OTTAWA MEETS NEW GOVERNOR GENERAL TODAY

Capital Railway Station Transformed for the Occasion

SITUATION IS UNIQUE, HISTORY

First Time All Provinces Represented on Arrival

OTTAWA, Ont., April 6. (CP) —Unique in the annals of Canada's domestic history, and seen as a happy augury for the regime of his excellency the Earl of Bessborough, which opened under felicitous circumstances at Halifax, N. S., on Saturday, the arrival of the governor-general and the Countess of Bessborough in the capital city tomorrow will be signalized by the presence not only of Premier R. B. Bennett and the members of the government, but also by practically all the provincial premiers of Canada.

With the advent of their excellencies, Ottawa is acting host to the governments of the provinces, whose conference with the Dominion administration opens here tomorrow. For the first time, then, since Confederation, a governor-general will be welcomed to the seat of government by the executives—or their representatives—of all the 10 administrations of Canada.

Ottawa's welcome will befit the occasion. Accustomed to colorful pageantry, to the spectacular display which accompanies all activities with which his majesty's representative is associated, the capital city has arranged that the governor-general's arrival will be marked by appropriate ceremony. The drab interior of the Union station is being completely metamor-

CHICAGO ELECTS A MAYOR TODAY

Battle on Between Anton J. Cermak and "Big Bill" Thompson

CHICAGO, April 6. (AP)—Seething oratory that boiled and bubbled far into the night in a final bid for ballots, closed Chicago's 1931 mayoralty campaign.

Tomorrow an estimated 1,100,000 votes will be cast to select the next head of America's second city—Anton J. Cermak, the immigrant miner who rose to command Chicago's Democracy, or "Big Bill' Thompson, thrice mayor and seeking a fourth term.

The battle of a million ballots raged until midnight.

Strong confidence accompanied the claims of victory.

"By 150,000," came the cry from Cermak camps.

Thompson's margin was placed by Bertha Baur, Republican national committee woman and Gold Coast social leader, at 50,000 or more.

Election commissioners expected little violence, but police guards in wards heretofore troublesome have been doubled.

Assistant state's attorneys will accompany all police patrols.

SUMMER MILITIA TRAINING MAY BE LARGELY CUT OUT

OTTAWA, Ont., April 6. (CP)—Probabilities of a drastic reduction in the summer training of the non-permanent active militia is causing some concern in military circles in Ottawa. The need for effecting economies in all branches of administration embraces also the defence department, and the fear is expressed among militia offices that the summer camps may be sacrificed this year, and no training of this character proceeded with.

Enquiries at the department failed to elicit any information as to the administrative intention. It is understood the estimates make provision for the usual training; but whether the treasury board has eliminated or retired that item could not be ascertained.

Personnel of a number of units in the capital have been warned that indications are the customary period of summer training may be dispensed with.

"BILL WIGGINS" DIES IN SOUTH

LURAY, Va., April 6.—(AP)—W. H. Corbin, 78, known for his poems and humorous writings published for the last 40 years under the name of "Bill Wiggins," died today at his Page county home.

HEN GETS EASTER SPIRIT AND LAYS SEVEN INCH EGG

SEATTLE, April 6—(AP) — There was a lot of excitement around the barnyard today. An egg seven and one half inches around and eight and one-fourth inches long, weighing four ounces was laid by an 11 months old pullet on the chicken ranch of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Madden near here, they reported today.

Investigation disclosed it contained an egg within an egg. Between the shells of the inner and outer eggs was a complete yolk and white.

PORTERSVILLE, Calif., April 6 —(AP)—A Rhode Island red hen owned by C. H. McKnight in the Success Valley district, was true to Easter spirit yesterday and laid the largest egg ever seen around here. It was nine inches in circumference the long way and seven inches in circumferenc around the middle. In the heart of the egg was another perfect egg, shell and all.

ORIENTAL MURDER SYNDICATE BEING PROBED AT COAST

Investigations by Police May Look Into Deaths of 20 Japanese

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 6—The possible existence of a "murder syndicate" in Vancouver is being subjected to keenest investigation by city police and has thrown the Japanese colony into a furore. The deaths of some 20 Japanese may be looked into, it is said.

The developments follow the murder here on March 30 of Naskiski Watanabe. Three of his fellow countrymen have been arrested on charges of murder and two others are being held as material witnesses.

The murder was particularly brutal, carried out apparently with a hand axe, as Watanable walked along the railway tracks on railway avenue. Following up information from one of the arrested men police found the alleged murder weapon in a canister at the bottom of a water hole in the False creek flats. The hole was pumped out to reveal the canister and its contents.

TO COLLECT INSURANCE MONEY

The "murder syndicate," if it existed, is believed to have been for the purpose of collecting insurance money, and insurance companies are taking an active part in the investigations.

Police have revealed the existence of a "private hospital" in which there have been two deaths of patients and disappearance of another. A Japanese was recently found in a serious condition in a local hotel following hypodermic injections at the "hospital."

It is alleged that there were suspicious circumstances in connection with three deaths in one Japanese family.

GROWERS PREPARE TO MARKET FRUIT

Get Together in Okanagan Within Week of Killing of Selling Bill

KELOWNA, B. C., April 6.—Within a week of the killing of the central selling bill by the legislature, a meeting held here Saturday proves that it will be possible for co-operators and independents to work together in their common interest.

At a conference at the office of Sales Service, Ltd., here, attended by shippers representing 90 per cent of the Okanagan valley fruit and vegetable tonnage for the purpose of planning some basis of marketing the 1931 crop, a committee was chosen to work out essential details which will be laid before all growers and shippers at a later date.

This work will be rushed forward as quickly as possible. It was agreed that conditions prevailing in markets for fruit and vegetables, particularly on the prairie, required action.

Meanwhile the Independent Growers' association is perfecting plans for establishment of a markets information bureau. Thus, fruit men are insuring themselves against unsatisfactory marketing conditions this year in spite of the action of the legislature.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 6.—Malcolm F. McGregor, graduate of the University of B. C., has been awarded a fellowship in the department of classics at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, according to word received Monday.

MARLER TO RETURN

TOKYO, Japan, March 26 (By mail) (By Percy Whiting, Canadian Press staff correspondent) — Hon. Herbert Marler, the Canadian minister, pictured above, has announced that he and Mrs. Marler will proceed to Canada for a visit of several months. They will leave Yokohama on May 2 by the Empress of Canada, and expect to return to Tokyo in the autumn.

Mr. Marler said that he had been granted leave of absence by the Dominion government, but that he does not expect his absence to be much in the nature of a holiday. While declining to comment on the exact nature of the matters that will be taken up by him at Ottawa, he said that there are matters of great importance to discuss with the Canadian government in respect particularly to Canadian trade in the far east, and he hopes to gain the sympathetic consideration of his government in the suggestion he has made relative thereto.

MAY REPEAL AND AMEND MANY OLD DOMINION ACTS

Conference of Provincial Premiers Have Weighty Agenda Today

OTTAWA, Ont., April 6. (CP)—For the purpose of considering porposed legislation resulting from the last two Imperial conferences, representatives of the nine provinces of Canada and of the Dominion will meet in the parliament buildings here tomorrow morning.

The conference was called some time ago by Premier R. B. Bennett, in order to give the provinces an opportunity to express their views on proposed jurisdiction of the British Dominions. Adherence to the proposed legislation, called the Statute of Westminster, would involve amending the British North America act in certain particulars, and it has been urged on behalf of the provinces that no such amendments can be made without their consent.

The general effect of the proposed Statute of Westminster is to give to each dominion full power to administer its own affairs without being hampered in any way by laws, many of them out of date, passed by the British parliament. No law, if passed subsequent to the approval of the proposed legislation, will be applicable to the Dominions unless they so desire and state. Also, certain statutes which are still on the books of Great Britain but have no practical application, will be repealed. The Colonial Laws Validity act will go into the discard if the new Statute of Westminster is passed, and the status of the dominions as full-grown, responsible entities will be recognized legally.

DEPORTEES ARE BLAMED FOR THE MADEIRA REVOLT

LISBON, Portugal, April 6.—(AP) —President Carmona's government in a statement issued tonight definitely saddled the responsibility for revolt in Funchal, Madeira, on political deportees who had been permitted to take up residence there.

The cabinet has been in extraordinary session since Saturday when troops at Funchal mutinied, but tonight's statement was the first official comment.

STREET CAR LOSES RACE WITH STORK

WINNIPEG, Man., April 6.—Motorman A. Williamson's attention was suddenly attracted by a woman who had become ill in his car today. Informed of her plight, he speeded his car for the hospital, but before he could reach there a bouncing baby boy was born on the seat of the car. Nurses and doctors were summoned, and Motorman Williamson went on his way.

42½-TON STEEL CATALYSERS FOR TRAIL SMELTER

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 6. —Four huge pieces of steel, each weighing 42½ tons, arrived here Sunday from England on the Donaldson Line Ms. Movera for the $10,000,000 fertilizer plant of the Consolidated Mining & Smelting company at Trail.

These large columns of metal were lifted from the hold of the ship this afternoon by the 50-ton crane of the C. P. R. at Shed 5, before a large crowd of interested officials and spectators. They were placed in flatcars and despatched later east to Trail.

In addition to these columns, which are technically known as "catalysers," there was a large quantity of other but smaller machinery pieces for the plant.

A heavier piece will arrive at a later date. It will weigh 57 tons.

FRANCO-BRITISH GERMAN PARLEY FINDS APPROVAL

British Suggestion Is Welcomed in Official Circles at Berlin

BERLIN, April 6—(AP)—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius were said today cordially to approve of the British government's suggestion for a Franco-British-German conference in London "all matters affecting the relations of these nations."

Authorities close to the government told the Associated Press that the matter of fixing a date for the parley was the only difficulty envisaged here. Bruening and Curtius schedules being filled for the rest of April.

Hope was expressed that Foreign Minister Aristide Briand will find his way clear to attend as the representative of France. The British suggestion frankly was welcomed in official circles as paving the way for a general ironing out of all misunderstandings arising from the Austro-German customs accord.

ACROBAT MAY BE FATALLY INJURED BY 40 FOOT FALL

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 6.—(AP)—Hurtling approximately 40 feet to the ground when a leather mouthpiece to which she was clinging by her teeth suddenly gave way, Auroria Acezvo, aerial performer with the A. G. Barnes circus, playing here, was probably fatally injured this afternoon.

Miss Acezvo, aged 30, was suspended by two other girls, and doing a "butterfly" act, the climax of which was reached by spinning their bodies rapidly.

The tent was filled with spectators, and hundreds of them screamed as the young woman fell. Many rushed from the first rows to aid the performer. Surgeons at the emergency hospital said Miss Acezvo had a basal skull fracture and held out little hope for her.

MONTAGU NORMAN AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6—(By Ken Clark, Canadian Press staff writer)—Small, dapper man with a Vandyke beard, Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, came to Washington today to sit in at the regular meeting of the federal reserve board of the United States, presided over by Eugene Meyer Jr., secretary of the treasury. Andrew Mellon was present, though he rarely attends a board meeting.

Mr. Norman, besieged by reporters from dawn to dark, said he would not be interviewed. Mr. Meyer intimated the visitor had no concrete propositions necessitating action by the board.

"There Ain't Any Crime in Chicago; It's a Clean City" Learns London Paper

THERE "AIN'T ANY CAPONE SYNDICATE"

King George Would Be a Worthy Playmate for Al Capone, Thinks Chief

LONDON, April 6. (CP)—The Herald publishes a transatlantic telephone interview with Chief of Police Alcock of Chicago today.

"There ain't going to be any killings in Chicago tomorrow," it quotes the chief as saying in reply to a question about the Chicago elections. "Al Capone don't run this city. There ain't any Capone syndicate here. In fact, there ain't any crime in Chicago; it's a good, clean city —The cleanest in the world."

Referring to Mayor Thompson, the Herald quotes the chief as saying:

"Do you think you could get your King George to send Big Bill a message? Mr. Thompson is friendly to your King, and wants to help him. King George could do Bill a lot of good, and he wants his help."

QUAKE INSURANCE MAY NOT BE PAID IN CITY MANAGUA

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 6. (AP)—With the most pressing relief work out of the way, business men of Managua took stock today of their material losses from earthquake and fire.

Francisco Bunge, German consul, said that many merchants had been alarmed by a reported cable to one insurance representative to the effect that insurance on damage from the quake would not be paid.

"This report has circulated like wildfire," he said, "and many merchants, worried over their personal and material losses, are frantic. I feel absolutely sure that no fires intentionally were started to gain insurance."

Some business men expressed the opinion that insurance policies without earthquake clauses and without clauses covering fire resulting from earthquakes might partially be paid in accordance with what they said the procedure was following the Tokyo disaster.

ALBERTA GOVERNMENT WILL NOT OPPOSE GAS PLAN

WINNIPEG, Man., April 6. (CP)—Proposal to solve the waste gas problem of Alberta's oil fields through a $100,000,000 power development has brought assurance from government of Alberta that "no serious obstacle" to the project is apparent, it was stated in an interview here today by R. Crowe-Swords, president of Hercules Consolidated Mining and Smelting company.

KING GEORGE'S HEALTH NOT IN UNDUE DANGER

WINDSOR, Eng., April 6—(AP)—While rain dripped monotonously outside the gray walls of Windsor Castle, the King remained by his fireside tonight and nursed a slight cold which beset him last Friday night.

Remembering His Majesty's grave illness in 1928, the British people were alarmed to learn that he was even slightly indisposed but they were considerably reassured by the fact that no official bulletins had been issued and by unofficial reports that his affliction was taking its normal course.

In short, they were brought to the realization that the King had a trifling cold and was recovering from it—a condition from which about 99 per cent of his subjects suffered this winter or will suffer after one of the dampest Easter holidays recorded in England.

Standing bareheaded in the rain, the King contracted a severe cold on Armistice day three years ago and later was stricken with pleurisy. He lay at death's door for weeks but expert care on the part of the Royal physicians restored him to health to the relief of the entire world.

QUEBEC ELECTION EXPECTED JUNE 22

Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal to Lead the Conservatives

QUEBEC, Que., April 6—(By the Canadian Press)—The call to arms in Quebec's 1931 election battle is expected very shortly and Premier L. A. Taschereau today stated that June 22 would be a "suitable day" for the people to choose the members for its 18th legislative assembly since confederation. No official announcement has yet been made. Legislature prorogued Saturday night.

The coming battle will be the first in which the conservatives will be led by Camillien Houde, Mayor of Montreal, who about two years ago succeeded Hon. Arthur Sauve, now Dominion post-master-general as postmaster general in the province. Mr. Taschereau has been premier since 1920 when the late Sir Lomer Gouin retired.

