BIG SUMS REQUIRED

School Trustees Tabulate Extraordinary Expenditure.

RATEPAYERS VOTE JANUARY

Nearly $100,000 Wanted for Public Schools and $175,000 for High School Purposes.

Two hundred and seventy-four thousand dollars odd is the sum which the people will be asked in January to pay by way of extraordinary expenditure by the school board. This estimate was drawn up by a committee of the school board and accepted by the full board yesterday afternoon. In recommending to the council that this sum should be incorporated in three by-laws, and presented to the people at the time of the general elections, the trustees are acting simply as ratepayers. Steps will be taken by the city council to secure a petition signed by the necessary 10 per cent. of the ratepayers to allow them to submit the proposed by-laws, and it will then be left for the people to vote on them in January.

This large sum of $274,790 demanded by the school trustees is necessitated, they claim, by the past and probable growth of the city. For convenience it will be distributed among three by-laws made up as follows. First, a by-law for public school purposes. This will contain an item of $40,000 for an eight room school to be built probably on the Lord Kelvin site. Fifteen thousand will be needed for the extension of the Sapperton school, and $11,110 to pay off the balance owing on the Sixth avenue site. A small sum of $2180 is devoted to excess expenditure on the Queensborough school, and $20,000 is put aside for the purchase of a new school site. With the addition of $11,590 for costs, which includes the discount at which the bonds were sold last year, and will probably be sold this year, the total for public school purposes amounts to $99,790.

High School Site.

The second by-law will be for the purchase of a high school site. For this the sum of $175,000 was not considered extravagant, as the trustees expressed their opinion generally that the high school should be built in some commanding position where it could be seen, and where it would be central enough to accommodate the greatest number of pupils. For the construction of the building itself a third by-law of $100,000 will be submitted. With this amount of money it is hoped that it will be possible to build a ten room school, with basement, auditorium, and science department.

Passed Unanimously.

These estimates were passed unanimously, and the secretary was instructed to take the resolutions round to the board's legal adviser, Mr. Whiteside, tomorrow morning, so that he can put everything in order before they are handed in to the mayor immediately afterwards.

STREET ROBBERY IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

Vancouver Lady Robbed of Hand Bag and $7.00—Scared, But Held on to Handle.

Vancouver, Dec. 6.—While she was passing down Dunsmuir street yesterday afternoon in front of St. Ann's convent on her way to her home at 162 Homer street, Mrs. S. Goodall was rudely jostled by a big towering man, who finally wrested her chatelaine bag from her hand and ran. Mrs. Goodall lost $7 which she carried in the bag.

"The only thing that I saved," she said, "was the handle of the bag. I held on to it in spite of the fact that I was horribly frightened, but the brute tore it away from me."

Usually Mrs. Goodall, who is suffering from nervous trouble, is accompanied when she has occasion to leave the house by her friend, Mrs. J. Brown. This time Mrs. Brown was busy and Mrs. Goodall left the house alone.

"I was going home after making a purchase in a downtown store," she said, "when a man came rushing up behind and after snatching at my wrist tore away at my bag. He got it after a while and I was so frightened that I nearly fainted."

Mrs. Goodall has not recovered from the shock and it may be necessary for her to go to a hospital.

The man who held her up must have been six feet tall by the description which she gives. He had a cap on and wore a short dark overcoat. She was sure that he was a white man.

City detectives have been advised of the holdup, but they have failed to make any arrest in connection with it.

RUTHENIAN LOVER IS SAVAGE WOOER

Stabs Woman Who Refused to Elope with Him—Victim in Hospital Seriously Injured.

Edmonton, Dec. 6.—Mrs. Lena Hincop, an employee of the St. Elmo hotel, was stabbed last evening by a Ruthenian who had threatened her life on several occasions. The would-be murderer inflicted two stab wounds.

After her injury, Mrs. Hincop, who is a Rusisan, staggered to the room of the wife of the manager of the hotel. She was conveyed to a hospital, where her condition is said to be serious.

Late this evening she told the police that the man's name was Turko Wozga. About a week ago she refused to elope with him and he said he would be back later, and that unless she went away with him he would kill her.

M'NAMARA CASE DECIDED RESULT

Attorney Harriman, Seeking Election as Mayor, Swept to Defeat by Strong Union Vote.

Los Angeles, Dec. 6. — George Alexander has been re-elected mayor of Los Angeles, being swept into office by a landslide which gave him a plurality exceeding 35,000, and carried with him every other person on the ticket endorsed by the business interests of the city, the damaged machines of both big political parties and the "Good Government" forces.

