FATIGUE-WORN POILUS TAKE NEW STAND

Britain Drives Hard in Economic "Blitz"

Italian Fliers Fail to Wreck British Warship

VALETTA, Malta, June 14 (CP)—A British warship was unsuccessfully attacked by Italian bombers six miles off Malta on Thursday, it was disclosed tonight.

Bombs fell all around the warship which replied with fierce anti-aircraft fire and drove off the bombers.

A check-up meanwhile disclosed 30 civilians and seven soldiers killed and 120 civilians wounded in 18 air raids on this British island fortress in the Eastern Mediterranean up to 10 p.m. Thursday night. There was little military damage.

Twenty-five planes participated in the heaviest attack. Military authorities said 11 per cent of all the raiders have been downed.

Tide Will Turn Queen Declares

LONDON, June 14 (CP).—Queen Elizabeth, in a broadcast to the women of France, told them today that "their sorrows are our sorrows" and that the time yet will come when France again will be able to say "ca va"—"everything is all right."

Speaking in the same impeccable French she spoke to French Canada during her tour of the Dominion a year ago, her Majesty said the women of Great Britain "are prepared, in order to bring about a common victory, to suffer the same sacrifices which speak so much in your honor, and in that of your great country."

She recalled "those warm Summer days, during which Paris robed itself with such charm to receive the King and Queen of England" and went on:

"With an enthusiasm and generosity which touched us deeply, the people of France became partisans of peace as did our Government.

"I felt the heart of the women of France beating then in unison with mine. It is to these women that I wish to say, on this sad day, very simply, that their sorrows are our sorrows."

On their side, the Germans established new groups of reserves in Slovakia.

Admiralty Reports Italy's Fleet Unseen

LONDON, June 14 (CP).—The Admiralty announced tonight that while the Allied fleet had been at sea since Italy's entrance into the war "no enemy has been sighted so far."

The statement said:

"Units of the Allied fleet have been to sea since the outbreak of war with Italy, carrying out sweeping operations in the Mediterranean with the object of protecting shipping and destroying enemy ships. No enemy has been sighted so far."

Year-Long Programs Are Slashed to Weeks

SEEK ALL GOODS U. S. CAN SUPPLY

LONDON, June 14 (CP)—Britain tonight opened full wide the war chest treasured against the abandoned conception of a "long war" and ordered the immediate wholesale purchase of every tool of battle available in North America.

In the momentous decision that the tide must be turned in France within weeks at most, the British Government made it clear they were going all out to obtain post-haste guns and ammunition, even of First Great War vintage, to supply Tommies streaming back onto the continent on return tickets from the disaster of Flanders.

At the expense of home defence, Britain coupled all her stored-up economic resources with manpower, staking everything on a fight in France behind the abandoned city of Paris.

The British decision was a sudden turn from the long war plan aimed at starving out Germany—as was done in 1916. Government sources disclosed that war funds allocated for years now are released for spending in weeks.

In effect it is an economic blitzkreig to meet the piled-up Nazi war stores and men pressing ever deeper into France and to offset, as best it can, the loss of 75 to 80 per cent of France's steel producing plants, now in German-occupied territory.

Most French ammunition plants, however, are in the South and thus still in Allied hands.

The Government now is more concerned with obtaining war materials already fabricated in the United States where left-overs from the last war are sought urgently to replace the arms lost in the historic withdrawal from the Flanders pocket.

WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP)—United States officials estimated today that the British and French Empires still have roughly $7,000,000,000 of "quick assets" with which they could purchase supplies immediately in the United States. These assets include gold, cash deposits and American securities.

Oil Report Says Alberta Prices Should Not Drop

EDMONTON, June 14 (CP).—Existing prices for petroleum products in Alberta should not be reduced and the Provincial Government should not enter the oil business, an Alberta Government summary of the McGillivray Royal Commission report said today.

The "compromise measure" of conservation and proration in Turner Valley should be continued but new conservation legislation should be passed embodying recommendations of the Commission and authorizing a new Board with "added duties so it can watch all phases of the industry," the summary said.

The Commission with Mr. Justice A. A. McGillivray of the Alberta Appeal Court as Chairman and Major L. R. Lipsett of Ardley, Alta., as the other member, was appointed in October, 1938, by the Provincial Government to investigate all phases of the oil industry in the Province.

The summary said the Commission found the real hope for wider markets for Alberta's oil products lies in reduced transportation costs, stated it had no views on price-fixing because the members had no knowledge of the subject and reported that if crude oil production continues at the 1939 rate all known reserves in the Province will be used up in about 14 years.

Regarding legislative price fixing, the Commissioners expressed no views as to the advantage or disadvantages which have followed upon price-fixing legislation elsewhere, notably in Nova Scotia and British Columbia, chiefly, they said, because they have no knowledge of the subject.

VANCOUVER, June 14 (CP) — Royal Canadian Mounted Police official here announced today that Fergus McKean, Communist candidate for Vancouver East in the last general election, had been arrested under Defence of Canada Regulations.

Volunteers Have Little Success Saving Troops

"Excursion to Hell" Was to Aid 6000 Trapped Men

A SOUTHEASTERN ENGLISH PORT, June 14 (CP).—A motley flotilla of one-time pleasure craft straggled back home today from a new "excursion to hell."

Boats, ranging from cabin cruisers to putt-putt speedsters set out across the English Channel three days ago to aid some 6000 Allied troops trapped in St. Valery-en-caux, down the French coast from Dunkerque.

But they came back almost empty. The only ones taken off were the soldiers who rowed four or five miles off-shore in whatever kind of boat they could grab.

A volunteer who joined the fleet told upon his return how German bombers and land batteries laid down a fierce bombardment off shore making it impossible to attempt to reach the main body of trapped Allied forces.

His tiny craft which crept across the choppy Channel at dawn did succeed, however, in getting back 24 hours later with 15 French Poilus. There had been 17, but two were wounded severely by machine gun bullets and died soon after being lifted into the boat.

There is no room in a lifeboat for dead men, so the weary oarsmen, needing every ounce of strength for the long hard pull to England, gave their bodies to the sea.

"It was bloody murder," said this volunteer. "The miracle of Dunkerque was not to be repeated. St. Valery has high cliffs, not a beach like Dunkerque. There was a heavy fog, the sea was rough, and the Germans were ready for us this time."

"It was like sending toys out to fight tanks," said one volunteer, who had been under fire for the first time in his life.

Nazi Battleship Scharnhorst Hit

LONDON, June 14 (CP). — The Admiralty announced that an airplane of the Fleet Air Arm scored a hit with a "heavy bomb" on the German battleship Scharnhorst in Trondheim Fjord, Norway, early Thursday.

The announcement said:

"Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm carried out an attack on German naval units in Trondheim Fjord early yesterday morning.

"Information has now been received that one hit abaft the funnel was obtained with a heavy bomb on the battleship Scharnhorst. It is also reported that possibly a second hit was registered on the same ship.

VANCOUVER, June 14 (CP). — Angelo Branca, President of the Canadian-Italian War Vigilance Association, said today he and his Executive Committee were considering plans to bring all loyal British Columbia Italians under one group.

The Vancouver Association was formed here Monday night, and was followed by similar meetings at Prince Ruperi, Nanaimo and other B. C. points at which Italo-Canadians affirmed their loyalty.

Barber of the Provincial Police, formerly in charge of West Kootenay District at Nelson, said today a constable at Port Essington, B.C., was investigating complaints that Japanese fishermen wearing naval uniform caps and flying Japanese flags on their boats were seen on the Skeena River.

The Skeena River estuary is about 20 miles south of here and a popular fishing ground.

English Schools May Evacuate to Canada; 400 Boys Enrolled

Italians Wallop Benito With Coin at Grand Forks

GRAND FORKS, B. C., June 14—When the news of Italy's war declaration came over the radio Monday morning Sam Talarico, proprietor of the Valley Market, Grand Forks, and one of the leading business men of this town, took steps at once to subscribe for a substantial sum in Canadian Government war bonds, and to assure that all members of his staff should make a monthly contribution towards the purchase of War Savings Certificates.

Other local Italian citizens were equally vehement against the decision of Italy's one-man Government, and though many of them have relatives in that country, to whom their heartfelt sympathy goes out, they frankly state that there is only one course open to them, namely, to join with all other good citizens of Canada in prosecuting the war until the world is freed of the curse of dictatorship.

Ranch House at Glenbank Burns

NAKUSP, B. C., June 14 — The home of J. W. Bailey, Glenbank, was destroyed by fire Friday morning. Neighbors phoned to town about 9:30 a.m. to give the alarm, and immediately all available trucks and cars set out for the scene of the fire.

The flames started at the chimney, and owing to a shortage of water the fire made quick headway. The ranch house was not piped with city water, but was supplied from a spring, and the pressure was inadequate.

Most of the household furniture was saved by the quick action of members of the Fire Brigade, neighbors and friends.

100,000 Children May Go to U.S. for Duration

LONDON, June 15 (Saturday) (CP Cable)—The Daily Mail said today that the Altrincham, Cheshire Grammar School, which has an enrolment of 400 boys, may be the first English school to be evacuated to Canada.

All parents have been asked by Headmaster W. Hamblin whether they would accept in principle, the evacuation "of your son to Canada for the duration of the war" and whether they are prepared to make some contribution towards fare and travelling expenses.

More than 400 fathers and mothers met at the school last night to confer with the headmaster on the question, and it was announced their decision would be made known next week.

The Mail said also a plan to send 100,000 British school children to the United States for the duration is under consideration by an unofficial committee of three members of Parliament—Major A. N. Braithwaite, Josiah C. Wedgwood and J. R. Robinson. Major Braithwaite was quoted as saying Mr. Robinson had flown to the United States to discuss the proposal with such organizations as the American Red Cross and the American Refugees Fund.

Stay Where You Are French People Told

LONDON, June 14 (CP).— The French radio broadcast an appeal by military authorities tonight to French civilians in invaded territory to remain at their homes.

"Even if you live in districts invaded by the enemy tanks it is in the interest of safety to stay where you are," said the broadcast heard here. "It is less dangerous than to flee."

ITALIAN AMBASSADOR LEAVES GREAT BRITAIN

LONDON, June 14 (CP)— The Italian Ambassador to Great Britain, Guiseppe Bastianini, and his family were among 700 Italians with diplomatic passes who embarked today on a British liner at Glasgow.

Hitler to Make Peace Offensive Perhaps in Days

LONDON, June 14 (CP).—Harold Nicolson, Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Information, predicted tonight that Hitler "would soon—perhaps during the next few days—"launch his peace offensive."

"Hitler will assure the peoples of Great Britain that he has no desire to subjugate their countries," said Mr. Nicolson, "but that all he desires is their complete disarmament.

"He will say to us that we may keep our Empire, apart from such colonies as he may desire for himself, but that we must abandon our free democratic institutions and accept a Government nominated from Berlin and at the same time surrender our fleet to Germany and Italy.

"The moment he obtains our fleet he would sweep upon London and from there would slowly, carefully and thoroughly stamp out the liberties of our countries and reduce our working people to the level of slaves."

Asserting that the moment must come when the German armored divisions would break down from lack of fuel and men would drop from fatigue, he said "it might well be that the moment of exhaustion will come as the French hold them South of Paris; the French will entrench themselves until our own army and equipment can come to their assistance.

"It will not be on the dry land of Europe that this war will be won. It will be upon the seas and in the air; in distant continents; so soon as unlimited resources of the British Empire and of the Americas can be mobilized to turn the scale."

Allies, Netherlands in Monetary Pact

LONDON, June 14 (CP) — A tripartite British - French - Netherlands monetary agreement was announced today establishing the Netherlands East Indies guilder at 7.60 guilders to the pound sterling.

Foreign money dealers said the new rate was approximately the same as that prevailing prior to invasion of Holland by Germany.

ARMED CRUISER SUNK BY U-BOAT

LONDON, June 14 (CP).—The armed merchant cruiser Scotstoun, the 17,046-ton former Anchor Liner Caledonia, has been torpedoed, it was announced today.

She sank with all guns firing and with the crew still at their stations, waist dep in water.

The men feeding the guns had to hold the shells above their heads to prevent them being damaged by water.

Survivors landed today said they believed they "got" the U-boat that attacked the Scotstoun.

Two officers and four men are missing and feared lost. The remainder of the ship's company have been landed at a British port.

CHUNGKING BOMBINGS PROTESTED BY U. S. A.

TOKYO, June 14 (AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew was reported authoritatively today to have protested against Japanese air bombardments of Chungking because of American property there.

Chungking, provisional capital of the Central Chinese Government, has been bombed repeatedly in the past few days.

Munitions Minister Given Power to Mobilize Trade and Industry

OTTAWA, June 14 (CP).—Virtually unlimited powers to mobilize Canadian trade and industry for war purposes are conferred upon the Government in a bill given first reading in the House of Commons today.

Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, introduced the bill which amends the act creating his department. He said it would give to him, as Minister, "all the powers I could think of," to place Canadian industry at the maximum of efficiency and capacity.

Some of the new provisions have already been enacted by orders-in-council passed under authority of the War Measures Act.

Creation of war industries by private industries but financed and controlled by the Dominion Government will be a feature of the new powers and work is already under way on some such industries including explosive and shell-filling plants already announced by the Government.

During debate on the resolution preceding the bill Mr. Howe declared his belief that no Canadian company working on war contracts has made a profit in excess of five per cent.

No objection was raised by any member to the principle of the proposed measure but the Minister was urged to make sure industries established by the Government would be subject to Parliamentary control, that labor rights be maintained and that there be no Government financed competition with private interests.

Amendments to the Agriculture Products Cooperative Marketing Act of 1939 were considered in committee and passed and the House adjourned at 6 o'clock.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King asked the House to eliminate the evening sitting "because of the situation in Europe I would like to have my (Cabinet) colleagues with me tonight."

Powers to be conferred on the Munitions and Supply Minister are safeguarded by a clause which states they may be exercised by him "notwithstanding, and without restrictions or limitation by, the provisions of any other act or order in council."

The Minister will have almost unlimited power to require such performance by organizations engaged on war contracts as may be deemed necessary, to take over storage space for war purposes, and to set up new companies under Government supervision and ownership.

Driving Germans Meet Harassing Fire at Every Turn

Anti-Tank Guns, 75's and Machine Guns Blaze From Behind Farm Machinery, Barrels of Cement, Wagon Frames

ALLIED AIRMEN CONTINUE ATTACKS

TOURS, France, June 14 (CP)—The main armies of France fell back tonight below their abandoned, invaded capital, digging in for a stand along the Loire, while on the East a German head-on attack against the Maginot Line was thrown back with "tremendous losses."

Paris, the City of Light—"La Ville Lumiere"—was under the shadow of the Swastika and into the dusk the grey-clad troops goose-stepped through its deserted boulevards.

All but broken under the mightiest assault ever thrown against men, the Poilus who fought the main battle of France, counter-attacked with a desperate fury as they withdrew under Nazi pressure.

By AXEL DE HOLSTEIN
(Havas Staff Writer)

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, June 14 (CP-Havas) — French troops have withdrawn in good order toward the Loire River South of the capital, valiantly fighting off German attempts to demoralize the retirement by tank thrusts and bomber attacks.

The rapid withdrawal of the French troops West and East of Paris created a brand new military situation. Although worn with fatigue after days of incessant marching and fighting, they proceeded to their new positions on the Loire despite the continued Nazi onrush.

The Germans followed the withdrawal at high speed, sending motorized columns ahead. But these were attacked by the French with anti-tank guns and numerous 75's, and heavy machine guns were hastily dug in at cross roads and highway turns.

The barricades screening the anti-tank artillery was often constructed of abandoned farm machinery. Ploughs and harrows played their part together with hastily thrown up earth and rocks, horse rakes, barrels of cement and even wagon frames.

These rude and stout anti-tank nests were often enough to check completely the arrow-like progress of speeding German motorcycle detachments, even when they were supported by armored cars. The Germans were frequently compelled to await the arrival of their medium tanks and these tanks then often had to make a regulation attack with the support of infantry brought up by armored army trucks.

