Two Trappers, Sought by Posses Led by Sergt. Gammon, Surrender in the North

TRAILED FOR 150 MILES; IS WANTED FOR PART IN BIG THEFT OF FURS

Former Nelson Police Officer Engaged in the Search

TRAILED FROM 2 FUR CACHES

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 23 (CP)—Police in northern British Columbia tonight were victorious in a grim battle of wits and woodcraft as two trappers, whose names were not immediately available, surrendered at Fort Nelson, B.C., to face charges of complicity in the $34,00 fur robbery at the Hudson's Bay company Fort Nelson post two years ago.

Word that the trappers had given themselves up was heard in Edmonton tonight by Grant McConachie, president of United Air Transport, whose airplanes have assisted British Columbia provincial police in the search. Mr. McConachie's information came via short wave radio from Fort Nelson.

Fort Nelson is 35 miles northwest of Edmonton.

Over 150 miles of trackless bushland and with keen-eyed airplane pilots endeavoring to spot the fleeing men, Sergt. E. Gammon and Corporal Cook with posses of heavily armed men have been pursuing a search for two men, obviously wise in the ways of the bush, who, masked and armed, held up the Hudson's Bay company post in August, 1935, and escaped with several bales of fur, valued at $34,000.

Police had been following a false trail up to mid-August when two fur caches, one of them partially destroyed by fire, were discovered three miles down-river from Fort Nelson. By this time police had worked their way on a false trail 80 miles north of Fort Nelson.

Sergt. E. Gammon, mentioned in the foregoing dispatch, is well known in the Kootenays. He was formerly staff-sergeant at Nelson, and later was stationed at various posts in the southern interior, including Cranbrook.

Box Rentals at Post Office to Go Up Sharply

Effective with the institution of letter delivery, post office box rentals at Nelson will be increased sharply, some of them to twice the former figure. The purpose, it was explained Thursday by R. M. Manahan, postmaster, is to discourage the use of boxes, so that urgently needed space in the post office may be obtained. At this time boxes are being rented for a month only.

Boxes which now rent for $2 are to be raised to $4; those at $3 to $6; those at $5 to $8; and those at $8 to $12. Boxholders not within reach of delivery will enjoy the old rates.

The post office is also instituting a drive, the postmaster stated, to obtain the street addresses of all within the delivery limits. Cards are being issued by the post office with the request that all receiving them fill in their names and street addresses. The post office staff is familiar with the box numbers of most persons, but not with their street addresses, and is listing these addresses assist in directing insufficiently or improperly addressed letters to the correct persons.

Some of the equipment necessary to letter delivery has arrived, and other equipment is on the way. Mr. Manahan has been advised that the department hopes to institute delivery at the beginning of November, and that this working on that basis.

HELEN JACOBS IS OUT OF NET PLAY

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23 (AP) — Two smashing upsets, with Senorita Anita Lizana of Chile and Helen Jacobs of California the victims provided the fireworks for today's play in the Pacific southwest tennis championships.

Senorita Lizana, newly crowned United States singles champion went out in the quarter-finals of women's singles before the crafty play of Mrs. John (Midge) Van Ryn of Austin, Texas, 5-7, 6-3, 6-1.

Miss Jacobs, former American court queen, went down before Miss Gracyn Wheeler of Santa Monica, tournament defending champion, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Victorious in semi-final matches, America's J. Donald Budge and Baron Gottfried von Cramm of Germany will renew their court feud in the championship finals of the men's singles Saturday.

Von Cramm, the world's No. 2 singles player, was hard-pressed to defeat 18-year-old Joe Hunt of Los Angeles, National junior singles champion, who carried the German star to five sets before losing, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

Budge had an easy time disposing of his doubles partner, Gene Mako, 8-6, 6-2, 6-0. It was hardly a workout for the California red head.

REPORTER TRACES DOWN BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT IN LONDON; GETS SOME GOOD LAUGHS AND A FEW WRONG LEADS ON THE TRAIL

Dominions Office Makes Good Guess as to Its Location; Copy May Be Seen for 35 Cents But No Purchaseable Copies Available

ABERHART'S REMARK ORIGINAL COPY NOT TO BE FOUND STARTS THE SEARCH

By J. NORMAN SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 23 (CP Cable)—The British North American act—which Premier Aberhart of Alberta says is not in North America—rests in the Victoria tower of the West Side buildings at Westminster, mother of parliaments. But it took more than an hour sleuthing over London telephones to find out; and the search for Canada's constitution provoked a few good laughs.

First call was to the Dominion office where the query was put:

Where and in whose custody is the British North America act? It produced this answer:

"I'm blowed if I know. It must be on the statute roll somewhere. Hold a minute, I'll find out"—"No, I don't know, unless you try the public records office; and look here, please let us know what you learn."

35 CENTS FOR A LOOK

The call to the public records office, after trickling through several wrong departments finally reached the right clerk.

"Hang on will you"—long pause—"All original acts of parliament are with the clerk of parliaments in the house of lords. That and one other copy are signed by the clerk when the act is passed. We have the other copy here, which you can see for 35 cents but we haven't a purchasable copy. Perhaps His Majesty's stationery office has one. If you give us 45 minutes to dig the copy out we'll show it to you here in the legal search room."

A third call was in order. After more wrong departments and more long, long pauses the inquirer was told by His Majesty's stationery office that prior to 1887 the crown copyright was held by Eyre and Spottiswoode, and they were bound by law to sell a copy of any act passed in their time for a shilling.

ACT OUT OF PRINT

So the query was repeated to Eyre and Spottiswoode. When was the act passed?—1867—"Oh dear; hang on please, I'll try to find out." After a prolonged pause came the rather triumphant answer that the act was now out of print and the clerk knew nothing about any law compelling a copy to be produced for a purchaser.

"Will there be another printing?"

"I don't imagine so; when old acts are sold out we don't replace them, but you can see copies in the British museum or any large library."

"Are many acts out of print or is this an isolated case?"

"Oh no; there are ever so many like that. No, I don't think you'll be able to buy a copy anywhere."

"IS IT AN ACT OF PARLIAMENT?

So this time the question was hurled at the redoubtable British museum.

"Is it an act of parliament?" asked the clerk.

"Yes."

"Well, we must have it as we have all the acts of parliament and you can see them any time you want to."

But the Canadian press asked if the clerk could check his list and definitely ascertain the act's presence. Whereupon the clerk countered:

"Is the act in force now?"

The inquirer wanted to answer "yes and no", but felt this would confuse unnecessarily the luckless custodian so replied with a simple "yes".

"Then we have most certainly got it and you can see it without charge."

"May I bring pencil and paper and copy it out for myself?"

"Oh quite. I'd be very pleased."

The seeker after the constitution then took the bull by the horns and called the clerk of parliaments but was augustly informed the office closed at 4 p.m. it was then 4:10.

A repeat call in the morning found the accountants' office of the house of lords exceedingly helpful and courteous.

FOUND: THE ORIGINAL ACT

"Yes, we have the original act, kept in the Victoria tower, printed in book form on about 60 pages of vellum; and we have a copy to show you, but no cheap copies to sell. We can make you a copy, with the following charges: Ninepence per folio—70 words—for typing; a pound sterling for the clerk of parliaments' certification; seven and a half shillings for obtaining the act from the tower."

Asked whether the Dominion archivist might have the act photographed if he wanted a photostatic copy of the original, the clerk said this would be difficult as the fact of its printing in book form would necessitate many photos. Originally all bills were printed on rolls of vellum, but since 1850 they have been bound in book form.

CERTAINLY EXISTS

Certainly in the clerk's mind there is no doubt of the existence of the Canadian constitution even though it is now impossible to get a popular edition for a shilling to read on the street car on the way to work.

In an address Sept. 6 at Edmonton Premier Aberhart said "nowhere can there be found the original copy of the British North America act—Canada's constitution."

Subsequently Dr. J. F. Kenney, acting Dominion archivist, said he would send to London for a certified manuscript copy.

ENDEAVOUR I NOT LOCATED

LONDON, Sept. 24 (Friday) (AP)—Fresh mystery enveloped the fate of the British yacht Endeavour I when a report reached London early today that the Captain of the British tanker Amastra had denied an earlier report he sighted the missing yacht near the Azores.

Underwriters at Lloyds, who heard the report of the yacht's safety, went home joyfully and the city was shrouded in darkness when the radio message arrived from the tanker's captain saying he'd seen and heard nothing of the Endeavour and that he "gravely deplored" the original statement.

Rangers Favored to Win Saturday

GLASGOW, Sept. 23 (CP Cable)—Favored with a home game against St. Mirren, Saturday, Glasgow Rangers have a golden opportunity to slip into the driver's seat in the Scottish football league. Only one point separates the light blues from Dundee, spectacular Forfarshire leader, but the latter will be up against a fighting squad at Hamilton in the academicals.

Rangers' strength has caused a lot of debate at Ibrox Park.

There is unanimity in regard to the defence, the colorful champions being unbeaten this season and only six goals sent into the net behind Dawson, their interantional goalkeeper. But of nine games played, five have been drawn and there are many who think new blood needs to be injected into the attack.

All the other contenders for the leadership have away games. Motherwell goes to Kilmarnock, and should duplicate last season's victory, while Celtic oppose Aberdeen at Pittodrie. Although beaten six times this year, the Dons may spring a surprise on the cup-holding side. Falkirk looks for maximum points against Clyde but Third Lanark will have a hard job at Arbroath where the seasiders have a habit of downing the best of teams.

Negro Speaks for Hour After Found Guilty of Murder

Crosley Sentenced to Hang Dec. 6 for Slaying

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—Chester Crosley, heavy-shouldered negro "habitual criminal", held a courtroom rapt and still today with a dramatic one-hour speech before Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffrey sentenced him to die on the gallows December 6 for the murder of John McCormick, Kingston penitentiary guard.

Occasionally demonstrative during his nine-day trial—twice he yelled protests from the prisoner's box and once was taken from the room—Crosley stunned the crowded courtroom as he addressed the bench in precise and sometimes solemn words. He spoke after the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

One of the first statements was: "I'll still maintain, when swinging on the gallows, I did not intend to kill Toomey or McCormick. The first law of nature is self-preservation. I think a man's conscience makes that up, too." (E. Toomey, a guard, was wounded by Crosley's knife in the 1936 stabbing).

JAPANESE PAPER WARNS POWERS

TOKYO, Sept. 24 (Friday). (AP)—The newspaper Nichi Nichi today warned that Great Britain and the United States "will only suffer greater damage in the end" if they and other powers seriously attempt to restrain Japanese bombings of China's capital, Nanking.

The paper declared Great Britain, the United States and other powers that protested further air attacks of the city, were confusing legalities with realities. It contended the fate of the entire Japanese campaign in China rested on the capture of Nanking.

"The moment that Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek abandons Nanking he faces immediate and complete defeat both in north China and in Shanghai," Nichi Nichi said.

"This is because all the political, military, social and economic controls are concentrated in Nanking and Shanghai."

SUCCESS OF PAIN KILLER DEPENDS ON METHOD

MONTREAL, Sept. 3 (CP)—Dentists who blasted value of Dr. Leroy L. Hartman's anaesthetic last year listened to the Columbia university professor expound the correct technique of administering his pain killed at today's session of the Montreal dental clinic.

A year ago, declared the former Victoria dentist, many of them tried his formula of thymol, ether and alcohol and declared it either did not or worked in only a small percentage of cases. Some even accused him of having hypnotized patients so they would feel no pain.

