ALL RESOURCES MUST BE DEVOTED TO WINNING WAR

Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Speak

NO CONSCRIPTION DECLARES PREMIER

Opposition Leader Shows Tendency to Criticize Wheat Seizure

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—The debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne was commenced last evening in the commons. Speeches by Dr. Alfred Thompson, Yukon, and Dr. E. Paquet, l'Islet, the mover and seconder; Sir Robert Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Dr. Michael Clark filled in the day. The adjournment was moved by Hon. T. C. Casgrain.

A remarkable feature of the opening day of the debate was that neither the prime minister nor the leader of the opposition made any reference to the only legislation mentioned in the speech from the throne, the bill to extend for one year the duration of the life of parliament. Practically the whole of thee speeches of both leaders were devoted to the war. They agreed that it must be prosecuted to the end with the whole ardor and resources of the Canadian people.

Sir Wilfrid indulged in a warm criticism of the Nationalists of Quebec and their attitude toward the war. He also expressed the view that certain neutral nations might have cause to regret their supineness in dealing with the situation created by the war. Sir Wilfrid was disposed to criticize the action of the government in commandeering recently wheat required by the allies.

Speaks of Work Accomplished.

Sir Robert Borden defended the action of the government. The premier dwelt at length on his mission to England and his visit to the front last summer. He told of what had been accomplished in raising troops and in the way of securing transports to carry Canadian exports, spoke of the splendid heroism of the Canadian soldiers in France and paid tribute to the united and determined spirit of the French and British people and their determination to win. He stated that there would be no conscription in Canada.

Dr. Clark in the course of his speech regretted that the farmers are still without an open market for their wheat. Referring tot he proposal to extend the life of parliament he said that the government had a definite attitude of mind last spring. The opposition, he said, would support the war measures, but reserved the right of constructive criticism.

A number of motions and proposed resolutions will appear on the order paper of the house today for the first time. F. S. Glass, East Middlesex, will propose a resolution declaring that it is the duty of the government to give more consideration to the production of flax in Canada, as well as to the manufacture of linen therefrom.

Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux gives notice of the following proposed resolution: "That this house recognizes the necessity for immediate national action to cope with new and complex conditions arising after the war and emphasizes the urgent need for the establishment of national labour bureaus."

Hon. Charles Murphy introduced the question of liquor prohibition by asking the following question of the government: "Is it the intention of the government to introduce during the present session of parliament legislation restricting or prohibiting the manufacture or sale of liquor during the war?"

Mr. Murphy returns again to the question of the two submarines purchased by Sir Richard McBride by asking when they will be equipped with torpedoes.

Extension of Term Necessary.

Dr. Alfred Thompson (Yukon), in moving the address in reply to the speech from the throne, dwelt almost exclusively with the war. He remarked that the proposed extension of the parliamentary term was justified by the necessity of winning the war. This was the overshadowing issue. "The government," he said, "must have an eye single to this great object and it is to remove the possibility of an election between this and the next session of parliament that the extension should be made. The ministry should have absolute freedom of action to devote itself to the prosecution of the war."

Regarding the progress of the war, he said there was no reason whatever to be dismayed. The embarkation of British troops at Corunna did not prevent the successful issue of the Peninsular war and the embarkation of troops from Gallipoli would not prevent the successful termination of this war.

Mr. Thompson referred briefly to the boundless possibilities of the western provinces both as to the development of their great natural resources and as to the future population which they will sustain.

Must Not Die in Vain.

Dr. Paquet (l'Islet) in seconding the address in French, declared that if the allies do not continue unflinchingly to the end of the task those who have died would have died in vain. In 1913 when the naval bill was introduced certain members of the house had ridiculed the German peril but the prime minister had seen the flash on the horizon. He was in possession of certain information which could not be divulged. Under the circumstances the speaker thought that his own duty was to support the prime minister in his effort to make secure the country and maintain the integrity of the Empire.

Referring to the recent speech of Armand Lavergne, Dr. Paquet regretted the attitude taken by this member of the Quebec legislature. Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal had declared that "we do not wish to be Germans; that is why we will fight The fate of Canada is bound to Britain."

Dr. Paquet said that some had slandered the French-Canadians for their supposed lack of patriotism, but this had been fully replied to by the minister of militia in a recent speech at Toronto.

Shadow Seems Darker—Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in opening, touched briefly on present conditions in the country; providence and the elements had been unusually kind to the farmers. Providence, it would appear, in order to atone for man's inhumanity to man had tried to make up to the farmers what they had lost through being denied a free market for their products.

Turning to the war, Sir Wilfrid remarked that the house has again gathered under the shadow of this great conflict. The shadow seemed to be darker than in April last. "Then we were full of the hope that the summer campaign of the allies would at least bring about the beginning of the end. But we were sadly disappointed."

On the western front, although great victories in which the Canadian boys had done their part bravely, and in some instances saved the day, conditions are practically the same as they were a year ago. On the eastern front Russia had lost Poland and Galicia, while its own territory was invaded and the dark came when Petrograd was actually in danger. In the Balkans the allies had nothing to show but noble resistance, which did not result in victory.

No Cause for Alarm.

Nevertheless, Sir Wilfrid declared, there was no cause for alarm. The victories achieved by Germany and its al-

Soldiers from Dominion Take a Hand in Anti-Conscription Gathering in London

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Wild scenes were witnessed at a gathering last night in a Quaker meeting house in whch Canadian soldiers participated. The trouble arose over the opinions of a faction of Quakers of a Quaker speaker who was supporting conscription.

One of the soldiers tried to muzzle with his gauntlet one of the interrupters of the speaker. The meeting house was soon a mass of struggling forms. In the melee hats were smashed, clothing was torn and collars lost. The conscriptionists finally came off victorious in the struggle and then sang the National Anthem and cheered the King.

AMENDMENTS TO BILL ARE KILLED

Many Labor Men Say Attitude Misrepresented

NO COMPULSION FOR MARRIED MEN

Only Change Likely Is the Modification Promised Trade Unionists

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

LONDON, Jan. 18.—There were three days of debate on the compulsion bill in prospect when the measure, which has entered upon the committee stage, was taken up yesterday and there were signs of a temporary slackening in interest in it. Many amendments, mostly of a hostile character, emanating from the faction led by Sir John Simon, former home secretary, had been placed on the order paper, but none except those proposed by the government in fulfillment of Premier Asquith's pledges to the trades unionists have any prospect of being incorporated in the bill.

The small anti-compulsion band showed itself still intent upon manifesting opposition to the measure, despite its crushing defeat in the recent division. There are signs, throughout the country, however, that labor is not disposed to accept without protest what some of the resolutions passed term the "misrepresentation of the attitude of labor toward compulsion."

Married Men Not Included.

The proceedings in committee in the house of commons today resulted in no modification of the military service bill. The government strongly resisted an attempt to include married men in the scope of the bill.

The most important amendment sought to include Ireland. This also was negatived after a not extremely exciting debate in which Sir John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, eloquently appealed to the public not to endanger Ireland's loyalty, displayed by its splendid recruiting campaign by an attempt to employ force.

The only amendment accepted was one providing that only men married before No. 2, the day Premier Asquith gave his pledge, should be regarded under the bill as married men.

Premier Asquith was again in communication with the labor party tonight with a view to arriving at an agreement upon terms acceptable both to the government and the laborites, providing safeguards against the bill being utilized for industrial compulsion.

TWO BURNED IN BRANDON BLAZE

Two Others Missing and Six Injured in Outbreak Which Destroys Big Business Structure.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

BRANDON, Man., Jan. 17—Two bodies have been recovered and two others lie buried in the ice covered ruins of the Syndicate building, which was one of Brandon's finest business structures this morning, but now a steaming ruin. The bodies recovered are those of Miss McCort, who lived with her parents at 1021 Seventh street, and Clarence Walker, who had charge of the house furnishing department of Doig, Rankin & Robertson.

When the fire broke out Walker was on a street car. He rushed from it into the burning building to the aid of some of the employees and his body was found not far from that of Miss McCort in what had originally been the office.

The fire broke out from an unknown cause in Doig, Rankin & Robertson's department store and spread so rapidly that many of the 50 employees had to jump from the third story windows. In 15 minutes it was all ablaze. Firemen made a gallant struggle but their efforts and the brick fire wall were unavailing to keep the fire from spreading to H. W. Ball, men's furnishings, and Macpherson & Bedford's furniture and undertaking establishments, and by noon $300,000 loss was certain.

