CUBAN GOVERNMENT MAKES BOLD MOVE

Suddenly Drops All Peace Negotiations, Recalls Offers of Amnesty, and Proceeds to Place All Prominent Liberals Under Arrest.

Havana, Sept. 10.—For a while tonight the prospect for peace looked decidedly more hopeful, the result of the arrival here of one of the peace commissions, which had visited the insurgent leader, with the news that Guerra had formally consented to a suspension of hostilities pending negotiations. But within an hour, it became known that at a special meeting of the cabinet tonight it had been decided to declare all peace projects off. It was agreed that the government could not consider the proposition of the Liberals that President Palma, the vice-president and members of the cabinet should all resign or that a new general election should be held.

President Palma tonight issued a decree suspending all constitutional guarantees in the provinces of Pinar del Rio, Havana and Santa Clara. The law enforcing public order which is equivalent to martial law, also is put in immediate effect in the three provinces named. A supplemental decree has been issued suspending the decree of August 28, concerning important rebels and ordering that the Liberals be brought back and jailed. Both decrees have been communicated to all officers in the district.

Tonight the government also ordered the arrest of practically every prominent Liberal. Alfredo Zeyas, president of the Liberal party, and several others have disappeared. Among other Liberals arrested are Congressmen Florencio Villuendah, Borges and Varona.

When the news of the issuance of these decrees reached the Veterans' peace committee, which was in session at the home of General Menocal, there was an interesting denunciation of President Palma and other members of the government.

Murder and Suicide.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Shortly after ten o'clock, at his residence in Hyde Park, Raymond Crossman, aged 35 years, shot his wife, killing her instantly. He then put two bullets into his own heart and died in a short time. Crossman had not been living with his wife for some tme.

Rose Porter Dead.

Newhaven, Conn., Sept. 10.—Miss Rose Porter, widely known as an author, died at her home here today aged 66 years. She was born in New York. Her burial will take place on Friday at Catskill, N. Y.

SLAUGHTER OF INNOCENTS CONTINUES.

Govenor's Demand on Citizens for Surrender of Terrorists is Followed by Wholesale Killing in Siedlce, Poland.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 11.—Advices from Siedlce received during the night are to the effect that the fighting and bombarding of houses which ceased about midday on Monday was resumed late in the afternoon apparently in consequence of Governor Engelk's demands that the Jewish and Polish population deliver up to him the members of the Jewish Self Defence association. The Bundists, preferring death in the open to a tame surrender, resumed the battle. Artillery was again brought into action. It is not known if the fighting still continues.

Correspondents Barred.

It is impossible to obtain full details of the events at Siedlce as the authorities absolutely forbid all communication and turn back all correspondents.

At Rudgusowska, 40 miles east of Warsaw, scenes similar to those enacted at Siedlce were witnessed. The soldiers are said to have killed forty persons.

Fugitives from Siedlce report that Governor Engelk issued an ultimatum declaring that he would bombard the whole town unless the terrorists surrendered. In consequence of the pillage and destruction the citizens are suffering for food and water.

Corpses Among Ruins.

The number of victims is unknown but it is placed at 100.

Most of the corpses are hidden in the ruins of houses.

The town is cordoned; the railroad station, which is on the outskirts of the town is isolated and Jews or Poles seeking to reach the station are turned back en masse.

Two more battalions of troops have arrived from Bialystok.

Awful Brutes.

Siedlce, Sept. 10.—The telegraph offices are closed and nobody is allowed on the streets, or to leave the town. The refugees continue to crowd the stations. The soldiers are drunk and behaving with extraordinary brutality.

A delegation of citizens asked the governor to order the troops to cease firing, but the governor replied that the citizens must deliver up their leaders and the revolutionists or otherwise the city would be bombarded.

The authorities assert that 15 terrorists have arrived here from Warsaw and that they must be arrested before any of the inhabitants are permitted to leave the city.

Unspeakable Horror.

It is reported that two hundred persons, most of them Jews, were killed, many in their flats. The scenes yesterday and today were of unspeakable horror. Everywhere there were screams and cries mingled with the sound of shooting.

The soldiers today invaded the restaurant of the Victoria hotel and destroyed the furniture of the establishment and carried off the wines and liquors.

Indiscriminate Slaughter.

Warsaw, Sept. 10.—A bomb was thrown in the market square of Rudgusewska, province of Warsaw, this afternoon, killing one policeman and wounding another. Later another bomb was thrown at the entrance of the Zirardow Spinning works in this city, severely wounding a policeman and a janitor. The troops thereupon fired in all directions, and killed or wounded forty persons.

No Mercy for Jews.

Warsaw, Sept. 10.—According to the latest advices received here from Siedlce over 150 Jewish shops were looted. Christians escaped the massacre by hanging holy images and crosses in their windows. The soldiers got quite out of hand. Most of the persons arrested are Jews, and they were beaten without mercy. The Jews of Warsaw are in fear of attack.

Soldiers Arrested.

Lodz, Sept. 10.—Four drunken soldiers who were on guard on Drevnovks street last night shot two Jews, and wounded two others and robbed three shops. The soldiers have been arrested.

Police Report.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 10.—The police department declares that the fight at Siedlce has come to an end.

Looks Bad for Onipoko.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 10.—A court martial at Cronstadt will take up tomorrow the process against M. Onipoko, the peasant leader in the outlawed parliament, and three civilians. Onipoko, who has not been allowed an attorney, will be defended by an officer. He has been confined in a cell five feet by nine and has been treated with the greatest rigor. A soldier armed with a rifle is stationed constantly at the window of his cell. The authorities claim to have the most damaging testimony against him and assert that he has been identified as one of the agitators who disguised as sailors, organised the uprising at Cronstadt last July.

Spectacular and Costly.

New York, Sept. 10.—The varnish factory of Pratt and Camber consisting of three large buildings and an adjacent fire proof building belonging to Blanchard and Co., at Hunters Plain, were destroyed by fire tonight. Pratt and Camber's loss is estimated at $75,000. The fire was an unusually spectacular one.

Present for Pope.

Rome, Sept. 10.—The pope has received in private audience Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American college in Rome, who presented His Holiness with ten large beautifully illustrated volumes containing a history of charitable institutions in New York. The books were sent by Archbishop Farley.