Dr. Hartman's reply today was that the mixture must be applied only to the dentine of the tooth and mouth saliva must be kept away from the tooth, which must be dry in the first place.

EASTERN CITIES ARE RAIDED BY PLANES

SHANGHAI, Sept. 23 (AP)—Japan's air force today carried its campaign of death and terror to a score or more cities throughout nearly all of eastern China.

Canton, great metropolis of the south, suffered the severest punishment, with 2000 dead or wounded in two days of bombing.

Nanking, the capital, escaped after the two raids of Wednesday, but numerous towns within a 200-mile radius felt the wrath of the Japanese bombers.

Whether rainy weather or the protests of Great Britain, the United States, France, and Germany, the Nanking bombardments kept the Japanese airmen away from the capital was uncertain. At any rate Nanking went unbombed although reports that an enemy air armada of 55 planes had left the Shanghai region, flying west, kept the capital in acute tension for several hours.

The air fleet apparently spent most of its force against the Kiangyin forts on the Yangtze river about 80 miles east of Nanking, although fragmentary reports indicated several other towns in the lower Yangtze valley were bombed.

Foreign observers told of harrowing scenes in Canton, where streets after a series of bombings which apparently surpassed in destructive effect anything either Nanking or Shanghai has felt.

MAN WITH SPINE BROKEN ENCASED IN PLASTER CAST

EDMONTON, Sept. 23 (CP)—Slight relief from excruciating pain that has tortured him since a fall from a horse fractured his spine Monday came for Harry Campbell, youthful homesteader at Worsley, 200 miles north of Edmonton, as Dr. O. J. McFadyen of Fairview, encased the youth's body in a plaster cast and started to make arrangements for a 20-mile stretcher relay over bush trails to Hines Creek, end of steel.

But outlook remained almost hopeless for the iron-nerved youth who crawled along the trail towards safety until unconsciousness overtook him after the accident, then lay in agony while a trained nurse sought to relieve his pain, and an emergency airplane droned overhead Tuesday afternoon in a fruitless search for a landing field in the timber-covered area.

And so the history of Sir Walter Scott's "Castle Dangerous," which repeatedly changed hands during the struggle between Edward I and the Scots, comes to an end.

Mercury Drops Near the Frost Point in Nelson

Nelson's weather man performed a repetition on Thursday of Wednesday's weather. Morning broke with the sun shining cheery and bright, but by afternoon, dark clouds had gathered and down went the mercury, the maximum to 58, one degree lower than Wednesday. The minimum was 35, just three degrees above freezing.

The sun managed to beam for three and one half hours on its journey across the sky, but was cut short by the clouds about noon.

Instead of ending in a blaze of glory as did the days a short time ago, Wednesday came to a climax with murky, gray clouds flanging the western horizon and a premonition of a cold night ahead, possibly with snow coming far down the mountains. A snowstorm was noted on the mountains below Kokanee peaks.

Warned General Before Vendetta Slaying in South

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., Set. 23 (AP) — Disclosure an attorney for Brigadier-General Henry H. Denhardt, victim of one of Kentucky's most sensational slayings, received tree threatening letters heightened interest in the case today.

The disclosure came as this city prepared to pay final respects to a home town boy who became one of the bluegrass state's outstanding political and military figures, only to die in a hail of bullets fired by revenge-seeking brothers of the woman the commonwealth alleged Denhardt slew.

Rodes K. Myers of Bowling Green, who was with Denhardt when the 61-year-old "stormy petrel" of Kentucky politics was shot down on the main street in Shelbyville Monday night, revealed he was warned in one note "not to come up."

He expressed belief the veiled threat referred to the examining trial tomorrow at Shelbyville for the brothers — Jack, Roy and E. S. Garr — charged with murder.

The attorney said after Denhardt fell mortally wounded, Dr. E. S. Garr turned his gun on him but Roy Garr prevented his brother from shooting.

WHITE ARMY GENERAL VANISHES AFTER SECRET MEETING WITH GERMANS

PARIS, Sept. 23 (AP)—General Eugene de Miller, leader of the now mythical "white army" of Russia, was reported today to have vanished after a mysterious rendezvous with two German officiers which the aging Czarist himself suspected as a possible trap.

The case was given a broader aspect shortly after the first report when the family of a former Russian general, linked vaguely in the affair by a note de Miller had left, reported he also had dropped from sight.

The twin disappearances were veiled by a dark aura of international intrique.

Arrest Senator Logan on False Pretences Charge - Gypsum Queen Fraud Case

OTTAWA, Sept. 23 (CP).—A warrant was issued here today for the arrest of Senator Hance J. Logan of Parrsboro, N.S. It was based on information by George Edwin Beament, associate counsel for Capt. Freeman Hatfield, skipper of the schooner Gypsum Queen who today was sentenced to 18 months in jail for defrauding the reparations commission of $71,276.

The information alleges that the senator, on or about March 18, 1931, in Ottawa "did unlawfully by false pretences procure to be delivered by the Bank of Montreal, to him, the said Hance J. Logan, the sum of $71,276.72, the property of his Majesty the King in the right of Dominion of Canada, with intent to defraud."

Senator Logan, who was counsel for Hatfield in his application for reparations for loss of his schooner in 1915, has been ill in his hotel here for several days.

Logan was arrested formally by city police and was expected to apply immediately for bail.

BONNINGTON-SOUTH SLOCAN W. I. HAS A FINE DISPLAY

Coronation Colors and Motifs Are Used to Decorate Institute Stall

(By LALEAH M. ROBERTSON)

Coronation colors of gold and purple were used in decorating the booth of the South Slocan-Bonnington Women's Institute at the Nelson Fall Fair. A lattice gate, the posts of which were surmounted by lamps with shades made to resemble crowns, formed the entrance and the coronation motif was seen again in some of the embroidery exhibits.

Conveners for the exhibit were Mrs. J. D. Yeatman and Mrs. W. C. Motley, and they were assisted by Mrs. E. J. McGregor, Mrs. W. Watley, Mrs. E. J. Bowkett, Mrs. W. T. Jones, Mrs. M. Downey and Mrs. Eric Anderson. This attractively arranged display received 90 points for Display and Arrangement and in the Home Cooking section.

A tempting array of canned fruits, vegetables and fish was displayed on shelves with dairy products and fresh fruits and vegetables arranged below the home cooking at one end of the booth. The fresh vegetables and fruits were most attractively arranged in baskets with red peppers and tomatoes adding a bright touch of color.

In the handicraft group a wicker flower stand was an outstanding piece of work and some attractive hand-painted china and greeting cards took my eye. Dainty organdie sachets of home-grown lavender; a pine-needle basket of shiny green; a small exhibit of home-dyed wool and a hand-tooled leather bag and purse were other items worthy of mention in the display.

There was some beautifully done knitting and the plain sewing was of high order, while a tea cloth embroidered in cross stitch in coronation motif was most attractive.

There was a box of candies and one of candied assorted fruit which fairly made one's mouth water, and altogether this display aroused in me the desire to go home and see what I could do, not only in the fancy work line but also in the way of cooking and canning.

The vegetable dish is said to be a husband's favorite, so I though we would try it.

Today's Recipes

VEGETABLE DISH. — Six to eight ears sweet corn, three large sweet potatoes, diced; two green peppers, butter, flour, milk. Butter a casserole. Cut corn from cob, place a layer of corn, then one of sweet potato, then one of pepper, sliced in strips. Dot with butter. Sprinkle with flour, salt and pepper. Continue with layers until dish is full. Pour milk over all to about an inch from top. Bake in 400-degree oven for about one hour.

PECAN PIE—One nine-inch pie shell, one cup pecan meats, one-half cup butter, one-half cup sugar, one cup corn syrup, three eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon vanilla. Prepare shell. Prepare nut meats, pouring boiling water through them if shelled meats have been purchased. Look over for bits of shell and break into large pieces. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, creaming the while. When of whipped cream consistency, add corn syrup, stirring it in thoroughly. Beat eggs with salt until thick and lemon colored. Add to first mixture with vanilla and nut meats. Mix well. Turn into baked shell and bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees, until firm, from 30 to 40 minutes.

Education Is Aid to Happiness as Well as Necessity

By VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Miss Lee: Please print this letter for the benefit of the little girl who wanted to quit school.

"Listen, Undecided, don't be foolish! If you quit school you will be making the biggest mistake of your life. The better one is educated the happier he is in life. Many of the movies you attend and the books you read are based on history. If you have no knowledge of history, how do you expect to understand them properly?

"How do you expect to get a job if you have no knowledge of bookkeeping, typing, shorthand, business arithmetic, etc.? You can no longer even be a clerk in a store until you have a high schol education. They are not taking such people on unless absolutely necessary. You have one hundaed per cent better chance of getting a job with a high school education that you have without it.

"Suppose it is five more years? What is five years compared to a lifetime of regret? It took me five years and I had to study like everything to make it, then. I too wanted to quit, but I stuck it out and am glad I did, for now I have my job.

"Please take my advice and you will never regret it. You may lose your money, but an education is something that no one can take away from you. A FRIEND."

Most excellent advice, oh wise young friend, and I sincerely hope that Undecided will profit by it and go gaily back to school.

* * *

Helen E.: Your friendship with this boy is just a "comedy of errors", isn't it? I think if he wanted to very much he would renew the friendship. And until he makes some move to do so you can do nothing. When you meet him, show him that you are friendly, whether he is with others (and that goes for girls, too) or not, and see what his reactions will be.

It may be that he still likes you but has the idea that you do not care for him. At any rate, if you show an encouraging attitude it will give him a chance to come back to you if he cares to.

* * *

Smokey: Surely, break down and forgive the boy if he is sorry he believed false reports and wants to go with you again. Anyone can make a mistake and any two people may have a misunderstanding. No occasion to "stay mad", is there? Also, in this case better ignore the girl who is trying to keep you apart.

Aid in Keeping Tresses Lovely . . .

If the Oil Glands of the Scalp Are Overactive Try a Salt Pack

By GLADYS GLAD

Up in the arctic circle, I am told the young Eskimo belle who wants to make a hit with her favorite boy friend—or who just wants to make a boy friend—uses reindeer marrow as pomatum for her hair. The girls up there, it seems, have very strong, healthy hair, but when the reindeer marrow is plastered on, their locks look anything but attractive, from our point of view.

LEE WILEY,
Blues singer has glossy hair

There are a good number of women, however, whose tresses look just about as oily and unattractive as if they were plastered with marrow. And that's because the oil glands in their scalps are abnormal and overactive. They exude oil in excess quantities, and as a result, their hair becomes dull, greasy and lifeless in appearance.

No damsel who wants to appear attractive can afford to let her hair get into an oily condition.

Of course, superficial treatments such as the use of lemon rinses, soda rinses and the like are beneficial for removing the excess oil from the hair, and for making the hair appear soft and fluffy. But a salt pack not only makes the hair appear free from any excess oil, but also helps to correct the abnormal action of the oil glands themselves. Of course, the results of the treatment will not be immediately apparent, but the procedure is a vigorous stimulation that is beneficial in every way.

BRUSH AGAIN

Before the salt pack is applied, the hair should be brushed vigorously with a flexible-bristled brush. This brushing should be done with an upward and outward movement, so that the hair is freed from all accumulated dust and grime. Then a saucerful of ordinary table salt should be moistened with a little water, and applied to the scalp. The hair should be parted at close intervals and the salt applied until the entire scalp has been covered. And when the pack has been entirely applied, the salt should be rubbed through the hair and over the scalp with the fingertips. A towel should then be wrapped about the head and the pack permitted to remain on for a few minutes.