The French rear guard actions were vigorously supported by the French Air Force and by the Royal Air Force. The planes battled fiercely, dispersing German infantry concentrations and tank columns between Grand Morin, about 12 miles Southeast of La Ferte, and the Marne River.

This region is to the East of Paris. It became a famous battleground during Napoleon's "campaign of France" in 1814.

The German advance in Champagne along the Vesle River and in the direction of Chalons apparently has increased the Nazi threat on that front. This advance may compromise the upper Western segments of the Maginot line by threatening it from the rear, military spokesmen said.

The heart-breaking circumstances in which the French troops fought today to protect their withdrawal was an epic of heroism. Dead tired from weeks of fighting and sleepless nights, they made the enemy contest every foot of soil.

Nazi armored columns supported by large infantry forces have begun to overrun the defending French troops at the Western end of the front, a military spokesman said earlier today.

He said the reason the Government had retired farther to the Southwest was that "if the enemy puts into the line the fresh divisions he still has in reserve, the unhinging of the position at Montmedy (pivot of the Maginot line) will become inevitable."

It was important, the spokesman added "that international opinion understand that the French army . . . has not renounced despite the terrific difficulties, its fight to the end." But the French were suffering from lack of men and material and "planes and tanks must be got to us."

Indian Sanitarium Likely, Chilliwack

VICTORIA, June 14 (CP).—Construction of a large tubercular sanitarium near Chilliwack for Indian wards of the Dominion Government was reported under consideration at Ottawa today by Dr. G. M. Weir, Provincial Secretary, who returned from Vancouver after a recent visit East. An appropriation has been placed in Federal estimates for a 200-bed institution, which would fit in with Federal and Provincial tubercular prevention work, Dr. Weir said.

British Press and Radio Turn Eager Eyes, U.S.

LONDON, June 15 (Saturday) (CP)—This "blackest week in history" for Britain and France drew from official circles today the declaration that "whatever happens Britain will fight on" against Nazi Germany, while Press and radio turned eager, speculative eyes on "the prospects of American intervention."

The "intervention" and "blackest week' quotations both came from British radio commentators, who said the prospect of the former more than counterbalanced the latter.

The London News Chronicle said:

"A declaration of war by America now would inject an impulse of bounding hope into every Frenchmans heart.

"The effect on the Nazis would be correspondingly depressing.

"Now, in this momentous crisis, America may have it in her power to tide civilization over its darkest hour by a strong dramatic act."

The newspaper's commentator, Vernon Bartlett, said he believed 150 German divisions (about 2,250,000 men) had been identified in the present battle of France and that "many more" remained in reserve.

"Faced with such odds," he said, "it is doubtful whether anything short of a declaration of war by the United States could effectively alter the situation."

The Daily Mail and the Laborite Herald railed at Britain's previous "complacency" and "fantastic unpreparedness," but both counselled postponement of the "inquest" until later.

War Saving Certificate and Stamp Campaign in Nelson to Be Organized

City Hall Crowded as Marshalled Effort Planned

To organize immediately in Nelson for sale of war savings certificates and stamps was the decision of a public meeting, made up of representatives of dozens of Nelson societies, clubs, lodges and associations, at the City Hall Friday night. The meeting placed appointment of an organization committee in the hands of E. A. Mann, Nelson representative on the B.C. War Savings Committee. Mr. Mann presided.

The City Hall was crowded. All available chairs were taken and additional ones were brought in.

Many suggestions were laid before the meeting. They included a city-wide, door-to-door canvass, meetings of employees and employers to arrange for payroll deductions on a regular basis, sale of blocks of stamps to retailers for resale to customers and employees, campaigns through the schools, a canvass of lodges, clubs and societies to have them invest surplus funds in war savings and so on.

PURPOSE OF SAVINGS

J. R. McLennan at the opening of the meeting explained the purpose of stamps and certificates and the need for the money to be raised by them.

C. B. Garland, with the assertion "There is so much to do and so little time to do it in", declared this was the opportunity for the public generally to become interested and enthused, and to make a real contribution to Canada's war effort, urging that "we must keep our chins up and dig down into our pockets, for we can't let the troops down."

Others contributing to the discussions included H. H. Logan, Postmaster R. M. Manahan, S. A. Maddocks, J. A. MacDonald, James Dale, T. H. Glover, Major David Hammond, Miss Mae MacFarlane, Miss Vera B. Eidt, W. R. Grubbe, H. E. Thain, Daniel McNaughton, Frank Stuart, Ernie Collinson, F. B. Pearce, P. E. Poulin, Wesley Colbick, Major Angus Davies, R. B. Morris, George Turner and Floyd L. Irwin.

Mr. Pearce and Mr. Irwin indicated they had planned interclass competitions to sell war savings stamps, Miss MacFarlane stated the I.O.D.E. Girl Guides were planning to buy a certificate. Miss Jean McVicar said the Graduate Nurses' Association was prepared to put its surplus into certificates.

Decisions were made previously by the Board of Trade to invest $400 in certificates, and by the Mothers' Auxiliary to the Nelson Brass Band to buy a $5 certificate.

One hundred volunteers for the campaign signed up at the conclusion of the meeting.

Organization of the committee is expected to be completed by Mr. Mann over the weekend.

Fights Break Out as C.Y.O. Beats Hume in Softball

Fireworks were really popping on the Nelson softball front as the Catholics blasted out their second successive victory over Hume Hotel 12-11 in 11 innings in a Nelson Men's Softball League game at the Recreation Grounds Friday evening.

Most of the tempestuous action took place in the extra frames as the players stormed around the umpires. Louis Aurelio, Coach of the Catholics, and Ald. G. M. Benwell came within an ace of clashing with flying fists, but bystanders and players held the two irate men apart.

It all resulted from a close call at first base with two gone in the first of the tenth. Len Bicknell, Hume pitcher, was on second as result of a double to centre, and Jesse Seaby, the batter, hammered a ground ball down at Eugene Maglio at third base. Maglio fielded the ball and fired it across the diamond to Aurelio at first base, who had gone into the game the previous inning as a pinch-hitter. Aurelio caught the ball for the third putout, but Seaby plowed into him, and in the mixup Aurelio dropped the ball.

Base umpire Johnny Ling ruled that Aurelio had held the ball long enough for the putout to be realized, and the Head Umpire, Tony Scanlan, upheld the ruling. The Hume team surrounded the umpires to fiercely dispute the decision, but to no avail. Bicknell had meanwhile come in all the way from second, but his run naturally didn't count.

The Catholics won the game in the last of the eleventh with no one out, when Lawrence Selinger singled into right field off the pitcher to score Ernie Beland from second.

The game was a thriller as the Hume slowly cut down a huge deficit incurred when their opponents scored eight in the first and another in the third. Then the Hotelmen exploded Les Trainor's no-hitter with one out in the fifth when Ted Bialkowski singled to start the Hume on a four-run uprising.

Catholics scored two runs on Bialkowski's error in the outfield in the ninth to tie the game up after Hume had gone ahead.

A War Savings Document Found

Some young Nelson patriot, probably in attendance at the schools, has been saddened by the loss of a war stamp document, recording the start toward a war savings certificate. If the owner will write The Daily News, giving particulars of the amount involved and of where the document could have been lost, it will be turned over if reasonable identification is made.

Nelson Students Busy With Exams; Close Wednesday

Students of Nelson schools are on the last lap of their 1939-40 term.

All during the past week, Hume School pupils have been writing the year's most crucial exams—the finals. They will continue this week, probably ending Monday. Central School pupils do not write final exams.

Junior High School exams for Grades VII, VIII and IX began Friday and will continue Monday.

Government exams for Senior and Junior Matriculation students at the High School, as well as Grade XI students begin Monday and the Grade X's open Tuesday. Government exams for some subjects taken by Grade XI students with the Junior Matriculation classes, such as wodworking, home economics, science and geography, will also begin today.

Graduation exercises, with a program, presentation of a scholarship, school awards, and promotion certificates, will be held at the Junior High School Wednesday, the day the schools officially close for the year.

Monday afternoon the Junior High School will be open to the public for an inspection of the work done during the year by the various classes.

On Tuesday, the last full school day, the three classes will stage their own programs outdoors if weather permits. These will include softball and other games and refreshments in the form of picnics, and so on. Election of officers for the Houses and Students Council will also be held during the week, although the date has not yet been set.

School Orchestra at Trail Lauded On First Concert

TRAIL, B. C., June 14—While the hot weather probably kept many away from the Trail High School Orchestra's first public concert, the fair attendance gave a tremendous ovation to the orchestra for its program staged in the High School auditorium Friday night under the direction of R. R. Potter, High School music teacher.

The program opened with the orchestra of 45 pieces playing four selections, which were followed by two Negro songs by the High School choir. An ensemble of 30 violinists then played four numbers to piano accompaniment. Miss Carol Wright and Miss Pam Hartman gave a piano duet. Joe Kobluck, accompanied by Mr. Potter at the piano, played a violin concerto. The orchestra again played two selections and the program concluded with community singing led by Miss Kathleen Wilkinson.

The concert was staged to raise money for the purchase of two bass violins for the orchestra.

S. S. McDiarmid, Secretary of the Trail-Tadanac School Board, was Chairman.

Recruiting Goes Ahead Nelson and Trail; 100 Offer

Approximately 100 additional men offered their services to Canada and the Allies Friday as recruiting operations continued at Nelson and Trail.

Major A. C. Sutton, Recruiting Officer, received offers in Trail and sent applicants before Lieut.-Col. G. C. Kenning and Dr. M. R. Basted for examination. Applicants at Nelson were examined by Dr. George Foster and by Dr. H. H. MacKenzie.

It is expected that the first 50 men to go to the B. R. Regiment will leave in a few days.

Major Sutton is expected to be in Nelson this afternoon to carry on recruiting.

Leafs Win Penalty-Strewn Battle From Redmen 16-11

105 Penalty Minutes Are Handed Out in Spirited Action

Romping through a faltering Rossland Redmen defence for goals whenever they needed them, Nelson's Maple Leafs hung up their first victory of the season over the Rossmakers by a 16-11 count at the Civic Arena Friday night in the most heavily-penalized West Kootenay Lacrosse League game to date.

Referees DesBrisay and Brennan really had to work for their dues last night as they handed out three "rest of the game" penalties and three 10-minute stretches, and, combined with a healthy flock of minors, 105 minutes in all were doled out to keep the timekeepers a-hopping. Rossland spent 61 minutes in penance while Leafs served 44, and at several stages in the game there were as many as five players in the penalty box together.

The way the in-and-out game started out it looked as if the Leafs were going to be scalped for the third successive time at the hands of the visiting Indians. Goals by Kenny McGuire and Deacon Davis, both from Ross Saundry's passes, put Gordie Ezart's crew two goals up early in the fray.

However, Jack Bishop, weaving cleverly, scored the first Leafs' goal, and then at the seven-minute mark Stewie Paterson staged one of his old-time style rushes and, receiving fine blocking, he cut through for the tying goal. Two quickies, Coach Walmsley from Bonneville both times, gave the Leafs a never-relinquished lead.

LEAFS SHORTHANDED

The game was played in fits and starts, but the teams showed promise of soon rising to the calibre of years gone by. The Leafs were handicapped by absence of such stars as John Ely and Doug Blais, but good substitutes carried the torch effectively for the Nelsonites. The erstwhile centre and defenceman, Bing Miller, played one of his best of consistently starry games in a rover position, topping the night's scorers with four goals, and all of them were hard-earned.

Ross Saundry was Rossland's shining light, but he devoted too much time to picking fault with the refereeing, which had to be strict the way the players were laying on the wood. Saundry, assistant Redmen coach, picked up three goals, all in the third, and three assists, but spent 16 minutes in the hoosegow.

WALMSLEY, SIMCOCK TANGLE

The second period and the finale were the most exciting for the fair-sized audience: Just as a penalty parade was well under way in the second session, Walmsley and Simcock, former teammates, started firing their fists around with great zest, and the Nelson Coach hung a beauty on Simcock's profile, but that was the only real blow in the flareup. The rest of the action was devoted to menacing thrusts.

In the last period Morris and McDonald started mixing it up, and were shown the gate for the rest of the game, and shortly after McGuire was through for the night for turning on DesBrisay. In the third Saundry had been given 10 minutes on a penalty that started out as a two-minute minor, but was subsequently increased to five and then 10 for insistent beefing in DesBrisay's direction.

Deacon Davis, Les Murdoch and Eric Taylor, all Redmen who enlisted during the day in Nelson for war services, were introduced to the fans at the end of the first period. Davis played a bang-up game with a trio of tallies.

Bob Carter won $5 and A. H. Whitehead a pair of complimentary tickets in the honors for the first sport quiz conducted by the Nelson lacrosse executive. Benny Sutherland, announcer, Jack Stark and George Fleury were in charge of the quiz.

The Nelson Brass Band, conducted by S. J. Newell, afforded musical entertainment for the fans.

CANADIAN NAVAL MAN IS MADE COMMODORE

OTTAWA, June 14 (CP).—Promotion of Captain George C. Jones, Senior Naval Officer afloat of the Royal Canadian Navy, to the rank of Commodore, was made known tonight as the ships of the Canadian Navy weave through undisclosed waters of the perilous mission of war.

Since the start of the war Commodore Jones, a native of Halifax but recently a resident of Victoria, has commanded the North Atlantic patrol which won high praise for its work at sea.

Germans Burn Dead; Wounded Go Poland, to Keep Home Morale

BUCHAREST, June 14 (CP.-Havas) — Travellers returning to Rumania from Poland reported tonight that the Third Reich will never know how vast have been its battle losses along the Western Front.

Mobile crematoria are following the armies and burning the dead, these travellers reported. They said they had learned of this from German wounded in Nazi-occupied Poland.

Poland has been turned into a vast hospital for German wounded, since the German leaders want to maintain high morale at home by showing few signs of the grimness of war and the toll it has reaped among the Nazi legions.

Only Eight Fires During Heat and Lightning Storms

Only eight fires were reported in the Nelson Forest District during a week of hot dry weather in the West Kootenay, and a series of lightning storms in the Boundary and East Kootenay, officials at the Nelson office of the Forest Branch said Friday. Only two of the fires were still burning when reports were sent in Thursday but it was believed these would be out by the weekend as they were only small. They were both lightning fires, and both were in the Boundary district.

Of the eight fires reported, four were in the East Kootenay, two in the West Kootenay, and two in the Boundary. They brought the season's total to 45. Of the season's total, 26 have been in the East Kootenay, 15 in the West Kootenay and four in the Boundary.

Employees' Picnic Committee Gives $1000, War Stamps

TRAIL, B. C., June 14—The sum of $1000 which amount the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company Employees' Picnic Committee has on hand, was voted for the purchase of war savings certificates, at a meeting which wound up the Committee's business Friday night.

Owing to the war, it was recently decided not to stage a picnic this year, nor will any activities usually held in its connection be staged.

Thomas Wilson, Chairman, H. L. Jackson, Vice-Chairman, R. W. Hills, Secretary; T. O. Davies, Treasurer; Tim Buscumb and Ed Laarz, were appointed trustees to arrange for the purchase of the certificates and also for the storage of picnic equipment.

WON'T LOAN EQUIPMENT

It was decided not to loan the equipment out to anyone unless it is required for some purpose in connection with the war effort.

Cups and trophies won at the picnic water sports last year and which are competed for annually will be called in and placed in a trophy case in the Consolidated Company's General Office.

An offer of the Trail Gyro Club, made by J. M. Spowart, to hold sports at Gyro Park in lieu of the picnic, was rejected with thanks, it being decided to cancel all picnic activities for 1940. What steps if any, are to be taken next year, will be decided at a meeting in 1941.

K.B. Suffers 3rd Straight Defeat

SALMO, B.C., June 14—A three-run rally in the first of the ninth fell just one tally short as Kootenay-Belle again fell by the wayside for the third successive time at the Salmo Ball Park this evening. This time they met their Waterloo at the hands of the fourth place Gold Belt team by a 13-12 score.

The loss left the K.B. nine, champions of Salmo Valley softball for three straight years, only half a game in front of Gold Belt.

As previously Kootenay-Belle started out on the right foot but a nine-run parade, highlighted by Les Fogle's homer, proved Jack Titsworth's undoing in the fifth. The losers never did recover from that splurge which made the score 11-8 against them, Gold Belt adding their final two runs in the seventh.