The missing:

Miss Eggerston, dressmaker in alteration department, living with Mrs. D. A. Sutherland, 231 Fourth street.

Miss Marsh, dressmaker in the alteration department.

Injured:

Miss Matthews, fractured hip

Miss Evans, fractured ribs and injury to knee.

Miss Watson, injured back and sprained wrist.

Mary Galbraith, burned on face and hands.

Nettie Dwinnel, burns on face and hands and shock received by falling from second story window.

Miss Coltart, badly burned arms.

Fire loss, $300,000, made up as follows: Doig, Rankin & Robertson, building and stock, $195,000; Macpherson & Bedford, stock, $50,000; George Vincent, Strathroy, Ont., owner of that portion of the Synicate building occupied by Macpherson & Bedford and Ball & Co., $35,000; H. W. Ball & Co., stock of men's furnishings and fixtures, $28,000; premises and stock in all cases well insured.

SOCIALISTS DEMAND BELGIAN FREEDOM

Proceedings of Prussian Diet Are Interrupted by Liebknecht and Others.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 18.—The discussion of the budget in the Prussian diet yesterday gave rise to disorderly scenes, owing to the interruptions by Dr. Karl Liegknecht and other Socialists and to conflicting opinions expressed by members of different parts on the question of the reform of the electoral law. Herr Rirsch, Socialist, in the course of his speech, said: "We demand the reestablishment of the complete independence of Belgium. If the enemy government are not yet ready to listen to demands for peace their attitude is in marked contrast to the feelings prevailing among the different peoples, who everywhere are demanding peace. We demand electoral reform on behalf of women, and, above all, secrecy of the ballot."

ONLY ONE CANADIAN CASE BEFORE PRIVY COUNCIL

(Canadian Associated Press Cable.)

LONDON, Jan. 17.—There is only one Canadian appeal listed on the privy council docket this term. Six Canadian judgments are down for delivery, including those concerning powers of companies incorporated under provincial statute to trade throughout the Dominion, and the dispute from Stamford, Ont., raising the question of the validity of certain taxes imposed by the municipality upon the Ontario Power company at Niagara Falls.

INSTALLMENT PLAN FOR BELGIUM FUND

One Man Agrees to Give Five Dollars a Month for the Next Six Months.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—Among the pledges placed in the hands of the Belgian relief committee is one from a man who agrees to send $5 monthly for six months to be used for the purchase of Canadian wheat for the starving Belgians. This is but one of a number of such pledges which provide a steady income of money for the Belgian relief committee and an easy method of payment for those who desire to give but cannot afford to give all they wish in a lump sum.

The seriousness of the situation demands immediate consideration and even the smallest sums are acceptable to the comimttee. The need of Belgium is great just now. Starvation faces the people and relief must be sent at once or thousands will perish this winter. The initial payments of these instalment pledges form a nucleus on which the committee is enabled to contract for wheat, the one article most needed to relieve the destitution now existing.

The despatch adds that these troops are now employed in road building and the reconstruction of the two lines of railway and that the entente allies are continuing their preparations for a formidable defense.

"There have been artillery duels in the region of Plawanen, south of Riga, at Kokenhusen, east of Friedrichstadt, and at Illoukst.

"Eastern front: Russians on the Bessarabian and East Galician front have not resumed their attacks. The situation generally is calm.

"Austro-Hungarian troops in the district east of Barinczie drove the enemy from an advanced position, filled up the trenches and placed wire obstacles around them. The armies of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand, in field post operations, repulsed three Russian advances."

Russians Attack Fiercely.

Fighting in the Toporoutz district and east of Barenczie is more bitter than ever. The report makes the usual claim that heavy losses were inflicted on the Russians.

KING NICHOLAS REFUSES PEACE

Is Said to Have Rejected Offer—Hungarian Premier Announces Montenegrin Capitulation

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

ZURICH, Jan. 17.—The Lausanne Gazette states that King Nicholas of Montenegro has rejected formal peace proposals by Emperor William, made through Prince von Bulow, former imperial chancellor.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Beset on the north, east and the west by the Austro-Hungarian armies and with all lines of retreat cut, except into Albania, where hostile tribesmen must be faced, Montenegro is said to have asked Austro-Hungary for peace and to have had its request granted. Unconditional laying down of arms by Montenegro was made the basis of the opening of peace negotiations and Montenegro accepted these terms imposed by the dual monarchy.

This announcement was made to the Hungarian parliament by Premier Tisza. It had been conceded for days that Montenegro was in a critical position. Although the army of the little kingdom fought valiantly against the Austro-Hungarians it was unequal because of inferior force, lack of guns and, it has been said, a shortage of food, to the task of holding back the armies that had, in conjunction with their allies, succeeded in crushing Servia.

POPE TO INVESTIGATE ATROCITIES IN BELGIUM

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph sends the following:

"The first fruits of the visit to Rome of Cardinal Mercier, primate of Belgium, are that the pope will conduct an independent and impartial investigation of charges of German atrocities in Belgium. Cardinal Mercier told the pope, it is said, that the German episcopate was willing to accept an arbitration committee appointed by him. The pope promised to appoint a committee and to base his apportionment of responsibility on the findings of this body."

LONDON, Jan. 18.—A Zurich despatch to the Exchange Telegraph says that Cardinal Mercier, at the audience which he had with the pope on Sunday, submitted sworn depositions concerning 137 Belgian priests condemned to death by the Germans. The pope, the despatch says, was profoundly moved.

LIBERALS CHEER LAVERGNE ATTACK ON CONSERVATIVES

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

QUEBEC, Jan. 18.—Cheers and applause from crowded galleries as well as more moderate applause from several Liberal members of the house greeted Armand Lavergne, Nationalist member for Montmagny, in the Quebec assembly last night when he followed up his speech of last Thursday by a more lengthy one in which he denounced the Conservatives, who, he said, has shared his views in 1910 and 1911 and who now turned away from him when he opposed Canada's participation in the wars of the Empire.

He did not want to be called a traitor by those who were traitors with him in 1911 and he invited any one of them to come before the electorate.

Constantinople Admits Retreat but Says Attackers Lost Heavily

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

The army of King George, coming northward from the Persian gulf to the relief of the British forces at Kut el Amara, has driven the Ottomans to within six miles of the beleaguered town of Tigris.

The Russians, in their drive along the front of nearly 100 miles in the Caucasus have won additional points of vantage from the Turks, especially in the Aranza and Inid valley regions. Constantinople admits this, but says that souht of the Araza in hand to hand fighting in a Russian advanced position heavy casualties were inflicted on the Russians by the Turks.

CRUISER LANDED FRENCH AT CORFU

No Transports Employed and Surprise Was Complete—Disembarkation Completed in Five Hours.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Not a single transport was used in the surprise landing of the French on the island of Corfu. Every man, gun, mule, horse, round of ammunition and pound of forage was embarked on French cruisers which convoyed by a flotilla of destroyers left an unnamed port on Jan. 9.

Steaming at 19 knots they sighted Corfu Monday night. With lights out they crept up the narrow channel between Corfu and the mainland, which had been infested by boats and entered Corfu harbor at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Such is the account from the Chronicle's correspondent at Corfu. The troops were unloaded from four cruisers and rowed ashore while the town slept. Only just before the landing did the consuls officially inform the prefect of the disembarkation. The landing of the men and munitions was completed in five hours.

DEVOTE RESOURCES TO WINNING WAR

lies had not been complete. They had been pyrric victories. At no distant date, he believed, the allies would be able to take the offensive but up to the present time the only real victories they had achieved had been through the instrumentality of the navy. A soldier of Napoleon had declared that they had won their victories by using their legs, by marching and counter-marching. Admiral Jellicoe had won his victories by patrols and fleet movements which had kept the German fleet in just as complete subjection as if he had sent it to the bottom.

That more sacrifices are to be expected by the allies and by Canada was the next declaration of Sir Wilfrid. In view of this it was well to review the attitude of members on both sides of the house. When the war broke out he said, "we had decided unanimously to participate to the full strength of our resources. The only objection came from a small minority, the Nationalist party of Quebec. The Nationalists declared that it was a crime for Canada to participate in this war and asserted that our participation was due to dictation by the imperial authorities.

No Demand From Britain.