After this time has elapsed, the hair should again be brushed vigorously and then fine-combed, in order to remove as much as possible of the salt from the hair and scalp. Next, before the hair is moistened, a good liquid shampoo should be generously applied to it, and a rich lather raised. This permits the soap to act directly on the oil and prevents any stickiness that might result if water were used.

After this primary lathering and scrubbing, the hair should be rinsed with lukewarm water and relathered. As the final step, every bit of soap should be rinsed from the hair with clear water. And then a lemon, soda or vinegar rinse should be administered. This procedure will not only remove all the excess oil from the hair, but will also help to normalize the functioning of the oil glands. And in addition, it will leave the hair soft, fluffy and lustrous.

Simple Plan Will Prevent Habit of Counting, He Says

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

As almost any teacher or parent knows, many a child having trouble with arithmetic in the intermediate grades, still counts when he sees such combinations as 8 plus 5 equals, or 16 plus 7 equals, and that so long as he continues to count his trouble persists. Yesterday I explained how this habit usually begins, how it is cultivated by the very way in which the child is taught in the early stages of addition and subtraction, and what may be done to correct it. Today I shall endeavor to show how this counting habit may easily be prevented.

Far more parents than teachers will agree with me. But let us parents remember that it is not within our province to tell the teacher what to do.

Here is my simple plan: As you begin the child at home or school on numbers, give him abundant experience at counting and writing the number symbols first to 20 and later to 100; also of learning roughly the relative magnitudes of these numbers as more or less, without ascertaining how many more or less.

Then given the child abundant experience with objects and sequences whereby he learns that two numbers together make a larger number. But do not keep him at this activity with a view to having him learn any of the addition or subtraction combinations. Purposely shift from one to another so he might not learn any of these combinations in this manner. Let him learn by counting, for example, that by putting together 4 and 7 he gets a number bigger than either 4 or 7. When you are ready to teach him addition, present first those combinations which do not easily lend themselves to counting, such as 6 and 7 are 13; 7 and 6 are 13, and have him learn them mechanically. It is well to present them in pairs, for learning economy. Next present such as 5 and 8 are 13, in the column-form, then 8 and 5 are 13. Two pairs at a period may be enough. Then make up little story problems in which these facts are used, but don't present the problem before the fact involved has been learned. Do not present such combinations as 1 and 1, 2 and 1, 3 and 2, until practically all the larger combinations have been learned.

Long-sleeved dresses are beginning to appear at smart luncheon tables, often in prints, and sometimes in monotone.

SAYS VARICOSE VEINS CAN BE REDUCED

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, as good advice for home treatment as any friend can give, is to get a prescription known as Moone's Emerald Oil.

Simply ask MANN, RUTHERFORD CO. or your druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer burdensome. So penetrating and efficient is Emerald Oil that it also helps simple swellings due to strain to disappear. (Advt.)

107th Attempt at Suicide a Failure

WARSAW, Sept. 23 (CP-Havas)—After his 107th attempt at suicide, each time employing a new method, Leon Kasprsykowski was doing better than could be expected today in the Warsaw municipal hospital.

The unvarying aspect of his attempts is that they always occur before the doors of this institution, in which he then receives weeks of treatment amid comfortable surroundings.

This time he drank a quart of gasoline.

Britain — U. S. May Curb "Hot Money"

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—Hint of possible mutual action by the United States and Great Britain to curb international "hot money" movements through taxation came today from Treasury Secretary Morgenthau.

"Hot money" is foreign capital which may move quickly from one country to another, creating domestic credit and leaving a wake of financial problems as it moves.

Hardware Store Haven of Refuge Ladies' Clothes

Wood-Vallance Filled With Ladies' Wear During Fire

Should a customer of the Wood, Vallance Hardware company chance to find a bit of lace-trimmed lingerie in a stove, or perhaps have a bolt of cloth delivered instead of a box of bolts, it will all be easily explained. It was the result of the fire in the Victoria block Wednesday, when goods from Jerman Hunt's ladies' ready-to-wear store were carried into the hardware store for safety. The timing was just about perfect, for if the fire had occurred earlier in the day it would have disrupted the business of the store; and if it had happened a little later, the store would have been closed for the half-holiday.

A regular army of men and boys emptied the Hunt store in short order as they rushed across the street, dodging under cascades from the fire hoses, with everything from sheet-wrapped models — plaster of paris ones—to unmentionables and fur coats. In a few minutes counters of the Wood, Vallance were piled high with silks and satins and brocades. Then the space between the counters was filled, tops of stoves were covered. Buttons rolled into every cranny. Finally there was one box and no place to put it, so it had to stay on the sidewalk. But when the excitement was over and the fire was out, a sortie through the store revealed only three towels had been missed.

Among the goods rescued were $22,000 worth of fur coats being shown at the store by a traveller—seven trunks of them.

Several members of the Wood, Vallance staff, including Norman Brown, Ernie Riesterer, R. B. Morris, Gordon Mackenzie, Leslie McEachern, Alderman Roy Sharp and Miss Ruth Erickson, gave up their afternoon half-holiday to assist in sorting out the rescued goods with members of the Hunt store staff.

It wasn't a case of Wood, Vallance and Hunt; but of Hunt the Wood, Vallance.

EVERYONE IS HAPPY AS BIG FAIR GOES ON

Fine Exhibits, a Star Stage Show, Fun on Midway

"HEALTH HOUSE" ATTRACTS MANY

Everybody's happy. The Nelson fall fair is the finest in years, the stage attractions are headliners, and there's fun and frolic on the midway for everyone.

With the annual exhibition of the products of garden, farm, kitchen, sewing room and school scheduled for its last big day today, it is expected that the attendance will reach record proportions. It is anticipated also that district exhibitors and their friends will flock to the city today to "take in the fair", size up the prizewinning entries, and join in the fun.

One of the novel features is the "House of Health", the work of Grade VII, junior high school, showing health foods and outlining with the aid of posters what should be done to maintain health. Not the least important of the posters depicts the splendid accomplishment of the school dental clinic, which in its first year of operation raised from 5 per cent to 40 per cent the number of children with healthy mouths in Central, Hume, junior high and St. Joseph's schools.

USES HEALTH FOODS

The "House of Health" is made of the foods essential to health, including an oatmeal cookie roof, brown bread steps, wheat-product biscuits for part of the walls, a milk bottle chimney and so on. A garden complete as to animal and human inhabitants, with a winding path to the front door, is depicted with the aid of various nuts, cucumbers, lettuce, macaroni and spaghetti, tomatoes, lettuce, weiners, green peas, celery, carrots, potatoes and so on.

The exhibit was arranged by Dr. F. P. Sparks, medical health officer, and Miss Nancy Dunn, health nurse. Nurses are in constant attendance at the booth.

Another feature not so prominently in the public eye but available in case of necessity is the first aid, directed by Mrs. E. J. Shardelow with Everett Smiley in charge of first-aiders. Ladies and men are assisting, taking turn about, and are familiar figures as they patrol the fair building and grounds wearing white arm bands bearing a red cross. Up to late Thursday this service had operated without a call being made upon it.

Among the added exhibits at the fair is a tray cloth, made from flax grown at Shoreacres and spun and worked by hand, exhibited by Mrs. Leslie Pickard.

CLERICAL

Almost a record for the fair, only one error in the prize lists was reported Thursday. This was an error by the judges' clerk in listing prizewinning numbers in the home cooking section, the number 159 being placed in the first prize column instead of the number 171. This resulted in W. J. McConnell, Harrop, being announced as one of the winners for bread, when the prize actually was taken by Mrs. J. B. Maglio.

Typical of the feeling of those in charge of the show was the comment of Charles F. McHardy, chairman of the needlework department of the fair, who said:

"I want to express my sincere appreciation to those who have helped to make the needlework department the success it has been this year. Fully 100 per cent more articles are on display this year than last.

"I wish to extend my thanks to all exhibitors, including those who took the trouble to display their work for exhibition only, no classification having been provided for such exhibits.

"I wish also to extend my thanks to the women's institutes for three wonderful displays. My heartiest congratulations to the winning institute, Nakusp.

"Thanks are due, too, to those women who worked on the revision of the prize list and helped so capably in placing the exhibits, and to those who gave their services as judges.

"NEED YOUR HELP"

"Our fair can be made bigger and better than any fair Nelson has ever held. This is the objective of the board of directors, and in this objective we need your help. We want you to plan now for your exhibits for next year. We will appreciate letters expressing your views as to changes in the prize list or in the staging of the exhibits. Simply drop a letter to our secretary and he will lay it before the committee in charge of the department in which your are interested.

"We trust that the women's institutes of the district will at their first meeting discuss plans for next year. We should have entries from every institute in West Kootenay.

"We would be delighted if the number of entries in the arts departments, including schools, will force us to utilize the large amusement or badminton hall.

"Let us make the fair what it should be, a real West Kootenay district fair."

"I never have any trouble about likes and dislikes in cereals. I serve every one in my family Kellogg's Corn Flakes. They prefer them all the year round."

SHIPMENTS THROUGH THE HUDSON STRAIT AT AN END

OTTAWA, Sept. 23 (CP)—Lack of grain offering for export at Churchill has brought one of the shortest shipping seasons since the opening of navigation through Hudson Strait. Only two freighters visited the Manitoba port on Hudson Bay this year, their combined cargoes clearing out the elevators there. No further shipments are anticipated.

Members of the Harrop club showed six cockerels and six pullets at the local fair and four dressed cockerels in the dressed poultry class making an impressive display.

PLUMS AND SAND CHERRIES

A. B. Smith of Cranbrook, chairman of the advisory board of B.C. Farmers' institutes, has an impressive display of hardy varieties of plums and sand cherries which are flourishing and produced a heavy crop this year. They were originally received from Manitoba, South Dakota and Minnesota. The following varieties are being grown.

Underwood and Radisson plums suitable for dessert or cooking; Crescent plum which is a dessert plum: Hennepin and Waneta plums which are cooking varieties.

In sand cherries he is growing Sapa, Opata, Zumbra, Nicollet, and Pembina varieties. Pembina is a purple variety while the others are red in color. They are doing well in the Cranbrook district and many farmers in the drier areas could be growing these successfully for their own use, agricultural authorities believe.

TRAIL SOCIAL

By MRS. GLENN QUAYLE

TRAIL, B.C., Sept. 23—At a lovely home wedding at noon Thursday, Evelyn (Eva), elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Groutage, Douglas hotel, was married by Rev. Frederick G. StDenis of First Presbyterian church to Colin Cameron Forrest, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Forrest. With autumn flowers used in a decorative scheme, the reception rooms were a lovely setting for the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. K. Sammons, and W. A Forrest, brother of the groom, was best man. Ronald Groutage, nephew of the bride, was trainbearer. R. R. Potter provided the wedding music and Mrs. John Smith was vocalist. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white silk net over heavy satin. Bias piping was used to trim the short bolero jacket which had short puffed sleeves and rounded neckline with Peter Pan collar. The skirt, tightfitting at the hips, flared to a floor length fulness which was accentuated by three rows of piping. The long veil was draped softly to the back of the neck and was worn with a coronet of Talisman rosebuds and lily of the valley. Accessories were white, the satin sandals being trimmed with golden banding. Mrs. Sammons also wore a net frock over satin, the color selected being pastel yellow, and fashioned to correspond with the bridal dress. Golden sandals and matching accessories completed the charming ensemble which was worn with a Juliet cap ornamented with mauve asters, the same flowers being repeated in the bouquet. Ronnie Groutage wore short blue pants and white satin shirt. A delightfully informal reception followed the ceremony, Mrs. Groutage assisting in receiving in a jacket dress of brown lace. Mrs. Forrest, mother of the groom, wore black georgette with green printed figures. The bride's table was covered with a handmade lace cloth and was centred by a three-tiered wedding cake. Mr. and Mrs. Forrest left on a three-week wedding trip and will, on their return to Trail, take up residence at Warfield. The bride's going-away costume was a brown silk and wool bolero dress with quilted collar and vestee of white silk. A white fox fur and brown accessories were complementary accessories. Thousands of Keys Try Lock, Treasure Chest

A booth that is proving to be one of the most popular at the 30th annual fair is the "treasure chest" booth and Miss Sally Stewart thinks it is almost "tops". She was the first lucky "locksmith" as her key was the first to open the chest after 700 others had failed. Thousands of keys tried the lock Thursday.

