Terms Reached in Oshawa Strike; Men Expected to Return to Work on Monday

UNION OFFICIALS ACCEPT TERMS; MEN VOTE TODAY

Stewards Give Full Endorsement to the Basis

DETAILS ARE NOT ANNOUNCED YET

Hepburn Tells of the "Amicable" Talks Carried on

OSHAWA, Ont., April 22 (CP)—Stewards of Oshawa Union tonight gave "unanimous and enthusiastic endorsement" to the basis of settlement to end the strike at General Motors of Canada, Limited. They will recommend to the union membership tomorrow it accept the settlement proposals reached today in the office of Premier Mitchell Hepburn, it was announced by J. L. Cohen, union counsel.

The 70 union stewards who represented the 3700 employees on strike since April 8 were addressed tonight by George Day, chairman of the bargaining committee, C. H. Millard, president of the Oshawa local of the United Automobile Workers of America and Cohen.

Neither Cohen nor Millard would discuss terms of the settlement. "Each side gave an undertaking to Premier Hepburn that it would not divulge the proposals," said Cohen.

They also refused to confirm or deny reported terms published by The Globe and Mail in Toronto.

PREMIER'S STATEMENT

TORONTO, April 22 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced late today that terms of settlement had been reached between General Motors of Canada and its 3700 striking Oshawa employees.

A mass meeting of the strikers in Oshawa tomorrow will be asked to ratify the proposed settlement.

The only comment from J. L. Cohen, union counsel, was that the terms finally arrived at were "eminently satisfactory."

The statement issued by the premier follows:

"After lengthy and amicable negotiations carried on between the government, the General Motors officials and the committee representing the employees of General Motors, headed by their solicitor, J. L. Cohen, a complete agreement was arrived at and, at this moment, only the approval of the employees, to whom the matter will be referred at a mass meeting to be called for tomorrow, is required.

"As soon as tomorrow's meeting places its stamp of approval on our actions of today the General Motors executive will announce that the plant at Oshawa will be re-opened on Monday morning."

Police Catch Father Divine

To Be Taken to New York to Face Assault Charge; Suspect Using Bootleg Coal

NEW YORK, April 22 (AP).—More official heat was turned on in Father Divine's Harlem heaven today as two detectives left to bring the dapper little negro back from Milford, Conn., to face an assault charge.

Assistant District Attorney John C. McErmott began an inquiry* to determine the source of coal used to keep the peace mission warm for Divine's adoring "angels."

The prosecutor, assigned some months ago to halt the traffic in illicitly mined coal, voiced a suspicion that the fuel used at the place was of questionable origin.

This development followed a series of jarring blows that have shaken the serenity of Divine's "heaven-on-earth" during the last few days.

First there was a rumpus when a process server tried to hand the

Ottawa Willing to Aid Probe of the Doukhobors

To Act If B. C. Deems Investigation Is Necessary

OTTAWA, April 22 (CP)—Cabinet council today put the finishing touches on terms of reference for the royal commission on economic relations between the Dominion and the provinces but its details will not be made public until personnel of the commission has been selected. This may take place while he is in London attending the Imperial conference, Prime Minister Mackenzie King stated tonight after a five-hour meeting of the government.

Consideration was also given the situation in British Columbia where activities of the Doukhobors recently caused Premier Pattullo to make representations to the federal government. Mr. King said he would advise Mr. Pattullo the government here would cooperate in carrying on an investigation if such were deemed necessary by the provincial authorities.

Today's meeting was the last scheduled before Mr. King and four of his ministers leave for London. They will sail from Quebec Saturday and will probably be absent from Canada about 10 weeks.

L. C. BROUILETTE DEAD

VANCOUVER, April 22 (CP). — The career of a prominent western grainman, who rose from operator of a northern Saskatchewan farm to the presidency of Saskatchewan's wheat pool, was ended here tonight with the death of L. C. Brouilette. He was 51 years old.

Suffering from cancer, Mr. Brouilette came here for treatment and entered hospital April 15. His condition steadily became worse.

His wife and daughter were believed en route here from their Regina home.

HOOD RECALLED, ROYAL OAK IS TO TAKE ITS PLACE

LONDON, April 22 (CP Cable)—The admiralty announced today that Rear-Admiral Charles Gordon Ramsey, commander of the second battle squadron, will relive Vice-Admiral Geoffrey Blake as senior naval officer in Northern Spanish waters.

Ramsey will hoist his flag in the battleship Royal Oak, which will sail from Devonport Saturday for Spain. Blake, commander of the battle cruiser squadron, will return with his flagship, H.M.S. Hood, to Portsmouth, where the vessel, the most powerful warship afloat, will be prepared for the coronation naval review off Spithead May 20.

BRITAIN WILLING TO JOIN CONFAB

LONDON, April 22 (AP)—Great Britain joined today the lengthening list of European nations who would like a world conference to adjust economic barriers to trade.

The government indicated, too, its hope to discuss great war debts with the United States. Debate in the house of commons produced a reiteration of willingness to pay when the time is ripe.

Prime Minister Baldwin told the house the government was ready to enter a world "mutual understanding" conference such as Reichsfuehrer Hitler suggested this week that President Roosevelt might call.

Britain would enter, however, only if prior investigation showed the conference was likely to succeed and only if there were sufficient advance preparation.

MADRID AGAIN IS TARGET OF REBEL ARTILLERY SHELLS

Death Toll Mounts to 250 in Streets of the Capital

BRITISH VESSELS SAIL FOR BILBAO

Food Ships to Attempt to Run Blockade of Insurgents

By the Associated Press

Siege guns outside war-scarred Madrid poured a new rain of shells into the once-beautiful city Thursday, bringing the death toll in 11 consecutive days of heavy bombardment close to 250.

There was one let-up in the artillery attack—and during that time government troops struck hard in the Usera suburb to the west, pushing insurgents out of front lines they had held since they reached the edge of Madrid last November.

The almost incessant shelling brought angry demands from harried Madrilenos for extreme action to sweep away the besiegers. Newspapers urged "violence for violence" and warned that insurgent-held cities should not expect kindness from government attacks.

The Gran Via, Madrid's most important thoroughfare, again was the target of the insurgent artillerymen. Shells tore gaping holes in the pavement and littered it with debris. At least 30 persons were killed.

The government recounted successes on two other fronts. It said an insurgent troop train, en route to the Teruel front in eastern Spain, plunged to destruction through a dynamited bridge over the Giloca river, and that a company of 170 insurgents had deserted to the government side on the Cordoba front, in the south.

Three British food ships, lying in at St. Jean de Luz, France, prepared to follow the lead of the British freighter Seven Seas Spray in an effort to run the insurgent blockade of government-held Bilbao, on the Bay of Biscay.

Inspectors of the international non-intervention committee at Bordeaux, France, were foiled in their effort to search the British freighter Sarastone for contraband—they retreated from the stench of decaying food in the holds. Dock workers who staged a "slow-down strike" when they were ordered to unload the ship, were blamed for permitting the rotting of the food, destined for near-starving Bilbao residents.

FREIGHTERS SET SAIL

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, France, April 22 (CP).—Three British freighters loaded with food left here at 11:30 o'clock tonight to run the Spanish insurgent blockade of Bilbao harbor, on Spain's northern coast.

The ships were the 2000-ton freighter MacGregor, Hamsterley and Stambrook. They were forced to seek shelter here more than a week ago when turned back on their way to Bilbao by threats from insurgent warcraft.

Shipping circles said the freighters had been authorized to attempt to run the blockade by their owners in England. They will be protected by British warships if necessary up to the Spanish three-mile limit.

It was estimated the three freighters would arrive off Bilbao, capital of the autonomous Basque province, about an hour before dawn tomorrow.

Picket Vancouver Restaurant

VANCOUVER, April 22 (CP).—The Hotel and Restaurant Employees' association today began picketing a downtown self-serve restaurant, claiming the management had discharged a cashier for alleged union activities.

A spokesman for the strikers said they were seeking union recognition and a small increase in wages.

The restaurant manager said he did not know the discharged cashier was a member of the union and claimed that other employees were satisfied.

MRS. NORTON ASSERTS SHE IS STILL CONVINCED CLARK GABLE IS THE FATHER OF HER CHILD

LOS ANGELES, April 22 (AP).—Mrs. Violet Wells Norton declared today she is convinced that Clark Gable, screen idol, is the "Frank Billings" whose mistress she was in England and who she declares is the unwed father of her daughter.

The 47-year-old Englishwoman from Winnipeg on trial charged with having named Gable the father of Gwendoline Norton, 13, and of trying to extract money from him, made the declaration when she was cross-examined by Federal Prosecutor John Powell.

"I am still convinced that he (Gable) is one and same man," she said.

Before she was placed in the witness chair, the court gave her permission to approach Gable and view him at close quarters. This was while Gable was on the stand as a defence witness.

Gable has testified that he never was in England, and that during 1922 and 1923, when, Mrs. Norton says, "Frank Billings" was her lover in Essex, England, he was doing odd jobs in Oregon.

As a defence witness, Gable, who has denied that he ever saw Mrs. Norton before the trial, was quizzed regarding letters Mrs. Norton sent to him in which she represented her daughter, Gwendoline, 13, as Gable's daughter and asked him to help support her.

He was on the stand briefly, then excused for the duration of the trial.

A novelette in letter form, in which Mrs. Norton offered Gable her "heart and mind," was read to a perked-up federal jury.

"You and I understand each other," she wrote. "We could have a swell time. Nobody in the world would ever know. I would sooner make love to you than harm you, but I get desperate."

Another letter concerned Gwendoline—how closely she resembled Gable, in looks and actions, how she adored Gable on the screen, how badly she needed his aid, financial and moral.

Gwendoline once milked a cow, employing the same technique as Gable did in a picture. She was fussy with her food. Once she took the top off an egg and would not eat it.

"I believe this is one of your traits," the letter said.

She asked that Gable place Gwendoline in a school and raise her to be a great actress.

Four Inmates of Hospital; Liver Affected by Illness That Puzzles Medical Men

New Investigation Overshadows Continued Probe of Incendiarism: Laboratory Tests and Analyses Seek Poison Nature

TWO FATALITIES REPORTED ARE AMONG FANATIC SONS AT KRESTOVA

Verigin Appears Today at Castlegar on Two Charges, Vagrancy and Driving to the Common Danger on Trail Highway

Two Doukhobors are said to have died and four others are under treatment in Kootenay Lake General hospital, one of them in serious condition, with an ailment that is puzzling Nelson medical men. The two deaths are reported to have occurred at Krestova, Sons of Freedom centre; and of the four under treatment three are from Krestova and one from Slocan Park. In one of the cases no other members of the patient's family were ill.

The illness has the appearance of poisoning, doctors say, apparently affecting the liver, but the exact nature of it has not been determined. Whether it is the result of a poisonous weed or root or other food these persons may have eaten, or whether it may be the result of an administered poison is entirely a matter of conjecture. Laboratory tests and analyses are being made in an effort to determine its exact nature.

VITAL STATISTICS

The Krestova deaths and the illness of the four under treatment are pointed to as outstanding examples of the need for Doukhobors to be "brought into line" in registration of vital statistics. Authorities point out they would have no report of the deaths at Krestova had it not been for the four entering Kootenay Lake General hospital for treatment. If, they add, the deaths had been reported in line with the law, the cause of death might have been established and medical men would then probably know what caused the illnes and be able to treat the other victims.

It is also pointed out that epidemics might range among the Doukhobors without knowledge of the authorities, that virulent disease might cause many deaths of which nothing would be known under present conditions, and that lacking knowledge of it the authorities would be unable to take steps to pre-

C.I.L. PLANS NEW WAREHOUSE

New concrete warehouse, to cost approximately $1000, is to be built by Canadian Industries Limited, explosives branch, at Nelson at the rear of the company's office on Baker street, it was announced Thursday by Guy W. Davis, manager of the Nelson branch.

The building, measuring 40 by 16 feet inside, will be of concrete with galvanized roof. It will be used to store safety fuse. The company has aonther warehouse on the Granite road for storing explosives.

To build the new warehouse the company will tear down the present frame building at the rear of its office—the building that served as Nelson's first school and first church. It formerly occupied the ground on which the present brick structure was erected, and was moved back to serve as a warehouse.

MRS. SIMPSON'S FIRST DIVORCE NOT LEGAL?

Question Is Raised by Lawyer; Wedding Plans Made

LONDON, April 22 (AP) — A. Berriedale Keith, famous lawyer, questioned the validity of Wallis Simpson's first divorce in Virginia again today because, he said, a date and place for her marriage to the Duke of Windsor has been fixed.

He raised the issue as frieinds of the two disclosed final plans were being made for a June wedding, probably at the Chateau de Cande, Tours, France. Definite date, however, was reported witheld until the Duke's arrival at the chateau after Mrs. Simpson's English divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson is made final, April 27.

Keith, who urged the government last month to remove all doubt of Mrs. Simpson's marital status, wrote the Edinburgh Scotsman, saying: "The only divorces which English law certainly recognized as dissolving marriages effectively for purposes of status in England are those granted in the court of the husband's domicile."

He said "it seems plain that Mrs. Simpson's first husband was not domiciled in Virginia."

Mrs. Simpson was divorced from Lieut.-Commander E. W. Spencer, U. S. Navy, in 1927 at Warrenton, Va.

Keith suggested Prime Minister Baldwin be asked categorically to state if his advisers say the proposed marriage of the Duke and Mrs. Simpson is valid. An affirmative reply, he said, would enable acceptance of the assurance; in the event of a negative reply Keith urged a special act of parliament saying Mrs. Simpson in the eyes of the English law is unmarried when her English decree nisi becomes absolute.

