PROBE WITNESS ARRESTED EARLY HOUR

SMUGGLING IS ADMITTED; BORDER TOWNS RICH

WITNESSES ON STAND ADMIT THEY SMUGGLED

Gilmore Admits Paying $910 in Fines for Smuggling Goods Into Canada

FATHER DESTROYED BOOKS ON BISAILLON'S ORDER

Preventive Officer Who Made Seizure Ordered to 'Lay Off' by His Chief

OTTAWA, June 3.—J. F. Paquette, aged 63, bookkeeper of the customs office at Rock Island, was the first witness before the customs committee today. He was also an insurance agent and as such sold policies to the R. & G. company, the Rock Island Overall company, and the J. A. Gilmore company, all of Rock Island, he testified. Mr. Calder only examined the witness for a few minutes.

E. Brownlee, collector of customs at the port of Beebe, was the next witness. He had been in the service since 1890 and had not, prior to the inquiry, been aware of any extensive smuggling. It was said in evidence that Mr. Turner, president of the Snag Proof Overall company, held a mortgage of $3000 on Mr. Brownlee's house. Mr. Stevens asked why the witness had allowed Mr. Wilkinson of Beebe to have an American car in his possession without payment of duty: "On the authority of a letter from the deputy minister," was the reply.

"Contrary to your regulations?" "I think it was," replied the witness.

Mr. Donaghy questioned the witness respecting the report that "truckloads of goods are being brought from the United States into Canada without paying customs."

Never Suspected It

"I never suspected it," replied Mr. Brownlee. Questioned further, he stated that he had not thought that conditions were as bad as reported until he read recent newspaper reports, although Rock Island was always "supposed to be a bad place to live in before I went there."

Mr. Stevens asked if he had not heard that smuggling was being done by Turner, Jenkins & Gilmore, "and so on down the list—by business men."

"According to reports," was the reply.

Mr. Brownlee's recommendation to prevent smuggling was "to check the manufacturers about twice a year."

START WAR ON ONE BIG UNION

Winnipeg Mayor Says if There Is Not Legislation to Stop Body, It Should Be Secured

WINNIPEG, June 3.—Open war on the "One Big Union" with a view to its ultimate extermination, was declared by Mayor R. S. Webb of Winnipeg in addressing the annual meeting of the Industrial development board here.

The organization which is regarded as the left wing of the Labor party, has its headquarters in Winnipeg.

He criticized the federal authorities for granting the street railwaymen's unit of the organization a board on conciliation. The traction company has refused to recognize the union or negotiate a new agreement with their employees who are affiliated with the One Big Union. By granting the board, Mayor Webb asserted the government had recognized "this so-called union." This had been sought by its leaders since the inception of the One Big Union following the Winnipeg strike of 1919.

"There must be some way of getting rid of this menace," Mayor Webb said. "If there is no legislation, let us get it."

Liquor Seizure by States Customs Men Was Illegal Is Ruled

VICTORIA, B.C., June 3. — An investigation into the seizure of liquor from United States excursionists of Everett when they boarded the Princess Charlotte Monday afternoon by two United States custom officers, revealed that their act was illegal and that they had violated the Canadian law.

The officers seized government sealed liquor on British territory. Chief of Police John Fry stated the officers were open to a charge of assault and theft, and had the passengers known, police could have been summoned and the men would have been arrested.

CONFIDENCE IS VOTED BY LIBS LLOYD GEORGE

Chairman of Parliamentary Group Has Best of First Sitting Especially Called

LLOYD GEORGE TENDERS HIS STRIKE STAND

Meeting Adjourns Until Tuesday, So That Asquith Can Reply; Majority Favor 'Davie'

LONDON, June 3.—Lloyd George apparently has had the advantage in the first round of his conflict with the Earl of Oxford and Asquith. As leader of the Liberal party, Lord Oxford and his supporters have taken Lloyd George, as chairman of the parliamentary group, to task for his attitude in refusing to participate in party councils when the general strike was in progress.

In accordance with a request of members of the party, Mr. Lloyd George summoned a meeting for today. It was held in the house, and after three hours was adjourned until Tuesday next.

Mr. Lloyd George himself made a long and impassioned speech justifying his attitude, and a large majority of those who spoke supported him. There was a motion of confidence in Mr. Lloyd George before the meeting.

Accordingly no vote was taken, as Lord Oxford's partizans thought it desirable first to acquaint him with "the sense of the meeting," and the object of the adjournment until Tuesday is to hear his reply. Sir John Simon, Sir Walter Runciman and Sir Godfrey Collins, chief Liberal whip, an official communique states, will convey "the sense of the meeting" to Lord Oxford.

Are Vowed to Silence

It was to Sir Godfrey Collins that Lord Oxford addressed his recent letter virtually reading Lloyd George out of official connection with the party.

Exactly what "the sense of the meeting" implies has not been divulged, for all the participants declare themselves vowed to silence, but it is freely asserted that the mission of the delegations to the Liberal leader is not a very congenial one.

About 34 members of the parliamentary party attended, of whom 22 are believed to have been supporters of Lloyd George, who presided. The proceedings are described as exceedingly animated, those taking part in the debate becoming so absorbed that the calls of the division bells in the commons were completely ignored.

There will be other meetings of the leaders of the Liberal party over the week-end, and the present intention is to move a vote of confidence in Lord Oxford at a meeting of the National Liberal federation to be held at Weston within a few days.

Tot Sets Fire to Her Dress With a Match; Is Now Dead

WINNIPEG, June 3.—While playing with matches on the sidewalk today near her home, Jennie Bahatch, aged 5, set fire to her dress and died from burns five hours later.

Interior Plans Union for Sale of Cattle

VICTORIA, June 3.—Cattle ranchers of the interior of British Columbia will form a cooperative selling organization this year, it was stated today. The new association, formed through the British Columbia Stock Breeders' association, will be ready to function next year, handling practically the entire beef output of the interior.

Mineowners in Move With the Workers to Break the Deadlock

LONDON, June 3.—A move to break the deadlock in the coal strike in Great Britain was taken today by the mine owners with the approval of the government.

Evan Williams, chairman of the mining association, sent a personal letter to Herbert Smith, vice-president of the Miners' federation, suggesting that a conference be held by a committee representing the two sides.

The letter wil be taken to Brussels tomorrow, where Smith it attending a meeting of the Miners' International federation. This new move is believed to be the outcome of negotiations of the last few days between the government and the mining interests.

That Bathtub Party

Principals in the "bathtub" trial, New York: Earl Carroll (top), theatrical producer, convicted on two counts of perjury arising out of his celebrated party last February. Bottom, Joyce Hawley, whose testimony that she bathed unclothed in a bathtub filled with champagne led to Carroll's conviction. Carroll was sentenced to a year and a fine of $2000. He has appealed.

WARSHIP SENT BY BRITISH TO EGYPTIAN AREA

Inform Egyptians Britain Reserves Complete Liberty of Action; Ship Is Precaution

LONDON, June 3.—Word reached here today that the Egyptian situation was grave and warships had been dispatched from Malta to Alexandra. A British judge, head of the native court, resigns because Egyptian members acquitted the murderers of the late sirdar. Tension may be relieved by Zagloul Pasha refusing to take premiership, though his party secured a majority in the recent elections on the race cry.

LONDON, June 3.—With a ministerial crisis pending in Egypt and having in mind the acquittal of the alleged assassins of Sir Lee Stack, British sirdar of the Egyptian army in 1924, Great Britain has informed the Egyptian government that it reserves "complete liberty of action."

The British government is backing up this notification by a warship dispatched, denominating this, however, as merely a precautionary measure.

Cabinet Still in

The most important question at issue is the Egyptian premiership which recent reports asserted was likely to be taken over by Zagloul Pasha, leader of the nationalist party whose partizans in the late elections carried a majority of the seats in the assembly.

Zagloul is not acceptable to the British government, but the tension has been relieved by late advices that Zagloul has withdrawn his candidacy.

The cabinet under Ziwar Pasha, these advices add, has not yet resigned nor has Adly Yeghen definitely accepted the premiership. Not much news from Egypt has reached London for some hours and the position therefore is somewhat obscure, but for the present there is nothing to suggest important developments.

Carroll Found Guilty Perjury in Connection His 'Bathtub' Party Case

NEW YORK, June 3. — Earl Carroll, Broadway theatrical producer, was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $2000 in connection with his "bathtub" case. Carroll's bail was continued pending an appeal.

VERMONT TOWNS NOW PROMINENT IN PROBE CASES

Firms Dealing in Textiles Report Books Destroyed and Banking Records in States

GOODS THROWN INTO CANADA FROM STATES

Telford Refuses Allow Inspection; Tells Probe He Is Now Shooting 'Straight'

OTTAWA, June 3. — Firms dealing in textiles and cheap cotton apparel were examined in rapid succession at the probe today. So many of them reported that their books, previous to last year, had been destroyed and that record of their banking was not available because they kept their money on the United States side, that counsel R. L. Calder commented that "it was like a recurring decimal," and Hon. H. H. Stevens wearily described it as a chorus.

The longest day in the long career of the committee began with the tabling of two reports from the auditors, Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth. One showed that of the $1,400,000 worth of cotton garments and textiles shipped to Beebe Plain and Derbyline, Vermont, in the last three years, at least $800,000 worth had apparently vanished into the air, unless they were smuggled into Canada. The other report showed that firms holding contracts for the manufacture of wearing apparel by prison labor had shipped large quantities of such goods to these two Vermont towns and the inference was that most of them had found their way into Canada. The import or sale of prison-made goods is forbidden by law in Canada.

The two little Vermont towns mentioned are really parts of Beebe and Rock Island, Que., only the boundary line separating them. In some cases the boundary line runs down the middle of a street, or between two railway tracks. Goods were "thrown from the United States into Canada, sometimes," it was stated.

Threatened Arrest

From morning until midnight the committee heard a succession of representatives of textile firms on the Canadian side, punctuated with evidence of customs officers, etc. At least three of the witnesses were threatened with arrest if they did not produce the missing records of their business. Several others agreed to employ the week-end in searches.

A large number of witnesses were heard in the evening session, some frankly admitting having carried on smuggling operations, while others refused to admit the charge. H. S. Pocock, of Beebe, Que., said it was pretty hard for anybody who lived on the border to say that he never did any smuggling. To this Mr. Calder retorted that he was only asking for smuggling on a commercial scale.

J. Sandilands, manager of Reliance Garments Ltd., admitted that "there was quite a lot of smuggling in 1924" by his firm. W. F. Pike, Standard Manufacturing Company, of Rock Island, admitted having smuggled goods into Canada in 1924, but added "since 1924 I don't think I smuggled anything to amount to much." He told the committee that he had paid Bisaillon $480 which he thought covered his indebtedness to the Canadian treasury.

YOUNG THAW LEAVES BOARD BILL BEHIND

Entertains at Parties and Auto Rides in Chicago; Skips, Leaving Empty Valise

CHICAGO, June 3.—Russell Thaw, son of Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw, after an expensive round of entertainment in Chicago for three weeks, has gone eastward leaving a hotel with an unpaid bill for two weeks' lodging and entertainment.