Many fair visitors throng around the booth at every opportunity with hearts racing, hopeful that their keys will also win them a treasure. Some have their hopes and wishes realized and many turn away, crestfallen but hoping that they may receive another key and still be lucky. On Thursday afternoon three ladies presented lucky keys within a half-hour period. Another lady with 67 keys failed to open the lock.

Boston Youth Has a Gorgeous Five Weeks With Paddle on These Lakes

Eastern Boy Rounds Out College Vacation Here; Up Arrow Lakes, Across Lardeau, Back Here Via Kootenay

A couple of hundred miles of leisurely paddling, with fishing thrown in; some stiff mountain climbing, with a view of the "sea of mountains "from a forest lookout; a touch at this settlement, or that ranch; a night or two in some trapper's tiny cabin in the wilds; near views of bears, or of a stream red with spawning kokanees; 300 snapshots of lake and mountain and forest aisle;—all these were woven into the fabric of a round trip by canoe up the Arrow lakes and down Kootenay lake, by a Boston youth on his college vacation.

Charles Wilding White, student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, decided this summer to see territory that was entirely new to him, and so he came to British Columbia, and to Nelson.

Here, intrigued by the majesty of the mountains, and the grandeur of the lakes that mirrored them, he rented a canoe and set out to make a one-man personal tour of these waterways, with such sidetrips as the whim of the moment should dictate.

CHARLES WILDING WHITE

Student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gets acquainted with the wilds as he "paddles his own canoe".

EMBARKS AT ROBSON

It was on August 9 that the New Englander shoved his canoe into the water at Robson, after trucking it out from Nelson along with his dunnage, and turned upstream on the Lower Arrow lake, breasting the current of the Columbia. This was the start of over a fortnight on the Arrow lakes, filled with adventurous incident, in which fish, fowl and animals all played parts, and the voyageur, with all the time in the world for the voyage, turned his paddle as he listed, crossed and recrossed the shining water-course explored the points of land, assayed the creeks, watched headlands materialize ahead or dissolve in the distance, and took innumerable pictures.

If the afternoon found him by a pleasant beach, there he made his camp, and from time to time he took time off for human contacts, which led him to declare afterward that British Columbia was the most hospitable land he had ever seen.

One of his side-trips was to Whatshan lakes, where he fished, and absorbed hunting lore from A. Y. Coates, whose cougar and bear skins provided illustrative material.

SNOWSTORM ON PEAK

By trail from West Demars he climbed to the forest lookout on Saddleback mountain, and enjoyed the novelty of a summer snowstorm—it was August 23—while being entertained by Cyril Evans, lookout. It was there that he had his first view of the mountain ranges, rank upon rank, like waves of the sea, the view embracing those surrounding Revelstoke. On coming down he met a black bear at the foot of the mountain.

At Nakusp the Massachusetts visitor spent a few days, extending his acquaintance with the forest service. He beached his canoe for a while at Halcyon, making the acquaintance of General F. E. Burnham and the hot springs, and at Galena Bay found a hospitable host in John Nelson, the rancher. From Mr. Nelson he enlarged his knowledge of British Columbia trees, and watched the making of cedar shakes.

MYRIADS OF WILD FOWL

Arrived at Arrowhead, where the Arrow lakes were metamorphosed to the upper Columbia, the adventurer turned his prow up the northeast arm of the Upper Arrow, to finally land at Beaton, the Arrow lakes port of the Trout Lake district. Multitudes of ducks and geese on the flats are one of his memories of the northeast arm.

A stage conveyed him and the canoe to Trout Lake City, once a local capital, where he met Mrs. Alice Jowett, a prospector in her own right, as well as a business pillar of the community. He also paid a visit to Ferguson, and heard much of the True Fissure, Silver Cup and other mines, and of Circle City of the early days.

In his trip down Trout Lake, he spent a night in a trapper's comfortable and tidy cabin, and observed the rules of the woodland by leaving it neat and clean, and replacing the stock of fire wood he had used.

At Gerrard there was a Doukhobor sawmill in operation, while the Dominion fish hatchery, now some years in disuse, was still one of the best looking buildings.

RED WITH KOKANEES

Mr. White did not trust himself to the Lardeau river, but came down to Lardeau by the flanged motor-car on the railway, with the canoe on a trailer, the operator making numerous stops to enable him to take pictures. A creek near Marblehead, emptying into the Duncan river, was red with spawning redfish. He spent a day, September 5, which was wet and stormy, at Lardo.

At the head of Kootenay lake, he had a strong desire to climb Lavinia mountain, about Argenta, and see the glaciers of Earl Grey Pass, but decided he had not the time for further side-trips.

He then came on down Kootenay lake leisurely making visits at Kaslo and Ainsworth—at the latter point seeing in an orchard, his second black bear of the trip—and turning into the West Arm, finally made Nelson, September 15. At Kokanee creek he saw another redfish run. His round trip occupied five weeks and two days.

VISITING TRAIL

This week Mr. White went to Trail, where he saw the plants of the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company of Canada at Tadanac and Warfield.

He will not have time to visit East Kootenay and the Sullivan mine and Thursday he went across to spend some days at the Grand Coulee dam.

It will then be time for him to get back to Boston, and his studies.

AT 83 SHE DEFIES RHEUMATISM

After Suffering Acute Pain for Years

Rheumatism first attacked this old lady in 1931, and gradually spread from her arms to other parts of her body. Then she started to take Kruschen Salts, and now she sends the following letter in her own handwriting:—

"I have suffered from rheumatism since 1931. At first, I felt acute pain in both arms. I could not sleep for pain. It grew worse, and gradually crept down to the tips of my fingers. Next it reached my knees and ankles, which made me quite helpless for a long period. A friend recommended me to take Kruschen Salts. I find they do me more good than any other medicine, liniment or ointment I ever used. This is my own writing, though I am in my 84th year."—(Mrs.) H.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are often caused by deposits of needle-pointed uric acid crystals in the muscles and joints. Kruschen Salts stimulate your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action, and assist them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is frequently the cause of your suffering. (Advt.)

SIRDAR, B. C. — The spectacle of a deer chasing ducks on the shores of Kootenay Lake was witnessed here Thursday morning. The deer, evidently taking delight in seeing the birds take flight spent about two hours in the pastime when one of the haymakers' dogs went over to see what it was about, causing the deer to amble off at a leisurely lope.

She'll Be Packing Apples for Canada in the Empire Test

Charming Packer Wins Okanagan Contest

By C. A. HAYDEN
Editor, Country Life in B.C.

Strangely enough, Canada's representative in the apple packing competion at the Imperial fruit show in Birmingham, Eng., in October 18-28 next, Isobel Barber Stillingfleet of Kelowna, was born in that city, or to be more exact in Shirley Heath a suburb of Birmingham.

Essentially Mrs. Stillingfleet is Canadian, as 26 of her 28 years were spent in the Okanagan valley, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Sanderson Stewart, having brought her to Okanagan when she was a baby. Educated in the Kelowna public high schools and a graduate of Kelowna business college, Isobel Stewart, as her name was then, spent a year in the Dominion fruit inspector's office at Kelowna and then devoted her activities to fruit packing, starting at this 11 years ago.

Approximately 5,000,000 boxes of apples are packed every year in British Columbia tree fruit area, mainly in the Okanagan valley, but with important production along the main line and in the Kootenay and Creston districts.

EMPIRE CONTEST

Several candidates will be entered by the United Kingdom, where 20,000,000 boxes of apples are produced annually for the home market, by New Zealand, by Australia, and probably by South Africa, which is growing apples on an increasing scale.

Each competitior will be required to pack five boxes of apples twice a day during the whole period of the show.

Time for packing a box is the largest item in the point scale, 33 out of the grand total of 100. Style, appearance and alignment count for 25, bulge and height of fruit for 20, firmness for 12 and wrapping 10.

An English apple, the Worcester Pearmain, the physical size and shape of which resemble those of the Canadian Jonathan, will be used in the packing contest.

It was stipulated that the Canadian representative should be "a girl, dignified, with charming personality and a good mixer, provided she is able to pack a box of apples perfectly in good time."

TWELVE ENTRANTS

The 12 competitors came from various parts of the Okanagan valley, and they were selected from groups of local packers before the final competition at Kelowna.

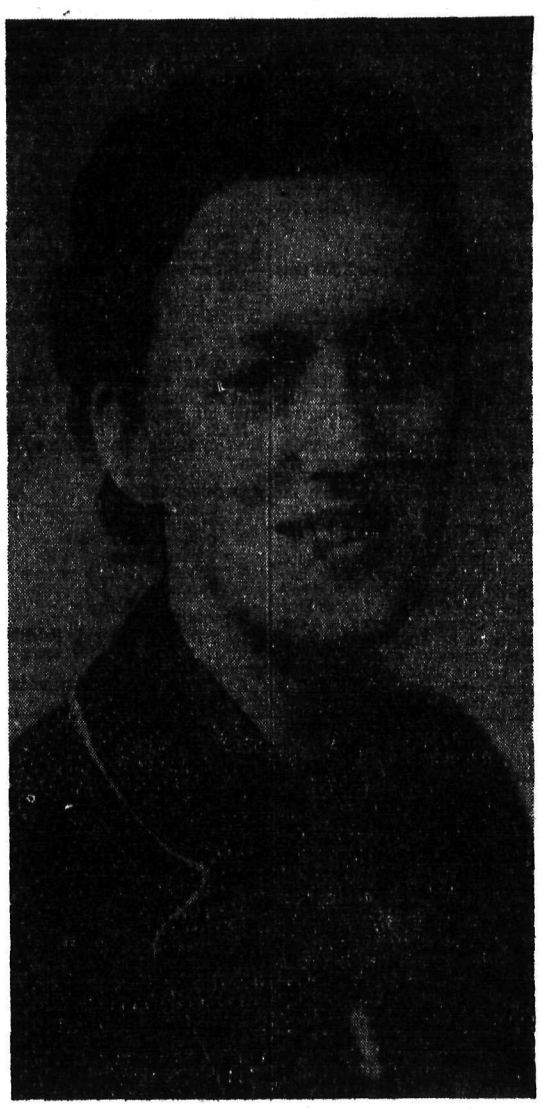
As winner, Isobel Stillingfleet will enjoy a trip to England, sailing from Quebec October 9 and returning in November. She will receive pocket money from Okanagan valley shippers and other sources which will about equalize the money she would make in wages as fruit packer if she had remained at home. When in England she will be provided with board and lodging suitable to Canada's representative and will be allowed £1 a day. Also there is the prize money in the competition at Birmingham, £25 for first place, along with a gold medal and a certificate, £15 and a certificate for second place and £10 and a certificate for third place.

