 larger than above ground.

There is no opening through which the sun's rays ever penetrate, and no artificial light except the candles carried by visitors. The catacombs are infested by rats. It is to frighten them that the winner of the $5,000 prize will be allowed to blow a whistle.

The catacombs date from the Roman period. The passages were worked originally as quarries. No shafts have been discovered and engineers are at a loss to comprehend how the tunnels were drilled or the product of the quarries were brought to the surface. The galleries were consecrated to their present use in 1786, when the ground of the Cemetery of the Innocents was taken for other uses and the bones were transferred. The bodies of thousands of victims of the September, 1792 massacre were heaped there also, and half a dozen cemeteries yielded their dead in the first 40 years of the nineteenth century.

It is almost certain that the quarries originally extended beneath the river and under a great part of Paris on the other side, but fallen rocks blocking the tunnels prevent any tracing of the possible connections now. The main passages are crossed by innumerable intersections, the traversing of which, even with candles is extremely dangerous, owing to the presence of pits, some of them many feet deep. But there is that $5,000. Who is the M. le Docteur Cook who will win it?

THIS VENUS, HUNDRED YEARS OLD, NEVER BEEN KISSED

Old Lady Says She Had Opportunities In Her Life, But Passed Them By.

ZANESVILLE, Ohio, Nov. 20.—'I have never been kissed in the 100 years of my life,' is the boast of Miss Rachael Bell, who will celebrate Sunday the hundreth anniversary of her berth. Miss Bell shyly hints that she had many opportunities in her comely youth, but just didn't. She said today:

"When I was a young girl I went to many parties and dances. We always had a good time, and it always went without any of what you call spooning in it. I had plenty of chances to marry, but could never find a man I loved; so have always remained single."

In recognition of the anniversary neighbors for miles around Adamsville, Ohio, where Miss Bell was born and where she now lives, will gather at her home, and 100 farmers with shotguns, will fire 100 shots, starting at 8 o'clock in the morning, at which hour Miss Bell was born.

Miss Bell says she expects to live 10 years longer.

At the time of Miss Bell's birth her father, a pioneer, kept vigil night and day outside their cabin, protecting mother and children from Indians, who were then pillaging the hamlets near Zanesville.

When, after much service, a broom becomes shorter on one side than the other, and the ends of the straws as sharp as needles, dip it in hot water, and trim it down quite evenly with the shears. The result will be a broom as serviceable as when new.

When the hands get stained from paring apples or from preserving grapes, wash them first with vinegar, then rub them with a slice of ripe tomatoe and the stains will disappear.

A substitute for a cheval glass may be provided in a little house by fastening an ordinary looking glass to the inside of a closet door where there is a good light, so that the lower edge of the glass shall be almost level with the bottom of the door. In this mirror one may see very well how a skirt hangs.

VAST STOCKS OF FOOD STORED UP

Montreal Cold Storage Men Attempt to Make Corner—Million Dozen of Eggs

MONTREAL, Nov. 20—As the largest consumer of foodstuffs in the country this city is genuinely concerned over the prospect of another season of high prices for all kinds of meat products. At first there was a disposition to decry the necessity of any decided advance in retail prices and to attribute the threat of higher prices to the operations of the beef trust. As the reports of a genuine scarcity of high grade cattle and other meat animals have continued to come in from all parts of the country, however, and have been reflected in the actual advance of wholesale prices the public has become convinced that it must soon pay more for its daily roast or go without it. As a 10 per cent advance in prices will add nearly $100,000 a day to the meat bill of Montreal, the prospect of an increase that may amount to twice this sum is a serious one for most citizens. One class that does not share this general apprehension is the cold storage men. A quiet investigation of the storage houses shows that they are carrying far more than their ordinary quantities of the ordinary substitutes for meat foods. Taking advantage of the record breaking supplies of fish, poultry and eggs that have been pouring into the market in the past two months they are fully stocked with all these products and are looking forward to a correspondingly rich harvest. It is estimated that within the past few weeks more than a million dozen of eggs have gone into storage, while poultry is being received at the rate of 10,000 pounds daily and much of it is being taken by the same interests. More fish are said to be held in cold storage than ever before in the history of the city. As a result of present conditions it is confidently predicted by the storage men that the country will have to rely upon them in greater measure than ever before for its food supplies during the coming winter. Meanwhile the government officials are planning to give vigorous enforcement to the new law limiting the time that food products may be kept in storage.