Hale and Henderson belted out homers for Kootenay Belle as they outhit Gold Belt 16-12.

Soroptimists End Season; H. Angus Tells of Indians

Nelson Soroptimist Club wound up its fourth season with a well-attended and enjoyable supper meeting at the Hume Hotel Friday evening, highlighted by a talk on the Ojibway Indians by Hector Angus.

Miss Nancy Dunn, President, was in the chair. Miss Jean Holbrook, in charge of the Social Service Department in the West Kootenay, was initiated into the Club.

Mr. Angus told of the division of the people, their language, customs, activities and pastimes. Knowledge of the Ojibways, which he acquired as Government Agent in the Indian country of Ontario, he imparted in an interesting manner. Displaying a great understanding of and an acute sympathy for them, he said he felt that the arts and crafts of Canadian-born Indians should be preserved for their intrinsic and cultural values.

The Executive reported that $52.75 was collected for the Club's Ambulance Fund, from bridges given by members. A total of $48, the balance owing to the Ambulance Fund, was forwarded to Vancouver. A total of $100 will be provided for the Soroptimist Ward at Kootenay Lake General Hospital.

Miss Jean Gilker, Past-President, has left to attend the biennial convention of Soroptimism at Salt Lake City.

CLUB IS REVIEWED

Miss Dunn reviewed the history of the Club since its foundation by President Anna Sprott in April 1936. There were 15 members, with Miss Carolyn DeWolfe as first President.

The charter was presented May 13, 1936. First officers were Miss DeWolfe, President; Mrs. Gretchen Gibson, Vice-President; Miss Jean Gilker, Corresponding Secretary; Miss Grace McDonald, Recording Secretary; and Amy Sturgess, Treasurer.

During the first year the Club undertook such projects as providing glasses for a child, milk for a family, hampers, text books for students, and so on.

During the second year it undertook as a major objective the furnishing of the Children's Ward in the new wing at the hospital, which is known as the Soroptimist Ward. Up to March of this year, approximately 268 children had been cared for in the ward since its opening in October, 1938. The Club had received many letters of appreciation for its efforts.

In addition to the other projects the Club had made a cash donation monthly toward the support of two elderly women; had supplied cod liver oil for under-nourished school children; sent flowers to all sick members; purchased four Past-President's pins; donated $150 toward the purchase of an ambulance for Overseas service; and had representation on the Red Cross Society and I. O. D. E. among several other projects. To raise funds the Club had given private donations, held a rummage sale, bridges and a tag day; had done catering, and conducted a "mile-of-pennies" campaign.

H. Clever, Miss Carter Married at New Denver

NEW DENVER, B.C.—A quiet, lovely wedding was solemnized on June 12 when Inga Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Carter, became the bride of Hermann, youngest son of Mrs. H. Clever and the late Mr. Clever, at the Carter home.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charmingly attired in a gown of white silk georgette over satin with a small white hat, and carried roses and carnations. Mrs. Dora Clever, sister of the groom, was matron of honor, and wore a cream colored crepe silk dress with white accessories and a corsage of roses. E. Lindsay Carter supported the groom. Rev. James Dewar officiated.

After the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served on a table centred with a three-tier wedding cake made by the groom's sister. Only the immediate families attended.

For travelling Mrs. Clever wore a green dress topped by a green coat with white accessories. The couple motored to Banff, Jasper Park and Coast cities. They will reside in New Denver.

TRAIL SOCIAL...

TRAIL, B. C., June 14—The home of the bride's mother, 840 Eldorado Street, was the scene of the lovely ceremony when Martha Hamilton, eldest daughter of Mrs. Sarah Young and the late Archie Young of this city, became the bride of Alexander MacLeod of Trail, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm MacLeod of Stornoway, Scotland. Rev. F. G. St. Denis performed the ceremony before a bank of peonies and lupines. The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle James Young, was attired in a dress of Queen's blue, featuring a V-neckline, full sleeves, and gathered waistline. Embroidered butcher-boy pockets were a smart addition to the gown. Her hat was a sailor model of dusty rose trimmed with small blue flowers and ribbon matching her dress. She wore a corsage of pink roses and sweet peas. Miss Sadie Young was her sister's only attendant. She wore an afternoon frock of spirit pink crepe, which featured a draped bodice, shirred at the waistline, and bracelet length sleeves. Her hat was of a deeper tone, and her accessories black. White carnations formed her corsage. Angus Murray was best man. The reception was held at the Crown Point Hotel, covers being laid for 24. Mrs. Young and Mrs. David Longmuir, the groom's sister, assisted in receiving the guests. Mrs. Young chose a rose mist lace dress trimmed with taffeta and white accessories. Mrs. Longmuir was attired in a black ensemble with white accessories. Both had corsages of pink gladioli. White and pink peonies were used to decorate the bride's table. A four-tier wedding cake embedded in pink tulle and flanked with tall pink tapers made an effective centrepiece. Immediately following the reception the happy couple left for Vancouver, where they will visit the grom's relatives. For her going-away costume the bride wore a grey afternoon dress with matching boxcoat, and black accessories. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful heart-shaped locket, to the bridesmaid a gold locket, and to the gromsman a gold chain. Congratulations were received by cable from the groom's parents in Stornoway, Scotland, and a wire from his sister in New York. On their return Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod will reside at 1791 Third Avenue.

A number of friends surprised Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Tickell, nee Doreen Minton, Sunday night after their return from Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. The party was arranged by Mrs. George Dimock and Miss Elizabeth McIvor, and was held at the Dimock home, 1300 Green Avenue. The evening was spent in a sing-song, and piano selections by the groom were heard. During the refreshments the bride cut her wedding cake, which was topped with a miniature bride and groom. Mr. Dimock proposed the toast to the bride. Those assisting in serving were Mrs. C. J. Minton, Mrs. H. Sutherland and Mrs. M. H. McIvor. Invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Minton, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. McIvor, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Perrin, Mr. and Mrs. H. Sutherland, Mr. and Mrs. A. Dafoe, Mr. and Mrs. H. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. A. Helgeson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Minton, Miss Madeline McIvor and Douglas Redman.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Minton, 1280 Green Avenue, announce the marriage of their only daughter, Doreen Hilda, to Christopher Francis (Frank) Tickell of Trail, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Tickell of Penticton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. R. J. Hunter at 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. The bride was attired in a smart navy suit with white turban and accessories. Her corsage was of pink and white carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Tickell returned to Trail on Sunday, and will make their home here.

Mrs. Kay Maclean entertained recently for her little daughter, Louise on her sixth birthday. The afternoon was spent in games and contests, after which a dainty supper was served. The little guests invited were Eileen Quance of Robson, Sandra Sheppard, Joan Williams, Dianne Spowart, Geoffrey Whiton, Danny Dolphin and Eric Simonson.

New Men, New Guns . . .

British Expeditionary Force Lands in France

LONDON, June 14 (CP). — A new British Expeditionary Force —new in men and material — is in France.

Some days ago three trains loaded with fresh troops arrived at a Southern Port within an hour.

Many more came hourly by truck, bus and car — and as fast as they came they boarded great grey transports which moved slowly out to sea and France.

Hour after hour, day after day, from a hundred sources, the stream of men and arms gathered power. There were light anti-aircraft units, Scottish Engineers, and infantrymen from rural England.

TOOK RETURN TICKETS

One officer who took part in the withdrawal from Dunkerque said "We all took return tickets when we came out.'

The average age of the new B. E. F. is about 24. Every man carried new equipment.

"The men are very keen," one anti-aircraft officer said "I have my full complement and I am fully equipped. Everything we wanted arrived in time — and it was an awful rush"

Giant cranes swung field guns, pontoons and trucks aboard transports. Overhead wheeled a patrol plane.

"The use of light anti-aircraft guns in mobile warfare is something new," said one officer. "But we have the lessons of Dunkerque passed on to us and our material is every bit as good as that of the men who went before us so we are hoping to put up a good show.

"We have waited for this a long time," said one young subaltern. "We are only sorry that we cannot have a cut at both the Germans and Mussolini at the same time. Perhaps the Italians will be kind enough to wait on us."

The heaviest German attack, they said, continues on the West side of Rouen.

Nazi assertions that the whole French line between the English Channel and Montmedy had broken, drew the comment that "we don't believe a word of it because the French were fighting very well yesterday and it seems improbable that the whole front from the sea to Montmedy should break down at once."

Paris, these sources said, was of no great stategic value.

In rushing to France "thousands of soldiers who had been counted upon to protect the British Isles from threatened Nazi invasion, the Government told Premier Reynaud that "we cannot measure the various forms of tribulation which will fall upon our peoples in the near future."

Britain's message expressed determination "to continue the struggle at all costs in France, in this island, upon the ocean and in the air wherever it may lead us, using all our resources to the utmost limits."

Government Leaves Tours as Exhausted French Fall Back; Lack Reserves and Guns

Unhinging of Position at Montmedy Is Inevitable if Nazi Reserves Used; French Fight "in Complete Order"

By AXEL DE HOLSTEIN
Havas Staff Writer

TOURS, France, June 14 (CP-Havas)—Exhausted French armies, without reserves of men or material, fell back fighting today against the Nazi tide that threatens to flank the Maginot Line.

As the Germans marched into abandoned and lifeless Paris, it was disclosed that the French Government had withdrawn from Tours to a city farther Southwest to escape the approaching tentacles of the vast German encircling movement around the already-captured capital.

On the Western end of the front, armored units supported now by large infantry forces, have begun to over-run French defending forces, a military spokesman said.

On the Eastern extremity of the front, he said, four divisions have until today succeeded in holding intact the pivot of the Maginot Line at Montmedy and in holding the German drive in the Argonne and in Eastern Champagne, while on the rest of the Champagne front enemy armies are advancing toward Romilly and St. Dizier.

WILL FIGHT TO END

"If the enemy puts into the line the fresh divisions he still has in reserve, the unhinging of the position at Montmedy will become inevitable," the spokesman added. "This is why the Government has retired farther toward the Southwest."

"It is important," he went on, 'that international opinion should understand that the French army, the vanguard army of the democracies, has not renounced, despite the terrific difficulties, its fight to the end.

"But we are less numerous. The lengthening of the front is forcing us to put all divisions into the line. Our dispositions have lost their depth. We have almost no reserves. We lack material.

"This is the full meaning of the appeal addressed to President Roosevelt by Premier Reynaud. Planes and tanks must be sent to us. It is the duty of all democracies for whom we are fighting. It is the only way of expressing today the solidarity of the democracies. Then, to use the last words of Reynaud's speech, 'the day of resurrection will come'."

When the German forces reached Paris before them they found only the unarmed Metropolitan Police who had remained in the deserted capital to maintain order. All communications between Paris and the rest of France were cut.

The French army which had fought in front of Paris in the hope of stopping the German drive withdrew in two parts, one to the East and one to the West of Paris. They were to join South of the capital. The historic bridges over the Seine in Paris were undamaged.

Pouring Southward, too, were thousands of refugees in all types of vehicles, and workers following truck-loads of machinery into new industrial centres, where the war effort will be pushed to the utmost.

With almost superhuman courage, the French troops continued their battle "in the most complete order," as the morning communique of the High Command phrased it.

The communique said the troops defending Paris had fallen back in conformity with orders of the High Command, under accentuated German pressure.

The communique said that to the East of the capital German spearheads striking Southward from Chalons-Sur-Marne and Chateau Thierry "appear to be heading" toward Romilly and St. Dizier. Romilly is about 40 miles Southeast of Chateau Thierry and St. Dizier the same distance Southeast of Chalons-Sur-Marne.

The withdrawal from the Paris sector followed Premier Reynaud's dramatic declaration that the nation's very existence was at stake and his appeal for immediate aid from the United States.

Daring Calgary Man Earns Flying Cross

LONDON, June 14 (CP Cable)—Pilot Officer William Lidstone Mow Knight of Calgary, who shot down four German planes in two days, one after a long chase over the enemy lines, was rewarded for his daring with the Distinguished Flying Cross today.

McKnight, whose father lives on Alexandra Crescent, was not satisfied after downing three planes in one day. On the way back from the successful chase of the last Messerschmitt he encountered a convoy of German guns. The 22-year-old Canadian swooped low over the enemy, causing heavy casualties before running out of ammunition.

Love Counts Over Long Engagement

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD

A few months ago the School of Sociology of a great American university advised young people that they should know each other ten years before essaying matrimony, on the ground that in a decade they could pretty well determine whether or not they might make the grade pulling double harness. I believe they recommended five years of friendship, two and a half of courtship, two and a half engagement.

Many people will say that in a decade the juice will be squeezed out of young love, the bloom worn off romance and, that after so long a time, marriage would be shorn of the exciting mystery which bride and groom ordinarily are to each other. This much is definitely true: in the first months of association boy and girl are putting best foot foremost and it isn't long before any foot that comes first is put first. However good we human beings are, we can't play-act for years on end. The truth about ourselves leaks out and our intimates know us for what we are.

If Mary can't prepare a decent meal John discovers it in ten years. If John isn't going to earn enough to hire a servant Mary knows it in ten years. If he's a grouch or a selfish member, if she's a spitfire or a weeper, each has the other's number. Nevertheless, I maintain that if they are in love they can face these disagreeable facts, plight their troth with reasonable hope of success.

After all, it isn't what's in our heads and hands that enables us to get along happily with our housemates, friends, or acquaintances, but what's in our hearts.

The contents of tin cans may have fresh flavor at a dinner table where conversation is agreeable or the contents of the tin cans may have in them grounds for divorce. The hole in the sock and the button off the shirt may be fighting incidents or they may be subject for merry laughter. The small paycheck that the husband brings home is seen by a loving wife as a God-send to buy bread and butter and other necessaries. To an unloving wife it is merely a reminder of the privations she must endure.

Certainly the hasty marriage is a mistake from every angle. Common sense says that a couple of strangers can't go into the closest relationship in life without a terrific hazard. But the thing that counts, the thing that determines whether or not they will make the matrimonial grade is their mutual love, their emotional stability, their unalterable resolve to build an indestructible union even if they aren't entirely congenial in their tastes, even if they don't find life a long picnic.

Pretty Wedding Is Held at Kimberley

KIMBERLEY, B. C. — A pretty wedding took place last Sunday morning, June 9th, at the Sacred Heart Church, when Helen Mary Jean, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Casavant became the bride of Ernest Louis, third son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Desrocher of Canal Flats. Rev. Father Monoghan performed the ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass. Entering the Church on the arm of her father, the bride looked lovely in a Princess gown of white satin. Her veil was caught in place with a wreath of orange blossoms falling in folds to form a train. Her bouquet was of pink and white carnations and Maiden Hair fern. Miss Josephine Desrocher, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, and wore a floor length gown of rose sheer over satin with bolero effect and also a chapel veil, white gloves and shoes and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. Miss Audrey Lomas as bridesmaid chose a floor length gown of shell pink Georgette over satin with a shirred cosiee, chapel veil and pink gloves and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

Marian Casavant, small sister of the bride, and Mae Leighton made charming flower girls in frocks of white and blue and carrying baskets of colored pansies. William Desrocher, brother of the groom, and Alfred Casavant, brother of the bride, were groomsmen. Following the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother with only immediate relatives present followed by a reception for friends in the afternoon. The bridal couple then left for Canal Flats where a reception and dance was held.

The bride's father travelled from Saskatchewan for the occasion.

NEW YORK (CP)—One "less formal" wedding gown shown here combines pale gray crepe and white chiffon and is worn with yellow orchids and gray veiling toque.

BOSWELL STAGES RED CROSS SALE

BOSWELL, B. C.—A successful sale in aid of the Red Cross was held at the home of Mrs. A. Hepher. Goods for the sale were donated by Mrs. W. L. Hunter of Lumberton, Mrs. K. Wallace, Mrs. D. V. West, Mrs. C. Chaub, Mrs. A. Kennedy and Mrs. A. Hepher. Afternoon tea was served.

A further parcel of completed work has been forwarded to Creston, containing 11 pairs of socks, a sweater, two helmets, a pair of scarves.