Waitress Slain in N. Y. Club

Cleaver-Like Weapon Apparently Used; Body Found in Vestibule; Seek Cafe Man

NEW YORK, April 22 (AP).—A killer who wielded a cleaver-like weapon with vicious force was sought by police tonight in connection with the fatal slashing of pretty Irene Wadas, 30-year-old waitress.

Miss Wadas, latest victim of a series of passion crimes, was attacked as she was about to leave the Columbia Residence club on the Upper West Side, for work this morning.

Her body, bearing marks of a violent struggle, was found slumped in the darkened vestibule of the club, where she had occupied a one-room apartment with Thomas Hickey, a distributor of pin-ball games.

Deputy Inspector Richard F. Oliver said medical examiners found two deep gashes from a "rough-edged knife, probably a cleaver," on the woman's body.

Police began a search for a man identified by Lieut. Edward Kiley as Louis Karas, 30, a counterman who formerly worked with Miss Wadas in an Eighth avenue cafeteria, for questioning.

James Sanios, proprietor of the cafeteria, told Inspector Oliver he had discharged Karas because he annoyed the woman. About two months ago he was compelled to let her go too, he said, because Karas continued to frequent the place.

LATE FESTIVAL RESULTS FROM TRAIL

Following are the results in the last four classes of Thursday evening's competition in the Kootenay Musical festival at Trail:

Class 62, duet for violin and piano forte, open—Maude Dolphin, violin, 83, Ruby M. Young, piano, 82, total 165, Nelson; Otto Neidermann, violin, 80, Mrs. C. H. Wright, piano, 82, total 162, Trail.

The adjudicator gave first place certificates to each of the pianists. To Miss Dolphin he gave first for violin and to Mr. Neidermann second.

The class resolved itself into a contest between the two violinists. One was an over-vital player who dominated the picture too much A high degree of finish was not there. The other violinist was extremely sensitive, had a wide range, knew when to be graceful and when to live up to the big movements. The adjudicator admired Mr. Neidermann for his memory, Miss Dolphin having played with music. However, Mr. Neidermann's playing had a certain roughness, condoned by a good deal of real musical feeling. His intonations were not always impeccable, and there was no attempt to play pianissimo. Miss Dolphin was a smooth player, musically refined practically throughout. Intelligence and feeling for beauty was apparent. A great insight and understanding were shown.

Class 31, vocal solo, bass, open—Ralph Smith, Trail, 80; only contestant.

The adjudicator was sorry that the piece, "The Vagabond," by R. Lee Williams, was hardly suited to the singer. However, he sang with care and intelligence. Dr. Whitehead was pleased with the tone in the soft spots of the song.

The singer was thinking more of color than beauty in the stronger parts but he had learned to breath well and to control his breath properly.

Class 86, instrumental solo, challenge competition, open — R. E. Stretton, Nelson, cellist, 84; Otto Neidermann, violinist, Trail, 80.

The cellist was extremely artistic and sensitive, the violinist overvital. The former had lovely tone, used with skill and understanding. His playing varied rhythmically and colorfully. The pianist was too strong for the cellist and too reticent for the violinist. However, there were no team marks given.

Class 36, ladies' duet, open—Elsie Liddicoat and Dorothy Liddicoat, Grand Forks, 84; only contestants.

These voices were charming and highly finished. The singers were a well schooled and a carefully practiced pair.

W. M. S. ENTERTAINED

Members of the Women's Missionary society were entertained Tuesday afternoon at the home of the president, Miss A. A. Allen.

The devotional topic, chosen by Mrs. M. Kerr was "The Joy of Serving Jesus." Mrs. Kerr said that to help humanity Godward was the greatest privilege possible and that a true Christian was always on duty.

A letter was read from Mrs. G. E. Forbes, dominion board president of the Women's Missionary society.

Miss Allen read a clipping of interest to Nakusp members, telling of an honor recently bestowed on Mrs. E. M. Clarke of Vancouver, recently elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical society of London. Mrs. Clarke, who is a seasonal eastern traveller, gave a lecture on "China" in Nakusp last year under auspices of the missionary society.

Miss Fawcett and Miss R. Hamer rendered, "Just a Little Gift for Jesus."

Tea was served by the hostess assisted by Miss Fawcett.

Those present were Miss Allen, Miss Fawcett, Mrs. M. Kerr, Mrs. M. Ion, Mrs. W. Vinall, Mrs. McRoberts, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. C. B. Hambling, Mrs. R. Brodie, Mrs. A. J. Harrison, Mrs. E. C. Johnson and Miss R. Hamer.

TRACES FROST, SNOW ON MOUNTAIN TOPS

Wintry winds, fresh snow on the mountain tops and slight traces of frost reported on Fairview sidewalks marked Thursday's weather in Nelson.

Four and a half hours of sunshine robbed a brisk wind of its chill for a short period, but later Nelsonites moved briskly to escape its bite. The temperature, sinking to the freezing point during the previous night, left faint traces of frost on Nelson sidewalks. The high for the day was 53.

Threatening heavy rains were held off through the constant movement of the clouds and an early morning fall left only traces in the rain gauge.

Five Prisoners Received, Jail

Five new prisoners received at the provincial jail at Nelson and two discharged made the number of prisoners in the jail on Thursday 44.

Two of the new men were from Trail—Mory Morris and Alphonse Grieff, formerly of Nelson, sentenced to a month at hard labor for theft of a car driveshaft. Constable G. C. Thomson escorted them to Nelson.

Constable R. H. Hassard of the provincial police detachment at Creston brought Eli Alexander, sentenced to jail under the Indian act for intoxication; and Lazarus Louie, who is to serve a term for driving while intoxicated.

Mike Reibin is held at the jail awaiting trial for breaking and entering a Canadian Pacific railway dining car. He was arrested by Constable D. A. Sinclair of the C.P.R. police.

LISTOWEL, Ont. (CP)—A memorial tablet to General William Booth was unveiled in Listowel United church, recalling a service the Salvation Army founder conducted there in 1895.

DIOCESAN WOMEN'S AUXILIARY MAKES GRANTS VARIOUS CAUSES

Presentation to Mrs. Horswill; Dominion Delegates

Three-day sessions of the Kootenay Diocesan Women's Auxiliary here came to a close at noon Thursday, but the annual business done by the delegate gathering was supplemented by an afternoon of work by the new executive board, which included the voting of various grants.

These included $23.50 voted to the Chinese mission; $25 to the fund for a motorboat on the Arrow Lakes for the use of the bishop; $5 to the Algoma diocese; $15 toward providing a horse for a missionary at Fort Vermilion, crippled as a result of having been frozen; and $15 toward the maintenance of the Sunday school van.

An episode of the reception of reports, which continued from sitting to sitting, was the presentation Wednesday to Mrs. A. T. Horswill of Nelson, who was retiring from the office of treasurer, of a life membership, gift of the officers and members of the diocesan board or executive, in recognition of her devoted service as a diocesan officer. At the same time she was presented with a corsage bouquet, gift of her own branch.

OFFICERS' REPORTS

The closing sessions saw the remaining reports of diocesan officers presented, including those by Mrs. C. H. Burgess, Little Helpers secretary; Miss Ellison, Vernon, boys secretary, read by Miss M. F. Gibson; Mrs. Ivor Barnes, united thank offering secretary; Mrs. James Audley, Dorcas secretary; Mrs. C. Hookings, fellowship secretary; Mrs. A. Martin, girls secretary; and Mrs. C. F. Orman, juniors secretary. The two last mentioned were presented Thursday forenoon. Mrs. Hookings is organizing 40 isolated women into a branch.

Three delegates were elected to represent the Diocesan Auxiliary at the Dominion annual meeting, to be held at Halifax, the choice falling upon Mrs. H. A. Solly of Summerland, Mrs. Hamilton Watts of Vernon and Mrs. A. L. McCallum of Trail, with Mrs. F. V. Harrison of Cranbrook, Mrs. A. J. Doull of Vernon and Mrs. Beresford of Revelstoke named as alternates.

VOTES OF THANKS

Many votes of thanks were extended by the delegate gathering at its closing session, among the recipients being Rt. Rev. Walter R. Adams, D.D., Bishop of Kootenay, who gave the annual service and officiated at holy communion; the rector and wardens of St. Saviour's, for use of the pro-cathedral and the Memorial hall; the choir and organist of St. Saviours; Rev. J. G. Holmes and Rev. W. J. Silverwood for taking the "quiet half-hour" service; the vicar and wardens of the Church of the Redeemer, for use of church and parish hall; Ven. Archdeacon Fred H. Graham, for taking Wednesday evening's service; the Mothers' club of St. Saviour's, which provided the luncheons; the Church Helpers of St. Saviour's and the Women's Auxiliary girls and the Service club of the Church of the Redeemer, who served the teas; Mrs. E. H. H. Applethwaite, the president, who was hostess for the social evening Tuesday; and the Nelson Daily News for reports.

The delegates also extended their thanks to the president and officers for their untiring efforts during the year, for excellent reports, and for the harmonious spirit that prevailed, and in a special resolution thanked the hostesses at whose homes they were entertained.

Adjudicator Cuts the Pieces to Save Valued Time

DR. WHITEHEAD IS POPULAR OFFICIAL

Trail Wins in Piano, Nelson in Elocution, Violin and Solo

TRAIL, B.C., April 22. — Eighth annual Kootenay Musical festival being held here today, Friday and Saturday, got away to a smooth start Thursday morning, only about 20 minutes behind schedule. Successive class competitions of the morning session were staged with delightful precision, everyone being on hand and eagerly awaiting their turn.

Time was at a premium as the session advanced and in Class 75, girls' or boys' elocution, under nine years, the adjudicator asked competitors to give only one of the two pieces, the one which they preferred.

Time did not permit hearing of Class 9, junior church choirs, of which there are four competing, in the morning, the class being switched to the opening of the afternoon program.

ADJUDICATOR POPULAR

Introduced by B. A. Stimmel, president of the Kootenay Musical festival, Alfred Whitehead, Mus. D., F.R.C.O., became instantly popular with the large audience which attended the opening session of the festival in the K.P. hall this morning. Immediately following, Rev. Frederic G. St.Denis read the invocation, and the first class started at 9 o'clock.

With entries from Nelson far outnumbering those from Trail or Rossland in the early session, points for Nelson had increased.

Announcement was made that points of the first prize winner in each class only would be totalled for competition in the grand aggregate honors. All first prize winner points would be totalled, the aggregate being divided by the number of entrants from each city. In this manner an equal chance would be given to smaller town competition for aggregate prizes.

Doctor Whitehead confined his adjudications to the briefest of suggestions. In his opening remarks he asserted he understood the quality of competition in the Kootenay Musical festival, and later remarked the reputation of quality was justified. It was his first visit to Trail and his first time to adjudicate a festival in the mainland of British Columbia, he stated.

In Class 75, elocution for girls and boys under nine years of age, there were 15 entries, all from Nelson.

GERALD LEVEY WINS

Following are the results of the morning sessions:

Class 40—Pianoforte: Under eight years—Gerald Levey, Trail, 80-82—162; Patricia Yates, Trail, 80-80—160; Beverley Watts, Trail, 80-77—157; Sheila Singer, Rossland, 80-76—156.

TRAIL PAIR WIN

Class 49—Pianoforte duet: Under 11 years—Carol Wright and Betty Cumming, Trail, 82; Joan Allison and Jean Coghlin, Trail, 81; Mary Maximenko and Clara Wise, Trail, 80; Esther Brodie and Dolores Ward, Nelson, 75; John Palmer and Beverley Jeffares, Trail, 74.

Adjudicator's remarks: March like speed was necessary for the correct interpretation of this number. Speed and feeling both necessary. Many details of phrasing yet not one of the duetists got quite the right combination of speed and phrasing. One was overlooked by the other. The players who phrased well could have speeded up but the speedier players might not have been able to achieve the expression. In this particular duet the bottom player had equally as difficult a task to perform as the top player. Individual remarks—

1—No phrasing. Some dull stretches. Memory good but not sufficient variation.

2—Careful playing but spirit lacking. Generally played together. A good team, with nice tone.

3—Right spirit. More vitality and crispness needed. Interesting playing with only one or two inaccuracies.

4—Shade slow; this the only real criticism. Tone bright with good feeling. Base and treble both good. Intelligent and clear playing.

5—Careful playing but a bit slow. Shade unsteady in time with a tendency to hurry. Both intelligent players making an excellent team.

GORDON FLEMING WINS

Class 54: Violin solo: Under 10 years—Gordon Fleming, Nelson, 81-80—161; Zenia Olga Lypchuk, Trail, 80-79—159; Glenna Lowes, Nelson, 80-78—158; Margaret True Haggard, Trail, 78-76—154; Norman A. Young, Nelson, 77-76—153.

Adjudicator's remarks: These little fiddlers had a difficult task to perform. Violinists of such a tender age needed only one test selection as two were a little too much. Must attend to pitch of notes, which is rather difficult for those so young. The fact that the player had to make his own notes was evident in most of the contestants. There was not sufficient study of the pieces and greater expression was needed. The three winners were very promising players.

PAUL HIELSCHER WINS

Adjudicator's remarks: Intelligent singers. Very promising. Decision made on intelligent application of the song, phrasing, expression and words. Voice a deciding factor made difficult by the number of lovely singers. Special remarks:

5—Interesting over the whole range. Put the song over. Development of tone needs attention.

DOLORES SMITH WINS

Class 75—Elocution: Under nine years—All of Nelson—Dolores Jean Smith, 81; Denny Craft, 80; Kathleen Curran, 79; Rose J. Beatty, 79; Dolores Liza Ward, 78; Aileen Cathers, 78; Glenys Mansell, 78; Anne Hamilton, 78; Francis Schumaker, 77; Bill Walley, 77; Peggy Smith, 76; Joan Hunter, 76; Douglas A. Smith, 76; Levina Stilwell, 76.