Lecturers on pure food which have been going on this week fear that they may have unwittingly inaugurated a new use for certain canned foods. Women visitors, attracted by the free samples distributed have been particularly interested in the demonstration of the proper method of detecting canned peas which may be deleterious. According to the expert a certain brilliant green hue of imported brands is to be avoided on the suspicion that it is obtained by the use of copper. He illustrated a sure test by pouring a little hydrochloric acid into a can of these peas and then inserting a steel knife blade. The blade came out beautifully coated with perfectly good copper. Thereafter his life was made miserable by inquiries as to how many cans of peas and how much acid the housewife would need to do over bronze finger bowls, vases and the like. Certain sweets, too, may become popular in other ways than as food, for the demonstration of the coal tar products which they contain has brought forth many inquiries as to the cost of using them to color flannel garments, coal tar products being largely used in the making of dyes. Altogether the pure food show while undoubtedly of much educational value may lead to weird and undreamed of uses for certain products.

....S NEAR EARTH ON NOVEMBER TWENTY-FIFTH

Professor Chant Gave Reasons for Theary That Snow Capped Planet is Inhabited.

For those interested in the move*ments of the stars, the lecture deliv*ered by Professor C. A. Chant of the University of Toronto, last night, at the fortnightly meeting of the Royal Astronomical society of Canada was of considerable interest. The professor's subject was "The Coming Opposition of Mars," says the Mail and Empire.

The planet Mars, Professor Chant explained, would be in opposition to the sun on November 25 next, that is, the earth would be on that date between the sun and Mars. Since the orbit of Mars was greater than that of the earth the earth would be nearest to Mars then, that is, about 50,000,000 miles from it. When it would be night with us, the sun would be shining on Mars, thus the planet would be very brilliant to the naked eye.

Careful observation has been made he said, as to the physical condition of Mars. There were white caps seen at the poles of Mars when it was winter there. There were also bluish-green expanses seen, while for the most part the planet was copper-red in color Since Mars was farther away from the sun than the earth, the winters were twice as long, and the planet was much smaller, and objects seen at the poles were likely ice.

Professor Lowell, of Lowell university, has made many observations of this planet, and declares that canals could be seen that looked like the work of human art. He strongly believes that Mars was inhabited by people of some description. The lecture was helped out by many good slides of the planet under discussion.

THE POT OF GOLD

(By F. W. Nash.)

As Sandy sat by the fireside he heard the old wives tell
Of the rainbow's pot of gold, and he pondered the story well.
At night he dream't of gold, as he lay on his humble bed;
His day dreams were the same, as his sheep on the mountain fed.

So after a summer's shower when a bright bow spanned the sky,
His heart beat fast with hope, as he thought of the gold close by.
The bow's end was not far away, just over yonder hill,
Across a bit of moor and a tinkling mountain rill.

So Sandy girt his plaid about and tied his boots tight on.
His cherished dreams were coming true, so bright that rainbow shone.
Then off he sped o'er break and fern, forgetful of his sheep,
Over the moor, and over the burn, and up the hill so steep.

But when he reached the further side, and thought his plaid to fill,
The bow was just as far away beyond another hill.
Less hopeful then was Sandy's mien, less headlong was his gait,
But still he could not quench the dream, nor brook a lootless fate.

He stumbled on o'er rock and fen, and climbed the second hill;
Then breathlessly he stood and gazed, the bow was further still,
And further yet it seemed to go, and gradually to fade,
And with it went poor Sandy's dreams and left him in the shade.

And many a Sandy since that day has dream't the golden dream,
And toiled o'er mountain, moor and plain, led by the golden sheen,
Over the ice-bound northern hills, over the desert sands,
Blazing trails for other feet in many distant lands.

Led as of old by rainbow hues, seeking the pot of gold.
Few are the men who grasp the coin, fewer yet who hold.
A lone hut on the mountain side, a low grave in the vale,
Is the end of the golden dream for many men who fail.