Premier Taschereau granted a brief interview today before leaving for Ottawa to attend the inter-provincial conference. "There is no doubt the province is solidly liberal," the premier said. "I expect we shall make gains although I hope not for I would rather see a strong opposition. I think it would be better for parliament. There is no reason for a change. A government does not die of old age. It falls for a reason and there is no scandal in connection with our administration."

EXHUMATION OF THREE JAPANESE BODIES WANTED

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 6.—Application to the attorney-general made by Chief of Police W. J. Bingham for the exhumation of at least three bodies of Japanese who have died within the last few months is being considered as a result of information unearthed by detectives investigating an alleged murder conspiracy, first brought to light by the discovery of the body of Waskichi Watanabe on the C. P. R. right-of-way March 30.

OUTSIDE WORLD IS INFORMED THAT PLANES DEFENDING TRAIL SMELTER

Armed Guards Supposed to Patrol Boundary to Stop Farmers

NEWSPAPERS WIRE HERE FOR FACTS

Report Amuses Provincial Police; Disgusts Mr. Blaylock

TRAIL, B. C., April 6.—United Press dispatches reaching coast papers today state that airplanes and armed guards were keeping watch over the Consolidated Mining & Smelting company plants here against t threatened invasion of farmers of Stevens county in protest at fumes damage.

Unequivocal denial was given here today to the rumors which were branded as not only false, but malicious.

Inquiries were received in Nelson Monday at noon from Vancouver and Spokane newspapers, respecting a report that "armed guards are patrolling international boundary because of fear that United States farmers will blow up Trail smelter."

This report proved to be amusing news to the provincial police here, who have jurisdiction over the area named, and who have not been bothering their heads about the boundary. "It is hardly necessary to state that we are not carrying out any such patrol," Staff-Sergt. A. T. Stephenson commented.

MR. BLAYLOCK'S COMMENT

When a second inquiry was received, the matter was brought to the attention of S. G. Blaylock, vice-president and general manager of the Consolidated, by long distance telephone.

After registering disgust by a vigorous exclamation, Mr. Blaylock made the formal statement:

"There is absolutely no foundation for any such rumor. There are, of course, no guards at all."

The international joint commission recently made an unanimous finding that Trail smoke damage to Washington ranchers amounted to $350.000. The finding is now before the American and Canadian governments for their action.

JOHN WALSH OF CANYON VICTIM 200 FOOT FALL

Eight-Year-Old Lad Was Visiting City With Mother

WERE 40 CHILDREN IN WHOLE PARTY

Was Conducted by A. D. Allen; Lad Not Missed for Time

Falling from the crest of Pulpit Rock on Granite mountain, unnoticed to the rocks 200 feet below, eight-year-old John Walsh, a visitor in Nelson from Canyon City and one of a party of 40 St. Saviour's Sunday school pupils who scaled the bluff under the guidance of A. D. Allen, an annual event, was killed, late Monday afternoon.

Both legs broken and skull crushed, the body of the lad was found when a search party of children went back for him when his cousin Robert McIvor, became aware of his absence after the party had reached the bottom of the mountain.

John Walsh with his mother Mrs. R. J. Walsh arrived in Nelson two days ago to spend the Easter holidays with the latter's sister, Mrs. E. M. McIvor of Observatory street. He was the only son of Mrs. Walsh who is a widow.

With the party of boys and girls he made the ascent of the hill, an event which is participated in by the pupils of the St. Saviour's Sunday school every Easter Monday. The children made the ascent of the bluff in the morning and spent the afternoon there. In the afternoon they returned to the foot of the mountain, across the west arm from Nelson.

It was when they had reached the

PANTAGES WILL HAVE NEW TRIAL

Is Free on $100,000 Bail Pending New Trial; Former Prosecutor Blamed

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 6.—The sensational trial, nearly two years ago, of Alexander Pantages, theatrical magnate, on charges of criminally attacking Eunice Pringle, co-ed dancer, will be repeated.

District Attorney Buron Fitts, whose conduct at the trial was criticized last week by the state supreme court in awarding Pantages another opportunity to clear his name, said today after a review of the decision that he intended to prosecute again. Pantages, who was convicted and sentenced to a prison term of one to 50 years, is at liberty on $100,000 bail.

In awarding Pantages another trial, the high court held the district attorney had prosecuted the case with prejudice, and had surrounded the jurors with an "intemperate atmosphere," which they must have felt in returning their verdict.

The trial court was criticized for refusing to permit the defence to introduce evidence concerning the character of Miss Pringle. Pantages charged she had attempted to "blackmail" him.

HAVE PATRIOTIC EXERCISES ON A BROADER BASIS

Legion Invites I. O. D. E. and City Council to Join Committee

URGE KOOTENAY BRANCHES ACT

National Work Committee to Draft Resolutions for the Convention

On the suggestion of its committee on national work, the Nelson branch of the Canadian Legion is extending invitations to Kokanee chapter, I. O. D. E., and the city council, to join it in forming a joint committee to make the arrangements for the customary patriotic exercises to be held on Dominion Day. Hitherto the Legion has taken the initiative, but now that the practice of holding patriotic exercises in connection with the holiday celebration has become established, it is deemed fitting to have the management on a community basis.

This step was authoribed last night by the Legion executive, the matter not having been reached at Thursday's general meeting owing to pressure of other business. The committee on national work was appointed to arrange the Legion's representation on the joint committee.

SPREAD MOVEMENT

It is the intention of the committee to inquire of other Kootenay branches if they are taking action this year in accordance with the provincial convention's resolution last year urging branches in British Columbia to either initiate or to associate themselves with patriotic exercises in their several communities on Dominion Day. The resolution in question originated with the Nelson branch.

Another matter not reached Thursday was appointment of the resolutions committee, to draft suggested resolutions for presentation to the provincial convention at New Westminister in May. The executive deputed the committee on national work to step into the breach and discharge this duty, as it did last year.

THIS STOWAWAY HAS NEW STORY

French Naval Cadet Says He Fell Asleep Just Before Beaverford Sailed

SAINT JOHN, N. B., April 6.—If Andre Dorliac, French naval cadet, speaks a true story, his status —ship's stowaway—is entirely due to an unkind act of the god Morpheus. Dorliac appeared in the police court here recently after being taken from the Canadian Pacific freighter Beaverford, charged with stealing a passage from Le Havre, France. His tale, explained through an interpreter, was brief: "I fell asleep. When I awoke the ship had sailed. What was I to do?" He said he had fallen asleep while paying a visit to a chum on board.

The naval cadet was taken to the jail where he was renmanded until arrangements can be made for his return to France.

The party arrives on the Empress of Japan at Victoria and Vancouver April 17 to be greeted in Victoria by Chief Justice MacDonald, acting lieutenant-governor and at Vancouver by Mayor Louis D. Taylor. These will be the only official greetings while the Siamese royalty is on the coast. Spending part of the day in Vancouver, the royal party board a special Canadian Pacific train at midnight for New York by way of Minneapolis and St. Paul and Chicago. H. S. H. Prince Amoradat Kridakara, Siamese minister at Washington with two aides from the Washington legation and Capt. the Hon. W. Watson-Armstrong, Siamese consul-general for Canada, will greet the royal visitors, first reigning monarchs ever to visit Canada, at Victoria. Travelling incognito, the visiting royal personages have requested that no public functions be arranged in their honor. His Majesty the King will undergo treatment at New York for an eye infection but is understood to be planning a more extensive tour of Canada and the United States later in the summer.

SIAM ROYALTY TO TRAVEL ON C. P. R. STEAMER

Will Hold Vessel for Day at Yokohama; King and Queen Travel Incognito

TOKIO, March 26. (By mail)—(By Percy Whiteing, Canadian Press staff correspondent)—The next voyage of the Empres of Japan, leaving Yokohama April 9, will be a memorable one, due to the fact that the first reigning monarch to travel by a Canadian vessel, his majesty the king of Siam, and the queen, accompanied by a numerous suite, will be passengers.

It is expected here that the captain will order the engines to be opened up, and that a new record for speed across the Pacific from Yokohama to Vancouver may be set up.

The Canadian Pacific steamships, to meet the king's convenience for his visit to Tokio, where he will be entertained by the emperor, has taken the unprecedented step of holding the Empress of Japan for a full extra day at Yokohama, on April 8. She will arrive at Yokohama on April 7 at 2 p. m., and will not sail for Vancouver until April 9, at 3 p. m.

The king will travel incognito, and he and the queen will be known as the Prince and Princess Sukhodaya, the name the king bore when he was heir to the throne. Among the royal party are Prince and Princess Svasti, parents of the queen.

While in Tokio, the king will confer on the emperor of Japan the highest order of the Sacred Elephant, and the emperor will confer on the king the highest order in Japan, the Grand Cordon of the Chrysanthemum, accompanied by the Grand Order of Merit.

LADY WYNDHAM DIES, LONDON

LONDON, April 6 (C P cable)—Lady Wyndham, president of the Actors' Benevolent fund, chairman of the Wyndham theaters, and formerly one of the best known English actresses as Mary Moore, died tonight. She was the widow of Sir Charles Wyndham, who was her second husband.

Mary Moore began playing in the provinces 45 years ago, and became a leading actress at the Criterion shortly after coming to London. Her principal successes were as Ada Ingo in "David Garrick," Dorothy Cruickshank in "Rose-Mary", the Quakeress in "Wild Oats" and Lady Bagley in "Our Mr. Hepplewhite."

She became associated with Sir Charles Wyndham in the management of the Criterion and other theaters. He died in 1919 and five years later, after continued management of the theaters, she formed the Wyndham Theatres, Ltd., acting as chairman until her death.

AGNES McPHAIL SPEAKS, REGINA

REGINA, Sask., April 6.—Miss Agnes MacPhail, M.P., gave the address at the opening of the Saskatchewan Eductional association convention tonight. Her theme was "Thinking Internationally," and Miss MacPhail stated that it is not sufficient for the peace of the world that nations have yielded part of their political sovereignty through international movements. The individual nations must go further and yield some of their economic sovereignty, she declared.

"I know the evidence is strongly against my innocence, but I have $50,000 to fight the case."

"As your attorney I assure you that you'll never go to prison with that amount of money."

And he didn't, he went there broke.

NORWEGIAN HAS FOUND NEW LAND IN ANTARCTIC

OSLO, Norway, April 6. (AP)—Norwegian government officials today continued their study of photographs and maps submitted by Capt. A. Daehli, government whaling inspector, who returned from the Antarctic whaling fields with a report of having discovered new land between longitude 27 and 72 west.

Neither the captain nor the government officials would say exactly where the land is, but Daehli said he had mapped its position on the chart.

VIOLIN MAKER TELLS OF WORK

HALIFAX, N. S., April 6 (CP)—"They tried to make a farmer out of me, but I bought a fiddle for three dollars. It was so bad I decided to build one. A treatise in an old magazine provided the directions, and the necessary wood was procurable. I've been making violins ever since." Thus does H. W. Sangster describe his initiation into the craft he has followed for the last 20 years or so, first as a hobby, but for many years now as a profession. Laying aside a bow he had just straightened for some aspiring virtuoso—"someone seems to have been tending goal with it," he remarked—Mr. Sangster told how he literally "grew up into" the craft he now plies in a little shop on Granville street. He is a native of Falmouth, in the Annapolis valley, and worked in New Jersey music shops for years.

"My father purchased a violin more than 60 years ago for $25," he said. "This was the instrument my brother Billy used when we played for country dances at Falmouth. It was so much better than the cheap fiddle I was able to buy that I just had to make one. It was a pretty fair job, too," he mused. "You know, all violins, old and new, cheap and expensive, are constructed of the same materials —spruce top and maple back, ribs and neck. Age, tone, workmanship finish, these are some of the things that make the difference between a good violin and an indifferent one or a 'dud.'

STUDY OF WOOD

"The study of wood is almost a profession in itself. Spruce must be aged, away from rain and sun, for at least six years before you touch it with a tool. Ten years make a better job. Then there's finish. It took me 10 years to learn the fine points of putting on varnish properly. An instrument can be put together in two weeks, but it takes six for a proper application of varnish.

"Players shun a new violin. The right sort of handling over a period of years imparts something to an instrument that isn't in the making.

"Repairing, of course," he continued, "is what keeps me going. Making violins is simply a hobby I follow for the love of the thing. In the last 20 years I've made about 50; that one in the window was started two or three months ago.

"But any man who can't go to a tree with a rip-saw and construct his instrument from beginning to end has no business repairing a good violin. Expert repairing is more difficult than the actual making. It requires years of experience.

"All sorts of things go into the making of one of these—" he touched an unfinished instrument —"and even with everything possible foreseen, there's a big element of chance in the result. One thing is sure, though—you may look for the right kind of wood and find only one tree in five thousand that is suitable. Spruce has to be cut, in this country, in December or January, when the sap is dead.

"I wish I had that old first fiddle back again as a souvenir," sighed H. W. Sangster, "but I traded it for a mandolin."

Just then a lady customer came in to purchase a G string.

CAR DEMOLISHES PLANK SIDEWALK AT MRS. BISHOP'S

Arthur Hansen Drives Off Sidewalk; Car Damaged; Driver Is Cut

His car getting out of his control, Arthur Hansen, driving on the portion of Nelson avenue between the High street fill and Hume school, got off the roadway, and crashed upon and through the wooden sidewalk in front of the residence of Mrs. Thomas Bishop, on the lower side of the road, at 5 o'clock Monday morning.

The car was badly damaged, and the sidewalk more or less demolished

Mr. Hansen himself sustained cuts about the head, for which he received treatment at Kootenay Lake General hospital from Dr. R. B. Shaw.

This is the second accident of the kind that has taken place in front of Mrs. Bishop's place.

BIRTHS ARE ON INCREASE, DEATHS SHOW DECREASE

S. Africa's Vital Statistics Gratifying, But Maternal Mortality

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, April 6.—(By the Canadian Press)—According to the annual report of the department of public health, the birthrate in the Union for the year 1929 was higher than in the two preceding years; the crude death-rate was the lowest since 1925; the infantile mortality was the lowest so far recorded; and the survival rate higher than it has been since 1925.

The only unsatisfactory feature of the vital statistics is that the maternal mortality is higher than in any of the three preceding years, and, as the report phrases it, "certainly very excessive."