LOGGERS UNABLE TO MEET DEMAND

Famine Is Feared By Lumbermen of State of Washington While Generous Premiums Fail to Induce Supply—Prices to be Raised.

Seattle, Sept. 10.—Logs will be advanced $1 a thousand by October 1 and lumber manufacturers will be notified at the same time that the Washington logging camps will be unable during the winter to keep pace with the demand from the mills. There should be a surplus stock of fully 200,000,000 feet in the water, but the loggers have no extra logs on hand now and will be unable to accumulate any before the snow drives loggers in the foothills out of the woods. Along the straits other loggers will have to suspend operations during the winter and lumber manufacturers are certain to face a big shortage until spring.

Though a premium as high as $2 a thousand is being offered by a number of mills for logs, the loggers can do no more than take care of their regular customers and the situation is already serious. Only for the fact that the Washington Logging and Brokerage company is fighting to restrain bullish prices the biding of lumbermen would cause a serious boom in log prices that would vastly increase the cost of lumber and might endanger markets handled from this state.

Bidding for Lumber.

Anticipating a big shortage of lumber several big buying firms are bidding a premium on lumber cargoes. Grace and Co. and J. J. Moore have taken the lead in this and a $2 premium has been offered for cargoes ready to ship immediately. These big lumber buyers want to tie up future deliveries to protect their own markets in the South.

As a rule the lumbermen who ship by water are turning away orders for future delivery fearing an advance in logs or a shortage in the supply will make it unprofitable, if not impossible, to fill the big orders that are being placed. It is almost impossible to secure immediate deliveries except at a premium and few of this class of orders have been entertained.

Charters May Advance.

Charter rates between Puget sound and San Francisco are $7.50 a thousand and the prediction was made today by men close to the steam schooner owners that this figure will be advanced to $10 shortly. The uncertainty of the lumber charter market makes it impossible for mill owners to contract with any degree of safety on California deliveries, and it is from California that most of the protests against the increase in lumber prices is coming.

Doctors Will Examine Esther Mitchell's Mind

Seattle, Sept. 10.—Esther Mitchell and Maud Hurt Creffield, charged jointly with murder in the first degree for the killing of George Mitchell on July 12, will be examined in the superior court on Wednesday by a medical commission for the purpose of determining their mental condition. Upon a showing made by the attorneys for the two women that they are now insane; were insane when the homicide was committed and have been insane for years, Judge Frater apointed the commission. If the women are found to be insane by the medical commission they will be sent to the insane asylum at Steilacoom and the prosecution for murder in the first degree will be dropped.

The appointment of this medical commission was vigorously opposed by Prosecuting Attorney Mackintosh and his chief deputy, John F. Miller. They both discredited the report that the women were now insane and declared that the question as to their sanity should be threshed out before a jury when they are put on trial for murder. After listening to arguments Judge Frater granted the request of the defendants' counsel.

DISTINGUISHED COUNT WEDS POOR SHOP GIRL

Cuts Loose From His Family and Gives up Position for True Love.

New York, Sept. 10.—The Tribune today says:

Count Hans Ferdinand Von Hochberg, heir to the Duchy of Rhonstock, an officer in the Kaiser's bodyguard, nephew of Princess Marie Von Saxe-Weimar, and cousin of the Grand Duke Michael Von Saxe-Weimar, married, yesterday, at Ossining, Louise Ernestine Carow, a German shop girl, whom he had summoned here to wed and in so doing several the ties that bound him to his family, his regiment and his associates in Germany.

The ceremony took place in a boarding house. Rev. Dr. Williams, of the Ossining Presbyterian church, officiated. A civil ceremony, it was announced, had been performed in Germany two years ago.

The count attended the Berlin Military Academy and was appointed to the first regiment of German Foot Guards after his graduation. He was constantly at court. He was head usher at the Crown Prince's wedding in June, 1905. During his career in Berlin the count met Miss Carow, who was a clerk in a glove store, and an attachment followed. To break this he was sent to America. In New York he stayed for a while at the Hotel Empire as "Mr. Graf," but soon assumed his real name. He obtained employment as a chaffeur in Tarrytown. Recently the count cabled for Miss Carow to join him. The German authorities tried to prevent her from leaving Germany and afterward from landing here.

AUSTRIAN SHARPERS ROB WEALTHY WIDOW

Obtain Over Fifty Thousand Dollars on Fraudulent Sale, but Land in Jail.

New York, Sept. 10.—Charged with robbing Mrs. Emily L. Heine of Cincinati of $51,790 by means of a fraudulent sale of costly rugs and paintings, two Austrians were arrested tonight in this city on the eve of their intended sailing for Europe. The prisoners gave their names as Frank Kiss and Samuel Rosenfield, both of Chicago. They were locked up. Mrs. Heine who came to New York with Chief Crawford, will appear against the prisoners. It is alleged that Kiss and Rosenfield persuaded two firms here to allow them to take rugs and pictures on representation that they had a customer for them and exhibited them in a store room on West 22nd street. There Mrs. Heine was brought to see them, it is charged, and persuaded to buy them. She is building a palatial home in Cincinnati and wanted the rugs and paintings to furnish it. She is the widow of a wealthy wholesale grocer.

Chile Needs Help.

New York, Sept. 10.—The American National Red Cross today made public a telegram received from the National secretary of the society in Washington which read: "The American minister at Santiago, Chile, cables the state department that suffering as a result of the earthquake is very great. Action of the Red Cross should be prompt." The Red Cross has renewed its appeal for assistance for Chile.

Sentry Shoots Girl And Prisoners Revolt

St. Petersburg, Sept. 10.—There was a revolt today in the Central Detention prison in consequence of the death of Mlle Semenova, a girl of 18, and an enthusiastic Social Democrat who was shot and killed instantly by a sentry when she showed herself at the window of her cell overlooking the courtyard. The furious prisoners expelled the wardens, barricaded the prison and laid the corpse of Mlle. Semenova upon an improvised bier in their central cell, refusing to deliver it to the authorities and swearing they would die rather than surrender it.

Troops were summoned but the authorities fearing bloodshed temporised and sent for the brother of Mlle. Semenova to whom the insurgents delivered the body.

The Grand Duke Nicholas, after an investigation of the affair personally ordered the dismissal of the officer of the guard which was drawn from the unpopular Seminovsky regiment. Mlle. Semenova was a medical student and was seeking to divide with the prisoners some sugar which she had surreptitiously obtained when she was shot.