"I hold no brief for the government, but I have been in office for 15 years and I say that there is no foundation for such an assertion. On the part of Great Britain there has been no demand, no command and no request. What we have done we have done in the full power of our legislative independence. What we have done be have done not under any sense of compulsion, but as British subjects. We owe it to ourselves to sacrifice our treasure and blood to maintain British institutions. Such is the spirit of the British constitution that not even the King or the parliament of England has the right to command Canada to supply a single soldier or a single dollar. It is as free men we have gone into this thing."

Nationalists Deny Liberty

Sir Wilfrid remarked that in the past Sir Robert Borden and he had not always agreed in regard to those matters. Sir Robert had maintained that "when Britain was at war we were immediately at war," while he had said that it was for the Canadian parliament to decide. He had claimed for the Canadian parliament the same rights as those possessed by the parliament of the motherland. This was not the time or the occasion to resume this line of cleavage. He recalled it rather to emphasize the existing unanimity and by way of reply to the reproach of servility launched at both parties in the province of Quebec. "If today there is servility it is not on the part of those who agree as to the necessity of helping the mother country but rather on the part of those blinded by passion and prejudice who would deny to us the liberty of playing our parts as men.

"These men," declared Sir Wilfrid, "would deny us the liberty of helping France and Belgium, not because they hate France and Belgium, but because we cannot help France and Belgium without helping England. Away with such sophistry. It is nothing but an attempt to conceal the aridity of empty heads."

Sir Wilfrid then declared that not only has Canada a direct interest in the war but that every civilized nation in the world is directly interested. If the war s won by the Germans there are nations which would deeply rue the day of their supineness.

Against Conscription

The object of Germany had undoubtedly been to dominate the whole world The consequence of German defeat would be that they would look for an era of peace and the dawning of the brotherhood of man. A German victory, or a partial victory, for Germany could not wholly win, would mean that Europe would continue its military preparations and even this continent could not keep out of the vortex of war.

Sir Wilfrid said that he would not discuss today the announcement of Sir Robert Borden on New Year's day that Canada would raise 500,000 men. It seemed like a large contract but if it was essential to carry on the fight then he would acquiesce. They must repel at once the idea that it was the first step toward conscription.

There must be no conscription in Canada. There had been men in this house who had said that the naval law was the first step toward conscription. The naval law was still on the statute book and there was no conscription in Canada. He had expected that England would be able to carry on the war under the old system, but the British government had thought otherwise.

Conditions were not the same in Great Britain as in Canada, For one thing, conscription could not be passed here without giving a blow to immigration. Already is was affecting immigration from the United States.

Sir Wilfrid criticized the government for not having reduced its expenditures last year. This could have been done by $20,000,000 or $30,000,000. "There should be economy both in public service and in private expenditure. So long as we are at war this was one of the sacrifices which must be made."

Speaks of Wheat Seizure.

Sir Wilfrid said he was surprised that there was no mention in the speech from the throne in regard to the commandeering of 17,000,000 bushels of wheat by the government last fall. The official explanation said that it was done at the request of the imperial government and yet a British official press notice had been issued stating that the imperial authorities had no information on the subject. No attempt had yet been made to explain this discrepancy. He was told that some of the wheat which had been commandeered had actually belonged to the French government. He believed that the allied nations were buying now in Canada millions of bushels and through the ordinary channels of trade. He saw no reason for this commandeering. He would make no charge, but he would say that the government's action had quite naturally given rise to suspicion. The whole correspondence must be laid on the table.

"Our supreme aspiration," said Sir Wilfrid in closing, "is that Belgium shall again be free and as prosperous as it was. It is also our aim that France shall have its lost territory and its natural boundaries restored and that old England shall retain unimpaired, undiminished as ever, its prestige and its power in the world. It is our aim that both England and France shall resume as early as possible their onward march toward the future enfranchisement of the human race from the shackles of passion and prejudice, that in weakened Germany democracy may be triumphant and that the German people, sobered from their dreams of conquest and domination, may return to the peace of the past and the benevolence which one time characterized their race."

Sir Robert Borden Replies.

Sir Robert Borden, replying to Sir Wilfrid's references to the large estimates of last year, said that when they were brought down it was with the definite understanding that no new works would be proceeded with except those which were most urgently required. That policy had been carried out. The government felt the need of the strictest economy during this war. It had already considered the advisability of staying even works which had been under contract. The revenues, however, had been such that this was not necessary. But, if owing to the urgency of conditions in the future it became necessary to take that course the government would not shrink from it.

Sir Wilfrid also had been suspicious about the proceedings for securing the comamndeered wheat, but admitted that he had no charge to make. It would have been better then not to mention any charge or if he had a charge to put it forward. It had been the aim of the government so seek an outlet for the country's products in every part of the world where there was likely to be an outlet. Representations were made to the government regarding the need of wheat for the allies.

Found Market for Wheat.

The best disinterested advice was sought and it was on that advice that action was taken. As to the dislocation of business it was not at all serious. The greater part of the commandeered wheat had already been moved out and the efforts of the country to secure a market and outlet for the products of the Dominion ought to merit congratulation rather than condemnation. The premier added that Sir Geoirge Foster would reply to absolutely baseless reports that had been spread regarding this matter.

Turning to the war, Sir Robert said that if conditions were compared today with those when parliament adjourned on April 15 last, they might not seem encouraging. No progress had been made in the east of any great strategic value. The Russians had met with reverses, the Dardanelles campaign had failed, the Bulgarians had entered the war and Servia and Montenegro had been overrun.

No Reason for Discouragement.

"But if we look below the surface there there is no reason whatever to be discouraged about the outcome of the war. The economic situation of the allies is strong. Italy has entered the war on our side. We have held the enemy in the west and thus secured time for necessary preparations that will be effective in securing victory."

Sir Robert said that Britain's great task of raising and training a great army and providing guns, rifles, trench mortars, etc., was a tremendous one. It was an army 20 times greater than the Empire ever expected to send into the field. Lloyd George had said that some time had been lost in making the necessary preparations, but the only surprise is that so little time was lost and that there had been such success in dealing with so appalling a situation.

"In Canada we were even worse off. We lacked commissioned and noncommissioned officers even more than England. Still, what we have accomplished is a wonderful thing. This is no boast of the government, but a giving of credit to the people for the way in which all have come forward to assist the government. For the last 10 months 2000 soldiers per week have been going overseas. In the six months from July to December 94,400 men enlisted. There were 8000 enlistments in the first two weeks of January. From April 15 to Jan. 12, 80,250 men had been sent overseas. There have been 120,000 altogether sent to the front and the total number under arms is 220,000.

Answered King's Appeal.

Referring to the increasing of the authorized forces to 500,000, the premier said that after the forces authorized had been fixed at 250,000 the King had made an appeal on Oct. 22 which was intended particularly for the British Isles, but in Canada it was thought that it should be recognized here als On Jan. 1, therefore, the government increased the authorized force to 500,000. "That seems large, but we must remember we are fighting in this war as one of the dominions of the Empire and that Britain has 4,000,000 men in its militia and 250,000 in the navy.

"I realize," said Sir Robert, "that the national strength of Canada must be maintained. We must have regard to the agricultural and industrial necessities of this country. It seemed on Jan. 1 in view of all the developments of he last nine months that it might be worth while to announce to all the world that we are prepared and ready to do something more. The government felt that there was need for further vigorous and united efforts from all parts of the Empire."

Sir Robert said that the response from all the provinces had been splendid.

The maritime provinces and Quebec had been slow at first, but recent information showed recruiting to be much better now. The Canadian of French origin now at the front was acquitting himself nobly and amongst these were the names of Papineau, Beirre, Dansereau and Roye. There was no more heroic deed enacted than that of Roye, who died in an effort to save his men from danger. It was a name that should be emblazoned on the memory of all.

No Conscription, Says Borden.

Referring to the question of conscription raised by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the the premier said:

"In the first few months of the war I clearly stated that there would not be conscription in Canada. I repeat that statement today."

He added that he knew that there had been in the American press certain reports of some kind of compulsion, but there was no truth in it.

Regarding the increase in the Canadian force he said that it must be remembered that this is the greatest struggle which the Empire has ever known. "But it will be won without any doubt if we make the necessary sacrifices."