Adjudicator's remarks: Plenty of expression needed in the selection chosen. An excellent opportunity to differentiate between conversation and aside. The aside not often realized. Different tone not always noticed. The prize winners solved the problem in a better manner.

KASLO CHOIR WINS

Class 5—Small or rural school choirs, not over 20 voices.

The Kaslo school choir, conducted by Miss M. E. Moscrop, was the only entrant. The adjudicator called theirs delightful singing with good rhythm. Their consonants were better than the vowels. There were no expression marks on the music but a few could have been inserted by their clever conductress. He gave 80 marks for each of the two numbers. Miss Moscrop was presented the P. H. Sheffield shield held last year also by a Kaslo choir, conducted by Miss Margaret Smith.

General Manager Is Turned Back by a Derailed Freight

Three Cars Take to Ties at Boulder; Salmo Base

Diverted from the intention of visiting Nelson on his tour of inspection, by derailment of three freight cars at Boulder, R. A. McCandless, new western general manager of the Great Northern, made Salmo his base for several hours Thursday, when inspecting the Nelson-Marcus branch for the first time since his appointment to his new post.

The general manager and his party of district and division officials got an early start from Marcus, Wash., which would have landed them in Nelson by noon instead of 2 o'clock, the hour originally planned, had the southbound freight from Nelson not jumped the rails at Boulder about half an hour before the party's track-motor was due at that point.

Though not getting to Nelson, the boss railroaders saw the three cars that took to the ties neatly restored to the rails by the frog appliances, and the track was all clear by 4 p. m., when the party was en route to Marcus.

The party consisted of R. A. McCandless, Seattle, western general manager; G. G. Smart, Seattle, general roadmaster; E. E. Adams, Seattle, district engineer; J. L. Close, Spokane, division superintendent; A. Mitguard, Spokane, division roadmaster; C. Johnson, Spokane, assistant district roadmaster; and E. E. Burr, Spokane, division engineer.

She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Bertha and Marian, and one son, William; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Pollock, three sisters, Mrs. Jack Drake, and the Misses Ina and Greta Pollock and five brothers, Hume, William, John, James and Alexander, all of Rossland.

15 TO 20 FLOATS ARE "LINED UP" FOR CORONATION, JUNIOR BOARD OF TRADE IS INFORMED

That the junior board of trade had been charged with promoting the float section of the Coronation day parades at Nelson, and that 15 to 20 floats had already been "lined up," was stated by Stanley Penney, chairman of the committee in charge, at a supper meeting of the board at the Golden Gate Thursday evening. E. J. Goos, president, was in the chair.

Mr. Penney stated his committee was receiving a splendid response, and that the drive would continue. The junior board expected to make an outstanding success of its first venture in public activity. It was also intended to enter a float for the board. Prizes of $40, $20 and $10 had been posted, he stated. Mr. Penney also urged members to broadcast among boys and girls the information that prizes were posted also for decorated bicycles.

EXCELLENT RECEPTION

Reporting for the cleanup and health committee, Robert Foxall, chairman, declared the city council had given him a fine reception when he waited on it to offer the cooperation of the junior board in the annual Arbor day cleanup. He read a letter from W. E. Wasson, city clerk, expressing appreciation of the offer and stating cleanup day had been set for May 5.

President Goos pointed out the committee was not to be active on Arbor day alone, but that it should continue to keep its eyes open all through the year and extend every effort toward making the city clean and attractive.

Letter from E. C. L. Sands of New Westminster congratulated the board on its organization, and another from J. M. Straight of New Westminster, a director of the Junior Chambers of Commerce of Canada, extended an invitation to join this body.

Rev. James Ritchie, chaplain of the board, marked his first meeting by asking the blessing at the opening.

Constitution of the board was read and adopted. The third Thursday of each month was set for meetings.

SIX COMMITTEES

Six standing committees so far appointed were announced. It was stated additional committees would be named and other members of the board assigned to them. The committees formed to date, the first named in each being chairman, follow:

WATER PISTOL SALES UP FOR THE FESTIVAL

Hundreds of Kiddies Have Fun in Trail When Not Busy

TRAIL, B.C., April 22—As some expressed it "there was heavy traffic on Trail streets" this morning as festival competitiors with time on their hands walked about the city taking in the sights. Others took advantage of valuable moments and got in last minute rehearsals in halls alloted to them. Even the city hall auditorium was used for this purpose and the city hall staff worked to the strains of sweet music.

Boys will be boys, despite attending a festival and stores did a rush business on water pistols. To them it was a holiday and there were many wet necks before the day was out.

Groups of from two to 25 were seen walking about, some just leisurely taking in everything with their eyes, other seeking some designated building to establish headquarters.

Several of the morning participants left for their homes on the noon train out of the city, some wearing smiles of victory.

The morning session was well attended and several of the womenfolk present kept hands busily knitting as they listened to childrens' efforts in pianoforte, vocal and elocution classes.

FACTS AND FANCIES

New Decorative Fabrics

If you want to be cheered up this spring, go to the draperies department of your favorite shop and look over the new materials for home decoration.

There is the "uncrowned king" motiff in chintz, depicting the life of the recently retired ex-king of England, the present Duke of Windsor. Then there are amusing chintzes for the informal room with "bicycles built for two" as one motif, and other equally interesting designs; coronation patterns, Japanese floral and "Gone With the Wind" colonial patterns. The tropics have not been forgotten and contribute elephant leaves, Hawaiian leis, rubber plants and Java prints.

There are materials that are dustproof and most of the fabrics are pre-shrunk and colors guaranteed—which is helpful and practical in choosing new draperies for the home.

Spinach Timbales

Two cups cooked spinach, two egs, one cup milk, two tablespoons butter, one-fourth cup grated cheese, one-half teaspoon salt. Drain spinach well and chop fine. Separate eggs, beat yolks, add milk, melted butter, grated cheese and salt and mix well. Stir in spinach. Beat egg whites stiff, fold into first mixture. Turn into five or six greased individual molds or into one mold. Set molds in a pan containing hot water to a depth of one inch. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, until firm. To test for doneness, insert a clean knife in the center of a mold; if it comes out clean, the custard is baked.

Don't Shake Rugs

It is a very common mistake to shake rugs, Shaking is a strain on the weave. Threads snap and the edges get frayed. Beating, sweeping or using a vacuum cleaner is much better.

LANTERN LOSES ITS MAGIC

A recent survey of youthful preferences in motion pictures shows that children, almost unanimously, dislike sentiment and sentimentality, care little for "love interest," and desire plenty of thrilling adventure and of broad comedy.

Evidently, then, they would not appreciate the fare that was served to their fathers and grandfathers in pictures which were neither talkies nor movies. In fact, the sophisticated modern child probably would not consent to sit through one of the old magic-lantern shows, could they be revived.

Looking back, it is hard now to see wherein lay the appeal of the magic lantern as provider of a whole evening's entertainment, for the slides were far from being works of art and the stories chosen for them to illustrate were notable rather for sickly sentiment than for their relation to the facts of life.

But the appearance of the first picture on the screen invariably evoked a long-drawn "O-o-o-oh!" of delight from the appreciative audience, and the progress of the "play" was followed with breathless interest.

But something there was in the way of comic relief, and even a hint of the movies which were to come.

"Jessica's First Prayer" and "Father, Dear Father, Come Home," would be followed by "Jack the Giant-Kiler" or "Cinderella," and by a series of humorous slides.

Among these last, a favorite showed a surprised looking gentleman sitting up in bed while a succession of mice jumped down his throat. The illusion was managed by revolving a separate portion of the slide, on the margin of which were painted a number of mice. As the glass was turned, these appeared, on the screen, to leap one after the other to their appointed destination.

A double slide on both sections of which were painted geometrical designs in color, being similarly revolved, caused an illusion of a number of brilliant patterns successively evolving a fading.

The magic lantern did its best to hold the allegiance of its admirers; but the best it could do was merely to change its name, and that was not enough. So, though it became in turn limelight views, dissolving views and stereopticon, and although under the last name and with the assistance of photographic slides it still retains some usefulness to serious lecturers, it never again can hope to be the darling of childhood.

As a children's entertainer it is as far behind the times the zoetrope, the stereoscope and the peep show.

And, though it seems impossible now, in a hundred years time some one may be writing in the same key about the talkies.

GOLF GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. Walter Hagen has dramatized the dismal lot of a "golf widow" by suing for a divorce. Her advice to prospective brides of fairway addicts is "Don't."

A New York columnist, with the evident desire to be helpful, wonders if Mrs. Hagen had taken every step possible to make her married life a success. If she simply sat at home, he suggests, and waited for her husband's seasonal return, she probably got just what she deserved. She might have avoided her bereavement by using a little guile. For instance, she could have insisted upon playing golf with her famous husband. Then, every time he prepared to drive, she could hum a little tune. She could have pulled her drives, making it necessary for him to wait as she meandered slowly over the fairway. And she could chatter away about the grandness of Nature, or the drabness of golf togs worn by other women nearby.

In this way, theorizes the columnist, it would only be a matter of time until her exasperated husband caved in, broke his clubs, and became a regular home-body.

The only trouble about this theory is that it is only a theory. It does not seem to have occurred to the cute New York columnist that by such action Mrs. Hagen would herself be giving her husband grounds for divorce. And if the case had come before a golfing judge, he would most certainly have got it.

VERSE

IN MEMORIUM

Although you are gone, you still linger on
In memories dear to me;
There still is a part I have kept in my heart—
A part that is just for thee.
Time is unable to make me forget
For after year I remember you yet;
Your face has not changed as the years have flown by,
Your cheek is still smooth and the smile in your eye.

The smile that often said to me
"Cheer up, the best is yet to be."
And thus you shared each care I had,
And sympathized when I was sad;
I love you more as years pass on—
I love you, even though you've gone.
And when my time on earth is spent
Then I shall go the way you went;
But while I wait to come to thee,
You'll linger on in memory.

—Doris Habegard

BETWEEN YOU and ME By J.B.C.

THE VALUE OF A SMILE

"The thing that goes the farthest toward making life worthwhile,
That costs the least, and does the most, is just a pleasant smile.
The smile that bubbles from the heart that loves its fellowmen,
Will drive away the clouds of gloom and coax the sun again.
It's full of worth and goodness, too, with human kindness bent—
It's worth a million dollars, and it doesn't cost a cent".

ABOUT BARBER SHOP

The red, blue and white striped pole outside a barber's shop has a very real meaning. The local barber used to be the local surgeon, where patients were bled and bandaged. The pole was the symbol of the splint to which a broken arm was found, the white stripe represented the bandages, the blue the veins that had to be opened and the red the blood.

Barbers don't do such doctoring any more, although the enterprising hair dresser will suggest a scalp treatment, the idea probably being that a treatment a day keeps baldness away, just as an apple a day is said to keep the doctor away. However, one need not place too much confidence in commercial proverbs.

The last census showed that there was one barber for every 470 of the population. That is not very many, which may bring to mind that occasionally the thrifty mother still trims her boy's long locks in the old fashioned way by slipping a bowl over his head and clipping around it.

There has been a remarkable growth of late in the number of barbers in Canada. Women with their beauty shoppes have taken a strong hand in the business and have added amazingly to the number of barbers and hairdressers. In ten years the ladies have increased ten times. There are not yet as many female as male barbers, however something like seven thousand to over 16,000. The men increased from nearly 11,000 to over 16,000 but the women from 660 to 6700 odd, a huge percentage gain, according to the census branch of the Dominion bureau of statistics, department of trade and commerce.

After having spent the evening

DOG-GONE IT ANYWAY

NEW YORK—Now women are dressing to match or harmonize with Fido, when they take him out on a leash.

Gowns and hats keyed to the color scheme of great danes, poodles and other dogs were part of a big Park avenue fashion show, called "dawn to dusk."

The champion dogs of the East who helped model the display looked a little bored by it all, but onlookers applauded the plan of dressing to bring out Fido's best points.

Women with black and white spotted dalmatians on leash wore black and white prints similar to the dogs' spots in pattern.

Here were some more of the outfits for the guidance of women who wish to know just what to wear when walking the dog:

With collies—Scotch plaid suits, or a slik dress of a color highlighting the dog's tawny hue, and large hat.

With a pair of sturdy great danes—a filmy long-skirted white gown and garden party sort of hat, very feminine.

With Russian wolfhounds—sables, no less.

SAINT GEORGE (AND HIS PEOPLE)

By GERALD S. REES

"Time and the ocean and some fostering star
In high cabal have made us what we are."

Once annually let the Englishman creep from hiding place to rekindle the fire of a righteous patriotism and also recall that April 23rd marks the natal day of a non-legendary character, William Shakespeare, poet, playwright and actor who knew his country well and honored Merrie England in deathless verse—"God for Harry; England! and St. George!"

"OH, TO BE IN ENGLAND. . ,"

A little country now merrily springlike, despite the clenched fists and inconoclastic ravings of alien colored shirtists of ungentle persuasions across the narrow channel.

"O'er the land, spring's magic whisper floats
Old Earth believes his ancient lies once more
And runs to meet him in golden coat."

Springtime over yonder in the little island under the North Star offers a breath-taking glory. Untarnished gold of laburnam, broom and gorse in riotous bloom, coral pink and warm red of hawthorn cascading down weathered grey walls, white blossoms of chestnut burgeoning like candles at dusk. . . English earth grows young again under soft caressing airs and a translucent tapestry of emerald green mistily mantles the countryside. Snowdrop and wood violet, crocus and primrose gently nod their heads together in crazy patchwork of color in the dells and spinneys; tall tulips, purple and gold, neat and trim, stand sentinel before the doors of white-plastered cottages with thatched roofs. The first swallow skims the blue and away in the West Countrie "down Zummerzet way", cherry trees slowly shed pink and white pearly petals and make a sweet scented fairyland of the orchards. Birds trill transports of melodious song, and the haunting cry of the early cuckoo is heard in the fragrant twilight. . .

