He added at it might be that "we should seriously consider interfering with the port of ores, so as to assure their finement on this side." The government expected to be able to announce mineral production this year of ,000,000,000.

Another feature of the premier's address was announcement that "We now ve negotiations on foot with a company which wants to buy one million res in the north, and we are making careful investigation of this plan, as want to be sure about the purchasers, and the result of the proposed al."

Dr. Tolmie announced that the government would send to the imperial thorities before the end of the year, haustive information on the resources and industrial possibilities of e province. The premier declared at absolute harmony pervaded provincial Conservatism and that the cus of Conservative members in ctoria, during the week had ended h the best feelings that he had r witnessed in such a gathering.

The premier explained the Alaska hway project which he said the provincial Liberal leader, T. D. Pattullo, d hopelessly misunderstood and ich had been widely misrepresented. e proposal was simply that in future d construction in the north, the vince should build to an ordered n, so that some day the highway tem would reach the Yukon, and n Alaska.

QUANDER MANIA

The opposition leader, Premier Tolmie said, attacked the government for squander mania. Actually the lander mania of the Liberal minry had created such a difficult situon that the new government had nd 84 per cent of its revenue rtgaged, and committed, leaving only per cent controllable.

n land settlement schemes the old ernment had lost $5,000,000. About s Mr. Pattullo had said only that was gratified the loss was not more, blamed the entire trouble on rened soldiers.

These problems were not due to the rans," the premier asserted, "and ay it was a crime to put them on e of the land selected. What had returned men to do with Sumas ch was to cost $1,800,000, and cost 00,000- What had returned men to with South Okanagan, which was cost $900,000, and cost our $4,000,- and of which Mr. Pattullo is so d?

EAK SOLDIERS' HEARTS

And there was the Christian ranch ght for a large sum without a er supply, and Creston in the same dition, and Merville, which was ul only to break the soldiers' hearts disgust them with agriculture ver."

CUSS TAXES

he premier emphasized that the ernment had in no sense sponsored me tax schools and was simply intigating the whole problem of ool finances.

e outlined in detail the government's efforts to aid agriculture through marketing acts; loans to berry wers; experiments in apple cold age and in legislation covering the of milk in Vancouver.

urning to land settlement he told the government had begun to retulate the Creston settlement with ater system, and had settled 20 ilies there. Others would come e told of his arrangement with Canadian railways to secure for nagan fruit, shipped to the coast, same as charged in the United es, but added this plan would be up pending the report of Sanford s, special fruit investigator.

WILL DELAY OPENING OF PARLIAMENT

Appointment Finance Minister Causes Delay; Dunning Likely Appointee

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—The appointment of Hon. C. A. Dunning as minister of finance will likely be announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King within the next few days. The appointment of a man to succeed Mr. Dunning as minister of railways may be left in abeyance for some time. Although neither Mr. King nor Mr. Dunning had any statement to make on their return to Ottawa, early this morning, it is understood from other sources that a decision has been reached to make Mr. Dunning head of the finances of the Dominion.

The train which brought the prime minister back to the capital also carried Hon. Charles Stewart and Hon. Dr. King as well as Mr. Dunning.

The death of Hon. James Robb, minister of finance, may delay the opening of parliament. Had Mr. Robb not been stricken, he would likely have had a considerable portion of the estimates and the budget ready by now. Mr. King take the position that it is better to assembue parliament somewhat later if needs be in order to have enough business ready to keep the commons going on full steam once the session has opened. It is expected that this will be possible before the end of February.

Although the funeral service was private, schoolmates of Ruby and the United church Sunday school of which she was a member, and many friends in town and district, who could not attend, sent beautiful floral tributes.

Mr. and Mrs. Dolson had lived here for the past seven years.

Homesteader Burns Death In His Home

CALGARY, Nov. 24.—Trapped in his burning home, James Irwin, 67 years old, a lone homesteader in the Jackass canyon district, about 14 miles northwest of Cochrane, was burned to death during the early hours of Sunday morning. A few charred bones were all that were found of the deceased. Dr. T. A. Wright, coroner, was notified, and it is not likely that an inquest will be held.

Irwin was seen in Cochrane Saturday afternoon when he made his purchases for the week-end. He left Cochrane at about 6 o'clock and proceeded on his way home. At six oclock Sunday morning a neighbor saw Irwin's home blazing. He could render no help and police after the fire cooled found only a human skull and calcined thigh bones.

The deceased is native of Truro, N.S., and leaves a widow and two daughters in that city. He came west 15 or 16 years ago, taking up a homestead in the Cochrane district.

PAIR FREEZE TO DEATH ON ICE OF LAKE

Terrific Storm Sweeps Lake Winnipeg; One Man Badly Frozen

MAY LOSE HIS FEET AS RESULT

Two Shore Residents Rescue Seven Others From Sure Death on Lake

WINNIPEG, Nov. 24.—Terrific wind and snow storms that blew over Manitoba with blizzard-like ferocity last week took two lives and endangered eight others, it was revealed here Saturday. In a driving northwest gale, accompanied by a blinding snow storm, three fishermen, returning from their nets on Lake Winnipeg, were lost in the blizzard for nearly 24 hours and only one of them lives to tell the tragic details.

He, Jacob Schlidt, lies in St. Boniface hospital here, and if his life is to be saved, both feet must be amputated.

Seven men were rescued from an ice floe in Lake Manitoba, off Langruth, last Thursday, by the heroic efforts of two neighbors.

The fury of a northwet gale on Lake Winnipeg proved too much for the stamina of Fred Obach, Gimli, Man., and Meny Magnusson, Arbourg, Man., both fishermen. They fell to the ice of the lake after wandering helplessly about on the snow-covered surface for hours, frozen and tired. Their companion, Schlidt, remained with them until he was sure nothing could be done to save their lives, and then found his way several hours later to shore—and shelter.

CONDITION SERIOUS

Badly frozen, suffering from exposure, Schlidt was brought to Winnipeg Saturday afternoon, and his condition is regarded as serious. He faces the prospect of having both his feet amputated as soon as he is strong enough to stand the operation. His feet are so badly frozen that amputation is considered necessary by attending physicians.

Schlidt, with Obach and Magnusson, left last Tuesday morning from Camp Morton to set fishing nets on the lake. They started from their fishing grounds early that afternoon on the return journey.

They had walked only a little way when Obach and Schlidt fell through the ice and were nearly drowned in the cold waters.

They were rescued by Magnusson who, with a running pole used to set their nets, pulled them out.

Nearly frozen in the below-zero temperature, the three men continued their journey over the glassy ice surface headed for Camp Morton, but became lost when a storm suddenly broke from the northwest. Whirling blizzards of snow baffled the trio in a few minutes and their wanderings became more hopeless every hour.

FROZEN, EXHAUSTED

Night brought little relief from the storm and early Wednesday morning Magnusson and Obach fell flat on the ice, frozen and exhausted. They died in a short time and Schlidt, nearly frozen himself, took up the search for the shore line alone. Late in the day he succeeded staggering over the snow-covered shore, he found an abandoney cabin and found shelter there from the storm, remaining until morning.

He found his way to Camp Mitchell, near Moore Island, and received medical attention, while a search party set out and found thet frozen bodies of his comrades.

Schlidt was taken by dog team to Fisher lake and thence to Hudson by automobile, where he was put aboard a train for Winnipeg.

SAVE SEVEN LIVES

Only the fortunate presence on the shore of Bjor Christianson and the valor of Christianson and Valde Jonasson, both residents of Langruth saved the lives of seven men who were drifting in Lake Manitoba on an ice floe. Darkness was setting in when Christianson glanced over the lake and saw the unfortunate seven being carried out to sea. They were nearly five miles from shore but Christianson and Jonasson immediately set out in a small boat and succeeded in bringing them safely to shore.

They made three trips through waters that had been blown into a fury by strong winds.

The seven were fishing two miles off shore when a storm suddenly came up and the three-inch thick ice on which they were standing broke away before they could retreat towards shore. They were being carried further out and in a few minutes would have been lost from sight of Langruth when Christianson saw them.

Those rescued were John Thornstein, K. Mathews, L. Armstrong, three brothers named Patterson and a young lad whose name is not known here.

Most of the fishing town of Langruth gathered at the lake side to witness one of the most sensational lake rescues ever effected in that district.

HEAVY GALES IN PORTUGAL CAUSE FEAR

Troops Rushed to Stricken Area; Fear Lives May Be Lost

LISBON, Portugal, Nov. 24—Troops from neighboring districts tonight were rushed to the northeast coast where a fierce Atlantic gale was reported to have done great damage. It was feared that there had been severe loss of life, but broken communications prevented any exact extent of the destruction.

Torrential rains and floods hit the town of Valle De Vez. The Iima river burst its banks, swept away bridges, uprooted trees and carried off cattle. The populace fled in panic before the swirling waters. Early reports described peasants marooned on cottage roofs screaming for help.

Enormous damage was done to crops.

CONSERVATIVES LEAVE P.G.E. TO THE GOVERNMENT

KAMLOOPS, Nov. 24.—That the Conservative party wants the Pacific Great Eastern railway pressed through to the Peace River as soon as possible, but is prepared to let the provincial government work out this problem in its own way, was indicated by the party convention here today when it endorsed the government's railway program.

This decision followed efforts by Northern Conservatives to pledge the party to the proposed railway extension

Premier Tolmie said the government fully realized the importance of a Peeac river link but could not interrupt its present arrangements with the C.P.R. and the C.N.R. by which the railway situation is being surveyed.

The opinion of the party on the proposed increase in gasolint taxation was not clearly indicated. A resolution from South Vancouver disapproving any increase was not endorsed, but no action was taken to approve the increase.

A resolution favoring the payment of mother's pensions at once, on proof of desertion, was referred to the attorney-general, as was the proposed creation of a land office registry at Prince George.