Incidentally, it was said the bill was forwarded to Harry K. Thaw, who still, it is understood, sends regular monthly payments to his former wife, Evelyn Nesbitt.

The managers said that an empty suitcase was all that was left in Russell's room.

Besides the expense of dinners for parties, room rent, there were motor car bills charged on his hotel bill.

Fernie Miners Send Eight Hundred Dollars to Relief British Miners

FERNIE, B.C., June 3.—A cable remittance of $800 was dispatched from here today for relief work among the families of the striking British coal miners. The amount is a donation from the Miners' Federation of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company mines at Coal Creek, near here.

FAMILY THAT LOST FOUR LITTLE TOTS, DESTITUTE; HERE'S SUBSCRIPTION LIST!

Nelson's Heart Touched by Poignant Case of Crippled Father in Hospital and Helpless Mother and Kiddies—Carl Larson Gets $215 as Start—The Daily News Will Accept Subscriptions

Nelson's collective heart has been touched by the poignant tragedy of Tuesday night at Glenlily, near Yahk, whereby Mr. and Mrs. John A. Wood were bereaved of four of their six little children in a ranch house fire, in the absence of the mother while delivering a message to a neighbor, from the father, now in Kootenay Lake General hospital here awaiting the amputation of a leg.

The mother and the two surviving kiddies, who were unable to start for Nelson yesterday, will arrive in Nelson by the Crow boat tonight, to join the father.

Learning that the same fire that blighted their lives also left the stricken family absolutely destitute, Carl Larson, manager of the Kootenay Steam Laundry, yesterday started a subscription list to provide for the immediate wants of the unfortunates.

So far as Mr. Larson went, he encountered only one man who refused to subscribe, and by midnight last night the total in hand was $215.

Was your individual heart touched? If it was, send or give your subscription to Mr. Larson, or to The Daily News, and aid in keeping the little family together pending whatever future can be worked out for the crippled father.

Yesterday's subscriptions, all obtained by Mr. Larson, were the following:

MAKE SUPREME COURT SENIOR

Abolish All Appeal to Privy Council, Says Speaker to Manitoba Bar Association

WINNIPEG, June 3. — Although saying that the privy council had generally discharged its high and difficult duties with ability, J. B. Coyne K.C., in an address of the gathering of the members of the Manitoba Bar association today declared the time had come when Canada should follow in the footsteps of Australia and South Africa, abolish all appeal to that tribunal, and make the supreme court of Canada the last resort for Canadian litigants. He stressed the need of knowledge of conditions for the judges, and said that the courts of this country, having before them the great traditions and high purposes of the privy council, would not walk unworthily in the spirit that had inspired the administration of British justice.

In closing, Mr. Coyne said that speedy justice is the best justice, and undue delay in either trial or execution of sentence undermines the effectiveness of law. Sufficient safeguards, he said, have been provided in Canada against injustice, and urged that as a great nation the conduct of administration of justice does not need a censor in London.

NO BORDER LINE FOR MOOSE ORDER

VANCOUVER, June 3.—Sounding a keynote of international goodwill, J. C. Berens, Seattle, president of the northwest Moose association, in his address today declared, "For the Moose there is no border line." The delegates were welcomed by Mayor L. D. Taylor on behalf of the city and by Ian MacKenzie, M.L.A., on behalf of the provincial government.

The convention closes Saturday.

Conservative Body's Head for B. C. Says Freight Rates McGeer's Side Issue

VANCOUVER, June 3.—Charge that G. G. McGeer, K.C., was largely using the B. C. freight rate case to keep him in the limelight as a Liberal candidate in Vancouver, was the feature of an address by "Pat" Maitland, president to B. C. Conservative Association, today. He quoted Premier King and Hon. C. A. Dunning to the effect that on his recent visit to Ottawa McGeer did not discuss the rate question. The result was, said Mr. Maitland, that Premier Oliver is now forgetting all about the freight rates to make a loud noise about the Peace river.

Storm Takes Seven Lives; Property Loss Nears Half-Million

PAWHUSKA, Okla., June 3.—High waters, lightning and wind, accompanied by a rainstorm in Osage and Creek counties, last night claimed seven lives and caused damage estimated between $300,000 and $500,000.

Five members of the family of F. L. Blocker were drowned by the sudden rise of a creek near Hominy, Okla., when a wall of water washed away the approach to a bridge and engulfed them.

Alberta L. Adams, 25, employee of a power company, was killed by a bolt of lightning near Osage county.

INCARCERATED IN THE TOWER OF PARLIAMENT

Witness Took Stand on Word of His Lawyer; Owns Warehouse Just Over Border

OTTAWA, June 4.—S. B. Telford of Rock Island, Que., who was threatened late last night with incarceration in the Tower of Parliament for refusing to accede to the wishes of the federal customs probe committee, has been arrested.

He was placed under arrest at 2 o'clock by Detective Sergeant Cyrus A. Ramsay of the Royal Canadian Mounted police, on a warrant signed by Magistrate Charles Hopewell.

Bail was refused. Telford gave his address as Derbyline, Vermont. He is being held in the city jail and will come up in police court this morning.

The warrant was sworn out at midnight by Customs Preventive Officer Knox before Magistrate Hopwell.

House Over Border

S. B. Telford owns a warehouse just across the international boundary and refused to open this warehouse to the inspection of accountants representing the customs probe committee on the ground that the warehouse was on foreign territory. He was taking this stand on the advice of his attorney, he said.

Because the customs committee believed that he had been misled by his attorney in the United States, Chairman Paul Mercier gave Mr. Telford until early morning to get fresh advice from his counsel.

The body of J. Stuart Henderson had been found earlier in the day. Both bodies, badly crushed, were taken from the 1400-foot level of the mine.

FORMER CHURCH WAS GOVERNED TOO CLOSELY

Presbyterian Moderator Advises Caution in Future Appointments in Church

MISSION REPORTS ARE PRESENTED, MONTREAL

Women's Mission Body Distributed $100,000 in Past Six Months; Budget $150,000

MONTREAL, June 3.—Today was "Mission day" at the general assembly of the Presbyterian church now in session at the Knox-Crescent church here. Reports on home and foreign missions, women's missionary societies and on missionary and deaconess training were heard.

Dr. Andrews Grant declared that the Presbyterian church had as high an average of men occupying pulpits as before union.

He believed it would soon be possible to settle all congregations who could support them with ministers. The church, too, had met all its budget requirements and could meet all demands at home and abroad.

The question of assistance to struggling groups who had lost their churches had not yet been solved but a scheme was under way by which it was hoped to give assistance in the near future.

Mrs. L. H. Moore, Halifax, president of the eastern division, stressed the need of port work. Incoming Presbyterian immigrants should be met and helped.

Overly-Governed

N. H. MacGillivray, chairman of the general board of missions, said the old church had been overgoverned, overofficered, overcolleged and the present situation in the Presbyterian church was largely the result of officialdom. He advised caution in future appointments. He asked that the general board carry on for another year as constituted with the exception that a committee be appointed to examine into the whole mission situation and that he be replaced as chairman for reasons of health.

Before union, the church had 333 missionaries in some of 10 mission fields. The share of the old church was 16,000,000 souls under the comity of churches. The Presbyterians only asked for a half division of this work. Their requests he gave as follows:

British Guiana—Whole field.

India—The Bhil field and the adjoining Nimar valley, with Mhow, and the Gwalior mission.

South China—Formosa and Korea—Whole fields in each instance.

Reports Presented

Mrs. D. T. L. McKerroll, Toronto, president of the women's missionary society, comprising all the synods of Canada except the eastern, said the women from coast to coast had come forward eagerly to share the work offering.

Miss Bessie McMurchy, secretary, reported a membership of 33,415. The Women's Missionary society had contributed $100,000 in six months. Their budget for coming year was $150,000 and additions were expected for foreign work.

Reception of all the reports presented was given.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

RENOVATING THE OLD TOYS

One Mother Says:

The children were amused on a rainy day by playing "toy hospital," when I allowed them to be the doctors and the nurses that fixed up the toys. The building blocks were made to look like new with water colors; little daughter sewed the arm of her rag doll as securely as I could have done, and son glued the wheels on his toy wagon. They not only made things look better, but entertained themselves as well. A top or an auto becomes a new toy when given a coat of paint or enamel. I let son wear a long white robe like a surgeon and daughter wore a red cross cap for the occasion.

Many of Concerns Bank in the States, No Records; in Three Years $1,400,000 Crosses

OTTAWA, June 3.—The auditors' report deals with their investigation of the affairs of 15 companies operating in Rock Island, Beebe or Stanstead, Que.

"The examination of the railway and express companies' records," says the report, "shows shipments received by companies in Derbyline or Newport, Vt., who are shipping out comparatively few goods to the United States points. These concerns may have been serving only as collecting stations and distributing their goods to concerns in Canada.

Railway records of cotton piece goods, finished garments and trimmings received at Rock Island and Beebe Junction, in Derbyline and Newport, Vt., during three years ended March 21 last, shows goods to the value of $1,400,000 coming into these points.

"From this total of incoming goods," say the auditors, "we have deducted, first, the value of cotton goods, shipped back to points in the United States; second, the value of goods cleared through customs at Rock Island and Beebe.

Unaccounted Balance

"The balance, a conservative estimate of which is not less than $800,000, representing a duty paid value of over $1,000,000, is unaccounted balance."

Some of the railway records at Eichford, Enosburg Falls and St. Johnsbury, Vt., also were examined. Substantial quantities of cotton goods came into these points, and, says the report, "it appears improbable that these goods could have been absorbed locally. Our information is that they were transported to border points.

Handled Prison Goods

Firms in Newport and Derbyline in three years and three months handled $200,000 worth of goods, weighing 267,000 pounds, shipped to them by companies and contractors having prison contracts in the United States. These companies have no factory and do not distribute by railway to points in the United States, says the report.

The auditors then gave a brief account of the affairs of 10 or 15 companies. The report says:

"In those cases where sales tax returns have been made but sales have been suppressed, there would, of course, be an additional claim for sales taxes. The files of the department show that certain of the companies were in arrears from time to time in payment of their taxes."

Further report on the Rock Island Textiles company is promised the committee very shortly.

Much Carried in Trucks

Hon. H. H. Stevens remarked that the report only covers the ascertained "quantity of goods received by the freight and express companies who gave the auditors access to their books.

The enormous quantity of goods carried across the border in trucks was not shown. He had personally, he said, seen loaded trucks crossing the border without examination on the outskirts of Rock Island. Rock Island and Derbyline are practically the same town, except that the international boundary runs between them. The trucks, in which liquor is carried from Canada to the States, said Mr. Stevens, invariably return loaded with cotton goods and silk purchased for cash in the United States.

Some of the silk companies have warehouses in Derbyline, says the auditors' report.

In a separate report on prison-made goods, the auditors disclose the interesting fact that the only direct rail connection between Derbyline, Vt., and other points in the United States lies by way of Rock Island and Beebe Junction through Canadian territory. Consequently, goods shipped from points in the United States to Derbyline must either be unloaded at some other point in Vermont and taken by truck, or be sent to Beebe Junction to Rock Island and Derbyline stations, which are situated opposite to each other on either side of the boundary line. All such latter shipments passed through Canada in bond. On the customs manifest, the name of the shipper is not always given in full and sometimes not at all. Nothing is stated in the manifest regarding the value of the goods, but only the number of packages.