Difficulty in obtaining supplies of wool has caused some delay in completing the work. When the first batch of socks was made, some difficulty was experienced in making and finishing the "Kitchener toe". Mrs. A. Shell gave a demonstration in "grafting" the toe and all work undertaken since then has been pronounced "perfect."

A collection of clothing for refugees is to be undertaken. Mrs. Boyd has agreed to act as the Central agent for collecting in Boswell.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:
BENJAMIN MERRIFIELD, aged capitalist, hires
GAYLE DIXON to make love to his grandson,
JEREMY TUCKER, a shy student of archeology, while
BILL BAILEY and six pretty girls are employed to help bring life and youth to the Merrifield mansion.

YESTERDAY: A society editor learn that a gay party is to be held on the Merrifield estate and the ton starts talking about it.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

On Saturday evening Bill Bailey had drawn his first money, charged to expenses. With it on Sunday he left The Oaks.

"I'm going out and sniff the winds of ballyhoo," he told Gayle.

She didn't fully understand him, but she encouraged him to go. She herself would accompany Mr. Merrifield, Mr. Weems and Jeremy to church.

Bill went to places where he knew word "got around." He himself was not yet known to be working and staying at The Oaks, so he could listen undisturbed. At the University club he verified the fact that upper crust society was still indignant about the forthcoming party. At an exhibition tennis match on the Montrose club courts—swankiest in the state—he heard more people talking about the Merrifield Little Theatre movement than about the internationaly famous tennis star. Al of this tickled Bill's buoyant soul.

On Monday morning Bil, back on his job, got up early and had the morning paper ahead of anybody else. It was elaborate with more news of the amateur play, but had bare mention of the Tuesday dance. Bil knew that Monday is a slack period for the society sections of all newspapers, and so the afternoon dailies would likey give generous space to the play, too.

"I'll distribute the tickets first thing after breakfast," Bill told Gayle as soon as he found her up. They had sauntered for a moment on the Merrifield lawn to greet a brilliant sun.

"Where will you put them?"

"There are three established places downtown—a jewelry store, a drug store and the Last Curton club—where theatre tickets of this sort are sold. I mean, handled for charity, without commission. Our expenses on this play won't be more than $35 or so, Gayle. We'll have a nice profit if we make any sort of sale."

"Oh, I hope we do. For Mr. Merrifield's sake as much as anything."

Bill grinned.

"He doesn't need any charity help."

"Silly! But he does want to see things succeed, see promises carried out. You know that, Bill."

Bil indeed did know that. It was a nagging realization of that, in fact, which drove him on, when he had impulsively planned a few days ago to chuck the whole business of working here and set in making love to Gayle. He remembered, in time, that he had made a promise to Mr. Merrifield. And there was the added important fact of his being without funds.

While Bill was away this morning distributing tickets, photographers came again from two newspapers, an hour or so apart. Sunday's papers had really found little to go on, pictorially speaking. They had obtained from Mr. Weems a forma portrait of Jeremy Tucker, and one of Mr. Merrifield. These two poses, with a small picture of the mansion itself, had constituted the layout in each of the papers, and as society pictures they were inadequate. Jeremy looked like the scared collegian he had been when that portrait was made, and while Mr. Merrifield looked distinguished that still wasn't enough.

"Get some punch, some oomph," the publisher of Mrs. Molly Van Orsdale's paper had demanded, too late for Sunday. "Have a good picture spread for Tuesday, the day of the party. Skip the men, mostly. They don't make society. Get women."

The staff photographer had growled. "There's no cheese cake at that Merrifield castle. It's a male den."

"Then get a guest list. Take young Tucker's date, whoever she is."

The photographer was admitted to the mansion on this Monday by Graham, and he went straight to the point.

"Say, butler, be a sport, eh? What girl is this Jeremy squiring tomorrow night?"

Butlers often know things, as the photographer well knew. But Graham was impeccable.

"I could not say, sir," he answered, pontifically. "Miss Dixon has charge of all arrangements."

"Who's she?"

"The—ah, hostess here. Mr. Merrifield has placed everything, socially, in her complete charge. A very capable person."

"Lemme talk to the old skirt, eh?"

"Why—quite so, sir!" Graham was astonished, but just human enough to let matters take their course.

The cynical and somewhat bored photographer expected Miss Dixon to be an efficient expert contemporaneous in age with old Mr. Merrifield himself. When Gayle walked into the room however, his chin fell.

Before Gayle realized it, the photographer was taking pictures of her.

"Who is Mr. Tucker bringing to the ball?" he asked Gayle, sociably. "What girl?"

Gayle thought fast. "I am to have that honor myself," she smiled very sweetly at the man with the camera thereby exposing two more plates, just to be sure!

"I am really here with Mr. William Bailey, organizing Mr. Merrifield's new Little Theatre movement." Gayle was saying. "We have the most delightful play under way. Will you peek in at the rehearsal? The other girls are here this morning, too, practising their parts."

Six other rls, to be exact, and the most exquisitely beautiful sextette this newspaperman ever had encountered. Now the photographer normally carried only two dozen negatives in his camera equipment, and he hrd made seven shots of Gayle. He took picture after picture of the other girls, against the theatre stage, on the sun porch or anywhere he could think of.

He got their names. Lola Montesa had not wanted to pose at all; she had shown a hint of anger at the suggestion, in fact, and under the laughing pressure from the photographer she finally agreed. The man found her as beautiful as the others, although he plainly didn't like her as well.

The photographer hurried back to his office then and, mechanical efficiency being what it is in newspaperdom, the afternoon Gazette came out with "The Merrifield Girls" boldly pictured in three-quarters of a page.

Inevitably there was further discussion of the play 'Maid to Measure.' The clever title seemed to fit right in with the exquisite photos of the girls; more and more talk was stimulated, quite naturally. The Gazette was read everywhere.

That and the publicity already given, the forthcoming play, the prestige back of the Merrifield name and mansion, and the inexpensive but commanding signs Bill Bailey had left at the ticket sale depots, began to move the tickets as early as 2 p. m., and at 6 that Monday the clerk at the Last Curtain club telephoned Bill.

"Say, Mr. Bailey, he announced, "can you bring me some more tickets?"

Bill was elated and so was Gayle. They commandeered the Merrifield car and chauffeur immediately to rush downtown and shift some tickets from the drug store booth. The jewellery store had closed for the day.

"It's the pictures that did it!" Bill repeated, again studying the Gazette as he rode back homeward with Gayle. "They're not only pretty, they're interesting."

By sheer coincidence (of which Gayle and Bill knew nothing) another man made the same comment in another part of the city, at about the same time. He was Mr. Oscar Draper, chief identification expert in the Bureau of Detectives, Police Headquarters.

Mr. Draper leaned on the desk of the captani of detectives and said, "You know, Cap'n, these are very good looking and interesting girls, and for no reason at all one of them looks familiar."

"Familiar?" the detective echoed. "You speaking personally or professionally?"

"Professionally," said the officer. "Captain, there's a crook in that crowd. Wait till I go dig into my files."

Teach Child to Connect Words With Objects

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

The problem of the poor reader in the first or second grade usually is quite different from the problem of the poor reader of the fifth or tenth grade. As a rule the latter can read fairly well from a primer or second grade reader; materials of his own grade are just too hard for him.

But the reading laggard in the first or second grade might not have learned to read at all. He may never have been able to connect printed words, phrases or sentences with their appropriate sounds or meanings. Occasionally a bright child will reach the second or third grade without having learned to read at all. With the aid of the pictures on the page and a good memory he may have been able to "spout off" whole pages glibly, without connecting a single utterance of his with the words, phrases or sentences on those pages.

The problem of teaching the beginner to read is to lead him to connect words, phrases and sentences with their names and meanings, so that, when he sees doll, he will say and think doll; when he sees on the chair, he will say and think on the chair. When he sees, the doll sits on the chair, he will say and think just that. Though he later may learn to read for meaning only (read silently), he at first will need to be able to translate the word, phrase and sentence into oral utterances.

Here are some ways by which a parent might help the young poor reader. On a large cardboard, print in large letters the name of an object like chair. Fasten the placard to the chair. Call to the child's attention these names and induce him to learn them at play. Increase the number gradually.

Later, help him make a scrap book by cutting pictures from old magazines and pasting these pictures in the book. Under each picture print the name of the object pictured. It might be well to select the pictures in groups so as to emphasize initial sounds, as ball, bat, bed, in one group; pig, pail, pan in another, and etc.

BE AN ARTIST

It may be easier for you to draw the picture for each word. In this manner you might picture verbs of action, using "stick men" to do so, all to the child's attention the initial letter in each word. Encourage him to learn the alphabet but not to have him spell out the words as he reads.

Encourage the child to read the road signs and labels in grocery stores. Then there are a few magazines which appeal to the young children. Read a great deal to this child so he will grow more interested in meaning and more eager to dig out for himself the fascinating things from the printed page.

SOLVING PARENT PROBLEMS

Q. To my three-year-old, I have read many nursery rhymes and stories but I can't get him to tell me the stories or recite the rhymes. His little cousin does it so very well.

A.—Forget about the little cousin. Quit asking him to say the rhymes and stories to you. Be happy that he likes to hear them. Go on filling him up with them. Some day he will just naturally run over and give you his own creations. Better for him than mere recitation of the originals.

Skirting the Ocean

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Elasticized swim suits are more pliable than last season's but those who have neither the figure nor the inclination to wear such sculptures have plenty of alternatives. Gone the tight wool maillot, the skimpy excuse for freedom in the waves, and the average swimmer kicks along just as well in prettier water wear.

Seated figure today shows black rayon jersey in a piece with matching bloomer shorts, and with the elongated waistline. The corsage is bright rubber, standing is a cotton print suit, sized for sizes 36 to 40, designed to satisfy the woman who spends more time out of the water than in it. It also has its attached bloomers and is jersey-lined. Seaming through the waist and pleats in the modest skirt do a lot for the large torso. Both suits are priced not to pain the budget.

CRAWFORD BAY CHURCH HELPERS URGED TO SEE HOPE DURING WARFARE

CRAWFORD BAY, B. C.—A well attended church helpers meeting wta held at the home of Mrs. Francis, Mrs. Richardson, President, being in the chair.

The Secretary read a letter from Mr. Greig of the Theological College, Vancouver, regarding a visit to the Bay to address the Church Helpers. One from Mrs. Hincks thanked the members for sympathy.

It was decided not to hold any meetings in July and August, Mrs. Watson handed in $1.65, proceeds of guild chest. Mrs. Francis read a short article which suggested that although the nations are at war, we must look to the beauties about us, and draw strength and freshness and courage, instead of sadness and depression.

Mrs. Bowker and Mrs. Hurry assisted Mrs. Francis in serving tea.

Foods for Health . . .

Bread Supplies Needed Calcium for Body Health

By DONNA GRACE

Though nearly everyone knows the importance of eating the foods that maintain health, few take the time to know the food elements. As a matter of fact, it's not necessary for them to take a thorough study of the subject as there is always plenty of reliable information at hand.

In a recent talk by Dr. James A. Tobey, expert in nutrition, he called attention to the various minerals of food elements and our need for some of them. Calcium is among the most important for growth, and is used to build strong bones and teeth. It also is used in the prevention of certain nervous troubles.

Modern baker's bread is rich in calcium. White bread contains much more than whole wheat bread, he says and no European bread is as good as Canadian bread in this respect. The other sources of this essential vitamin are pasteurized and certified milk, cheese, eggs and green leafy vegetables.

Dr. Tobey says six slices of white bread made with the usual milk solids will furnish the normal person with approximately one-third of his minimum daily requirement of calcium.

In commenting on the vitamin content of bread, Dr. Tobey reported that many bakers are now enriching their breads in vitamin B-1, or thiamin, by one or more of several effective methods.

What is eaten with bread is more important from the standpoint of vitamins than the bread itself. The bread is needed in the diet mainly as an efficient source of food-energy and of muscle-building protein. Bread is the least expensive of the energy foods.

LONDON (CP)—Not only are the pictures in the Royal Academy strongly war angled but visitors are reminded at every turn they must take shelter on air raid alarm and there are sand buckets in all corners.

Child Diabetic . . .

Insulin, Diet Care Required Treat Diabetes

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

There are two types of diabetes and although essentially the same, when you meet them in practice they hardly seem to be the same disease. In general, one occurs in children and one in middle-aged people. The children get all the worst of it because almost invariably they have a severe type of diabetes.

Diabetes is an inability on the part of the body to use starches and sugars and it is, as of course is well known, due to a degeneration of certain cells in the pancreas which furnish the body substance called insulin, which imitates the way the body disposes of sugars and starches.

The severe cases require insulin and children nearly always have to take it. It must be given hypodermically and it is surprising to see how quickly children learn to give themselves these doses. I know a youngster of 10 who has been taking insulin for a year, prepares it herself and gives it to herself like a little soldier without fussing or complaining.

But diet must also be arranged for children. The tendency nowadays is to give high carbohydrate high fat diet as was done formerly. (sugar and starch) rather than high fat diet as was done formerly. Diabetic children should be educated as to what they can eat and this also they learn very rapidly.

We must also provide in the diet for growth and as years go on, the amount of all food substances in the diet rises. At the age of 5, a child may take 140 grams of carbohydrate, 60 grams of protein and 70 grams of fat, whereas at the age of 17, this rises to 250 grams of carbohydrate, 115 grams of protein and 115 grams of fat. The growing child also needs plenty of calcium, phosphorus and Vitamin D, and certainly a good deal of Vitamin A, the growing vitamin.

A typical menu for one day for a child aged about 7 or 8 years, which contains 160 grams of carbohydrate, 68 grams of protein and 78 grams of fat, is as follows:

Breakfast

Orange juice—80 c.c, 1-3 cup; rolled oats, cooked—60 Gm., 1-3 cup; sugar—5 Gm., 1 teaspoonful; Milk—300 c.c., 10 ounces; egg—60 Gm., 1 egg; bacon—6 Gm., 1 small slice; bread (toasted)—30 Gm., 1 slice; butter—3 Gm., 1 thin square.

Luncheon

Vegetable soup — 1 cup; soda cracker—3 crackers, 2 inches square; bread—15 Gm., ½ slice; butter—12 Gm., 1 square ½ inch thick; tomato juice—120 c.c., ½ cup; beef—33 Gm., slice 4 inches by 2 inches by ½ inch; milk—200 c.c.; baked apple — 100 Gm., 1 small apple; cream—25 Gm., 2 tablespoonfuls; sugar—5 Gm., 1 teaspoonful.

Dinner

Carrots—100 Gm., ½ cup; potato—50 Gm. (size of egg); string beans—100 Gm., ½ cup; chicken, broiled—30 Gm., 1 slice; butter—12 Gm., 1 square ½ inch thick; milk—300 Gm., 10 ounces.

Part of milk may be used in cooked vegetables.

Tomorrow, I shall discuss diet for diabetes in adults.

Szczerba Jailed Tree Months on Perjury Charge

Found guilty by Police Magistrate William Brown of a charge of perjury, John Szczerba of Sproule Creek was sentenced Friday to serve three months with hard labor in the Provincial Jail at Nelson. He appeared for judgment Friday morning.

The charge was based on Szczerba's testimony in his trial May 20 for assault occasioning bodily harm. During the trial he testified Per Karlstrom, his neighbor, had stolen a quantity of canned goods and tools belonging to the British Columbia Forest Service while he was a patrolman on a fire at Deer Creek last Summer.

"The evidence has convinced me that Karlstrom did not steal the goods. The accused was hampered in producing his evidence, and he was inclined to rely on gossip rather than what he actually knew," His Worship stated. "The assertion was false and was obviously intended to mislead John Cartmel, the Stipendiary Magistrate who tried the original case."

Leo S. Gansner of O'Shea, Garland & Gansner prosecuted. Sczerba conducted his own defence.

History of Paris . . .

Paris, Centre of Culture, Twice Fallen to Germans

By The Canadian Press

Paris, fifth largest city in the world with its normal population of 2,870,000, has been a symbol of Western art and culture for centuries.

Withdrawing without defending the city from within, the French chose to spare their beloved capital the horrors of bombardment.

The eldest of Parisians knew the bitterness of a previous conquest, for in 1871, after a siege that lasted 3½ months and laid waste large sections of Paris, the city surrendered to the invading Germans of Bismarck.