The convention endorsed the efforts of the government to solve school taxation problems but took no definite action on this matter.

Hon. N. S. Lougheed, minister of public works, was asked to consider a resolution from Revelstoke, urging construction of the Big Bend road by day labor wherever possible.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Blake, have been residents of the town for three years.

Ella Weiss, 6, living 15 miles south of Irvine, died in the Medicine Hat general hospital on Saturday of injuries sustained when she was struck by a car on Saturday evening. John Trefoski of Irvine was the driver of the car and the little girl was struck on Bridge street, Medicine Hat. An inquest is called for Monday afternoon.

'Tiger of France' to Be Quietly Buried by Side of Father Today

Wished No State Funeral; Left Word in Will Regarding Service; France's War Premier Buried Standing Erect in Wooded Cemetery

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Georges Clemenceau, the Tiger of France is dead.

The 88 year old statesman died at his residence here early Sunday morning having failed to recover consciousness from an absolute coma into which he lapsed at 11 p.m. Saturday. Dr. Laubry, his personal physicial, had been hurriedly summoned to his patient's bedside and which was just in time to enable his old friend to die in his arms. Madame Jacque Marie and Michael Clemenceau, daughter and son of the Tiger, were also at the bedside.

Dr. Jacque Marc, a grandson, who had watched in the sick chamber during the last hours with other members of the family, stepped from the little house in the Rue Franklin, into the court yard and announced to the waiting newspaper man at 2 a.m.:

"Grandfather has just died."

Clemenceau, the grand old man of France, died fighting as he lived. The last illness began on Thursday.

The last words that the Tiger pronounced in the final lucid spell Saturday night, were an expression of staisfaction. "My work is finished," he told Dr. Laubry.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Georges Clemenceau, the father of victory, his sufferings ended early today by death which closed 88 years of a fighting life, tonight was being taken for eternal rest in the loneliness of a little wood near Montchamps in his beloved vendee.

Th man who had been a firm and fiery premier for France in her trial of the World war, rode through the darkness in an automobile hearse over 250 miles of road toward the southeast to a spot within 30 miles of the sea he loved so well.

There he will be buried tomorrow morning under the trees in a grave that his chauffeur and friend, M. Brabant, dug for him today. He will enter the soil of his France for which he had fought so vigorously at a spot he himself had selected. The grave will be marked by a stone, friends had sent from Greece, which he had erected several years ago with few, if any sharing his secret.

He will be buried upright as his father was before. What he desired above alll was to carry out to the end his appearance of a hard exterior, which all knew covered a warm heart. He lived and wanted to die "a man," in one of his last lucid moments on his death-bed he said "I want no women; I want no tears. Let me die before men."

NO CEREMONY

Clemenceau in death, as in life, rejected ostentation and ceremony. He asked that when death came to him taht he should be permitted merely to disappear. He wished a funeral as quiet, as drab, as bare as those for a million of "his boys", killed in the long struggle which his leadership had helped turn to a triumph, and caused a then feverishly grateful parliament to acclaim him "father of victory."

The simplicity of the burial will make it seem almost secret. Premier Andrew Tardieu a close friend, was called to the death chamber in the house in Rue Franklin shortly after the death at 1:45 a.m. He told the family of the government's wish to give the statesman a national funeral. He knew, as the family did, that Clemenceau had wished exactly the reverse, and when the will opened at 10:00 a.m., that wish was formally expressed.

M. Brabant left by automobile within an hour after the death to dig the grave for his beloved master.

This was all a part of the carefully arranged plan of Clemenceau.

WISHES CARRIED OUT

Three years ago at Luxembourg he had told a group of senators, "You know when I die it wont be announced. You will learn of it only after my burial. I have made provisions for that."

M. Tardieu respected the wishes of his friend, and cut red tape to facilitate privacy at the burial. He ordered a cordon of gendarmes thrown about the woods.

Yet, while the simple ceremony is taking place in that faroff, lonely spot, at exactly the same hour the "cannon of the armistice" that sounded the last note of the world war, will again fire, and exactly the same salute of 101 shots, as it did at 11 o'clock on November 11, in 1918.

Every battery of artillery in France and her colonies and the guns of every French warship afloat on whatever seas, will answer that salute in memory of the man who, for France, really won the war.

Next Sunday veterans of France, men whom Clemenceau saw when he went to the front line trenches, will march in a public funeral procession past the grave of the unknown soldier at Napoleon's great Arc de Triomphe.

PEOPLE GATHER

Soon after dawn today, people began to gather before the modest home where the Tiger had lived for 35 years. Inside the house, Albert, faithful valet of the statesman, and Sister Theonoeste, his faithful nurse, prepared Clemenceau for his long rest. They put on him a grey suit and on his head the little, worn horizon-blue soldier's "bonnet" that he liked to wear. It was one he had worn in the trenches under fire and which had been pictured in newspapers all over the world. They propped him in the strange bed which has been carved to his order with fabulous monsters, and placed a white bedspread over. M. Tardieu, some other old friends, and a very few dignatories, were admitted to the chamber during the morning.

It was not until after dark that a light oak casket, with gilded handles, was brought and the body placed in it.

It was then carried out to a swift, black hearse that started at once through the dark on the strange and solemn journey to the grave in Vendee.

All day long a stream of people passed through the entry signing the register and leaving cards. The family carried out the wish of Clemenceau for privacy and withheld plans for burial.

FATE OF FOLKS ON FLAT ISLE CAUSES WORRY

Cable Communication Not Restored; Burin Relief Goes on

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 24—As salvage operations went forward and relief funds grew, there was some apprehension here today for the people of Flat island, unheard from since Monday's tidal wave took more than a score of lives on the Burin coast. Cable communications, broken off on Monday, have not been renewed.

A number are on the way to learn the fate of the low lying island, which is situated eight miles off the coast in Placenta bay.

The island is not, however, in the zone most seriously affected by the wave.

At Port Au Bras, the bodies of four women who lost their lives, have been recovered. They were Mrs. Thomas Fudge, Harriett Fudge, Mrs. Samuel Bennett and Mrs. William Allin.

The minister of fisheries, reporting tonight from the stricken area, said that out of 17 dwellings at Taylor's Cove, only five are habitable. The tidal wave there is said to have reached a height of 100 feet, and houses were demolished or shifted in all directions.

The steamer Daisy is attempting to salvage some of the boats set adrift by the tide, and the relief committee is distributing coal, provisions and clothing.

In St. John's the fund for relief has already reached the $10,000 mark. Offers of assistance have been received from the Canadian and United States Red Cross, and tomorrow night a public meeting will be held for organization purposes.

NEW VANCOUVER FREIGHT OFFICE TO OPEN UP TODAY

VANCOUVER, Nov. 24—Said to be the finest building of its kind on the entire system, the C.P.R.'s new Cancouver freight office will be opened to the public Monday. A staff of 50 workers in the local freight office were Saturday engaged in moving furniture from their temporary offices in the sheds to their new quarters in a building which is 163 feet by 72 feet, two storys in height.

Beautiful and smart in appearance the new freight office is built of clayburn brick, faced with attractive British Columbia stone and tapestry brick. In addition to facilities for serving the public, which are the latest and best available, the new building has spacious rest rooms for men and women employees. The new building is situated on Pender street at the intersection of Abbot, in the heart of the warehouse district.

Old English Plays Strong in Gay Paree

PARIS, Nov. 24.—After three centuries, and despite all the competing or revue and talkie, Ben Jonson and Shakespeare still play to crowded houses in Paris. Both these old rivals of the Elizabethan stage have undergone some modification in their French dress, but in "Volpone" and the "Merry Wives" they are there none the less. "Volpone" is so successful as to lead Rene Clair, one of the younger producers to declare: "The tide has turned in favor of the legitimate stage again. The cinema never could draw the crowd away from the play like 'Volpone."

and "Volpone" is playing cheek by jowl with the modern thriller of Montmartre. One has to climb the famous hill to find it, pass round the Palace Pigalle and by the Moulin de la Galette to the most sophisticated square in the world. There above the doorway of the Theatre de l'Atelier electric lights pick out the words: "Volpone—Ben Jonson." Just across the way is one of the biggest talkie-houses in Paris.

It is a typical Parisian crowd that one finds in the Atelier. Not a seat is empty. Girls whose trim figures drove the tight skirt and long sloppy jumper from the world of fashion. Art students—Independents, True Independents and Super Independents with their studios in Montmartre. Young dramatic writers; frequenters of night clubs And foreigners sprinkled here and there about the theatre, not so numerous now as earlier in the year.

The producer of "Merry Wives" has had the diverting idea of producing it in a modern setting. The repartee is translated into an up-to-date argot and the building humor set to music. So one is rather puzzled at times to know whether it is an operetta set in picturesque Windsor or an Elizabethan comedy. Like "Volpine" it is running a triumphal course.

So while modern dramatists anxiously scan the horizon to see what new disaster may come from across the sea, the hardy Elizabethans score two successes of the year before the footlights of Paris.

Gladstone and Wife Characters in London Play

LONDON, Nov. 24.—"A tender trifle with a punning title," is the way a local dramatic critic described "Mr. Gladstone's comforter," the one-act play by Lawrence Housman, author and artist, which was recently presented at the Lyric theatre, Homersmith, by Sir Nigel Playfair, lessee and manager.

"Mrs. Gladstone is in the habit of knitting for the Grand Old Man woollen comforters, which he invariably loses," the critic says. "She herself, of course, is his comforter in the bigger sense. We see them on the night in 1894 when John Morley breaks to her the news that her husbands Irish plans have failed, and that he is to see the Queen at Windsor with his resignation on the following day. That, practically, is all there is, but it gives us a charming peep into the sweet primness of Mr. Gladstone's domesticity.