Guards Wound People In Streets of 'Frisco

San Francisco, Sept. 10.—As an aftermath of the recent strike of the United railroads, a riot broke out tonight, when the street car company started to march about 200 strike breakers from the car barns to the ferry building. Many shots were fired by the armed guards escorting the men and half a dozen persons are reported wounded. The strike breakers are guarded in the ferry building by the police and 12 men have been arrested. A large mob is in front of the ferry building waiting for the police to bring out the prisoners.

MUDSLIDE BURIES WHOLE TOWNSHIP

Over Two Hundred and Fifty People Are Buried Alive in the Caucasus.

Tiflis, Sept. 10.—Practically without warning, the side of a mountain rising above the township of Kwareli, broke away and a sea of semi-liquid sand, stones and mud swept down on the township and overwhelmed and obliterated it. Some 255 persons have been buried alive. Fifty-five bodies already have been recovered from the mire, which is six feet deep. In addition to the lives lost, countless head of cattle perished and the crops were destroyed.

Kwareli township occupies an area of five kilometers of the district of Telaw, in the Caucasus. Similar disasters are common occurrences in the Caucasian valleys.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 10.—The international union of steam engineers met in convention here today with about 200 delegates in attendance.

PROHIBITION HURTS REPUBLICAN PARTY

Democrats Gain Strength in the State of Maine and Nearly Elect Governor.

Portland, Me., Sept. 10.—Governor William T. Cobb, Republican, running on a platform devoted almost exclusively to a continuance of the prohibitory law of the state, was re-elected today by a plurality of less than 8,000 which, with but few exceptions is the smallest margin of votes ever given a Republican governor in Maine.

Cyrus Davis, the Democratic candidate for governor polled one of the largest votes in the history of the party in this state.

PASSENGERS INJURED IN RAILWAY ACCIDENT

Southern Pacific Cars Jump the Track and Slide Down an Embankment.

Santa Barbara, Cal., Sept. 10.—The second section of a south bound train on the Southern Pacific was wrecked today at Seacliff, a side track 20 miles south of Santa Barbara, and 12 persons were injured, two of whom may die. The wreck occurred at a point where the road bed runs near the Pacific ocean on an embankment. Some part of the locomotive broke and dropped on the ties causing the locomotive to leave the rails. The baggage car and four coaches followed and all toppled over and slid down the embankment.

Drunken Hindoos Arrive.

Another batch of Hindoos came in from Vancouver last night and made their way out to Sapperton. A number of them were considerably the worse for liquor and several of them carried whiskey bottles.

New York, Sept. 10.—Herman Oelrichs, who died at sea on Sept. 1, left the bulk of his estate to his brother, Charles May Oelrichs, and to his sister, Mrs. Lucy Jay. His wife, from whom he had been estranged for some time, was cut off from any bequest. To the son, Hermann Oelrichs, nothing is left but pieces of jewelery, guns and some other personal effects. Other relatives, his secretary, and his valet are remembered in his will.

The Record

By MARGARET MUZZEY

Copyright, 1900, by P. C. Eastment

The midsummer golf tournament was about to begin at the Maston Country club. A handsome cup had been given to the president of the club to be played for by all the members, and a crescent pin set with pearls was put up especially for the ladies by "Millionaire Miller," a rich old bachelor.

Tom Price, aged sixteen, had declined to enter for the tournament. He stood no chance of winning without a big handicap and despised that sort of victory. If he were able to play scratch like Mr. Sloan—but that contingency was too far in the future to be considered. So, holding aloof from competition, Tom felt entitled to indulge in disinterested criticism. Joe Smith, instructor for the club, was his chosen confidant.

"Mr.—Mr. Sloan ought to get the cup. He—he has bo-bogied the course twice," stuttered Tom.

"He is a crackerjack," said Joe.

"Who goes around with Mi-Miss Benson—I mean to ve-verify her score?"

"I'd send Mr. Sloan if he were not playing himself," said Joe, with a wink.

"He—he wouldn't believe his eyes if he saw her tricks. It is a bloo-blooming shame that just because a girl is pretty and knows how to flirt nobody wants to accuse her of che-che-cheating."

"You are catching cold, my boy," said Sloan, coming up behind him. "What is this mysterious conversation between you and Joe?"

"We were discus-cus-cussing one of the players in the tournament," said

THEY WERE BOTH HUDDLED INTO THE BROOK.

Tom, and after Sloan made a practice drive to the edge of the green, "It is awful to think of a man who can do that being mashed on a girl who is-isn't square."

"Round girls are prettier," said Joe.

"It is no joke. Something ought to be—be done. Listen. Why not send the cu-cu-curate around with her? He would not dare li-lie about her score."

"The very thing!" Joe exclaimed.

The clubhouse piazza was crowded with guests to see the players in the tournament drive. The "game with no age limit" included child rising against parent and grandchild against grandparent.

The first to drive was Millionaire Miller. He took plenty of time to arrange his knees, shoulders, elbows, wrists, hands and fingers, gave his body a mighty twist and, as if boring for oil with the toes of his right foot, swung his club hissing through the air. The spectators were breathless. Shading his eye with one hand, Miller strained eagerly forward.

"I didn't follow through," he said excitedly. "Where did it go?"

"I see it, sir," said the caddy, surreptitiously picking up the ball a foot from the tee to find it 175 yards away. He understood his business. He was Miller's favorite caddy.

Pretty Mary Benson came next, looking the picture of innocent girlhood in white linen, the pulled up sleeves showing her plump arms below the elbow. Mr. Morse, the earnest little curate, was delighted to keep her score and followed along, talking eagerly in his high pitched voice.

Tom had brought his huge concert hall graphophone to the clubhouse and set it up in one corner of the parlor to play band music for an impromptu dance in the evening, and he came out on to the piazza just as Mary Benson was about to drive; then he cut across the links on a run and when she and Morse reached the third tee was, to all human appearance, looking for a lost ball some distance off the course.

"Third" was a bad place to drive from, with the brook at the bottom of a sharp incline not fifty yards ahead, and Mary sent her ball—where? The caddy looked in the long grass at one side, and the curate, who admired her beauty, and Tom, who did not admire her at all, looked at Mary. She poked among the stones by the brook with her driver for a minute; then, glancing at Morse, who was apparently adding the score, but really watching her from the corner of his eye, she stooped over, and a ball emerged from the puff above her left elbow.