The prime minister then stated that the orders in council authorizing the appointment of the war purchasing commission, the economic committee, the military and hospital commission and other similar orders in council would be tabled tomorrow. He said that by the appointment of these commissions the public interest had been advanced Reference was also made to the Davidson commission of inquiry, which, he said, had been prosecuted with ability and vigor, with the result that some prosecutions had already been started.

The findings of the commission would be tabled.

Sir Robert then turned to the story of his mission to England. He said that one of the objects of his visit was to ascertain from first hand sources the preparations which had been made by the allies to win the war by the organization of all their resources. In England he had been given every facility. Lloyd George had left a sick bed to come to London to confer with him.

Sir Robert then gave some figures showing the rapid increase in shell production, the larger output of big guns, machine guns, etc., in Great Britain.

Canada Mobilizes Resources.

"In Canada, too, we have been mobilizing our resources and orders to the value of $300,000,000 had already been placed. During the month of January payment for orders amounted to $35,000,000. It is pleasing to be able to note that the minister of finance had been able to arrange the payment of half this amount." Sir Robert intimated that in future Canada might be able to finance even a larger share.

Canada's ability to furnish supplies, Sir Robert said, had also been drawn to the attention of Great Britain and its allies. They had been provided with a list of articles which Canada can supply and he had discussed the matter with the British government. The director of contracts for the war office had stated that up to July 10, last, orders placed in Canada aggregated $240,000,000. The amount now runs well up to the $500,000,000 mark. He considered this a great tribute to the producing powers of the country. Doubtless some of the industries developed would be permanent.

Secure Steamer Service.

Sir Robert said that he had also taken up with the British authorities the question of transportation. More than a year ago the government had arranged for the services of A. P. Harris, of the Canadian Pacific railway, to organize the transportation of supplies. Mr. Harris in a recent report said that there had been an uninterrupted outlet for orders. The regular service established had proved to be of great advantage to the export trade. Between August, 1914, and April, 1915, 144,913 gross tons had been shipped. In the next seven months this had been increased to more than 440,000. In February arrangements had been made for 18 transports. During the past seven months these had been increased to 40 transports, 20 plying from Halifax and 20 from St. John. Representations had been made to the admiralty for more, it being pointed out that a larger portion of ships had been taken from the north Atlantic service than from any other. It had to be borne in mind, however, that the paramount necessity of the admiralty is for vessels for the transport of troops and munitions.

Sir Robert also stated tha when in England he had taken up the matter of the purchase of horses and it had been decided that it would not be advisable to establish a Canadian remount commission. It was agreed that the British remount commission would buy horses for Canada and turn them over when they were required at net cost.

Long Way to End of War.

The premier then spoke in eloquent terms of the spirit he had found in France and England. The French, he said, had an absolute and perfect confidence in their ability to win the war. The people from the highest to the lowest were animated with such a spirit of determination that their defeat was impossible. In England the same spirit was manifest. John Bull was a little slow in awakening but he was now thoroughly in earnest. Never had a stronger and more intense determination to win been aroused in any country.

Sir Robert touched on the bravery of the Canadians, recounting briefly the heroic and successful work of the Canadian division at Ypres in holding back the Germans and the splendid heroism of the Princess Patricias. In regard to the battle of Ypres he said that he found it to be the concensus of opinion that on tha day he Canadians had saved he situation.

In conclusion Sir Robert said: "The mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind exceedingly fine. I believe we have still a long way to go before we see the end of this war. But I also believe our Empire soon will have in the field armies more thoroughly equipped than those of any belligerent nation, with all the essential forces of men and munitions. If we are but in earnest this struggle can have but one conclusion and that is victory for the allied arms. And with the fierce flame of this war and the ordeal of sacrifice which it entails, the strong elements of the Canadian nation will learn the better to understand each other and they will be welded into a more perfect unity than ever before."

Wants Free Wheat.

Dr. Clark (Red Deer) referred to the paragraph of the speech from the throne which commented upon the fact that providence had blessed the country with a bountiful harvest. In this connection he believed that an omission had been made. Providence plus the farmer had blessed the country with the harvest. The west had shown that it could produce at the present time almost to the limit of its capacity for disposal of the crop and here was where the government might have stepped in and assisted both providence and the farmer. Since the Underwood tariff bill had been enacted the price of beef to the farmer in the west had been uniformly good. But oats had been selling in the west recently for 25 cents per bushel. If such a price were offered during the war with all the artificial demands which accompanied it what would be the condition of affairs when peace were declared? It was obviously the duty of the government to procure every available market for the Canadian crops. He had thought last summer that the government was prepared to consider this question. The minister of public works had stated that he had an open mind on the question of free wheat. "He has it still," said Dr. Clark, "but the United States boundary is still closed to us. An open market with the United States would have been of far more value to us than an open mind on the part of the minister. I wonder if some of the millers did not meet him while he was out there and changed his mind for him?"

To Support War Measures.

Dr. Clark referred to that paragraph in the speech from the throne which stated that he government was convinced that the people did not desire the distraction or the confusion of an election. There was a grave doubt whether that attitude existed with the government last spring. The minister of public works had made the discovery last session that the people were frothing at the mouth to tear the senate to pieces. Before the summer was over he had found that it was not the senate but his own province for which the people had whetted their fangs.

While the attitude of the opposition, he said; was to be one of support, including measures for the prosecution of the war, they reserved the right of constructive criticism.

Dr. Clark added that the homesteader in the west was ready to contribute to the patriotic fund. The last dollar of the country was behind this and other similar funds. But the air was full of rumors about what was being done with the money voted by parliament. There were grave suspicions about the road some of this money was traveling.

Concluding, Dr. Clark said he joined with speakers on the other side in the highest admiration of the Canadians who are at the front and also in the firmest determination to see the war through to a victorious ending.

GRAND FORKS WOMAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Mrs. Webster Caught While Crossing Bridge—Son Harold Hurled to Ice Below.

(Special to The Daily News.)

GRAND FORKS, B.C., Jan. 17.—Mrs. Webster was so badly injured by a Canadian Pacific railway freight train yesterday afternoon that she died at the Grand Forks hospital a few hours later. Mrs. Webster, accompanied by her son, Arthur, who works at the South Kootenay company's substation here, was proceeding across the Canadian Pacific railway bridge on a visit to her daughter who lives on the south side of the river, when an eastbound freight reached the bridge before the two could gain the other side. Arthur Webster drew his mothes as far as possible to one side of the track and expected that the train would pass them safely. Some projection caught him and threw him off the bridge to the ice below and at the same time threw his mother under the wheels, both feet being cut off. The train was stopped and the two injured picked up. Dr. Traux was summoned and a team rushed mother and son to the hospital. Nothing could be done for Mrs. Webster who was between 65 and 70 years of age. She died early in the evening. Arthur Webster, who is suffering from a fractured wrist, dislocated elbow and sprained ankle as well as severe shock, is in the hospital.

The Daughters of the Empire will hold a grand patriotic carnival at the rink tomorrow evening. The grand march will begin at 8 o'clock. A prize will be given for the best patriotic costume. Refreshments will be served.

The cold weather shows no signs of abating and the ice harvest is being reaped.

CONVENTION DATE CHANGED TO FEB. 4

He states that it was considered expedient, in order that the two events should not clash, to alter the date and has advised all the growers and associations to elect delegates to represent them at the convention at Nelson on Fed 4.

GET IT FIRST—NOT LAST

When a cold grips your system it is convincing proof that your condition is weakened—remember that. It is risky indeed to simply trust your strength to throw it off, because neglected colds have brought more serious sickness than any other one thing, while weakening cathartics and stimulating syrups are often depressing and dangerous.

The one best treatment for any cold—the one so often relied on when others fail, is the powerful blood-nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the very sources of bodily strength to suppress the present cold and generate strength to thwart further sickness.

Get Scott's first, not last—and insist on the genuine—always free from injurious drugs. No advanced prices.

ACQUIRE THE FIRE PREVENTION HABIT

Fire Chief Guthrie, in Submitting Annual Report, Recommends Greater Care on Part of Citizens.

During 1915 the Nelson fire department responded to 25 calls according to the seventh annual report of Donald Guthrie, chief of the department.

The causes for the fires were as follows: One was caused by overheated furnace, two by overheated hot air pipe, one by sparks falling on roof, two by gasoline explosions, one by smoking in bed, one by a cigarette, two by lighted candles, one by an overheated smokestack, one by an overheated stove, 12 by uncleaned chimneys. There was one false alarm. The chief points out that the majority of these fires were directly due to carelessness and recommends the citizens to "acquire the fire prevention habit."