Such is the lure of the pot of gold, filled with hope and gall.
But men will ever dream its dream and follow at its call.

COTTON WEAVING IN INDIA.

The city of Calicut, on the Malabar coast, which, with Surat, was an ancient cotton mart, gave its name to the variety of fabric known as "Calico." Some qualities of this were so fine, it is said, that one could hardly feel them in the hand, and the thread, when spun, was barely discernible. Dacca, once a most important city lying north-east of Calcutta, sent out from its looms in the early centuries those wonderful tissues of fine muslin made from a staple too short to be woven by any machinery.

Even after the advent of the British in India there is recorded an instance of a piece of muslin twenty yards long and one and one quarter yards wide, weighing only fourteen ounces, says Harper's Weekly. With the rudest implements the Hindu women spun those almost impalpable threads, and wove fabrics that for fineness of quality have never been successfully imitated elsewhere. With the decay of the native Hindu courts, the chief customers, the demand ceased and the manufacture was for the most part stopped. Dacca today is little more than a ruin. But the art survives to a certain extent.

Weaving in India divides itself into two branches—hand loom and power loom weaving. The proportion of hand loom made cloth to power loom made cloth is fully two to one.

The native hand loom is a most primitive affair. It is now the same as it was thirty centuries ago. The old fly-shuttle looms of a century ago are ages in advance of the Indian hand loom used by the native weavers throughout India. Of course there are a number of fly-shuttle looms in successful use in certain localities, but these are not favored by the natives.

The manufacture of cotton in India dates back to the earliest times. In the Sanskrit records mention is made of it 3,000 years ago.

Lavender water is easily manufac*tured at home at small cost.* Take half a pint of rectified spirits, two drams of essential oil of lavender and five drops of attar of rose. Shake well together till properly mixed; keep it in a well-corked bottle.

MARKETS

GOLD RESERVE LIGHTENED BY ELEVEN MILLIONS

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Trading fell off abruptly today on the stock exchange. The afternoon session was the dullest for several weeks and the total of transactions was considerably below the recent average. The market seemed to be waiting irresolutely for some new phase to determine its course after its recovery of more than half its losses during the long decline. Quotations rose and fell within a narrow range until shortly before the close of the session, when the market became weak and some of the principal stocks, including United States Steel, Northern Pacific and Great Northern preferred, lost a point or more. General recessions of American stock in London exercised a depressive effect, which was heightened by heavy selling of United States Steel in the early trading. Bears operated concentrating their attack on United States Steel, ostensibly for the meeting of the Stanley committee for the resumption of the steel investigation.

Stocks were absorbed so readily that the list held steady after the first break. Pressure diminished and the market began to gather strength. Reading and some of the copper issues and a number of Southern roads rose from 1 to 2 points above Saturday's close. These gains in the main were surrendered when the market sold off late in the day.

The export movement of gold continued today $1,300,000 being engaged for shipment to Canada, and $1,000,000 for South America. The total thus "engaged for Canada was brought up to $7,050,000 and for South America $1,850,000. In addition to these sums $2,000,000 was shipped to San Francisco today, making a total of about $11,000,000 in gold in the last few days. Several large orders for equipment were placed by the railroads and it was reported that some of the equipment companies were running their plants at nearer capacity rate than at any previous time this year. Bonds were irregular, total sales, par value, $2,808,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

OFFERINGS LIGHT, PRICES HARDEN AT WINNIPEG

WINNIPEG, Nov. 20.—Cables were higher and world's shipments just about half what they were last year; shorts covered early and the local market developed considerable strength, closing ⅝c to ⅞c higher on the options. Offerings were light in spite of the rapidly increasing receipts. Export demand showed some slight improvement and some No. 3 wheat was booked for Liverpool and some Nos. 5 and 6 for the continent, but bids were generally out of line. Spot wheat No. 1 Northern closed 2⅛c over "bills and inspections," and unless a more rapid clearance of cars is made on all lines premiums on spot will go higher. Chicago closed ½c to ¾c higher for December and May; July was unchanged. Minneapolis was ¾c to 1¼c higher. There was in sight for inspection 650 cars and the weather map is clear over the prairie provinces with two exceptions, and much milder.