In 1914 the German armies of Kaiser Wilhelm II were within 20 miles of the city gates, but Paris remained inviolate although German aircraft bombed the city many times during the war and "Big Bertha" — a long-range gun — dropped its shells on the capital from a distance of 75 miles.

GAINED NEW GLORY

Originally a fortified town of the Gallis tribe of the Parisii, Paris first was called Lutetia, and by that name was mentioned as a Roman town in records of the first century A.D.

In the fourth century the name was changed.

During the Middle Ages, after Romans, Franks and Normans successively had occupied the city, Paris developed on both banks of the Seine into three principal districts — the city on the islands; the ville, or right bank, and the Latin quarter, on the left bank.

In the 15th century the development was checked by the Hundred Years War. In the 19th century, under Napoleon I, Paris reached new glory and enjoyed a golden era of prosperity under Napoleon III.

After the German invasion of 1871, Paris emerged as a newer and finer city.

Most famous of the city's squares is the Place de la Concorde, where Marie Antoinette was executed, where stands the Arc de Triomphe — largest arch in the world, and where the grave of the Unknown Soldier is located.

Almost every branch of French industry is represented in Paris, from fine arts handicrafts to manufacture of powerful machinery.

Doukhobor Body Appeal Before Court of Appeal

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 14—Whether Christian Community of Universal Brother Ltd. is a farmer which is entitled to the benefits of Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, 1934, is an issue which has been referred to Court of Appeal for determination.

The Doukhobor organization and the Board of Review for British Columbia are appealing from a judgment of Mr. Justice Robertson, who held that the statute was not applicable.

C. L. McAlpine, K.C., and C. F. R Pincott are counsel for the Doukhobor company, and W S. Owen for the Board of Review

A judicial pronouncement on the applicability of the statute was sought by National Trust Co. Ltd., Vancouver, trustee of a mortgage deed charged against the Doukhobor company's holdings in British Columbia on which the outstanding indebtedness is $270,000.

VARIED ACTIVITIES

The trustee succeeded at the trial in its contention that the act did not apply for the reason that the community is not a farmer. Mr. Justice Robertson found that since 1926 its activities in the Province have been confined to logging and milling forest products, manufacturing and selling jam, and to operating stores.

D. N. Hossie, K.C., and Ghent Davis are counsel for the trustee.

The Doukhobor company applied to the Board of Review for a reduction of the debt The board adjourned the application until determination of the court action.

Airman Escapes Death Many Times After Bailing Out Over Holland; Dutch Army "Riddled With Spies"

YARMOUTH, N. S., June 14 (CP)—Pilot Officer Jack Hatfield's last letter home reveals how a British squadron of the Royal Air Force was overcome by a German ruse and the adventures he experienced making his way through Holland to a British destroyer and England after having been shot down.

The letter was received by Hatfield's relatives here weeks after he was reported missing by the Air Ministry. Hatfield, 27, a native of nearby Tusket, was wounded in his Netherlands escapade and after convalescing failed to return from active flying duty.

"Rotterdam was in flames," he said in his letter. "We sighted seven Junkers dive bombers which had just released their bombs. We attacked and a dog fight started.

"These dive bombers are very manoeuverable and are used as fighters. We, of course, separated for the dog fight. I shot down D87 and then 27 fast fighters appeared. The dive bombers had been used as bait and the fighters had been hiding in the sun.

"Before I realized it I had three on my tail. My pilot was apparently hit, as the plane started to spin and I couldn't get in touch with him. I jumped and came down by parachute."

As Hatfield drifted earthwards, a German plane fired a burst of bullets at him. He was hit in the arm.

The ground was no haven for Hatfield. He hid in a marsh and watched the remainder of his flight overwhelmed by superior numbers. Moreover, hundreds of other German planes flew low overhead in waves, dropping bombs and the territory was infested with Nazi parachute troops.

Hatfield swam a river and met another pilot of the British squadron. They were mistaken for spies at a Dutch post, their clothes were taken from them, and they were walked through the streets of an unidentified town with a party of Dutch Nazis. The sentence was death by a firing squad.

A General of the army, who spoke English talked to the two men and straightened out the matter, giving them a guard of two men to protect them from German snipers who occupied part of the town.

But the Lieutenant of the guard was a Fascist and had slipped incriminating papers in the pockets of the Dutch army greatcoats given to the Englishmen. When found by a sentry, the two men again were cross-questioned closely, all the while a bayonet at their backs and an automatic at their heads.

The Dutch Lieutenant lost heart at the questioning and admitted the papers found on the two British aviators belonged to him. They were freed once again and the Dutchman was sentenced to death.

Hatfield said the Dutch army in that particular section was all the same—riddled with spies.

From then on it was clear sailing, excluding "Dutch Nazis pelting from houses" and German bombing raids. They were escorted to a British destroyer and then "Blighty".

Britain Hands U. S. Blank Check as Moves to Field Equipped and Largest Army in Shortest Time

LONDON, June 14 (CP)—The plight of France has caused Great Britain to drop her plans for a long war and go with her resources, sources close to the Government said today."

This releases a fund of money and credit for purchase in the United States of anything which will convey or fire explosives. The fund originally was allocated for future years.

As a result of the change in policy, these sources, Britain is giving the United States a blank check, in effect, for any kind of useable war material she can provide.

No program aimed at later production will be permitted to stand in the way of the fullest effort now, these sources declared.

This is partly the result of the loss of Allied resources because of widening Nazi hold on France

From 75 to 80 per cent of France's steel producing plants now are in German hands, these sources said, and the same is true of many factories producing war material.

But, they added, fortunately for the Allies, most of the French factories producing ammunition are in the South.

The Government is not so much concerned momentarily about the United States' production capacity as about the material there already manufactured, they said.

For instance, they explained, the British Expeditionary Force's loss of 1000 field guns in the withdrawal from Flanders has left few in this country for the enormous army which must be put into the field.

The situation with regard to rifles is not so acute, they said, but the demands of the local defence volunteers—the home guard against possible German invasion— have taken a large part of the supply.

While she will take all the United States can send, and urges the cutting of red tape, these sources said Britain's own stepped-up production had vastly expanded her purchase of machine tools from the United States and that she would continue to take such tools up to the United Stees' capacity to send them.

The policy is to put into the field at once the biggest army possible—briefly; a maximum of soldiers in a minimum of time—they said—but the Allies must look across the Atlantic for a large part of the equipment.

They emphasized that the need is now, next week and the week after —not next year— although they declared that those charged with supplying Britain's army are not forgetting to look ahead also.

Primarily what Britain wants from the United States, these sources said, are the weapons that country manufactured at the close of the last war to replace those she obtained from the Allies.

Recent arrivals of supplies from the United States have been small because the former long-range war planning resulted in restricted orders for 1940, they explained.

They said there also had been financial problems, but asserted the situation now has improved and there would be no obstacle to purchasing anything that could turn the tide.

As to credits, they asserted, there are ways to find them now that there is no need for hesitation on future programs.

NEW YORK, June 14 (AP)— Efforts to make it possible for United States ships to transport to the Allies were reported under way today.

Under the Neutrality Act, United States vessels are barred from belligerent waters, but shipping executives were described as being hopeful that some means of overcoming the restrictions might be devised.

Several shipping officials were known to be in Washington conferring with governmental authorities on the subject.

Britain's handing a "blank cheque" to the United States for war supplies found less than a dozen Allied ships in New York harbor.

It was pointed out that rush orders would benefit the Allies little if no ships were available to carry cargoes to France and England.

ITALY ON RECEIVING END SO FAR

Whatever Mussolini's war plans are, so far his conduct of the Italian part of the war has not been in the nature of a Blitzkrieg.

As yet, though four days have passed, Italy has been almost entirely on the receiving end of the exchanges.

Many Italian ships have been captured, and a number of scuttlings by Italian crews have taken place.

Italian colonies are under attack from the air.

There are reports—probably at this stage much exaggerated but likely to be true later—of revolt in conquered Ethiopia.

And while the Italian Navy is reported to be industriously sowing mines, to divide the Mediterranean in two halves, with the Eastern end closed to the Allies, the British Navy has shut Italy off from the parts of the World reached by sea, including Asia.

No doubt the Italian armies will presently be thrown into the scale of the war, against the Allies, whether in France, Tunis, Libya, or Egypt.

But wherever they act, the Allies have a large composite army on the shores of the Mediterranean, which can claim the attention of the enemy that has volunteered for trouble.

YIELD PARIS TO WIN CAMPAIGN

In spite of the heroic resistance of the French armies, with fresh British troops doing their part, it looks as though the Germans will soon be in complete possession of Northern France.

The horns of the cresent are closing upon, or have closed upon, Paris. As this is written, it has not become clear whether it is advanced tank units that have reached Paris, or first line troops.

But in any case the French capital will soon be in the enemy's hands, as the German high command apparently still has at its disposal great numbers of fresh divisions to hurl upon the hard-pressed defenders of French soil.

As the Germans gain their objectives, they pay a terrible cost in manhood, but that cost is evidently a part of he plan. As long as they are attacking, provided there are not any routs, their losses will be disproportionate to those of the defending armies, which are in the main still intact, and making their forced retirements in good order.

Where an army is driven from the field in flight, the losses of the defenders always exceed those of the attackers, but when the defending armies remain fully in being, the attackers may gain possession, but their losses have not attained the great objective, which is the destruction of the foe.

Although a large part of France may be held by the enemy shortly, each successive German advance will reduce the German advantage in man-power and material, without reckoning on the British forces and equipment that are pouring into France, and that will continue to pour into France as long as the battle-line is there.

There is no longer any happy-go-lucky attitude toward the war on the part of any, and the feverish work of British factories, and French factories, supplemented by Canadian and American factories, will soon show results, and will ultimately turn the tide.

It may be that French industrial capacity will soon be badly crippled by extension of the German occupation, but that is the more reason for every part of the British Empire to put its back-muscles into the war, and determine that there shall be no more mistakes, and that nothing shall be left undone that will contribute to victory.

Why No Flag Flying Sundays, Gyro Park, Asks "Union Jack"

To the Editor of the Daily News:

Sir—Up till recent years the Union Jack used to be hoisted atop the flagpole in Gyro Park, but for some reason or other, the worthy practice has been discontinued. I believe that formerly the local troops of the Boy Scouts cooperated in seeing that the flag flew each Sunday—during the seasonable months, at least—and there is no doubt the non-appearance of the Empire's symbol of Freedom and Unity causes many to wonder why

There would likely be general appreciation by Nelson citizens if the flag-hoisting could be renewed, particularly during these troublous times of national and international distress. It is therefore hoped that this letter will be read by those in authority, or by those who have hitherto looked after this duty, and that we may soon see the old Flag flying over the city and suburbs each Sunday from dawn to dark.

UNION JACK.

Jean Burgess Thinks Dyck "Tops"; Might Be More Selective

The Editor,
The Nelson Daily News:

Sir—I wish to thank you for your indulgence in printing my letters, and I should like to correct an impression in that of June 12 of what may seem a slight to Dave Dyck. Either too few words were omitted, or too many left in. Whether or not my testimonial is of any interest I should like to make it clear that I think the gentleman in question is "tops" in his class of entertainment, and I enjoy hearing him sing. He is the nucleurs of what could be a thoroughly entertaining program. But I also think he should be more selective in his instrumental background.

The gem of musical expression has many facets, each with their own appeal. Radio is careless of its priceless worth. It allows the spark of talent in each to be overshadowed by the inevitable superabundance of lesser sputters, which usually ruin any chances the original might have to improve on its amateur standing.

And a certain confusion in the latter sequence of the letter is a sigh for a late lamented piece of literary effort.

Words so often prove two-faced, saying one thing and meaning another.

Taxpayer Urges War Effort Before New City Hall, Nelson

To the Editor of the Daily News:

Sir—It is difficult to understand why the City of Nelson has in mind the expenditure of $50,000 or more in building new municipal chambers for its civic functions at a time when the Government hour by hour is issuing appeals for "Dollars to help win the war," and special nation-wide arangements are being made this very week, to gather in funds for this purpose.

Surely the City can at least set an example in civic economy that will influence citizens in general to conserve their surplus funds for the purpose of winning the war, which after all is the only thing that matters at the moment.

Personally, it was with pained surprise that the writer noted the press story about the contemplated building of a new City Hall at this time, and he is interested in watching the general reactions of Nelson citizens to the proposal in view of their known desire to do everything possible to shorten the conflict.

Further, one had the hope that, for the same reason, the city council could have deferred an expenditure of several hundred dollars in completing the cemetery landscape at this time when the dollars could have been put to so much better use in helping our living armies who are offering their own lives to preserve the freedom of others.

We all admit that our civic fathers, through their appointed committees, have done wonderful work for the city in the past, more so this year than ever, and we are grateful for everything and appreciate their untiring efforts, but let us look at the whole matter with steady eyes, and study the situation once again before we commit ourselves to what can at this time be considered unnecessary expenditures. Every penny spent in financing them is that much less available for the purchase of War Savings Certificates and War Bonds, and to that degree cripples the prosecution of the war to successful finish, and is a betrayal of those who have volunteered "all they have and are" in the defence of Canada and the Empire. My only reason is signing this letter, as below, is for the purpose of avoiding the introduction of any personal element in what, one hopes, will be a resultant discussion in view of the present grave national emergency.

Urges Camp Money Go to War Savings

To the Editor of the Daily News:

Sir—Will you allow me a little space in your paper to make a suggestion which I hope will be in time. In a few weeks a number of our children and young people will be going to camp, and I wonder if appealed to in the right way, these young folk would not forgo camp this year and purchase War Saving Certificates instead with the money! No one in or around Nelson actually "needs" this respite. They have everything from a "bombless" sky to a "perfect" swimming hole," and if the purchase of War Certificates means more munitions, etc, and therefore a shortening of the war, would not these same young folk feel they had done a real kindness to the much less fortunate young folk in Europe living under such terrific hardships as most grown-ups would find it hard to face

My own young daughter has been to camp the past wto years and is expecting to go this year, but I shall appeal to her to give her $8, which would buy two certifactes, to the Country instead.

It seems to me if those in authority over the camps would look into this matter immediately, it would be a real patriotic gesture, and the Government would be several hundred dollars the richer.

A MOTHER.

OLD MAN OF THE SEA, 1940

CONTRACT . . . By Shepard Barclay

BID HIGH, BUT NOT LOW

PARADOXICAL as it seems, there are hands which are so weak you cannot bid them at a low level, but can at a higher one. They are those with a sound fit for your partner's suit, but utterly lacking in defensive values. When the bidding goes along, with the opponents showing plenty of strength, you hope they will drop it below game, and so keep passing. But if they get to their game and your partner passes without doubling, you can then afford to sacrifice. The point is that there is at last enough at stake to pay you for taking a penalty, whereas previously there was not.

North: ♠ J 6 5 2 ♥ 10 3 ♦ 9 6 5 4 ♣ J 6 3

West: ♠ A Q 9 4 3 ♥ A K 4 2 ♦ 2 ♣ 9 7 5

East: ♠ 8 7 ♥ J 9 8 7 6 ♦ Q 8 3 ♣ A Q 4

South: ♠ K 10 ♥ Q 5 ♦ A K J 10 7 ♣ K 10 8 2

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥
3 ♣	3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥
Pass	Pass	5 ♦	Pass
Pass	Dbl

North proved to be correct in his assumption that East and West can make 4-Hearts. They can even make an overtrick, with the loss of only one trick in diamonds and one in clubs. A second club loser can be prevented by discarding one on a ruffed-up spade.

When West's bid of 3-Hearts came along, North quite properly passed it. His hand was only of sacrifice caliber, and there was no point to getting doubled and set a couple of tricks for a loss of 300 points when the opponents were bidding for only a part score.

The situation was utterly different, though, after East went to 4-Hearts and South passed it. Now North knew a game was at stake, a vulnerable game worth, all told, some 600 points to East and West. He reckoned, from his partner's bidding up to three without assistance, that the set would be only of about three tricks which is exactly the result. So East and West, by taking two tricks in spades, two in hearts and one in clubs, got 500 points, less than the value of their game.