The European population in 1928 based on the censuses of 1921 and 1926 is estimated at 1,738,937; Bantu, 5,277,023; Asiatic, 183,771; mixed and other colored, 577,852; total 7,777,583. The European birth-rate per thousand of the population was 25.8, which is higher than England and Wales, France, Germany, New Zealand, Scotland, the United States of America, Australia, Canada of Southern Rhodesia. Italy and Lithuania have birth-rates of 26.1 and 28.8 respectively. The European death-rate in the Union was 10.15 crude and 10.69 corrected for age and sex distribution. This is lower than any of the other countries above enumerated with the exception of Southern Rhodesia.

The infant mortality rate was 70.49 per thousand births. The rate, the report shows, has markedly improved since the date of Union, though it has risen slightly since 1926. The survival rate or rate of natural increase was 15.6. This rate is also falling slightly, but is higher than that of any other country except Egypt and Poland.

JOHN WALSH OF CANYON VICTIM 200-FOOT FALL

bottom of the mountain that the first intimation of the tragedy which marred the holiday event was brought to their notice. The first boat load of hikers had started for the Nelson side of the lake when Robert McIvor began to cry. Questioned, he declared that his cousin was missing. On finding one of the party missing, A. D. Allen made up a search party and went in search of the lost lad.

FIND BODY ON ROCKS

The party made the complete ascent again when Dorothy Gibbons, one of the hikers, caught sight of an object on the rocks below the cliff. Field glasses carried by Maud Dolphin, a member of the search party, were focused on the object, which proved to be the body of the boy.

Mr. Allen made the descent to the body, picked it up and carried it to the level, made an improvised stretcher and descended with the search party to the foot of the mountain. From the bottom of the mountain the party crossed the lake in Mr. Allen's boat. In the meantime Dr. H. H. MacKenzie, Constable R. H. MacIntosh and Constable C. E. Davidson of the provincial police had been notified by phone, and met the party on this side of the lake.

An inquiry will be held this afternoon.

SOLDIER FIGURE IN BRONZE FINE PIECE SCULPURE

LONDON, April 6.— (CP) —A bronze recumbent figure of a soldier by the late G. W. Lambert, associate of the Royal Academy, has been on view in Australia House for a few days and is destined for St. Mary's cathedral, Sydney, Australia. The figure was cast in a foundry at Thames Ditton from a plaster model which was completed in 1929, just before the artist's death.

Mr. Lambert was normally a painter whose sound draughtsmanship has controlled this war memorial into something really worth while. It is absolute realism. There is variety in the textures of webstraps, puttees, helmet and other accoutrement; the body is inert, resting well upon the ground, until it is almost incorporated with it. The whole structure expresses simple facts and, as realistic sculpture for a definite purpose, is one of the finest things imaginable.

LITERARY WOMEN OF CHINA NOTED

Dr. Kiang Corrects Popular Impression Women Only Recently Educated

MONTREAL, Que., April 6 (CP)——The popular impression that Chinese women have received an education only within recent times is a mistaken one; Chinese women have always been educated, especially among the mandarin and clan classes, Dr. Kiang Hang-Hu told members of the Montreal branch of the Canadian Women's Press club a short time ago. The subject of Dr. Kiang's lecture was "Some Literary Women of China," of whom he said there were many, mentioning a few who lived at different periods and under different dynasties from about 200 B. C.

Fu Hsi-O, the daughter of a college professor, performed notable service for her country by preserving the ancient classics. Possessed of a remarkable memory, she was able to reproduce books of history that had been destroyed by Chu Shih Hung-Ti, who had wished to leave his impress on the country by doing away with the old and building anew. She wrote down from memory some 150,000 words.

A century and a half later, Pan Chao, sister of an official historian, after her brother's death, complete dthe work he had begun and thus was co-author of a history of the eastern Han dynasty.

TWO FAMOUS WOMEN

The Chin dynasty numbered two famous women, Su Hu-Ei, who employed her time while her husband was away at war by embroidering 800 Chinese characters in five different colored silks on a piece of canvas. In this 400 poems have already been discovered from four lines to 40 or 50 lines in length. A reproduction of this may be seen in the Gest Chinese library at McGill, said Dr. Kiang. The other celebrated woman of this period was Lady Wei, lady-in-waiting at the court, who is regarded as the inventor of modern script, by which 4000 characters may be written in an hour.

China in the sixth century had a very ambitious woman ruler, who not only ruler the Chinese empire for 50 years, but had literary as well as military achievements to her credit. Shang Kuan-Wan-Er, one of the court ladies, was given the position of chief examiner of poetry.

Towards the end of the Sung dynasty, in the ninth century, there lived an ambitious young lady named Huang Chou Chun. Official examinations were open only to men, so she disguised herself in masculine garb, after studying the examinations, passing in three series. She then became automatically an official and was appointed a magistrate by the emperor. She found herself in a dilemma when the governor of the province where she was magistrate proposed to marry his daughter to her, and had to confess she was a woman. Four volumes of her works were published.

Chiu Chin was described by Dr. Kiang as the foremost woman of the Manchu dynasty, taking an active part in the revolution. She was the first woman to publish a magazine and wrote many poems. Her daughter, now at Columbia university, has published her mother's poems in four volumes. Wu Chuah Ying was described as the greatest calligrapher since Lady Wei. Her textbooks are the standard for public schools.

Noted for having made copies of 96 portraits of Chinese emperors and empresses is Yang Ling Fo, who was paid the equivalent of $10,000 in Chinese money.

phosed into a place of dazzling color. Platforms banked with flowers have been erected on the places where his excellency will receive the official welcome of the city, and of the notables of state. With meticulous care, the exact spots *where high officers in the civil ad*ministration, the naval and the military forces, the judiciary and other departments of administration will stand, have been charted. Tables of precedence have been studied, and proper attention given to the rank and service of foreign diplomats, members of the consular corps, and so on down the line.

MAYOR ALLEN TO WELCOME FOR OTTAWA

The city's welcome will be presented by Mayor Allen, who will be accompanied by the members of the city council. They will meet his excellency as he descends from the train, and there his worship will read an address on behalf of Ottawa. The governor-general will then pass between the lines of stalwart guardsmen, who will be drawn up in their pre-war scarlet tunics, blue pantaloons and bearskins. As the command for the "royal salute" rings out, a signal will be flashed to the artillery battery on the slopes of Parliament hill, and the thunder of gunfire will reverberate along the Ottawa valley, to announce that their excellencies have officially set foot in the capital, which is to be their home for the next six years.

The prime minister and members of the Dominion government will again welcome the governor-general, this time to Ottawa, following which the Earl of Bessborough will be greeted by Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, leader of the official opposition, the provincial premiers, members of the privy council, representatives of foreign states and other dignitaries. Then introductions will take place in the station.

Outside the station a troop of cavalry, drawn from the Princess Louise Dragoons, will be drawn up, garbed in blue and white, with brass helmets, and carrying their lances. The vice-regal party will proceed to the state carriage, and escorted by the dragoons, will embark on the last stage of their long journey to Rideau hall.

Additional to the address which will be read by Mayor Allen is the *one that will be delivered on be*half of the St. George's society.

A writ, as first claimant under section 36 of the criminal code, 1927, was issued against Elliott by W. Martin Griffin, K. C., on behalf of Elbrula Carder, also of Penticton. Mr. Griffin, this morning, said he was merely acting as agent in the matter, and had had no further instructions since issuing the writ.

QUEBEC, Que., April 6. (CP)—The Earl of Bessborough, Canada's new governor-general, learned today the thrill of handling the throttle of one of the Canadian National railways' huge passenger locomotives. When the special train bearing the vice-regal party to Ottawa reached Riviere du Loup this morning, his excellency boarded the engine and sat with the driver until St. Andre, Kamouraska, was reached. There a brief stop was made to enable the governor-general to return to his car.

This illness left me with a terrible cough. I tried several cough medicines, but they did not seem to have any effect. WORKS MINISTER DUE HERE FIRST SAYS DR. BORDEN

Will Go Over the Highways Personally to Study Work Program

WILL DO AS MUCH WORK AS POSSIBLE

Minister Thinks Tran-Provincial Not an Asset Till Completed

This district will be the first to be visited by Hon. R. W. Bruhn, minister of public works, when he cleans up his sessional business, Dr. L. E. Borden, M. P. P. for Nelson, stated yesterday.

"The minister of public works is most sympathetic with completing the existing road program in hand, and he assures me that without question this trans-provincial highway will be the first to be completed, and as far as the funds on the program of standardization on the final link from Gray Creek to the main lake," said Dr. Borden.

WILL SEE ALL WORK

"Before long the minister will be here personally, for he assures me this is the first section he will visit when he clears up his duties arising from the session. He wants to go over the whole work himself, and see what has been done, and what has to be done, to complete the trans-provincial highway program. He has expressed the opinion to me that until the Kootenay lake highway is completed and in final shape, with all its connections, it will not be an asset returning money on the investment made in it, and he wants it to be making returns in tourist traffic and in gasoline tax as soon as it can be managed.

NELSON-NELWAY LINK

"Apart from the trans-provincial highway, the minister wants to go with me over the highway from Nelson to the international boundary, to see for himself what will be required to put that vital artery in shape for international as well as district traffic. In every way, he is much alive to the road needs of this district."

Dr. Borden expressed pleasure at the invitation extended by the board of trade to Hon. Mr. Bruhn, to be its guest at a special luncheon and to attend a conference on road questions.

PRESTIGE GROWS WITH SNOWDEN AS TIME PASSES ON

Chancellor Disregards Extremists; Would Have Been Newspaperman

LONDON, April 6 (By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press staff correspondent) — Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, whose speech concerning the state of the national finances has been described as the gravest pronouncement made to the country since the early days of the great war, possesses as arresting a personality as any in present-day life. His face is one of the keenest of the hatchet type. A grievous accident in early life wrecked his physical frame, and compelled his retirement as a civil servant. Perhaps it was this misfortune which pardonably assisted him to the cultivation of an acid tongue. Snowden, not so many years ago, could have passed very fairly for the original of W. S. Gilbert's King Gama, who found life "extremely flat, with nothing whatever to grumble at."

Snowden, who is now 67, entered parliament relatively late in life, having turned 40. In this he was like Joseph Chamberlain. They were alike, too, in getting to alike, too, in going to Westminster with a great reputation. Snowden's maiden speech created almost as big a sensation as did the maiden speech of E. F. Smith., afterward Earl of Birkenhead. But amongst those who remember hearing both efforts it will always be allowed that whereas F. E. Smith spoke from the head alone, Snowden spoke as he has always continued to speak, from the heart as well as the head. Snowden never sacrifices principles for tactical dialectics. Despite his one-time venomous tongue he has always been one of the most popular figures of the commons.

When Philip Snowden entered parliament for Blackburn in 1906, he was well-nigh the idol of the Socialist party. Six years earlier, although unsuccessful in gaining the seat, he had polled in that town the largest vote which had ever been secured till then by an apostle of Socialism. Snowden, indeed, may be said to have created the Socialist "Hot Gospel," and brought it into active politics in England. Although he was never a Communist, it was Snowden who invented the phrase, "the idle rich." From his early days he had a flair for high finance. No doubt his abilities here were stimulated by his experience in the inland revenue department. In passing it may be mentioned that Snowden was born in the bleak Bronte country of Yorkshire. Maybe this had a nascent influence over his temperament.

Snowden, during the war, was a pacifist and anti-conscriptionist. He lost his seat at Blackburn, in consequence, and he also lost his valuable connection as a free-lance newspaper man. Though he was opposed to the war he fought hard against those members of his party who supported the Russian revolution. Both Mrs. Snowden and he are looked at askance by many Socialists on account of their attitude toward Russia. In his general outlook there is no doubt Snowden has mellowed as the years have passed. If he had had his own way, it seems, he would rather have been a newspaper man than a cabinet minister. He is still a member of the trades union called the National Union of Journalists. "I have never really taken to polibody recently. "The house of comtics," he told a gathering of this mons has never gripped me. You get into a current very often by accident. It carries you along, and it is very difficult for you to reach back. Politics is certainly fascinating. It is exciting at times, but there is a dark side. There are great possibilities of tremendous influence, but there are great temptations, great dangers, and it takes a strong character to resist them."

BETTER FERTILIZERS

The Dominion seed branch reports that the volume of fertilizer sold in Canada increased from a total of 50,000 tons in 1924 to about 225,000 tons in 1929. Increased tonnage, however, is not the whole story. The average analysis of mixed fertilizer sold in 1924 showed about 14 per cent total plant food as compared with about 30 per cent in 1930, so that the actual plant food sold in mixed fertilizers in 1930 was at least eight times that of 1924. The trend seems to be toward higher analysis fertilizer containing less filler and more plant food at lower cost to the farmer. The trend in demand, also, is for the fertilizer containing the higher percentage of plant foods.

SHARK DEFEATED BY SWIMMER

Australian Youth Declares He Stuck Thumb in Eye of Attacking Fish

BRISBANE, Australia, April 6—Stanley Roser, 18 years of age, is sticking by his story of how he beat of a shark which attacked him while he was swimming today.

The youth declared a man-eater bowled him over in the water with a sudden rush. In his struggle to escape, he asserted, he jammed his thumb in the sharks eye and it beat a hasty retreat.

Roser walked to a hospital where superficial wounds received in the encounter were treated.

DOMINION SEEKS REGISTRATION OF SUGAR-BUSHES

It Is Also Necessary to Obtain a License Where Product Sold

OTTAWA, Ont., April 6—(CP)—Under provision of the maple sugar industry act, 1930, which became effective this month, all manufacturing or packing plants dealing in maple products require to be registered with the department of agriculture at Ottawa and all such plants selling their product outside the province in which they are located must obtain a license, the fee for which is $20 annually.

Owners of sugar-bush or orchards are required to register with the Dominion fruit commissioner and obtain a license where the product of the sugar-bush or orchard is sold. There is no fee for this license. Under the act registration and licensing with respect to both plants and bush must be effected by March 1 of this year. Application forms for the purpose will be supplied by the Dominion fruit branch.

Probably the outstanding feature of the act is the rigid restriction in the use of the word maple to absolutely pure maple products. The word maple may no longer be used in connection with imitation or substitute products, and where such are used in foods supplied at public eating places the menu or bill-of-fare must clearly indicate the use of imitation maple flavoring.

Official grading for maple syrup includes a range of four grades, Canada fancy, Canada light, Canada medium and Canada dark; and for maple sugar three grades are provided. Color and flavor are the characteristics by which grades are distinguished.

Each manufacturing or packing plant and each sugar orchard or bush on registration and obtaining a license receives an identifying number. All products of the plant or bush must be clearly marked with this number together with the net weight of the contents of the package and the name and address of the owner of the manufacturing or packing plant, sugar-bush or orchard.

A wide search for Pete Hanson, 52-year-old Hay Lakes (Alta.) farmer, missing from his home since Monday afternoon, ended Tuesday when searchers found his body hanging from a tree not far from his farm.