No Direct Shipments

"We have found no trace of any of these alleged prison-made goods going direct to any Canadian company either in Rock Island or in Derbyline (where some Canadian companies have warehouses)," says the report.

Between April 1, 1924, and December 31, 1925, the period for which manifests were available, the auditors found that an average of one case a week was received from firms having prison contracts by one firm in Derbyline.

"We are not in a position to state definitely that all these goods were manufactured, by prison labor, but from the customs manifests there is nothing to indicate any difference between the goods shipped from these points, where there are penitentiaries, and other points. Goods may be shipped by one and the same company for its subsidiaries from any one of several points, the number of shipping points depending on the number of contracts under which the company in question is working.

No Outward Shipments

The auditors found in the railway records that half a dozen firms in Derbyline had shipped to them a total of 112,046 pounds of goods from firms with prison contracts. But freight records at Rock Island and Beebe did not show receipt of any of these goods, neither did customs entries.

"We considered the possibility that the American consignees might have reshipped these goods to other points in the United States. We have gone through records at Derbyline, and these do not disclose any shipments outward by the New England Apparel company (the largest importer) and very few buy from any other concern."

transferred from the customs at these points, Mr. Brownlee said that one man named Cowan, whom he thought had discharged his duty fairly, had been transferred in 1914 to another point. Another officer had been dismissed, while in 1922 an official whom he considered "as fair" in the matter of competency was transferred.

J. Kellert, a former customs preventive officer at Montreal, was recalled. He had not made a seizure with respect to Turner, a business man at Rock Island "as we were told to lay off."

"Who told you to lay off?" asked Mr. Stevens.

"Mr. Bisaillon," was the reply.

"Did you lay off," asked Mr. Stevens.

"No, I walked away," replied Mr. Kellert, while the committee roared with laughter.

D. F. Maranville, customs officer of Beebe, testified that he had never seen any large scale smuggling and that he had never caught any of the manufacturers of the town smuggling. The witness had built an eight-tube radio set for Mr. Turner of the Snag Proof company for $120.

A. F. Holmes, of the customs service at Rock Island, who was in charge of keeping a record of the automobiles said that there was nothing to prevent truckers from using back roads.

Reported Barrel of Buttons

Under examination the witness told of having gone to the Jenkins Overall company in the performance of his duty, as he had reason to believe that a barrel of buttons had been shipped to the company from Derbyline, Vermont. Jenkins had used "strong, very bold language," and said that he was a strong Liberal and if the customs men wanted their jobs they would let the company alone. Mr. Holmes said he had not insisted on a search, but had reported the matter to his subcollector.

A. Laing, sales tax staff, Montreal, was recalled. In the fall of 1914, he and two other officers had proceeded to Rock Island to make an inspection of the books of manufacturing companies there.

"Would it be unfair to say that these records were deficient, especially in such records as would interest the revenue of Canada?" asked Mr. Calder.

"It would appear that way," was the reply.

F. B. House, president of the B. D. Glove company was called. The company building and office was destroyed by fire in April and only the records in the fireproof safe had been available to the auditors. These were incomplete and only went back as far as September, 1925.

Stores on the Line

F. W. Cowan, health department, Ottawa, formerly with the customs, said he had been transferred from Rock Island to another point in 1914, "at his own request."

Mr. Cowan said that even children were disinclined to give information which would assist customs officers. The situation at Rock Island was unique, jewelry stores and the like being located right on the boundary line.

"It is a pity there was not a bar on the line," interjected Mr. Calder. The two Gilmore brothers went on the witness stand together. They own the firm of James A. Gilmore Overall Manufacturers. The committee auditors reported that the books of the company were incomplete and the purchased record unreliable.

Admits Smuggling

W. J. Gilmore said that after Mr. Bisaillon had inspected the books of the firm in 1924, he had said that he had no further use for them and they were destroyed. In 1924, $91 had been paid as a fine for smuggling.

"At that time you were smuggling," said Mr. Calder.

"Yes," was the reply.

Questions were pressed by Mr. Calder regarding a bank account which the company was supposed to have had in Derbyline, Vermont, but the witnesses declined to commit themselves.

"Is it not a fact that you had that American bank account in order to conceal payments to American firms?"

"I can't say," was the only reply which Mr. Calder could get from W. J. Gilmore. "This is contempt of the committee," said the counsel, "leave the witnesses in the committee's hands."

When the committee rose at 6 the chairman said the witnesses would be given until the evening sitting to reconsider.

VERMONT TOWNS NOW PROMINENT IN PROBE CASE

he was willing to admit that he had smuggled, but now he was going "straight."

Mr. Telford was asked why he refused to let the auditors inspect his warehouse. He replied that when E. A. Bisaillon had assessed him penalties for smuggling, he had said: "We are going to fix this so that there will be no comeback."

"Then, why destroy your books?" demanded Mr. Calder.

"What possible objection could there be to the auditors going over the warehouse?"

"The warehouse was in a foreign country, and outside of their jurisdiction," retorted witness. He was willing to admit that he had smuggled, but now he was going straight.

"Then why refuse the auditors the chance to verify you?" demanded Mr. Calder.

"You are robbing yourself of the only safe, decent explanation you might have," urged Mr. Stevens.

Stubbornly Refuses

Witness stubbornly refused to allow any further examination. In 1924 a recognized official of the government had made a final settlement.

"You say your goods are in Derbyline, yet you refuse to let the auditors in to look at them," interjected Mr. Calder.

Chairman Mercier asked if witness would refuse positively to let auditors look at that warehouse.

Witness said he had been instructed by his attorney to refuse inspection of the warehouse because it was "in a foreign country."

Mr. Bell promptly suggested that witness not be allowed to leave the jurisdiction of the committee.

"He has refused half a dozen times already," Mr. Bell said.

"Don't say you have not been warned," concluded Mr. Mercier.

The committee broke up tonight in tense excitement after a long day of evasive or hostile witnesses. The witness was curtly advised to have a talk with the auditors before he left.

What Do You See When You Look?

The other day we looked at the Lake, bathed in dazzling sunshine. Upon lifting our eyes to the Hill sides, in place of seeing green, which we knew was there, we saw brown. Of course, after our eyes had adjusted themselves we saw correctly. What we wish to point out is that it is the part of wisdom to make "sure" of what you are "seeing." For instance, most stores can show Black Sateen Shirts at $1.75, but when you look at Black Sateen Shirts in our store at $1.75 you will find they have Double Yokes and Shoulders. So "you see much more" in our store.

WOLVES DEFEAT TRAIL JUNIORS FOUR TO THREE

Trail Cinches Game and Loses Out in Last 15 Minutes of Play

ENDURANCE BY NELSON UPSETS HOME BOYS

Jeffs, With Score Tied, Outwits Trail Backs to Score Winning Counter

TRAIL, June 3.—Trail junior city footer team lost today's soccer game with the visiting Nelson Mountain Wolves in the last 15 minutes because, besides being somewhat spent, they presumed to lean on their laurels. The Wolves won, 4-3.

Away into the second half they were leading 3-1. The Wolves, whose early advantage was endurance, scored first.

Throughout an exceptionally good brand of soccer was played by both teams, while the continuous scoring was a satisfying feature to the large turnout of supporters.

Trail kicked off, facing a bright front. A light wind, blowing diagonally against them, did not hamper play much.

The visitors opened scoring at 20 minutes. With Nelson forwards, following a long clear shot that dropped behind Trail backs, Leckie beat Chandler to it and cornered, presently to stay off the dangerous situation. J. McLeod centered it fairly and at a nice height across the goal mouth. Whitfield deflected the ball downward into the net.

Within five minutes Trail equalized. With strong pressure they carried the play to Nelson's goal area, and with clever heading seemed about to score when a Trail boy accidentally fouled. Balfour, taking the penalty, beat Gillette with a hard low shot.

Loses Chance

Burrows lost a grand chance to lead for Trail. Following pretty combination by Fish and Young and a nicely placed pass when he shot unopposed over the bar. At this stage Trail was shooting frequently and must have scored but for the exceptional tending of Nelson's goallie. The score stood at 1-1 at half time.

Trail laid clean to Nelson's goal area almost continuously for 10 minutes when the play was resumed, their backs playing well out, returning the ball to Trail's possession on each of the visitors' clearances.

At 15 minutes, Fish with clever head and footwork robbed McInnes of a pass. He centered handily. Chandler trapped and shot hard giving Trail the lead.

Trail's Third

Bradbury added Trail's third, shooting a hot rebound from Gillette, saving Chandler's try on his knees.

At this stage Nelson's forwards were frequently losing possession by their hesitation. But under intending defeat they put on more dash in a combined run of the whole line, pretty received, they took the ball through the halves. Whitfield at the ball, hampered by Leckie, shot hard and true, adding Nelson's second.

This goal seemed to take a little of Trail's pep away. The halves got wobbly in face of determined pressure by the Nelson line, which never quit driving. Huddleston, in a brilliant individual getaway, eluded both backs and equalized the score, 3-all for Nelson.

Trail Weakens

The Trail boys, though they made splendid efforts to hold the visitors down, showed some weakening in the last 15 minutes. Nelson's forward line trailed right through Trail's halves. Jeffs at the ball outwitted the backs to add the winning goal for Nelson.

The teams were:

Nelson—H. Gillette, goal; R. Hanna and R. McLeod, backs; J. McLeod, G. Wallach and A. McInnes, halves; G. Campion, C. Jeffs, E. Whitfield, J. Welsh and J. Huddleston, forwards.

Trail—W. Baillie, goal; E. Page and H. Leckie, backs; K. Sammons, D. Balfour, J. Norris, halves; W. Fish, W. Young, K. Chandler, J. Burrows and C. Bradbury, forwards.

Referee—D. Stiles of Trail.

TRAIL, June 3.—Rossland established a record for themselves in the City league yesterday when they defeated Trail Rangers 2-1 in a game that thrilled the Rossland supporters with unbounded pleasure. Although playing with a nine-man team for 20 minutes, Rossland opened the scoring when Norris put through a hot shot on a left wing cross.

Barr equalized for the Rangers within a few minutes. Following the arrival of belated Rossland players, the Rosslanders crowded the Rangers' defence frequently but were unable to finish during the first half.

Marshall, Rangers' goalie, scored Rossland's second goal. Seeking a high shot from Norris during a hot scrimmage, he inadvertently bunted the ball through.

The teams were:

Rossland—Fox, goal; Ham and Oliver, backs; McVie, Chesham and Hayes, halves; Tucker, Wright, Norris, Marshall and Tongue, forwards.

Rangers—Marshall, goal; Kennedy and Forbes, backs; White, McEwan and Pollock, halves; Jarrett, Richardson, Barr, Thompson and Prosch, forwards.

Fred Jennings, 28, deaf mute, was instantly killed at Sarnia after falling four feet from a loading platform.