"Winifred Evans makes the old lady a touching and altogether charming figure, with Bertram Wallis as an attractively pedantic and rather tall Mr. Gladstone, and A. E. Filmer as an uncertain and rather short John Morley.'

The presentation of "Mr. Gladstone's Comforter" preceded "Beau Austin", which W. E. Henley and Robert Louis Stevnson wrote in collaboration, which Sir Nigel Playfair described as an "odd pretty thing." Sir Nigel himself played the part of the Beau's valet. Bertram Wallis had the role of 'Beau Austin."

668 YEARS IN FAMILY OF 11

PETERBORO, Nov. 24—Peterboro county is the home of the oldest family in Canda. More than six and a half centuries are contained in the total ages of eleven living brothers and sisters of the Elliot family, the home centre has been this country for almost a century.

NELSON HAS FIRST ATTEMPTED HOLDUP IN NUMBER YEARS

Harold Erickson Thwarts Attempt of Man With Gun; in an Alley.

According to the story of Harold Erickson, related Saturday night, Nelson experienced its first attempted hold up in the past two or three years about 8 o'clock when a man with a gun attempted to stop him from proceeding in his auto through the alley beside the Annable block.

Erickson was proceeding through the alley when suddenly his headlights picked out a small group of men in rough clothes standing in the alley. As he approached one of the men stepped forward from the group flourishing a revolver and calling to him to stop. Regardless of the threatening weapon, Erickson "stepped on the gas" and roared out of the alley before any of the men could impede his progress.

WEAPON HAD LONG BARREL

Erickson stated that in the swift glance he took of the weapon he determined the fact that it was one with a fairly long barrel and that the man holding it had his suit coat turned up around his neck. His slouch hat was well pulled down to shield his face.

UPSETS IN TRAIL BASKETBALL TILTS

Wood Butchers Lose; Trail Times Wins at Last; Referee Loses Teeth

TRAIL, B. C., Nov. 24—The unexpected never happens—except in the Trail Basketball league. Then the unexpected happens all in one night.

Wood Butchers until Saturday night had a record of being undefeated since the start of the season, were tipped overboard by the High School boys. Only by the odd point in a 24-23 score, but they were tipped over just the same.

The real surprise of the evening, however, was the defeat of the Beavers by the Trail Times. The printers snapped out of the lethargy that has held them in thrall all season and ran up 19 points against the Beavers' 13 for the only decisive victory of the evening.

SHEIKS DEFAULT

Sheiks, counted strong contenders in the race for men's senior honors, defaulted their game to the Hockey club. It was the Hockey club's last game on the schedule and they are now definitely in the lead. Arrow Boat club may tie them for points in their remaining games.

When the Sheiks defaulted the scrub team composed of members of the Sheiks and Arrow Boat club gave the Hockeyists a real battle.

FAST PACE

Starting at a fast pace and speeding up as they went, the two teams gave one of the most brilliant exhibitions of basketball seen for a long time. At times they were tied, 20-20. Hockeyists slapped in a last minute basket in the overtime to win 36-35.

Referee Don Forward was the sufferer of the evening's play. He was batted in the face during a speedy bit of play and lost two teeth.

SPARK PLUG BOYD IS AT WALDO NOW

Mysterious disappearance of Joe (Spark Plug) Boyd of Seattle within a few days of his scheduled battle here with George Harlow, Nelson heavyweight, some months ago, is apparently solved by receipt of a letter from Boyd, who is now at Waldo, B. C. According to Boyd he left for Waldo, having not received a contract. It would appear that he was a little too impatient, for according to R. E. Kirby, promoter, the contract would have been on the way if word had not been received that Boyd had left town.

It was his desire for a bout in this district that prompted Boyd to write to The Daily News. He gave his weight at 167 pounds and stated that he was open to meet any lightheavyweight up to 175 pounds. He asked that anyone interested write, sending terms, to G. Davis, Waldo.

Mr. Kirby stated last night that he would not consider matching Harlow with Boyd now, nor doing any business whatever with the Seattle battler.

Nelson and Trail Experience First Snowfalls Season

Fall Is of Short Duration, Nelson; Continues at Trail

Nelson's first appreciable snowfall was experienced last night when a light northwest wind carried down large flakes that continuted to fall heavily from 10:15 to 10:45. When the air had cleared the city was mantled in about a quarter of an inch of snow.

TRAIL, B. C., Nov. 24—With not a breath of wind stirring a steady fall of light snow had clothed Trail in white tonight for the first time this season. If it continue till morning at the rate it was falling tonight, around two inches of snow should greet the populace upon arising.

The temperatures over the week end up to 5 o'clock today varied little. Saturday saw a maximum of 32, just at the freezing point and a minimum of 21. Today the maximum was one degree lower at 31 and the minimum remained steady at 21.

SAILORS DON'T READ "ELSIE" BOOKS, HE SAYS

looking over books with a view to giving donations to the Navy League it is well to remember that "sailors are not interested in the Elsie books." A dismayed Provincial Convenor of the League found it necessary (when appealing for donations) to ask for a little discrimination in offerings. A local bookseller maintains he has a steady demand for 'Elsie' books around Christmas time, the devoted maiden aunt be ing still persuaded that giarls read them. But at any rate sailors don'ts and the neices should remember this, the convenor suggested.

THE TIGER PASSES

Georges Clemenceau, "Tiger of France," has passed along, dying in the same fighting spirit in which he lived.

"I want no women around me when I die," he declares as he feels the end approaching, and orders a nurse from the room.

"Bury me upright in a forest in Vendee," he instructs. He always stood firmly on his feet. He wishes to be buried in that position.

A grand old man, but perhaps with a little of the playactor in his character. Many great men have had the quality, and it assists them in their business of leadership.

Clemenceau was, to France, the "Father of Victory." He was premier and minister of war in 1918, when victory over the Germans was gained. He earned the everlasting gratitude of the soldiers of most of the allied armies, by fighting the battles of the soldiers against the politicians. He neither liked nor respected Lloyd George.

When he had forced the generalissimo idea upon Lloyd George, Italy and the United States, his chief trouble was with Lloyd George. But he worked a little game with Foch. To Lloyd George he would say, when the British premier wished to interfere with military operations: "Please go and see General Foch.', Foch would smile agreeably and continue on his way. Lloyd George would protest to Clemenceau, and the Old Tiger and Clemenceau would tell him of his own troubles with that terrible man Foch. So it went, but victory finally perched on the allied banners.

Clemenceau dominated the peace conference at Versailles, at least to the extent that he got what he wanted for France.

But he had his difficulties. He told a friend that it was hard to get along with Lloyd George, who thought himself Napoleon, and President Wilson, who thought himself the saviour of the world. Only the Tiger put it a little less reverently than that.

Now, the body of the old man goes back to the forests of Vendee, where he was born nearly three generations ago, to the Vendee, which, in the centuries which have passed, has more than once changed the course of history for France.

TELL YOUR DOCTOR THE WHOLE STORY

A physician making the annual examination of a married couple examined the man first, and while his condition was considerably improved over that of the previous year, nevertheless there appeared to be something on his mind.

The physician gave him a couple of 'openings', but the patient did not say anything

After the wife had been examined en him, still he said nothing

The wife then disclosed the nature of the trouble which was worrying the husband, and, as it was not at all serious and could be easily helped he had her bring her husband back into the office again.

The patient then stated that he had tried to speak to the physician one year before but "just couldn't".

When the trouble was fully explained and the advice given the patient was "happier" than he'd been in years.

Now why do I relate this simple incident, one that happens frequently.

Simply that while some physicians are very clever, have had a good training in hospital and laboratory, nevertheless they do not go into the human side, the mental, the emotional, the hereditary, the domestic conditions of their patient, and there are conditions about which the hospital, the medical college, and the labatory cannot teach. They can only be learnt by getting the confidence of the patient and have him in his own slow, way, give the full history of his trouble.

And of course the lesson for the patient is that if there is anything on his mind' it can be the cause of indigestion, sleepleness lack of ambition, disinclination to work, and a general 'run down' condition that may baffle a physician, if he does not get the whole story.

So tell your physician everything if you want to get all the help he can give you.

ALBERTA PILOT IS TWICE MEANS OF SAVING A LIFE

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 24.—For the second time within two weeks a northern Alberta trappers wife has been brought from the door of death to possible healthful recovery by Captain W. R. "Mop" May, Commercial airways pilot. Completing an 800-mile journey over the most dangerous territory that a land aeroplane has ever crossed in the north, "Wop" May landed with a Keg river woman who was mentally disturbed of an aftermath of her recent illness.

Captain May took a Bellanca machine on pontoons from Edmonton to Carcajou point with Dr. Ferguson of Peace River. They arrived just in time to evert death from the same woman. With a mental condition setting in efter she had turned the crisis it was urgent that she should be brought immediately to this city where adequate medical facilities could be secured for treatment

WHOLE TOWN WAITS FOR BRIDE'S MOTHER EDMONTON WEDDING

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 24.—In a church in this city the other day the entire population of a nearby village attended a wedding. But they had a very long wait for the event. Minister, bride and bridegroom were waiting for a letter from the bride's mother, without which everything was off. The girl was under 18, living at home, and must have the consent of both parents, before she could marry. The girl's father came along with the young couple and the rest of the village and gave his consent but somehow he didnt seem to think the girl's mother was a necessary adjunct—and mama was left at home. Whereupon Minister Donald Mackie who gave he [illegible] and fed up" with would be bridal couples who fail to complete the necessary authorities, [illegible] the families of a license refused to [illegible] the couple their marriage license because the written consent of the mother. WINDSOR Nov.—When Chan Chun County Police Court at Sandwich yesterday on a liquor charge he was asked if he was aC hristian. He answered no, that he was Presbyterian. He said that four bottles of whisky found in his bed were for his own use.

Lee Yee said he kept a bottle under his pillow for a nightcap. Although twenty quarts of liquor were found in rooms of the men they were dismissed on an illegal passesion charge.