Spray Will End Sucking Insects

Sucking insects like aphids weaken and finally destroy plants unless they are checked. These pests pierce the plant's tissue, or cells, with their tiny beaks and then suck out the juice or sap which is the lifeblood of the plant.

Nasturtiums are favortie victims for aphids. Other flowerin plants which need constant guarding are roses, 'mums, asters, lilies and annual larkspur.

Aphids must be killed with a contact insecticide, which smothers them by choking up their breathing pores. Spraying should be done as soon as the first few aphids are noticed, since large colonies of them develop quickly. It is important to do a job thoroughly of spraying in order to kill all the aphids, otherwise the spraying will soon have to be repeated.

"The Missouri Waltz"

Hush-a-bye my baby, slumber time
is comin' soon;
Rest yo head upon ma breast, while
mammy hums a tune;
The sandman is calling, where shadows are fallin',
While soft breezes sigh as in the days gone by.

Way down in Missouri, where I heard this melody
When I was a pickaninny on my
Mammy's knee;
The darkies where hummin', Their
banjoes were strummin'
So sweet and low.

Refrain:
Strum, strum, strum, strum, strum-
Seems I hear those banjos a playin'
again-
Hum, hum, hum, hum, hum,-
That same old plaintiff strain.
Hear that mournful melody, it just haunts you the whole day long;
And you wander in dreams back
to Dixie, it seems,
When you hear that old time song.

Hush-a-bye my baby, go to sleep
on Mammy's knee;
Journey back to Dixie-land in
dreams again with me;
It seems like your Mammy was
there once again,
And the darkies were strummin'
that old refrain.
'Way down in Missouri, where I
learned this lullaby,
Where the stars were blinkin' and the moon was climbin' high;
And I hear Mammy Chloe, as in days long ago,
Singin' hush-a-bye.

"MY TEN YEARS IN THE STUDIOS" by George Arliss.

The famous actor's modest and genial account of his ten years on the screen, making pictures in both England and Hollywood.

"THE STRANGE LIVES OF ONE MAN," by Ely Culbertson.

Revelation of the real man behind the enigmatic figure of the bridge expert. Here is also the charming romance of his American father and Cossack mother in the Caucasus; here are the three brothers, Ely, the bridge player, Sasha, the violinist, and Eugene, the monk. Caught in the maelstrom of the Russian revolution, these related families fought for survival.

"MY AMERICAN," by Stella Gibbons.

The boy and the girl were children when they first met; the boy goes back to his American home and does not meet the girl again until he has gone from riches to disgrace, and the girl has achieved fame as a writer. A genuine romance—and somehow we can believe in the happy ending.

"THE BIRD IN THE TREE," by Elizabeth Goudge.

The love of children, the wisdom and charm of an old lady with the fitting traditions of her house (lying there between forest and estuary) and the reader, too, sees that, though man's life is bound to sorrow and trouble as a tree is rooted in the earth, yet his spirit has wings like the bird in the tree.

"FAILURE OF A MISSION," by Sir Neville Henderson.

The personal record of the British Ambassador to Berlin during those most difficult months of 1937 to 1939.

"STAR GAZER," by Zsolt von Harsanyi.

An excellent biography, in fiction form, of the life and times of the Renaissance scientist, Galileo (Galilei). Here is no fancy-dress novel, for the past comes to life, and another age is reconstructed in the growth and suffering of one of its most brilliant figures.

"I MARRIED ADVENTURE," by Osa Johnson.

Written as a memorial to the great explorer with the camera, here is the life of Osa and Martin Johnson, who for 20 years faced life and adventure together in dangerous jungles in far corners of the world.

"GHOSTS OF LONDON," by H. V. Morton.

The ghosts of ancient customs that still survive in the London of today.

"MINE INHERITANCE," by Frederick Niven.

The story of the Selkirk Settlement, the first important British settlement in the Canadian West. Against this historical background we have the story of David Baxter, a young clerk in the service of Miles Macdonell, the first governor, during the early, difficult times of these courageous Scottish folk. The adaptation of life to adverse conditions, the will to live freely and at peace, is of special value in our times.

"THROUGH CHINA'S WALL," by Graham Peck.

Vivid pictures (quite literally) of the real China. Here are the colors, the sounds, the smells that make a country seem alive. We look upon the new capital, so little known outside; the rivers, the roads and plains, the mountains; here is China at one of the turning points of her long history.

"AFRICAN HAZARD," by P. W. Rainier.

The author was born in a tent in Swaziland; ox wagons are his first recollections, and Zulu kings his first boyhood heroes. A hard life and an adventurous one followed. He skirmished with Boer soldiers; travelled with Chris Human, the elephant man, in search of diamonds; made an expedition in search of King Gungunyana's buried treasure; when the War came he became one of Demilion's troop of Scouts and took part in the epic ride of 300 miles in seven days on one day's rations, catching the Germans unprepared.

" RING AT THE DOOR," by George Sava.

Personal experiences of twenty cases by the surgeon of "The Healing Knife." "In the course of time I have come to guess the personality of the caller by the manner of the ring at the door. Very often my guesses prove to be surprisingly correct. . . ."

"OH, PROMISED LAND," by James Street.

"816 pages of this fine novel of life on the Southwestern frontiers at the end of the 18th and the beginning of the 19th century—and hardly a dull one among them." Frontier settlements, Indian fighting, Andrew Jackson and the massacre at Fort Mims, love and hate, here is good narrative adventure.

"THIS WAY SOUTHWARD," by A. F. Tschiffely.

"Get you up this way Southward; and see the land what it is, and the people that dwelleth therein." Tschiffely rides again—Southward through Patagonia.

"EMPRESS OF THE DUSK," by J. W. Vandercook.

A girl of the streets who ruled an empire—the life of Theodora of Byzantium. In the year 500 the world seemed old—but to the reader of this romance in high places, there lives again the vitality, and the splendor of ancient Constantinople, Antioch, Alexandria.

"WITCH IN THE WOOD," by T. H. White.

A successor to "The Sword in the Stone," which wise fantasy so variously delighted a variety of readers.

RED CROSS NOTES

Canadian Red Cross Helps British and French in Dire Need

A steady flow of new supplies is going overseas as a result of the Canadian Red Cross Society's urgent appeal to women throughout the country to increase their volunteer assistance, stated Mrs Wallace Campbell, National Chairman of the Women's War Work Committee.

"The response has been marvellous," she said. "Our enormous stocks of hospital supplies in England have been made available to the British and French Red Cross without stint. The conflict now raging makes our fullest cooperation and generosity not only necessary, but imperative," she asserted.

"Articles are going out in thousands to relieve the urgent calls," Mrs. Campbell continued. "The appalling losses of British and French Red Cross supplies as well as the terrific number of sick and injured refugees and the wounded of the Allied forces make replacements of our stocks in our warehouses in England a pressing responsibility."

WORD OF CAUTION

Along with her tribute to the women of Canada for the manner in which they rallied to the call, Mrs. Campbell gave a word of caution.

"To meet our needs wisely and to make both effort and funds most effective, everyone should bear in mind that the most-needed articles should be produced first. All work conveners should endeavor to use up all the materials they have on hand for the purpose for which they were intended."

She urged women to "be patient." The war and its demands made equal call upon everyone, she said.

"There are many things greatly needed by the Red Cross that we women canot make with our hands. Provision must be made for these.

SERVE EMPIRE

"Let the true spirit of service prevail. Do the job nearest at hand, grateful for the privilege of serving our Empire from the present safety of Canada, and pray that our small effort may contribute to the alleviation of the horrible sufferings of our own people and our Allies.

"It is as necessary now as it was when ewe began our work to make every article as nearly perfect as possible," Mrs. Campbell asserted. "There must be no slackening in the quality of work."

Bitter Blow to French as Near-Deserted Paris Falls; Set Up New Line

City Evacuated by Midnight, Only a Few Remaining in Shuttered Buildings; Destroy All Factories

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Paris was abandoned today to save it from destruction and the Allies established a new line West of the capital into which German troops marched for the first time since 1871 when they besieged the city for 3½ months.

Citizens were spared the anguish of those days which the oldest people remembered — days when a dead cat or rat fetched a good price on the produce market.

In Tours, the first temporary seat of government, however, the man who announced the fall of the capital to newspapermen had tears in his eyes, as did most French men and women everywhere.

It did not signify defeat of the French bu tit was a severe sentimental blow.

Backed up Westward, French and British troops, some of whom had not slept for five days, fought desperately to preserve their lines during the withdrawal from Paris positions. They were tired and the Germans continued to throw fresh troops against them.

From Britain more soldiers were rushed to help the beleaguered French and popular feeling demanded collection of every available weapon and piece of equipment for the troops.

Paris fell nine days after the start of the German offensive against it and 36 days after the blitzkrieg started to roll through Belgium and Holland.

The attack to which the city has yielded started in the vicinity of Sedan where the French were defeated by Bismarck's Prussians in the war of 1870 and the last Emperor Napoleon captured. That battle also led to Paris—but in a far longer time than in this war.

A new straw blew up in today's wind when General Francisco Franco's Spanish troops occupied the international zone of Tangiers in French-ruled Morocco.

The significance of the move was not immediately apparent. The Spaniards said it had been made in agreement with the French to assure the neutrality of the zone but it was recalled Spain only a few days ago proclaimed itself non-belligerent rather neutral.

FACTORIES DESTROYED

LONDON, June 14 (CP).—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Paris today said big French armaments factories in the suburbs of Paris were blown up before the Germans entered the French capital.

Paris was almost a deserted city, the dispatch said. The French who remained while most of the population fled stayed in their homes or sat in their shops with the shutters down.

All buildings and bridges, it said, were left intact.

LONDON, June 14 (CP). — The last evacuees from Paris left there at midnight last night, according to a dispatch of the Exchange Telegraph Company, datelined Paris.

At that hour, the dispatch said, orders were given for the gates of the city to be closed by police and civil guards.

The French army, it continued, had begun to fall back on either side of the city, according to prearranged plans, to a line well South of Paris.

To avoid the possibility of collision and confusion, orders were given for no more persons to be allowed to leave Paris, the Agency said.

German motor machine-gun posts were established inside the gates, it declared.

Paris is a city of the dead, the dispatch continued, with every shop closed and shutters up.

All these had handed in their weapons to become a rigidly civilian body.

The Prime Minister made his speech after putting on the House record a copy of Winston Churchill's pledge to France yesterday.

Mr. King said he had informed Premier Reynaud that the people of Canada had heard "with deep emotion" the various broadcasts of the French Premier and watched "with the pride of kinsmen" the gallant stand of the French armies.

Every word in Mr. Churchill's message to France yesterday, Mr. King told Mr. Reynaud "eloquently expresses the passion and faith of the Canadian people. Canada pledges to France as she has to Britain, her unwavering support to the utmost limits of her power and resources."

He said he believed this would be true of the entire North American continent.

Commenting on the situation, the Prime Minister mentioned suggestions that the war might bring a union of the French and British nations. Canada would rejoice at such an outcome, Mr. King said.

Spanish Troops Occupy Tangier

MADRID, June 14 (AP). — Spanish troops have occupied the International zone of Tangier in the name of the Sultan of Morocco to "safeguard the independence and neutrality of the city," a Foreign Ministry Spokesman announced today.

Two divisions of troops and a destroyer effected the occupation, it was reported.

An official note on the Spanish occupation of the International zone opposite Gibraltar said:

"With the object of guaranteeing the neutrality of the zone and the City of Tangier, the Spanish Government has decided provisionally to take over the services of vigilance, police and security, and forces have entered this morning with that object. All existing services are guaranteed and will continue functioning normally."

Tangier was internationalized under a treaty signed before the first Great War and later made permanently neutral by the convention of 1923. Spain reopened the question and in an accord signed in 1928 received police powers in the zone, which has an area of 225 square miles.

It was explained semi-officially that today's action was taken under those police powers after consultation with the interested nations.

The occupation had been approved by the International Commission governing the zone.

"Mine Inheritance" . . .

NIVEN'S WORK IS CHOICE OF BOOK SOCIETY

By JAMES RYLEY

"In writing 'Mine Inheritance', I attempted to give a true and living picture of the founding of the first British settlement in Western Canada and to pay tribute to that striking Scot, Lord Selkirk," said Frederick Niven, famous Canadian-Scottish writer of the Kootenays at his Willow Point home as he described his latest and most popular novel, which describes so accurately through the eyes of David Baxter, ficticiously a young clerk in the employ of the Settlement, the story of the Selkirk Settlement on the Red River.

The novel, which goes on sale in Canada today, was chosen by the Book Society of London as the book of the month for May in England, thus becoming the first Canadian book ever honored in such a manner. It was published May 6th, in London by Collins, publishers, and the London Observer says that 15,000 copies were sold in the first week. Collins are also the publishers in Canada. It is to go on sale in the United States in the Fall, published there by the Macmillan Company of New York. This is the first one of his chosen as Book of the Month, but others have been recommended by the Book Society. They are "Mrs. Barry", "The Flying Years", "Triumph", and his 1939 book, "The Story of Their Days".

Sitting at his Willow Point home in these days, quietly writing his books, with two, much scribbled-on sheets of cardboard tied together with string, as a base on his knee, his faithful tousled canine friend at his feet, is a far cry from those mad rushing days of 1899 when he first came to Nelson. "Who's Who" has called him "somewhat of a rolling stone"—he was born in Valparaiso, Chile, on March 31, 1878, 62 years ago; educated at Hutchesons' Grammar School, Glasgow and the Glasgow School of Art; was in the Ministry of Food and later the Ministry of Information, the Propaganda Service, in the First Great War—and has crossed the Atlantic several times—but this "stone", has stopped rolling since his war days and has settled down in his home on the shores of this jewel-like Kootenay Lake. "I always have to come back to Nelson to write," he says as he gazes fondly round the shelves covered with books—hundreds of them. There are a few copies of his own books, but these are fewer than at one time for lately he has been donating them to soldiers' libraries. It is in this haven that he has composed his stirring epics of Canadian life.

It was also here that he wrote a heart-warming memorial to the late Lord Tweedsmuir after the beloved Governor General's death early this year. He entitled it "John Buchan—In Memoriam", for it was as Colonel John Buchan, head of the Ministry of Information, that Mr. Niven first met him. When the Canadian-Scottish writer entered the Foreign Office, his application for a position was as of secondary importance, for after a few formalities and technicalities, Colonel Buchan swung the conversation to talk of Canada and its romance. In fact before there was any talk of propaganda or a position, the Colonel met the writer with the words: "So you put me in a book!"

Reflecting on those words, Mr. Niven says: "Yes, I had, in a way: In one of my earlier novels I had made a character read his 'Sir Quixote of the Moors', and that novel of mine he had read."

In Nelson in 1899

It was in 1899—two years after Nelson's incorporation—that this literary Scot arrived in Nelson and swung a pick shoulder to shoulder with other pioneers in making the city's streets. He also trundled freight at the C. P. R. depot and handled a cant hook and peavey in B. C. logging camps. Perhaps this was too much for him, for when he reported for duty at the start of the First Great War, the doctors told him his "pump" was not as strong as it might be.

He clearly recalls John Houston, Nelson's first mayor, making his first speech from a balcony on the Hume Hotel, with the cheering crowds beneath him.

In his early days in Nelson he helped to level off the grade leading down to the station. "There used to be a steep little hill with a sharp turn at the bottom," he said. Perhaps his most pungent memory of that work is when in tearing down an old log cabin beside the road, he stuck his pick into a coal-oil can full of eggs of "ripe" vintage. "They went off like so many fire-crackers, and the boss left me to do what I liked—or could," he reflects with a laugh.

In October, 1900, the following year, he made his first return home. He made that voyage as a "cattleman" aboard a freighter with a cargo of cattle. He was paid the equivalent of $7.00 for the trip, and at the end received a certificate of discharge with the stamped conduct report, "Very Good" across the bottom. Though faded, the certificate is still framed and rests among the Niven "archives".

Meditating over conversation regarding the present world conflict, the author says, "When I think of the advances science has made, and then think of the uses to which they are being put, it makes me feel very depressed. When you get to my age, you see things in a different light and such things make you downhearted. The world is in a terrible state these days, but one can only hope for something better to come when this is all over."