The total value of the buildings and contents in which the fires took place is given at $224,700 and the total insurance $137,150. The damage done by fire, water and smoke is given as $27,460, exclusive of the loss, estimated at $10,000, to motor launches and boat houses. The total insurance paid was $27,759 and the two most serious fires are given as those at the Methodist church and the John Hamilton residence. The chief reports that notices regarding fire escapes, accumulation of rubbish and storage of gasoline were all complied with.

The auto truck covered 222 miles in answering calls and training drivers, at an average cost of $5.10 per month. The total upkeep was as follows: Salaries, $6759.85; equipment, $776.24; uniforms, $31.25; insurance, $200; maintenance, $1493.49; total, $9262.83. The report recommends that bylaw 74, regarding the storage of gasoline, be enforced and that a schedule price be set for chimney cleaning. It also recommends that two more alarm boxes be installed in the residential portion of the city and that one more man be engaged for the department, in order that at least four men shall be on duty at the hall at all times and two men on each piece of apparatus when a call sounds.

ON THE YORKSHIRE COAST

(By Edmond G. A. Holmes.)

I sat by the scarlet poppies near the sands of the sunken shore:
The hedges rustled above me as the warm wind wandered o'er:
I heard it speak to the corn-fields—I heard it speak to the sea—
Had it no message, I wondered—nothing to whisper to me?

I marked by the rushing ripples its path through the golden grain:
Gay wavelets danced before it over the sunlit main:
What were the words it whispered as it kissed the ocean spray?
Tell me, O bending corn-fields, what did the soft wind say?

The wheat and poppies answered: It
whispered of sunny mirth,
Of the wealth of the coming harvest,
of the gifts of the goodly earth:
Its breath was the blended odor of fruit, and flower and corn—
Pure as the noonday heaven, fresh as the early morn.

CANADIAN DOCTOR WITH THE SERBS

Describes the Journey From the Interior to Saloniki—Terrible Privations.

LONDON.—How a journey from the interior of Servia to Saloniki, only 200 miles as the crow flies, occupied 45 days, with terrible privations as regards food and shelter, was told today by the French-Canadian doctor, Armand Perras, of 542 Dorchester street west, Montreal.

Perras was the first among the group of Canadian doctors who volunteered for civilian service in Servia at the request of the Servian legation here through the Quebec provincial agency. Reaching Servia in May, he was appointed medical officer at Sokobania, north of Nish. Being an island Spa, the town was exempt from the great plague of typhus prevalent elsewhere, but he spent six months vaccinating children and attending to wounded soldiers. When the Bulgars attacked Servia Sokobania was menaced, but Dr. Perras only left the town when the prefect departed. At that time the roar of cannon was heard, only 35 miles away, and daily coming nearer.

Forty-mile Walk.

Dr. Perras put his little baggage on a military transport, then set out to walk 40 miles to the rail head. The roads were frightful, and the bridges had been destroyed by the Serbs to prevent the advance of the enemy. A short distance was covered by rail with members of the French medical mission, but an encircling movement by the Austrian troops made a detour by road necessary. Dr. Perras started out again alone, and penetrated Albania in order to avoid Uskub when the latter was taken. Then followed days of riding or walking alongside his horse, fording rivers and often walking waist deep in water. All meals or shelter were obtained at premium prices only, the food being mostly bread, raw onions and even cabbages.

When Dr. Perras finally reached a town on Greek soil, the sight of a restaurant table caused a nervous collapse as a result of his prolonged fast.

Awful Sights.

En route Dr. Perras saw many awful sights, such as crowds of famished refugees with families, Austrian prisoners barefooted and ragged, and many fights for food among the peasants. He secured a ship for Marseilles, and thence came overland to London. He reports that of six Canadian doctors who volunteered to go to Servia, Dr. Brault of Montreal, went to Egypt, and the others were in Rome, with the exception of Miss Levasseur, of whom he had no news. He had not heard of Dr. Ella Scarlett-Syne, of Vancouver, who sailed for Servia in August. Dr. Perras has now obtained a commission with the Canadian medical service here.

LEADERS VOICE DETERMINATION OF DOMINION

With the speeches of Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday in the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne the third war session of the Dominion Parliament got well under way.

The addresses of both leaders were eloquent of the determination of the people of Canada to do their duty in assisting the Empire and its allies to bring the war to a successful conclusion. The prime minister referred to what has been accomplished and both Sir Robert and the leader of the opposition dwelt upon the sacrifices which have yet to be made in blood and treasure.

Neither attempted to underestimate the magnitude of the task which yet confronts the Empire and both expressed the confidence which the enemate peoples feel in ultimate victory.

AWAKEN TO OPPORTUNITIES FORMERLY LOST

The movement in Great Britain to capture enemy trade has brought to light the fact that British manufacturers can compete with Germany under normal conditions in the sale of many articles for which the latter country before the war virtually controlled the market. British manufacturers are learning that in a large number of cases they have been losing trade simply through failure to turn out the class of product best adapted to the market concerned. Germans, for example, gained a great hold on South America largely because its cheaply made goods were put up in more attractive, or at least more gaudy, fashion than the more substantial British products.

In other instances trade openings have been lost without any apparent reason. Yorkshire woolen manufacturers since the war have been looking into their opportunities and are confident that in future they can beat Germany on its own ground. Cotton printed goods can also be produced at Germany's price.

The war has not only resulted in the development of many new industries in the British Empire but in arousing manufacturers to benefit from opportunities which before the war they were allowing their foreign competitors to grasp.

ANSWERS AFFIDAVITS SECURED BY BERNSTORFF

Germany has preferred to threaten Great Britain with reprisals rather than to submit to Sir Edward Grey's eminently fair proposal for an independent inquiry into the Baralong case and some of the acts of German submarine commanders committed within 48 hours of the alleged shooting of German sailors by the crew of the merchant ship Baralong. Count von Bernstorff has charged, on affidavits by American muleteers, that after the Baralong sank a German submarine the members of the crew were shot as they struggled in the water.

Probably the publication of evidence by members of the crew of the Nicosian, a vessel which the German sailors are declared to have been attempting to reach, has had something to do with Berlin's aversion to the proposed test of the truth of the affidavits it has secured. The Nicosian men declare there was no shooting of German sailors while they were in the water or at any time after the battle between the undersea boat and the Baralong had been decided.

Henry Ford admits that in 21 years he has voted only six times. It looks as if Henry Ford's effort to reform conditions in Europe might have been better devoted to an attempt to teach Henry Ford something about good citizenship.

Many the Victoria Crosses have been awarded during the war, a number nearly 50 less than that given out during the Indian mutiny. So many gallant acts have been performed by the soldiers of the British army since August, 1914, that it is clear that the high traditions of the most valued of British decorations are being maintained. It is only awarded under most exceptional circumstances.

A New York orchestra leader asserts that Wagner and Strauss were responsible for this war because of the martial music they wrote. It is now up to the Berlin Overseas News agency to retort that the German composers are guiltless but that the real warmakers were the authors of "Soldiers of the King" and "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

A spokesman for the Socialists in the Prussian diet declared that the people of the warring nations "everywhere are demanding peace." If that is the belief of the millions of German people represented by the Socialist leaders their vision is still very much besmudged by the Prussian propaganda. None of the entente peoples is demanding peace. They are all demanding victory and determined to fight until they get it.

"I know two sadder words."

"What are they?" asked the teacher.

"Please remit."

FERMENT WITHOUT ISSUE.

Nothing is so bad for the soul as feeling that is dispensed on nothing. We recognize this well enough in the eshete who take in impressions and gives forth estheticism, in the schoolgirl who weeps over impossible romances, in the old gentleman afflicted with chronic moral indignation. To feel and feel and feel and never to use that feeling is to grow distracted and worrisome, and to no end. We Americans have been witnessing supreme drama, clenching our fists, talking, yet unable to fasten any reaction to realities. Ferment without issue, gestation without birth, is making us sullen and self-conscious and ashamed.

The sources of our trouble may be traced directly to the president's first message to the American people, when we were asked to be neutral in feeling. We were not told to feel about anything positive, but we were merely told not to feel to deeply. That negative injunction was bound to fail, and the vacillation of America has ever since grown more serious. What President Wilson seems not to understand is that the enunciation of a great purpose which enlists emotion is the only way to avoid that clashing of emotions from which we suffer.—New Republic.