A silver porringer which was worth approximately $90 when Samuel Pepys, the famous diarist, used it, was auctioned in London recently for approximately $7000.

CHRIST ABIDES IN DEATH REALM SAYS ARCHDEACON

Death Is His Domain, His Mansion for His Servants

THEY CONSCIOUSLY DWELL WITH HIM

Rector Develops an Unusual Easter Theme at St. Saviour's

That Christ was the lord of death, that death was His realm, and His mansion, and that within the state called death was a wonderful life, was the unusual theme developed by Ven. Archdeacon Fred H. Graham in his Easter sermon Sunday evening at St. Saviour's pro-cathedral.

In John's vision on Patmos of the radiant Christ, he heard the words: "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore. Amen. And I have the keys of Hades." Hades, said the archdeacon, meant not hell, but the abode of the dead, or the state of death.

According to the inspired revelation received by John, the domains of death, and the condition of the departed, belonged to the Lord Jesus Christ. Death was his mansion. He had its keys. Instead of being an ugly thing, to be surrounded with blackness, which was the ordinary attitude of Christians toward death, that state was in reality the Lord's chosen abode.

THE GREATEST ADVENTURE

Now and again some gallant soul, though not many, took this view, as did the great actor who, believing himself to be dying, as he in fact was, set down the statement: "I am proceeding to the last great adventure." Of a similar spirit was the English canon who when asked what was the most interesting moment of his life, replied that it would be the first five minutes after his death. His soul leaped forward with anticipation.

Death was not something apart, or something hostile, said the speaker, but the finest experience in life. Its nature could best be realized by looking at Jesus Christ. He was the Son of Man. He was dead—He Himself said so. The condition called death he personally experienced. It was a natural death, the kind of death that was the ultimate fate of all. The exit from life was just as natural and fitting as the entry into life—and far less hazardous. It was watched over by God just the same way as all the rest of man's estate. "See my hands and my feet," said Christ, in identifying Himself as the One who died on the cross. And again to John in the vision, "I have the keys of death." "Death is mine."

The resurrection of those who died still lay beyond, but death was the state in the interim. It was a condition, in which the departed were near to Christ—consciously near to Him. He said to the thief on the cross, "This day thou shalt be with Me in Paradise," which could only be true of one who was conscious.

BLISS IN DEATH

Archdeacon Graham here referred to the beautiful conception of death portrayed by a saintly woman writer, who pictured Christ having death as his abode, as presiding in his house and entertaining his servants—all who had in any way served Him on earth—entertaining with an exquisite thoughtfulness and courtesy. In this picture He reigned in His house, which was death, royally.

She also pictured three degrees of bliss in heaven for any who had served God in any degree on earth. The first bliss was the exquisite pleasure of receiving the worshipful thanks of the Lord for the service done. The second was in the fact of the thanks being bestowed publicly in the presence of all the hosts of heaven, and the third was the fact that the gladness with which the servant received the thanks in the first moment of transport was perpetuated through eternity.

While on earth Christ impressed on His disciples that He was the greatest who served the most. "We are unworthy," said the archdeacon, "but we are not wholly unworthy, because of our love for Him."

CALLED HOME

"There are few of us," he remarked, "who have not got some dear ones beyond the veil. At Easter time they are very near to us, they are among the great cloud of witnesses above. May we think of them as guests of the Lord Jesus Christ. He has the keys of the mansions of death, and they are having His glorious companionship."

Quoting the words of the apostle, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be," the speaker said, this culmination would not wait until the second coming, but would be before. "But we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is"—the acme of tenderness, the lover of souls, the Redeemer of mankind.

"We can look forward to this," concluded the archdeacon, "when it shall please the Heavenly Father to terminate this life and call us home."

THREE COUPLES MARRIED UP IN LARGE AIRPLANE

KANSAS CITY, April 6, (AP)—Three couples winged their way to matrimony here yesterday in a triple wedding ceremony performed to the drone of a tri-motored air liner.

As the Rev. Earl A. Blackman read the words of the ritual he struggled to keep his feet in the plane. He was forced to raise his voice to a shout in order to be heard above the roar of the motors.

DRAW LINE AT HOMELY GIRLS

Students Working Through Harvard Would Rather Air Dogs

BOSTON, Mass, April 6—Harvard students with limited finances do not object to airing pet poodles as one means of earning money to carry them through the university, but they do draw the line at acting as escorts and making love to girls particularly lacking in pulchritude.

Many weird jobs are offered these students, according to Russell T. Sharpe, director of the Harvard university employment bureau. He cited the recent case of a fond mother who was trying to build up popularity for an unattractive daughter.

The mother was looking for a student who would dance with her daughter at a certain ball and make love to her with the object of giving the girl confidence and attracting other personable young men to her.

"We talked it over with several students, but to the everlasting credit of Harvard men, let it be said that none of them would touch such a job under the conditions," said Sharpe.

On the other hand, he found little difficulty in getting a student to air a pet poodle dog two hours every afternoon.

Weeds, rust, epidemics and reduction of fertility of the soil are menaces threatening agriculture in Manitoba, according to R. D. Colquette, associate editor of the Country Guide.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Manhattan Night

By William Almon Wolff

SYNOPSIS

"I think they're going to arrest me, Peter. I don't mean they think I actually fired the shot. They think Evan did that. And—and—that I helped him. That I'm what they call an accessory." So Martha Thayer told Peter in the Thayer penthouse apartment after Inspector Connolly and Assistant District Attorney Barclay had question her about the murder of her husband, Tack who lay shot to death in the next room. She couldn't believe it when Connolly said she could go Peter arranged by phone for her to go to the home of his sister Carol, Mrs. Wentworth. Peter and Tack Thayer had been college mates at Yale, when Tack had been a famous athlete. After graduation Peter had done plodding chemical research for a big western industrial corporation until he stumbled on an alloy, which made very light airplane engines possible. He sold his patents for cash and a royalty that staggered him, headed for the fleshpots of Manhattan, and, was tiring of the swift whirl of night life when he met Tack in Emma's night club. Martha was with he husband. Before he realized it, Peter was in love with her, but she told him she loved Evan Ross.

INSTALLEMENT XIV

Carol had been as good as her word. She and Steve were both up and dressed, and a sleepy-eyed maid appeared, with coffee, Jimmy Watson, who'd brought Peter's two nephews into the world, and was a friend, as well as a doctor, was there too; Martha, who'd met him managed a smile for him.

'Try to drink a cup of coffee, Mrs. Thayer," he said, cheerfully matter-of-fact. "And I'm going to give you something to lay you out for a while. I don't know who takes care of you, but I'll take a chance on his overlooking my butting in. After all, there's not much choice at a time like this."

"Thanks," said Martha, submissively, in a voice wholly new to Peter. She drank a cup of coffee; took a powder Jimmy Watson handed to her, and swallowed the glass of water he held out to her afterward. Then Carol took her off, and the three men were left alone.

"What goes on, Peter?" said Steve Wentworth, and Peter told him the little he knew about Tack's death; he saw, without surprise, the quick creasing of the lawyer's forehead. In a few minutes Carol came back; Jimmy Watson glanced at her, inquiringly.

"Asleep," she said. "I scarcely had time to get her undressed."

"I didn't think you would," said Watson dryly. 'What I gave her, on top of the shock—well, there are times when suggested animation's what you want, and this seems to be one of them. She won't stir before evening, and she won't be up to much then. Call me up if she's restless—unless she wants her own doctor, of course. But I rather think she'll wake up and make a pass at some food and then drop off again. Tomorrow'll be the bad day. I'm off. Haley's operating on a patient of mine at half past eight, and I've got to be on deck."

He went out.

"Well!" said Carol. "You might as well have some breakfast with us Peter—it's not very much earlier than our usual time, as a matter of fact. They'll be ready soon. This is a frightful business, my dear. That poor child!"

"Yes," said Peter. "It's worse than you know."

Steve Wentworth looked up sharply.

"I was afraid it was," he said. "They're trying to mix her up in it?"

Peter nodded, and Carol gave a little, quickly supressed exclamation.

'I want to talk to you, Steve," he said. 'She's going to need help, and she's surprisingly alone."

"It's not my line, of course," said Steve. "Still—you'd better tell me." He frowned. "Let's see—if she hasn't a lawyer of her own I can get Arthur Routon for her. He's a friend of mine, and he's as good a criminal lawyer as I know. He happens to be a gentleman, too—and that might help, in a case like this."

'It will," said Peter. "It's a good deal of a mess."

Peter hesitated for a moment; then made up his mind. This was no time, obviously, for reticence, for delicacy, for distinguishing between what he had learned more or less in confidence and what any one might know. Tersely, but as fully as he could he explained the situation that had led up to the quarrel at the Fantomas club; he stressed the queer sort of armed neutrality there had been between Martha and Tack and told what he knew of Tack's mother and her attitude.

"The old lady'll blame Martha, of course," he said.

'Oh, naturally!" said Caroll, and Steve nodded. He listened attentively to Peter's account of his own cross-examination by Connolly.

"You don't know of course, what Barclay and Connolly said to her?" Steve asked, and Peter shook his head.

"No—except that they'd obviously scared her to death. She got it into her head that they thought Ross had shot Tack, and that she'd been in on it. I didn't ask her any questions—there wasn't time. And you saw the state she was in."

"Ye—es," said Wentworth. "That's Bouton's job, anyway—or the job of whoever she retains." He frowned. "I wonder why they didn't arrest her right away?"

"They haven't got a case!" said Peter, indignantly.

"I've known of plenty of arrests with less than they've got already," said Steve dryly. "You might as well face it Peter. This is an ugly business. They know she can't get away, of course—but, as a rule they try for a confession right off the reel. They try to get in their work before people can talk to a lawyer and get primed on what to say." He frowned again, thoughtfully. "You can see how it works—take a woman in her state, put her up against five or six hours of grilling in a police station—well, she's apt to say almost anything."

He shook his head doggedly.

"Well—they've given us a breathing spell, and that's all to the good," he said. "They can't get at her again before tomorrow—Jimmy Watson can stand them off if they try. I'd give a good deal to know what they're doing to Ross, about now."

"Ross!" said Peter. I'd forgotten about him!"

"You can be pretty sure Connolly hasn't," said his brother-in-law dryly. "Ross was probably picked up while you were waiting over there on the roof."

The maid came in, just then, to say that breakfast was ready, and Peter was surprised to find that he was by no means without interest in grapefruit, and bacon, and cup after cup of strong coffee. Queer, the way life insisted on going on, along its ordinary commonplace lines, in spite of murder and tragedy and the looming shadow of utter disaster.

"I tell you what you'd better do," said Steve, to Peter, presently. "Find out anything you can about Martha's people—see whether she has a lawyer. She must have of course. Let me know who he is, and I'll get in touch with him. Chances are he'll want a criminal man to handle this, just as I would, and if he'd rather have some one besides Bouton it'll be all right with me. Only—some one ought to be on the job right away. Time's what counts just now."

Peter agreed with him, especially when he remembered the way Connolly had looked when he had flung open the door after the flashlight had gone off. It had been all very well for him to reassure Martha, to tell her that she was crazy to think she might be arrested. But, in point of fact Peter agreed with Steve Wentworth; the very fact that Martha was still at liberty struck him, now, as alarming.

He did what he could on the telephone from Carol's apartment. Though it went against the grain, he tried to reach Ross, but he was hardly surprised to be told, both at his apartment and at his office—Ross had a job of sorts, downtown—that he was out. From Marian Bronson he learned that Martha's father was at Palm Beach, and, not without difficulty, finally reached him by long distance.

It was not altogether easy to make Mr. Cameron understand what had happened—nor, for that matter, to identify himself and explain how it was that he was talking to him.

"Poor kid!" he said, when he understood. "Is Martha all right? She's with your sister—ah Mrs. Wentworth—yes. You're being very kind. Now—I can start north tonight—I'm the devil of a long way off to be much use, though."

"Well—" said Peter. "I don't know that there's much that you can do. I thought you'd want to be with Martha—"

The Beauty Box

BY Helen Follett

Erect carriage creates buoyancy of spirit. Dragging heels; dragging spirits. When blue demons fly in through the window, you must fly out of the door, breathing in long draughts of fresh air, breaking into a brisk walk, warming the flesh surface with oxygen and exercise. Brooding, worrying, discontent—they are the arch enemies of youth and good looks; no woman can afford to indulge in unpleasant emotions. Digestive organs sulk, the heart action slows up, the whole physical structure takes a blow on the chin. No need of coddling troubles, hanging to them. New ones are always on the way. A part of the ousiness of living.

Alopecia areata is a common hair trouble. The hair falls out in spots, from the size of a dime to the size of a dollar, sometimes the spots are even larger. The bald patches appear almost over night. No need for alarm. With plenty of scalp message, the nightly use of a stimulating tonic, and, within six weeks, the new growth appears. Individuals past 50 seldom suffer from alopecia areata. Children and young people are the victims.

Ugly red blotches on the skin, showing definite signs of inflammation, are not to be neglected. There are various skin diseases that show their presence in this manner. Beauty shops, not being manned by medical graduates, are not qualified to treat such conditions. They don't. They send the unhappy customer to a doctor who specializes in skin diseases.

To avoid round shoulders and a slumped chest, the typist who sits all day should have a small cushion so attached to the chair that it furnishes support at the small of the back. It will help her to sit high, thus she will ward off saggy neck and double chin.

An orchid powder is having a gala time with the blonde dollies. It is friendly to the pale, fair complexion. Sun tan powders of fairly dark brown are not being offered. Too messy. Too hard on the bath room linens and the toilet table. Rouge is getting fainter, lipstick too

Don't fasten the garters below the garter hem.

SAVED IMPORTED DRESS

"After a little wearing, a lovely green voile—an imported dress—lost color so completely that it was not wearable. A friend who had admired it asked me why I wasn't wearing it any more. On hearing the reason, she advised dyeing it, and recommended Diamond Dyes. To make a long story short, it turned out beautifully. I have a lovely new dress that really cost just 15c—the price of one package of Diamond Dyes.

"I have since used Diamond Dyes for both tinting and dyeing. They do either equally well. I am not an expert dyer, but I never have a failure with Diamond Dyes. They seem to be made so they always go on smoothly and evenly. They never spot, streak or run; and friends never know the things I dye with Diamond Dyes are redyed at all!"