"Here it is," she called, and, sure enough, there it was on a little flat stone.

"An easy lie," thought Tom, "in two senses."

At that moment Mr. Morse had a surprising accident. He started toward Mary, stumbled at the top of the bank and, unable to stop himself, ran straight into her with such force that they were both hustled into the brook up to their knees and were spattered with muddy water to the tops of their heads. Tom rolled over behind the bushes in an ecstasy of delight.

"By—by jingo! That parson will be an ar-ar-archdeacon yet," he said.

Half an hour later Tom climbed in at the rear window of the clubhouse parlor. He had composed some verses that he meant to record in his graphophone and spring on the company later. He adjusted the blank cylinder, recorder and small horn and was about to repeat them when in walked the Rev. Mr. Morse looking like an evolution from a rummage sale in garments hastily snatched from various lockers. He laughed ruefully.

"I suppose you saw what happened?" he said.

"Wouldn't have missed it for a di-dia-mond sunburst."

"You did not see anything peculiar, of course, except the accident?" asked Morse anxiously.

"One accident—two de-designs," said Tom promptly.

The curate groaned.

"I simply had to throw her out of the game some way. I could not countenance her score and had not the courage to expose her deceit before so many people."

"It was grand," said Tom. "If she's the sli-sli"—

"She certainly is sly," interrupted the curate.

"slightest good she knew she was li-li"—

"The same as lying," put in the curate.

"likely to get caught," finished Tom.

"I trust you, my boy," said Morse, laying his hand on Tom's shoulder, "but it occurred to me you might tell what you saw to your favorite, Mr. Sloan."

"I shan't say a word, but he ought to know. He might marry her and fi-fi-find out afterward."

"She will never marry him," said Morse.

"He—he thinks she will," said Tom.

"I started to tease her about him, and she made fun of him—imitated his slow way of speaking. A girl may disclaim or protest about a man she really cares for, but ridicule—never! Besides, she gave me to understand she is engaged to Mr. Miller. Here comes Sloan. I do not wish to meet him just now." And the curate escaped from the window.

The handsome young athlete found Tom fussing over his graphophone, taking off the small horn and putting on the big "morning glory."

"Who won the ladies' pin?" he asked.

"Your grandmother," said Sloan, laughing.

"My wh-wh-what?"

"She had a handicap of forty-five on the nine holes and came out ahead of Miss Brown, the English girl, who played the whole course in forty-five."

The crowd on the piazza was cheering and calling for Sloan to present him with the cup which he had won.

"Bring me a drink, Tom, will you? I am choking with thirst and must go outside a minute," said Sloan, throwing himself on the divan.

"That's right—li-li-lie down," said Tom. "You will need to." And, giving the graphophone a final touch that started it going, he left the room.

The blank cylinder intended for Tom's verses had recorded his conversation with the curate, and every word was reproduced for Sloan's benefit.

When Tom returned the room was empty. Sloan had avoided them all, cutting across the fields to town, and neither Tom nor any of his fellow golfers saw him again until he returned from Europe a year later after Miss Benson was married to Millionaire Miller.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE IN TOWN OF LACOMBE

Several Buildings and Much Stock in the Business Section Reduced to Ruins.

Lacombe, Alta., Sept. 10.—A serious conflagration occurred on Saturday in the downtown business portion of Lacombe, which consumed the following places of business:

The Adelphia hotel, Charles Atkinson's barber shop; J. I. Pool, barrister's chambers; N. I. MacDiamid's drug store; A. McCampbell's general merchant store; C. L. Darie, lawyer's offices; John McKenty's real estate offices; E. Titsworth's fruit and billiard hall; Dr. Aunger, dentist's rooms; J. H. Rose's drug store; C. R. Deake's jewelery store; Morrison and Johnston's warehouse; Blindman Electric Co.'s office.

The citizens did splendid work assisting the fire brigade and forming themselves into a bucket brigade. It is estimated that the property and stock burned will amount to between $75,000 and $100,000. The amount of insurance carried on buildings and stock consumed cannot be obtained at present.

Will Try to Move Indians.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 10.—Frank Pedley, deputy minister of Indian affairs, leaves tonight for Victoria, B. C. He goes to meet Hon. Mr. Templeman and endeavor to arrange with the Indians to remove from Songhees reserve to some other point. This reserve is encroaching on the city of Victoria, and efforts have been in progress for some years to have another one selected.

Binder Twine Sales Increase.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 10.—On one of his trips of investigation into the binder twine industry J. L. Haycock, binder twine inspector for the Dominion government, stated that never before had such a quantity of binder twine been used in Canada as this present year. The sales to the farmers totalled $4,000,000, over $500,000 above last year's sales. Of this amount 10,000 tons was brought into the country by the International Harvester company, 6,000 tons was made in Canada and 500 tons was shipped into the country from England.

Baptists Attend Rally.

A number of young people of the Olivet Baptist church went to Vancouver last night to attend a rally of the young people of the B. Y. P. U. association of this city and Vancouver in Fairview Baptist church. The church was filled and the speaker of the evening was the Rev. J. Willard Litch, B. A., pastor of the First Baptist church, Vancouver. The chair was filled by the chairman of the association, A. H. Marrion, and solos were rendered throughout the evening by Miss Steele. The speaker's theme was "Baptists and What They Stand For." He took for his text the words of Paul, "Leaving those things that are behind I press toward the mark." His object in speaking, he said was to fit his hearers the better to face the battle of life. Baptists stood upon the only basis of successful church union, the union such as that of the Father and son—one in knowledge, one in will and one in nature. Having the name on a church roll was not union. The only bond of union was where all were striving after Christ's likeness. He then spoke for a few minutes on the ordinances of the church and what they typified.

WHERE THEY BLUNDER.

We do not know that it is "up to" us to enlighten our friend the enemy as to the mistakes he is making in political matters. Those to whom politics is a game would say, the more blunders the better it is for your side. But some of the comments made by Conservative papers on the letter from Winston Churchill which was read by Mr. Greenwood in Toronto and telegraphed all over the country, are so typical of the spirit of a certain section of the Conservative party, that one is naturally led to a consideration of their methods.