HEAVENLY PITTSBURG.

"Have you been in England?" inquired Martin Chuzzlewit of one of the voluable patriots he encountered while traveling in the United States. "In print, I hev, Sir," was the reply. That must be the situation of a "close student" quoted approvingly by the Pittsburg Dispatch. He declares that capital and labor in England are no closer together than employers and employed were in the United States 30 years ago. The trend in the republic is toward arbitration, in England toward strikes. "It would be impossible to imagine any such condition in this country as today exists in Britain," says the Dispatch. "In the event of war labor call, Union and non-union men would be found working side by side against their common enemy. That has been our history. It is the true democratic spirit, bred by institutions and principles."

Too often history in the United States means the careful and repeated assertion of things that are not true, and the studied suppression of unpleasant facts. The editor of the Dispatch probably believes what he writes, which proves nothing save the elastic character of his faith. It is beautiful to think of the United States springing to arms. Artemus Ward explained the nature of the springing in 1862. He said: "If I am drafted, I shall resign." Discussing the draft in Baldinsville he said: "I hadn't no sooner sot down on the plazzy of the tavern than I saw 16 solitary horsemen ridin' four abreast, wendin' their way up the street. 'What's them? Is it cavalry?' That,' said the landlord, 'is the stage. Sixteen able-bodied citizens has lately bo't the stage line 'tween here and Scotsburg. That's them. They're stage drivers. Stage drivers is exempt.' I saw that each stage driver carried a letter in his left hand. 'The mail is heavy today,' said the landlord. 'Gin'rally they don't have more'n half a dozen letters 'tween 'em. Today they've got one apiece. Bile my lights and liver!'"

Artemus mentions also the eminent physician who got drunk because habitual drunkards were exempt. He even suggests that the editor had to remain at home to announce that the government "was about to take vigorous measures to put down the rebellion." A careful reading of the labor and military history of the United States will supply at least some facts to justify the satire of Artemus Ward, and shame the cock-sureness of Pittsburg's able editors.—Toronto News.

PRIVATES MAY TAKE OFFICERS' COURSE

Sir Sam Hughes Announces New Plan of Securing and Training Leaders of Expeditionary Forces.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—A democratic change has been inaugurated by Major-Gen. Hughes in the manner of preparing and educating officers for military service.

With a view to providing qualified officers and non-commissioned officers for the Canadian expeditionary forces an infantry school of struction will be established at the headquarters of each military district and members of the Canadian expeditionary force of whatever rank of service, will be permitted to attend, providing that they are recommended by their commanding officers and there is room for them.

Candidates or probationers will join in weekly batches and they will undergo a progressive course of instruction.

The duration of a probationer's course will depend on the progress he makes and on the rank for which he seeks to qualify.

Boards will assemble for the periodical examination of probationers and subject to the necessities of the services the president and members will be officers of field rank.

A probationer will not be allowed to present himself for examination unless recommended by his commandant, and, for cause, a probationer is liable at any time to be removed.

Probationers, whatever their rank or service, will draw the pay and allowance and while under instructions wear the uniform of a private soldier in the Canadian expeditionary force.

Battalion schools for non-commissioned officers will be established in connection with each regiment, while special classes for special objects can be established at any time.

HODGETTS HAS GRIPPE.

(By Canadian Associated Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Col. Hodgetts, Canadian Red Cross commissioner, is slowly recovering from a severe attack of influenza, contracted while at Cambridge.

HE STOOD BEHIND WILSON

President Wilson and his bride spent their honeymoon at Hot Springs, Va. Soon after their arrival another visitor attracted attention. This stranger was apparently in feeble health and his physical appearance excited the utmost commiseration. His back was crooked, his limbs were distorted, and he was, in fact, a poor wreck of a man.

Considerable speculation as to the cause of his condition was indulged in. Some said gout, others rheumatism, and certain of the gossips inclined to the theory that the unfortunate fellow had been the victim of a premature blast. At length a piazza acquaintance of the object of this curiosity plucked up courage to inquire from him as to the nature of his disease.

"You will pardon me, I am sure," said the investigator, "but I should like to ask if your physical condition is the result of disease or accident?"

"Hell, no," responded the invalid, waving a deformed arm in the air to emphasize his words. "I got this way trying to stand behind Wilson's foreign policy."

ARTILLERY TO DECIDE WARS

In a few days the citizens of Toronto will have he privilege of hearing Frederick Palmer lecture upon the war. Mr. Palmer is an American newspaper correspondent who has seen more war than any American army officer, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. His name is known and respected in Europe. He was selected by the British war office above all other American correspondents to go to "the front of front." Not half a dozen men have seen what he has seen. He is absolutely pro-ally in his opinions on this war. He believes that the allies will win in the course of the present year. Yet what he has seen shows how near we were a year ago to losing all the land battles that are to be fought. He is a great believer in preparedness and a series of articles that he is contributing to the United States press shows how necessary it is for a nation to be ready for war.

Mr. Palmer says that the great sensation of the war to date is artillery. Of all the nations at war only the Germans knew how large a part artillery was to play in the conflict. They learned the lesson, he says, in the Russo-Japanese war. But even the Germans had no idea of the successes Not even the Germans have had enough that were to be achieved by artillery. artillery, though in the early days of the war they had 10 or 20 or even 100 shells to hurl against on throw by the allies. In Mr. Palmer's opinion there seems to be no such thing as enough shells. Modern artillery can blast any fort, any town, any position to pieces and nothing can blast artillery to pieces but more and heavier artillery.

The British Navy.

In an eloquent passage he contrasts the preparedness of the British navy with the unpreparedness of the British army:

"It hardly seems possible that the England of the British navy and the England that sent its little army to that heroic retreat from Flanders is one and the same country. The fact that it is proves that successful warfare these days is not due to innate heroism of the people or their willingness to give up life and money, but to having the machinery of war ready. The British navy wanted nothing in the way of modern preparation. It led in all mechonical processes. It had the latest guns, the latest designs of ships. Not a single bit of equipment or a single tool for war was lacking. Its experts had foreseen the needs of naval war, but the British army was without adequate artillery or aeroplanes or anti-aircraft guns. The British navy was an up to the minute organization, because the British people were ready to pay the cost and insisted on full preparedness.

Depending on Bravery.

"The people didn't take the same interest in the army. They thought the army would get on somehow and they let its demand wait. Wasn't Tommy Atkins the bravest soldier in the world? Wasn't he British? He would take care of hiself against any enemy. For the British public, in much the same way as ours, visualized an army as soldiers carrying rifles and nothing else. At Mons, and again on the Aisne, and later in the first battle at Ypres, the Germans were firing anywhere from three to ten shells to one against the British, who had to sit in their trenches and take it. If they charged they met the bullet spray of machine guns, while they lacked machine guns to meet the German charge. Again, and yet again—artillery and machine guns are things you buy, things you build, the product of factories, not of the cradle and of the affection of home, as men are. So Englan and France too, and all the allies, because they lacked guns paid the price of holding by the death of brothers and sons against the merciless blasts of shells."

Americans Should Prepare.

In applying the lessons the war has taught to the ability of the United States to resist a foreign foe, Mr. Palmer finds his own country in the position of a sheep facing a wolf. In the whole of the United States there are not enough guns to defend 20 miles of trench front. The American army is half the size of the Servian army. The United States has 600 big guns in the making. Where are the men to handle them?

THE PESSIMISTS.

A preacher in an Ottawa pulpit yesterday declared that the war pessimists were chiefly to be found among "the over-fed, the over-groomed, and the over-read"—in the trenches and among those suffering most from the burdens of the war there was only optimism. This is so absolutely true that it is surprising that those who have listened to words of pessimism haven't alway marked who the speakers were.

It is the men who are sitting in easy chairs, suffering not at all from the war, with no cares but selfish ones, who are lamenting most that the German armies are still in France and who say that the Rhine will never be crossed and that the allies have made a fizzle of the war. It is the same in ordinary affairs. The man who doesn't do anything to make matters right himself is always the one who thinks the other man is making disastrous mistakes. Henry Ford, for instance, went to Europe to tell the governments there what mistakes they were making, but somewhere on the way he discovered that he had failed to do his own share at home.