JUNIOR FOOTER TEAMS ARE FED BY TRAILITES

Both Mountain Wolves of Nelson and the Trail Juniors Enjoy Sumptuous Feast

TRAIL, June 3. — Today was a perfect day for Trail junior soccer leaguers in spite of Trail's defeat at the hands of the visiting Nelson Mountain Wolves.

After the match all the league players were banqueted with the Wolves by the league's managing committee in royal style in I.O.O.F. hall.

Sam Stewart, president of Trail Football club, presided. He led a series of short, snappy speeches. "It did his heart good," to be with that big crowd of youthful soccer players, he said. Nelson deserved to win on the play in the last 15 minutes. But Trail played a great game and he hoped they would win next time.

Wallach Happy

A. Wallach, manager of the Wolves, was delighted with the "good, hard game—the real football—which was a credit to any junior teams." He had not expected the Wolves even to draw. It made him happy when they won.

B. P. Rogers, a Nelson supporter, had not heard any player criticize the referee in the game, in the dressing room, or since," and he commended the spirit shown by both teams.

Alderman J. A. MacKinnon "enjoyed both the game and the banquet." He told the Trail boys to remember that the game was never won until it was over. He called for cheers for the ladies who prepared the banquet. They were enthusiastically given.

Referee D. Stiles was greeted with magnificent applause when he arose and expressed his pleasure of having the job as referee in that game. "He felt like kicking the ball himself."

J. Balfour sr. said "Trail deserved to lose—they were smothered." But for once his kidding was strictly assessed at its true value, and he got uproarious applause.

Players Speak

The captain of the Wolves, George Wallach, thanked the ladies for the banquet, and Trail men and boys generally for the splendid time they had had.

C. J. Minton, introduced by Chairman Stewart as "the daddy of the Trail boys," conceded the Wolves a good victory, but commended Trail team for their play. He believed they got tired toward the finish. But though they lost the match they did not lose their dinner—and that was all there was to it.

There were rousing cheers for the Trail officials and for the ladies who were the following members of Rebekah lodge—Mesdames H. W. Hankin, C. J. Minton, S. Young, E. Hector, A. Kerr, F. Wilby, A. M. Burnes.

The promised turnout of the Caledonian Pipe Band did not materialize. It was to have played the teams on parade to the grounds from Memorial hall, the headquarters. No explanation was offered to the hard-working committee, who, disconcerted as the time limit had expired, had to order the teams to go without the band.

Those present were: President J. A. Irving, Secretary, E. F. Gigot, Fred A. Starkey and J. E. Annable.

Sawdust Catches on Fire Near Sawmill; Quickly Extinguished

Fire of unknown origin caused the fire department to make a run to the yard of the old sawmill of the Forest Mills at the waterfront at about 3:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Sawdust about 50 feet from the railway tracks was on fire, but the flames were quickly extinguished. Truck No. 1 answered the call.

CHAPTER XXI

Mark frowned.

"Up! Of course I'm up," he said irritably. "Why shouldn't I be up?"

Bishop shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, no reason—except that I thought perhaps after last night——"

Mark kicked at the fire with his feet.

"After the muck you filled me up with, you mean," he said sulkily. "I've had enough of town—I'm clearing out this afternoon."

Bishop made no comment, but a little anxious gleam shot into his eyes.

Mark began to whistle with overdone indifference; he strolled over to the window and stood looking out.

After a moment Bishop said—

"If you must whistle, for God's sake choose something more cheerful than a hymn."

Mark turned abruptly, the color rushed to his face, for he had unconsciously been whistling the hymn tune he had heard in church last night.

The two men looked at one another, and there was a slightly cynical smile on Bishop's face.

"Oh, by the way," he said abruptly, "I've got a letter for you—some one brought it to my rooms this morning."

He threw an envelope on to the polished table, where it spun around giddily for a moment before Mark picked it up and looked at its address—

"Mark Hellaby, Esq."

Mark had never seen the writing before; he broke open the flap dubiously. There was a little silence.

Bishop had picked up a newspaper and was yawning over the front page when suddenly it was struck from his hand and Mark's voice, furious and passionate, challenged him.

"This is your doing! I thought last night it was all a dirty put-up job. You knew damn well she was here; you planned the whole thing; you—read it!—read it for yourself, if you haven't read it already."

He hurled the letter down again on to the table.

Bishop picked it up, with a slight shrug of the shoulders; he read it through.

"Well?" he said quietly.

Mark's face was red and distorted with passion.

"How did she know your address if you never saw her till last night?" he demanded. "Oh, don't tell me ——" he broke out as Bishop would have spoken. "I'm not damn fool enough to swallow everything you tell me, you know! And I say it's a put-up job to get money out of me—to——" He stopped, his anger dying down as suddenly as it had risen.

Bishop laughed.

"You've not got the excuse of being drunk this morning, anyway," he said contemptuously. "I tell you I know no more about that girl than you do. As for my address, she could get that easy enough—there are a dozen people at Marnio's who know it. Don't be a fool, Mark! After all, there's no harm in the letter. She's lost her job through you, and in the circumstances it's rather natural she should ask you to use your influence to get her another. The letter's quite decent. What are you afraid of?"

"It's a trick to get money out of me, that's what it is," Mark repeated sulkily, though with less confidence. "I never did like the girl—you know that; she comes of a bad stock——"

"Poor devil!" said Bishop laconically.

Mark scowled.

"How long since you turned philanthropist?" he sneered.

Bishop shrugged his shoulders.

"I can't afford to, you know that. But if I could, I shouldn't hestitate to send the girl a fiver at least," he said, with careless contempt. "After all, it was your fooling that cost her her job."

Mark kicked a chair out of the way and began to pace up and down the room. There was an angry streak of color in his face still, but his eyes were quieter.

"I don't mind sending a fiver if it's any good," he said at last, jerkily. "But that will have to end it. I say that will have to end it," he repeated more loudly.

Bishop had picked up the newspaper again. He glanced over it at Mark with good-humored tolerance.

"My dear chap, you don't think I care a hang one way or the other, do you?" he submitted. "You must manage your own affairs."

Mark grunted something inaudible.

The New KLIM WHOLE MILK full Cream

How Science turns Pure Fresh Milk into KLIM

NATURE makes her own pure, fresh milk—but she cannot keep it fresh. Science has taught us how to turn fresh natural milk into The New KLIM—and how to make KLIM that STAYS fresh, no matter what the weather conditions may be.

Selected dairy herds provide us with their finished article—pure fresh milk. Within a few hours of its milking, this fresh milk is delivered by dairymen to our plants in the country. It is then pasteurized in glass-lined tanks. From the pasteurizers, the milk is pumped through glass-lined pipes into the drying room. Here it is forced through a tiny pin-hole opening into a current of warm, dry air, where the moisture is evaporated in one-fifth of a second. The milk spray dries instantaneously at a low temperature, and the solids of the milk fall to the bottom of the drying room in a drift of fine white powdered milk—KLIM.

Lastly, the pure whole milk in powder form is packed by our special, exclusive process into the brown-and-yellow KLIM tin—and there you have the New KLIM you have been hearing about,—whole full-cream milk, as sweet and rich and wholesome as it was when it left the farms near our plants.

Why Not Joint Effort on Advertising?

Advertising in the old country for settlers and potential investors, as a settled policy for this district, would be wise.

The action of the board of trade in promoting, and of the city council in financing, a half page advertisement relating to Nelson and district, in a special British Columbia number of the Manchester Guardian, is to be commended, and it is to be hoped that some other cities of this district will similarly take space to make the name of the Kootenay stand out.

Ordinarily a single advertisement in any medium, if not followed up by others, would be a sheer waste of money, but this particular proposal has unusual merit, and it can well be imagined that many thousands of subscribers of the Manchester Guardian will file away for handy reference the British Columbia special number, and that for years its articles, by men of political and industrial eminence and by staff writers, will be referred to as authority whenever questions regarding the opportunities in this province crop up.

It is understood to be the intention of the Nelson board of trade to continue its policy of systematic appeal to substantial Britishers, an instance of which was its recent pamphlet addressed particularly to those with some means who contemplated leaving the British Isles and desiring to live on the land. This is a course that everyone will endorse.

The city council, in urging systematic advertising south of the line, in addition to connections through the auto associations for road map distribution, is also on the right track. It can be prophesied that this sort of advertising will be done, for the results in tourists will repay any reasonable investment on these lines many times.

But every city in the Kootenay should be interested in bringing settlers and capital into the Kootenay.

Every city should be interested in systematic effort to attract a tide of tourists.

Would it not be the part of common sense for the Kootenay cities to get together on publicity, and try by weight of steady effort and systematic advertising to bring into being abroad a cult of "The Kootenay," in the minds of potential tourists, potential settlers and potential investors?

Saskatchewan Was Once Thickly Wooded Area, Scientists Say

REGINA, June 3.—Twenty thousand years ago spruce trees flourished in the Langbank district of Saskatchewan.

This is the conclusion to be drawn from the identification of pieces of wood discovered 54 feet underground near Langbank, by W. Marriott, postmaster of the town. Mr. Marriott reported his discovery to Dr. J. B. Stillwell, who sent samples of the wood to the forestry department at Ottawa for identification.

W. A. Johnstone, Ottawa pleisto laboratories, now reports that the wood was evidently "included in the glacial deposits formed during the pleistocene period, which immediately preceded recent or present period." These specimens are therefore at least 20,000 years old.

Some Spots Hard

The wood specimens have the usual brown appearance of such material of long-buried deposits. Although in some cases the wood is so soft that it can be easily picked with the finger nail, each piece is also silicified locally. The hardest regions of the specimens are on the outside. In some cases crystals of quartz are noticeable on the surface of the specimens having the interior streaked with silicified areas.

Identification of the wood was established by means of a compound microscope. The wood was prepared for sectioning by treatment over a period of three or four weeks in hydrofluric acid. The sections were then prepared. Each sample was identified as spruce, a common species, throughout the pleistocene deposits.

The genus of the wood and its condition both suggested that the deposits were thousands of years old.

LONDON, June 3.—Many persons are suffering from "radio deafness" because they listen-in many hours without removing the earphones. Complaints that the phones were losing power led to visits to wireless stores, but when tested the phones were found to be in order. A visit to an ear specialist revealed temporary deafness, and warnings to give the phones a rest or install a loud speaker had good results.

The tomato is the only vegetable which can be successfully canned in this easy manner. For it contains so much acid that it practically preserves itself without the "processing" (or boiling in the canner) which other vegetables require. They may be canned whole, as follows:

Lower firm, ripe tomatoes into boiling water in a cheesecloth bag from one to two minutes, then plunge the bag into cold water for a moment, to loosen the skins. Rub off the skins with your fingers and cut out cores with a sharp, slender-bladed knife.

Pack these whole, skinned tomatoes in hot sterilized jars, add one teaspoon of salt to each quart jar, and fill jar with boiling water to within one-fourth inch of jar-top. Put on new rubbers, adjust glass covers, and put top wire up, also pressing down on the side wire. This is contrary to the rules for canning all other vegetables. The jar, in the case of tomatoes, is completely sealed as soon as packed with the vegetable.