The Socialist-Labor union leaders admit their utter rout and positively insist that the real reason was the eleventh hour developments in the McNamara murder trials. The fact that Job Harriman was one of the labor men's attorneys cost him the votes of thousands of union men and women here, who blamed him for not publicly repudiating the McNamaras as soon as he found they were guilty.

The vote was the largest in the history of the city. It was the first time in the history of California that women were permitted to vote in a municipal election in a large city and they voted almost solidly against Harriman and his associates. The Alexander forces will have complete control of the city affairs for the next two years, having elected every councilman and member of the educational board.

Prohibition was snowed under, the suggestion that the city go dry having been overwhelmingly defeated by a ratio of about 4 to 1.

FINE CONCERT IN ST. PATRICK'S HALL

Distinguished Mountain Ash Choir in Excellent Program Delight an Appreciative Audience.

Those who attended the concert given by the Mountain Ash choir last evening did their best to make up by enthusiastic appreciation for the smallness of their number. It was a good concert.

The opening piece, "The Soldier's Chorus," brought out to the full the splendid volume of sound of which the choir is capable. The familiar "Old Black Joe," half-happy, half-regretful, stirred the heart like sad-sweet, fireside memories. Then with a swing the singers dashed into the laughing "Gypsy Chorus," and mirth prevailed.

Perhaps the soloist to score the greatest success in the first half of the program was Mr. Harry Lewis, whose glorious tenor voice is the delicate instrument of every motion, every delicate turn of feeling which a song demands. "How Vain is Man," he sang, only to be recalled by an encore, that would not be denied, to charm everyone with "The Dear Little Shamrock." Welsh, though he is, Mr. Lewis endowed these simple words with all the peculiar charm of Ireland.

Mr. Steves Jenkins in "Good Company" also achieved a notable success, while Mr. Hopkins, who sang "Annie Laurie" by request, did not mar the tuneful simplicity of the fine old song by fancied airs, that a singer of less taste or skill might have chosen to employ.

At this stage of the program Mr. Edgar Jones, accompanist, played Chopin's Waltz in E Flat, and then, as an encore Paderewski's lightly tripping "Minuet." Mr. Godfrey Price sang "The Burgler" in a fine bass voice that set the listener's blood leaping through his veins, as the hero blew that last proud contemptu-

EN ROUTE TO DELHI

Royal Train Left Bombay Yesterday Morning.

VISIT NOT WITHOUT DANGER

Royal Carriage Closely Guarded by Cavalry on Way to Depot—Couldn't Be Seen.

Bombay, India, Dec. 6—King George and Queen Mary today left Bombay for Delhi, where the coronation durbar will be held next Tuesday. As a result of the burning yesterday of the royal reception tent at Delhi by an incendiary, the utmost precaution was taken by the officials at Bombay to guard their majesties against the slightest mishap during the procession to the railway station today. Troops lined the route to the station from the government house and the royal carriage was so closely guarded by cavalry escort that it scarcely could be seen.

Extraordinary precautions have been taken by the railroad officials to ensure the safety of the royal train during its journey northward.

All local princes ruling states through which the train passes have been notified that they will be held personally responsible for any untoward incident.

MUNICIPAL FIGHT BRISK IN BURNABY

Monthly Meeting of Ward III Ratepayers Enlivened by Presence of Two Candidates.

The regular monthly meeting of Ward 3 Ratepayers Association, Burnaby, was enlivened somewhat, last evening, by the presence of two of the three candidates for the Reeveship, Councillors Coldicott and Rumble. President H. M. Mansfield was in the chair.

Following the reading and adoption of the minutes of the previous meeting, the chairman mentioned the presence of the two office seekers but asked them to eliminate politics from any remarks which they wished to make. Several of those present objected to this ruling, so politics it was.

The First Speaker.

Mr. Rumble was the first speaker, and he dwelt for thirty minutes on his record as representative of the municipality and on a few of the planks of his platform in the present fight. He criticized the present way of opening up new streets and advocated a plan where a street once started was to be stumped and graded at one time. He also advocated the use of gravel on the streets which, he claimed, while not as substantial as crushed rock, was cheaper, and the money spent would cover a large area

He favored the scheme of dredging Burnaby Lake and making it a pleasure spot. The B.C.E.R. franchise was gone over, and the speaker remarked that the whole affair had been bungled from start to finish.

He was given a good hearing by the large attendance.

Councillor Coldicott.