Told in Rime

A PATRIOTIC ANTHEM

O Canada! Our land of peerless worth,
We prize above all other lands on earth,
With fervent hearts we sing thy praise,
In songs of loyalty.
May God most high be thy defence,
And shape thy destiny!

O land! From wars illusions free,
Thy role on earth is fixed by Heaven's decree,
To lead the world in peace and amity!

Great northern land, whose mountains crown'd with snow,
In grandeur, look on meadows green below,
Kind Heaven has blest thy wide domain,
With valley, hill, and plain—
A changing scene of vast extent,
From east to western main.
Grand sphere of peace and harmony!
The hosts of Heaven and earth are calling thee,
To lead the world in peace and amity!

Dear Canada! Let all who love thee sing
God bless our land! Long live our gracious King!
His Empire aid, when foes assail,
Till flags of war are furl'd,
And endless peace and right prevail,
O'er all this new-born world.
O Lord of Heaven, of earth and sea!
Without they help, vain would all efforts be,
T lead the world in peace and amity!

What Do You Think?

DISPUTES WRITTEN REMARKS ABOUT "THE SPECIALIST"

The Editor, Nelson Daily News,
Nelson, B. C.

Dear Sir: You've heard a lot of pretin' and prattlin' about this being of the age of reason and of Canada being a free country. I'm a 100 per cent Canadian with no strings attached, and I'd like to see Canada remain a free country. I have never before written a letter to a newspaper but this time I just couldn't help it. And I'll tell you why.

After reading the effusion of one P. Murdock in you issue of November 20th, and looking up the meaining of such choice world as "filth," "bilge", "tripe", and "veracious", I came to the conclusion that he didnt enjoy "The Specialist". And, as is sometimes the case with such persons, because HE didn't enjoy it he would keep it from everyone else.

Another thing Mr. Murdock says: "That anyone writing under the namee of Charles (Chic) Sales should be responsible for such despicagle bilge is readily understandable." What is the matter with the name Charles—or as he is better known—Chich Sale? Isn't it as good a name of John Smith, or Tom Brown—or P. Murdock? The chances are Chic's parents didn't consult his wishes when they tacked that name on him, and like the rest of us, he had to take what he got. If literary works were to be judged by the name of the author where would Shakespeare, Longfellow, Wordsworth, Chaucer, O. Henry, and Hugo—to list only a few—get off at. Also Mr. Murdock evidently doesn't know that Chic Sale is one of the greatest character impersonators in the world today. That may be one of the reasons why his book has had such a tremendous sale.

Now what about the contents? Mr. Murdock calls it "filth". If you ask me, I say there isn't a filthy word in the book. I don't enjoy filth much myself, and I got a kick out of every word in "The Specialist." And I'll tell you why. To begin with, it was well written. The pictures drawn were clear and vivid. It was true to life. Practically everyone who has not spent his whole existence in a city has had experience with the things Lem spoke about. I'll admit I've never seen "a eight-holer", but I can readily understand how a specialist in that line would have a broader knowledge of such affairs than the ordinary layman. Mr. Sale treated what might otherwise have been a rather touchy subject in a very detached and scientific manner—and still retained a humorous point of view.

About the price. You can get the bood bound in cloth or leather. Leather costs a little more, but some of our best peonle have cloth. For myself, I'd have her cloth bound, and I'll tell you why. Considering the size of the book I think the price rather exorbitant; and as cloth is almost as servicable, and a whole lot cheaper, I buy cloth and have no regrets.

Mr. Murdock says the value of the book is nil. I can't see it. As humor it is, as the St. Louis Post-Despatch says "Hilariously funny"—and a good hearty laugh never hurt anyone yet. As history, I venture to predict it may some day be used as a text book. Times change, styles change, customs change, and what serves the purpose of one generation will not do for the next. Lem's "structures," from the imposing eight-holer down to the average two-seater, are fast getting out of date, and it won't be many years until they are a thing of the past. Think what a boon to mankind Chic Cale's book will be then. On a stormy evening when you feet you'd like to read a little history, you pick up "The Specialist," park yourself in an easy chanr—and there you are.

Now, in connection with other forms of alleged tripe—(or bilge; I don't care). As the Eye-Opener, Smokehouse Monthly, and McFadden publications of the "veracious" type do not appeal to me, I never buy them. Does that mean they should be relegated to the dump heap? I don't think so. It doesn't seem right to me that any of us should pose as the arbiters of other people's morals. Another thing. The Calgary Eye-Opener was originated in Canada by a good, Staunch Candian and M.P.P., and until he died o few years ago it was published in Calgary. At one time the government would not allow it to go through the mails. Still, the present Prince of Wales subscribed to it—at least, a news item in a daily paper said he did.

It makes no difference to me whether a book, magazine, or newspaper comes from the United States, Germany, Timbuctoo, or what have you; or whether the author's name is Chic Sale, H. G. Wells, or Oswart Tinwhistle. If I like it I'll read it. If it doesn't appeal to me, they can put it on sale till the cows come home; I won't buy it. There is no law in this country that says you MUST read this or that, and I would respectfully suggest to Mr. Murdock that if he doesn't care for certain books or magazines (although he seems fairly well acquainted with those that print tripe—or is it piffle?) he should leave them alone, and let those who care for that sort of thing hoo to it.

So far, we in Canada, have been fortunate enough to escape fanatical censorship. Let's leave it that way. Let's not adopt Mussolini methods, or endeavor to emulate the city fathers of Boston, Mass. Those learned gentlemen banned "The Specialist", "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Strange Interlude", "The Arabian Nights", and almost every other book or play they thought some one might enjoy. Let's not be like that. Let's be Canadians; let's be free. Surely the people of Canada are intelligent enough, big enough, honest enough, and brave enough to know what they want, and to look after themselves. And if naughty, bad, old books we don't like come in from strange foreign lands, let's not pay any attention to them. Above all, et's not try to regulate the morals of our neighbors by legislation and censorship. Let's see if education isn't a better plan. Let's be really free-born and free-living Canadians, ready and willing to live and let live.

Yours truly,

Q. P. Dahl.

METALINE FALLS, Nov. 24—Work at the four-story hotel building of the Pend Oreille Mines and Metals company has progressed to such an extent that this week will see the completion of the concrete superstructure. Pouring of the roof slab will be completed tomorrow or the day after Cooler weather this week has been a hindrance to speedy concrete work and every precaution is being taken to have the work stable. Duntile is laid around the first story and the steel window frames are in place.

At the office building plastering is being completed on the third floor. Most of the windows have been put in, door frames are being put in is in progress.

HIGH GRADE ORE AT JOSEPHINE

METALINE FALLS, Nov. 25—Cross-cutting on the 300-foot level of the Josephine mine of the Pend Oreille Mines and Metals company is now at about 60 feet and reveals an ore body of very high grade, showing a heavy lead content in places, the most recent work is in 30% ore, which is about half lead and half zinc. The ore body encountered is of large dimensions, and is the largest and highest grade found thus far in this section at such a depth.

Diamond drilling previous to cross-cutting revealed a body of ore of a width of 34 feet and, assays of the core at the time of drilling indicated a combined lead-zinc content of from 4 to 7 per cent at varying intervals, indicating it is said that the values were in a mass rather than in panels. Hence, cutting the ore was struck 10 feet before reaching the point where the drill indicated it would be found. As the cross-cut proceeds on a two-shift basis, values have also increased and the body is the richest yet encountered.

Other development work at the Pend Oreille properties includes preparations for driving the Hidden Falls tunnel, which will strike the Josephine workings and be used as the main haulage right from the Josephine-Sullivan group. The new compressor plant is being completed expects to have it in use about the first of the month.

Seven stills and $50,000 worth of liquor were seized near Beloit, Wis.

PRODUCERS CLAIM LINOLEUM CHEAPER IN THE DOMINION

Prices Lower Than in Other Countries; Ask Tariff Not Be Changed

The following synopsis of the producers' brief has ben prepared for the press. It covers the essentials of the producers' case with a minimum of reference to the statistical analysis on which the case is based. Statistical support for the statementst contained in this synopsis will be found in the brief itself.

THE SYNOPSIS

The producers' case hinges upon a seeming paradox. They submit that the effect of substantial protective duties is to lower, not to raise, the prices of their products to the consumer, and on this ground contend that, in the interest of the country, these duties cannot safely be changed. The tariff in this case is made to appear as the centre of a sort of "virtuous circle", with market security increased production, lower costs and lower prices, interacting around it.

The brief undertakes further to show that there has been a greater reduction in the price of domestic oilcloth products in recent years than in the general scale of Canadian prices, that no advantage is taken of the tariff to increase the cost of these goods to the customer and that on the contrary, Canadian oil-cloth products sell more cheaply in their own market than corresponding goods in either Great Britian or the United States—that, in fact these goods are apparently priced lower in Canada than anywhere else in the world.

NO MASS PRODUCTION

There can be no mass production of oil-cloth for the Canadian market with the present population. The brief illustrates this handicap with an analysis showing that the Canadian oil-cloth industry is more extensively developed in proportion to its home market than that of any other country in the world. It mentions an American mill that produces 75 miles of a certain class of oil-cloth per day—over 10 times the maximm run of the same material in any Canadian plant. It mentions also that the industry spends annually in direct and indirect duty on its raw materials about $260,000 or 3.5 per cent of the sale value of its output. It proceeds to demonstrate, however, that these adverse conditions are not reflected in manufacturers' prices.

The price situation is revealed in two ways. The course of oil-cloht prices since 1920 is compared with that of the Index for "consumers' goods", the result being to show that the former have fallen more gradually but further, in that period. For example, this years' level of general prices in Canada is 33 per cent below that of 1920, while oil-cloth products average 42¾ per cent below the prices of 1920.