Now, stand the filled and completely sealed jars on a wood or wire rack in the bottom of your wash boiler, in boiling water to cover them. The water must have been boiling briskly up to this moment, but as soon as you put the jars into it, move the boiler back to an unheated part of the range (or stand it on the floor), and do not touch it for six hours. It should be covered during these six hours. All that is necessary is for the water to become cold with the sealed jars in it. Then remove jars, label and store. Tomatoes canned in this way do not shrink, as they so often do otherwise. They should be fairly firm when the jar is opened in wintertime, although of course not quite as firm as ripe uncooked tomatoes. Still, many women use them for tomato salad in wintertime, right from the jars, when they are canned whole, in this manner.

By "sterilized" jars, mentioned above, I will explain (for the sake of my inexperienced reader cooks) that I mean glass jars which you have placed on their sides in a pan of cold water, empty, with their glass covers beside them, and then slowly brought to the boil in this same water and continued to boil for 15 minutes. Drain and keep hot till you fill them. This may be done easily by wrapping around them towels which have been wrung from hot water.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Each Nation's Use of Animal Fat

In Denmark some years ago, a great number of cases of a peculiar eye ailment were being treated privately, and also in hospital clinics.

At first there is swelling of the eyelids, and an increased amount of "tears." However, this condition became worse, and a dry condition ensues, so that the eyelid cannot move freely on the eyeball.

It was found that the onset of this ailment could be shown to have occurred about the time that Denmark found an outside market for her butter, and the inhabitants were getting little, if any, butter for themselves.

In Japan, thousands of children died every year with a wasting ailment, one of the symptoms of which was this same condition of the eyes noted above.

Treatment by a famous Japanese physician saved thousands of lives.

The condition was noted in animals, also, and yet even when death was only a matter of days, appropriate treatment saved the lives of these animals.

And what was the treatment?

In Japan, this physician fed the children with the oil of a fat fish.

Into the diet of the sick animals, an increased amount of butter fat, egg yolk, cod liver oil, fats from liver and kidneys of other animals were placed.

A writer tells us that during the world war, this ailment became prevalent in countries that had not known it previously.

However, it was soon recognized, and as its cause was known to be due to a certain deficiency in the food, each country went about its own way in curing and preventing it.

In Denmark, spoken of above, there was a liberal use of milk and cream in the treatment, with gratifying results.

India used goat's liver, as there is considerable amount of animal fat therein. Rumania used cod liver oil, Japan chicken livers, and so forth.

Now, the above are not all-around foods, and a diet on them only might cause other forms of trouble, but it is obvious that to maintain health, to maintain our tissues, to maintain the various secretions of the body, we must have these "oily" foods for lubrication, for building, and to maintain energy.

A little of meat or eggs, and a little more of milk or butter, and a little more still of vegetables will, with liquids, prevent any deficiency ailment.

Sealers Greatly Aided by Airships on Atlantic Coast

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., June 3.—Airships played an important role in the gathering of this year's harvest of seals, one of the greatest in the history of the industry. Hitherto the annual sealing expedition has been somewhat of a lottery owing to the uncertainty as to the location of what is known locally as the "main patch." But with the advent of the airship and its employment in the detection of the herds, this uncertainty has to a great extent disappeared. The old-time sealing captain, trusting to luck and intuition in forcing his vessel through the ice to the point where the young seals, floating down from the arctic, were thickest, was at first disposed to look askance at the prospect of having anything so newfangled as an airship assist him in his work. His fears were short lived, however, and this year the airships discovered the great majority of the patches worked. The total catch was 205,548 seals.

CAMPSALL HOME BURNS, CRANBROOK

Contents, Including Much-Valued Family Heirlooms, Destroyed; No Insurance

CRANBROOK, June 3. — Fire on Tuesday evening completely destroyed the house of I.N. Campsall, on the Mission road, about five miles from this city, not a thing being saved. Mr. Campsall, with his two daughters and a son, who have been residing on the place, had gone to a neighbor's place to make a call during the early part of the evening, and were away about an hour and a half, during which time the house was reduced to ashes. The structure was a seven-roomed ranch house, and is a total loss. There was no insurance on either house or contents. Perhaps the most serious part of the loss to Mr. Campsall will be in the contents of the place, which comprised a lot of personal belongings of the late Mrs. Campsall, family property which had been kept on her side of the family for many generations back, and the value of which it is difficult to estimate in money, but Mr. Campsall places this part of the loss at about $3000.

POLICE CONSTABLE RESIGNS FROM FORCE

CRANBROOK, June 3. — Constable Saunders, for 14 years a member of the provincial police force, and until recently stationed here, has resigned from the force, and will shortly be removing to the coast with his family. He was recently transferred to Elko and Waldo, his place here being taken by Constable Smith. Constable Saunders was overseas during the war years, and received severe wounds during that period, but on returning to this country resumed his place on the police force.

EDGEWOOD SCENE PRETTY WEDDING

Kathleen Margaret Leighton Becomes Bride of Charles R. Nesbitt; Fine Decorations

EDGEWOOD, June 3.—At St. Agnes' church, Edgewood, a pretty wedding took place yesterday when Kathleen Margaret, eldest daughter of J. A. Leighton of Weymouth, Dorset, Eng., was united in marriage with Charles R. Nesbitt, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Nesbitt of Edgewood. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. C. E. Turner, rector of Rossland and a former vicar of the Lower Arrow lakes.

There were over 100 presents from friends in the old country, New York, Nakusp, Nelson, Rossland, Edgewood and Fire valley. A handsome three-tier wedding cake was made and presented by Mrs. Jordan Williams. Icing and decorations were done by Mrs. Littlewood. A beautiful veil and wreath were loaned for the occasion by Mrs. Howell Jordan. The bride looked charming in a dress of cream silk georgette over cream satin, satin pearl necklace, wreath and veil, opal and pearl brooch (gift of the bridegroom), and she carried white carnations and fern.

Miss Madaline Kelso, a dainty little bridesmaid, wore pink crepe-de-chine over pink silk, with a big butterfly bow in her hair and pearl pendant (the latter a gift of the bridegroom). She carried pink carnations.

Henry Murton was best man.

The bridegroom's gift to best man was a gold and ruby tie pin. The bride's gift to the groom was a signet ring. A large supply of flowers from a local nursery were used for the occasion. The bride was given in marriage by Dr. J. E. H. Kelso of Braeside.

Mrs. Boothby, who presided at the organ, played the wedding march by Mendelssohn. Two hymns were sung by the very large congregation, "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden," and "O Father, All Creating." The church had been tastefully decorated by Mesdames Ford and Williams. W. H. Cowell did effective work in catering for the large crowd after the ceremony.

Ainsworth Enjoys Gay Dance; Many Motorists Use Road

Sherwin, Riondel, cornet, and Mr. Waldie of Riondel, accordion. The ladies were ready with delicious refreshments which were much appreciated by all during the interval. Mrs. McKinnon loaned her piano for the occasion.

'English as She Is Spoke'—and Wrote

By GERALD BLACKETT

The other day I received a letter which began thus: "Dear Sir, yours of 12th inst. to hand and contents noted. In reply to same would beg to state—" etc.

Now, this is a common and peculiarly atrocious example of so-called "business correspondence." What the English language has done that it should be thus distorted in the sacred name of business is hard to understand. The underlying idea seems to be that this strange form of words embodies brevity and conveys the idea of smartness.

An Atrocity

It certainly conveys a quite contrary idea to anyone who has more than a nodding acquaintance with the English language. The "yours" for "your letter," the omission of the "I," the illegitimate use of "same," the use of "would" where no proviso calls for it, the attitude of begging and the cumbersomeness of the whole two sentences where one would have sufficed—the cumulative effect produced by all these mistakes is a feeling of exasperation.

"But why all this fuss?" some may ask: "So long as the man makes himself understood, his purpose is served." The cause of my exasperation is that I prefer correct English to read, even in business correspondence. Elsewhere I can choose, refusing to read what is not up to the acknowledged standard. The reason for my protest is, that if this loose, incorrect mode of expression continues, we shall soon have another language—which will certainly not be English. There is already a tendency to describe some of the productions from across the line as written in the "American language." This is a reference, not to the picturesque slang with which many persons decorate their colloquial speech, but to the studied use of words and phrases in a sense different from their ordinary meaning. It was this trick of giving to a word a new meaning that led Oliver Wendell Holmes to remark, "Your god, sir, may be my devil." We should remember the fate of the accidentally submerged gentleman whose continued misuse of "will" and "shall" led him to cry in vain, "I will be drowned; none shall save me."

A Loose Atmosphere

To maitnain correctness in written, and more especially in spoken language, it is not sufficient to have been well trained in the proper use of words and the correct construction of sentences. One needs, in addition, to keep up a constant watchfulness. For we live in an atmosphere of loose, inaccurate, exaggerated language, in which respect the greatest offenders are the advertisements and the "movies."

There is no need to give illustrations: they are before our eyes daily. Such adjectives as stupendous, imposing, peerless, have been so overworked in these causes that they can no longer be used in ordinary prose. "Super" has acquired the entirely new meaning of "exaggerated."

I am not referring here, it must be noted, to slang phrases, which are sometimes picturesque and often expressive, nor to colloquially used words such as "nice," "awfully," etc., though the latter is a striking example of how a word can lose, by constant misuse, its original force, and become almost meaningless.

I have just chanced upon an amusing paragraph which illustrates this point. Mr. Winston Churchill, the chancellor of the exchequer in England, stated in the house that during the recent debate on the budget the word "robbery" or "robbed" had been used 67 times, "confiscation" 10, "raid" 11, "breach of faith" 19, "mean" 15, alone with other more opprobrious words, whilst he had been called "the villain of the piece," "robber," "marauder," etc. Mr. Churchill evoked cheers (from his own side of the house) when he went on to say that words which on the proper occasions were a most powerful engine lost their weight and value when they were not backed by facts or winged by truth."

Debasing of Words

It is thus that words become degraded from their original meaning and debased in use. Now the debasing of money is treated as a crime against society, and is severely punished. The debasing of words is equally a crime, committed against the race, present and future. For words are coinage of thought. Without material coins we might make shift with barter; without words human intercourse is impossible.

Akin to the misuse of words is the adoption of eccentric and often objectionable style of composition. Here again some advertisement writers are the worst offenders. Their styles vary from the friendly through the familiar to the intimate. They can be pseudo-classical, falsely romantic or severely practical. They point the finger, pound the fist, breathe sentimental nothings, or descend to pathetic narrative. In one quality only are they deficient—a sense of humor. If they possessed that, these writers would obtain a wealth of amusement by scanning the pages of some of the big magazines.

I cannot resist the temptation to quote one of these delightfully humorous advertisements. It has a picture at the top, showing a vast hall hung with tapestries, curtains and lamps: In the middle foreground are a man and a woman, with their backs to the audience, and dwarfed by their surroundings. The wording is:

"—And when I came to see you last night there was mystery and magic all about you. The familiar room was touched with the faint breath of dreams. And you were subtly, marvelously changed. Why was it only then I seemed to know the mystery of you——?"