The people who are actively helping to win the war have no fear as to the outcome. Being active people they know that in all action there is bound to be mistakes, but they know, also, that all obstacles can be overcome by perseverance.

A cure for pessimism, then, would be a treatment of active effort towards assisting the war to a successful conclusion. Why don't some of the overfed, lazy gloom-expellers try it as a New Year's medicine?"—Ottawa Free Press.

BULLS GET CONTROL OF WHEAT MARKET

Smallness of Increase in United States Visible Supply Has Much to Do With Movement.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 17.—Surprise over the smallness of an increase in the United States visible supply total had a good deal to do today with giving the bulls final control of the wheat market and so, too, did prospects of the removal of the railroad embargo on shipments to Baltimore. Despite a setback which took place soon after the start, prices closed strong 1 to 1⅛c net higher with may at $1.28⅝ and July at $1.22. All the other chief staples, too, showed gains, oats 1⅜ and provisions 15 to 25c.

Wheat traders had been expecting a notable enlargement of the visible supply and many were compelled to make a quick change of position late in the session when figures were posted showing an increase of only 72,000 bushels, whereas the increase last week was 2,514,000 bushels. A falling off of 600,000 bushels in the amount of wheat on hand at Chicago formed one of the items which had not been generally foreseen. The fact that one of the principal eastern railroads was scheduled to resume tonight an unrestricted handling of wheat shipments to the seaboard at Baltimore became known about the same time as the visible supply figures were posted. A further material handicap to the bears was the renewal of fears of cold weather damage to unprotected fields in the winter crop belt.

Oats trade broadened out from the start. The seaboard and commission houses were heavy buyers, encouraged because of better railway and shipping conditions at Baltimore and owing to the wide discount for oats as against corn.

Higher prices on hogs helped to lift provisions. Liberal exports tended also bring about an advance.

PUBLIC INTEREST ENTIRELY LACKING

Trading Active and Broad at New York During Forenoon, Then Tapers Off.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The most noteworthy feature of today's variable market was the absolute lack of interest. Trading was active and broad during the forenoon with a confusion of gains and losses but tapered off to less than nominal proportions toward the close of the session. Some of the more speculative issues, including American Coal Products, International Nickel and United States Industrial Alcohol, ascended to quotations never before attained, this also being true of Mercantile Marine.

In fact Marines were the strongest issues of the day, the common rising ⅛ to 22¼ and preferred 3¾ to 85¼.

There was no news to explain the continued rise of the Marine issues but it is believed that the details of the reorganization plans are well on toward completion and that the shareholders will receive far more consideration than was thought likely a few weeks ago.

Most of the war shares ruled slightly over last week's final price. United States Steel reflected pressure of the same character as marked recent dealings in that stock but Bethlehem was more active after its initial closing at 488, a gain of 9 points.

Oil and coppers were under the influence of Mexican conditions and rails displayed little animation except toward the close, when minor shares, especially Minneapolis & St. Louis common and preferred, broke sharply. Total sales were 585,000 shares.

International stocks were again at marked depreciation in London compared with last week's closing prices and additional of the Pacifics and coppers was reported for foreign account. Exchange markets were dull. Firmness in sterling and a slight shading in rates on Paris and Berlin were noted.

Marine 4½s were almost the sole source of strength to the bond market, other active issues manifesting an uncertain trend. Total sales, par value, were $4,507,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

INVESTMENT STOCKS AT MONTREAL SHOW STRENGTH

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—Despite some irregularity in price movements the general tone of the local stock market was good throughout the session today. One notable feature was the strength displayed by investment stocks. Bell Telephone rose 3½ to 147½ and closed at 148 bid, with total busines stransacted on the advance of only 100 shares. Power rose ½ to 232½ on dealings in 50 shares. Shawinigan advanced 2 to 136 on buying of less than 400 shares. Bank stocks were exceptionally active with dealings in 250 shares, most of them in Royal shares. Both Montreal and Royal moved out of the minimum class in the day, being quoted at 234 bid and 221¼ bid respectively at the close.

Speculative stocks presented a somewhat confused appearance. Cement, which took a back seat for Ames-Holden on Saturday, resumed the leadership today, rising 2 points to a new high record of 51½ and closing strong at the top.

Transactions were 5500 shares. Ames-Holden was les sactive and easier, the common losing a fraction and closing at 23⅛.

Bridge was the strongest stock in the munitions group, rising a fraction and closing at 230. The steel stocks were all heavy, Scotia declining 2 to 91½, Iron 1½ to 46 and Steel of Canada ⅞ to 38⅜. Car was offered at 75 with no bids at the close.

Bonds were in fair demand, with Canadian war loan firm at 97½ or ½ up. Total business was 10,641 shares and $23,700 bonds.

ASSETS NOT WORTH PAPER PRINTED ON

Mr. Justice Murphy Says Some of Dominion Trust Securities Could Not Have Shrunk in Value.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 17.—The civil suits alleging misfeasance against directors of the Dominion Trust company are proceeding at the Vancouver courthouse. C. F. Millar, and accountant, who has lately been examining the books, said that the assets, nominally valued on the books at $5,000,000, turned out to be worth less than $500,000. Counsel for one of the directors tried to get the witnesses to say that the losses were due to shrinkage owing to war conditions, when Mr. Justice Murphy interposed: "Why, obviously not. Some of those assets were worthless when they were put in. They were not able to shrink because they were not worth anything. There were the bonds of the British Columbia Securities, which appear for over $600,000, which were not worth the paper upon which they were printed. That is what is complained of."

MAPLE LEAF IN DEMAND ON DIVIDEND RUMORS

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

TORONTO, Jan. 17—There was an active demand on the local exchange today for Maple Leaf common, the stimulus being that a dividend was in sight. The stock sold up to 75 and closed at 74⅞, while the preferred sold at 98. Cement was the most active stock, with dealings in 2300 shares. It made a new high record price of 51⅜ and closed at the top. General Electric was stronger at 111. Dominion Steel, on the other hand, was ½ lower, selling at 47¼.

Scotia was weak with sales at 99⅝. Canadian Pacific closed at 179 bid as, compared with 179⅞ yesterday. Mackay was ¼ higher at 79¼.

Total busines samounted to 4124 shares.

METAL PRICES.

Fighting Parson in Toronto Leads the Way—Rev. W. A. Cameron Has Been Active in Recruiting.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—Rev. W. A. Cameron, a preacher of some distinction and pastor of the Bloor street Baptist church, announced to his congregation yesterday that he had received the provisional appointment of captain in the 109th battalion and hoped to complete his training by the autumn, when he would go to the front.

He has been active in stimulating recruiting and in other ways, but to use his own words, "it has become increasingly clear to me that it is the supreme duty of every able-bodied single man to equip himself for military service, if he desire to hold the title of manhood."

HOW DEATH BLOW WAS DEALT UNDINE

Experiences of British Submarine Officer in Service of Russia—Bag Includes Ten Merchant Ships

Winner of the Russian V. C., Lieut.-Commander F. N. A. Cromie, commander of the submarine which sank the German cruiser Undine, tells a racy story of his adventures in the Baltic. Lieut. Cromie has helped to clear the Germans off the face of the Baltic, his bag including about ten merchant ships besides the Undine. He received the Cross of St. Vladimar for his feat in forcing a way into the Baltic, and later was personally decorated by the czar with the Cross of St. George, which is equivalent to our V. C. His treatment of German prisoners led them to cheer him from their boats whilst their ship sank, which reminds one of the Black Prince. It is to be hoped that after war the Russian government will publish a detailed despatch concerning the work of British submarines in the Baltic since their first arrival there. Lieut.-Commander Cromie was appointed to the submarine branch of the service 12 years ago. He is a son of Mrs. Cromie, formerly of Haverfordwest, and grandson of the late T. Inch Webb-Bowen, who was chief constable of Pembrokeshire. He was educated at Haverfordwest grammar school. Writing to his mother he says: "On Wednesday the czar came to inspect the fortifications and the submarines. I had a very pleasant surprise in being decorated by him with the St. George's Cross—the best war order they have—and five men of my boat got the Silver Cross. So we have not done so badly in our two months out here. We did another 1500 miles this last trip. I went to bed the first two days out with "flue," and so directed operations from my bunk. We met a German submarine and had to dive in a hurry and found ourselves down at 140 ft. before I could get out of bed to take charge. The third day we found a lot of "wood" outside neutral waters and after a short chase we made a lovely bonfire, being unable to sink the stuff. The "inhabitants" left hurriedly, leaving a small puppy dog, which we rescued. Its father was a Great Dane and its mother a pug, but, considering it is a "Hun," it is not half bad and is a great favorite. Nothing travels by daylight since our last raid on the "hun run," so my special haunt was very dull and I gave it up after four days and tried another spot where I knew train ferries must pass. We had an exciting chase, but it was spoilt by two destroyers and a cruiser turning up. Guessing that they would come back again I lay low and sure enough I caught the Undine in the afternoon.