LAND O' THE LEAL

May the writer here interpose that when known the gentle mistress of a Mountain Garden had passed to fairer fields of endeavor a few weeks before the coming of springtime to the Rockies, "when designs are wrought in bloom where lately lay deep snow", he rejoiced to know that during her sojourn in earth's green garden, the mistress had sometime glimpsed the beauty of the English southlands, and that her appreciative sense of loveliness in Nature had furnished Homeland memories aglint with gold. . .

YE KNIGHT TEMPLARS OF OLD

Crusaders in forays of knight-errantry rallied to battle cry—"St. George for England". Centuries later, his meteor flag, blood-red cross on a white ground fluttered proudly from masthead of many a stout ship sailing the high seas long before the crosses of the other Kingdoms became united in the "Union Jacques". Our patron saint, his emblem a rose, red or white, with legendary tomb on banks of Asian Orontes river is commemorated in the beautiful chapel of St. George in royal Windsor. His fight with the dragon symbolizes Truth overcoming error and is representative of the forging of civilization in clash of East and West and suppression of the serpent cult on the Cappadocian plains three thousand years before Christ. Time and imagination have wrenched it from setting and placed fragments deep in the folklore of every land. Of such stuff, fabled Lion and Unicorn, legend Knights of the Table Round in Tennyson's Arthurian Idylls, and story-book Robin Hood with his merry long-bowmen of seven centuries ago.

EACH TO HIS CHOICE

Erin's man for Ireland, Scotia's lad for Scotland, and Albion's son for England, the last immortalized in jingle of rhymester playwright knight—"He might have been a Rooshian, French or Prooshian, or perhaps I-tal-i-an; But in spite of all temptations to belong to other nations. He remains an Englishman." Unwillingly a subscriber to the policy of muddling through, he accedes to popular belief of inefficiency in conduct of Government and wars, also mismanagement of a much maligned climate, and fosters the notion that foreign "flipper-fisting" diplomacy is too wily for his own credulous and simple statesman.

HIS WORD HIS BOND

Credited with complex qualities of character, he holds no monopoly on virtue or vice; he has a lurking sympathy with the under-dog, and a profound respect for law and order—a tradition of self-government. Not naturally bellicose, he has pertinacity a-plenty and a casual coolness even with back to the wall. A late starter, in the spirit of "time to finish the game," he wins the last battle in any war—the only one that matters! Slow on the uptake, he eventually responds to persuasive propaganda and the cacophony of mass mesmerism—with us since the dawn of history—but remains at heart an individualist against odds, though willing enough to combine for mutual service without the driving impulse of club affiliations. From heart rather than brain his humor—only the native-born can fully appreciate Punch! He is not currently palpitant over protective preparations against aero gas attacks, and considers drinking tea through gasmasks in bombproof cellars decidedly in poor taste.

Sassenach (as well as Scot) has accomplished much in the various multiplying mediums of what we term civilization, but rejoices more in reliable reputation for fair play and justice between race and race, regardless of creed or color. Let this be chalked up against many failures and backslidings.

EMPIRE AND KING WILLOW

Good-humored millions will throng London's gaily beflagged streets for the Coronation in merrie month of May; turbanned Oriental Nabobs and lesser dusky potentates, guarded by nearly all his Majesty's private soldiers, will be accorded warmest welcome and hearty British cheers will punctuate processional passage of all the King's horses and all the King's men.

Thereafter there will be a scrambling for suburbia to discuss over 'high tea,' a sacrosanct feast, the crowning of a rival summer-time monarch, King Willow, for the cricket season will then be due! A witty Frenchman claims cricket was invented to express the Englishman's idea of eternity! The national pastime for able-bodied men of ages between fourteen and sixty-five, where the butcher or the roadman in a cloth cap and braces is just as likely as the Squire's son in the M.C.C. colors to hit the ball into the next parish or bowl the county player with a snorter, in its native lair is an art and a religion, a serious tea-party as much an accepted institution as the Horse-Guards, fish and chips and the old school tie! The state of Europe is a matter of indifference during the biennial Test Matches for the mythical Ashes between England and Australia. The Aussies won the Ashes again this year, leaving England the sackcloth! There is little gambling on cricket matches, but the betting habit is instinctive—if detrimental—and the bishops' bete-noire!

Millions of pounds sterling are annually lost and won backing horses and streamlined greyhounds. Football sweeps and pools are likewise an obsession of a sports-addicted people.

RACE OF ADVENTURERS

Englishmen have ever followed the lodestar of adventure to far horizons—

"They sailed wherever ships could sail,
They founded many a mighty state."

Over entrance to an English graveyard in India, lying alongside the racecourse in the inscrutable incongruity of the Orient, is inscribed—"Nor wave nor foam nor wild winds beat where rest not England's dead." The roving expatriate ever retains a warm affection for his native heath, where the longest journeys end, and the greatest wanderers come to rest at last—

"God gave all men all earth to love
But since our hearts are small
Ordained for each one spot should prove Beloved over all."

"THIS REALM, THIS ENGLAND"

England gained its name from the great invasion that followed the breakup of the Roman Empire. Withdrawal of her javelin-armed legions left central England open to successive waves of invasion by Saxons and Danes, Jutes and Angles. Revered is the soil of "L'Angleterre" where rest the bones of Caesar's men, which Norman William, a ruthless warrior, gathered in his hands on south coast landing nearly nine hundred years ago before battling Harold at Hastings, and over which blazing beacons flung sparks on crimson high in Tudor times for warning of the Spanish Armada when the singeing of Philip's beard marked the coming of Elizabethan England from isolation to supremacy by way of the sea.

JOURNEY'S END

One recalls at this writing a lonely stone-fenced grave overlooking blue Aegeah on the shell-scarred and rock-ribbed peninsula below unconquered bastion of Achi-Baba, and its memorable inscription: "Tell England ye who pass this monument, we died for her and here we rest content." A Spartan epigram in paraphrase by a young English subaltern with taste for the classics. Youthful hope fleeing in premonition of doom on sea-girt Gallipoli, there comes to him a memory of a sun-dappled island under the clean washed blue of an ever-changing English sky where fruit has flavor and flowers scent, with green-turfed uplands and rolling downs, chalk cliffs and pebbled beaches, and his heart turns in tender wistfulness towards a soft and friendly country vainly calling him home . . .

NOT GALLIC LA PATRIE TYPE

Unresponsive to the mock heroics of "Who dies if England lives?" the man of England can be captivated to warlike purpose with typical music-hall camouflage of "Arf a mo' Kaiser!" He then becomes much the same kind of fellow as those who fought with Henry at Agincourt, and roved the Spanish Main with buccaneering Drake, whimsical between his battles, but nothing can kill his humor. He indeed belongs to "A Jesting Army." His patriotism is a small intense thing, for which he will risk all in the writing of his little line of our imperial history. Not for England as England, however, does he don armor of battle to the call of "Come where the bugles of England play," but rather, for boyhood memory of a village green, ancestral elm or thyme-clad headland . . .

"If the last sight his fading eyes receive
Be moors unbroken where the dark tors loom
Or lithe trout rising in the Devon eve
Or silver lapse of water down a combe,
Know him as Englishman."

CHEERIO, OLD TOP

This racial amalgam of fair-haired Jute and blue-eyed Dane, Roman, Norman and Refugee, as known to me at home and overseas for many a long year, is a modest fellow and would rather you toast his Homeland than him on this day of Saint George which is so nigh to the crowning of the sixth George of England as undoubted King of the British Realms. For auld lang syne, if so it may please you, sons and daughters of Albion, whether at banquet or in lodge assembled, or elsewhere on your "lawful occasions," lift a glass to England, Home and Beauty—with a momentary silence for all her self-sacrificing children who have now passed from sight of man—in the stirring toast of Cavalcade's finale—"Let us couple our country's future with its splendid past, the glories and triumphs that are over, and the sorrows that are over too. Let us drink to our sons who are part of the pattern and to our hearts that died with them in the war . . . Let us toast their gallantry and high courage . . . Let us hope that this land of ours which we love so much will some day find a renewed dignity and greatness and peace again."

FINIS.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority of Authorities"

SECOND HAND CAN SHADE

If a hand is just on the border line between one which would justify a dealer opening bid and one which does not, it usually can be opened profitably by a player in the second hand position. The reason for this is that, one opponent having shown inability to open, cannot have a powerful hand. With this possibility removed, there remain only the chance that his hand is mediocre or weak, hence the probability that his hand is below average. Such slight indication of weakness by one opponent increases the likelihood of your partner's hand being fairly strong, consequently the prospect of profit from taking action.

North: ♠ A 4 2 ♥ K 8 6 2 ♦ Q 10 3 ♣ 10 7 6
West: ♠ K 7 5 ♥ A 3 ♦ 8 6 5 4 ♣ 8 5 3 2
East: ♠ J 8 ♥ Q J 10 9 4 ♦ K 7 2 ♣ K Q 9
South: ♠ Q 10 9 8 6 ♥ 7 5 ♦ A J 9 ♣ A J 4

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

In many instances in a duplicate this board was passed out, as East has no opening bid, West certainly cannot open, and fourth hand is on the spot as to where the strength might be concentrated.

Those players who believe that in the second hand position a slightly shaded bid may be made, put in a bid of 1-Spade, North a No Trump, South 2-Spades and when North now bid 3-Spades, four was bid in the South.

A diamond was opened against this contract, and South lost only one spade, one heart and one club, making four spades, which was quite a contrast to the blank score for those who passed the board out.

TOMORROW'S PROBLEM

North: ♠ 9 8 7 ♥ A J 10 9 8 7 ♦ 6 2 ♣ 7 5
West: ♠ J 5 4 3 ♥ Q 5 ♦ A Q J 10 ♣ 9 6
East: ♠ K 10 2 ♥ 3 2 ♦ 9 4 ♣ A J 10 8 4 3 2
South: ♠ A Q 6 ♥ K 6 4 ♦ K 8 7 5 3 ♣ K Q

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

Against North's 4-Heart contract, what should be East's lead after winning the first trick with the club Ace?

WHAT THE PRESS IS SAYING

STAY UNDER FIFTY

There may have been some excuse for people thinking the 35-mile limit a joke and behaving accordingly. But with the limit raised to 50 miles, such an excuse vanishes. Rare, indeed, is the individual who finds it really necessary to travel in excess of such a speed even in the course of business, although we are well aware of the fact that higher speeds are maintained by the people who do not care for others on the road any more than they do for their own hides. A speed of 50 miles per hour is high enough for all ordinary, legitimate travel. In view of this, the provincial authorities will be remiss in their duty if they do not proceed to keep close watch upon traffic.

THE DOCTOR SAYS . . .

LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

POOR FOOD IS CAUSE OF DISEASE

"Many and serious as are the problems confronting Europe and America at the present time, none is more important than the application of the science of nutrition in the daily life of the people."

These words of E. V. McCollum are being taken to heart by practitioners in various specialties. I have before me the report of a specialist in disease of eye, ear, nose and throat, who had questioned his patient for several years carefully as to what their food is, and has found that by bringing their diets to a balanced state he is able to improve them considerably. Other work in this line consists of a report in a series of sinus infections that there was a low intake of protein, fat and fluid.

Considering first the protein requirement, it is believed, in the words of the committee on nutrition of the British Medical association, "Proteins of animal origin—milk, cheese, eggs, meat, fish, etc.—have a higher nutritional value and can be much more readily assimilated and made use of in the body, than proteins derived from vegetable sources."

The requisite animal protein could be ideally supplied in this way: one glass of milk each meal, one helping of meat or fish, one egg per day. This represents 37 grams, which is the lowest minimum requirement of the British committee. Yet in 300 adult patients with nose or throat disease, nearly half consumed less than 26 grams of animal protein a day, "a quantity too low for a small woman", and 12 per cent ate less than 13 grams a day, which is below one-third of the minimal requirements. The children were better off, showing "that it is evident that parents are applying to their offspring some knowledge of nutrition."

DEFICIENCY IN CALCIUM

Calcium is another substance of which the doctor found his patients were obtaining deficient amounts. Inasmuch as Vitamin D promotes absorption of calcium and phosphorous, it is worth while to note that "10 per cent of the patients evidently had a Vitamin D intake below the minimum, since they reported that they did not eat eggs or fish and consumed less than three pats of butter (including milk) a day." Two per cent used butter substitutes and did not eat eggs or fish.

An interesting case history is that of a nurse, aged 35, who gave a history of three operations on her sinuses, one of them radical, during the last two years. Headaches and other symptoms were incapacitating. In the diet history it was found she was living on fruits and vegetables mostly, with no animal protein, and was drinking over three glasses of fruit juice a day. On a changed diet and conservative measures she was soon free enough of headaches to be able to go to work.

The doctor concluded that nearly half his patients ate a diet markedly deficient in animal proteins and calcium. A much smaller percentage, 10 per cent, were deficient in Vitamin D, and a still smaller percentage, 2 per cent were deficient in Vitamin C. Seventy per cent needed guidance in the choice of their food.

Reduces Varicose or Swollen Veins

Simple Home Treatment Prove It At Small Cost

The world progresses. Today many minor ailments that took weeks to overcome can now be helped much more quickly. If you have varicose veins or bunches start today to bring them back to normal size and if you are wise you will do so.

Just get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at Mann, Rutherford Co. or any dispensing pharmacist and apply it night and morning to the enlarged veins. In a short time the veins should begin to grow smaller and by regular use soon approach normal.

People who want to reduce varicose veins or simple swellings before resorting to operations or injections should not hesitate to try a bottle at once. It is so penetrating and powerful that a small bottle lasts a long time. (Advt.)