An extract from the damsel's diary follows, from which we gather that this altogether - too - marvellously - wonderful effect had been produced on the poor young fellow by the burning of some smelly stuff in the room before he came! Is it any wonder that we have had to borrow from the old Greeks the word "bathos"?

Flamboyance a Detriment

I cannot believe that such advertisements attract purchasers. After all we like truth, and we prefer common sense, even in advertisements. And I am sure that the plain ungarnished statement of a firm's business, or of the goods they have for sale, such as we usually see in our daily papers—attracts more business than the flamboyant or seductive twaddle of the professional advertiser.

But this is a matter for them to consider. We are talking of style in writing. In these days when even our poets have descended to free verse—so called, I presume, in spite of Dr. Roberts, because it is usually free from rhyme, rhythm or reason—we can hardly respect dabblers in mere prose to remain on the heights of correct and lucid English. It is therefore a matter for devout thankfulness that the standard of clear and simple writing set by the great masters of the past is still being adhered to by at least one class of modern scribes—the leaderwriters on our daily papers. May I also, in this connection, pay a tribute to the writer whose 'Vignettes' have been such an interesting feature in The Daily News for some months past. Every episode was widely portrayed, in simple language, and, in my opinion, the writer's style was a model of good English prose.

Training in Composition

Our education department attaches high value to "composition" in all the grades of its schools, but increasingly so in the high schools. This is as it should be; but special skill is required in teaching this subject. To give due expression to one's thoughts, to write down the successive steps of an argument, to compose a series of paragraphs on a familiar subject, these are difficult tasks for the student. Those who know the least are frequently the most verbose, while those who know the most are often the least capable of reproducing what they know in clear and coherent form. And the task is rendered doubly difficult when verbal expression has not been cultivated. Here indeed, is where so many of us find ourselves woefully deficient. We cannot express our thoughts in conversation as we should like to do. Either we have difficulty in finding suitable words iwth which to clothe our ideas, or we fear to be classed as pedantic or affected if we use the expressions which seem to us appropriate.

This fact of being laughed at is a very real one: it is as real to the man who tries to say, "It is I," instead of the colloquial "It's me," as it is to the schoolboy who patters his recitation in the sing-song fashion approved of his fellow pupils instead of giving it the expression which he knows it should have.

And this leads us to the wide subject of "English as she is spoke." It used to be the fashion to laugh at the attempts of foreigners to speak English. Today we are laughing (or sighing) at our own inability to speak our own language clearly or correctly.

The "American" Language

An allusion was made above to the so-called American language, but we are not in a position to throw stones at our cousins across the line; and indeed educated people of the United States are the first to realize and admit the defects of their compatriots.

I have read recently two interesting articles in United States magazines dealing with this question. In the Pictorial Review Corinne Lowe deals principally with the nasal twang and vowel-slurring which is so common there—and not unknown in our fair land. Four ladies of charming appearance, and stylishly dressed, —pictures of delight—are joined in a Paris hotel by a newcomer. In greeting her "this little group gave a perfect imitation of some savage rite. All five women were screaming. If you had put them in a room with a hundred conscientious canaries and a dozen sewing machines, they would have made the competition sound mere zephyrs sighing through the beech trees or like the tinkle of a Moroccan flute in the moonlight." She describes the American voice as "flat, shrill, and without any body." Of a college graduate who had "ability to read Latin in the original, but with no ability to speak English in the original," it was asked if he had been given any lessons or hints on pronounciation. "Naw," he replied, "my profs were all suh busy gettin sumpin into my bean they didn't have time for that."

The case of the five ladies was evidently one for lessons in voice production—but: as the writer points out, these people with the flat or strident voices are not "voice-conscious," and if one person becomes conscious of fault and endeavors to remedy it, there is the certainty of harsh criticism and the possibility of social ostracism: "we are afraid to speak better than the others in our community because we fear the reputation of being affected."

Better Speech, Better Business

The college graduate was either very ignorant in spite of his learning, or very conceited because of it. It is for such as he that an article by J. R. Sprague in the Saturday Evening Post was written: he deals with the question of good speech from the business point of view: "Better speech, better business" is his motto. Whilst an employee who cannot secure advancement grumbling: "The company is hiring Englishmen. And do you know why? Because those English will kotow to customers and use that bla-bla talk of theirs in a way no self-respecting American would stoop to. You betcha I'm quitting this job cold as soon as I find something else!"—the manager is saying: "We have found the young Britishers make a little better impression on clients because of their usually superior accent in speaking." The writer of the article tells the story of a young United States graduate sent over to the London office to 'inject a bit of American briskness and enterprise into its old world methods." In his first (and last) letter home he wrote that "the English game was dead easy; that he did not bother with 'formality stuff,' but went after the clients in two-fisted he-man fashion, and was getting away with it." These forceful methods were evidently his undoing, for his superior wrote: "he was hurting the business • • • he had an unfortunate habit when interviewing influential men of placing one foot on his chair while speaking, or even sitting on the corner of the conference table and his diction was careless even to the point of slanginess. On one occasion he used the expression 'I'll tell the world' to a most important board of directors."

"I know the German language well," says another business man. "Now suppose some young German salesman should come into my office, and should take occasion to sit on the corner of my desk, at the same time presenting his sales argument in careless diction punctuated by German slang. Does anyone think I should be inclined to give him an order?"

This writer sums up the matter with the remark, "Commerce not only follows the flag, but also follows agreeable speech," whilst the other cries, "How long are we going to permit the European of all nationalities to shrug, "Charming! But just listen to them speak."

Is there not a warning to us Canadians in this? We are in constant contact, and often in pleasing intercourse with people of the United States. By all means let us copy what we see and hear of good in them—but not their manner of speech. The most serious consideration for us, however, is that we are not setting, definitely, in our schools a good standard of speech. Mistakes in grammar are corrected, but distinct enunciation, deliberate clear speech, correct voice production—are these being given their due weight? We have only to listen to the children's talk to know that in a large proportion of cases they are not being taught how to speak. This is often for the want of instructors. "Elocution," which is, at bottom, nothing but clear speech, is still regarded as a "frill," and the one who affects it as "too English."

Yes, we need to be brushed up; we need to keep watch on our words and our voice, and to determine that both we and our children must keep unimpaired, in written and spoken word, that "English undefiled," which is one of our most valuable heritages.

MUTUAL BROKERS WILL CONTINUE

Will Operate on Prairie and Sell Okanagan Fruit but Not Through Shippers Direct

VERNON, B.C., June 3.—It has been learned that the Mutual Brokers are not going to disappear, but will continue to operate on the prairies. They will not there represent any Okanagan valley shippers. They will handle Okanagan fruit, and to secure it they will send a buyer into the valley.

Fruit will be purchased here and shipped to the prairies for distribution. By this arrangement, losses will be eliminated.

The group of houses representing the Canadian Fruit Distributors, the brokerage organization of the Associated Growers and the Nash concern, will be in direct competition throughout the northwest. The former will have control of the greater bulk of the Okanagan crop.

A former official of the pool says that the Associated will hace 60 per cent of the crop and between 40 and 50 per cent of the distribution.

Body of Robert Hurton, Canadian, who disappeared from Fort Frances, was found in lake at International Falls, Minn.

EXECUTIVE OF FOOTBALL BODY 'CALLS' PROCTER

Finds for Referee Rogers on All Points; Rejects Protest

DEPRECATES THE STAND ASSUMED

Points Out Game Will Suffer if Referees Not Fairly Treated

Unanimous rejection was the fate of the protest lodged by the Procter football club against the win scored by Fairview, Monday, on the ground of an incorrect decision by the referee, the executive committee of the Nelson Football association going into the matter at a special meeting, which ended with the referee, B. P. Rogers, being unanimously sustained.

In communicating the decision to the Procter football club, the Nelson Football association wrote the following letter, dated Wednesday:

The Secretary,
Procter Football club:

Dear Sir—At a special meeting of the executive committee of the Nelson Football association, your protest against the inefficiency of the referee, Mr. Rogers, in the match played on Monday last against Fairview, and your protest that the last goal scored by Fairview was off-side, was fully considered.

The committee requested the presence of Mr. Rogers, J. Draper, representing the Procter Football club, and A. Lane, a neutral linesman in the match in question. All three were present, and were interrogated by the committee. The committee were unable to interview the Procter linesman; we understanding from information received that he is a resident in your district. We naturally assumed, for the purposes of this investigation, in view of the fact that he did lodge a complaint to the referee as to the off-side in question ,that his opinion differed from that of the referee, and this fact was fully taken note of.

Unanimously Reject Appeal

After fully hearing the views of the officials of the game, and of your representative, Mr. Draper, we are of the unanimous opinion that your appeal cannot be sustained. The following reasons are given in detail for your information:

Law 13, applying to association football, states in part as follows:

"A referee shall be appointed, whose duties shall be to enforce the laws and decide all disputed points; and his decision on points of fact connected with the game shall be final, so far as the result of the game is concerned."

Law 14 states in part as follows:

"Two linesmen shall be appointed, whose duty (subject to the decision of the referee) shall be, etc."

Linesmen Differ

Mr. Lane, the neutral linesman in question, states that he was in a position to see the play at the time the disputed goal was scored, and he unhesitatingly stated that the Fairview player scoring the goal was on-side. The Procter linesman stated at the time to the referee that the Fairview player was off-side; although Mr. Rogers informed the committee that this linesman did not protest until the two teams were lined up for the kick-off. Moreover, the executive committee were bound to take into account that the Procter linesman was not a neutral one, and his evidence, therefore, was not as strong as that of Mr. Lane's, who was a neutral linesman. The evidence of the two linesmen being contradictory, the committee had no alternative but to fall back on the evidence of the referee, Mr. Rogers.

Onside for Two Reasons

Mr. Rogers states that he was in a position to see the play leading up to the scoring of the disputed goal. According to him, there was a melee in front of the Procter goal, the ball traveling from player to player in quick succession, and from the mixup a Fairview player secured the ball and scored, and that in his position, he (the referee) was fully able to see the incident, and he states that the goal in question was scored by a Fairview player whilst in an onside position. Further, Mr. Rogers states that even if the Fairview player were offside (which he denies) he would have been played onside by the fact that the ball came from a Procter player to the Fairview player who scored.

In view of the views above expressed, the executive committee had no alternative but to rely on Law 14. The question of offside is undoubtedly a "question of fact," and on this point the law is definite—the decision of the referee shall be final.

Strongly Disapprove Term Used

The executive committee desire to express their strong disapproval of the general term "inefficiency" used in the protest. You must be well aware that a protest must be specific and not general. Mr. Rogers has refereed games in which your team has participated on many occasions, and it seems rather late in the day to discover that he is inefficient.

In the issue of The Daily News on June 1, some publicity was given to this fact (the inefficiency of Mr. Rogers), presumably by some member or members of the Procter Football club, and the executive committee consider that the same publicity should be given to their decision on this matter in order to counteract the unfair comments on Mr. Rogers' refereeing, and a copy of this letter, therefore, is being handed to the press.

Make It Hard to Get Good Referees

The executive committee find it extremely difficult to obtain the services of competent referees, who are willing to give their time and services, gratuitously, to help the footballers in their games, chiefly owing to the fact that referees have in the past been the recipients of considerable verbal abuse and unfair comment, mainly on the part of a few spectators, and this unfair attitude of the spectators has unquestionably affected certain of the players.