Councillor Coldicott was given the same length of time in which to address the meeting as had been given to the other speaker. He told his hearers that the municipality needed a better engineering staff to cope with the increasing work in that department.

Mr. Coldicott attacked the present policy of the council in regard to the awarding of contracts on street work, mentioning that the present plan gave the local men absolutely no chance to bid on the work. He favored the idea of dividing them up and giving actual settlers a show instead of Southern European laborers doing the work.

The B.C.E.R. came in for a grilling as a grand wind-up. The speaker told his hearers that the present franchise was not worth the paper it was written on and that when the courts finished with the case now pending, the people of Burnaby would be in a position to dictate terms instead of asking for them. He said that if elected he would at once take steps to remedy the crowded cars on the Central Park line where "the people are jammed in to the cars like cattle."

Mr. Coldicott advocated an investigation of the power rates charged by the electric company, comparing the local rate of 15 cents per killowatt against that of Winnipeg, where the price is only 3 cents.

Councillor Rumble was kept busy later in the evening answering questions as to where he stood on several matters.

A Prosperous Year.

Winnipeg, Dec. 6.—The government crop report for the year was issued today. It shows that for the farmers 1910 was the most prosperous year in the past decade.

PERSIA MILITANT

Factions Unite In Face of Crisis.

RUSSIA MUST NOT ADVANCE

Shah's Government Sends Ultimatum to St. Petersburg—Europe Only Mildly Excited.

London, Dec. 6.—A despatch from Teheran to the Post says Persia has sent an ultimatum to Russia demanding that the Russian troops shall not advance beyond Kazvin, and that no more Russian troops shall be sent there. If these demands are not acceded to within thirty hours Persia gives notice that she will attack the Russian troops.

All factions, according to the correspondent, are uniting against the Russians, whom they regard as the common enemy.

IS THIS EVIDENCE OF SILENT TRAGEDY

What may turn out to be the evidence of a silent tragedy was discovered yesterday by some government workmen engaged in laying down a sidewalk between the Brunette mills and Millside. These men found a heap of clothes, bedding and other necessaries with a bundle of letters written in a foreign hand, a watch and an oilskin overcoat lying near their work.

Chief Wilkie, of the provincial police, went down to investigate, but no further traces of the missing man were discovered. The letters have been brought back to the head office, and seem to be written in Finnish or some kindred dialect.

THIEVES BROKE IN BUT TOOK LITTLE

Mr. Biggar, of South Westminster, Robbed and Property Damaged—Provincial Police.

About 4 o'clock this morning the premises of Mr. H. B. Biggar, of South Westminster, were burglariously entered. A shotgun and some loose cash were taken, while the robbers did damage to property to the extent of $100.

Mr. Biggar states that the thieves took out one of the top windows and entered by this means. They went to the cash register, which was in the store, but apparently did not know how to open it. Accordingly they tried unsuccessfully to break it open. "In any case," chuckled Mr. Biggar, "there was nothing in it." The robbers then stole the above mentioned goods and left on hearing movements above.

"I notified Mr. Wise, the policeman here," complained Mr. Biggar, "and rang up the headquarters of the provincial police in New Westminster. The latter did absolutely nothing. They did not even come over here."

Interviewed yesterday afternoon, Mr. Wilkie, chief of the provincial police, explained that this matter was within the jurisdiction of the municipal police of Surrey. Any interference on his part would be purely complimentary, he said, although, of course, in any serious case the provincial police were always ready to lend every assistance in their power. "As to this case," he wound up, "Mr. Biggar rang me up around 10 o'clock, and the robbery took place early in the morning. Also, he had notified the local policeman, so, in any case, what was the use of my going down there?"

SECRETARY OF BOARD RESIGNS POSITION

Mr. E. C. Davey, secretary of the school board, has resigned his position, as he is compelled to return to the old country with Mrs. Davey on account of the latter's ill-health. The school board, in parting with Mr. Davey, expressed their regret at his departure, and they tendered him their sympathy in the unfortunate circumstances.

Mr. Davey states that he leaves on Friday and will go to Oxford, England. His future movements are quite uncertain.

Mr. L. A. White has been appointed to fill Mr. Davey's place until the end of the year, when the position of secretary to the board will be open to competition in the usual way.

Meeting of B. C. Bible Society.

The annual meeting of the New Westminster branch of the B. C. Auxiliary Canadian Bible society was held at the Queens Avenue Methodist church yesterday evening. At the same time the tercentenary of the authorized version of the English Bible was celebrated. Mr. D. S. Curtis was in the chair, and several interesting addresses were delivered.