WOMEN WHO SUFFER

WOMEN who suffer in silence often pay a double penalty for wearing this gag of unselfishness or silly pride. Painful periods are nature's warning that something is wrong and needs immediate attention. Growing girls as well as women in middle life are often sufferers from female irregularities. They find Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a dependable tonic. Read what Mrs. John Roth, Route 4, Embro, Ont., said: "I lost weight, suffered from headaches and my strength was completely gone. It was almost impossible for me to eat. Mother advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and in a short time I was feeling fine again." New size, tabs. 50c. Buy now! (Advt.)

SOFTBALL UNDER WAY AT PROCTER

PROCTER, B. C. — Procterites witnessed the first softball game of the season Sunday between two "pick-up" teams.

Both teams played well, but overthrows and poor catching showed that practise is needed.

Frances McMullin and Mary Schwarok, of the girls squad, played to complete the teams and gave an exhibition of snappy field play and good connections at bat.

Hallam MacKinnon and Henry Hartridge, pitchers, and Robert Heighton, catcher, made up the battery for the winners. Gilbert McMullin and Geoffrey Hartridge, pitchers, and Bud McIver, catcher, preformed for the losers. Score was 25-16.

Although the boys have not had much practice, there are those who after last year's games, can still knock homers, and will show up well at bat again this season.

It is understood the "Diamonds" will come into real action next Sunday against one of the Harrop teams.

On the line-up were:

Winners — Hallam MacKinnon, Henry Hartridge, Robert Heighton, Angus MacKinnon, Henry Johnson, Pat Hughes, Jim Heighton, Everett Gordon and Frances McMullin.

Fernie Wolf Cubs Demonstrate Work

FERNIE, B. C.—A public demonstration of the work of the Wolf Cubs was given Monday by the 1st Fernie Wolf Cub pack. Under the leadership of Mrs. Percival, cubbing has become well established and the local pack now consists of six sixes. E. K. Stewart, president of the Fernie Scout association, presided.

The program commenced with a march, salute of the colors and singing of "O Canada." A group of new chums and a group of tenderpads were introduced. Four of the tenderpads were invested as cubs. A demonstration was given of first star work, an explanation of the composition of the Union Jack and the tying of knots. Second star work included signalling and some first aid, illustrated by means of a dramatized sketch and an explanation of the uses of the scout staff.

Two group games were played, skinning the snake and novelty progress. Songs sung by the group were "Do You Know a Cub" and "Keep on Hopin'." Three sketches were presented. The first, entitled "Jimmy Germ," was a health play showing the effect of light, heat, soap, fresh air and proper antiseptics on germs. Another, "The Color Cure," a farce, depicted the ludicrous results when a middle-aged housewife mistook some hair dye for a rejuvenator. The third, also a farce, dealt with the experiences of a caterpillar intended for microscopic examination, but inadvertantly got cooked in the cabbage for the scientist's dinner.

The program closed with a campfire scene with songs and stories.

Boost for the Kootenay District – It Pays!

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

His boys' camp is perhaps the King's closest welfare interest; a potato race and amateur photography are part of a camp visit.

"Take care of the children and the country will take care of itself." This slogan, coined, it is said, by the King himself, gives a sweeping insight into his view of industrial welfare work. He is most closely associated in the minds of British people with his intense interest in the task of alleviating slum conditions in the industrial areas of Britain, and in particular with the job of making the lot of the younger generation more bearable. Most closely, of course, he is associated with the famous boys' camp which bears the title of the Duke of York's camp at Southwold.

Today then we picture his majesty in this setting. At the boys' camp each year four hundred boys selected from schools and from the poorer districts of England by the Industrial Welfare society, are gathered. Half are public school boys, the other half from the poorer working sections, who in no other manner perhaps would be able to enjoy a summer in camp, or to meet on a common recreational plane the school boy who looms as such a large part of English life. They camp together, play together, hike and work and rest together on a basis of absolute equality. And each year in the past his majesty as the Duke of York, has been a visitor at the camp. Whether he will be able to spare time from the onerous duties of kingship is problematical, but certain it is that his interest will continue.

At camp, as our pictures show, he joins heartily into the full round of camp life. He runs races, he swims, he plays games and he strolls with his "charges" who look forward to this visit as perhaps the highlight of the entire camp experience.

The boy's camp is not his majesty's only welfare interest. Anything that tends to alleviate the grimness and drabness of much of England's poorer section, draws him like a magnet. He was first president of the association which was formed to supply more and better playing fields and recreational centres for boys and girls He has exhibited an amazing interest and an amazing knowledge of working conditions and the workers' problems in industrial centres wherever he has met them on his empire travels and while he is best known for his welfare work among the younger generation, every worthy cause tending to raise the standard of living for his subjects, young and old, will draw the new King's approbation and assistance.

Narrows of the Arrow lakes are now ice-free, and with the Columbia rising, the steamer Minto is expected to make its first through trip from Nakusp to Robson next Thursday, inaugurating the summer schedule. Its winter service has been confined to the Upper Arrow.

Last week the steamer Columbia, which has been serving the Lower Arrow lake all winter, with Edgewood as the highest point served since the January freeze, got through to Needles, the northern extremity of its proper run. It will make its last trip for the season next Monday and Tuesday, going from Robson to Needles the first day, and returning to Robson Tuesday to tie up.

Sufferer Follows Good Advice—and Takes Kruschen

The writer of the following letter had a bad attack of rheumatism, and was advised to take Kruschen. He did so, and describes his experiences in the following words:—

"About two years ago I developed a severe attack of rheumatism in my left shoulder blade. I tried all sorts of remedies, but with no results, until one day by brother-in-law, on hearing of my suffering, exclaimed, 'There is only one thing for rheumatism! That is—Kruschen Salts!' I decided to purchase a bottle, and for the first week took a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water each morning. The pain gradually disappeared and has now gone entirely. I am still taking by early morning dose, as I feel convinced that it is helping to keep me fit."—J.G.B.

Rheumatic conditions are frequently the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients of these Salts assist Nature to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

IN PRAISE OF ENGLAND

By J. T. BEALBY

Once every year, in the coldest month, our memories are wont to be warmed by perfervid Scotsmen singing the praises of their heaven-inspired bard. Somehow Englishmen seem to be lacking in this kind of nationalistic self-praise. All the same folk of other nationalities, including magnanimous Scotsmen, more than atone for the Englishman's remissness. It has occurred to me to cull a posy of these spontaneous flowers of praise as a modest offering to lay on the altar of peace, for which the dear Old Country, notwithstanding the rearmament that has been forced upon her, is an outstanding sponsor.

It will be sufficient to call attention to the fine eulogy of England in Act II of Shakespeare's King Richard II. Nor can I pause to quote Ralph Waldo Emerson's English Traits: the book deserves to be read in its entirety. The favorable characteristics which he emphasizes specially are racial descent, love of truth, sturdy individuality, common sense (which is only another name for realistic logic), high intellectual qualities, tolerance of opinion, domestic tastes, and an uncommon sense of justice and fair-play. My posy shall be quite a modern one.

The first eulogist of England to whom I refer is a Russian Jew, R. D. Charques, with strong socialistic leanings, who in 1936 published a study of England to which he has given the significant title, "This Other Eden". He argues that western civilization is bound up with all that is human and courageous in the adventurous history of the English people. Theirs has been the shaping hand in the modern world. It is "as a trust and responsibility that the Empire is actually administered. The upper classes are a "more responsible and an unquestionably abler type of rulers than exists anywhere else in the world."

M. Herriot, leader of a section of French socialists, said on October 25, 1935, having particular reference to the English prime minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, "When a Briton declares that he has no personal views in regard to the Italo-Abyssinian conflict, we must believe him. We must not doubt the word of a British minister or a British gentleman. For my part, when a British minister states 'that is our position,' I declare emphatically, 'I believe you.' The advantage of an Englishman is that one can discuss matters with him even harshly. He's a sport even in politics." The Scottish Labor member of parliament David Kirkwood, in his book, My Life of Revolt, speaking of an episode in the house of commons, when Kirkwood called Baldwin a Urian Heep, i.e., a low hypocrite, the Scotsman says, "He seemed to be such a big man that he could take such an insult in such a way. I have never had reason to change the opinion I formed that morning. He is a big man, as sincere in his point of view as I am in mine. Mr. Baldwin is the most democratic and most tolerant man in the house; and the house is the most tolerant place in the world, but it will not tolerate insincerity." Words which honor David Kirkwood as much as David Kirkwood's words honor Mr. Stanley Baldwin!

Addressing the Glasgow City Business club September 17, 1936, Mr. Kirkwood said, "I am a son of Britain. I am a free man. I enjoy and value the privileges of British citizenship. No greater calamity could befall the people of the world than that Britain and what Britain stands for should perish from the earth.'

When the people of the Argentine desire to be emphatic and insistent, they ejaculate, I understand, "Palabre de Inglese!" That is to say, "The word of an Englishman!" A phrase which covers a world of meaning to those with the open mind to grasp its full compass. Ignace Paderewski, the famous pianist and one time president of the republic of Poland, in his Autobiography now appearing in the Saturday Evening Post (March 6, 1937), says: "A sense of justice is a characteristic of the English. It was A. J. Balfour's dominant note. No man I ever met excelled Balfour in the universality of his knowledge and in human understanding." (Paderewski travelled all over the world more than once in the course of his concert tours and came into contact with all sorts and conditions of men. I heard Lord Balfour speak on a memorable occasion, the public banquet to the contributors on the completion of the last edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica that was published in Edinburgh. "It is strange," continues Paderewski, "how markedly different the English are from other peoples, how that little bit of water separating them from the continent makes for such contrasts. There is security there, law and order, a quiet order. Not only do the English respect the laws they make, but there is something in England above that, and that is the social instinct. They realize and practice a civic duty."

When Negley Farson, an American engineer, just graduated from Harvard, was offered a job in England through the head of a New York pipe and steel company, the latter, "a kindly old German," said to him, "In England you will learn something. You will see what honesty in manufacturing can be. And you will see engineers, real engineers, getting much less than yourself. But don't forget the honesty part of it. The word British is like sterling (he meant the hall-mark) on silver in the engineering world." Upon reaching Manchester Mr. Farson continues, in his book, "The Way of a Transgressor (1935)", "My first surprise was that man earning £3 ($15) a week should dare to have a hobby. Where was his divine discontent? In New York if his divine discontent did not make him unhappy to live on that, his sense of envy certainly would, and if that didn't, his wife would. Yet here in England I saw hundreds of people living on that, or only a trifle more, who were not only happy, but had a tremendous sense of prestige and self-respect. . . . In college, when I was studying international labour conditions, the only scale of values was by a comparison of the wages paid, and I was delighted to find in England that there were other things that counted more than wages. The workmen seemed at any rate to be getting an amazing contentment out of life. With the engineers, with which class I spent most of my time, I discovered that they were getting an exhilarating sense of pleasure out of their work This was largely due to the fact, that they were working in plants which were trying to make the best possible goods they could turn out. Quality was the prime essential, and quantity came behind. Nothing, price or anything else, was allowed to stand in the way of that. As a result there was not a person in the works, not excepting the hundreds of girls who sat all day to feed the punching machines (in chain-making), who did not feel a pride in his work." "Strange people, these English. They can bungle a small job worse than anyone else. On the other hand they can take on a big job with less fuss and greater efficiency than any other race that ever existed." These are the words of Mr. Beverley Baxter, a Canadian who sits in the British House of Commons for a London constituency.

Martin de Hosszn, a Hungarian, and I understand one of the most famous painters in Europe, said (end of 1936) "I have lived all over Europe, but there is no country like England. When I am in my own country, I am homesick for England You who are English are the luckiest people on earth to be born in such a wonderful country. You don't realize how lucky you are. I could not keep away from England." Louis de Wohl, well-known Hungarian author, told a Daily Sketch reporter (4th March 1937) "I wish so much to say something rude about your nation. Because when the English ask a foreigner for an opinion, they always want him to say something dreadful; then they are tickled to death. But I love the English better than any people in the world."

Dr. Ellery Sedgewick, editor of the American magazine The Atlantic Monthly, wrote (August 1925) "If I were to name another quality salient as English courage, it would be English lack of prejudice. While tolerance is the corner-stone of democratic theory, Britain alone among democracies really regards it as a virtue. No fair-minded American disputes the intellectual superiority of England. In the central ugliness of Trafalgar Square the American listens at the heart of an organism mightier than anything his nation has conceived. Stand quiet a moment, and the thrill is tremendous. Here still is the very centre of the world."

The Jeria, a Grimsby fishing trawler, was lost at sea in 1936 with all hands. The last S.O.S. message received from her skipper, W. Emsley, read, "There is now no doubt that the ship will soon sink with the whole crew. If anyone picks us up this (probably our last) message, please send greetings from me and my crew to our families and to—Old England." I would like next to refer those who file the Nelson Daily News to the issue for 14th October 1936, reporting the address given to the Nelson Rotarians by Rev. T. W. Reed of Rossland, relating his impressions of a recent visit to England. For those who do not file the newspaper, I quote two or three salient sentences. "There is no finer gentleman in all the world than the best type of Englishman." "Gradually you understand, that the British spirit of good sportsmanship might well be the envy of all the world, and with that spirit prevailing in her life there can be no fear of Communism, Fascism, or Nazism ever being popular in the sea-girt island." "Over 50 per cent of the houses in England have been built since the armistice, and last year over a million of new houses were constructed."

"The people everywhere seemed to be very happy and contented. There can be no doubt that their health insurance, their old age pension, their unemployment insurance contributed very largely to their apparent lack of anxiety and worry."

The best definition of the term "gentleman" known to me is this: "A gentleman is one who thinks more of other people's feelings than of his own rights, and more of other people's rights than his own feelings" (M. H. Buckham, former president of Vermont university, U.S.). A. J. Balfour, Stanley Baldwin, Luther Burbank, King George V, George Lansbury (Labor leader), all answer the description.