The Conservative party has its inner circle, as other parties have, and that circle seems to be largely composed of men who belong to what may be called the Tory wing of the party, the old "divine-right" class. One of the amazing things in modern politics is that the party should so long have allowed this element to dominate its counsels. A prominent Conservative has recently said that there must be radical changes of policy and method if the party hopes to come to the front again in Canada. He feels that the ideas and utterances of the Tory element are distasteful to the sensible rank and file of the Conservatives even, to say nothing of the men of other parties and no party. It is by these Tories that the party is held to the position of the advocate and champion of privilege in all its forms. Without their leadership the mass of the party would speedily break away from a position which hopelessly cripples them in this democratic age; and we might expect to find them running the Liberals hard in the promotion of reforms. Indeed it is quite possible that the parties might after a time virtually change places, as democrats and republicans have changed places in the United States.

But it is particularly the attitude of the typical Tory with respect to imperial affairs that suggests comment on his ways and works at the moment. He seems to be possessed of an amazing aptitude for forgetting yesterday and ignoring tomorow, which makes it quite a natural thing for him to pose as a spectacle for gods and men. He continually puts his cocksureness—his "we are the people and wisdom will die with us" air—in immediate and striking contrast with his glaring inconsistencies. He will declaim about his lofty patriotism until he is out of breath, and as soon as he has recovered his wind, will intimate quite plainly that the hall mark of his patriotism is that symbol of mysterious origin commonly called the dollar mark. Introduce the subject of imperialism—he will wax eloquent in his denunciation of "Little Englanders," and immediately give you to understand that he holds you very cheap indeed if you are not the very smallest and narrowest kind of a "Little Canadian."

Another way in which he contributes to the gaiety of nations is by his habit of "butting in"—that is slangy of course, but it seems to fit—on old country political questions. Most of us, Liberal and Conservative, are under the impression that we have quite enough party politics of our own, and that we can afford to take a nonpartizan view of the public questions in other parts of the empire. But your typical Tory has different ideas. The only thing he can hear or see is the party shibboleth, the party label. Is there a Conservative government; everything is just as it should be. Other people may see many things which seem to call for reform, but your Tory smiles at such criticisms. It is a Conservative government—there is nothing more to be said. You can take his word it that everything is all right. When the pendulum swings to the Liberal side, however, there is a very different story; denunciation takes the place of praise—we have sneers instead of laudation, but still the same sweeping, cocksure, "nothing more to be said" style.

It is all very amusing; and very harmless also. The empire is not likely to be seriously deflected from its course because these gentlemen do not approve of the men who now hold the reins of power; nor are those men to be greatly commiserated on account of their failure to meet the approval of the typical Canadian Tory. In fact it may be doubted whether they are aware of their misfortune. Let us hope, however, that people in the old country to whose attention any of these Tory utterances may chance to come, will not mistake them for the voice of Canada; or even of any considerable section of the Canadian people, who are as a rule level headed and sensible folk too busy with their own affairs to be continually poking impertinent noses into their neighbors.'

It seems probable that the revenue of the Dominion for the year ending 30th June next, will reach, if it does not exceed, one hundred millions of dollars. So far the increase over last year is at the rate of nearly a million a month, and there is every indication that rapid growth will continue.

The Toronto papers say that the exhibition there has been a grand success. With favorable weather, the great exhibition here during the first week of October, promises to be the most successful in the history of the society. Good weather or bad, it will be a success as an exhibition—that much is already assured.

The capital has the advantage of attracting all the distinguished people who come to see the province, and as a consequence, is very busy these days with preparations. Hon. W. Templeman, Minister of Inland Revenue, is to be entertained under the auspices of his political friends; but at a function in which doubtless many Conservatives will take part. J. Ramsay Macdonald, M. P., is to speak on labor questions, Thursday; and the Governor-general and Lady Grey hold a reception on Monday.

The noise which our socialist friends have made in the province, coupled no doubt with the fact of the alliance between the socialists and the government, has so misled the people of the East that delegates from that part of Canada are coming out prepared for a hard fight against an anticipated effort to swing the labor unions into the socialist ranks. They will doubtless be surprised when they discover the true state of the case.

Remembering that yesterday was the eighth anniversary of New Westminister's great fire, a Vancouver man said that it had been to New Westminster a "blessing in disguise." Probably a good many people would demur about subscribing to that; but there can be no doubt that the city has made wonderful progress since that time, and is today one of the most solid towns in the Dominion. It is getting its share in this growing time, and seems to gather fresh impetus as it goes; illustrating once more the saying that nothing succeeds like success.

The Colonist remarks that Vancouver island is as large as Switzerland, which supports a population of 5,000,000; and that the settled, or "developed" portion of the island is only about one fifteenth of its area. Figures somewhat similar could be given for nearly every district on the mainland of the province; and these are the facts upon which stress should be laid—the facts that should be published and republished and published yet again, in order that the splendid possibilities of the country may be understood.

Returns From Northland.

S. H. Farmer returned yesterday after spending the past three months travelling through Norther British Columbia during which time he travelled over eight hundred miles and made a journey of over one hundred miles alone on foot through the Bella Coola country. Mr. Farmer went out for the purpose of selecting a suitable spot in which to engage in cattle ranching, and has selected what he thinks will be a favorable site in the neighborhood of Aootsa lake. He expects to return there in about a week's time.

Winning Lois

By FRANK H. SWEET

Copyright, 1906, by Charles H. Sutcliffe

"What's that? How did I come to give my consent? Well, I don't know as I ever did. It was one of the things that just come about—happen, you know, as if 'twas made to be so. I never did have much use for white hands and store clothes and a soft voice. Seemed to me they went mostly with card sharps and men who wa'n't willing to work, and Lois felt the same. Her great idea in a man was courage, ready to risk life and all for anything that seemed right, especially if a woman was in it, and to us that kind of a man had big brown hands and broad back and loud voice, and he always wore rough clothes, which showed he wa'n't afraid to work and never thought about how he looked.

"HE JUST CAME AND TOOK HIS SCORN AND JOKED AND LAUGHED."

"So when Jim Furness saw her from a parlor car window one day and threw his baggage off and lost his ticket just through a crazy idea of winning her Lois turned him down so quick that I didn't have a chance to say a word, mad as I was. You know how Lois is when she's stirred up like this. She just looks and turns away, and there's no need for her nor anybody else to say a word.