TO MEET VISITORS

Besides appearing in the contest daily, Mrs. Stillingfleet will meet visitors to the big Canadian fruit booth and will participate in various functions attendant upon the Imperial show.

Isobel Stillingfleet is well qualified to represent Canada for besides being an accomplished apple packer, she has an attractive personality. About five feet, seven inches tall, she has a dignified presence and manner, a pleasingly modulated voice, brown hair, hazel eyes and fair complexion.

Nova Scotia and British Columbia will be the principal Canadian contenders for awards in the apples classes. British Columbia will have about 200 boxes entered in the commercial classes and Nova Scotia will be equally represented. In addition there will be entries by individual growers in classes arranged for their benefit. The last Canadian winner of the grand championship was James Lowe, of Oyama, B. C., in 1935.



ISOBEL STILLINGFLEET, Kelowna,

Sun in Libra but Is Month Behind Birds

While autumn began at 3:13 o'clock Thursday morning, Pacific time, at which moment the sun entered the constellation of Libra, it has been autumn to the migrating birds for weeks past.

Wild geese were winging west down the West Arm, bound, no doubt for the Columbia and the Southland, before the end of August, and at the same period the first flocks of plover could be heard calling from the sky at night.

ROBIN REPLACEMENTS

The robins of Nelson and vicinity disappeared weeks ago, to be succeeded later by birds from further north, concentrated in small bands, and these have been succeeded by other flights.

On the water-front for several weeks small flocks of blackbirds have been seen, probably the rusty blackbird, which the books give as only seen in southern British Columbia when on migration.

No doubt many of the smaller bird species are well on their way to tropic climates but there are large numbers of Savannah sparrows still in Nelson, though, of course, they may be migrants replacing natives who have gone.

Of course the hummingbirds are now far south, the females and the young following a month or more behind the males, who are supposed to take flight in July.

Largest of the visitors who stop here en route are the great blue herons, a pair being now on the Nelson flats.

INVESTMENT IN CANADA

The subject of who owns Canada's resources is frequently debated. According to figures recently released by the Dominion bureau of statistics, the foreign mortgage on Canada is going down, while Canada's financial interest in other lands is going up. To be sure the change is not great. British and foreign investments dropped less than one per cent to $6,833,700,000 while Canada's investments abroad rose by about one per cent to $1,656,500,000.

In January 1934, it was estimated that the total capital invested in Canada was approximately $18,000,000,000, of which 62 1-2 per cent or $11,200,000,000 was owned in Canada, 22 per cent, or $4,000,000,000 in the United States, 15 per cent or $2,700,000,000 in Great Britain and one half of one per cent or $95,000,000 in other lands. The total figure today must be well above $18,000,000,000, but the share owned by the United States is down to $3,984,400,000, while that owned by Britain remains fairly constant. Investments from other countries have increased to $124,200,000, but still form a negligible proportion of the total.

It is possible to view the decrease in foreign investments in two ways. It represents an increase in the equity in their own resources possessed by Canadians. But it also means that less foreign capital is available to develop Canadian resources. However, Canada may have reached the point in her development when less help from outside is required.

It is interesting to note the British and foreign investments in Canada remained quite constant during the depression and reached their peak in 1935. British investments from the United States fluctuated. They rose from $3,184,792,000 in 1927 to a peak of $4,107,803,000 in 1931, from which they fell to $3,983,231,000 in 1934. That figure was approximately the same as the 1936 total, and somewhat below the 1935 figure.

Government securities continue to absorb the largest share of foreign capital, and this proportion tends to increase. Railways come next, although the proportion is falling. Other public utilities show an increase, and stand next to railways. Wood and paper products retain their lead over metal industries, and mining comes next. During the last 10 years the foreign investment in Canadian mines has grown from $214,606,000 to $340,000,000.

Canada welcomes foreign capital to aid in the development of our natural resources, but looks hopefully toward the time when our savings will be sufficient for the task. The spectacle of Canada passing into possession of the Canadians will occasion no alarm in this country.

A CZECH VISION

Czechoslovakia is a small nation, but it exerts an influence altogether out of proportion to its size. Since the Great War it has won a definite position in the councils of Europe, and has contributed in the persons of Masaryk who has just died and Benes, two of the continents outstanding statesmen. It is also a solitary bulwark of democracy amid the dictatorships of Central Europe.

One of the most remarkable features of the history of Czechoslovakia, since the country was established has been its amazing industrial development. In the days before the Great War much of the manufacturing of Austria-Hungary was done in the area which is now Czechoslovakia. The great Skoda munition works were there, as well as the famed Bohemian glass manufacutrers.

The end of the war found new tariff barriers facing all of Czechoslovakia's industries. However, the business sense of the Czechs and the nature of their wares soon opened new markets. One of the businessmen who was responsible for winning Czechoslovakia her present place in world markets was Thomas Bata, who made a small shoemaking establishment in a remote town grow into one of Europe's greatest industries.

Jan Bata, brother of the founder of the company, and its present head has allowed his imagination full play in a scheme to develop his country. He has published a book entitled "We Will Build a State for 40,000,000 People." He boldly proposes construction of a super-highway cutting straight across the country from east to west, building of additional railways, and digging of canals which would provide cheap water transportation to the North Sea and the Baltic, as well as to the Black Sea.

Mr. Bata would put the 250,000 unemployed to work at this great constructive work, and would exploit the resources of the republic. He has the scheme worked out with maps and charts.

Such a scheme catches the imagination. While other powers are spending huge sums on armaments, a Czech located in one of the most dangerous districts of the world, and surrounded by powerful and warlike neighbors, can map a huge project for peaceful development.

It is too much to expect the scheme to go forward at the present time. Nations have millions for destructive purposes but little for constructive ones. Such a scheme could be financed by a fraction of what Czechoslovakia's neighbor, Germany, has spent on armaments in the last three years. It could pay interest to the Germans on the investment, which the armaments probably will not do. It would not only aid Czechoslovakia, but benefit Germay more than a score of colonies. Yet statesmen who calmly contemplate the prospect of going to war to regain a few unprofitable colonies will probably dismiss the scheme as visionary. Yet the world could do with more visionary schemes of a peaceful nature, and a great many fewer equally visionary schemes founded on military aggression.

This column of questions and answers is open to any reader of the Nelson Daily News. In no case will the name of the person asking the question be published.

W. M., Silverton—Strictly speaking what dates do the following seasons begin on; spring, summer, fall and winter?

Spring begins at the vernal equinox; summer at the summer solstice; fall at the autumnal equinox and winter at the winter solstice. Approximate dates in the north temperate zone are March 21, June 21, September 23 and December 21.

J. M., Rossland—Which branch of the British forces met the Germans first, the Navy or the Army? And could you kindly give us a short resume of the naval reserve that was sent to Belgium where some were taken prisoner by the enemy and some interned in Holland?

The Navy engaged the Germans first. Winston Churchill sent the naval forces to Antwerp to delay or prevent the taking of the city. The attempt proved abortive except for its effect on the morale of the allies.

A. N., Shoreacres—If a man and woman, walking together, met another man, should the gentleman with the woman raise his hat, as well as the gentleman who was alone?

Yes. It is the courteous thing to do.

A. E. F., Invermere—What was the date of the Tay Bridge disaster?

December 28, 1879. 13 spans of the bridge crossing the Tay River in Scotland were blown down in a violent storm and a passenger train which was crossing at the time was precipitated into the river.

VERSE

LINES TO A PET CANARY

You pretty little warbler,
How proud of your voice you must be,
You seem to rend, in wondrous song
And melodious minstrelsy.

You joyous little creature
You must possess a soul.
If so, tis the soul of music
As your sweet notes upward roll.

You lovely combination
Of music, form and grace,
A voice to sing with angels
Before the throne of grace.

Yes, heaven must be perfect
If angels such as thou
Sing praise and adoration
And at His footstool bow.

Lovely little birdie
Singing all the day
Teach me how you manage
To drive all care away.

How can you be happy
When you are not free?
But confined within a cage
Why such wondrous glee?

Ah, I have caught your secret
It is never to pine and fret,
But sing all day, your cares away
And everything sad, forget.

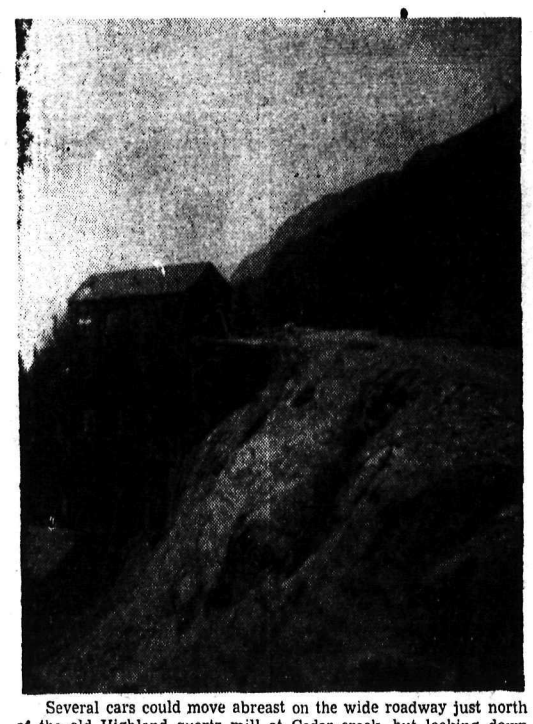
A Wide Sweep of Road Near Ainsworth



Several cars could move abreast on the wide roadway just north of the old Highland quartz mill at Cedar creek, but looking down this bank is a jittery proposition. Note the power shovel standing in a recess. This road is in the Kaslo-Slocan riding.

Transport . . .

A Nation of Leapers

The baffling riddle of safety in the air brought little groups together in British airports, aircraft shops, and Government offices. A crack Douglas airliner on the K.L.M.'s Amsterdam-Brussels-Paris service roaring through stormclouds 800 feet up over Hals, neat Brussels, suddenly nose-dived in flames to the earth. None of the 15 passengers or crew survived. Among the dead was G. H. Whitehouse, founder of the Staffordshire engineering firm G. H. Whitehouse and Son, Horseley Heath, Tipton.

Because no safer airliner than the K.L.M.'s Douglas is made, aeronauts were puzzled to explain the crash. That lightning had struck the machine, or an electric spark from a storm-cloud had ignited her petrol vapours, seemed to be the only possible explanations.

But the British Air Ministry has always believed that lightning is no menace to aircraft, and puzzled experts were left bewildered.

SAFETY CLAMOUR

It was not long before a clamour arose for more intensive research into safety measures.

With the globe encompassed with ease, the Atlantic and Pacific timetabled, the path of the pioneer in flying now lies, not in trail-blazing and record-breaking, but in making the world's sky routes and the planes that span them safe for the masses.

A popular safety theory is that Diesel oil as used in trains, ships and omnibuses must supplant petrol (News Review, July 29). Safety brakes which would prevent an aero-engine shaking a machine to pieces when the propeller fails are also urged.

At present the only known method of escape is the parachute. Discovery of a device which would take its place would give its inventor as glorious a place in the annals of transport as was Marconi's in transmission.