Mr. Herbert N. Casson, who has a long experience of business life in Canada, the United States and England (twenty years at least in each country), said in Maclean's for October 15, 1934, "The central principle of British efficiency, I would say, is common sense. The British are a mature people. When they change, they change cautiously. . . . Another principle of British efficiency is tolerance. There has been since the war a remarkable wiping out of class distinctions and prejudices. In the cabinet a lord sits beside a locomotive driver. Half the members of the house of lords were born in cottages. In such a country there can be no class revolutions." Mr. Herbert Morrison, the fiery orator of the Labor party, and a Scotsman, speaking in the debate on Edward VIII's abdication, said, "Love of country is not confined to any one party. We on this side of the house desire to alter the existing order of things in many ways, but we do not deny, on the contrary we proudly acknowledge, that, look where you will, there is no country in which man's humanity to man stands so high as in England."

I doubt if any finer eulogy upon England has ever been penned than an article printed in the Daily Sketch of June 2, 1936. It was by a Scottish barrister of English standing, Mr. Archibald Crawford. "A lover of England has gifted £2000 towards the reduction of the national debt (compare the anonymous gift at an earlier date of Mr. Stanley Baldwin of some £150,000 for the same purpose). The beauty of thought behind the gift is exquisite. Where stands a country so worthy of our love? Great as are the contributions to England's life made by Scots, Irish, and Welsh, we others are but aiding a life-stream of unparalleled force, beauty and dignity. We disturbing, aggressive, somewhat turbulent folk give an impetus and an originality to the human activities of this land, but we are merely helping in processes so deep, so sure, so powerful, that the appreciation of their values is almost beyond our ken. It is fine to contribute our share to this world-force. Foreigners, whose first subject of talk is almost always England and her people, on first contact are baffled, feel a little chilled by the aloofness of attitude, and think the country queer in many of her ways and customs. I often go to Germany. There the interest in England is greater than elsewhere. Germans feel so much akin to the English, and yet they are conscious, that despite her muddling ways (say rather, 'despite her absence of clear cut theoretical policies') and her seeming irrelevancies, there is something in her soul which they cannot fathom. They realize their own wonderful powers of organization, their almost perfection of technique in science and in industry, and yet they are compelled to look askance at a 'stupid land' where the results achieved are better than anywhere else on earth. In politics, in social life, in calm resistance to the blows of fate, in the best of all things—the laugh at life which spells humour—England leads the way, England aided of course by us others. The French admire, envy and fear the English. It is a Frenchman's saying: 'You English are so like the stars in the heavens; you look down upon the rest of the universe with a calm twinkle in your eyes. You make us feel like children.' Where lies the essence of the matter? First, in the physical loveliness of the land itself. No country has more of that quiet peace and contentment of scenery than Old England. Next, that knowledge of how to live which is absent in other countries. Most others spend their days in feverish, half-neurotic turmoil, with hardly a moment in which even to wonder what it is all about. Not so the English: they are nearer to the very meaning of life than any other people. They realize that the free play of the mind, the body, the soul are more important than getting and spending. Their work has an objective in peaceful recreation. We appreciate their bigness and their generosity."

I conclude with just one quotation by an Englishman, Jack Horner, a shoeblack of Piccadilly Circus. "I think good-class English folk are the finest people on this earth. They don't take any mean advantage of those who are down, like myself. They're generous, and they always have a cheery word to pass on."

Readers who desire to taste in a pleasing manner something of the charm of English country life and scenery could not do better than read Mr. H. V. Morton's In Search of England, first published in 1927 And if they can lay their hands upon it, The Rural Rides, written by William Cobbett and published as long ago as 1830, will furnish a useful contrast in strong, racy English.

WEMBLEY LIONS HOLD ALLAN CUP TEAM TO 3-3 TIE

WEDNESDAY HAS A TOUGH BATTLE FOR SATURDAY

Will Fight to Dodge Demotion to the 2nd Division

LONDON, April 22 (CP Cable).—Vital promotion and relegation issues are fanning interest in the closing games of the English soccer season. The campaign ends May 1 with Manchester City practically certain of the first division championship, but in the other circuits bitter fights are being waged by leading and tail-end clubs.

While the City needs only one point to clinch the honor, Arsenal is leaving no stone unturned to force two closing victories in case the leader falters. The Mancunians have 54 points and the Gunners 51.

Sheffield Wednesday, fighting to avoid demotion to the second league, visits Manchester City. The Wednesday triumphed 3-2 at West Bromwich yesterday for its first away victory of the season and with first-league status at stake may upset the northerns although they have been unbeaten in league play since Christmas day.

With 32 points, two more than Leeds and Sheffield Wednesday, joint occupants of the cellar position, Manchester United is due at West Bromwich for its last match of the season. Victory is by no means certain and it is possible mathematicians may have to work out the goal averages of the three clubs to decide which will be relegated. Leeds is at home to Sunderland.

Blackpool is certain to play in the senior league next season and Leicester City is most likely to accompany the seasiders. With one match to play, Blackpool has a total of 54 points. Leicester, with two games o play, is only two points behind and two ahead of Bury.

Saturday's card finds Blackpool at home to Doncaster Rovers, doomed to go into the third division and Leicester entertains Notts Forest, victorious 3-0 against Tottenham Hotspurs yesterday. The points may save the Forest from going down with Doncaster, whose most likely partner will be Bradford City. The latter have a hard tussle against Newcastle United.

AWAIT ANALYSES

The unknown illness which has caused two deaths and endangered four other persons is not thought to be connected with recent Doukhobor disturbances and current investigations, but it is being investigated by provincial police. Reports of the analyses and laboratory tests are awaited to aid in determining the course to be taken.

This newest investigation overshadowed the continued probe of the recent incendiary outbreak and to some extent overshadowed the impending appearance in provincial police court today at Castlegar of Peter Verigin, spiritual leader of the Doukhobors.

Returning Wednesday night to Brilliant from Grand Forks, Verigin was served with a summons charging vagrancy. He will answer to this charge as well as to one of driving to the common danger when he appears before Stipendiary Magistrate R. A. D. West today. Both charges are based on the allegation that on the Trail-Castlegar road recently Verigin's car passed another five times in four miles, stopping each time after passing and forcing the other car to stop also. It is also alleged that Verigin got out of his car cursing and swearing.

The "Father" himself disappeared and was on the police fugitive list until Connecticut authorities found him at Milford today.

Meanwhile there were signs of rebellion in the main heaven on West 115th street.

HUNT FREE ON $25,000 BOND

LOS ANGELES, April 22 (AP).—John W. Hunt, wealthy white follower of the nego, Father Divine, was at liberty today on $25,000 bond, charged with violating the Mann act, and his pretty 17-year-old girl accuser was in seclusion after asserting "I don't like fat blond men."

"I don't love Hunt—not the way a girl loves a man," said Delight Jewett, 17, whom the United States government charges was transported by Hunt to California for immoral purposes, the two registering at hotels as "Jesus the Christ" and "Virgin Mary."

Hunt, indicted yesterday, will be arraigned Monday.

Miss Jewett appeared for two hours before the federal grand jury yesterday to testify that Hunt represented to her she was to bring "a new Messiah into the world."

The girl's father, Norman Lee Jewett of Denver also testified. He found his daughter in Father Divine's New York "heaven" after an extensive search.

"I hated to have to tell anybody that story," said the high school girl.

"I had heard so much preaching and all that, that I really believed Father Divine was God and that Hunt was everything he said he was."

Fairview Tennis Club Hopes Have Junior Members

With every promise of a fine membership and competition, the Nelson Fairview Tennis club entertains hopes of branching out in a junior department. Juniors will be encouraged to take up the sport in every way. A dozen or so youthful Fairviewites have made inquiries into the possibilities of a junior department and have practically promised membership if such a branch is encouraged.

With the opening of such a branch the possibility of competition with the junior members of the Nelson Tennis club will also open and some fine tournament games could be expected.

So far a senior membership of about 60 persons is expected.

After getting the courts in almost perfect condition and planning immediate play only to have their work ruined by the heavy downpours of the last few days was the lot of the enthusiasts who have been working so energetically lately. However, just a few days of dry weather is all that is needed to set the courts back in shape and the net artists at play.

South African Vets May Have Unit for Nelson Ceremony

Possibilities of having a unit of South African war veterans in the Coronation day parade in Nelson is being canvassed by the South African "vets" in Nelson, and it is believed that there are enough such veterans in the district to make a marching unit if they get together. South African war veterans in the district at large are asked to write Tom Brown, P.O. Box 651, Nelson, and state if they will come in and join such a unit. Veterans of earlier wars will also be welcome. In all cases medals are to be worn.

LONDON, April 22 (AP). — Increased public buying entered the stock market today and prices closed generally higher. Gilt-edged securities, mining shares, oils and industrials were in good demand, with steel, shipping and rubber issues leading the advance. German bonds and transatlantics held steady while tobacco and distilling stocks were mixed.

ABERDEEN UNDERDOG IN BETTING BUT SENTIMENTAL FAVORITE FOR SCOTTISH CUP FINAL SATURDAY

Celts to Be at Full Strength With Kenneway, Who Learned Game in Canada, in Goal; Probable Line-Ups Announced

GLASGOW, April 22 (CP Cable)—Underdog in the betting but entimental favorite. Aberdeen stands in the role of potential giant-killer on the eve of the clash with Celtic in the Scottish football cup final.

When the teams line up on the great Hampden Park enclosure Saturday the Dons will be out to break a jinx that has kept the cup from their grasp. But in realizing their ambition they must brush aside opposition whose past performance record embraces 14 triumphs in 22 cup finals and 17 league championships.

Close to 120,000 spectators are expected to witness the match, which has particular interest for Canadians as Joe Kenneway, stalwart Celtic goalkeeper, learned his job in Montreal. Rated one of the best defenders in the business, Kenneway joined the famous Glasgow club in 1932 is now approaching the veteran stage.

Before going to Scotland, the Montrealer played for Carsteel and C. P. R. in the Quebec city and put in some time in the United States.

The Celts, who last won the trophy in 1933, are expected to be at full strength, but Aberdeen is worried over the condition of Beynon and Strauss, star wingers. Both are recovering from injuries.

The probable teams:

Celtic—Goal, Kenneway; backs, Hogg, Morrison; halfbacks, Geatons, Lyon, Paterson; forwards, Delaney, Buchan, McGrory, Crum, Murphy.

Aberdeen — Goal, Johnstone; backs, Cover, Temple; half backs, Dunlop, Falloon, Thomson; forwards, Beynon, McKenzie, Armstrong, Mills, Strauss.

With promotion and relegation problems settled, league warfare will end Saturday. Glasgow Rangers clinched the championship while Ayr United and Morton will be promoted to the major league. Albion Rovers and Fundermline finished at the bottom of the senior division and will play in division two next season.

TRAIL BOXERS IN TOP SPOT, BOXING SHOW

Swartz, Inkster Will Meet; Bailey and Paris Rematch

Two Trail boxers are booked for the headline event in the next show of the 111th Battery, R.C.A. Ernie Swartz, well known here for his appearances on previous cards, is to go into the ring with Don Inkster in a six round event. Swartz, realizing he is up against a tougher match than he has had in some time, is confident and is in fine condition. Inkster is said to be shaping up well, and believes his experience will stand him in good stead.

Kaslo boxers are to be given a prominent spot in the night's program. Art Morton of the cherry city is booked with Vic Muir, smart Nelson lad, in the semi-windup for five rounds; and Peter Burton and Archie Rutor of Kaslo tangle respectively with "Lucky" Laughlin of Vancouver and Stan Castle of Nelson in two of the prelims.

One of the highlight of the show will be the rematch meeting of "Ace" Bailey and Tim Paris. Tim wants revenge, and Bailey wants to show he earned the decision in their go.

Gordie Nelson and Alan Kahlstrom will meet in one of the prelims, and "Dynamite" Swain goes on with "Tarzan" Milburn in the curtain bout.

BRITISH CHAMPS MATCH SUDBURY IN ALL PERIODS

Lemay Scores All for Lions; Hastie, Grosso for Tigers

TORONTO, April 22 (CP).—Three goals by Tony LeMay, flashy centreman, gave Wembley Lions a 3-3 overtime draw tonight with Sudbury Tigers in the first game of their best-of-three international series before a crowd of about 1000.

LeMay picked up a goal in each of the three regulation periods. Tigers, recently crowned Allan cup champions, also scored a goal in each of the regular sessions with George Hastie getting two and Don Grosso the other.

The best chance to break up the game in the 10-minute overtime period went to Irwin Chamberlain, who missed the net with a shot that skidded across the goal-mouth after taking a passout from the corner from Hastie.

Lions, champions of the National league in England, played with only 10 men after the first period. Jo-Jo Graboski, bounding, one-eyed centreman, had his nose broken in the first period when body-checked by Frankie Lavigne, Sudbury defenceman and was taken to hospital.

The game was a lively one. In the third period Des Smith of Wembley was given a 10-minute misconduct penalty for uncomplimentary language to Referee Campbell. Lions were allowed a replacement while Smith was off.

Decision Reserved in Braddock Case

NEW YORK, April 22 (AP).—Madison Square Garden continued its legal battle for an injunction against the Jimmy Braddock - Joe Louis bout today by charging that Braddock 'is putting forward his greed as equitable defence" for repudiating his contract to meet Max Schmeling for the Garden, June 3.

In a long brief to federal Judge Guy Fake of Newark, N.J., the Garden's counsel conceded "the chief issue in the case is what contract or contracts are in effect between the parties at the present time." They sought to prove "it is necessary to read the contracts of April 10, 1935, and December 12, 1936, together in order to ascertain the rights of Braddock and the Garden in the Schmeling bout."