To Marry or Not To, at Seventeen

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 17 years old and am in love with a boy of 23. We have been going together for almost a year. This boy is in a position to marry and wants to marry me. He wanted to marry me when I was 16, but I insisted on waiting, for I was afraid I was too yonug to know my own mind. A year has passed and I love him doubly well. Must I go on waiting until I am 18 and waste this wonderful year and stand the chance of losing him, or must I marry him? What is worrying me is that for some reason he seems to be tired of being put off any longer. My parents approve of the match, but insist on our waiting. Why I should waste a whole year of my life is beyond me. I am willing to make any sacrifice for him. You see I love him, and am afraid of losing him. I would rather suffer with him a thousandfold than do without him. Please advise me what to do. ANXIETY.

The best advice I can give you is to read carefully the letters of girls who have married at 16 or 17 and then write me that they are heartily regretful they passed up youth and freedom at such an early age. Your case may be the exception which proves the rule, and we know that our grandmothers married at 16 and 17 and were very happy. But conditions have changed so radically that marriages of the very young have grown increasingly risky. A salary that commanded modest luxuries a few years ago, hardly keeps the wolf from the door today. The tearing pace of this age makes people less patient, less considerate, less mindful of responsibilities than they were formerly. All said and done, I'm inclined to agree with your parents, better wait till you're at least 18.

Her Letters Disgusted Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

During the Christmas vacation I visited a fraternity brother of mine and met a girl I liked immensely. I even thought of asking her to marry me. But her letters gave me the shock of my life—disgusted me, in fact. She wrote in pencil on lined paper, there were four misspelled words, and I do not think she and a grammar had ever been under one roof. The surprising thing was that when I went with her, she talked O. K. and she seemed refined. I have not answered her two last letters, the prospect of getting one of hers isn't appetizing. Yet she's a cute kid. TERENCE.

If you really like the girl, why not try to do a little missionary work in regard to her letters? Send her a box of good stationery, cream or white, and, of course not lined. To discourage her from writing in pencil, you might suggest that pencil written letters are apt to get blurred in the mail. You might—if you care enough—include a fountain pen with your gift of stationery. It would be too cruel to correct her spelling or grammar. But you could manage to use some of the words she misspelled and spell them correctly, and do the same with her grammatical breaks. I find my sympathy going out to charming girls who perhaps have had to go to work instead of going to high school. And I hope, my dear boy, that you're not taking any credit to yourself for advantages that were given to you and which lack of money very probably withheld from her.

She Is Carefully Chaperoned

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've met a girl whom I like quite a lot and I think she likes me. I work every day and also nights, so the only time I can see her is on Sundays. I would not mind that so much, but all the time I'm with her, her parents sit only a few feet away. I've tried hinting but it doesn't work. The girl can't even go for a ride with me. Can you suggest somewhere we could go on Sundays, also how I can win her parents' confidence?

DOUBTFUL.

You've got to "sell" yourself to those ever watchful parents. Why not suggest taking the entire family for a Sunday outing, and after you've done this a few times they may feel better acquainted and have greater confidence in you, it's more than likely they'll raise no objections to your taking the daughter out sometimes alone. The best of luck to you.

She Is Fat and Also Lonesome

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I want some friends and I always feel a tinge of lonesomeness come into my heart when my older sister laughs and talks with other boys and girls, she is so popular. I take most all the clothes she can't wear and I help keep the house clean, for popular as she is, she never half cleans the house. People talk to me if I'm the only one around, but otherwise, don't see me. My sister is thin and I am quite fat—do you suppose that makes the difference in our appeal? Would lemons make me thin? Oh, Miss Fairfax, I hate to be fat and I do want a few friends. LONESOME.

Please try to stop thinking people will pay no attention to you if the slender siren of a sister is around. First thing you know you'll hypnotize yourself with that idea, make it come true, very likely. "Sell" yourself the idea that it isn't true and go ahead and make people comfortable and contented around you, and see if that won't make you popular on your own account. As to being fat—don't eat between meals, cut out ice cream, candy and don't eat bread and potatoes at the same meal. Take setting-up exercises. No, I don't believe lemons would do the trick.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES

Miss A.: "I have found an old, round, wood instrument, which I am told, is a 'Cracker Tamp,' apparently 100 years old (or more); can you tell me a recipe for crackers to be made in it? I would also appreciate a recipe for the old-fashioned 'Sage Cheese' of our great-grandmothers."

Answer: Although I haven't either recipe, I feel sure that if any reader of this column happens to have directions for either the cracker-making or the cheese, she will write them on a postal card and mail them to me, in care of this paper, for publication.

Newly married: "Please publish a formula for boiled starch, as I wish to do my husband's stiff collars, in fact all of our laundry."

Answer; For moderate stiffness, you use one-fourth cup of starch to one quart of water. For a very stiff body-finish however, use one-half cup of the starch to a puart quart of water. Mix the starch in a little extra water—cold—then stir it slowly into the boiling quart of water; add one-half tablespoon of borax and one of the four following ingredients—either a one-fourth-inch cube of paraffine wax or one-fourth tablespoon of lard, or one-fourth tablespoon of kerosene oil or turpentine. Let the mixture cook slowly for about 15 or 20 minutes, before using.

Mrs. M.: "Have you a recipe for rolls called Penny Horns?"

Answer: No, I am sorry that I haven't such a recipe—but I feel sure that some generous-spirited reader friend may send one in to us, for publication in this column, so that you will see it. Let us wait and see!

Mrs. P.: "How can I keep sandwiches made on Saturday fresh for serving on Sunday?"

Answer: Wrap them in a dry napkin, then wrap again, using a towel wrung out of cold water, over the dry napkin. Place the bundle in either a refrigerator or a fireless cooker.

Spring Brings Checks, Plaids

Patterned Fabrics Will be Smart—New Materials Shown

As if to put fashions on a cheery and colorful plane this season more than in previous years patterned fabrics are manifest in cottons, linens, silks and lightweight woollens. Checks, plaids and stripes are back with their one-time prestige.

There is no one ruling fabric in ultra-feminine dress no matter what phase of the mode it may be. Cottons have been ushered in in all their new glory, practical for the street and town costumes as well as sports, and offering the daintiest media for evening gowns of summery character.

What goes in the realm of patterns for one type of fabric is somewhat true of others. And design is the word.

Many interesting developments are seen in the new materials shown by the great textile houses of Paris as well as of this country.

Similar to the crossbar dimities of old-fashioned fame are the crossbar patterns of the spring. The bars always are woven and in self color. Some patterns are extremely fine, other as large as a quarter of an inch, at least as French weavers conceive and create them. Crossbars are used in wool and in silk such as a new crossbar chiffon and a similar design in fine wool.

Gingham checks, so called because of their close resemblance to the familiar types in cotton, are most pronounced in silk materials and sheer woollens like voile. The smaller checks are preferred, since the larger ones are more difficult for the dressmaker to manipulate nicely and for a woman to wear.

The French couture gives full play to plaids, and one fabric manufacturer of renown is showing three distinct groups of plaids in woollens.

Quiet color effects characterize these plaids in different sizes, and it is customary to see a black plaid on a colored ground. There is no mixture of colors, although the backgrounds themselves may be gay enough.

Pink plaided with black is a combination that promises to be important in spring attire. Another alliance is yellow plaided in navy. The designs are not at all fancy but follow the classic Scotch patterns except in the matter of color. Plaids in silks are more likely to be printed than to be woven.

If you are including in your spring housecleaning a washing of the bathroom walls, before you start the job fill the bathtub with steaming hot water and go out and shut the door for a half-hour. Then wash down with soapy water and see how much easier your job is than usual. The steam from the hot water will loosen the dirt and cause it to wash off more quickly.

TOMATO JUICE ECONOMICAL

On the basis that tomato juice and orange juice are equal in vitamin value, leading doctors and food specialists are recommending both for infant feedings and for table use.

In the belief that tomato juice must be much more economical, however, the head of a family made some recent tests. He bought oranges of different grades and extracted and measured the juice obtained therefrom. He then purchased canned tomatoes and strained off the juice and measured this. Carefully calculating the relative costs of these two popular essential foods for babies, this investigator found that the price of the orange juice was almost exactly two-and-a-half times that of the same quantity of tomato juice. He found, in other words, that $1 spent on canned tomatoes was equivalent to $2.46 expended for oranges.

The relatively small cost of tomato juice, obtained by straining canned tomatoes, is one good reason for its regular use in the home. Moreover, investigation has shown that children take kindly to tomato juice, and its popularity with mothers has been further increased by the strong endorsation given tomato juice by leading medical authorities, both in private practice and in positions of public trust.

The high food value and the deliciousness of the tomato solids remaining after the juice has been seperated afford further reason for eating as well as drinking more canned tomatoes.

FRUIT CAKE

One cupful sugar, one-half cupful shortening, one tablespoonful cinnamon, one teaspoonful cloves, one teaspoonful of nutmeg, pinch of salt, one package seedless raisins.

Cover with water and boil fifteen minutes.

After the above is cooled off add one teaspoonful of baking soda in three and one-half cupfuls flour. This recipe makes one large or two small delicious and economical fruit cakes.

MacLean-Douglass

The Church of the Redeemer was the scene of a pretty Easter wedding at 12:30 p.m. Monday when Charlotte Albina, elder daughter of Mrs. K. H. Douglass, became the bride of Harry Norman MacLean, only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Dougal MacLean of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wilfrid J. Crick, vicar, in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride looked lovely in a quaint ankle-length gown of "jewelweed" canton crepe with kerchief and cuffs of embroidery and lace. Her hat was a small off-the-face model of lace straw in matching tones and she carried a shower bouquet of white carnations, yellow roses and maidenhair fern. She was attended by Miss Grace Wilkinson, who wore a gown of blueweed canton crepe and lace. Miss Wilkinson carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. The groom was attended by J. Gordon Bennett. The church was beautiful with Easter lilies and white wedding bells and the bride entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Mrs. Percy Craven. The bride was given in marriage by William Douche. During the signing of the register Mrs. John Gansner, accompanied by Miss Thompson, organist, sang "O Perfect Love." The ushers were Jack Cavill of Bonnington and Gilbert Johnson. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, 109 Behnsen street, where Mrs. Douglass was assisted in receiving the guests by Miss C. A. Coates. The bride's mother chose a gown of navy georgette with hat to match, while Miss Coates wore an ensemble of brown flat crepe with hat of same shade. The living rooms were lovely with daffodils and wedding bells. The luncheon table was covered with a three-tier wedding cake on pillars and embedded in yellow tulle. Yellow tapers in silver sconces and yellow bon-bon baskets completed the color scheme. The coffee urns were presided over by Mrs. William Douche, while Mrs. R. D. Hall and Mrs. L. S. Bradley cut the ices. The dainty serviteurs were Miss Jessie Croll, Miss Georgia McKeown, Miss Gladys Ewing and Mrs. J. H. Lawrence. The groom's gift to the bride was a crystal and white gold necklace, to the bridesmaid an embroidered black moire purse, to the best man monogrammed gold cuff links, to the ushers gold penknives suitably engraved. The happy couple left by motor for Spokane, Seattle and southern Oregon. For travelling the bride wore a smart two-piece suit of brown wool jersey with a chic grosgrain ribbon hat and matching accessories. A choker of civet cat completed her costume. On their return Mr. and Mrs. MacLean will reside in the Terrace apartments.

Halifax Gains Another Honor

Lord Bessborough, fourteenth governor-general of the Dominion of Canada, was sworn in with due ceremony at Halifax on Saturday last. He was the fourth governor-general to take the oath of office at the capital city in Nova Scotia. It is a rule that a new governor-general must be sworn into office at a capital city immediately he touches Canadian soil. Owing to the St. Lawrence river being ice-bound, Halifax, an open winter harbour, won the honor of being the first capital city to welcome the earl and his family.

Thirteen governors-general have preceded the Earl of Bessborough in office. Viscount Monck was appointed in 1867 and was followed in order by Lord Lisgar, the Earl of Dufferin, the Marquis of Lorne, the Marquis of Landsowne, Lord Stanley of Preston, Earl of Derby, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Earl of Minto, Earl Grey, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Byng of Vimy and Lord Willingdon.

It was in 1878, that Halifax, with due pomp and color, welcomed the fourth governor-general to the Dominion. Through boistrous seas and stormy weather the steamer Samaritan bearing the Marquis of Lorne and the princess Louise, daughter of Queen Victoria, docked after a ten day voyage from England. A feature of the welcome to the then Duke of Argyle was the fact that he responded to no less than 16 addresses following administration of the oath of office.

Halifax Province house in December 1904 was a scene of ceremony when Earl Grey was sworn in as Canada's tenth governor-general. It was 12 years later that the Duke of Devonshire landed at Halifax on November 11, 1916. Halifax was at that time a Canadian war port. Soldiers, and sailors were everywhere, and warships and transports swung at anchor in the harbor. Halifax at that time was the great clearing house for the sailing men of Canada's army.

For the next few weeks the duties of the Earl of Bessborough will be many and varied. And after becoming settled into offices and familiar with his new duties, it is expected that he and his consort, their son and daughter will visit across the Dominion. All Canadians, who take a pride in this vast Dominion are eagerly awaiting an opportunity to see and greet the new govern-general.

Life Insurance in Canada

While the governments are trying to find a panacea for unemployment it is gratifying to note that life insurance service in this country is solving the problem of dependence upon others by helping the individual to provide against emergencies. How this form of thrift has grown in popularity the last decade is reflected in the following table of the amount of insurance in force from 1922 to 1929, the latest figures available:

1922	$3,538,249,085
1923	3,819,505,507
1924	4,120,236,686
1925	4,514,315,067
1926	4,951,286,603
1927	5,421,439,125
1928	5,993,140,638
1929	6,548,251,744

The figures for 1929 take on more significance when it is explained that the total amount for that year is equivalent to one-fifth of the national wealth of Canada. Incidentally, six and one-half billion dollars is a respectable sum for ten million people to invest in life insurance.

Courtesy Call Costs $36,567

It cost the British Admiralty $36,567 to make a courtesy call on the United States navy.

According to the Panama Canal Record, when the flagship Nelson of the British Atlantic fleet passed through the canal to Balboa, where Uncle Sam's fleet lay, the tolls were $18,320, while the return trip was made at a reduction of $73, due to a smaller displacement tonnage occasioned by less fuel aboard.

After three lightless nights, proclaimed in the effort to economize, Bow, a New Hampshire town, has decided to again light up its streets at night. Kind of an enlightening subject for other towns.

It is interesting to know that dressmakers in Toronto are concluding their strike. Apparently the strike did not hinder the Easter parade.

Seen and Heard in NELSON

(By J. B. C.)

Top coats, hats and new suits,
Dresses, stockings and shoes,
Neckties undies, new boots,
Shirts, whatever you choose,
Neckpiece choke and the belt
Sport frock, a chickish affair
New hats, straw or in felt
Styles and shade or bizairre,
Clothing cheap, or quite dear
We wear 'em all once and forget
That Easter day ever was here—
But we'll find who started it yet.