SECOND COMPARISON

A second comparison between manufacturers' prices on oil-cloth products in Canada, the United States and Great Britian, indicates that in their respective home markets, Canadians pay less for oil-cloth products than their fellow-consumers either overseas or across the border. The most accurate basis of calculation shows American domestic prices as 3 per cent and British prices as more than 9 per cent above those of the Canadian mills, on corresponding goods. Allowance for the Canadian sales tax would increase these differences by an additional two per cent in favor of Canada.

If allowance is made for such extraneous handicaps, the margin between American and Canadian prices on these two types of oil-cloth is only about six per cent. It is more than off-set by a 13 per cent differential in Canada's favor on jute-base an cotton-base industries, but the domestic prices on both cotton-base and jute-base products are higher there than in Canada.

HAVE NOT RAISER PRICES

On the strength of these figures, the producers consider it manifest that they have not used the tariff as an instrument to raise prices. In further proof that duties are not even partially absorbed in the domestic price, their brief proceeds to show that if duty and sales tax alone are added to the lowest obtainable prices on British nd American oil-cloth products the result is an average import price nearly 31 per cent higher than present Canadian prices. Under these conditions, imports of oil-cloth products into Canada are chiefly attributable to the diversity of taste in patterns.

These imports, in fct, are shown to represent only 10½ percent of Canadian consumption; and this is the third essential point in the producers' case. Despite the handicap of a small home field, they have been able to bring oil-cloth prices lower here than in other countries because, under the protection of existing duties, they have been able to expand their domestic market to the point where 89.5 per cent of the oil-cloth products purchased in this country are made in Canada. Of the total value of oil-cloth products sold in Canada in 1928, only 10.5% worth were imported, and incidently more than half of these imports came from the United Kingdom.

The producers' argument that duties in their case have lowered prices rests, in other words, on the fact that, in a protected market, they have been able to extend the range of their output so that it includes almost everything Canadians buy in the way of oil-cloth products, and thus, by substituting for mass production a diversified production and wide absorption of sales, to enjoy some of the economics that accrue to the English Scottish and American manufacturers from mass production proper. They submit that their price figures show that these economies are being passed on to the consumer with a further margin of benifit that can honestly be attributed to the efficiency their industry has achieved in the 57 years since it made its start on a hand -process basis at Montreal.

They express a conviction that any change in the present duties, if it entailed a larger import of foreign oil-cloth products, must be detrimental to an industry whose present efficiency is the result of delicate adjustment to its home market, which buys 58 per cent of its raw materials in Canada. In their view there is also obvious risk that, through disturbance of this adjustment, costs, and therefore prices to the consumer would be increased.

FLORENCE FINDS NEW ORE SHOOT IN BLIND VEIN

Ore Penetrated for Several the Lakeshore Feet by Crosscut to

THIS CROSSCUT IS ON THE 900 LEVEL

Engineer W. McDougall Will Inspect Discovery Tomorrow

Ore reported to be of commercial grade has been struck by the Kootenay Florence silver-lead-zinc property at Princess Creek, in the long crosscut that is en route to the Lakeshore vein.

A shot Thursday night brought down four feet of ore, according to a message received by Consulting Engineer B. W. W. McDougall from Superintendent H. C. Wilkins, while the ore continued for at least another steel length.

If the vein crossed some months ago, and in which ore was found by drifting, is the Princess vein, as generally believed, then the vein just struck in ore is a blind vein, not previously exposed.

IN DEEP LEVEL

The tunnel being driven for the Lakeshore vein, which will be tapped at relatively great depth beneath the lowest previous workings, is a lateral from the 900 level of the Florence, the second lateral on the south side, which a hundred feet or so from the main tunnel picked up the faulted lime-bed in which all the ore developed on the 900 level of the Florence vein—both the replacement ore on the bedding plane and the big ore shoot in the main fissure—was found last winter and spring.

A raise from the main tunnel was made to the 800 level, where this shoot was again encountered, and shown by drifting to be of nearly the same length as on the 900.

Messrs. McDougall and Wilkins are now at the Slocan Rambler, but will be at the Florence again tomorrow, when further information on the new strike should be available.

Another Ore Body Is Discovered on Kootenay Florence

VANCOUVER, Nov. 24.—(By Hugh W. Robertson Ltd., leased wire) Another ore body has been encountered in the Lake Shore crosscut at the Kootenay Florence mine, according to a telegram from B. W. W. McDougall today.

Recent development in this crosscut which is being driven south to intercept the Lake Shore vein at depth, has been of an exploratory nature. At a point about 800 feet south of the main Florence vein developed at depth during the summer, a condition was encountered which gave indications of the nearness of another ore body not previously anticipated. Several minor fractures were drifted upon, resulting in the opening of a 45-foot ore shoot.

The new strike is further south in the Lake shore crosscut. Where it was encountered it has a width of four feet, with values in lead and zinc. This showing, according to McDougall, is probably related to the ore shoot recently encountered in the exploratory [illegible] is removed from it by faulting. Further details are expected from McDougall following a personal inspection of the reported strike.

1036 Cars Through Newport, 10 Hours Check There Shows

NEWPORT WASH. Nov. 25—Robert T. Owen checker of traffic at Newport reports 1036 cars passing the checking station here on Nov. 11 between 6 a.m. and 4 p.m. Distribution of the cars was as follows: Passenger cars 777; trucks 232, buses 18, trailers, 9. Of thesee 296 cars carried licenses other than the state of Washington.

The check included travel on the Pend Oreille highway north and west and on the detour to Priest River on federal highway No. 195.

REEVES ADDING MUCH TONNAGE

New Ore Body Adds $3,000,000 to Value of Property; Lakes Says

METALINE FALLS, Nov. 25—Development work at the Reeves-McDonald properties continutese to add continually to the tonnage and also higher grade ore, according to reports brought here.

On a recent trip to the coast Harold Lakes, M. E. superintendant of the Reeves-McDonald, in speaking of recent strikes and disclosures announced, that the new "B. L." orebody will add at least $3,000 ,000 to the value of the company's reserves. This ore-body, which will probably prove to be a continuation westward of the O'Donnell, was picked up by the company's estimate being around the company's estimata being around 400,000 tons. While the definite proportions of this ore-body will not be known until it is opened up by tunnelling, there can be no doubt of the importance of the disclosure.

The values are higher than those on the Reeves, which show about 8% combined lead and zinc. A gratifying feature of the "B.L." ore-body is the presence of an appreciable amount of silver, assays showing two ounces to the ton. In other sections of the property little silver has been found,the chief values being lead and zinc. The disclosure of this higher-grade ore simply bears out the engineers' opinions that continued development work might be expected to open up mineralized area of better than average quality.

OIL BRIEFS

CALGARY, Nov. 24.—(By H. W. Robertson Ltd., leased wire). Mayland No. 1 was drilling at 5918 feet and 475 feet in lime yesterday. No noticeable change in gas pressure was apparent A baller and other equipment incidental to the removal of the mud column are at the well.

No change is reported from Southwest Pete where drilling in a hard formation is proceeding steadily.

Merland was drilling out cement where casing was set in the top of the Dalhousie sands. It is believed that about 50 feet of hole will be drilled and then a test made to determine posibility of commercial production from the Dalhousie sands. Oil and gas showings to date indicate good possibilities of a crude oil flow.

Eastcrest No. 1 was drilling at 4358 feet Friday. This depth is about 38 feet in lime, according to revised calculations made by the company. It is expected a separator will be hooked up today in order that production may be taken in heads resulting from a gas flow of about 5,000,000 cubic feet. No. 2 was mixing heavier mud preparatory to drilling out cave before fishing for a bit and one stand of drill pipe twisted at 1400 feet.

Mercury No. 3 drilling at 4390 feet, encountered a sand believed to be the Home. A slight gas and oil showing was had on the contact. No. 1 was drilling at 4775 fet and believed to be within 100 feet of lime.

Commonwealth has announced that its Turner Valley well will be straightened, the decision resulting from a survey which showed the hole to be considerably out of plumb. The crooked hole is believed to have considerable to do with the fact that the Dalhousie sands were re-entered after the well was in the belemenite shales. Geological recommendations regarding the point at which the hole should be straightened will not be made until next week. A financial statement shows a balance of $675,0400 in cash and securities.

Freehold No. 2 was drilling at 3800 feet Friday after netering the Home sands at 3780 feet.

This Is Street Figuring, While Report shows Over $26,000,000

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—(By Hugh W. Robertson Ltd., leased wire) Sherritt Gordon's annual report has become decidedly the street topic. Deductions as drawn are that while a net profit of over $36,000,000 was officially estimated with copper at 18 cents a pound the total gross valuation of the 254,575 indicated tons at about $7 a ton comes not far under $100,000,000.

While some sources have put a bearish interpretation there are many outstanding features worth investigating. Its over $2,000,000 position assures it of finances to carry the 1500 ton concentrator plant, not to say of nearly a million treasury shares left for emergency. The talk of last year about the remaining treasury shares not being sufficient to finance probable funds needed to reach production has disappeared by the smelter and power contracts with Flin Flon.

OTHER FEATURE

Another feature is that this ore, either the critics regard it satisfactorily or not, is in located to a depth of 500 feet. To have eight years of property and plain sailing to production a year hence with all indications of success as more time allows deeper development, will likely be received as a Canadian mining effort of magnitude by those believing in ultimate success and not filled with downright pessimism.

Perhaps the significant statement revolves about the explanation that while Sherritt will send its concentrates to the Flin Flon smelter, it will receive back its blister copper and thereafter look after the refining and marketing. While Ventures Ltd., and Falconbridge are conspicuously refrained from being mentioned the officially described term again indicates the blister copper will come to the eastern smelter in which these latter two have connection.