ARGENTINE GALES SEND WHEAT UP IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Damage reported throughout the entire wheat belt of the Argentine Republic, with losses counted as serious in the important provinces, had a bullish effect today on the traders in Chicago. The cereal closed all the way from Saturday night's prices to ⅝c@¾c up. The crop damage to wheat in the Argentine was alleged to have been inflicted by last week's storms, which were in some places said to have been little less than hurricanes. In some parts the damage amounted to at least 10 per cent. Prices here made an immediate response and there was a further upward slide owing to the world shipments being only about half as large as a year ago. In addition the total quantity of wheat on ocean passage was reported as 12,000,000 less than at the corresponding time 12 months back. However, the visible supply of wheat in the United States exhibited a decided increase, and there was a disposition in some quarters to discredit the stories of big damage in the Argentine. The result was a reaction from top prices but the closing tone was nevertheless steady.

MONEY IN DEMAND

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Money increased in demand and discount rates were quiet today. The Bank of England, it is expected, will take the bulk of the $3,500,000 South African gold consignment offered in the open market. The stock exchange was dull and irregular. Labor unrest weaked home rails and reports of new issues of securities checked business in the gilt-edged section. American stocks were quiet and featureless during the forenoon. In the early afternoon United States Steel had a further decline but re-purchases caused prices to harden in the final hour. The market closed dull.

GEORGE JOHNSTONE.

AT THE THEATRE

It is seldom that the opportunity is given to hear the great composers' works interpreted by so great a master as Mark Hambourg, who will appear at the Nelson opera house on Nov. 28.

Mark Hambourg, although only 30 years of age, has already achieved fame which is world wide, and has won for himself so high a position among modern pianists that he has come to be called "The Napoleon of the piano," and during his recent Canadian tour the critics have constantly spoken of him as a formidable rival to Paderewski.

Born in Boguchar, in the province of Voronezh, South Russia, Mr. Hambourg developed musical talent at such an early age that his father, who is now a resident in Toronto, and professor at McGill university, personally took his musical education in hand and brought him out as a juvenile prodigy in 1889. In 1891 he left London, whither his family migrated, and went to study under Leschelitzky in Vienna, where he remained three years, after winning the Liszt scholarship during that period. In addition to having made three tours to Australia, he has been twice to South Africa and three times to America, and will this season make his second Canadian tour, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast.

The subjects included in this evening's program at the Gem theatre are: "The Co-ed Professor," an Imp college comedy, with a laugh that is continuous; "Through the Dells of Wisconsin in a Motor Boat," a beautiful bit of scenic photography, the Dells being noted for their picturesque and wild grandeur, and the selections for the views are admirable; "Her Uncle's Will," a Solax comedy, with plenty of fun; and "Paix," a Reliance feature acted by their all-star company.

His cries were heard by his daughter and the gathering crowd, but the smoke was so dense that no one could enter the building till the firemen arrived and broke several windows, letting the smoke escape. There were several narrow escapes. Hedley Kitchen, his mother, a four year old brother and a friend, Tom Baxter being forced to jump from a balcony.

AT THE THEATRE

The Jeanne Russell Company Commence Weeks Engagement

The Jeanne Russell company commenced a week's engagement at the opera house last evening with a pleasing society comedy drama, "The American Girl," well presented to a large and highly appreciative audience.

Ray F. Brandon and Miss Russell, who took the leading parts last night, are no strangers in Nelson. Mr. Brandon is a capital and finished actor and was the life of the play, creating much amusement by the local hits he worked into his lines. All the comedy business in any play is safe in Mr. Brandon's hands. Miss Russell is a pleasing and artistic actress besides being an exceedingly graceful and pretty woman, most becomingly gowned in the final act last night. Mr. Darnock's "Sir John Balfour," Miss Marrion's "Twister," and Mr. Rice's "James" were all exceedingly well done. Mr. Taylor made a satisfactory villain and Babe Merritt's "Prince Ray" captured the sympathy and applause of the audience. The company is a well balanced one and furnished high class vaudeville between acts that was duly appreciated. The company should have a successful run for the balance of the week.