"Well, dearie, isn't that a stunning coat? I think it just grand, but of course it does not come up to my new Easter coat."

It was a lady talking. She was on the Easter parade on Sunday. Of course her husband agreed with her, but he had to.

"Yes, green is the big thing this year. But I figured Mrs. Jones would have a green coat so I decided to get something different. I never did like Mrs. Jones anyway. But don't you think that belt is too high? If that were my coat I would have had that belt altered."

Hubby again agrees with friend wife, meanwhile glancing into a window of a men's clothing store and admiring the new suits, the new top coats and the new hats. He attempts to figure just how he can get a new suit, say for next Easter.

"Well, isn't that hat terrible. But I'll bet Mrs. Blinks thinks it is the only hat on the street. She paid $5.25 for it. I know for I tried it on a week ago."

And so for block after block. There is always something new. Mrs. Brown is wearing her last year's spring coat. Mrs. Smith looks stunning in her new hat, etc., etc. The wife continues her observations while hubbie's mind is actively engaged in figuring out just how the coal man, the butcher, the baker and the milkman are going to be paid at this particular period of the year. A glorious Easter, husbands.

There has come to this office two clippings from California papers. One from the Los Angeles Examiner carries a two-column heading as follows: "Police Spray Nude women with cattle disinfectant". The other clipping from the Long Beach Press-Telegram carries the following heading: "Pike dancers nabbed by police in raid on oriental show".

The story from the Examiner, as can be guessed carried a Nelson dateline and referred to recent Doukhobor activities. The Long Beach raid on an oriental show. Five women and two men were arrested on moral charges. Information was that dances were staged in two portions of the show and that $1 admission was charged in the inner show. Dancers, the report stated, "were nearly nude" in the second show.

And attached to these two clippings were penned the following: "Please note the attached clippings. I think the Long Beach oriental show getting $1 admission is somewhat the best idea."

I'll let readers guess just who sent the information to this paper.

I was in the Easter parade on Sunday. I noticed hundreds and hundreds of snowdrops and brilliantly hued crocus plants adorning several lawns on Vernon street. And I saw numerous people admiring them. I noticed several spots in the highway badly in need of repair. Frost had been active, I thought to myself. I was also interested in the number of automobiles on the roads. They were apparently going nowhere, but seemed to be in a great hurry. Some people were sporting new automobiles. Others were driving last year's car. Others were driving cars that must have come out in the Ark. I noticed one driver who shouted as he came to the street intersections. "Get out of the way", he repeatedly called. I guessed his car was minus a horn. Probably stolen by someone while his car was in storage or was out on the street all winter. But what amused me was the fact that the rear end grind in this particular wagon was enough to waken the dead. He did not need a horn on his car, and he should have saved his voice. And so went the Easter parade. It was a great success, from what I have heard. But I could not see anything in the parade that an industrious husband should get unduly elated over. The bills will be in at the end of the month. Yep, it's been a joyous Easter. And besides I guess I can criticize the automobiles because I am not a car owner.

And of course I would have to meet one guy who asked if the Easter parade was a Doukhobor demonstration?

* * *

So ends another lame effort.

TOLD IN RIME

MY FRIENDS

My house is hidden quite by shrub and vine
Here at the ending of a little street,
And though it boasts no grandeur
of design,
Each day I have some charm-friends to greet.

The robin builds beneath the eaves
in spring,
And, sheltered by the grape's
protecting leaves,
The wren keeps house. And when I hear him sing
My cares I banish like so many thieves.

The bluejay, like a proud and stately king,
Sits in the top-most bough across the way,
The cardinal darts by on gorgeous wing,
A timid dove comes, garbed in modest gray.

And though the blackbird is a gossip bold
And arrogant, I make him welcome, too;
The wee canary with his wings of gold
Flits by, and once I heard an owl's "tu-whoo."

And, last of all, I have one steadfast friend
Who stays with me though skies
be dark or fair,
The sparrow, who is always prompt to send His cheerful greeting on the morning air.

Birds of the Kootenay and Arrow Lakes

By J. E. H. KELSO, M.D., M.B.O.U., Edgewood, B. C.

In studying birds of any district or area it is advisable to follow more or less closely their classification, beginning with those least specialized, or what is considered by naturalists the lowest forms and working up to the higher orders and families. In taking a survey of this kind we find that the family Colymbidae or Grebes is placed the lowest with which we have to deal in this country. This family is included in the order Pygopodes or diving birds.

Birds are the warmest blooded of animals with temperature running from 100 to 110 far., and those considered lower in scale, less highly organized have lower temperatures that the higher forms, thus we find Grebe have comparatively low temperatures of 100 in comparison with highly orgaized families such as sparrows, woodpeckers, etc., and though so warm blooded are nearer to their cold blooded reptilian ancestors than the above higher bird groups.

Grebe are well represented on the Kootenay and Arrow lakes sometimes appearing in large flocks, and accasionally, especially at a distance mistaken by the novice for ducks, but Grebe have straight pointed narrow bills. The wings are short and look very weak, but notwithstanding this these birds can fly (except in the moulting season when they are flightless) they can fly well when once on the wing and at a considerable pace, though finding some difficulty in rising from smooth water not being able to rise vertically or even at an acute angle.

They usually prefer to escape from enemies by diving and swimming long distances under water, to enable them to do this the leg muscles are enormously developed. The author after a long experience with water fowl has never seen a Grebe making use of its wings as a means of propulsion under water.

DEVOID OF TAILS

Grebe are devoid of tails a little tuft of soft feathers taking the place of that appendage. They do not possess typically webbed feet, but have instead a peculiar arrangement, the three front toes are lobed, that is have flattened surfaces on each side, this gives them somewhat the appearance of leaves, the hind toe is much smaller than the three front ones and is also lobed. The claws are flattened and the part of the leg above the toes (really a part of the foot in birds) is compressed, flattened from before backwards up to the first joint which is really the ankle, this flattened portion presents a sharp cutting edge to the water, the lobed toes fold backwards in forward strokes, but present their broad hind surfaces in back strokes forming a pretty efficient swimming organ as is testified by the pace Grebe attain when on or under the surface. Thes birds dive in these styles, first by sinking lower and lower until only their necks appear above water and then suddenly throwing the head forward disappear beneath, secondly they may dive without any preliminary submergence, and thirdly they often leap clear of the water the body and neck assuming the shape of a bent bow before breaking the surface. Both under and on the surface swimming is accomplished by alternate leg strokes.

LEGS FAR BACK

The legs are placed far back in the body, this position increasing their efficiency as swimming organs though making movement on land awkward and ungainly, the bird assuming an almost upright position when sitting or standing, but they spend most of their life in the water. In flight the legs are carried pointing backward under the apology of a tail. Many widely separated bird families carry the legs in this position when in flight. In Grebe the feathers of the breast and abdomen have a silvery sheen which is most characteristic. Considering the short wings which look eminently suited to act as oars, it is puzzling to account why Grebe and many other waterfowl do not use them for this purpose under the water, though they are used in many species to function as oars, and strange to relate most if not all which use the feet alone are as fast and some faster than the majority of wing users.

NESTING

The nest is placed amongst rushes in sloughs and ponds, often on floating masses of swamp vegetation, or may itself float anchored to stationary ones. The structure is bulky, composed of aquatic vegetation. When the eggs are laid and incubation proceeding the Grebe on leaving the nest pulls some of the vegetation lying on the edge over the eggs, under this they are concealed and the whole looks like a mass of the surrounding reeds and water plants.

QUICK COVERING

Of course if the sitting parent is suddenly blundered on without warning it will dive straight off, leaving the eggs exposed, but give her a brief interval and the eggs will be neatly covered, the whole mass blending with its surrounding most admirably. In the south of England, a Dabchick or Lesser European Grebe made her nest in a pond adjoining a brick and tile yard. After giving a faint alarm of approach the author timed her and found that the eggs were hidden away in 10 seconds, this occurred with the greatest regularity she never appeared to be able to break this record, and stranger still she always kept up to this mark, never appeared a second longer over the job. Though so shy a bird she paid little attention to the workmen, but went on contentedly sitting on her eggs, but if the manager approached she invariably covered her eggs and dove, she seemed to know he was a stranger from the fact that he wore a straw hat.

The eggs of the Grebe family are white but usually get soiled from contact with the feet of the incubating bird. In number they vary from five to eight. The young take to the water after their down is dry, shortly after hatching, and are often carried on the back of the swimming parent.

FOOD

These birds feed on fish, beetles, and other water animals, but are proved to do no harm to speak of except they invade a hatchery containing very small fish.

They have a habit of swallowing a quantity of their own feathers, this forms quite a hard solid mass in the stomach, this habit appears to be unique, confined to the Grebe tribe, and the reason for indulging in this indigestible fare is not well understood though there are some theories given to account for it.

The economic status of these birds will be considered in a future article. We have five species in West Kootenay, a short study of each will repay the time devoted to these most interesting, but from a culinary point of view useless birds. The term Hell Diver is applied indiscriminately to three of four of the species.

A young lad had been permitted to visit a boy friend on the strict condition that he was to leave at 5 o'clock. He did not arrive home until seven, and his mother was very angry. The youngster insisted however, that he had obeyed her orders and had not lingered unnecessarily on the way. "Do you expect me to believe," said his mother, "that it took you two hours to walk a quarter of a mile. Now, look here, will you tell me the truth?" "Ye-es, mother," sobbed the boy. "Johnnie gave me a tortoise—and I was afraid—to carry it—so I led it home!"

That Body of Yours

By JAS. W. BARTON, M. D.

A GENERAL DIET FOR EVERYBODY

In these days when you are reading the opinions of various food experts you may wonder just how much to accept as correct and what to disregard.

Because a certain food is rich in heat units before it enters the body, doesn't mean that the body is able to use all these calories or heat units.

I am not referring to the loss of valuable food material in cooking, where in some cases valuable mineral salts are lost because the water in which the food is cooked is thrown away. I am referring to the fact that peas and beans for instance, rich as they are in protein, do not give as large a proportion of this protein to the body as does meat.

There are other foods, which are seemingly good foods that actually pass through the body unchanged; give up no heat units whatever.

Now there are some individuals eating too much meat because they do no work whatever; others who would be wise to eat a good helping of meat, or eggs, or peas or beans everyday even although they do no hard work, because their particular system needs no protein.

Similarly with raw foods everyday for the ordinary individual is wise. Raw foods as a complete diet for the average individual has proven to be unwise.

There is no question that the excessive use of salt lessens the amount of lime in the blood, and lime is necessary for every cell in the body. On the other hand it would be a mistake to try and use a diet free of salt. Salt is also necessary to every cell in the body.

What then should be our general rule about foods; a rule that will give us not only what we need, but what we like. Prof. C. Von Noorden, Vienna, Europe's outstanding expert on food and nutrition tells us that what must be watched for carefully, is that the body gets enough mineral salts and vitamins daily.

Does he outline a long list of foods we should eat or avoid?

No.

He says that we should be sure to eat daily, fruit, fresh vegetables, and leafy salads—along with meat and potatoes.

This is surely simple enough for us all to grasp; continue to eat our regular meat and potatoes as usual, but to be just as careful to eat fruit, vegetables and leafy salads.

FREBERG, FAMED MAT MAN TO BE HERE, SATURDAY

Rated Among First 10 Mat Stars; Stockton of Gonzaga Is Also on Card

Wrestling, the contest which is attracting thousands upon thousands of fans every week along the Pacific coast will be introduced to Nelson and district fans on Saturday night next in the opera house. Numerous changes in the rules of this pioneer mat sport have tended to increase its popularity by leaps and bounds, and bouts everywhere are being patronized by both men and women fans in large numbers.

R. E. Kirby, well known boxing promoter, has taken over the task of introducing the new wrestling game to the fans of Nelson and surrounding country and after much effort, and at a great deal of expense, has secured John Freberg, Swedish heavyweight champion, to feature the headliner bout for Saturday next Freberg is well known up and down the Pacific coast, and is a particular favorite of radio fans in this territory. Radio fans will recall that he is a man who always enters the ring minus his shoes and battles in bare feet.

Freberg, whose weight is 235 pounds, will meet Bill Root, the Coeur d'Alene grappler in an eight round event. The rounds are 10 minutes in length and the wrestler getting the best two out of three falls wins the contest.

Freberg is classed by wrestling experts as one of the first 10 mat men in the world. This heavyweight had defeated Jim Londose twice, Ted Thye, Dr. Karl Sarpoli; and Dan Koloff the Russian lion. He has also held to a draw Joe Stecher and the famed Strangler Lewis. In viewing Freberg in action local fans are seeing a real top-notcher.

A fast semi-final bout is also assured when Jack Reed of Salt Lake city meets Houston Stockton of Spokane. Both are heavyweights and both have appeared in numerous bouts in the Pacific northwest.

Stockton is probably better known as a football star. In his college days he was a star on the Gonzaga football team and since then has graduated into professional ranks with the famed Chicago team. Stockton was an amateur boxer and wrestler of importance in Spokane prior to turning pro, and has met some of the best men in the United States. There he is known as the Joe Savoldi of the west. Stockton will arrive in Nelson from Spokane on Thursday.

One other bout between a Nelson and a district wrestler will round out the program for the Opera house show of Saturday night.

RISKO OUTPOINTS HEENEY, 10 ROUNDS

TORONTO, April 6 (AP)—Johnny Risko, Cleveland baker boy, avenged his recent defeat at the hands of Tom Heeney, New Zealand heavyweight, by decisively outpointing the "hard rock from down under" in a gruelling 10-round bout here tonight.

Risko weighed 191½; Heeney 209½

CAMPBELL HAS A NARROW SHAVE IN RACE BROOKLANDS

Car of World's Premier Speed Driver Breaks Tie Rods at 100 Miles Per Hour

BROOKLANDS, Eng., April 6—(AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell, world's automobile speed champion, had what he described himself as the narrowest shave of his life today in a race at the opening meeting of the famous Brooklands race track.

While his car was doing well over 100 miles an hour on the first lap of the opening race of the day, a 12-mile handicap affair, the tie rod holding the front wheels in position, snapped. The wheels locked and the car zig-zagged madly from side to side on a track slippery from recent rains.

With death threatening Campbell and the spectators who lined the rail on either side, the pilot managed to get the car under control. The broken rod ripped the spokes out of one of the wheels.