ZINC REFINERY SOON

That Ventures Ltd., will also play an important part and take Sherritt's zinc content is but another deduction from the description of how things will be handled. Charles D. Kaeding, consulting engineer, who is known to have spent months with his staff in studying things, makes the definite assertion an electrolytic zinc refinery will soon be under construction near Montreal. From a zinc mining standpoint that is the most interesting statement in months and undoubtedly tends to put the Lindsley enerprise in a position of some dictative powers.

During the first three quarters of the year, the Lake Shore and Tech Hughes grade ore ran almost neck and neck—just under $16—according to government figures. Lake Shore in nine months produced $4,465,000 from $14.67 grade and Tech $3,717,032 from $14.81 grade.

Dome Mines plans are known to be reaching a stage wher shareholders can expect official advice. Both Dome and Hollinger have been busy reaching a compromise on mutually satisfactory plans whereby the latter's mill will take the former's ore shipments. Meanwhile, dickering for adjoining claims to Dome, particularly the Schumacher-Veteran, has not ceased and here also there is expectation of a deal being arranged and new possibilities engaged.

What appear to have been overlooked by Porcupine students is that while Hollinger is working out its own salvation and Dr. Grattan has passed out encouraging hints, Hollinger also stands to benefit considerably in an agreement with Dome. It must derive a percentage of profit from the latter's ore shipment, which will amount to something in a final reckoning of earnings.

WHEAT MARKET IN AN UPROAR

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Definite confirmation of wide-spread severe crop damage in Argentina came just at the last Saturday, and threw the wheat market here into an uproar. A leading Chicago crop expert cabled from Rosario that Argentine wheat in the central zone which he had visited amounted to 25 per cent. Chicago closing quotations on wheat were greatly unsettled 2 to 2¾ cents above yesterday's finish, despite the fact that most of the time today the market was lower.

Corn closed ¾c to ⅞c down; oats ¼ to ⅜ cents advance.

METALINE FALLS, Nov. 25—The Metaline Falls plant of the Lehigh Portland Cement company has started operations after a shutdown of several months during which quite extensive repairs were made in the mill, kilns relined and new machinery and improvements installed at the quarry.

The busy hum of the machinery is welcomed, and the plant gives employment to many who have been employed on construction work for the Pend Oreille Mines and Metals company and other local improvements which are nearing completion. Between 70 and 75 men are on the payroll and it is hoped the plant will have another long uninterrupted run.

Vancouver Students and Hamilton Win Rugby Titles

SASKATCHEWAN IS DEFEATED SECOND TIME

. B. C. Ruggers Win Saturday Game 15-2 and the Round 28-4

LOSE CONTEST TILL NEAR END

Score 4-2 With Three Minutes to Go, Then Vancouver Wakens Up

VANCOUVER, Nov. 24—University of British Columbia won the western Canada intercollegiate Canadien rugby championship Saturday, when they defeated the University of Saskatchewan 15 to 2, and took the two game series 28 to 4.

But it wasn't just the victory that mattered to the 3500 people who rose, cheered and celebrated the victory madly at the end of the struggle; it was that the first intersection Canadian rugby championship had come to the Pacific coast. For the first time, the hardy cup had left the gridirons of the middle west for a new Point Grey home.

THRILLS AT FINISH

Then there was the thrilling finish of the game. With their 13 to 2 lead from Wednesday and the score 4 to 2 three minutes before the end of the fourth quarter, the local supporters were sure that their team had won the cup. But with three minutes to go, the Point Grey team, which had been playing defensive ,careful football, suddenly went wild. Gavin Dirom, racing back madly with a punt from the 40-yard line, carried it through to the 12-yard line and from there Root, a big powerful quarterback called and went over with a buck through center. No one expected the following kick-off two minutes before time would start anything else, but Coleman, ripping through 30 yards, brought varsity gain to the attack. Then Shields, racing around the end, almost went over, and Grauer, hitting the line, scored the second touchdown one minute and 40 seconds before the game ended. Shield converted.

ALL IS SLIPPERY

Until the University of British Columbia broke away in the fourth quarter no one was sure of victory in the day's contest. Saskatchewan was always dangerous on the attack, always ready to open out and gamble on success. In the second quarter alone the visitors tried six forward passes. A slippery ball and a treacherous footing cost Saskatchewan more than the forward pass plays than British Columbia defence.

Dempster in the backfield carried the brunt of the work for the visitors and with him he had Campbell at quarter, who was always dangerous. One accident marred an otherwise hard clean game. Early in the first half McAdam, one of the visitors' best backfield men, went off the field with a serious injury to a shoulder which he fractured in an October game.

Score 6-2 Win in Good Game; Ottawa Team Plays New Rules Well

TORONTO, Nov. 24—Ottawa Senators, undefeated in the Canadian section of the National Hockey league, trounced the Toronto Maple Leafs, 6 goals to 2, in a strenuously contested game at Arena gardens Saturday night.

They took the lead less than six minutes after the start on Heckilreau's sparkling goal, and from then on never appeared in danger of finishing on the short end. The Senators played so well under the new rules that they made the locals look decidedly amateurish in comparison.

NEWCASTLE AND LEICESTER WIN THEIR CONTESTS

Portsmouth and Bolton Wanderers Defeated; Rain, Gale Spoil Sport

LONDON, Nov. 24—Soccer matches were played in England yesterday in a half gale and a deluge of the rain. The fixture at Merthyrtown, where Queen's Park Rangers were billed to play, had to be postponed, as the grounds were unfit for use, while a number of rugby matches were also called off.

The feature games in the first division were Newcastle United's fine win by four goals to one against Portsmouth and Leicester City's crushing defeat of the English cup holders, Bolton Wanderers, by 5 goals to 2. The leadership of the second division changer hands, Blackpool ceding Pride of the place to Oldham athletic.

GALLACHER SHINES

H. Gallacher, center forward, was responsible for all Newcastle's goals, and played one of the finest games of his great career. Gallacher completed the hat trick after twenty three minutes. He added his fourth shortly afterwards.

Aston Villa's superior speed and skill got them a 2-0 lead at hal fime in their match at Middlesbrough, though this advantage flattered them. Middlesbrough's night mare of ill-luck looked like changing when Bruce, inside left, reduced his team's arrears in the seventeenth minute of the second half, but Pease, outside right, missed a penalty, and the Villa went on the offensive again. Beresford, inside right, got their third and winning goal. Campbell was off the target again on a penalty, but Elkes scored just before the finish for Middlesbrough. Blackpool started off vigorously against Hull City, but the Yorkshire men were too strong. Duncan, left outside, scored twice for Hull, and Hampson, Blackpool's centre forward, replied with a net goal.

QUEENS FAIL AGAINST THE TIGER CRUSH

Hamilton Wins Eastern Rugby Title Match by 14-3; Are Better Team

"POP" LEADLEY IS STAR OF BATTLE

Timmins Smashes Gaping Holes in Queen's Line; Carter Shines

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 24—Hamilton Tigers annexed the rugby football championship of Eastern Canada here on Saturday afternoon when they defeated Queens by the score of 14-3 and thereby qualified to meet Regina Rough Riders for the Canadian title. There was never a doubt throughout the game as to the Tigers' being the better team, for they flashed superiority from the start, matched the tri-color in their strongest points, those of kicking and tackling, and conducted a plunging parade that gave them yards 17 times during the game.

Tigers were the all-round better team, but it remained for one of the veterans "pep" Leadley, former star of the tri-color, to dominate the play and monopolize the limelight by scoring eleven of his teams' points. Leadley was the same old Leadley of yore. He plunged consistently for gains, ran 30 yards for a touchdown and kicked two field goals on the gridiron, where he first rode to fame in rugby, and where his greatest laurels were gained.

But quite apart from the fine performance by Leadley, the Tigers were the better team. Brian Timmins, their herculean middle wing, time after time smashed gaping holes in the Queen's line for gains, and capped his performance by breaking away for a thirty yard run, which ended with Welch kicking the last point of the game. Timmins, Boudway, Elford and Leadley could not be stopped, and the smart way in which they got their plays going, gave them an early advantage, which they maintained throughout, with the exception of a short time in the last quarter.

Queen's played good football, good enough to beat the average team, and it was not because of breaks that the Tigers won. They were simply the better team. Carter kicked well for the tri-color but it seemed as though Queens made a mistake in continually trying to break through the stonewall defence of the Bengals. Had they kicked more on the first down, they might have secured better results. But, on the other hand, the steady work of the Tigers' back field stood out, and even in a strictly aerial attack, they probably would have wound up with much the same result.

CANADIENS BEAT NEW YORKERS

Score 3-2 Win in Dying Minutes; 15,000 Fans See the Game

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—Montreal's speedy Canadiens fought an uphill battle tonight to defeat the downtrodden but still strong New York Americans, 3-2, in an overtime National Hockey league game. A crowd of about 15,000 fans turned out to see the flying Frenchmen turn their seasonal debut in New York into a last minute victory.

The Americans, strengthened by the return to the fold of Billy Burch, made a great fight of it, and managed to keep in the running until late in the extra period. Wildor La Rochelle returned from a year of minor league seasoning, notched the final goal to give the Americans their third defeat of the year. Sylvio Mantha, big defence star, made the first score, and got credit, for an assist.

WINDSOR'S RUNNING BACKFIELD STAR

"Noe" Jubenville, the Windsor halfback, whose running this year has been a standpoint on the Canadian gridiron, United States too, for that matter. In one game he took the ball over his own line and ran through a broken field for a touchdown, over 110 yards. In another match he speeded 75 yards for a try. His loping style had the tacklers on their ears. Most of Jubenville's experience has been gained while playing against United States teams. Several Interprovincial Union clubs have been bidding for his services next year but the possibility is that he will be found again with Windsor, regarded as a threat for the 1930 national championship.