All the members of the Nelson Football association will realize that this attitude toward those who are willing to devote their time and services to the furtherance of football in this district, is very unsportsmanlike and unfair, and the executive committee are determined to adopt every measure possible to eliminate this objectionable feature of our sport.

We sincerely hope that the members of your club will accept this letter in the spirit in which it is written, and appreciate the fact that the committee are actuated by one desire only, viz., to see that football is replaced on the high plane on which it has always rested.

Yours faithfully,
J. DAVIDSON,
Secretary, Nelson Football Association.

NORTH ENGLAND CRICKETERS OUT

Australians Stand 34 Runs With Two Out When Game Ends for the Day

BIRMINGHAM, England, June 3.—The second day's play between the touring Australian cricketers and the North of England, was continued today and when stumps were drawn, the Englishmen had all been dismissed for 239 runs and the Australians stood 34 runs with two men out, and at this figure the game will be resumed tomorrow.

Yesterday's play was suspended when rain interfered with the game. The North of England were at bat, with Sutcliffe and Holmes wielding the willow. This pair continued this morning, the score board registering 50 runs, with no wickets down. The batting opened slowly and the pitch developed difficulty as the day wore on. The visiting bowlers, MacArtney, Richardson and Mailey, established the upper hand, but there were occasional bursts of brilliant aggressiveness on the part of the home batsmen. At no time was this better demonstrated than when, in the last wicket of the game, Taylor, from the boundary line, threw in a ball that crashed Larwood's middle stump, dismissing the Notts batsman at zero.

Star Is Injured

Misfortune befell the North of England early in the game, when Sutcliffe, Yorkshire's strong hitter, was forced to withdraw injured. He had batted an hour and 25 minutes when obliged to retire with a torn fiber in the muscle of his right leg. Sutcliffe was one of the players selected for the trial match on Saturday. When retired, he had made 35, adding 12 runs to his overnight total. Holmes and Hallows batted steadily but slowly, but Holmes was run out at 43. A. W. Carr, the skipper of Nottingham, who will also lead England in the first test match a week on Saturday, joined Hallows and the score mounted slowly. Its progress was interrupted when Carr fell a victim to the watchfulness of Oldfield behind the wicket at 14.

Falls With Duck-Egg

Whysall of Notts had an inglorious innings, succumbing to MacArtney with a duck-egg, and Hallows was joined by Watson.

At this stage of the game the North of England began to score and attacked the opponents steadily. V. W. C. Jupp of Northampton and Smith were both responsible for 23 each and an excellent innings was staged by Geary of Leicester who contributed 39.

The Englishmen fielded well and when the Australian vice captain had gathered 11 he was snapped up by Carr off Root. Woodfull's wicket also fell in a catch by Larwood off the same bowler. Taylor and Mailey were at bat when time was called and these players will resume tomorrow.

OAKS CLASSIC WILL BE RUN EPSOM TODAY

Eighteen Three-Year-Old Fillies Enter; Pillion and Short Story Are Favorites

LONDON, June 3.—In the 144th renewal of the famous Oaks, 18 highly-bred 3-year-old fillies will race over the historic mile and a half Derby course on Epsom Downs tomorrow afternoon and the winner acclaimed champion filly.

The classic is only three years younger than the St. Leger, the oldest horse race in the world. The Oaks was first run in 1779, the year before the Derby was instituted. It is the fourth of the season's five great classic races for 3-year-olds and is confined to fillies.

Anthony de Rothschild's Pillon, by Chaucer-Doubleback, winner of the One Thousand Guineas, and Lord Astor's Short Story, third in the same classic, will be the two outstanding contenders. Others well supported are Lord Durham's Trilogy, second in the Guineas, Lord Derby's Piazzetta and Mrs. S. W. Hilbrun's Witful. Witful will be ridden by Steve Donoghue.

Many to Start

Besides capturing a place in the list of the turf's most famous horses the winner tomorrow will bring to her owner the major portion of a prize amounting to about $40,000.

Some Pitchers Rave When They Lose Battles

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

Pitchers react according to their peculiar types of temperament when they lose tough games in an important series.

As a rule, star performers like Johnson, Mathewson, Alexander, Bender et al are more philosophic than the average run and do not curse fate so much after defeat. Possibly this is not because of their superior temper, but the fact that they were usually on the winning end.

I've known some pitchers to almost wreck the bench and club house in giving vent to their feelings after losing a game.

After Fred Toney, the famous Cincinnati and New York pitcher, had a tough inning, it was a signal for all the players to vacate the bench. Fred would invariably come in and grab the water bottle, raise it high over his head and crash it on the concrete floor, scattering glass and water for 20 feet in every direction.

Eppa Rixey's favorite outlet is breaking up chairs and tearing off locker doors in the club house.

INDUSTRIALS ARE AMONG LEADERS

Prices Make Further Recovery on New York Exchange; Mack Trucks Lead Motors

NEW YORK, June 3. — Stock prices made further recovery yesterday in response to a series of favorable financial and trade developments. These included the house's ratification of the French debt, lower call money rates, the publication of bullish statistics on gasoline consumption and the continuation of record breaking freight traffic for the season of the year. Rails took on a new lease of life on a revival of merger rumors. Nickel soared 6 points, to 167¾, Pere Marquette advancing 4½, to 91½, and Chesapeake & Ohio crossed 131, gaining 3 points.

Mack Trucks and Hudson assumed the leadership of the motor group, each closing 2 points higher, at 114¾ and 66⅞, respectively.

Industrials in Demand

There was a good demand for the so-called standard industrials. U.S. Steel common and Baldwin Loco. each advanced 1½, to 125½ and 109½, respectively, and American Smelters showed an extreme gain of 3 points, at 121.

Remington Typewriter soared 5½, to 102½, on the announcement that the preferred stock would be retired. Oils were slow in responding to reports of record breaking gasoline consumption in April, although Lago touched another new high at 23¾.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent and then dropped to 3½, closing at the bottom. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Sales—1,645,200 shares.

Business Facts

Some investors buy consolidated mortgage bonds under the impression that they are getting the safety of a first mortgage bond.

Consolidated mortgage bonds are bonds secured by first and second mortgages on real estate—either business or industrial. The mortgages are placed with a trustee and bonds issued against them.

It, therefore, can readily be seen that a consolidated mortgage bond does not have the whole security of a first mortgage bond because part of the collateral securing it is a second mortgage. Its amount of safety is determined by the percentage of first mortgage security, and the amount of equity between the total of both the first and second mortgages and the actual appraiser value of the property. The character and standing of the borrower is an important factor in the safety and desirability of consolidated mortgage bonds just the same as it is in a first mortgage bond or any other kind.

The financial and business knowledge necessary to determine the safety element of this class of bond requires that the small investor seek expert advice before selecting a consolidated mortgage bond for the investment of his savings.

France Cannot Now Reject Locarno Plan, Millerand Tells Senate

PARIS, June 3.—M. Millerand, in his first important speech in the senate since his election to that body after resigning the presidency of the republic, declared today that France could not reject the Locarno agreements and disavow Premier Briand's work there.

"France is always eager for the maintenance of peace," he said. "Never has a victor shown more moderation than France in the Versailles negotiations and the application of that treaty. If Germany wishes to recover her economic virility France will not oppose it, but it must be done within the framework of the postwar treaties.

"I should like to have the assurance that Germany is nowise concerned in the movements in Alsace."

LABOR WOULD NOT ADMIT MR. LLOYD GEORGE

Ramsay MacDonald Denies He Is Joining Laborites; Suggests Liberal Leader Join 'Reds'

PORT TALBOT, Wales, June 3. — The controversy in the Liberal ranks between the Earl of Oxford and Lloyd George over the Liberal policies was enlivened today when Ramsay Macdonald, the Labor leader, took a hand in the affair by denying that Lloyd George was joining the Labor party.

Mr. Macdonald did not mention Lloyd George's name, but the inference was plain when he told his constituents here that he had heard it stated that a certain "Liberal leader" was contemplating joining the Laborites.

Mr. Macdonald suggested that it was the Communist party that this leader would be joining. "The Labor party, as such, is much too sedate and practical for anyone who indulges in demonstrations of flightiness and who requires a certain amount of freedom in the handling of moral issues," the former Labor premier said.

The Labor party, however, Mr. Macdonald intimated, would welcome into its ranks those of the rank and file of Liberals who really believed in progressive principles.

WASHINGTON, June 3. — Ceremony and pageantry featured the Pan-American Red Cross conference sessions here today, but the business of the gathering was not neglected, for there was a regular meeting devoted to the subject of emergency disaster relief.

Representatives of 20 American nations took part.

NOGALES, Ariz., June 3.—A dispatch to the Herald from Mexico City today said that three members of the Juan Galindos bandit gang in the state of Durango, Mexico, are dead and three have been taken prisoners in a clash with government troops.

Reinforcements are being rushed to the federal troops, the dispatch says, and the capture of Galindos and his lieutenants is considered imminent.

The Galindos gang is believed to have been the captors of Conrad C. Braden and Jules C. Gallagher, kidnaped in Durango and recently rescued from the outlaws by government troops.

CALGARY, June 3.—For the five members to be elected by proportional representation in the city of Calgary for the provincial house, Liberals tonight decided to place three candidates in the field. PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NORMAL TEN YEARS NOW

Back to Preunion Strength Then; Now 242 Congregations; 44 in B. C.

MONTREAL, June 3.—"In 10 years' time the Presbyterian church in Canada will be back to preunion strength, and the greatest percentage of that growth will be west of the Great lakes," Rev. W. R. Brown, Saskatoon, predicted here tonight. It had been forecast, he said, that only 24 congregations would be left to the Presbyterians in western Canada after union, but today there were instead 242; British Columbia was left at union with 18 remaining churches, and now there were 44, while preaching stations had risen from 22 to 67. Alberta had increased 28 congregation to 43, in addition to 80 preaching stations.

Saskatchewan had grown from six to 36, with 62 preaching points, while Manitoba with 16, had doubled to 32.

Pleads Intolerance

Mr. Brown pleaded for tolerance and national union. He categorized as intolerance the penalizing of people for thinking differently from the majority, and said that the province of Quebec had given more justice to the Presbyterians than any other in Canada.

Spiritual tolerance practiced would seep into the national life, and instead of different sectors asking for their rights they would ask to know their duty.

The Presbyterian church must play its part. With all the disappointments and struggles attendant upon the pioneer in the west, he declared, "I would rather live this year 1926 in western Canada than any other year in history."

The speaker demanded development of the pioneer spirit in the theological colleges. Where were this year's graduates going? Not to the west, he thought.

Commercial Travelers Body Now in Session

WINNIPEG, June 3.—The grand international convention of the Order of United Commercial Travelers of America international got down to business today.

Following the general meeting the convention split into separate groups and routine business was transacted.

The delegates were the guests at a banquet and entertainment tonight.