"Well, with other folks that would have ended it, but Jim he just turned round and got a job firing on a local engine that helped pull freight up our side of the divide. You see, he seemed to understand by instinct that Lois and I believed in work and didn't care for dressed up effect. But, pshaw! You know how it is with Jim. Put him on the dirtiest job going and his hands will stay white and soft like a girl's, and the roughest clothes ever was have a way of hanging on him like they were tailor made, and, as to his voice, if you turned his engine end over and down the mountain, when it got to the bottom Jim's voice, if he had any left, would be as soft and drawling as ever.

"We saw a good deal of Jim now, for, with me as station agent and our living rooms upstairs, Lois and I were sort of chums with everything on the railroad. Maybe that was what started Jim to getting his job so quick and having it so he could switch back and forth in front of the station every few hours and stay in our town over night. Maybe he figured that just being a railroad man would be a sort of recommendation.

"But if so it didn't seem to help him much. There were big, strapping engineers on the road who had done things, risked life and looked square at death without winking, and there were conductors and section bosses and one local superintendent and a passenger agent who liked Lois and who would have been glad for her to have liked them, and nearly all had done things. You see, our section right along here is a tough piece of road, and all the employees who have been on it a few years and are not killed have stories to tell. Now I—but Lois hates personal talk that touches on brag, so it doesn't matter.

"But, as I was saying, pretty much the whole road liked Lois, and Lois, she liked the whole road as a whole, but wouldn't single out any one in particular. And, as for Jim, she scorned him openly, and he knew it.

"Now, I didn't like Jim myself, so of course I couldn't feel the pity for him that I would for anybody else. But, pshaw! If he felt it he never showed by any signs. He just came and took his scorn and joked and laughed and made us laugh and then came back for more scorn the very next time his engine pulled in. Now, I ask candidly what can you do with a fellow like that? The others laughed at him, and he laughed with them. Then after a while some of the more rough ones, thinking him soft and good natured and without backbone, went a little too far, and his white fingers closed together like steel springs, and more than one of them had to lay off for repairs. But Jim didn't seem to hold any grudges. He laughed and talked to those who treated him the worst until they had to laugh and talk back, and then the first anybody knew they were all the best of friends.

"But the strangest part, of course, was about Lois. Jim never did a single brave thing so far as I know, risk his life in saving a train of passengers or anything like that, and he spent a lot of money in helping people in one way and another—a good deal more than his salary could possibly amount to—and either of these things was enough to keep Lois scornful. She had no use at all for a man unless he was brave and no use for one who wasn't absolutely honest, and of course spending more than one earned would seem to have only one meaning.

"However, Jim kept right on in his quiet, good natured way until he had made the railroad men his friends, and even Lois and I began to look forward to his spending an evening, things went off so swinging and pleasant-like.

"No, I don't know as he ever did ask me in so many words for my consent or even if he asked Lois. It all came about as if 'twas made to be so, minister and all, and it wa'n't until after they were married and gone to his home that we found out he was one of the biggest owners of the railroad, with more money than he could throw away. That first time he saw Lois he was just from college and gone into partnership with his father and was taking an observation trip over their road.

"His father like it? Seemed so. Anyway he's never said or looked a word against it when I've been there, and he's just as proud of Lois as Jim himself. And Lois, why, up there the city is just full of society queens, as they call them, and Lois leads the whole lot—takes to it naturally, they say, just like she's always took to everything. I go up once a year, and they all treat me like a king, and Jim, especially if he's got some big nabob visiting, as he generally has, buttonholes me and tells that story about—but Lois hates personal talk that touches on brag, so it doesn't matter. You see, she might hear."

In order to become a great poet the first necessity is to hypnotize a great editor.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Our Grand Fall Millinery Opening

TAKES PLACE ON

Tuesday and Wednesday

Sept. 11th and 12th, '06

A new department has recently been added to our already progressive establishment—that of hat trimming.

Although we have for several years sold a great many ready-to-wear hats—and, having secured a competent artiste in the person of Miss Keith, formerly of a leading Vancouver store, and prominent eastern establishments—have now opened the new department.

Several hundred stylish hats will be on exhibition including a number of genuine New York pattern hats—also a large stock of trimmings, including the new shades in silk and couche velvets, silks, birds, feathers, wings, quills, pompoms, aigrettes, ospreys, etc.

Many of—though not all—the hats are large in size—the Empire leading—Gainsboroughs are good also, and so are the quaint, high crowned models of a century ago.

Empire green and dark red—lead the colors—next come taupe, a brownish grey, then follow browns, blues and crushed blackberry shades.

Among the veils are flowered lace veils, tuxedo net veils, chiffon veils, motor veils, and thin meshes which are advocated for rainy weather.

During the millinery opening a special display of Dress Goods, Silks, Ribbons, Novelties, Linen Draperies, Coats, Suits, etc., will be made. You are cordially invited to attend.

Sidney J. Dyke, who was for some time connected with the local branch of the Vancouver Province, returned on Saturday from a trip to England, and will resume his old position on the Province. Before going to England he was in attendance at college in Toronto, from which place he went to England, where he took part in a cycling trip over the island.

Ald. Shiles is suffering from an injured hand, the result of having struck it against a devil's club while superintending the work at the new rifle range across the river last week. The hand has considerably swollen, but Mr. Shiles believes that it is improving now, and that he will be able to dispense with a bandage in the course of a day or so.

A resident of Third avenue while walking through his orchard yesterday morning early, nearly stepped on a full grown hen pheasant which was so busily engaged picking at the fallen fruit that it did not notice his approach. The bird immediately struck off for the outskirts of the city. Pheasants are said to be fairly plentiful in the district surrounding New Westminster.

A missionary meeting will be held in St. Paul's Reformed church on Thursday next at 8 p.m. The chair will be occupied by Rev. J. S. Henderson who will also give an account of the mission work among the Chinese at the coast. Rev. A. De B. Owen will tell of his work among the Blood Indians. A collection will be taken up at the close of the meeting.

The private Pullman car, the Plymouth Rock which is being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur James, and Mr. Henry James, the well known author, was sidetracked for the greater part of yesterday near the G. N. R freight sheds here. The car was coupled onto the south bound G. N. R train and the James party proposed making connections with it at Seattle, whither they journeyed by water. The car was a very handsome one and carried a complete crew, and colored chef.