FAILS REACH MATCH FOR THE "KICKOFF"

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 24—After travelling 6000 miles for the purpose of "kicking off" in the match between the Australian rugby team and the Halifax, Yorkshire, team, D. A. L. Thomas arrived yesterday too late to get to the match. He reached the Mersey on the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Richmond, which was delayed by coastal traffic and also had been forced to lie to because of a gale a week ago.

Thomas, a native of Southwales, played rugby for Wales, Dewsbury and Halifax many years ago, and arrangements for him to attend today's match were by the Rugby union.

Ruth Holds Fear of White Thatch

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

Like all other athletes, Babe Ruth has a horror of getting gray for a white thatch is usually associated with age and even to be thought old by the fans in a constant source of worry to the average ball player. A few great ball players at the height of their careers like Tris Speaker, Honus Wagner, Joe Dugan, Larry Doyle, George Wiltse and others openly paraded their hoary pates without shame before the fans. Many others dye their hair but Ruth has the tell-tale white ones pulled out.

"The last time I had my trainer pull 'em out he got forty-six," said Babe, "but I'm going to keep pulling 'em out if I get bald-headed."

"If I don't all I'd need is a trick collar and people would think I was Judge Landis."

CLYDE HOLDS RANGERS TO DRAW SCORE

Heavy Scoring in Scottish Games; Queen's Park Beat Hearts 6-2

GLASGOW, Scotland, Nov. 24.—Scoring ruled high in Scottish first division soccer football matches on Saturday. Fifty-eight times the ball was put into the net in the 10 games, a very high average of nearly six each game. The grounds were heavy and good football was not possible.

Clyde provided a sensation when they held the Rangers to a three-all draw at Shaw field, where the great Glasgow team rarely give their best. Clyde came from behind, being two goals down with 15 minutes to go. Brown Morton, on a penalty, and Fleming scored for the Rangers, and Young, Cunningham and Rankin, the old Motherwell Internationalist, for Clyde.

Queen's park smashed through to a great victory over Hearts by six goals to two, and it looked as if the Amateurs had at last found their real form. After losing the first goal, they overran the Edinburgh team. McLelland was the hero of the afternoon, getting three goals.

McGregory was in fine form for Celtic against St. Johnstone at Perth. He had three goals, R. Thompson, the old Perthshire intermediate, Robertson and Napier bringing up the Celtic total to six.

Webb had St. Johnstone's only goal.

Motherwell was overwhelmed by Patrick Thistle at Fir Hill. Torbed scored three times, Simpson twice and Ballantyne for the winners and Ferrier for the losers.

PLAY A DRAW

Moreton picked up a useful point when they drew with Airdrie. Lyle and McArty scored for Moreton and Miquen from a penalty, and McDougal for Airdrie.

Cowdenbeath, through the goals of Clancy and Black, defeated Dundee, who scored through Campbell.

Dundee United fell heavily at home before Aberdeen, enabling the latter to get back into the leadership in the championship table. Yorston, Love, two and Cheyne were Aberdeen scorers, while Henderson and Thompson goaled for the losers.

Hamilton Academicals were another team who got into high scoring, beating Ayr United by six goals to two. Gray hat tricked for the Academicals.

Hibernians and St. Mirrens split the points at Edinburgh, while Kilmarnock just got home against Falkirk, having the odd goal out of five.

ST. THOMAS WINS FIRST GAME FOR JUNIOR HONORS

The return game to be held in St. Thomas Wednesday and the winner will contest for the eastern Canada junior title by meeting Ottawa Rideaus on Ottawa grounds.

BILLY TOWNSEND KAYOES BRYNE

NANAIMO, Nov. 24—Billy Townsend, Vancouver lightweight knocked out Ned Bryne, Nanaimo, in an exhibition bout here Saturday night in the second minute of the first round of a six round bout.

TULSA OILERS BEAT THE MILLERS

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 24.—The Tulsa Oilers made a clean sweep of the two-game series with the Minneapolis Millers, taking an American Hockey Association overtime tussle 1-0, Saturday night. Burr Williams scored the winning tally.

BOSTON WINS FOURTH GAME IN SUCCESSION

MONTREAL, Nov. 24—Boston Bruins and Montreal Maroons, rising to the heights of hockey, of which the two powerful machines are capable, last night staged a thrilling, hard hitting National Hockey League match here, Boston coming from behind to tie the score, and eventually winning by 4 goals to 3.

The victory, whcih ran the Boston winning streak to four straight, cost Eddie Shore, four teeth, and a gash on the cheek. Shore, who had been a tower of strength to his side, stopped Babe Siebert when the latter was in full flight down the ice, and crashed heavily. The incident came in the closing minutes of the third period. The referee ruled no foul in the clash.

A feature of the game was each of the seven goals netted from combination plays.

These wives of ours!

WE TOOK THEM from the shelter of their families, gave them two or three rooms and a share of our salary—then left them sitting there among the wedding presents, a bit bewildered.

But they knew how—these wives of ours. They knew how to make rooms into homes, and how to get more merchandise out of a dollar than we ever could. We're lucky to have wives. How do they do it?

Look through this paper, day after day. You will find advertisements covering almost every human need. They are filled with hints for the household, hints for health, hints for clothing, hints for keeping young. They are virtually little essays on life. No wonder these wives of ours follow them so carefully. As one wise wife said: "It isn't so much that I know housekeeping so well. I know where to learn it!"

Most advertising is prepared especially for women. Read it. It forms an authoritative test-book on good housekeeping.

INSTALLMENT XLII

Well, Mr. Dean showed up that Friday night, and he intended to stay with us right until we got to New York.

Honest, he acted like a barbarian.

He swooped down on us all very gay and up-and-doing, and he and Aunt Enid were like two doves together. And he said he expkected big things of us and knew we would be a sucess.

I acted very cold to him, but he just didn't seem to notice when I did not kiss him.

He watched the play that night and afterward took mama aside and said this would never do, and she wasn't giving her all to the play.

The next matinee he was even crosser with mama, and said afterward that he would really have to replace her if she didn't do any better, and he bawled her out real fierce right in earshot of the others! So mama cried and said he didn't know the drama she was playing in her own heart, and Mr. Dean said that was all well, but he wasn't paying her his good money for that drama! And I just walked down to the footlights and told Mr. Dean right out that I thought he was a crab, and the kind of a crab that walked sidewise, at that!

So mama got very hysterical, and I couldn't do a thing with her. And she was even worse the next night, which was the last in Philadelphia! When I got her back to the room, she cried and cried and cried and said she was ready to give up the struggle and the stage was a bad business any way you looked at it, as it ate up your vitals, and if it wasn't for me, she would quit right now, and let them see if they could get somebody to take her place before the opening!

In the meantime, my heart was just turning to rock, because I had trusted Sigmund Dean, and he had done nothing and hardly noticed me except to chuck me under the chin, and I hate to be chucked under the chin. I was beginning to wonder if I hadn't made a big mistake in helping his romance, as he would probably make a tyrant of a husband to poor Aunt Enid.

That Saturday night after the shaw, didn't Sigmund Dean and Ernest Halcolm and Aunt Enid drive back to New York by themselves, in Mr. Dean's big car. And they left the rest of the company to go back on the train the next day, which we did, bag and baggage and without thanks to anyone, as mam said.

There in New York was papa at the station to meet us as usual, and he said:

"Why, Gertrude, what has come over you?"

Because, really, mama looked like her own neighbor from all the sleepless nights and headaches.

So she just fell into papa's arms and began to cry right there in Pennsylvania station. So papa akchually took a taxicab and put us in it, and drove all the way out to Flatbush! Which was hard to explain, no matter how you looked at it.

Well, it was some ride, as it was raining pitchforks outside, and mama was just in torrents inside, and she kept saying through her tears:

"I'm tired out! I'm tired of life! I've had enough!"

And papa kept saying:

"There, Gertrude, darling! Come, Come, now! ckv o g be ybudo now, You are nervous over the opening."

"I'm nervous about everything," sobbed mama. "And I'm sick of trying to run things and being taken in by every Tom, Dick and Harry. And, oh, I wish I was out of it all, and could sit back on my haunches, and let someone take care of me!"

So papa said: "I'm always here waiting to take care of you, Gertrude, but you wouldn't like the way I would do it!"

"I'd like any way!" cried mama. "I wouldn't ask for a palace. Just a hovel would do—or a tent pitched in the middle of the field."

Which I thought was exaggerating considerably, but then mama was quite hysterical, and I didn't say anything, but just looked out at the rain splashing against the taxi-panes.

So papa laughed and patted mama's hand and said:

"Well, Gertrude, you have your old man right beside you, and he can give you much better than a hovel or a tent."

And mama cried harder, realizing that the house papa was referring to was gone! But papa soothed her, and took off her hat, and smoothed back her hair and kept saying she had cried enough now, and wouldn't his parents thing he had been beating her when they saw her.

Mama quieted down from sheer exhaustion, and she put her head on papa's shoulder and said:

"Don't mind me, Tim. I'm tired out. I just would like to sit back and let somebody else make the mistakes!"

"I'm good at that," papa laughed, "and isn't it about time you gave me the chance?"

When we got to the house, there was grandma and grandpa and Molly to greet us, and believe me the house looked pretty good to us, as it was nicely heated and there was an open fire in the parlor, and we all had cornbeef sandwiches and mustard and tea.

AAnd then papa took mama upstairs to show her a big surprise. And that was the last blow!

Because he had fixed mama up a room which was even sweller than mine, and had mirrors, and a swell day bed smothered with pillows, and the grandest lady's writing desk you ever clapped your eyes on!

But mama took to crying again, and kept saying:

"Oh, Tim, what a fool I've been! I'm just a blind old woman!"

And at that, papa pushed her into the room and closed the door behind them!

Well, they were in there all the rest of the afternoon, and meanwhile grandma helped me unpack my things, and I raved over my new curtains she had made, which was all picture prints of how Columbus had landed on America. And Molly came to see my things and hang up my clothes for me, and I explained them not to mind mama, as she had nerves about the opening. And they all nodded and sympathized.