FOUR CONSTABLES ADDED TO FORCE

Better Protection for City—Chief Bradshaw Reports Force in Good Condition.

Increased police protection is assured the city by the addition of four members to the force decided on at the last meeting of the police commissioners. One of these four men will be detailed to the Sapperton district, and the other three will be used on night duty on the hill. Chief Bradshaw also spoke of the necessity of having mounted men on the force, and of obtaining an automobile, but these matters were left over till next spring.

The figures of the department for the last eleven months were submitted by the chief, and showed a great increase in the amount of business handled by the department. From the beginning of the year to the end of November there have been collected in fines $5436.20, as against $4322 during the same period of 1910. It was also shown that there were on the force seven constables, one sergeant, one chief, a jailer and a special constable. It was owing to these numbers appearing insufficient, that the commissioners decided to take on four more men.

The force as it existed was reported to be for its number satisfactory and efficient. During the year not a single complaint had been laid against any one of its members. On hearing this report the mayor expressed, on behalf of the commissioners, their general satisfaction with the condition of the police department.

Petty Robberies.

The matter of petty robberies, which has been troubling the town during the past few months, was touched upon. The chief reported that a great many of these had been committed by boys, of whom three had been captured and sent to the penitentiary.

The full commission, consisting of Mayor Lee, Alderman Dodd and Mr. T. S. Annandale, was present on this occasion.

GRAVEYARD OF PACIFIC OCEAN

Life Saving Steamer Goes Into Service on West Coast of Vancouver Island.

Victoria, Dec. 6.—The Dominion government is preparing to equip an efficient life-saving patrol for the west coast of Vancouver island. The steamer Newington will be equipped with wireless and placed in patrol service at Bamfield, Ucuelet and Clayoquot. Life-saving crews will be taken to any vessels in distress along the coast line by the Newington, which will be in constant communication with chain wireless stations.

Shelters are to be built at various points and a coastguard service established.

AFTERMATH OF M'NAMARA TRIAL

Federal Officials Will Take Up and Conduct Probe of Alleged Dynamiters' Conspiracy.

Los Angeles, Dec. 6.—The Socialist leaders here insist that the McNamara brothers were traded for an issue on which the municipal election was won. In other circles it is freely admitted the plea of guilty in the McNamara cases on the eve of election was responsible for the landslide in favor of the Alexander leaders.

Five hundred secret service men have been placed at the disposal of Oscar Lawler, special deputy attorney general, named to have direct charge here of the probe of the alleged dynamite conspiracy. It is intimated by persons close to him that the first indictments in the investigation will come here and not at Indianapolis. The proceedings here will be pushed before those in the east, it is also asserted, in order that men may be entangled who might otherwise escape if they were indicted in Indiana.

In addition to evading the enormous expense, District Attorney Fredericks and his assistants are convinced the federal courts can do quicker work, as all of the evidence gathered by the county and the Burns people for use in the McNamara cases has been turned over to Oscar Lawler and his picked men. It will be taken up by the federal officials, and there is no attempt made to hide the fact that Lawler expects the indictment of

CHINA SEEKS PEACE

Hostilities in Progress North of Hankow.

PROVINCIAL CONVENTION

Regent to Manchu Throne Deposed by Yuan Shi Kai—Empress Signs Edict.

San Francisco, Dec. 6.—Despatches received here today from Shanghai by the Chung Sai Yat Po, a Chinese daily paper, reports the capture by the revolutionists of Wong Po, a city to the north of Hankow, in the Hupeh province. The revolutionists are now said to be fighting hard for the town of Kao Kan, where the imperialists have made a decided stand. Another message from Hong Kong states that the republican government has adopted stern measures to suppress the piracy and robbery from which the Canton district has been suffering. Besides this a provincial convention has been called at Canton to devise means of restoring peace and security. Three generals in command of as many divisions have been instructed to proceed north to take part in the campaign against the Manchus.

Prince Chun Deposed.

Peking, Dec. 6.—Prince Chun was today deposed as regent to the Manchu throne, upon the orders of Yuan Shi Kai.

Chun probably will be banished. The rebels hailed his removal as regent with warm approval.

Shi Sai, a Manchu, and Hsu Shi Chang, a prominent diplomat, were named as guardians of the baby emperor.

Empress Signs Edict.

Shanghai, Dec. 6.—The edict deposing Prince Chun as regent was signed by the empress dowager, and grants the prince regent the right to abdicate. It allows the premier and his cabinet to take up the appointment of a substitute regent later.