The First Shot Stopped Her

and put her on fire, but she was not going down quickly enough, so, avoiding the destroyer that was after us, I dived under the Undine's stern and gave her another one from the other side. It was a very fine sight and made one feel that one did not care a —— for the destroyers firing at one all the time. . . . We arrived in covered with ice, of which I will send a photo. The emperor was very polite and nice and said our work in the —— had made all the difference to the country. The little boy was very nice, but rather naughty. I gave him some photos of ships sinking, which pleased him, and he promised to send me some he took of us. In the evening we 'dined with all the kings and princes,' etc., in the train, which was a palatial affair. We sat down 28 at one table and still left room for waiting. Nearly all spoke English and said all sorts of nice, polite things and I sneaked a menu card as a souvenir, but had not the cheek to ask for signatures. Being a chevalier of St. George I am pretty safe as no one can arrest me without an armed escort and a band to take me to prison and both of these are pretty scarce now. I think I told you that the other cross gave me the right to go into girls' schools and taste the food and express my opinion. I only hope now that we shall not be at sea on Nov. 25 (St. George's night), when all members of the order dine in the palace and take the plate home with them as souvenirs. It was a very hard frost during the emperor's inspection and all were very much surprised to see us without great coats, but the cold is so dry here that one does not feel it so long as one moves about. The place is lovely under snow and sledging is very pleasant with all the bells going. Unfortunately it has now all gone and is raining hard."

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw said in Philadelphia in an address on the divorce evil:

"Another cause of divorce is domineering on the wife's part—her wearing of the breeches, as the old saw has it.

"Is there much of this wifely breeches wearing? Well, I know, at any rate, a man whose little boy once said to him at the theatre:

"'Pa, what's a leading woman?'

"The man answered gloomily:

"'Any married woman, my son.'"

MAYOR APPOINTS CIVIC COMMITTEES

Full Attendance of 1916 City Council at First Meeting of the Year

The appointment of committees was the chief feature of the first meeting of the new city council, held last night in the council chamber at the city hall.

All the members of the council were present and the following committees were appointed:

Finance—Ald. A. S. Horswill, chairman; Ald. Alex Leith and Ald. I. A. Austin.

Gas—Ald. I. A. Austin, chairman; Ald. A. S. Horswill and Ald. Alex Leith.

Parks and Cemetery and Public health—Ald. Alex Leith, chairman; Ald. A. S. Horswill and Ald. I. A. Austin.

Fire, Water and Light—Ald. W. O. Rose, chairman; Ald. John Bell and Ald. W. M. Cunliffe.

Public Works—Ald. John Bell, chairman; Ald. W. O. Rose and Ald. W. M. Cunliffe.

Street Railway—Ald. W. M. Cunliffe, chairman; Ald. W. O. Rose and Ald. John Bell.

It was decided to furnish every member of the council with copies of the financial statements and the various reports, in order that they be able to go thoroughly into the city's business affairs before discussing the various items at the next meeting. On the motion of Ald. I. A. Austin, seconded by Ald. A. S. Horswill it was decided that the council meet on every second Monday night.

It was moved by Ald. W. O. Rose, seconded by Ald. John Bell, that the matter of adjusting the salaries of all employees be referred to the finance committee and a report be brought in at the next regular meeting of the council.

A discussion on the subject of civic wages resulted from the suggestion of Ald. A. S. Horswill that two of the salaries of city laborers be placed back on the regular scale of 40 cents per hour.

Ald. I. A. Austin pointed out that the laborers in question had been receiving $2.50 for a nine-hour day and asked that if economies had to be made in future all employees be treated by a uniform percentage reduction.

The mayor stated that when the matter first came up he had in mind the reduction of salaries of all civic employees and that all the officials of the city regularly employed contributed from 5 per cent to 10 per cent of their salaries for city relief purposes and that a great deal of suffering that would have otherwise been experienced was thereby avoided and that whereas the city laborers were hit pretty hard the other employees also bore some of the burden.

Ald. I. A. Austin said that his complaint was that the laboring men, who only worked part of the year, were submitted to a proportionately greater reduction than those who were on the regular payroll and intimated that if it was found necessary to make reductions during 1916 he would guarantee that no objections would be made by the laboring men if the reductions were carried out on the same scale all through.

A meeting of the school board will be held tonight at the city hall.

Queen City Rebekah lodge No. 16, I.O.O.F. will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

The Women's Missionary society will meet in the parlors of the Methodist church this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

ST. SAVIOURS HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

Financial Statements Show Decrease in Revenue and Also in Expenditures—Officers Elected

The annual meeting of the congregation of St. Saviours church was held in the parish hall last evening with Rev. F. H. Graham, rector, in the chair. There was a good attendance of members of the congregation of both sexes, the women taking an active part in the meeting and in the election of church officers for the current year.

The meeting was opened with prayer by the rector, who then made a brief address, reviewing the work of the past year in the parish.

The rector referred to the fact that the vestry meeting was the fourteenth over which he had presided at Nelson and he looked back with deep pleasure over the work accomplished in the years gone by and the hearty cooperation always afforded him by the congregation. The rector added that he and Mrs. Graham always looked upon their residence as the happiest of their years of married life. After a brief reference to the war the rector specially referred to the death in action of Geoge Blanchard Johnstone, a former member of the choir and a son of a former churchwarden.

The death during the year of H. E. Croasdaile, a former active member of the congregation and one of the first churchwardens, was referred to, as was the departure from the parish of H. M. Cobbett, a specially active member of the Churchman's club.

The people's warden, H. Bird, presented the financial statement for the year ending Dec. 31, 1915, showing receipts and expenditures in detail and the liabilities and assets of the parish as audited by W. R. Allen, the following being the chief figures:

In making the financial statement, Harry Bird said that while the receipts for the year were smaller than in previous years, the expenditure had also been curtailed. The rector had generously consented to a 20 per cent reduction in his salary and his consent had been acted upon. A special contribution of $33.95 had been received from Willow Point and the Women's society of Willow Point had contributed $75. Mr. Bird thought that under all existing conditions the financial statement a very creditable one.

The financial report was adopted, as were the following reports from the various church organizations:

The church building fund showed receipts for the year of $762.16, a balance in the bank of $248.81, and total assets in hand of $5282.81.

The rector nominated for the fifteenth year Fred Irvine as rector's warden. Harry Bird was unanimously elected for a fifth term as people's warden.

The following lay delegates were elected to synod: Harry Bird, Fred Irvine and George Johnstone.

Substitutes: Fred C. Moffatt, Capt. Armstrong, L. B. De Veber and J. H. D. Benson.

W. R. Allen and J. H. D. Benson were appointed auditors for the year.

Nominations were made for the church committee of nine and the following members were elected: E. A. Crease, L. B. De Veber, C. R. Hamilton, K. C., Capt. Armstrong, J. T. Andrews, T. L. Bloomer, R. G. Joy, J. H. D. Benson and Fred C. Moffatt.

On motion of Mr. Crease, seconded by Mr. Andrews, a special committee, consisting of the church committee and the officers of the various church organizations and Mrs. Astley, was appointed to take charge of the arrangements for the special mission to be conducted at St. Saviours by the lord bishop of the diocese from Feb. 20 to Feb. 27, both dates inclusive.

A long communication from the Bishop of Kootenay to the vestry stating on what terms St. Saviours might be constituted a cathedral in the future was referred to the executive committee to consider and report on later to a special meeting of the congregation called fo rthe purpose.

A resolution extending sympathy to Mrs. F. A. Starkey on her recent severe illness and expressing the hope of speedy recovery, moved by Mrs. H. Bird, seconded by Mrs. Astley, was unanimously carried, as was a resolution conveying a hearty greeting to Frank L. Paddon, a former member of the church committee, now at the front, moved by C. R.