A bridge located between Sumas and Chilliwack was recently washed out by the heavy rains and a considerable number of the residents of the district are working full time in order to get the bridge repaired, as they are practically cut off from the outside world until a new bridge is constructed. Nearly all of the ranchers in that district are large gardeners and have considerable marketable produce which they are anxious to unload while the market prices are high.

George Layfield, of Port Kells, died yesterday morning at his son's residence, Third avenue, after an illness extending over a considerable period. He had been an inmate of the Royal Columbian hospital for some time, but was recently removed to his son's home, where he died. Fales has charge of the funeral arrangements.

A number of the friends and fellow employees of J. J. Johnston were at the C. P. R. depot yesterday to meet him and his bride as they alighted from the train. There was an all round hand shake and a number of introductions, and with the sound of congratulations in the air Mr. and Mrs. Johnston drove off to the residence of Mr. Johnston's sister, Mrs. W. S. Collister where they will stay, until the new house which is being erected by Mr. Johnston, is ready for occupancy. During the afternoon, Mr. Johnston paid his office a visit and smilingly faced the good humored banter of his fellow employees. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston came to the coast via the Crow's Nest Pass route and enjoyed the magnificent scenery through which they passed.

The government dredge King Edward came in from Sapperton yesterday afternoon and tied up at the government wharf. The machinery is now all in place with the exception of the suction pipe which is expected over from Vancouver in the near future and which should have been here long ago. Yesterday afternoon the King Edward's crew was engaged in raising the heavy new boom which is used to raise and lower the heavy suction pipe, into its position at the bow of the vessel. The work which has been accomplished is of a most complete and substantial character and has all been done by the crew of the boat. Had the necesary fittings been in sight the captain would have put on extra men, but kept on working in anticipation of the arrival of the necessary fittings. The vessel will in all probability be all ready for work next week, and may possibly head direct for Chilliwack.

FRESHETS DESTROY THE SPAWNING PENS

Serious Damage Reported at Pitt Lake, Bon Acord and Pemberton Meadows.

J. A. Johnson, manager of the Bon Accord hatchery, was in the city yesterday, and gave the information that the recent heavy freshets had seriously damaged the spawning pens at the head of Pitt lake. The heavy volume of water carried with it trees and stumps which were hurled with terrific force against the barricades and broke them up like match wood. The result is that thousands of fish have been swept away, and before the dams can be reconstructed, the opportunity of corralling the sockeyes will be past for this year.

At Bon Accord, the loss is reported to be very heavy. The waters there washed away a large number of fish pans full of eggs, which had been sent there recently, and caused the destruction of between five and six millions of ova, which had been taken from the female sockeye and placed in the running water for hatching.

At Pemberton Meadows hatchery, there is also said to be a heavy loss. The destruction of the dam and fish traps occurred in a similar manner to the one already mentioned at the head of Pitt lake. At present the loss at that point is merely a matter of hearsay as the manager of the hatchery has not yet had time to turn in an official report.

Hearing Camosun Case.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept 10.—The exchequer court is hearing today the case of Bow and MacLachlan against the ship Camosun. The plaintiffs built the ship at Paisley, Scotland, for the Union Steamship company, B. C., for £28,000, to be paid in instalments. The first was paid in full, and proceedings were taken for the balance in the admiralty court. The ship was released on bail; defendants have a counter claim of £3,688. The lower court allowed the counter claim to be struck out; hence the appeal to the exchequer court.

For riding a bicycle on the sidewalk, Harold Scott was fined $1 and costs at the police court yesterday morning. John Ellener was fined $2.50 and costs for having been drunk and disorderly on Saturday evening.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Time is fleet, but interest on your note keeps pace with it.

You know a song is popular when it begins to make you want to throw things at the man who sings it.

It is not a bad idea, no matter how well you may be otherwise provided, to be always your own press agent.

Knowing how not to be sincere is knowing how to protect yourself.

Burglars are moral gentlemen compared with some other present day criminals.

You can't tell how little a man is worth by knowing how much he is worth.

It isn't necessary for the woman who knows enough to hold her tongue to hold it.

It is queer how much sympathy you get that is of no use to you.

Cupid's marksmanship is the best in the dark.

The Present Ruler.

Once on a time the people bowed
To kings and princes and the sort
Of titled and bejeweled crowd
Of codgers that you meet at court,
But it is very different now;
We recognize as truly great
And make our best and choicest bow
Unto the man who pays the freight.

To royalty we do not bend
The knee when it is passing by
Or on its smallest wish attend,
For we have other fish to fry.
Its favor doesn't saw much wood,
For it is somewhat out of date;
We spend our time in being good
Unto the man who pays the freight.

A duke looks pretty in a frame
Or to a rich and silly girl
Who wants to use an ancient name
To help her in the social whirl,
But to the lady who is wise
He isn't such a heavy weight
Or for her purposes a prize
Beside the man who pays the freight.

The rare and sometimes yellow cash
Or even tainted dollar bills
That buy at least their weight in hash
And easily the coal bin fills
Is what converses pleasantly
And reconciles us to our fate,
And so we crook the willing knee
Unto the man who pays the freight.

Cutting It Down.

"I know that western towns are prone to overrate their population," said the visitor, looking at the straggling village, "but I would like to know how you ever had the nerve to call this a town of 10,000."

"Well," replied the boomer cautiously, "I'll admit it doesn't look it, but, then, a Mormon and his family moved out since I was talking to you about it."

Good Job to Lose.

Just giving an offhand opinion without knowing all of the facts in the case we should be inclined to say that the job of tax collector in Russia during the present summer would not be nearly so desirable a one as acting as president of the steel trust.

His chances for collecting a choice assortment of ancient vegetables, noisome eggs and battered tin cans would be altogether too good to suit us. In the present temper of the people they would be ready to hand him almost anything but money, and the number and variety of jagged edged words they would try out on him would be enough to frighten a person not used to them.

Somebody has to be collector, but we do not see how any one could afford to take the job for a cent less than all the money that he took in, and then where would the czar come in for spending money?

Cleared Up.

"You say you are selling these goods below cost."