Judge Fake reserved decision and asked the Garden to file additional briefs today. Braddock's counsel will be given another week in which to answer these briefs.

Charles Stuckey, senior member of a London law firm with a questionable reputation, is informed by cable from America that Miss Jacqueline Smith, daughter of one of his few respectable clients, now on the continent with her mother, has inherited $1,500,000 from an American uncle. Colonel Alec Lutman, who has a hold over Stuckey, learns of the inheritance and proposes a scheme to which Stuckey reluctantly agrees. The plan calls for Jim Asson, an ex-convict, to marry Jacqueline, having her assign her property—before Stuckey informs her of the inheritance—to her new husband. Lutman plans to take three-fifths of the inheritance, Stuckey and Asson each one-fifth. Lutman and Asson go to Cobenzil to cultivate Jacqueline and her mother, stopping at the same hotel where Mrs. Smith finds herself in dire financial straits. Asson, in the role of a wealthy Englishman, already has impressed Mrs. Smith as an admirable "catch" for her daughter. After a week the Colonel urges Jim to hasten his proposal. Jacqueline is chagrined when the hotel waiter refuses her mother a bottle of wine unless she pays for it at once. The Colonel urges Jim to follow her to the lounge and press his suite. Spurred on by Colonel Lutman, Jim, at the end of a week, tries to convince Jacqueline she should marry him.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER 11

"You'd have anything you wanted, Jacqueline, if you married me," Jim Asson argued. "You could live where you like and have what you like and do what you like. I can't say more than that, can I?"

"Can't you? Try, Jim."

He glanced at her with a puzzled expression on his face.

"If there's anything else you want, Jacqueline . . ."

"There is."

"Then you've only to mention it."

She smiled.

"You don't read very much, do you, Jim? Novels, I mean. You can't, or you wouldn't need reminding that when a man asks a girl to marry him it's usual to tell her that he loves her. It may not be true, but it's polite convention to say it, at all events."

"Yes, of course—but I thought—I mean, that goes without saying, Jacqueline. You know I'm frightfully fond of you."

She was shaking her head.

"As a matter of fact, Jim," she said, "it's the one thing in the world that never goes without saying. Still, we'll take it as said." She rose from her chair. "Thanks very much, Jim. It's quite the most original proposal I've ever had."

He stood up, took a cigaret from his case and tapped it on the back of his hand.

"And what's the answer, Jacqueline?"

"I haven't the faintest idea. I've got to work it out—take the minus reasons from the plus reasons — and it's too complicated to do in my head. Let x equal the unknown quantity of affection. . . ."

"Hang it, Jacqueline, I've told you I'm frightfully fond . . ."

"All right, Jim," she smiled. "Don't worry. I'll find the answer all right, and soon as I've found it I'll let you know."

"But can't you tell me now?" he persisted.

She shook her head.

"It's pretty rotten, waiting and not knowing and wondering all the time . . ."

"Sorry, Jim, but it can't be helped. There's x and y to be dealt with. I can make a good guess at the value of x, but I've still got to discover the 'why'. I'll tell you as soon as I know myself."

Before he could say any more she turned and hurried away, and Asson, having frowned at her back until she turned the corner, flung himself into his armchair again and savagely struck a match for his cigaret.

And there, a few minutes later, Colonel Lutman found him.

"Well, my dear James?" he said, smiling affably. "Does one congratulate you?"

Asson gave a shrug.

"I'm hanged if I know."

Lutman raised his eyebrows, and his monocle, as if in protest against his taking such a liberty, slipped from his eye.

"Surely, James," he said, "you can't so soon have forgotten whether a charming young lady is betrothed to you or not?"

"I tell you I don't know," snapped Asson irritably. "Of all the cold-blooded, calculating, sarcastic little devils!" He made a gesture of impatience. "She wouldn't say yes or no, Lutman. She wants to work it out, she says. She'll tell me as soon as she knows herself."

"H'm!" said Lutman. "It's a pity, but it can't be helped. Time is precious, though, and you must hover around her like a love-sick shadow, melt her heart with your pleading eyes."

"Oh, shut up, Lutman. I'm fed up with the whole outfit."

"And in the interim," continued Lutman imperturbably, holding out his hand, "I will keep the expensive engagement ring in my waistcoat pocket."

Asson glanced up at him, scowling.

"What's the great idea?"

Lutman smiled.

"There is a pawnbroker's establishment in Cobenzil, my dear James," he said. "I noticed it this morning."

"I don't get you, Lutman."

"Nor the price of the ring, James. Hand it over."

With a scowl, Asson took the ring from his pocket and laid it on Lutman's open hand.

"You're a nasty suspicious devil, aren't you?"

Lutman slipped the ring into his waistcoat pocket.

"My dear James," he smiled, "you must try to forgive me. I once lent you a gold cigaret case."

* * *

Jacqueline did her best to work out the problem which Jim Asson had set her, but she found it more difficult than she had expected to arrive at a definite answer to it. She considered it from her own point of view. The advantages were obvious: no more pinching and scraping; an end of this constant wandering about Europe; security, a home of her own, an assured income for her mother. Against all that must be set the fact that she no more loved Jim Asson than he loved her. But was it necessary to love him?

For several days she could come to no final decision. Each time that Jim Asson begged for her answer she replied that she was still working it out and he must wait. Why, she asked herself again and again, did Jim want to marry her? She could not get rid of a sneaking sort of feeling that there was something behind it which she did not understand; that, in the list of good reasons why she should marry him, the reason for his wanting her to do so was not included. What that reason might be, however, she could not even guess.

She was sitting on the terrace one afternoon, frowning at the river as disapprovingly as her mother had frowned, when Colonel Lutman seated himself in the chair next to hers.

"And what has the Danube done," he asked, "that a charming young lady should frown on it?"

Jacqueline glanced at him and smiled. She always found Colonel Lutman rather entertaining.

"I was just wondering, Colonel," she said, "whether it's better to be broke to the wide on the banks of the Danube or to have plenty of money, on the banks of the Thames."

Lutman nodded.

"A very interesting speculation, Miss Jacqueline. And the conclusion?"

She shrugged.

"I'm hanged if I know."

"No?" He smiled. "Experience has taught me that, provided one has plenty in one's pocket, the banks of the Styx, or even the banks of the Thames at Rotherhithe, can be quite a pleasant spot, and that without money it doesn't matter whether one is on the banks of the Danube or the Rhine or the Mississippi or the Nile, since it's equally hell anywhere."

"Money isn't everything, Colonel Lutman."

He smiled indulgently.

"If I may answer one platitude with another, Miss Jacqueline, money may not be everything, but it is the price of everything that's worth anything. Even of the bare necessities of life. One can't even have a bath without money."

She glanced at him quickly, but he was smilingly guilelessly at the end of his cigar.

"And, speaking of money, Miss Jacqueline," he went on, "you must forgive me for broaching a rather delicate question, I am, as you may know, young Jim Asson's trustee, and he tells me that he has asked you to marry him."

(To Be Continued)

Bruhn, Connell Score Pattullo

GRAND FORKS, B. C., April 21—Scathing denunciation of Premier Pattullo for issuing his political propaganda under the crest of the government and for which the people would be called upon to pay thousands of dollars was uttered by Ralph W. Bruhn, Independent, to a large audience here last night when he spoke for the same platform as Robert Connell, leader of the Social Constructives. Mr. Bruhn exhibited a newspaper with Mr. Pattullo's manifesto and statement concerning health insurance and said that large sums of the people's money were thus to be spent in advertising seeking the return of the Liberal government. It was an apt illustration of the audacity of machine party politics, he declared.

The former public works minister was also critical of the government's method of seeking an alleged mandate on health insurance. No person would understand the question that was being offered for the electorate to vote on. The speaker said he favored health insurance but the people that required it most were not going to be taken care of by the scheme which the government had offered and then withdrawn. He favored Dominion-wide state insurance that would take in all classes.

Mr. Connell expressed utter amazement that the premier could issue a manifesto without some explanation of his extravagant and unkept promises of the last election and the brazen attempt to again lure the vote of the people with a new species of promises. He cited "work and wages", the national financing schemes and other election baits numbering a score, and all had failed.

Mr. Connell referred to having spoken in Grand Forks two years ago under the banner of the C.C.F. and how that this time although speaking as leader of the Social Constructives, he found that he was under auspices of the same personnel, Grand Forks club having been the first in the province to endorse his stand in breaking with the C.C.F.

The speaker declared that he still held to the same principles as he then had. He did not believe in advocating unworkable schemes but urged constructive and social changes in legislation to meet changing conditions to the end that the people might be governed honestly and in the best interest of the masses.

Mr. Connell and Mr. Swailes addressed meetings at Greenwood and Midway yesterday. The latter returned to the coast and Mr. Bruhn again joined Mr. Connell here last evening.

WINNIPEG WHEAT IN NOSE-DIVE IN FINAL MINUTES

CHICAGO UPSET BY THE SEVERE PRICE TUMBLES

Losses Are From 1¾ to 3⅝ at the Final Bell

WINNIPEG, April 22 (CP).—Taking a nose-dive in the final minutes from the earlier steady trend on the Winnipeg grain exchange wheat futures today closed 3⅝ to 1¾ cents lower.

At the final bell, May wheat sold at $1.33⅛, July $1.29⅛ to $1.29¼ and October $1.16¾ to $1.17.

Export buying thinned in late trading and excellent weather reports rom North American wheat areas induced traders to dump May wheat holdings which forced stop-loss selling.

Advances of nearly a cent were wiped out and brokers completely ignored the bullish trend of the Argentine market which registered nearly two-cent gains.

Liverpool was irregular with short-covering in May wheat advancing that future 3¼d. Prices closed ¾d higher to ⅝d lower. Buenos Aires at noon was 2⅛ to 2⅝ cents up.

Coarse grains trading was dull until the final setback in wheat prices and then all futures moved into lower ground.

CHICAGO FOLLOWS SUIT

CHICAGO, April 22 (AP).—Severe tumbles of wheat values at Winnipeg, 4 cents a bushel in some cases, unsettled the Chicago market late today, with 2¼ cents losses here.

Heavy liquidating sales of May wheat tended almost from the outset to drag Chicago prices down, but the offerings were well absorbed until the Canadian market gave way in earnest near the close.

The fact that direct purchases of 80,000 bushels of United States hard winter wheat to go from Chicago to Europe in competition with Canadian wheat were confirmed today was in some quarters associated with price breaks at Winnipeg. There were also indications that more wheat from the 1937 United States new crop of wheat is being disposed of abroad than has been reported.

At the close, wheat was ⅞ to 2¼ lower, corn ½ to 1¼ down, oats ⅜ to ⅞ off, and rye showing ¼ to 1¼ setback.

TORONTO, April 22 (CP).—Net earnings of Brazilian Traction Light & Power company, before depreciation and amortization, were $1,555,662 in March, the company reported today. Net amounted to $1,350,236 in March, 1936. Gross earnings were $2,842,913, against $2,514,418 last year. Aggregate net earnings in the first quarter of 1937 totalled $4,614,919 contrasting with $3,968,529 in the corresponding three months last year. Gross earnings were shown at $8,654,342, up $1,247,725.

PRICES TOPPLE AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, April 22 (AP)—Light selling was sufficient today to topple stock market prices and many leaders lost everything they gained in Wednesday's session.

Declines of fractions to around three points were general, a few recessions of five or more were in evidence. New lows for the year were plentiful at the close. At the same time a handful of favorites managed to come out moderately ahead.

Stocks apparently took their cue partly from commodities and bonds, most of which fell back substantially, cotton, grain and rubber futures especially were in supply.

Transfers amounted to 1,177,520 shares compared with 1,248,380 in the preceding session.

Steels pushed ahead at the opening, but were among the first to give ground notwithstanding high hopes were held out for excellent mill operations for some time to come.

ONTARIO'S GOLD OUTPUT HIGHER

TORONTO, April 22 (CP).—The March output of Ontario Gold Mines was worth $7,308,394, against $6,895,604 in February and $6,714,506 in March, 1936, the provincial department of mines reported today. Tonnage milled totalled 692,742, compared with 622,276 a month ago and 642,279 last March.

Gold production was 208,328 ounces while silver output was 61,742 ounces. February figures were 196,735 and 31,638.

NEW YORK, April 22 (AP).—Recessions were the order in the bond market today. The federal list recoiled following an early accumulation of selling orders but late in the session recovered a portion of lost ground. Foreign bonds worked lower at a low pace with small fractional reverses ruling.

MONTREAL, April 22 (CP). — Butter spot—Que. fresh (92 score) 25⅛A; eggs spot—Ont. A-large 22A; wheat, northern No. 1, 1.52; barley, C.W. No. 3, .84; bran, ton 36.25.

PRE-EMPTIONS

VACANT, unreserved, surveyed Crown lands may be pre-empted by British subjects over 18 years of age, and by aliens on declaring intention to become British subjects, conditional upon residence, occupation and improvement.

Full information concerning Pre-emptions is given in Bulletin No. 1, Land Series, "How to Pre-empt Land," copies of which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the Department of Lands, Victoria, B.C.; Bureau of Provincial Information, Victoria, or any Government Agent.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes within reasonable distance of road, school and marketing facilities and which is not timberland, i.e., carrying over 5,000 board feet per acre east of the Coast Range and 8,000 feet per acre west of that Range.

Applications for pre-emptions are to be addressed to the Land Commissioner of the Land Recording Division in which the land applied for is situated, on printed forms obtained from the Commissioner.

Pre-emptions must be occupied for five years and improvements made to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivating at least five acres, before a Crown Grant can be received.

Pre-emptions carrying part time conditions of occupation are also granted.

PURCHASE OR LEASE

Applications are received for purchase of vacant and unreserved Crown lands, not being timberland, for agricultural purposes. Minimum price of first-class (arable) land is $5 per acre and second-class (grazing) land, $2.50 per acre. Further information is given in Bulletin No. 10, Land Series, "Purchase and Lease of Crown Lands."