Mr. Brandon announced the following plays for the balance of the week, laying particular stress on the production to be given tomorrow night, a play written specially for Miss Russell and one which gives her an excellent opportunity of displaying her powers as an emotional actress of the first rank: This evening, "The Man From Home"; tomorrow night, "Emannella," with Miss Russell in the title role; Thursday, "The Devil"; Friday, "The Thief"; Saturday matinee, "Charley's Aunt," and at night "The Little Minister."

EXPENDITURE UNDER ESTIMATES

Cost of Reception to Governor-General Was Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars—Smallpox in Yukon.

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The statement of expenditures authorized by the governor-general's warrant since the last session of parliment were tabled in the commons today by Hon. W. T. White, minister of finance, and shows that the total amount provided for was $3,593,456 of which, however, only $1,250,239 has been spent, the biggest warrant being asked for by the minister of railways. It provided for the expenditure of $1,546,732 to cover the cost of labor on the National Transcontinental railway. The demand of the the various departments to cover the cost of civil government and other items totalled $1,943,724.

Thirty-five thousand dollars was provided by the request of the department of state to cover the cost of the reception to the Duke of Connaught, $25,000 by the request of the Indian affairs department on account of an outbreak of smallpox among the Indians of the Yukon, $26,000 by the department of inland revenues to cover the various items of expenditure and $20,000 by the marine and fisheries department in connection with the reduction of the dog fish on the Atlantic coast.

TEACH MANNERS IN MONTREAL

Attempt Being Made by Police to Bring Crush on Cars to End—Street Rail' Officials Powerless

MONTREAL, Nov. 20—A new function has just been added to the many which the Montreal police are called upon to perform. Their newest duty consists in teaching politeness to the male inhabitants of the city. The reform has been introduced where it undoubtedly was most needed—at the down town transfer points at 6 o'clock in the evening. The congestion at these points every evening at the rush hour is unequalled and has aroused the anger and disgust of those who have had occasion to witness them. In the rush of the thousands of home goers for seats in the uptown bound cars men and women have been trampled upon and frequently serious injuries have occurred. The waiting crowd has swarmed over the cars before they come to a stop and in the mad contest women naturally had little chance to secure seats. The inspector who has charge of the mounted police and who is virtually the head of the traffic squad, determined to change this state of affairs. For the past few evenings he has lined up his men at the crowded corners where tracks intersect and compelled the passengers to wait until the cars came to a stop before attempting to board them and then has given the women first chance to secure seats. As a result many men who have been accustomed to "hogging" seats have ridden home hanging to a strap, while the ladies have received the courtesy due them—although a pronouncedly forced courtesy.

WESTERN CITIES OFFER MANY SITES

Anxious to Obtain Drill Halls—Land Worth Million Dollars Promised to Government

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—That the cities of the Canadian middle west have offered sites for drill halls to an aggregate value of $1,000,000, conditional that the government erect buildings, was the statement made today by Col. S. D. Steele, C.B., of Winnipeg, commander of the 100th military district, and Lieut.-Col. Gwynn, cavalry and cadet leader, of Grenfell, Sask., who have been attending the military conference. The offers of land for drill halls, according to Lieut.-Col. Gwynn, include 10 lots, valued at $100,000, from the city of Regina; a $40,000 site from the city of Moose Jaw, and valuable sites also from Grenfell, Indian Head and other places. Col. Steele states that from assurances he has received there will be no difficulty in a satisfactory arrangement of present militia difficulties in the west.

LAURA BIGGAR SUEING AGAIN

JERSER CITY, N.J., Nov. 20.—A suit brought by Laura Biggar, the former actress, for an accounting of the estate of Henry Bennett was called today before Vice Chancellor Garrison. Bennett, who was a prominent theatrical manager in Pittsburg, died several years ago, leaving an estate estimated at $1,000,000. His will left Miss Biggar, who claims to be his widow, a 60 per cent interest in the estate. The death of Bennett was followed by much litigation which was supposed to be ended when the former actress settled her claim against the estate for $100,000. She now declares she was under duress when she made the settlement.