WALKER CUP IS STILL HELD BY AMERICAN TEAM

Final Day's Play Sees British Challengers Just One Point Behind United States Team

BRITISHERS HAND OUT DEFEAT BUT FAIL TO WIN

States Secure Six and Half Points to British Five and Half Count

ST. ANDREWS, June 3.—Great Britain put up a gallant fight for the Walker cup, emblematic of international amateur team supremacy today and defeated the defending United States team on the play, but failed to win the trophy. In the two days' tourney in which four two-ball foursomes and eight individual matches were played the United States scored 6½ points, while the hard fighting British challengers made 5½.

The deciding match of the tournament between George Von Elm, of the American team, and Major Hezlet, of Great Britain, holed in the spacious green close to the club houses, furnished plenty of excitement. Von Elm and Hezlet halved the final hole and the match and a half a point went to the United States.

Three of the foursomes were won yesterday by the United States and three of the singles out of the eight played today with one-half, afforded the necessary number of points for victory.

Jones Beats Today

The biggest feature of the day was the individual triumph of Bobby Jones over Cyril Tolley. There could hardly have been a more striking demonstration of Jones' outstanding merit as a golfer than the 12-11 drubbing he gave the powerful Britisher. Jones, with his 70 in the morning and 2 under fours for 25 holes, and with his row of fours in the afternoon, gave as handsome an exhibition of what it is to play superlative golf as the most captious could wish.

The scene in and around the final green in front of the old gray club house as the putt was holed which clinched the title to the cup was most impressive. The great galleries which had followed the eight singles matches in the afternoon were for the most concentrated part here, for it was one of the few matches finishing on the home green.

As the ball from Von Elm's putter fell into the hole a round of applause rippled forth, a generous tribute to United States golfer as well as his the staying powers of the young British opponent.

When the matches were concluded, the trophy was handed back to the United States team.

SCOUT SAVES A BROTHER SCOUT AT COTTONWOOD

Jack Young Goes Into Lake, Saves Unconscious McCandlish

Rescued yesterday afternoon from the waters of Cottonwood lake in an unconscious condition, Reuben McCandlish Jr., 12-year-old boy scout, owes his life to his brother scout, Jack Young, 14 years of age.

The two lads, and a scout named Stirzaker, the oldest of the three, were fishing from the raft near the shore, when Young happened to turn around, and failed to see McCandlish. Asking Stirzaker where the younger boy was, he was informed he was in the lake.

Going to the opposite end of the raft, Young saw the boy under the surface and jumped in, and got him, unassisted, and eventually brought him to a log by the shore. He was having great difficulty in holding him there, and was asking Stirzaker to lend a hand, when Rankin Hanna, another boy, suddenly appeared on the bank, and helped get the unconscious lad out.

Young and Hanna worked over the lad, who regained consciousness in half an hour, first aid methods having been applied.

McCandlish is shortsighted, and it is conjectured he mistook his footing and so slipped into the lake. He was the only one of the three who could not swim.

DILAPIDATED CARS FEATURE IN THE PARADE

Dicker's Newest Idea Takes; Thirteen Entries in Float Section

TWENTY-ONE CARS TO BE DECORATED

Prospectors Order Animal Costumes; Elephants and Giraffes

"Have you an old dilapidated car?" This earnest inquiry has been used many times in the last two or three days by Charles Dicker, chairman of the parade committee of the Nelson Elks for the big mining convention here in July. Dilapidated cars will be a big attraction in the parade, stated Mr. Dicker, for some of the first cars that were used in Nelson will be on hand. Some owners are "dilapidating" their cars, so they will look more like "leaping lizards" than cars. Many cars are already entered in this affair, for which $50 is offered for first prize.

The prospectors in the last few days have thought up more novelties for the parade. They have ordered several animal costumes, such as elephants, giraffe, and the like, in which man-power will work the locomotion.

Big Section of Floats

Thirteen floats from Trail and Nelson have so far been promised, all of which are from business concerns or from lodges. The Great War Veterans are promising a surprise when their float appears among the others on the long list.

For the best decorated float $75 is being offered, and for the best original float, another $75 is up.

The entries already procured by Mr. Dicker are from the Wood-Vallance Hardware company, Smythe Drug Store, Canadian Ingersoll-Rand, P. Burns & Co., Poole Drug company, Canada Drug & Book company, Golden Gate Cafe, Trail Elks lodge No. 50, Nelson Elks lodge No. 5, Nelson Flower shop, Nelson Iron Works, Peebles Motors, limited and the Great War Veterans' association.

Five Bands Lined Up

Joe Holland will be the marshal of the parade, in which the Nelson city band, Nelson Kilties band, Nelson bugle band, Spokane Dokkies band, and the Trail Elks band will furnish the music.

Decorated cars will occupy a long space, for Mr. Dicker has now 21 entries promised. There should be many gay cars in the lineup for a prize of $25 is being offered. Those already promised are those of J. A. Irving, A. G. Gelinas, Hipperson Hardware company, Star Grocery, A. C. Emory, Howe Electric company, Rutherford Drug company, Smedley's Garage, Murphy Bros., A. T. Noxon, L. K. Larsen, Ideal Cash grocery, A. B. Gilker, Strathcona hotel, Central Garage, Kootenay garage, E. W. Widdowson, L. H. Choquette, J. P. Morgan, George Thurman and I. R. Poole.

Between 15 and 20 bicycles will be decorated in competition for the $10 prize in this contest.

SEVEN HUNDRED DOLLARS SPENT HOSPITAL LINEN

Aid Passes Bills; Hospital Board, Operatic Body Give Funds

The Ladies' Hospital Aid society has just completed, through its buyers, Mrs. George Johnstone and Mrs. William Waldie, the purchase of a large supply of linen and other supplies for Kootenay Lake General hospital.

At a recent meeting of the executive, held at the home of Mrs. George Johnstone, accounts were passed, disbursing approximately $700 in connection with these purchases.

The aid was assisted financially in accomplishing the purchase of the required quantity of linen by the board of directors, which donated $300, while the Nelson Operatic society contributed $100.

It was decided to discontinue the meetings for the summer months.

Those present at the executive meeting were Mrs. George Horstead, president; Mrs. P. Bates, first vice-president; Mrs. H. E. Dill, treasurer; Mrs. George F. Motion, secretary; and Mrs. George Johnstone and Mrs. William Waldie, members of the buying committee.

CONVENTION IS ADVERTISED IN THOROUGH WAY

Committees Report the Work Done; to Have Flower Display

At a meeting of the chairmen of the various committees in connection with the mining convention, held in the chamber of mines office last night, the different committees made reports on their work.

It was announced by George Horstead, manager, that the Associated Commercial Travelers were staging their annual carnival on July 6 and 7, and had agreed to run the carnival as a part of the convention entertainment. They will hold dances in the fair building on both nights.

Posters Being Distributed

Mr. Horstead stated the convention is being widely advertised in the interior of British Columbia, and also in Washington and Idaho. Some 750 posters advertising the convention have been printed, and already 575 have been put out.

J. W. Muholland left Nelson on Wednesday morning for Spokane and points down as far as Idaho with 250 posters, which he will distribute at those points. He will also speak to mining men in Spokane on the possibility of running a special train to Nelson on July 5 from Spokane.

The Travelers have taken 250 posters, and have given liberal allotments to all outgoing travelers to post up in their districts. Seventy-five posters have been mailed to postmasters where there are no local newspapers.

Advertisements will be run in all daily or weekly papers in the district. Mr. Horstead stated he is asking for the rates of advertisements in Washington and Idaho papers, in which advertisements will also be run.

Alf Wood, representative of the Nelson Horticultural society, stated the society would hold a flower display in the building during the convention. It was decided the flowers should be arranged with the mineral display.

Those present were: C. D. Blackwood, general chairman; George Horstead, manager; I. G. Nelson, finance manager and Rotary chairman for the banquet; Charles Dicker, Elks' chairman for the parade; Chief of Police Thomas H. Long, chairman of street decorating; Fire Chief M. H. Maloney, chairman of firemen's sports; J. A. Ferguson, chairman of sports; R. E. Kirby, chairman of fight program; Joe Holland, Gyro chairman for smoker; A. Wood, Horticultural representative.

PUTS CAR INTO REVERSE; GOES INTO THE DITCH

Tony Bell Misjudges Gears; Backs Into Ditch on Railway Street

Because he misjudged his gear shift, Tony Bell's light touring car backed into the ditch near the bridge by the gas works early yesterday afternoon.

He was traveling along the road in low gear, and thinking he was shoving the gear into second, Mr. Bell stepped on the gas, and the car speeded backward. He had put the car into reverse, unknowingly, and it backed into the ditch.

The car was saved from probably turning over, by a tree which the back of the car struck receiving some damage. The windshield was also broken. The car was soon removed from the ditch and taken to a garage.

BIGNEY DENIES NARROW ESCAPE

Car Wheel Caught on Log When He Turned Out for Puddle

Charles Bigney, Nelson motorist, who was reported to have nearly gone over the bank on the Granite road Tuesday night, informs The Daily News that his "accident" was a very minor one. He states he turned out to avoid a puddle in the road, and his rear wheel caught on a log of the approach to a bridge, and he brought the car to a halt. He was unable to back without damaging his car, and obtained a pole and jacked up the car, altogether suffering a delay of 15 minutes.

Motorists who saw Mr. Bigney's car at the time reported it was titled at a sharp angle.

MERCURY MAKES NEW HIGH MARK

Maximum Reaches 81 Degrees; Many Take Dip in the Lake

A new temperature maximum for 1926 was reached during the 24 hours in Nelson ending at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the mercury climbed to 81 degrees. This is a gain of one degree over the high point for April, 80 degrees, which was reached on four successive days.

Yesterday's minimum temperature was 45 degrees.

Japanese sunshades to keep off the hot sun were numerous, with the ladies. A large number of boys and girls were so hot that they took a dip in the lake at Lakeside park.

J. S. Goulding, local meteorologist, last night stated the barometer was dropping, indicating the forcast for today as fair and mostly clear.

Knights Compete in Entertaining; Supper Is Prize

The committees of the Knights of Pythias, one the Young Bloods and the other the Old Plugs, are now out to stage an entertainment competition. Each committee has to stage an entertainment, and the one that stages the best one is to be given stages the best one is to be given

The Young Bloods, consisting of Mickey McCandlish, Herb Logan, Jimmy Spencer, Lloyd Renwick, Finlay McCuaig and Fred Deacon have already lined up their entertainment. They are planning a court whist drive to be followed by a dance, in the near future.

GOES EAST TO GET PRIESTS TO SERVE INTERIOR

Vicar-General McIntyre Goes Scouting for Missionaries

Very Rev. A. K. McIntyre of Rossland, vicar-general, whose jurisdiction extends over the Catholic parishes of the Kootenay and Okanagan, leaves this morning for the east, on the mission of obtaining missionaries to man fields in this district.

At present the parishes of Salmon Arm, Armstrong and Golden are served by the expedient of doubling them up with others, for instance, Rev. A. L. McIntyre of the Slocan parish having to cover the Golden area as well.

In addition to these cases, there are various parishes that would be divided if the priests were available to man them.

The vicar-general will be in the east a month or so, returning early in July.