To the general public the parachute is associated with awe-inspiring risk. Licensed parachute-jumpers performing with travelling air circuses are hero-worshipped. Yet in the mystery war on India's North West Frontier (News Review, July 29) the R.A.F. was last week parachuting supplies from the air on a scale that may well be magnified ten thousand times in a major struggle.

NATION TAKES THE JUMP

Greatest advances in the use of the parachute have been made in Russia.

Comrade Stalin's orders are that children must not jump until they are 12, but in Moscow's kindergarten amusement parks tots of 4 and 5 hitch themselves to toy parachutes and make tiny leaps.

Long before they are in their teens they are enjoying thrills that would make an average English child dizzy. From 3,000 or 4,000 towers scattered over Russia, varying in height from 100 to 200 ft., the youngsters grasp horizontal bars attached to open chutes and jump into space.

Boys and girls next graduate to the real thing. Class B children pack and re-pack their own silk chutes as casually as an English youngster straps on and takes off his cricket pads. They jump with nonchalance.

Russia's Air League claims 15,000,000 members. All over the Red realm parachute derbys are constantly staged. Spectators pack grandstands, bands blare, flags and banners wave, gay kiosks sell soft drinks and cigarettes. Then from the sky float little coloured dots, blossoming out as they fall into picturesque flowers, butterflies, dragonflies. Sometimes 500 Young Russians jump at once—a vivid carnival.

WAR BIRDS

Lectured, drilled, medically examined and psychologically influenced, the Soviet's parachutists well know their "sport" is an integral part of national defence.

Parachuting makes youngsters air-minded, gives a backward race a new courage and superiority, prepares potential airmen.

Already, the Russian Air Force could land behind an enemy's lines an army of 5,000 men, complete with food, light artillery, machine guns, hand grenades, radio equipment.

Russia has pilots who laugh at jumps of four or five miles. Dropping earthward like stones, they only pull the rip cord when a thousand feet or less from the ground. Such would be the tactics of a shock army from the skies, for to pull the cord when high up on a windy day, would be to drift for miles from the objective.

Soviet Army parachutist K. F. Kaytanov, carrying oxygen equipment and starting high above Leningrad, leaped 32,000 feet (more than 6 miles) landing 30 minutes after he had left the plane, easily a world record.

Civilian experts applauded his courage, admitted its military significance, but declared it still left the future of the parachute as a safety device for civilian craft just where it was before.—News Review.

FLOOD DAMAGE

Every drop of Thames water was carrying some mud with it. Where did it come from. The answer is obvious: It came from some farmer's field. It was the soil he needed this year and for generations to come, to grow his crops. He hasn't a very large supply of it—a few inches at most—and it takes years to add an inch on improverished grounds. That is the loss that hasn't been counted in the newspapers, but it is the worst loss of all. — Fergus News-Record.

STAMP CORNER

By JAMES MONTAGNES

New Australian small format bird stamps, Russia's architect's issue showing big new building of the Union, and Egypt's new King Farouk issue. BELOW, Russian architect's issue.

Stolen stamps are among the most difficult items to dispose of, as one housebreaker in Toronto recently found out. He appeared at a Toronto stamp dealer with a collection which to his stamp-ignorant eye was no different from any other collection. But the dealer in glancing over the stamps, as they do many times a day when collectors come in offerng their stamps for sale, saw in the collection some stamps of great rarity. The man who offered the stamps did not appear as one who could own such valuable stamps, and so the dealer became suspicious. On the pretext of phoning another dealer on some matter of business he notified the police who arrested the man who was offering the collection for sale.

Whenever a valuable stamp collection is reported stolen, police immediately notify all stamp dealers to be on the lookout for the collection. Since stamps are more difficult to dispose of to buyers of stolen goods or fences, than other items as jewelry, precious stones, household furniture and books, the stamps eventually reach a dealer. And if the thief knows nothing of stamps he immediately takes his stolen stamps to a dealer in the hope of cashing in. The dealer in turn knowing that every dealer has been notified, is not likely to buy the stamps even for a small sum, since they must be sold some time, and the news of stolen valuable stamps soon gets around among the dealers in the leading world markets and also among collectors who have enough money to buy valuable stamps. The latter usually want a "pedigree" to their new scarce stamp purchases. Collections of average run and of small value are naturally harder to trace when stolen.

Switzerland issued this stamp in 1932 to commemorate the international disarmament conference held at Geneva in February of that year.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

As Written by SHEPARD BARCLAY

PLAYING A "FOURCHETTE"

If you hold a "fourchette" over two cards possessed by the other side, you are in a very desirable position. Your higher card will beat the enemy's best and your lower card will beat the lower card. If he should lead the lower of those two cards, your job is to cover it with your lower one. If you play your highest one, you automatically set up his high card. This may seem elementary, but one of our best players was seen to grow careless the other day and perpetrate that error.

North: ♠ 9 6 ♥ Q 10 8 4 ♦ A K 10 6 ♣ 9 7 2
West: ♠ A K 10 5 7 ♥ 9 2 ♦ J 3 ♣ K J 6 5
East: ♠ Q J 8 ♥ J 6 ♦ Q 7 5 4 2 ♣ 10 4 3
South: ♠ 7 4 3 ♥ A K 7 5 3 ♦ 9 8 ♣ A Q 8

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

North and South reached a contract of 4-Hearts on this deal after an opening bid of 1-Heart by South, 1-Spade by West, 2-Hearts by North three by South and four by North.

After cashing the spades A and K, West continued with a spade which was ruffed in the dummy with the heart 4. The heart A and K were cashed and the diamond 9 led to dummy's A. The diamond K was next played and then the diamond 6. The careless defender in the East position, having apparently failed to notice the drop of the 9 and 3, went up with his diamond Q. This made an otherwise impossible contract simple for the declarer. He ruffed the diamond Q and led a heart to dummy's Q to cash the diamond 10, on which he tossed the club 3. The club finesse was then tried and failed, but the opponents took only three tricks.

YANKS WIN PENNANT; GIANTS INCREASE LEAD BY GAME

CLIFF MELTON PULLS GIANTS FROM FIRE, 8-7

Blasts Cubs in Ninth Inning; Now Lead by 3½ Games

CHICAGO, Sept. 23 (AP)—Lanky Cliff Melton came to the rescue today to save an 8-7, thrill-packed triumph for the Giants, a victory that crushed out everything but the Chicago Cubs' mathematical chance of overhauling the onrushing New Yorkers in the National league championship race.

The Cubs, battling with flaming fury in the final game of the vital series, fought the league leaders right down to the last out, forced Manager Bill Terry to call in every member of his starting pitching corps, only to fall a run short of a tie with two men left on base in the ninth.

The triumph sent the Giants back to their own Polo grounds with a 3½-game margin over the Cubs with 13 games left to play. The Cubs, moving on to open a three-game series with the St. Louis Cardinals, have but 10 games remaining.

Melton, hero of a victory which squared the series for the Giants yesterday, was called in today with the bases loaded in the ninth and one man out. Billy Herman had started the final attempt to win with a double off Harry Gumbert, third of the Giant hurlers. Dick Bartell tossed out Frank Demaree, but Gabby Hartnett walked and Ripper Collins beat out a single to first baseman Johnny McCarthy.

Manager Charley Grimm sent Truck Stainback in to run for Hartnett and Clay Bryant to do the same for Collins. Terry hailed in Melton, and Grimm sent a right-handed hitter, Carl Reynolds, in to bat for Phil Cavaretta. Reynolds drilled a long fly to Lou Chiozza and Herman scored, as 29,414 spectators sat breathlessly on the edges of their seats. Then Melton forced Augie Galan to ground for the final out.

Club Plans to Encourage New Bird Players

Every effort to encourage juniors, beginners and inexperienced players in badminton will be made by the Nelson Badminton association this season, officials declared Thursday, in an effort to increase the already large interest taken in the indoor sport here.

If beginners' interest warrants the move a special court will be set aside on certain badminton nights, where inexperienced players will be able to match their skill against players of their own ability. It was felt that the thought of being matched against experienced and superior players was keeping many from the sport. Coaching will also be given those requesting it on certain days.

This plan is said to have greatly increased membership of Nelson tennis clubs this season.

ODDS ON DAN BULGER CUT

LONDON, Sept. 23 (CP Cable)—Odds on Sir Abe Bailey's Dan Bulger were shortened to 9 to 1 tonight as he maintained his place as favorite for the Cambridgeshire.

Manero Leads the Golf Medal Round

BELMONT, Mass., Sept. 23 (AP)—Tournament-tempered Tony Manero from nearby Salem, 1936 national open champion, birdied two of the last three holes of his second qualifying round for a two under par 69 today to gain the $250 medalist prize in the $12,000 Belmont open match play golf tournament. He posted 140 for the 36 holes.

Manero rapped in a 16-foot putt on the 16th green and a nine-footer on the home carpet to nose out Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa. his Ryder Cup teammate, and Al Brosch public links pro from Farmingdale, N. Y., by a stroke.

Slammin' Sam Snead, still a 12-1 co-favorite with Lawson Little and Denny Shute, the two-time P. G. winner, ran a 72 on top of his opening 70 to place fourth in the battle against par. Two followed a stroke behind, as Charlie Yansicy of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., and Eddie Harrison of Little Roch, Ark., tied for fifth honors with 143 totals.

TRAIL PROTEST BOXLA WILL BE SUBJECT SPECIAL MEETING OF LEAGUE MOGULS TRAIL TONIGHT

Clouds Title Issue; B. C. Finals Open Next Week

WRITERS BALLOT ON PLAYER AWARD

British Columbia boxla title games will open in the interior next week, the first game on either Thursday or Saturday, it was announced Thursday night by Frank Coates of Rossland, president of the West Kootenay league. The coast winners, either Salmonbellies or Richmond, will meet the Kootenay titlists, Trail or Rossland. Arrangements for the finals have been completed.

The 1937 Kootenay champions are expected to emerge from tonight's Trail-Rossland game at Trail, but in view of Trail's protest of Wednesday's game, won by Rossland to even the series, the issue is somewhat cloudy.

Main point of the Trail protest is that Rossland at one stage of the game had too many men on the floor. There has also been considerable discussion and criticism of the officials, Ken Paul and Bob Gifford, but to what extent this enters into the protest has not been revealed. Nor has it been revealed whether there will be any change in officials, nor upon whom the choice might fall if there was a change, since men with full knowledge of the rules are lacking.

SPECIAL MEETING

The Trail protest will be considered at a special meeting of the league executive preceding the game tonight. The executive consists of A. T. Horswill, Clifford McKinnon and John A. Ferguson of Nelson; Archie Miller, F. (Barney) Archibald and W. E. Jackson, Trail; Alex Page, Harold Clegg and Cecil Pitt, Rossland.

Two presentations are scheduled at the conclusion of the deciding Kootenay game. The Jeffs-Blackwood trophy, league championship emblem, is to be presented to the winning team, and the George Murray Memorial trophy for the league's most sportsmanlike and most valuable player, will be handed to the player selected by ballot of sports writers in the Kootenays.

the PRESS BOX — BERT RAMSDEN

AND HOW ARE YOU BETTING?

The Kootenay boxla final is going into a fifth game tonight, another chapter to be written in the modern lacrosse history in the Kootenays. They say that history repeats itself. You may recall last year's final, which stretched into five games and was decided on the issue of the last one. You may remember also that this column was quite confident Rossland would win, and then had to eat humble pie when Nelson lifted the Jeffs-Blackwood cup.

This year, however, the chin-leading press Box kept that chin well guarded by the simple expedient of not saying anything.