So it came to be dinner-time. And mama came downstairs looking very pale and sweet in her canary-colored negligee, and I ran up and kissed her and asked her how she felt. And she laughed and said she felt much better as she had had a good hot bath and a nap.

As she leaned over to kiss me she whispered:

"I told your father about the house. But don't speak of it!"

All through dinner it was hard to keep my mind on the baked beans and roasted ham, as I kept watching papa. He was sitting up very straight and not cracking any jokes but acting real serious. Yet he didn't seem a bit upset or worried, but very sure of himself. So I began to wonder why I hadn't gone to papa in the first place and not to a stranger like Mr. Dean, as evidently papa had an idea how to go about things. Here we had been afraid to tell him, and he was taking it something noble, and didn't seem a bit hysterical or mad!

After supper mama and I went upstairs, and she told me that papa had known for the last two weeks, because the real estate people had telephoned him up. And papa had bought back the house himself through a man in Mr. Dean's office named Pigeon!

(To be concluded)

Scotland Never Again

By GERALD S. REES

It is a real wonder how the dwellers in the land of the brown heath and sunless lochs, with its heather and peaty smells, its hard bitten language the very wind of whose name blows around the globe, stand up to their climate, for Scotland has a meaner average temperature than any land, and its blusterous climate, with changing winds, is a crucifixion for the agriculturist; a change of wind on one occasion saved Mac. from sending his wife away for a change of air, as recommended by the doctor!

Scotland's mountains can easily be seen on a really fine day in midsummer. Most of the time however, they are hidden by the fine rain that is termed "Scotch mist." Let no one whines about it; no breed lives harder than Scotch folks, with their raw cabbage, bannocks and "parritch", eked out with fish and not too much of anything; conditions that breed men, not lap dogs. Bobbie Burns' "The Cotter's Saturday Night" sums it all up.

LAND OF ROMANCE AND POVERTY

Yet, from this bonnie yet barbarous fragment of a haphazard geology, suburb of Iceland and Greenland, surrounded by a ferocious ocean swept by fierce storms, rain-soaked, and mist swathed; from this land of lovely sunsets, with the richest memories of her storied past, and castles a thousand years old, has emerged an astonishing procession of statesmen, ecclesiastics, soldiers, sailors, bankers and scholars (Scotland is pre-eminently a land of education) most of them insisting that the rest of the world should cady to them—"runnin' aboot wi' a bag o' sticks after a wee bit ba'." They never give up, they never even give at the knees.

Ancient Papyri recored the Roman Senate in its palmy conquering days expressing opinion that Scotland be incorporated into the Roman Empire, as their scouts reported a high degree of barbaric civilization there, although the climate was insupportable except to the natives (No Englishman bred on roast beef can face it, nor can a Welshman accustomed to a rabbit made from cheese, but the Scot does, and thrives on it) Ceasar, Brutus, Cassius, et al, were duly advised "that the people were adventurous, hardy, thrifty, bold, etc., ad lib, and with proper training would make excellent legionaries" especially in any free-for-all fight! Furthermore the conquest of Scotia would assure the supply of haggis for all times as well as of that potent liquid that is always going strong, since 1820! Many a Scott, leaving his native alcohol behind him believes ever afterwards he is a strict teetotaler, because he drinks nothing stronger than insipid champagne or Irish whisky.

The Scots have an idea that the English are a frivolous reckless race, devoid of ambition, and in many ways incapable. At one period of the World war, a Scott lead the British army, and another commanded the Grand Fleet at sea, a third directed the Imperial General staff at home, and the Lord Chancellor was a Scot, also the Chancellor of the Exchequer (trust him to get that job.) For some inscrutable reason (to the Scots) the First Lord of the Admirality was an Irishman. Heaven knows how he held out with all Scotland clamoring for the job on account of its carrying as perquisite FREE accomodation in the Admirality Arch that bestrides the dignified but colorless London Mall. Home rule for Scotland? Great Scotland Yard!! What we want is Home Rule for England!

BAWBEES AND SAXPENCES

The Scot thinks more of his bawbee than of his millions, the former is a symbol of the essential, the latter are merely secondary; a check book always reminds him of his financial success, but a saxpence reminds him of hunger before supper, and no supper insight. He will write a check with a gold pen and then forget it, but a sixpenny bit in his purse is what stands between him and poverty. And who can blame him, either, if he saves all his playthings for his second childhood.

COCK O' THE NORTH, EAST, SOUTH AND WEST

Scotland's success is due, some claim, to her mass predatory impulse expressed in vital action, the process of acquisition carried to a fine art, but character has something to do with it, the manhood of Scotland triumphing over manhood in general. Life in Scotland is hard, whether in the crofts of the countryside, or the closes of the cities, that have a great shortage of bathrooms. Their national diet of haggis and porridge, though celebrated at annual banquets (And Scots celebrate St. Andrew's Day and Burns' Nicht with a fervor only equalled by the average American city on the Fourth of July) are really indicative of a drastic economy; all this stern apprenticeship has been turned to good purpose when young Scotland set its feet on the highways of the world. No royal road in the building of character.

Speaking of haggis, not even a caber-tossing Scot will ask for a second helping. Haggis, is not shot on the wing, nor caught in traps; you take (I simply cannot) various parts of a sheep and pack them into another part with odds and ends, including oatmeal; tie a string around this fearful monster's neck and boil it, after which you muzzle it, and lead it to the table—and take away quickly.

"Pipes of the misty moorlands"
"Voice of the glens and hills"
"The droning of the torrents
"The treble of the rills.

The skirling bagpipes-the Pipes o' Lucknow- What mu-sick. Je ne pense pas. The bagpipes are not the gentlest of instruments, and their war blast has sounded at different times all over the world; has animated Scotland's warriors in battle, and welcomed them back again to the hills of their nativity. "In halls of joy and in scenes of mourning" its weird Land o' the Leal droning speaks a message that only the Scot can understand, and when sounding the coronach over her fallen sons, in "The Flowers o' the Forest", the heart is seized with an almost uncontrollable emotion. It is said that the music of the pipes is becoming more popular, so possibly the warble of the Highland pibroch may yet supplant the barbaric jazz and tribal dances copied by modern society from the villages of jungleland. "Y' ees sah-h, thet's mah Baih-beeh Oompy Oomp Boom Boom, Boop!

Scottish songs have ever been popular, and their vogue, for some reason or other, was greatly enchanced during the years of the world war. Perhaps Harry Lauder had something to do with it; no prano nowadays atempts to croon Annie Laurie until she has devoted years to the education of her vocal chords.

It has been stated that the greatest honor that can come to any man in any part of the world is to be the principal speaker at the annual Burns Nicht dinner that is held somewhere between January 1st and December 31 incuding Leap Years by the fervent admirers of the deified poet. I fear that with this tempered tribute to the acute resourcefulness and other traits of the Scottish character, I have not in any way improved my chances of achieving the seat of honor.

Total Circulation Canadi Daily Newspapers

THE daily newspaper is the most powerful advertising force in Canada because it is more closely and intimately linked with the lives of Canadian men and women than any other advertising medium. The daily press enjoys this unique influence because it has no rival in the service it renders.

Of all vehicles of advertising the daily newspaper alone fills the basic human need to be informed of what is going on from day to day---to know the news.

2,112,605 Canadian families ---98.5% of the total number in the Dominion --- buy and read daily newspapers.

To these families --- which comprise every class of occupation and every range of income --- the daily newspaper is an indispensable part of the d activities. Its arrival is loo forward to every day. It is always accorded a warm and hearty welcome. Its absence, even for one day, leaves a gap nothing else can fill. No other advertising medium holds so vital a place in the every day life of Canadians as the daily newspaper.

For this reason advertisers--- retailers as well as manufacturers---concentrate much the greater share of their appropriations in daily newspapers. Supplementary media may be used to a minor extent, but both national and retail advertisers know from their sales records that the backbone of every successful advertising campaign in Canada is the daily newspaper.

MANY HEAR MRS. McKOWAN SPEAK AT CRANBROOK

About $100 Added to Woman's Association by Concert and Lecture

CRANBROOK, B. C., Nov. 24—A lecture and concert staged by the Woman's association of the United church on Friday evening was greeted by a full house.

Those contributing to the concert program were: Miss Doris Edward, A.T.C.M., piano; Mrs. Norgrove, vocal solo; Herbert Potter, Miss Kilpatrick, vocal solo; R. Linnel, violin; S. Manson, vocal solo.

MRS. McKOWAN SPEAKS

The hearing accorded Mrs. Evah McKowan during her address, "The Point of View", was excellent. Mrs. McKowan attempted, by allegorical and humorous incident to show the difference betwen various points of view in this and other times. The difference in national attributes and attitudes was reviewed, particularly that between the two great English speaking nations.

Some time was spent in pointing out the alterations in world attitudes toward many human and material institutions, beginning with the altered status of women, economically, maritally and politically, and pointing out how much better off both married and unmarried women are than were their grandmothers of the nineties.

The homes of the "nineties" came in for a considerable amount of satire. The over-ornamentation of that day was shown to be sandwiched in between the better taste of an earlier, colonial age, and the return to better designs of today. The altered attitude in the matter of health was also touched, contrasting the loaded tables of the former generations with the dietetic fads of today. The difference in the way infants are cared for from a health standpoint.

In concluding with the enlightenment that has come to the world in the matter of child training and development the speaker alluded to the different ideas of punishment between this decade and the latter part of the last centure; to the abolition of 'don't' methods and the adoption of a 'do' system: to the mingling of sports with academic subjects in all progressive schools and to the general recognition of the fact that on the training of the young depends the future of the world.

About $100 will be added to the funds of the Woman's association as a result of the evening.