"That is as true as I am standing here," protested the dealer, who happened to be sitting down at the time.

"But how can you afford to do it?"

"I couldn't only for the fact that I have a large family to support."

Knew He Was Harmless.

"She is not afraid to leave her husband with other women for hours."

"Has perfect faith in him, I suppose."

"No, but she remembers what a chump he was when he was courting her."

If They Will Listen.

The still, small voice of conscience
The voting kings will find
As like as not would help a lot
In making up their mind.

CANNOT KEEP STILL FOR TWENTY MINUTES

President Roosevelt too Restless for Man Who Wants Cast of His Face.

Washington, Sept. 10.—E. Garet of this city is making strong efforts to secure a plaster cast of President Roosevelt's face. The suggestion was first made to his wife and Mrs. Roosevelt asked

"How long would it take to make the cast?"

"About twenty minutes," replied the friend.

"Then that settles it," returned Mrs. Roosevelt, "no human power could induce my husband to remain still twenty minutes."

Mr. Garet says the length of time required was greatly overestimated.

"The making of the mask of the face would not take more than five minutes," said Mr. Garet, "and would be productive of no inconvenience to the president. The mouth and nostrils are left until the last, and those features are not covered more than a fraction of a minute. Moreover, quills can be inserted, insuring easy breathing even during that short space of time."

Training Lacrosse Players.

Professor Judges was present last evening at the senior lacrosse practice for the first time in the capacity of trainer, having been appointed to that position at a meeting of the executive of the Westminster Lacrosse club held last week. He carefully watched the team at work, and advised a few of the players whenever he thought they needed to change their tactics in any way. The services of Tim Mahoney have also been retained, and with two trainers looking after their interests, the team certainly should show some improvement in form before the exhibition games are played.

Liberals by Acclamation.

Lachute, Que., Sept. 10.—Hon. W. A. Wier, minister of public works for the province of Quebec, was re-elected by acclamation in Argentueil county today

Now Its Goliath.

Samson, the old dredge is now no more. In its stead is Goliath the tow boat. The change was effected yesterday when Mr. Gilley had the craft registered in its new name. A towing post is to be placed on the upper part of the boat and it will be then in readiness for anything that may happen to come along in the line of river towing.

The Schaake Machine works company was engaged yesterday in unloading a car load of heavy steel shaftings, which they had received from Detroit.

COHOES ARE THICK IN COWICHAN GAP

Captain Brown of the Schooner Albert Says They Fight for Room.

Captain Brown yesterday afternoon brought his trim two masted schooner The Albert safely into port after a very stormy voyage around the Vancouver Island coast. He brought with him a cargo of four and a half tons of pulverized clam shells which is in great demand by poultry raisers. He gathered the shells from Yellowstone point, near Ladysmith, where the product is thickly strewn upon the sands.

The captain stated that cohoes were so thick in Cowichan Gap that they were literally elbowing each other out of the water. They could not be captured by means of nets as the water was so full of phosphorus that it was possible especially at night to almost count the stones at the bottom of the sea. The fish could be seen rubbing against each other all through the Gap. The Indians in the district were making good catches by means of spoon baits, which the cohoes take greedily.

Women Meet.

The local council of women held their monthly meeting in the board of trade room yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Warwick being in the chair. Final arrangements were made for the furnishing of the tea room to be operated at the fair by the ladies, and the matter of having a reception room for visitors was also discussed. It is proposed to furnish a room where lady visitors may come in and have a quiet rest after visiting the exhibits, and there is no doubt that such a boon would be greatly appreciated by the visitors.

The secretary reported Mayor Keary had been in correspondence with a domestic science teacher at Montreal, but that up to the date of the meeting, he had received no answer. It was suggested that Miss Berry, who is at present in Vancouver, be asked to take charge of the domestic science department during the fair, and every efort to induce Miss Berry to consent will be made.

Fireproofing Cloth.

To render cloth fireproof the following process has been used by a French chemist: Saturate the textiles in a solution composed of chloride of ammonium, 8 parts; sodium hyposulphate, 2.25 parts; sulphate of ammonium, 10 parts; borax, 4.5 parts; water, 75.25 parts. Hang up to dry without wringing.

Cure For Corns.

One teaspoonful of tar, one teaspoonful of coarse brown sugar and one teaspoonful of saltpeter, the whole to be warmed together. Spread it on bits of kid the size of the corns, and in two days they will be drawn out.

To Protect a Mattress.

Stitch together enough newspapers to entirely cover the springs of your bed, and if there are slats make a second paper sheet to put under the springs. It will keep out the dust and is easily replaced.

Hung on to the Plow.

An old English gentleman, a schoolteacher, who some years ago resided in one of the small towns of Ohio, was an agreeable teller of stories, but deemed it beyond his reputation as a raconteur to tell one that did not surpass any that had preceded it. A farmer, having come to the village, remarked in the presence of his friends that he had been plowing all the week with four horses, breaking up new ground, and dwelt upon it as being a very big thing.

"Pshaw!" said the old Englishman. "That's nothing. I have seen in England fifty yoke of oxen hitched to one plow."

The remark seemed to occasion general surprise.

"And," continued he, "the funniest part of the whole thing was that while the plow was on the top of the hill the leading yoke of oxen was on top of another hill, and the forty-nine between the plow and the leaders were suspended between the two hills. And there was another matter connected with it rather strange. In the course of the day the plowman, becoming rather careless about driving his team, ran into and split a big oak stump. The plow passed safely through the split, but before the plowman got entirely through it closed up and caught him by the coat tail."

"Did it tear his coat?" asked a person of inquiring turn.

"Not a bit of it," replied our veracious narrator. "He hung on to the plow handles and pulled out the stump."—Buffalo Times.

A Curious Epitaph.

One frequently comes across curious epitaphs, but we have never before heard of that useful and necessary kitchen requisite, the "dripping pan," figuring upon a tombstone. The following curious lines, however, are to be found in Woodditton churchyard, near Newmarket, and let into the head of the stone is a dripping pan:

To the Memory of William Simonds, who died March 1, 1753. Aged eighty years.

Here lies my corpse who was the man
That loved a sop in dripping pan
But now believe me I am dead
See here the pan stands at my head
Still for sop to the last I cried
But could not eat and so I died
My neighbors they perhaps may laugh
Now they do read my epitaph.