It looks right now as if Rossland ought to take the final—that is, it looks like it on the basis of the margins of victories to date. And few will argue but that it would be an excellent thing for Rossland to get back into the title class. The boys have been trying for a long time, both in hockey and boxla, and the amount to which sport in the golden city might benefit is incalculable.

But you can't just count Trail out of the picture like that. The boys have shown they can come from behind, have shown that they're not beaten until the final whistle, and have demonstrated quite positively that they won't take a licking lieing down.

SPOKANE TO OPEN NEW RINK

The first of the month will see a new artificial ice rink opened in Spokane, and while interior sports fans may not attach much importance to Spokane having a rink at all, this forecasting reporter believes it is going to have a quite definite effect.

At the moment Spokane is concerned only with pro hockey and its newly acquired team, the Clippers of the Pacific Coast circuit. But once Spokane fans become educated to the game, you will see it branch out in several directions. They go for commercially-sponsored teams in a big way at Spokane—baseball, basketball, and so on.

You are going to see a number of hockey players hereabouts as they graduate from junior ranks and fail to make the senior team, or newcomers who are not good enough for the fast Kootenay league, drift to Spokane and pick up places in such teams. You're going to see Gonzaga university and possibly other schools attracting hockey-playing students. And you are quite probably going to see teams going back and forth to the Inland Empire centre for games.

As a matter of fact, you can start figuring now on Spokane looming to quite an extent in Kootenay hockey. This applies to the whole Kootenay area.

SAM HUNTER PROUD OF HIS SON

Sam Hunter, Kaslo old timer, takes a good deal of pride in his son Bob, who as coach of the Hamilton Leanders is Canada's outstanding rowing coach. Olympic rowing is becoming almost commonplace to him.

Ival Miller, the Hamilton "Sports Parader", in a column written some time ago was positive in his opinion of the former Kaslo boy. He said:

"Bob Hunter, most successful rowing coach in Canada by a million miles or so, has always stressed blade-work, leg-work and power. He has sought and found powerful oarsmen and has taught them how to dip a blade properly, how to get the most out of their legs, and how to make time. That he has been absolutely right is borne out in the club's list of triumphs and general performances. . ."

Miller adds that Hunter did not build his crew out of "a bunch of 'good looking' oarsmen. He did, however, build up winning crews with real power and winning spirit—big huskies who remembered what they were taught and then laid their backs into their work willingly."

So ends today's mixed metaphor.

PARIS, Sept. 23 (AP)—Panama Al Brown knocked out Maurice Huguenin of France in the third round to win the International Boxing union's featherweight championship tonight.

Batting Leaders

(By The Associated Press)

Gabby Hartnett of the Cubs took sole possession of third place in the National league batting race yesterday by the slim margin of a point over Paul Waner of the Pirates. Although each hit two-for-four Hartnett's fewer times at bat boosted him two points to .358 while Waner who had been deadlocked for third place, gained only one. There were no changes among the American league trio of baseball's big six.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (A)—The New York Yankees, murderers' row extraordinary, completed their second straight sweep of the American league pennant race today, and successfully retained their championship laurels.

Although they dropped a 9-5 decision to the St. Louis Browns, they definitely clinched their ninth league crown beyond all mathematical doubt when the second-place Detroit Tigers were eliminated through a defeat at the hands of the Boston Red Sox.

The Yankees' defeat today, coupled with the Tigers' loss, left them 12 games out in front with only 10 to play. The standings of the two leaders after today's hostilities ended were:

Tough Game at Wolverhampton

LONDON, Sept 23 (CP Cable)—Transfer of George Mutch, Manchester United's brilliant Scottish inside-left to Preston North End is the highlight of mid-week soccer news. One of the cleverest forwards in the game, the 24-year-old player cost Preston $27,500.

Scots are favorites in the Lancashire Town and when Preston meets Birmingham Saturday, no fewer than nine players from north of the Tweed will be included in the lineup. Manchester United brought Mutch from Arbroath four seasons ago at a fee of $5000 so the club has done well out of the deal.

Charlton Athletic, leading the English league by a one-point margin over Arsenal, Stoke City, Bolton Wanderers, Leeds United and Wolverhampton Wanderers, is likely to play against Middlesbrough without Sam Bartram in goal. The big, blond custodian has been suffering from blood-poisoning and club officials are awaiting a medical report on his condition. If he is unfit, Hobbins will replace him between the sticks.

One of the toughest games on the first division schedule is expected to be that at Wolverhampton where Bolton is visitor. Leeds United should duplicate last season's 2-0 decision over Liverpool in the Yorkshire City but the other leaders are away from home. Stoke plays at Chelsea and Arsenal go to Derby where the county will be forced to show a complete reversal of form to defeat the gunners.

JAFFRA IS NEW BANTAM CHAMP

Ambers and Ross Keep Titles; Apostoli Beats Thil

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Elusive Lou Ambers, the world lightweight champion, scored a surprisingly decisive victory on points tonight over the dangerous Pedro Montanez of Puerto Rico in a drab 15-round match that had top billing on the "carnival of champions". Ambers outpointed his rugged rival from start to finish while a crowd of 40,000 fans yelled for action.

Harry Jaffra of Baltimore captured the world bantamweight title from Sixto Escobar, little Puerto Rico scrapper, in the final 15 round match. Jaffra, scaling 116½ to Escobar's 117¼, got away to a big lead and saved enough of his margin, despite the champion's strong finish, to take the unanimous decision.

ROSS WINS DECISION

Barney Ross, black-haired Chicagoan, outpointed Ceferino Garcia, slugging Filipino, in successfully defending the world's welterweight title.

Ross weathered a closing blast of punishment to take the decision after 15 slashing, bloody rounds.

Fred Apostoli, youthful San Francisco middleweight, stopped baldheaded Marcel Thil, French holder of the European 160-pound crown, in the 10th round of a 15-round match.

Hoop Artists Are Lining Up for the Coming Season

With the tang of autumn in the air, fall and winter sports are slowly easing their way into the limelight. Basketball is the latest to hints its appearance.

Although their softball worries are not over and a crucial city playoff final is still in the offing, members of the Maple Leafs girls club are already laying plans for an active basketball season.

With the exception of Edna Gormley and Lillian Hickey, who will join the Red Sox or Catholic Girls' club lineup, the whole Leaf team will be together in the basketball wars. Annie Busk and Helen Wigg are new players with the club.

Members of the club who will again take their positions on the basketball floor are Eva Henrickson, holder of the Civic Centre floor record for points, Pauline Stangherlin, high scorer of last season's inter-city games and Hazel Spiers, Dot Campbell, Phyllis Wallace, Iris Johansson and Doreen Long.

Approximate Accuracy Is Necessary in Measuring Food for the Diabetic

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Of all the chronic diseases that afflict mankind, diabetes is the best one to have, but there are two catches in it. It can be managed better than any of the others, and such management gives wonderful results, but it depends upon constant attention and intelligent understanding of the disease. A man with a cancer, whether he is rich or poor, stands about the same chance of recovery (which, incidentally, is very good). And if he uses enough sense, or by the offices of his friends, manages to fall into the right hands, from then on he need not use any intelligence or self-control or will power—the result will be the same anyhow. Not so diabetes.

The first stumbling block the diabetic who is just learning to handle himself goes up against is that he must weigh and measure his food. He is not used to this and furthermore most of the formulae are expressed in grams (the metric system) which is additionally confusing to him. But this need go on for only a few weeks—after that he has learned to measure roughly the amounts in each food, and besides in most cases of diabetes it is unnecessary to be terribly accurate. In the cases where extreme accuracy is essential, insulin comes in to help, so again extreme accuracy is unnecessary. But approximate accuracy is necessary, so let us try to straighten out the mathematics.

Cause of Diabetes

First, very briefly, what is diabetes? Diabetes is a low tolerance on the part of the body to sugar and starch—the carbohydrates of the diet. The diabetic body cannot utilize as much of them as the normal because the secretion of the pancreas, insulin, which normally burns them up, producing energy, is lacking. Hence if too much sugar or starch is eaten it simply flows off in the urine. In treatment, other foods to replace the carbohydrates must be substituted in order to keep the body from attacking its own flesh. Treatment aims to keep the amount of carbohydrate eaten just at the patient's ability to utilize it; all diabetics can utilize some carbohydrate. With this treatmen, improvement occurs, and tolerance rises. If treatment is not adhered to, the constant presence of sugar in the blood causes poisons to accumulate with the result of acidosis, fatigue, sluggishness and the danger of boils, carbuncles and other complications.

The books on diabetes and the diets given out usually list the different foods in terms of grams and kilograms—the metric system. It isn't really hard to get on to this, because no normal person has ever been in the habit of weighing his food in any system of weights. A weighing machine marked in grams may be obtained in any physician's supply house and many drug stores. The diabetic himself or herself should weigh his or her own food for a month in order to learn what portions of what weigh how much.

System Is Puzzling

The housewife, however, isn't used to grams and if she calls up the druggist, as she is apt to do, to get light on what a gram is, she will be told in apothecaries' measure which is different in many respects from avoirdupois measure which the grocer uses, and in which body weight is measured in American and Canadian households.

So in translating cast apothecaries' weight aside and use avoirdupois equivalents, as follows:

In diabetic instructions, body weight is quoted in kilograms: a kilogram is 2 2-10 pounds.

An ounce is 31 grams—about two tablespoonfuls.

A glass is about six ounces.

Loosely packed vegetables (on average) one ordinary glass equals eight ounces.

Rustle of Silks

By MARIE BLIZARD

The plums were fat and glossy. Mari considered them carefully and selected one, wondering vaguely what the caloric content was. She'd already eaten a luscious melon, a large slice of warm crusty bread, two boiled eggs and had drank a glass of milk. Still the plums—

Letitia said, "There is only an hour until the post goes out. Mr. Holk said that if you are to meet the deadline with the article on. . ."

"Bother the post, Letitia! And bother Mr. Holk. In this enchanted garden, you cannot expect me to concern myself with the wisdom of accenting organdie by stiffening its edges. Now, if you really want to prove worth your weight in gold to me, you'll have a good sane talk with Rosa. Tell her I simply can't have breakfasts like this put before me! Think of my figure!. . . . Is that the car I ordered?. . . . the speck on the hill."

Letitia squinted through her duplex glasses—black ones over her spectacles—and said it was.

"Is there an errand I could do for you, Madame? Then you could finish the article and . . ."

"Letitia, please, don't call me 'madame' while we're here. This is our holiday. . . . No, thank you, there isn't anything you can do for me. I'm going out to snare a guest—if I can find him."

Letitia waited.

Mari felt a little embarrassed. "I thought since there is so much room. . . . and all this beauty. . . well, I thought I'd try to find Mr. Garland. I don't believe he has much money and. . . . well, I think we ought to have a man around, don't you?"

Letitia said she thought Mr. Venable had been hinting for an invitation.

Mari let it pass, picking up her gloves and making much of peering toward the hill.

She felt very young and a little excited, and annoyed with herself that she had to excuse her impulse to herself. It was nothing more than an act of kindness to a fellow American. He was also, in a way, a kindred soul since he was an artist. And it would be more fun to have someone to enjoy things with.

She wouldn't admit that there was something in his shy, admiring glances that had pleased her, made her want to know more of him. Or would she have known that, affected by so much physical beauty about her, it was only natural that she should have felt her loneliness and need for a person of the opposite sex.