Digs Into History

Fifteen long, tedious months of digging through more than 70 volumes of Canadian histories linked with the Settlement were required to write this stirring epic of hardship and pioneer toil. "But I have a great feeling of satisfaction when I think how it has been appreciated," the slightly stooped novelist said with a smile and a quiet air of thoughtfully realizing the result of a hard job well done.

Only a month out of the hands of the publishers, the book has extracted the highest praise from many critics.

Perhaps the highlight of these is the honor paid Mr. Niven by Sylvia Lynd in the Book Society News for May. She says: "Mr. Niven gives us not only a novel of adventures in his new book, but a novel that relates in accurate detail a chapter of Canadian history; the first agricultural settlement in the Canadian West. He is the right man to have written it for he is a writer conscious of well ordered prose, but—equally important on the present occasion—of the charm of raciness in language . . . He writes with subtle understanding of the various questions involved. It is, in effect, a miniature war of aggression that he describes among the stout log huts of the Red River; and the methods of the North-West Company, their trick of weakening, dividing and disarming the settlers as a prelude to attacking them, is an interesting parallel to the recent political events in Europe. That the settlers got the best of it, in spite of lies, deception and superiority of armaments, is a good moral and a happy augury. This is the sort of book that contains a double value with its pages of excitement that readers of every age can enjoy, and its fine interpretation of history and character. This book should be a permanent possession for every Canadian (or Scotsman or Englishman) who cares about his Empire's history."

Five other reviews we have seen of the book show a cross-section of the sweeping success it has enjoyed across the Atlantic.

Vernon Fane, in the Sphere, says "Mine Inheritance proves Mr. Frederick Niven once again and beyond any doubt to be in that short front rank of our finest novelists . . . a story of heroism and sturdy endurance, and there is poetry in Mr. Niven's telling of history well told."

The Manchester Evening Chronicle praises it in this way: ". . . well told dramatic story. Mr. Niven's talent is strong and the impact of its work is fresh, grateful, and enduring."

'True Grandeur'

Dennis Wheatley, in Current Literature, says: "Such books as this should be in every home for the children to read as well as the grown-ups, since they tell of the true grandeur that lies behind the dull list of dates that children know as history, and give a real conception of our splendid inheritance . . . a magnificent story."

The Bulletin and Scots Pictorial says: "There is a steady background of finely sweeping action, picturesquely peopled, lit by brilliant scene and vivid incident; a particularly fine example of the best kind of historical romance."

On the preface of the book is a quotation from a speech of His Majesty King George VI when he spoke in Canada during his Dominion tour, on May 30th, 1939: ". . . the task for those today is the development of the heritage already secured by those who went before."

While pleased over the success of his new book, Mr. Niven's happiness must be greatly enhanced by the knowledge that another of his books, "The Flying Years", has been included in the new Ontario course of study for Grade XII literature, and that several professors and reviewers have said that "Mine Inheritance" should be in the course of studies in all schools because of the history contained in it. "The Flying Years" is described as an unforgettable picture of Western Canada in the 60's and 70's by Professor Macdonald of Toronto who says that it "must be included in any list of the ten best Canadian novels."

Dr. W. E. Wallace, of the Toronto University Library: Professor Macdonald; Sylvia Lynd; Professor Allison, of the University of Manitoba, all state that the latest book—"Mine Inheritance"—should be included in all schools for its historical value.

Asked how he came to write the book, Mr. Niven said: "In March, 1938, I received a request from the editor of the Scottish quarterly, 'Scotland', to write an article on Scots in Canada. While at work on that the idea came to me to write a novel on the Red River Settlement, the Selkirk Settlement. The first thing I had to do was to find all the histories and records I could dealing with that period. I wrote to Dr. W. K. Lamb, Provincial Librarian and Archivist at Victoria, for the loan of several volumes of history which I read. Franklin F. Appleton, Director of the Collins Publishers in Canada, was in London conferring with the firm there regarding future publications. Mr. Collins said it was about time that a Canadian historical novel was written and asked Mr. Appleton who he would suggest as the writer. On his return to Canada, Mr. Appleton wrote asking if I would write one and enclosing a lengthy bibliography relating to Canadian history for my perusal. I wrote back and said I had already been working on such a story for two months. Then I went to Winnipeg to get more data at the Provincial Library and Archives of Manitoba. Mr. J. L. Johnston, the archivist and librarian, was more than kind to me when I explained my mission. He gave me a comfortable chair by a big table and gave me many more books to consult than those I asked him for, piling volume after volume—over 70 altogether—in front of me.

"As I Sit Writing . . ."

In his comfortable living room, Mr. Niven is shown as he wrote the manuscript for "Mine Inheritance" on the two pen-marked sheets of cardboard he uses as a base to rest on his knee. He does not write all his copy, however; at times he paces up and down the room dictating to his wife who takes it down on a typewriter. Mrs. Niven plays by no means a small part in her husband's books. She is his veritable calendar, for whenever the date of some happening slips his mind, he has only to pause, and she fills in. She knows just where to lay her hand on any correspondence for him and types and retypes all his manuscripts. The former Mary Pauline Thorne-Quelch, whom he married in 1911, she is a gracious, charming woman, coming of a family devoted to the dramatic art. She has been associated with literary work and literary people almost since school days.

Mr. Niven Brings New Honors to Kootenay

A signal honor has come to Kootenay.

"Mine Inheritance", the latest book of Frederick Niven, who lives at Willow Point, near Nelson, has been chosen by the English Book Society, the European counterpart of the American Book of the Month Club.

The Book Society has to make its choices with care. If it does not, it soon hears from its thousands of members. Its selection committee is headed by Sir Hugh Walpole.

It has built up a reputation for selecting brilliant and interest-compelling fiction of high literary quality.

"Mine Inheritance" fulfills all these requirements. There is not a dull page in it. Its character-delineation is brilliant. Its mastery in the use of the English language is Mr. Niven at his best. And no English writer of this day excels him in the choice of exactly the right word, in the artistry of the weaving of words into a perfect tapestry of beautiful English, meaningful, precise, symphonic.

The story is that of the tribulations, the disappointments and the triumphs of Lord Selkirk's Red River Settlers. Its historical background is true, it is human, it is romantic and it is exciting.

It is Mr. Niven's greatest book.

Ancient Lawsuits

Among these were the House of Commons reports published in England regarding the lawsuits between the Hudson's Bay Company and the North-West Co., which were tried in Canada during that hectic period of settlement. That was a real job in itself, for it appeared that the judges were frequently partial to the North-West Company, so I had to be judge and jury and sift all the evidence of many witnesses down to arrive at a fair account of it all. I perused pile after pile of books, copying notes all the while.

"When I had secured my notes, I went right down the Red River several times to the shores of Lake Winnipeg to get a deeper impression of what those pioneers saw and did. I went to the site of the settlement where some of the old cabins are still standing. In an old church, the boards on which those people knelt to pray are still covered with buffalo hide. This is slowly wearing away but it has been preserved as much as possible. We returned to Nelson in August."

Asked which book or series of books he found as his most valuable authority, Mr. Niven thought for some time, silently enumerating those from which he had gained his greatest amount of knowledge. "It's hard to say," he slowly reflected, "but I would say Professor Chester Martin's 'Lord Selkirk's Work in Canada' was the best authority. Running close to this, however, were the House of Commons Reports of the trials, "Papers Relating to the Red River Settlement," published by the House of Commons, and the "Letter Book" of Captain Miles Macdonell, first Governor of the Settlement, whose letters were preserved."

One of the outstanding features of Mr. Niven's book is the fact that he practically rewrote the book three times before it rolled from the publisher's presses. The final rewriting was due to the fact that he came to the decision that it ought to have been a first person book instead of a third person one as he had first written it. He "dissolved" his original book, changing it from the third person view and made one of the characters, David Baxter, tell the story.

After digging, delving and writing for 15 months, he had sent off the manuscript and it was the Collins Company's intention to publish the book September 4, 1939.

"I stopped publication by a wire which I sent off June 22, reading: "Would first person improve Inheritance? If think so cable for time's sake. I have copy of typed manuscript here. Could work on about a month, so publication still this year."

No word came within a few days so he sent a second wire, June 25, with more "punch" to it, reading: "Changing to first person. Remarkable improvement, strengthens David in story. Hope ardently not too late. Please cable. Could mail July 12."

Choosing a Title

The Company's answer by cable the following day, stated: "Agree if first person more satisfactory. Preferably publish January, thus giving you more time revision."

But not to delay publication too long after the date originally suggested by his publishers he worked on that final version as they say twenty-four hours a day and when the job was done was laid up with a strained heart for several months. For the doctors who pulled him through he spoke some words of, clearly, very sincere gratitude for much kindness and interest. Asked how he came by the title he said: "The title is not mine. The director of the Collins House, wrote that he liked all the book except the title. I had called it 'Red River Shore.' He suggested 'Mine Inheritance', from the XVIth Psalm. I know that I am weak on titles and gladly accepted his." Asked what are his own favorites among his books Mr. Niven remarked, "With about 20 books to think over, it is hard to make up my mind which ones I most enjoyed writing, of course, 'Mine Inheritance' comes first and foremost in my heart, but other favorites of mine are "The Flying Years", "Mrs. Barry," and "A Tale That Is Told.

"Mine Inheritance" is perhaps a bit longer than the usual novel, containing nearly 120,000 words whereas the usual book has about 100,000.

Some of Mr. Niven's books have been set up in Braille type for the blind. Chief among these is "Triumph", packed with colorful descriptions of South America.

In Deep Concentration

Hailed as one who "writes prose like a lover," Mr. Niven sits in the living room of his Willow Point home, thinking of the plot for a new story. Here he evolved the story of "Mine Inheritance."

Nestled in Sylvan Woods; Here His Thoughts Flow Freely

"I always have to come back to Nelson to write" says this great author. And small wonder, for in this haven, pictured through a verdant foliage of cedar, with rose bushes twining round the windows, his thoughts flow freely. Four miles from Nelson by car or boat, nestling on the shore of Kootenay Lake, its cosy atmosphere is inspiration to him. Mr. Niven is shown in front of his home.

It was here that the late Bliss Carman, famed Canadian poet, stayed when he was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Niven in 1932. They took him to the Molly Gibson Mine, and for a trip on the now dismantled steamer Kuskanook to Kootenay Landing. For that latter trip, the poet autographed a picture of the Kuskanook sailing up the lake, with "Bliss Carman, October 17, 1932" in the upper right hand corner. Mr. Niven is the proud possessor of a Navajo Indian green turquoise silver ring, for which he exchanged a silver ring with the poet. The turquoise and the silver both turn dull during dull weather but shine in fair weather.

After his Molly Gibson trip, Bliss Carman was tired, so Mr. and Mrs. Niven left him sitting quietly in the living room. He was murmuring to himself: "Yellow woods, yellow woods" over and over, thinking of the gorgeous Autumnal colors he had seen that day. Mr. Niven after a time peeped in, but the poet was still sitting there in the same position, still murmuring of the "yellow woods."

As the train pulled out, taking the poet on his way, he and Mr. Niven held up their ring fingers as a last salute of deep friendship.

Cleveland Indians Protest Vitt Actions; Vitt May Be on Way Out

By RAY BLOSSER
Associated Press Sports Writer

CLEVELAND, June 14 (AP). — Looking at Oscar Vitt today, you'd say he was a man who had no fear of being kicked out of his job.

He looked calm. He joked. His Cleveland Indians, close to first place, talked about the war—the European one, not the battle they started when half of them painted the Tribe manager as the jittery, terrible-tongued Mr. Vitt and demanded that he befired.

"Well, I see we've chased the war off page one," Vitt remarked to the players at the usual clubhouse strategy session before today's 8-0 victory over Philadelphia.

"I'm sorry about the unfortunate thing that has happened, but I've talked the situation over with the big boss and he told me I'm remaining in charge and he's investigating the complaint which some of you made."

But there was no doubt that Vitt, beneath the surface, was stung by developments. And there was considerable belief tonight the loquacious ex-third baseman, who appeared on the Cleveland scene in 1938 after pronounced success at Newark, was on the way out. If so, it was expected that Coach Luke Sewell, longtime Cleveland catcher who is popular with the players, would be named at least acting manager.

The "big boss" is Alva Bradley, Indians' President. Bradley conferred about an hour with Vitt to start an inquiry into charges of 12 players that Vitt ridiculed them and ruined their morale.

Medwick Sparks Dodgers to Win Over Reds; Hamlin Gives Two Hits

Allen Comes Near Shutout for Cleveland

By The Canadian Press

Inspired by the vision of a National League pennant, Brooklyn Dodgers performed like men of destiny today as they conquered Cincinnati's champion Reds 2-0 on the five-hit hurling of Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin.

The debut of Slugging Joe Medwick as a Dodger and the natural lustre of a clash between the leading rivals for the flag brought out a noisy, typically Brooklyn crowd of 27,998 fans.

Medwick covered an amazing amount of territory in making six putouts in left field and batted in one of the Dodgers' two runs.

The triumph gave the Dodgers a game lead over Cincinnati, with three games in the series still to be played tomorrow and Sunday.

Refreshed by three days' rest and bolstered by the effective pitching of Dick Errickson, Boston Bees turned on Chicago Cubs and gained their first victory in eight starts against Gabby Hartnett's forces by a 4-2 margin.

New York Giants ran their winning streak to seven straight and stayed in the thick of the National League pennant race by turning back Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6. The victory left the Giants only one game back of the second place Reds, who lost to the Dodgers.

St. Louis Cardinals came through today for Billy Southworth, their new manager, with a 6-2 National Baseball League victory over Philadelphia Phillies.

Ernie Koy, obtained in the Brooklyn deal involving Ducky Medwick, got two safeties, one a triple.

Only five outs separated Johnny Allen from an American League no-hit pitching triumph today. Sam Chapman spoiled that dream with a single over Shortstop Lou Boudreau's head, but Allen turned in a two-hit, 8-0 shutout for Cleveland in the opener of a four-game series with Philadelphia Athletics.

Allen opened by walking Benny McCoy and then retired 22 batters in order.

Five-hit pitching by 19-year-old Harold Newhouser and a timely 13-blow attack enabled Detroit Tigers to beat Washington Senators 10-1 today in their opening game of a long home stand. The Senators made four misplays, all of which helped the Detroit cause.

The Boston Red Sox rode to a 5-1 victory over the White Sox on Denny Galehouse's steady seven-hit pitching before 40,104 in Chicago's first night game of the season in Comiskey Park.

The New York Yankees pummelled four pitchers for 17 hits and a 12-3 victory over the St. Louis Browns in a night fixture at St. Louis. Charley Keller hit two homers for the Yankees.

Monte Pearson scattered the Browns' blows in all except one inning in hanging up his sixth triumph.

The Yankees counted four runs on five hits, including Keller's second homer with Red Rolfe on base in the fifth, and tallied five more on five hits in the sixth. Keller's first homer gave New York a run in the first.

Manager Fred Haney was chased from the Browns' bench during the Yankees' sixth-inning uprising for protesting Umpire Joe Rule's decision calling Flash Gordon safe at second on a close play. A crowd of 17,970 saw the game.

Picard, Revolta Assume Lead in Four-Ball Golf

TOLEDO, O., June 4 (AP) — Defending champion Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta ripped 15 strokes off par today in the second and third rounds to assume a commanding lead as the half-way mark approached in the sixth.. annual $6400.. Inverness four-ball matches.

By going 10 strokes under par with a brilliant 61 on the morning round, the two stars soared to a "plus 11" rating, but they fell to a "plus 10" in the third round as they dropped a one-hole decision despite a neat best ball of 66.

The 61, which tied the Inverness best-ball record set by Sam Snead and Vic Ghezzi, gave the champions a seven-up victory over the veteran Walter Hagen and Byron Nelson, home pro and 1939 national open king.

In the afternoon Picard and Revolta finished one down to Gene Sarazen and Clayton Heafner, Sarazen canning a long putt on the final hole to win.

The all-star field of 16 turned in 88 birdies in today's jaunts around the tough Inverness course. That brought the three-round birdie total to 128.