MONTREAL READY FOR NEXT GAME FOR STANLEY CUP

MONTREAL, April 6 (CP)—Same crowd which on Thursday night will cram Montreal forum to the rafters to see Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks clash in their deadlocked series for the Stanley cup, tonight gathered at the station to welcome Canadiens home from Chicago where they won one and lost one of the first two games in the three of five series. Black Hawks will arrive tomorrow morning and both teams will take things easy until Thursday night.

Hawks will be at full strength and ready to follow out Coach Dick Irvin's plans of carrying more and more speed in on the Canadien defence.

Canadiens chances depend upon the ability of Howie Morenz, Albert Leduc and Johnny Gagnon to be on deck Thursday. Howie was caught heavily on the shoulder in Sunday's game by Taffy Abel and suffered considerable pain on the journey back. Leduc is still in hospital with a concussion sustained in the series in which Canadiens put Boston Bruins out of further competition Gagnon left late tonight for Chicoutimi to attend the funeral of his father who died while Johnny was in Chicago. It is not expected that Armand Mondou will be in action for the first game although they may possibly play later in the series.

COAST BASEBALL STARTS TODAY

SAN FRANCISCO, April 6—Baseball's 1931 race for the Pacific Coast league pennant gets under way tomorrow with the eight clubs more evenly matched than last year and a 26-weeks straight schedule in place of the split season in effect since 1928.

Big League BASEBALL

Position on Base

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher, New York Giants)

Always bear in mind that you should so station yourself as to be able to keep your body inside of the base, by standing, if possible, on the fair side of the foul line. A wild throw from an infielder of course, will drive you out of position if the ball is over your head or into the runner.

The longest and best reach is gained by stretching forward as far as possible with the left foot in contact with the base. It is a common fault among beginners to fumble around with the right foot for the base on a low throw or close play. This is called "crossing the feet."

Using the left foot as the "jabbing foot" gives greater freedom and wider area of play.

Place the left foot on the base and reach out for the ball. Then try with the right foot and notice what an unsatisfactory position it is.

In the double play illustrated above, the ball is hit to the second baseman with runner on first; man on first running for second stops to avoid being touched. Second baseman runs him back to first, then throws to first baseman, putting out batter. Runner starts for second. He has to be touched to be put out, which results from the first baseman throwing to the shortstop covering second base.

Al Demaree has prepared an illustrated leaflet on "Base Running" which he will gladly send to any reader requesting it. Address Al Demaree in care of this paper and be sure to enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope

FRANCE BEATS ENGLAND 14-13, INTERNATIONAL

Will Probably Be Last Game Between Two Nations for a Season

PARIS, April 6 (C P cable)—Behind a few seconds from time, France, by a spectacular drop kick by Baillette won their international rugby match from England today by one point. The scores were: France, 14; England, 13. Owing to the ultimatum of the British Rugby unions to the French federation that the latter must discipline a "rebel" organization known as the "Douze" before further international matches can be played, today's match will likely be the last between the countries for at least a season.

While, owing to the dissention in the ranks of French rugby, France's team was not the strongest it could field, it played a splendid game, twice coming from behind. The score at half time was five points to four in England's favor.

The match attracted only 20,000 people, a small crowd for a holiday international rugby match.

England scored on converted tries by Tallent and Smeddle and an unconverted try by Arnold. France's points came from two dropped goals by Bailette, the first from 50 yards out, and unconverted tries by Gallia and Clady.

JACK DEMPSEY TO RETIRE FROM THE REFEREEING GAME

COLUMBUS, Ohio., April 6 (AP)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, here to referee a boxing bout between Bushy Graham and Johnny Farr, announced tonight that after tomorrow night he was going into absolute retirement from public life for at least two months on the order of his physicians at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Dempsey's decision necessitates the cancelling of more than 95 engagements to referee boxing bouts in all sections of the country. He will retire after a bout Tuesday at Wheeling, W. Va.

Nervous condition and persistent loss of weight makes necessary the rest.

ROSENBLOOM IS OUTPOINTED BY JONES, 10 ROUNDS

PITTSBURGH, April 6 (AP)—Maxie Rosenbloom, Philadelphia, 179, light heavyweight champion, took things easy too long in a 10-round fight here tonight with Billy Jones, negro, 176, also of Philadelphia, and Jones was given a referee's decision. The champion's title was not involved.

PETER B. KYNE'S HORSE WINS RACE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 6 (AP)—In a surprise victory today, Bonfield, owned by Peter B. Kyne and ridden by J. Maiben, led the field in the Santa Rosa purse, feature event of the day's meet at Tanforan. Time for the mile and 70 yards was 1:43.

Foolhardy set the early pace but weakened to take third, while Upright, also in the fore at the start, finished out of the money.

Five-dollar preferred options on Bonfield were redeemed for $57 while $4 secondary options returned $22. Four-dollar secondary options on Shasta Broom brought $8.

There will be no races tomorrow on account of the opening of the Pacific Coast league baseball season.

PEDEN ENTERS IN CANADIAN BICYCLE GRIND

MONTREAL, April 6 (CP)—William "Torchy" Peden, former Canadian Olympic rider, was the first entry in Montreal's fourth six-day race which starts here a week from Sunday night. Peden's entry was received over the week end and is the only entry to date although the outstanding Canadian riders as well as many racers from the United States and several Europeans are expected to take part.

Peden, on his past form, should be an outstanding contender for the Canadian six-day crown. He has finished in second place in the three previous races, each time with a different partner. It was learned tonight that if possible Peden will be teamed up with another strong Canadian rider in an attempt to provide an all-Canadian team of winning calibre.

The red-thatched Victoria flash, has participated in four six-day events since last fall, two each in Chicago and New York, and is said to be in good condition for the local grind.

A writer says pedestrians must play the game with motorists. They do—hop, skip and jump.

BRYNJOLFSON IS WINNER OF GOLF TITLE, UPLANDS

Has Won Three Major Tournaments in the Past 12 Months at Coast

VICTORIA, April 6—Harold Brynjolfson of the Uplands club, Victoria, this afternoon won the British Columbia amateur golf championship, defeating his club mate Bob Morrison two up in the final 36 holes.

In winning the title today Brynjolfson achieved a record which has only been equalled once in British Columbia. The victory brought him three championships over a period of 12 months, the British Columbia, Victoria city and Uplands golf club titles.

A gallery of 1500 watched the match, the last 18 of which was played in a drizzling rain. It was Brynjolfson's fine short game that carried him through to victory. He was extremely deadly with his chips to the green and on the carpet. His iron shots, however, were not so accurate as those of his opponent. Morrison failed to display his usual putting form and missed some from short distances.

Brynjolfson turned in a card of 72 for the morning round and a 73 in the afternoon for a total of 145. Morrison carded a 74 and a 72 for 146.

TOILERS BEAT REGINA HOOP PLAYERS, 24-22

REGINA, Sask., April 6—Winnipeg's far famed Toilers, twice holders of the Dominion basketball championship, eked out a 24 to 22 victory over the Regina Capitals here tonight in the first of a two-game series in the western Canada playdown and will carry a two-point advantage into the second game tomorrow night.

A brilliant comeback midway through the second half of the game, helped out when the shooting of the Capitals fell below par, was responsible for the Toilers' triumph and they overcame a nine point deficit in that stirring rally and went on to win by the narrow margin of one field basket.

SUNSHINE FEED POULTRY NEED

In a pamphlet just issued by the experimental farms branch of the department of agriculture a special study of the value of cod liver oil for poultry is presented. This is a valuable pamphlet for any poultry-keeper to have and is available without charge from the publications branch of the department at Ottawa.

The value of cod liver oil in a poultry ration arises through the supply of vitamine D content which it ensures. Some of the reasons why it should be fed are summarized in the pamphlet as follows:

The use of cod liver oil is shown to have increased egg production by approximately four eggs per bird per month.

The addition of cod liver oil to the ration has not influence on the average weight of eggs produced.

The hatchability of eggs was increased by 15 per cent by the use of cod liver oil.

The death rate of the chicks hatched was reduced by 10 per cent by feeding cod liver oil to the breeding stock.

Cod liver oil may be fed daily in the moist mash or it may be mixed in the dry mash that is kept before the birds continuously.

Mixing cod liver oil with a flaky meal like bran and then mixing the oil-laden bran with the remainder of the meals will ensure an even distribution of oil.

Cod liver oil tends to become rancid and unpalatable if left exposed to sunshine or heat. Large quantities of a mixture of meal and oil should not be kept on hand during the warm weather.

LARGER FRUIT TONNAGE PREDICTED WEST KOOTENAY; STRAWBERRY CROP WILL BE ABOUT SAME IN CRESTON

Conditions in Boundary, East and West Kootenay Excellent After Winter

VICTORIA, April 6—In the Boundary district the 130 fruit crop has been practically cleaned up during the past few weeks, according to G. L. Landon, district agriculturist, Grand Forks. The apple crop was lower than expected, being about 47,000 boxes, the final prices not being known since many of the pools have not closed as yet.

Approximately 90 per cent of the potato crop has been marketed and the entire crop of onions sold. Most of the vegetable crop has been disposed of and prices have been fairly good considering the economic conditions.

There will probably be a smaller acreage of potatoes than in 1930 which was a record year for this district. Onions will probably be planted to the same extent of approximately 18 acres. Alfalfa hay acreage will be slightly increased and grain will likely show a decrease.

Fall wheat is showing up exceptionally well with prospects for a good crop, while some spring wheat has already been seeded. This is too early for safety, however.

TONNAGE GREATER?

Following a survey of the Kootenay and Arrow Lakes district, E. C. Hunt, district horticulturist, Nelson, has found that the small fruits and tree fruits have come through the winter in excellent shape and with favorable weather during the growing season the tonnage should be greater than last year.

Soil moisture conditions are very good and the spring-like weather early in March has brought about early planting of the cool-crop vegetables and general farm operations.

Live stock throughout the district has wintered well and feed conditions are in fair shape and sufficient to carry through.

The apple crop has been leaned up, the last car moving out the first week in March. Not a sufficient supply left in the district to supply local markets.

There may be a surplus of potatoes in the district, however, this will depend on the demand from lumber, mining and construction camps in the district that are operating or may operate well into the summer. The movement is slow at the present time, but there is considerable time left yet for the consumption of the old potatoes before the new crop comes in. The movement in other vegetables to local markets is quite good. Turnips slowing up some, but cabbage, beets, carrots and parsnips will clean up nicely. Local greenhouse radishes and lettuce are on the market, but not sufficient quantities to supply the local demand.

ANIMALS WINTER WELL

In the Creston valley, C. B. Twigg, district agriculturist, reports that the farmers have all the feed they need on hand, in fact the younger animals are on range on the Kootenay Flats. Animals have come through the winter in fair shape. Ewes with lambs on foot are turned out during the daytime. The price of beef is low at present but the local supply is about exhausted.

Pruning was completed early, most of it being completed during the open weather of February. The frost is out of the soil and plowing has started on the lighter soils. Buds are showing signs of growth which means that the dormant period of winter spraying is over. Much discussion is going on about future marketing conditions and many growers are changing their packing house.

The strawberry acreage will be about the same as last year. Spring planting may be a little heavier this season, as many growers are willing to try out the British Sovereign. No record yields can be expected this season as last fall was too dry and the frost in the soil is bound to do some damage.

Raspberries are becoming more popular since the introduction of irrigation into East Creston. Viking and Latham are two new varieties which are becoming popular.

No frost injury to buds or canes is anticipated. Though the growth of the young canes suffered somewhat from the continued drought last summer, good yields can be expected this year.

Growers are just getting the greenhouses ready for tomato seed planting. The acreage this year should be well-maintained.

Fertilizers in the orchards are being more universally used, one firm having a carload on order.

Tulips and Narcissi have made more rapid growth the last week and are now up four to six inches, also outdoor rhubarb is well advanced in the Erickson area.

"She only came this morning and does not know yet if she will stay."

CHICAGO WHEAT TURNS DOWNWARD

Weakness Is Result of Increased Selling; Visible Wheat Supply Down

CHICAGO, Ill., April 6. (Jy John P. Boughan, Associated Press market editor)—Despite the first reduction that the United States visible supply has shown in many weeks, grain prices took a downward course today. The weakness was result of increased selling pressure ascribed largely to Winnipeg traders, and was in striking contrast with Saturday's lively advance.

Auspicious crop reports from domestic winter wheat territory, the southwest in particular, tended further to give a constant advantage to bears. Wheat closed nervous, unchanged to 1⅜ cents lower; corn, 1 to 1½ cents down; oats, ⅛ to ⅜ cent off; and provisions unchanged to 5 cents up.

WINNIPEG WHEAT TURNS BULLISH

Prices Shoot Up Two Cents on the Strength of the Chicago Wheat

WINNIPEG, Man., April 6. (CP)—Wheat values today displayed a bullish aspect on the grain exchange for the first time in many days. Advances on the Chicago market Saturday turned the bears from the pit when trading opened this morning, and prices shot up more than two cents on the strength of the rise in the southern city.

Early advances were cut fractionally before the close. Final quotations were 1¾ cents to 2 2 cents above Thursday's figures, with May wheat at 59¾ cents per bushel; July, 60 to 60⅛, and October 61¾. Fractional gains were also marked up in cash wheat and coarse grains.

TAKING CENSUS DIFFICULT JOB

Finding Out Whether or Not Others Have Work Proves Hazardous Occupation

BOSTON, Mass, April 6—Some days ago a crew of 146 men and six women set out to ascertain the number of their fellow citizens who are without work. The idea may or may not have been quite sound. At any rate, the census takers had a job and they sallied forth with little debate as to whether or not man has any humanity to man.

When a person misses a meal he becomes more serious. An absence of two or three consecutive meals is apt to produce a certain irritation, and when 24 hours or more pass without food, the spirit of geniality is lost. Then, again, many unemployed persons are married and these individuals frequently have children. An imposing sum results when lack of sustenance for heads of families is added to the knowledge that offspring are suffering from similar undernourishment. Moreover, phases of the situation such as unpaid rent, impoverished dwellings and inadequate clothing are not to be lightly considered.

The truth of these conclusions found agreement with one census taker as he was chased down a West End street by a jobless individual, who, refusing to be questioned, had seized a knife with the too apparent intention of carving himself some meat.

Another gatherer of these interesting statistics had gone three weeks without a scratch. Fellow workers regarded him enviously. He had one page of his questionnaire finished and only a few calls to make. Then he stopped at a home in South Boston. The residents made no threatening gestures, scarcely raised a voice. They merely left the room. Curiously enough, a huge police dog then gamboled into the kitchen. The visitor spent the night nursing a severe bite in his left leg.

Trouble broke out in another part of South Boston when a woman insisted with surprising vigor that she did not care to be questioned. Inconsistent so far as the alleged feminine attribute of disclosing secrets is concerned, she even refused the police information, and this after being carried by a sturdy group from her home to a court house.