And later she would have laughed at the idea that Alec Garland had come into her life—however briefly it was to be—at a psychological moment. She would never have believed that she had paid more attention to the ideal she had built in him than to the man as he was. Alec was to be only a symbol to her. But more of that later.

She sought him out in the large hotels, then in the smaller, and finally found him, sipping coffee at noon, reading the Paris Herald at the table of a sidewalk cafe next to the apothecary shop.

He jumped to his feet when he saw her, his slow, happy smile breaking over his face.

"I've been looking for you," she announced at once.

"And I for you," he answered. "Until—"

"Yes? Until when?"

"Until I discovered who you are."

"Oh!" Mari wished he hadn't.

"Then this is a case of the mountain coming to Mohamet."

"I'm very pleased," he said simply.

After that it should have been easy for her to say that she had found a spacious villa, a boat and a garden that an artist would enjoy and that she hoped he would accept her hospitality as her house guest for his fortnight. But she felt suddenly shy. She was unused to pursuing young men.

She said she hoped he would come over and spend the day with her and Letitia.

For a moment, as an expression of uncertainty crossed his face, she thought he was going to refuse. Then he said, "I'd like to. . . . I . . . . will there be others there?"

Mari guessed rightly that he was afraid she would have a gathering of smart people. "No, no one."

"Good enough. If you'll just give me a chance to get up to my diggings and change. . . ."

"No change," she said. "I hoped you'd go for a sail with me. We'll be very simple."

And so Alec came to live at Villa Mimosa. And Mari found a companion.

In Alec of slow speech and easy contentment, she found an ideal companion. And if Letitia gave up her efforts to do the work Mari had planned to accomplish during her stay, she served as a chaperone and buffer between the world that wanted to intrude on her employer.

Word had come by messenger of friends who were staying at the Grand hotel at Nice and who wanted Mari to join them. Mari would have none of them.

Her days were filled with glorious contentment. The sunshine everywhere was the note of her days. Golden sunshine that warmed their lazy hours in the garden where Alec sketched and Mari read to him; sunshine that browned their bodies in the hours they lay on the smooth sands after their swim; sunshine that cooled before the breeze that swept the little Redwing along her course on the blue waters.

And later there was the moonlight when, after dinner at the taper-lighted table in the great hall, they sat on the terrace and their mingled voices were tuned low to the sounds of the night. There was the croaking of frogs like distant jingle bells, the soft whirr of wings in the perfumed darkness. And sometimes they'd bid Pancho play for them and sing in a language they did not know.

Letitia left them early and they had a silence that needed no words. If Mari wondered what Alec's thoughts were then, she did not question them. Nor did she question her own.

Mari was in a mood of acceptance, the lazy acceptance that passed from the land into herself. Paris, New York, London, her life was in back of her. She had no wish to hurry her tomorrows. In a land that lived for today, she lived only for today.

There was a growing communion between her and the fair-haired Alec. It was enough for her.

Once, climbing aboard the raft, he had put his arms around her to help her up and, once aboard, he had kept his arm about her.

Another time her foot had slipped on a rocky path and she had found herself in his arms. Her face was lifted to his, she had felt his arm tighten. Then Letitia's voice had been heard directly above them and he realeased her.

Strolling through the late dusk in the garden, he had held her hand in his as simply as one child does another.

But it wasn't until a week later that he took her in his arms and kissed her. It was, surprisingly, a passionate kiss. It left Mari shaken, questioning.

Hours later, her limbs still trembling from the force that had been let loose by his embrace, she lay awake in the darkness and questioned her heart.

U. S. Legion Moves Against Tyranny or Lawless Strikes

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (CP) — The American Legion today opposed lessening of immigration restrictions to permit a number of aliens to enter the country, and calling for the deportation of those attempting to foster the growth here of Communism, Fascism and Naziism.

The Americanism committee's report likewise stressed the necessity of protecting property for its rightful owners, and voiced a protest against present methods of strikers.

The proper way to settle strikes, the report said, was in the courts of the land and not by intimidation of property owners.

France Stronger With U. S. Dollar

LONDON, Sept. 23 (AP). — The United States dollar gained 11-16 cent in foreign exchange trading today. The final rate was 4.94 13-16 to the pound against $4.95⅛.

The French franc rose to 144.69 to the pound against 144.94.

N.Y. TUMBLES

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (AP)—Selling forces took the stock market for a "ride" today, many issues dropping one to four points and a few much more to new lows for around two years.

Feeble rallying efforts were made at intervals during the session, but these seemed only to slow the trading pace. Volume was unusually light until the final hour when offerings came out at a brisk pace and found bidders backing away.

Brokers could point to no particular piece of news as a cause of the setback.

Sending some traders to the sidelines, however, was said to have been the state department's sharp note to Japan on the Nanking bombing, with the possibility of imminent application of the Neutrality act and consequent cutting of commerce with the orient.

POLAR STOPEITE

A LOW density, low velocity, ammonia dynamite especially made for underground work. In the past it was chiefly confined to stoping in the metalliferous mines. It is now being used with success in the blasting of burn cuts in drifts and cross-cuts and in some mines, for the whole driftround. It is well adapted for underground gypsum mining. Where the work is dry, Polar Stopeite will be found to be one of the most economical explosives for underground work. The strength of Polar Stopeite ranges from 20% to 60%.

Behind every stick of C-I-L Explosive, there are many years of constant chemical research and field tests to improve the product and enable the operator to secure maximum efficiency on all types of blasting operations.

Over a period of years the price of C-I-L Explosives has been gradually reduced due to savings effected in manufacturing and operating costs.

There is a type of C-I-L Explosive to meet every mining need. Our Technical Department is ready to offer advice regarding any problem relating to blasting operations.

JUDGE NISBET SENTENCES SOPOW TO ONE YEAR, CRESTON FORGERY

Butcher-Shop Staff Identify Him as Man Who Cashed Check With Endorsement as Bartsoff; Claims Framed

Found guilty by Judge W. A. Nisbet at the end of a trial that lasted all day Thursday, of forging the endorsement of William Bartsoff, his brother-in-law, to a check for $24 drawn by a Creston house, Pete S. Sopow or Sopoff of Sirdar was sentenced to one year's imprisonment with hard labor in the Nelson jail.

This turned out to be Sopow's third trial in five weeks, as on August 19 at Creston Stipendiary Magistrate E. Mallandaine dismissed a charge against him of stealing this check, but convicted him of carrying a revolver without a permit. After he had served his two weeks in jail for the latter offence, he was rearrested here, and taken back to Creston, where he was committed for trial on the forgery charge. As these facts developed, his honor declared it unfortunate that Sopow had been charged so many times, and said Sopow could hardly be blamed if he got the impression the police were persecuting him. It was explained by W. W. Ferguson, crown prosecutor, that the theft charge was laid when tthe senior office was on holiday.

CHECK IN TRUNK

Evidence of Bartsoff, who had received the $24 check by mail from the Long-Allan firm for strawberries on July 15, was that Sopow had been in his house when he gave his wife the check to put away and she put it in the trunk, the action being visible from the kitchen where Sopow and others were seated, and when the key was deposited in a cupboard. Sopow and his wife were in his house before daylight on August 11, when Mrs. Bartsoff had been taken to the hospital. On August 11 or 12 he looked for the check, but it was missing, and after inquiring of his wife in hospital, he went to the issuing firm in Creston, which took the matter up with the bank, and found it had been cashed by Burns & Co. The endorsement not being his, he put the case into the hands of the police.

Sopow, who conducted his own defence, inquired about other checks Bartsoff had received, and asked numerous questions that left the suggestion that Bartsoff himself had bought meat of Burns & Co. the time Sopow was charged with having cashed the check there. Various questions of a personal nature gave the impression that there was no love lost between the two men, and later in giving his evidence Sopow put down the charge to a conspiracy against him by his brother-in-law, the police, and the Burns witnesses. Bartsoff, for his part, in answering questions by the court, admitted he did not know how Sopow made his living, and suggested that the family earned most of it.

STORE STAFF IDENTIFY SOPOW

Mr. Ferguson put on the stand David Muir of the Burns & Co. store sales staff, and Mrs. Zella N. Carr, the bookkeeper, to identify Sopow as the man who as the store was being closed late on the afternoon of August 9 or 10, secured admittance, bought 40 cents worth of meat, and tendered an unendorsed check from the Long-Allan people. In the presence of both witnesses, he endorsed the check with the name of William Bartsoff, using a pencil handed him by Muir.

From the description Muir furnished later, the police investigated Sopow, and Muir identified him at Sirdar as the man who had cashed the check, and later he and Mrs. Carr confirmed this at the store where Sopow wrote both his own name and that of Bartsoff.

When on the stand after the noon adjournment, Sopow contended the Burns witnesses had been doubtful in their identification, claiming he might be the man, but they were not sure, and that Mrs. Carr said his handwriting didn't look like the forged signature of Bartsoff.

DAUGHTER ON STAND

His daughter Pauline also made this the main point of her testimony. The effect of her evidence was weakened when she failed to sustain her father on several matters, particularly as to whether he had had access to a sun-helmet which the Burns witnesses claimed the man who cashed the check wore. Sopow had testified he had had a sun-helmet for a few weeks, which he had got at a dance where his cap was taken, but that he and the owner of the sun-helmet met and exchanged back before the check period, and he also admitted to Mr. Ferguson that his daughter while raspberry-picking had been given a sun-helmet by a man. The girl professed to have no knowledge of her father's sun-helmet, denied that she had one herself, and said he never attended dances. Later she admitted having borrowed such an item of headgear.

The girl several times returned to her original text about the Burns witnesses having changed their story and become positive now after being doubtful before, and told the court, "What I came here to say was this:" When she finally added to this statement, the criticism of his honor's questions, "but you ask me questions that don't belong to me," Judge Nisbet admonished her that that was for him to say.

Mr. Muir was recalled in rebuttal, and stated that his identification of Sopow had been positive from the first.

Asked what he had to say why he should not be covicted, Sopow asked the court: "How could I be guilty if that was not my signature on the check?" To this, his honor replied, "You could not be."

JUDGE CONVICTS

In giving judgment, Judge Nisbet told Sopow he would have to find him guilty, the case turning of course on the evidence of Muir and of the bookkeeper, who were positive in their identification and gave a detailed account of his forging the signature. Their evidence, coupled with the fact that he knew where the check was kept, made a very strong case for the crown, and against it was only the evidence of himself and his daughter, in both cases very unsatisfactory. The worst weakness in his defence was his theory of a conspiracy, and nothing had been given to suggest why Muir and the bookkeeper, who had been strangers to him, should conspire against him.

"I can't help coming to the conclusion," said his honor, "that you are not telling the truth, and that they are, and that you are the man who went into the store and signed Bartsoff's name and cashed the check. I don't know why you should think that a safe thing to do, in a place as near your home as Creston is to Sirdar, but possibly you thought Bartsoff wouldn't make a fuss about it."

While forgery was a very serious crime, and could be punished by many years of imprisonment, his honor said that taking into account the small amount involved, he would not impose as heavy a sentence as he otherwise would have done. He then imposed a year's imprisonment.

TO THRILL ALL HEARTS!

The Bonnie Plaid of Scotland flashes on India's saffron hills ... and war-mad tribesmen lie in wait in untamed Khyber Pass! • When the rifles crack and the Pathans raid ... when the bagpipes skirl in shrill martial scream ... you'll know you're seeing one of the greatest pictures of all time, with a Shirley Temple ... whose power to stir your emotions ... will be the wonder of your life!