Back of the leaders, with a "plus five" rating were Jug McSpaden, the Canadian open titlist, and Lawson Little, new national open king. The two leaders meet Saturday morning.

Natal-Michel Nine Blanks Cranbrook

NATAL, B.C.—Behind the five-hit pitching of Tom Krall, the Natal-Michel Buffaloes registered their first shutout of the season when they white-washed the Cranbrook Seniors, 12-0, in the first of a home-and-home game series at the Natal Ball Park June 9.

The game was close for four innings with the Buffaloes scoring single runs in the second and fourth inning before falling on the offerings of Mather, Cranbrook pitcher, to score 10 of their runs in three big innings. While Krall was allowing but five hits and striking out nine batters his team mates were collecting 12 safeties. Sedlish had a perfect day at bat with four hits and a walk to drive in seven of the Buffalo runs. The win was the Buffaloe's fourth straight at home. Cranbrook was credited with six errors while the Buffaloes were making but two. The return game will be played at Cranbrook in the near future. The game was umpired by J. Josay and J. Krall of Natal.

Rank Outsider Pays Betters $445 for $2

BOSTON, June 14 (AP) — The longshot wager's fond dream became a reality today when R. C. Groof's five-year-old mare Sue Harpen, which closed at 221-1, romped to victory in a mile and an eighth race at Suffolk Downs.

Sue Harpen, winner in only one of her last 27 starts, came under the wire in 1:54, 2½ lengths in front of E. P. Bixer's Reminding, another rank outsider. Sue Harpen returned $145.20, $146.40 and $61.70 on $2 win, place and show tickets.

The crowd of 10,009 wagered only $107 on her to out-foot her 11 rivals.

Nelson at Trail Sunday for Ball

With first place in the West Kootenay Baseball League again at stake, the Nelson Seniors travel to Trail Sunday for their second engagement of the season with the Indians. The two teams met in Nelson three weeks ago, and the Indians captured a 12-11 decision.

At present the three teams are in a tie for the leadership. Cardinals and Nelson have two wins and as many defeats each, and the Indians have one and one.

The Nelson pitching selection was unknown Friday but it is expected either "Lefty Mydansky, who has given two brilliant performances already this season, or Steve Smith, another southpaw, will go to the mound for the Lakesiders. The Trail choice will probably again be "Red" Tulloch, who gained credit for the first victory over Nelson. Les Christensen and Carl Loblick will be available for relief.

The remainder of the Nelson line-up has been juggled, Tommy McInnes moving in from the hot corner for the catching chore. Coach Ray Humble will be at first, Roy Anderson at second, Al Euerby at third and Carl Locatelli at short. The outfield will be chosen from "Doc" Chodorcoff, Ernie Beland, Jesse Seaby, Vic Howard and Steve Scott. Jack Fisher, one of the outfield regulars, is unable to make the trip on account of work, and Gordon Richardson, first string catcher, will be on the sidelines nursing a split thumb.

Maki Fined $10 for Parking on Sidewalk

Adi Maki pleaded guilty to a charge of parking his car so it projected over the sidewalk and was fined $10 when he appeared before Police Magistrate William Brown Friday morning.

Constable R. R. He said that there were four other cars there, all parked properly. The blacktop on the street was black and the concrete sidewalk was white so that Maki should have made no mistake in parking.

Maki, through Mrs. Ida Salo, Finnish interpreter, stated that there was little or no difference between the level of the street and the sidewalk and did not notice that he was on the sidewalk.

In an author's acknowledgment which is initialed "F.N." Mr. Niven says: My thanks are due to: Dr. W. Kaye Lamb, Provincial Librarian and Archivist, British Columbia, for the loan of several volumes. Mr. J. L. Johnston, Provincial Librarian and Archivist, Manitoba, for his interest in my researches relative to this story, and for a chair and a suitably spacious table in Parliament Buildings, Winnipeg, and a right of many more books than I asked him for.

Mr. John Murray Gibbon for lending me from his private library, two or three volumes now hard to discover at the booksellers.

Mr. Franklin F. Appleton, for the happy jog he provided by writing to ask me for such a book as this (unaware I was already employed upon it), and enclosing in the letter, weight to the plea, a fine list of volumes relating to its period; also for giving me the title: "Mine Inheritance."

While perusing the huge bibliography of historical books of the Province of Manitoba library, Mr. Niven ran across the diary of John McLeod, one of the chief historical characters in "Mine Inheritance." The original manuscript had been preserved in the archives at Ottawa, but in the Manitoba library is a first copy of it made by Mr. McLeod's son and with marginal notes by him.

Mrs. Niven made a typewritten copy for her husband and entered the marginal notes of John McLeod's son in her own handwriting. The copy is now among Mr. Niven's collection of trophies and keepsakes.

Increase in May Ferry Traffic May Be Due American Tourists Coming

An increase in traffic carried on Nelson district ferries during May 1940 over May 1939 may be due to the increase in United States tourist traffic expected this year because of war conditions in Europe; officials at the Nelson office of the Provincial Department of Public Works said.

The increases were not as large as in some other months, but the tourist season had not really got into full swing in May. The largest increase was noted on the Nelson ferry which is on the Southern Transprovincial Highway. Other substantial gains were shown on the Harrop-Longbeach, Kootenay River at Creston, and Nick's Island ferries but these were not on tourist roads.

NELSON FERRY GAINS

Making 31 more round trips in May 1940 than a year ago, the Nelson ferry carried 649 more passengers and 295 more passenger cars. There were 128 fewer trucks carried than a year ago, but 205½ more tons of freight were transported.

Despite a decrease of 48 passenger cars from a year ago, the Main Lake Ferry Nasookin carried 156 more passengers. It made 93 round trips in May each year.

The Harrop-Longbeach ferry made 22 more round trips and carried 202 more passenger cars, although 105 fewer passengers used the ferry.

With an earlier growing season when farming machinery and workmen moved earlier in the year, the Kootenay River ferry at Creston made 86 round trips more and carried 441 more passengers. This was despite 84 fewer passenger cars.

The Nick's Island ferry made 144 round trips this year as compared with 100 last year and its traffic was up accordingly. It did not operate until May 11, 1939.

U. S. Farmers Status Little Changed by European Conflict

CHICAGO, June 14 (AP). — Collapse of the war boom in farm commodities has thrown the American farmers' economic status back almost to the pre-war basis of last Summer, analysis of market statistics showed today.

Compared with prices last August 31, the day before war started, wheat is about 15 per cent higher, corn 34 per cent up, oats 14 per cent up, rye five per cent up, butter eight per cent up, cattle 16 per cent higher and cotton 20 per cent higher.

Compared with a year ago wheat is seven per cent higher, corn 20 per cent up, oats three per cent lower, rye 12 per cent down, eggs unchanged, butter eight per cent higher, cattle and cotton slightly higher and hogs 22 per cent lower.

Thus, market statisticians pointed out, farmers' prospects for material betterment of prices as a result of war have evaporated, at least for the time being.

EXCHANGE MARKETS

MONTREAL, June 14 (CP). — British and foreign exchange, noonal rates between banks only:

Argentina, peso, .2411.

China, Hong Kong dollars, .2586.

France, franc, .0250-33¼.

Switzerland, franc, .2490.

(Compiled by The Royal Bank of Canada).

Closing exchange rates:

At Montreal—Pound: Buying 4.43, selling 4.47; U. S. dollar: Buying 1.10, selling 1.11; franc: Buying 2.50⅛, selling 2.53⅛.

NEW YORK, June 14 (AP). — Business in the French franc came to a standstill today as German legions marched through Paris and disrupted financial connections with the United States.

Local foreign money dealers quoted a price of 2.18 U. S. cents for the franc, a nominal figure unchanged from the previous day.

Bankers explained it was useless to accept business since even the location of the big French banks was unknown. Future rate, it was said, depends on clarification of the present disturbance.

The pound sterling ended 2 down in relation to the dollar, at $3.70. The Swiss franc added .01 of a cent at 22.42 cents.

The Canadian dollar moved up ⅛ cent to 81 cents. (Ottawa Foreign Exchange Control Board rate 9.09-9.91 per cent discount).

Chicago Wheat Up

CHICAGO, June 14 (AP).—Wheat prices scored gains of as much as 2⅛ cents and corn rose 3⅝ cents today as brisk buying developed in the trading pits here.

Expanded market operations, resulting partly from removal of the minimum levels on grain prices which had been in effect for almost four weeks, were witnessed. Trading was at a brisk pace at times.

Much of the gain scored by wheat and corn was retained until the close despite frequent setbacks and rather nervous price fluctuations after the early highs were established. Strength in securities and prospects of additional government purchases of flour this weekend accounted for most of the buying enthusiasm, offsetting news from Europe.

Wheat closed 1—1⅛ cents higher than yesterday, July 79⅛, September 80—80⅛; corn unchanged to 2⅛ higher, July 61¾, September 60⅞—⅞; oats ⅝—1⅛ lower; soy beans 5—8 lower and rye ¾—1½ lower.

Buying, Chicago Firmness Help to Winnipeg Wheat

WINNIPEG, June 14 (CP).—Resting orders attributed to outside interests checked a sharp decline on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today and wheat futures prices finished with losses of little more than a cent after being down over two cents in the early stages. Final quotations were 1⅛—1⅜ cents lower, July at 72¼, October 75 and December 76¾.

Operations were never heavy. Moderate buying by outside houses, plus a return of firmness at Chicago, proved sufficient to take the slack out of the market, however, and values staged a partial recovery.

No overseas business in Canadian wheat could be confirmed.

Buenos Aires wheat prices remained unchanged.

Cash wheat trade was flat except for minor mill purchases of Nos. 2 and 3 Northern. Domestic support in oats provided most of the interest in a dull coarse grain pit.

Wheat shipments from the Argentine totalled 2,972,000 bushels this week compared with 3,267,000 last week and 7,748,000 cleared during the corresponding period a year ago.

Western farmers delivered 846,000 bushels of wheat to country loading points in the last two days against 385,000 unloaded on the same day last year.

Spraying for Control of the Cherry Fruit-Fly Should Now Be Under Way

Arsenate of Lead in Sweet Poison Bait Recommended

Spraying to control the cherry fruit fly should now be under way in the Kootenay District, advises E. C. Hunt, District Horticulturist.

In a pamphlet, "Control of the Cherry Fruit-fly," over the signature of Mr. Hunt and of C. B. Twigg, District Field Inspector at Creston, application of the first spray between June 10 and 20 is recommended. A second spray should be applied about 10 days after the first; and a third spray about a week after the second.

Attack on the adult flies, before they start to lay eggs, is recommended. This is accomplished with a sweetened poison-bait spray treatment to the foliage during the feeding period.

LEAD ARSENATE SPRAY

The recommended spray is: Lead arsenate, one-half pound; molasses or syrup (never honey), two quarts; and water, 10 gallons. This amount is sufficient for about 50 good-sized trees, Mr. Hunt advises, and adds growers should "make up only sufficient for one spr y at a time, since the mixed material will not keep fresh and sweet and therefore will not attract the flies."

Growers are advised to put on the first spray when the adult flies appear, about the time Royal Annes are putting on slight color.

"Apply the solution in fairly fine droplets to the upper surface of the outer leaves and on the sunny sides," growers are directed. "It is also advisable to spray the foliage of adjacent trees and shrubs as well. No expensive spray equipment is essential."

LITTLE SPRAY NEEDED

About a pint to a quart per tree is sufficient.

Rain will largely discount the effect of previous applications and many necessitate a repetition of the spray. There is no object in spraying the fruit.

The cherry fruit-fly is responsible for the worm which appears in cherries, the worm being the maggot of the fly. The adult fly is described as "a two-wing fly about two-thirds the size of the ordinary house-fly, blackish, with the head and legs yellow. The most distinguishing mark is the conspicuous dark cross-bands on the wing."

After passing the Winter in the soil the fly appears during early June. They are present in the orchards for about three weeks, and for about the first 10 days of this period they 'sport' about in the sunshine on the upper surface of the outer leaves, lapping up greedily the droplets of moisture and honeydew deposited on the foliage. After this 10-day period egg-laying begins. The flies sting the cherry and place the egg underneath the surface of the skin of the fruit, where the maggots hatch in about five days.

Home Business Lifts New York

NEW YORK, June 14 (AP).—The stock market turned on bullish heat today as an optimistic band of home business prospects more than counteracted war news.

Steels led the rebound after a hesitant opening. Gains ran to 5 points or so for favorites, at the best. There were occasional letdowns on profit taking and top marks were shaded at the close in many cases.

Bidding was fast enough in the forenoon to put the ticker behind for a brief interval. Dealings were relatively slow during the remainder of the proceedings. Transfers were around 1,000,000 shares.

Prominent stocks in the push included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Loft, Great Northern, Pressed Steel Car, Douglas Aircraft, Montgomery ward, Anaconda, Texas Corp, and J. C. Penney.

Nazis Claim Collapse of Allied Front; Le Havre, Montmedy Taken; Third Phase of "Victory" to Begin

BERLIN, June 14 (AP) — The text of the German High Command's communique today:

"The second phase of the gigantic campaign in the West is victoriously completed.

"The power of resistance of the French Northern front has collapsed. The Seine, Southward from Paris, has been crossed on the broadest front, and Le Havre taken.

"The enemy is in full retreat along the entire front from Paris to the Maginot line at Sedan. At several points our ank and motorized divisions pierced through and overtook the retreating troops.

(Regarding the German claim that the entire Allied front has collapsed British military sources said "We don't believe a word of it." Regarding Le Havre there was no confirmation, but in view of the withdrawal to the South of Paris it appears probable).

"The enemy there fled leaving behind entire equipment. Infantry divisions broke through the defence lines of Paris. Enemy forces were no longer sufficient for protection of the French capital.

MARCH INTO PARIS

"Since this forenoon our victorious troops have been marching into Paris.

"East of the Marne, Vitry-Le-Francois was taken. The Southern fringe of the Argonne forest was reached. Ridge 304 (Deadman's Ridge) Northeast of Verdun was stormed yesterday evening.

"Montmedy, strong pillar of the Maginot line, is conquered.

"The third phase of pursuit of the enemy until final destruction now has begun. This morning our troops on the Saar front also began a frontal attack on the Maginot line.

(The French military spokesman had no specific information on these claimed developments. He said "the unhinging of the position at Montmedy will become inevitable" if the Germans throw their reserves into the battle.)

"Although hampered by weather, our fighting planes and dive-bombers destroyed units on June 13 and also supported armies in ground fighting at many points in the front. . . .

"Extensive destruction was carried out on airports, railroad stations and rail lines—especially in the region East of the Marne.

"In the coastal region of Le Havre we succeeded in sinking two transports and an additional three were damaged, among which was one ship of 10,000 tons.

"Anti-aircraft artillery North of Le Havre sank six enemy transports, considerably damaged an additional three, and forced one English destroyer to run away.

SHIPS SUNK

"The opponent's air losses yesterday amounted to 19 planes. Three were bagged in an air fight, three were shot down by anti-aircraft (guns) and the rest were destroyed on the ground. Two of our own planes are missing.

"One submarine on June 13 sank the British auxiliary cruiser 'Scotstown' of 17,000 registered tons. Another U-boat succeeded in hitting and sinking from the most strongly protected convoy a 12,000-ton transport ship North of the Hebrides."

(The British Admiralty announced the sinking of the Scotstown today but made no mention of the latter claim).

An earlier special communique said:

"The complete collapse of the entire French front between the channel and the Maginot line near Montmedy forced the French command to abandon its first intention to defend the capital. Consequently Paris was declared an open city. At this moment our troops are victoriously entering Paris."

"Activity of small detachments on some sectors of the Alpine front.

"An enemy attempt to capture (No confirmation of activity in this region was available from Allied sources.)

Galizia Hill was driven back.

"In the Central Mediterranean enemy submarines attempted without result to oppose the movement of our fleet. Two enemy submarines were hit and one seriously damaged. (There was no confirmation of any such damage to Allied planes.)

"The air force carried out effective bombardment of air bases in the Tunis area.

"An extensive offensive was carried out against the base of Hyeres with machine-gunning of planes of that airport from a low altitude and then bombing of military establishments, and against the base of Fayence in Provence and military installations of the Toulon base. One plane did not return to its base.