As a partial relief measure, reverted lands may be acquired by purchase in ten equal instalments, with the first payment suspended for two years, provided taxes are paid when due and improvements are made during the first two years of not less than 10% of the appraised value.

Mill, factory or industrial sites on timber land, not exceeding 40 acres, may be purchased or leased, the conditions including payment of stumpage.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites, conditional upon a dwelling being erected in the first year, title being obtained after residence and improvement conditions are fulfilled and land has been surveyed.

For grazing and industrial purposes areas not exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or a company.

Under the Grazing Act the Province is divided into grazing districts and the range administered under grazing regulations amended from time to time to meet varying conditions. Annual grazing permits are issued based on certain monthly rates per head of stock. Priority in grazing privileges is given to resident stock owners. Stock-owners may form associations for range management. Free or partially free permits available for settlers, campers and travellers, up to ten head.

Seek Form Kin Club Rossland

Members Nelson Club Travel Golden City

Travelling to Rossland Thursday evening, a group of members of the Nelson Kinsmen club aimed at the launching of a Kin club in that city. Among those making the trip were William McKay, Dr. T. H. Bourque, Robert Horswill, Thomas Carew, Bland Marley, C. (Buck) Lambert, Dr. Ray Shaw and others.

A few days ago S. H. Bantick of Toronto, general secretary of the Kinsmen association, visited Rossland to investigate the possibilities of a club there and to meet prospective members.

Mae West Turtle Does Well Here

Bill Kapak received in the mails a couple of days ago from his sister in Spokane, Miss Rose Kapak, who is attending the Sacred Heart School of Nursing, a lively and comely little turtle, its shell painted blue, and lettered on one side with the name, "Mae West", while the other side is embellished with a painted flower. Mae West is doing nicely, in her glass jar of water and rockery, at the New Grand.

MEMBERS CELEBRATE FIRST BIRTHDAY OF SOROPTOMISTS' CLUB

A single candle twinkling brightly atop a gaily decorated birthday cake centred the table at the dinner-celebration of the first anniversary of the Nelson Soroptimists' club in the Hume last Friday.

Decision to invite the Trail-Rossland organization to a May dinner in Nelson was made at the business meeting preceding the dinner. An encouraging financial report showed the club to be in a fine financial status.

MORE ABOUT THE FESTIVAL

WELCOMED TO TRAIL

"It is a pleasure in welcoming you to Trail," said Acting Mayor J. R. Anderson, opening this afternoon's session of the Kootenay Musical festival. "I hope you all have an enjoyable time. May I take this opportunity also to welcome Dr. Alfred Whitehead in our midst and I hope he will have an enjoyable stay while with us."

Winners of afternoon and evening events with adjudicator's remarks follow:

TRAIL CHOIR WINS

Class 9: Junior church choirs—Girls' or mixed, any number: St. Andrew's Junior choir, Trail, Mrs. Edith Anthony, conductor, first, 80, 84; Knox United church Junior choir, Mrs. A. C. Graham, conductor, second, 80, 81; Kaslo United church Junior choir, Miss M. E. Moscrop, conductor, third, 80, 80; Trinity Treble choir, Nelson, 80, 79.

Each choir received 80 marks for the first piece, "Saviour Like a Shepherd," by Gluck-Holler, which was a sacred number. Each sang it with varying kinds of interest. The second, "Harvest Dance," by Foster, a light-hearted country dance, could hardly be sung in a church, Dr. Muirhead said, but that its type gave church choirs an opportunity to vary their accent. St. Andrew's choir had delicate and delightful rhythm and they put it over. The Kaslo choir sang it in the same manner but were a little flat. Knox choir had a few weaknesses of attack and the Trinity choir were altogether too serious. They were sure to go to heaven, the adjudicator said.

NELSON CHOIR WINS

Class 1: Day school choirs—Primary grades 1 and 2, 35 voices or over: Central school primary choir, Nelson, Miss Eileen McKenzie, conductor, first, 161; McLean school primary choir, Rossland, Miss Helen McDonell, conductor, second, 160; Hume school primary choir, Nelson, Miss Greta Curwen, conductor, third, 159; East Trail school primary choir, Trail, Miss E. Horwell, conductor, 155; Trail Central school primary choir, Trail, Miss Jean MacKinnon, conductor, 157.

"I don't know how the ladies conducting these choirs do it," were the adjudicator's opening remarks. The second song, "The Journey," by Alex Rowley, was not easy and had decided difficulties in it. The winners had a delicious floating tone which was the chief sign of good things to come. Had the East Trail choir maintained pitch they would have been five or six marks ahead of all the others.

HUME SCHOOL WINS

Class 2: Day school choirs, junior grades 3 and 4, 40 voices or less: Hume school choir, Nelson, Miss Greta Curwen, conductor, first, 83, 82; East Trail school choir, Trail, Miss E. A. Horwell, conductor, second, 81, 83; Central school choir, Miss Winnifred Borthwick, conductor, third, 82, 81; McLean school choir, Rossland, Miss Nina Jackson, conductor, 82, 80; Trail Central school choir, Trail, Miss Cleada Graham, conductor, 81, 80.

They were a close group of choirs, there being but one mark's difference between them. The adjudicator said he had to keep his sense of values on the alert all the time. One or two choirs set themselves a difficult task by singing slower than they were able to. Those choirs which sang the first song, "The Brown Owl," by Alec Rowley, got the best marks. McLean school *choir had good expression with oc*casional slurring, but sang beautifully. They were too serious in the second piece, "The Gypsies," by Carl Reinecke. The Trail Central school choir had fresh and pleasing tone and their words were excellent. Pitch was down a little most of the time. The Hume school choir had lovely tone. Pitch was maintained through the first, a difficult song. Their second song had effortless production which all choirmasters like. The Central school choir was far too serious in their second song but good in their first. The East Trail choir had excellent tone, cleverly varied throughout. Expression was attended to and skilfully carried throughout.

NELSON CENTRAL WINS

Class 3: Day school choirs, junior grades 5 and 6, 20 to 60 voices: Central school choir, Nelson, Miss Winnifred Borthwick, conductor. first, 83, 84; Trail Central school choir, Trail, Miss Florence Rutledge, conductor, second, 81, 83; East Trail school choir, Trail, Miss E. A. Horwell, conductor, third, 80 81; Hume school choir, Nelson, Miss Greta Curwen, conductor, 78. 81; McLean school choir, Rossland, Miss Nina Jackson, conductor, 80, 79.

The first song, "My Mother Bids," by Haydn, was a most difficult one. said Dr. Muirhead. In fact, he considered it a shade too difficult for festival choirs of that class.

It was written in the key of A. Major, a delightful happy key, but the heart of the song contained sadness. Only one choir got at the heart of it. Fortunately for him that choir were also excellent in other respects.

The second song, "The Shepherd's Holiday", by E. Markham Lees had two parts, was tricky and difficult. He was delighted beyond measure at the way two of the choirs sang it. The winning choir showed results of skilled training. Had the choir which placed second maintained better pitch they might have tied for first place.

TRAIL CENTRAL WINS

Class 4—Day school choirs, grades VII and VIII, 20 to 60 voices: Trail Central school choir, Trail, Miss Florence Rutledge, conductor, first, 85. Nelson Central school choirs No. 1 and No. 2, both conducted by Miss Enid Etter tied for second. Dr. Muirhead had not noticed the two choirs had the same conductor so shook hands with Miss Etter's left and right when presenting certificates.

The first song "Clouds" by R. Burnard Elliot was an echo song and there was a tendency not to make the first occurrence of the echo strong enough. Two of the choirs had too little variety of tone.

The winners had lovely tone, they were pleasing in every respect.

When Dr. Muirhead asked the audience to whom he had awarded first many voices cried "Central school".

ST. PAUL'S, NELSON WINS

Class 8—Boys' choirs, under 19 years, any number: St. Paul's United church Boys' choir, Nelson, Mrs. T. J. S. Ferguson, conductor, first, 81; Trail Central School Boys' choir, Miss Florence Rutledge, conductor, second, 80.

The choir placing second had fallen badly in pitch. Pitch was most important, the adjudicator pointed out as the listener's enjoyment depended upon it. If pitch slipped, all musical people suffered. It was pitch that helped him in deciding the winner. The choir ranking second was actually the most highly finished choir.

NELSON GIRLS FIRST

Class 7—Junior choirs; girls or mixed under 19 years, any number: St. Paul's Girl's choir, Nelson, Miss Eileen S. McKenzie, conductor, first, 84; Knox United Junior choir, Trail, Mrs. A. C. Graham, conductor, second, 80.

"Oh the Summer", by S. Coleridge Taylor, was a delightful song but the alto part was difficult. Altos in both choirs sang with lack of certainty but the winning choir was far ahead of the other in respect to tone, expression and phrasing.

NELSON TENOR WINS

Class 21, young vocalist, boys under 22—Foster Mills, Nelson, tenor, 85; Donald Beattie, Nelson, baritone 84.

Both singers showed evidence of good training. Tones were produced easily. They have been taught to phrase sensitively. Although they were both young much had been done by their training to obtain a tone with beauty and refinement. The baritone was a little more developed.

BILLIE WALLACE FIRST

Class 46, Pianoforte under 19—Billie Wallace, Nelson, 81 and 82; Kathleen Smith, Trail, 78 and 79; Robert Gerrish, Nelson, 78 and 78.

The first number was "Water Wagtail" about a little fellow well known to people in England. He was a lively little fellow. Two of the competitors lacked rhythmic life and animation. The true character of the music was not there. One caught the import of the left hand and played with a sense of color making it possible for her to give it something depicting the "Water Wagtail".

The second composition was passionate, full of longing, meaning and expression. Two did not quite realize that. The third played with more intelligence throughout. There was more feeling. Both left and right hand played melody, not just a sting of notes.

TRAIL VIOLINIST FIRST

Class 60, violin solo, open—Rudolf Hartmann, Trail, 80; only contestant.

There was much to admire in the young man's playing. He played with good tone, generally speaking. His bowing was good but needed more sublety.

NELSON DUET VICTORS

Class 61, duet for violin and pianoforte, under 18 years—Daisy Norris, violin, and Billie Wallace, piano, Nelson, 85, only contestants.

"This is one of the best performances I have heard today. They have more than adequate technique for the beautiful Schubert movement", the adjudicator said. "They are a splendid team. They have rhythm, color and life. I had hoped there were more contestants in this class and others as good as this team."

TRAILITE WINS ELOCUTION

Class 83, elocution, open—Henry W. Hankin, Trail, only contestant.

The first poem was a good one, the other, from Shakespeare, a beautiful example of blank verse. In the first he had little interest. He could have responded to the meaning, feeling and color. His variety was so defective the adjudicator had a most pleasant surprise when the contestant began the second number. In it he showed intelligent feeling and rhythm.

TUXIS BOYS WIN

Class 25, mixed quartette, young vocalists under 22 — Tuxis Boys' quartette of St. Paul's United *church, Nelson, 163; only contes*tant.

"If all performances were as engaging and delightful as this an adjudicator's life would be a pleasant one," remarked Dr. Whitehead. "In the first piece, 'My Little Pretty One,' they had a poor start but recovered quickly. There was a lovely soprano in this group who had effortless tone production. He sang cleverly and discreetly. In the second number the alto sang the melody admirably and the others artistically sang around him.

"It is pleasant to find groups of singers singing this unspectacular, beautiful old English music," the adjudicator concluded.

NELSON STANDS ALONE

Class 80, elocution under 19—Wenonah Liversidge, Nelson, 80 and 80; only contestant.

A most attractive voice which she uses already with skill. The adjudicator was quite impressed by the delivery of blank verse. There was plenty of color, rhythm and tonal variety to give it charm and beauty. The second rendition the adjudicator expected to be a superlative effort but there was a slight slip of memory but a quick recovery. The business of questions and answers was delightful.

TRAIL BARITONE FIRST

Class 30, vocal solo, baritone, open —Edward Baker, Trail, 81; only contestant.

The words were archaic, written by a composer suited to archaic work. Songs of this type were difficult and Dr. Whitehead was pleased with the musical and intelligent singing of a difficult song. The voice still needed considerable training and practice to develop. The adjudicator advised trying for more warmth of expression in the higher notes, and then he would become a capital singer.

NELSONITE WINS

Class 28, ladies' vocal solo, contralto, open — Florence C. Waters, Nelson, 84; Florence Wady, Nelson, 82.

They were two interesting singers. One was not sufficiently in touch with the song to have absorbed it. The winner had a finished, deft execution of the simple moments. She sang the word "pain" and colored it with full meaning.

MORE ABOUT MRS. SIMPSON

*are being completed for the mar*riage of Mrs. Wallis Simpson and the Duke of Windsor, their friends here declared today.

The date of the wedding was expected to be either June 19, Mrs. Simpson's birthday, or June 23, which is the Duke's.

The ceremony, which their friends say will be attended by his sister Mary, the Princess Royal, and the Duke of Kent, who will be his best man, is likely to be at Chateau de Cande at Tours, France, where Mrs. Simpson is now in residence.

Definite fixing of a date, however, was said to await the Duke's arrival at the chateau after Mrs. Simpson's divorce decree may be made final anytime after April 27.

Friends of the Duke of Windsor doubt he will leave Austria before the coronation on May 12 for, although he says he is "counting the days" until he sees Mrs. Simpson again, he is determined to give his brother a "clear run" during the coronation.

Is Charged Breaking and Entering C. P. R. Dining Car, Nelson

Appearing before Stipendiary Magistrate John Cartmel Thursday on a charge of breaking and entering a Canadian Pacific railway dining car, Mike Reibin was remanded for eight days. He was arrested by C. P. R. Constable D. A. Sinclair.