Census taking was relieved from monotony in other little ways. Six men sustained broken arms and legs when they fell downstairs, accidentally or otherwise, and slipped on ice-coated sidewalks. Twelve men, unable to avoid grippe germs, took to their beds.

Now the census is complete. And Supervisor Louis B. Sensale, who superintended the job, sighed with relief as he scanned a list of the maimed, injured and sick, and realized the work was over.

LIQUOR STORE LOSES HALF A DOZEN BOTTLES

OLIVER, B. C., April 6.—For the third time in as many years, the government liquor store here was broken into early Sunday morning. The thieves were disturbed, and escaped with only six bottles of liquor. Entrance was gained by breaking the glass in the front door and prying off the heavy iron bars.

DROWNED BODY IDENTIFIED

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 6.—The decomposed body of a man found Thursday in the Fraser river at the foot of Yukon street, lodged in a boom of logs, has been identified as that of F. C. C. Eines, 35, Vancouver, who was accidentally drowned on January 7 while working on the tugboat Maagen. The deceased was employed by the Blue Band Navigation Co. as mate on the tug.

Born in Norway, the deceased had resided in Vancouver 18 years.

A grist and feed mill is being opened at Bassano.

NEW YORK LIST IS IRREGULAR

Prices Lift at Opening From One to Three Points But Taper Off

NEW YORK, April 6. (AP)—Stocks began the normally dull post-Easter season today with a slow decline.

For scarcely an hour after the opening a carry-over from Saturday's covering lifted prices about 1 to 3 points, but the heaviness of U. S. Steel proved to be a burden which the highly professionay market was unprepared to shoulder, and prices tapered off.

Until the last hour the decline was so slow that trading occasionally was almost at a standstill. Activity increased toward the close when the bear faction grew a little bolder, and the market was at its weakest as the final transactions were made. Sales of only 1,500,000 shares were the smallest in two months.

U. S. Steel's decline of slightly more than 3 points put it down to 136¾, a new low for this year, and not far from the 1930 minimum of 134⅜.

Rails traded lightly, and were irregular when they did appear on the tape.

Pullman, International Cement, McKeesport Tin Plate, and Case, losing 3 to 4 points, were weaker than the general run of specialties, although Auburn, after skyrocketing 16 points to the new high of 274, closed 5 points net lower at 253. Eastman Kodak, Johns-Mannville, Westinghouse, Dupont, American Water Works and American Tobacco were down 2 or more at the close. American Telephone, Union Carbide, General Electric, Loew's and American Can lost a point.

Because of the holiday abroad, foreign exchanges were dull. The French franc sagged, but the German mark firmed moderately. Sterling was steady.

Marked weakness in foreign obligations and irregularly lower prices in most of the domestic issues characterized the bond market.

The market for obligations of the United States government was dull and prices of some of them showed small mixed changes.

STUDIO ACTING MUCH DIFFERENT FROM THE STAGE

Sir John Martin-Harvey Finds Out in Film Experience, He Explains

LONDON, April 6 (CP)—What film studio acting is different from stage acting has been realized recently by Sir John Martin-Harvey, actor manager, who at the Twickenham studio is working on "The Lyons Mail," which one of his old pupils, Arthur Maude, is producing. Speaking to a correspondent of the London edition of the Manchester Guardian Sir John said:

"I take my work on the stage to be my opportunity to convey whatever message I wish. Never hitherto have I produced a single play without feeling the imperative need of getting its message over to the audience. My conviction, based on some experience by now, is that good acting is largely dependent on the response which the audience makes to the actor. The response may be favorable or it may be unfavorable, but the audience is essential. There is a human touch in stage work which has its influence on those on the the stage.

"Here, however, there is no audience and consequently no reaction, and one is dependent for inspiration largely on one's own imagination. The main advantage of screen over stage work is that facial expression counts for so much more. In the ordinary theatre there is generally such a distance between the audience and the actor that the actor depends for effect on voice only. On the film, however facial expressions are reproduced with such wondrous exactness that they count for very much more. Science has succeeded in reproducing the words but not yet the variations in tones; and so certain personal characteristics of the actors are lost in the film. But this I believe will be remedied in time and that time may not be so distant as some imagine. But I cannot help feeling that as a religious service over the wireless is only a poor substitute for the human touch of worship in a church, so at best the film is but a substitute for real acting."

Wolves have become so bold in Moran township, 30 miles from the Canadian Soo, that it is claimed it is unsafe for woodcutters to be in the bush alone. One lumberman, driving with a horse and cutter, was pursued by a pack of wolves.

BLOCK WINNIPEG ELECTRIC STOCK GOES TO CHICAGO

Insull Interests by Share; Two New Directors Voted to the Board

WINNIPEG, Man., Apri 6. (CP)—The Insull interests of Chicago today acquired a substantial block of stock of the Winnipeg Electric company and at a meeting of the shareholders of the Winnipeg Electric two of their representatives were elected to the board. They are Foster Hanneford, Chicago, vice-president of the Middle West Utilities, and J. A. McPhail, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., president of the Great Lakes Power company. No other changes were made in the board of directors.

No official statement was made as to the amount of Winnipeg Electric company's stock the Insull interests have acquired.

There will be no change in the policy of the electric company, by reason of this infiltration of Insull, nor will there be any disturbance in control of the company.

Two weeks ago the Winnipeg Electric company offered to sell its tramways system to the city of Winnipeg for $14,000,000, and it stated that the matter would be given consideration. The question, however, has not yet come up before the civic transportation committee. It is expected that the offer will not be deliberated on until receipts of the report on prices of fares to be made by W. R. Cottingham, Manitoba public utilities commissioner.

GOODYEARS EXCEL
In the TWO Main Parts of a Tire

1 PRESS the palm of your hand down on the Goodyear All-Weather Tread and feel how the deep-cut, sharp-edged blocks under pressure grip and pinch the flesh. That is what the Goodyear Tread does on the surface of the road, and why it has superior traction.

THERE are two main parts of a tire—the tread and the carcass. Goodyear tires excel in both. There is greater traction in the Goodyear All-Weather Tread. There is greater vitality in the Goodyear Supertwist carcass. What proves this? These two tests.

2 HAVE us show you on our cordtesting machine the greater stretch in Goodyear Supertwist Cord over standard cord. This extra stretch gives the Goodyear Supertwist carcass its unmatched vitality, enabling it to withstand road-shocks and continuous flexing.

These advantages in Goodyear Tires cost you no more, yet they are indispensable to the utmost enjoyment of your car. Come in and talk it over.

RESURRECTION IS THEME OF EASTER WITH CATHOLICS

All Services at Church of Mary Immaculate Stress It

GONZAGA CHAPLAIN SPECIAL PREACHER

Same Theme Developed by Pastor in Addressing Children

In four services Sunday the first glad Easter day was commemorated at the Church of Mary Immaculate, when the theme of the resurrection was expounded in sermon and set forth in Easter music, Rev. J. C. McKenzie, the pastor, being assisted in the day's program by Rev. Cornelius E. Byrne, S.J., chaplain of Gonzaga university, Spokane, who was here for the Easter period.

The day's commemoration opened with Low Mass and Holy Communion at 7:30, Father Byrne being the celebrant.

At 9 was held a children's service, at which about 200 children were present, when Father McKenzie celebrated Low Mass, and the children's choir of 50 voices sang Easter hymns. In addressing the children, the pastor showed how Christ in His resurrection triumphed over sin and death. He drew a parallel between Christ's experience and the life of the Christian, pointing out that the individual fell into sin, which was spiritual death, but through the merits of Christ's death and resurrection was brought back to life again.

RESURRECTION THE KEYSTONE

Principal among the day's services was that at 10:30 in the forenoon, which opened with High Mass., Father McKenzie being the celebrant. The choir, led by Mrs. M. J. Vigneux, with Miss Albertine Choquette as organist, rendered Weigand's "Mass," and also the triumphant "Christus Resurrexit."

Father Byrne in an able sermon expounded the resurrection as the keystone of the Christian arch, and the foundation of Christian doctrine.

The service of the Benediction in the evening was conducted by the pastor, while Father Byrne was again the preacher.

CHOSEN METHOD OF PROOF

In this case the preacher developed the theme of the resurrection as proving Christ's divine origin and power, and as His deliberately chosen method of proof. In His ministry on earth, the preacher pointed out, Christ amply demonstrated his kingship by His works, but met with disbelief and hatred on the part of the Jewish priests. He then voluntarily accepted death on the cross and rose again to give the final proof.

Father Byrne vividly pictured the tomb to which His body was committed, guarded by a cordon of soldiers. Here for the first and only time in His ministry Christ used violence, an angel opposing force with force, and dispersing or overaweing the soldiers, rolling away the stone. The soldiers reported the facts to the high priest, and the impossible story was devised that the disciples stole Christ's body from the tomb while the soldiers slept—the timid disciples had fled from the scene believing that all was over.

UNBELIEVERS CUT OFF

After this display of His might, Christ was done with His enemies and thereafter disregarded them, showing Himself to His followers only.

Applying this lesson to present day life, the preacher warned his hearers that those who refused to believe the evidences of Christ's power and mission would be cut off in the same manner as His enemies among the Jews.

KELOWNA ORANGE HALL BURNS

KELOWNA, B. C., April 6.—The Orange hall, scene of the recent provincial convention, was almost completely destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon, little more than the walls remaining. Much of the equipment and regalia was saved. The origin of the fire is unknown. The building was only recently erected. A fair amount of insurance was carried.

CUT THREE DAYS FROM LONDON TO AFRICA FLIGHT

Commander G. Kidston Shows Up Time for Proposed Air Mail Flight

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, April 6 (C P cable via Reuters)—Notwithstanding mechanical difficulties, such a plugs sooting and trouble with the oiling system of the plane encountered during the stage of the flight, Commander Glen Kidston, with two companions, today completed a flight from Motheravon, England, to Cape Town, inside six and a half days, cutting three days off the previous record.

The two mishaps—one yesterday and one today—cost him five hours in his flight to show up what he calls the tortoise like speed of the British post office and air ministry, which have projected a 12-day air mail schedule between England and South Africa.

With Commander Kidston, a millionaire sportsman, were Cathcart Jones, one of the most experienced of Great Britain's pilots. He carried a wireless operator to Egypt, then dropped him for a mechanic.

OLD RECORD NINE AND A HALF DAYS

The previous record for a flight from England to Cape Town was made by Casper Entheus, a South African, who completed the journey in nine and a half days.

Commander Kidston is commonly held to have lived a charmed life. He was a naval cadet at the age of 15 years on H. M. S. Hogue when she was torpedoed and sunk at the beginning of the war. He was saved after two and a half hours in the water. His next ship also was torpedoed the same day as he joined her. He was rescued with a wife in 1927 when his racing motorboat sank. He also crashed in the White Nile in the same airplane from which the Belgian banker, Lowenstein, fell into the English channel, and he was the sole survivor of the German airliner which crashed at Caterham in 1928. He was badly burned but immediately went up in another machine in order to "steady his nerves." His narrow escapes from death on motor racing tracks are innumerable.

MRS. BENZIES AND DAUGHTER, NELSON, INJURED IN AUTO

TRAIL, B. C., April 6—Mrs. Marie Benzies and Miss Frances Benzies of Nelson are in Trail-Tadanac hospital for examination following a car accident near Kinnaird, on the Trail-Nelson highway, this morning. Mr. Benzies, who was driving, was only slightly injured.

The party had been here over the week end to visit Mr. and Mrs Benzies' son, and were returning to Nelson. Mr. Benzies, driving a car to which he was unaccustomed, stepped on the gas instead of the brake and the car turned over in soft gravel, making a complete somersault. He drove the car to Trail under its own power.

Mrs. Benzies and Miss Benzies were brought here by the Trail-Nelson bus, and removed to hospital. They are not, it is believed, seriously hurt.

"MARRIED LOVE" ADMISSABLE

NEW YORK, April 6—(AP)—Federal Judge Woolsey today dismissed a federal libel under which the government sought to confiscate an expurgated copy of "Married Love" by Dr. Marie Stopes of London. He held that in Philadelphia Federal court decision gainst the government in similar proceedings had established that the work was admissable into the country. He also declared the book was neither immoral nor obscene, but "highly informative."

ASK THAT THE ABITIBI PAPER MILL BE OPENED

An inspector of the force will reach Trail in due course to make an examination with a view to issuing a permanent license.

The department of customs has under consideration the removal of the customs office to Columbia Gardens, thus making a customs airport.

W. K. Esling, the West Kootenay member, is keeping the department fully informed in connection with the improvements at the Columbia Gardens airport.

AUSTRALIA HAS TAKEN FORWARD STEPS, SURGERY

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 6 (CP)—Australia has taken a step upward in its surgeons' college, and is now entitled to the prefix "Royal." Information has come from the prime minister's department, London, that his majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the prefix "Royal" for the college, which, in consequence, will be known as the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons.

The college is an Australian and New Zealand organization, and its chief objects are to improve the standards of surgery and of surgical training and research. To further these objects and to assist Australasian graduates who cannot afford the time and expense involved in a visit to England for the purpose, the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons has arranged with the Royal College of Surgeons of England that the primary fellowship examination of the Royal College of Surgeons of England shall be held in Australia. A cable message has been received from the secretary of the Royal College of Surgeons of England that the examination will begin in Melbourne on August 11.

The aims and functions of the Australasian college are similar to those of the English college, and a close association has arisen between the two colleges. A gratifying expression of this is the fact that the council of the Royal College of Surgeons of England is presenting a mace to the Australasian college. The president of the Royal College of Surgeons, Lord Moynihan, will visit Australia early in 1932 to present the mace. Lord Moynihan, besides being one of England's greatest surgeons, is one of her greatest orators. He has done more than any other surgeon to further the knowledge of abdominal surgery, and the fact that he will personally present the mace is regarded as a special honor for the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons.

The mace, which is an exact replica of one given as a mark of royal authority to the English college, is being designed and executed by Omar Ramsden, a famous London silversmith. It will bear the arms of the English college, the arms of the Australasian college, which have been granted to it by the College of Heralds, the arms of Australia and the arms of New Zealand. Special permission has been granted by his majesty for the use of the orb and cross in the design of the mace.

Lady Syme and her children have given the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons the sum of $12,500, to form a research endowment fund in memory of the late Sir George Syme, the first president of the college. The interest derived from this amount will be applied to foster surgical research, particularly in diseases common in Australia. The results of this research work will be presented in an annual memorial oration, called the Syme oration, which will be delivered at the annual general meeting of the college.