The infant emperor will be raised as a Chinese by Hsu Shi Chang and Shi Sai. The prince regent will retain his title and an allowance of 50,000 taels.

The revolutionary leaders in Shanghai declare that this does not satisfy them.

French Reinforcements.

Hong Kong, Dec. 6.—A detachment of French troops consisting of 200 men of the Colonial infantry and a battery of four guns, arrived here today and have since sailed for Peking.

Personality of Regent.

Peking, Dec. 6.—Prince Chun has been the chief figure in China since the death of the emperor, Kwang Su, and the empress dowager in 1908. From the dark days which followed the death of those rulers he emerged the ruler of China. At no time was Prince Chun's regency a smooth one. He tried to hold to a middle ground, which pleased neither Manchu reactionaries nor the native progressives. He handled the present crisis with perhaps something less than his old time vigor, and recent reports have hinted that his mind was weakening.

Wu Ting Fang, the former Chinese minister to Washington, who is now one of the revolutionary leaders in Shanghai, issued an appeal to Chun a few days ago, urging him to abdicate in favor of the republic. It was reported later from Peking that Chun was willing to accept a pension and retire to Je Hol if his personal safety was assured.

BRUTAL ACT OF MOB VIOLENCE

Racial Prejudice Bursts into Flame in Tennessee—Two Men and One Woman Burned to Death.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 6.—Two negroes and one young negress were burned to death by a mob of white land tenants who objected to the occupancy of land by negroes, near Savannah, Tenn., according to meagre reports received here today. The killing is said to have occurred ten miles from Clifton, Tenn.

The three negroes were traveling to a gin with a load of seed cotton. They were waylaid and tied to the wagonload of cotton, it is said, and the mob, after putting a fire beneath the wagon, stood guard until the negroes were cremated.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE USED TO INTERVIEWS

Ottawa, Dec. 6.—Ambassador Bryce met a number of newspapermen at Rideau Hall today, who had interested in everything but politics. The gist of the conversation, it was said after the conference, revolved in interest from the government's attitude on the reciprocity question, the Canadian Northern railway.

THE DELHI DURBAR.

Tuesday the Day Fixed for the "Reception of the Overlord."

The date of the Durbar is set down as Tuesday next. On that day King George, Queen Mary, and their court will be the central figures in the most gorgeous pageant in the world's history. The word Durbar means the "reception of native rulers by their overlord," but on this occasion it includes an actual coronation. In the presence of representatives of his millions of Hindu and Mohammedan subjects King George will be crowned as Emperor of India, and queen Mary as Empress. Delhi is the ancient capital of the Mogul rulers of India, and although Queen Victoria and King Edward were proclaimed rulers of India on the occasion of their accession to the British throne, the ceremonies were not to be compared for impressiveness with those that Delhi will see on Tuesday. Never before did a British monarch visit his Indian Empire; not since the days of the Mogul dynasty has there been a coronation there. The event is one that can confidently be expected to make a tremendous impression in a country where magnificent and gorgeous ceremonies are valued more highly than anywhere else on earth, and where the idea of power, apart from overwhelming display, can hardly be grasped.

"The Gate of the Kings."

The Royal party made but two stops on the way to Calcutta, one at Malta, and the other at Aden, where Abbas, the Khedive of Egypt, greeted his actual though not his official, sovereign. The landing at Calcutta gave the great princes of India their welcome to their emperor. The Calcutta program included a pageant that was one of the most remarkable sights of the whole visit, and a parade of 20,000 school children. The entry to Delhi was most significant. In the wall there is a gate called "The Gate of the Kings," through which the ancient rulers used to enter. It was last used in 1857 by the rebel leader who set himself up as "King of Delhi." It is a tradition that no one but a king must pass under this archway, even royal princes being excluded, and it is through "The Gate of the Kings" that George V. passed.

On the Historic "Ridge."

For twenty days the king will remain in Delhi, receiving the foreign princes and other notables, and holding levees at which humbler subjects from among the 236,000,000 people in India will be permitted to approach. There will be a notable program of sports, especially horse racing and polo, of which the Indians are inordinately fond, and a grand review of some 90,000 troops. The Durbar proper, or coronation, will be held on Tuesday, in a huge amphitheatre erected on the historic "Ridge," where a handful of Britons won undying glory in the days of the Mutiny. The amphitheatre is outside the city, and a special line of railway has been built to connect the Royal quarter with the great temporary camp that will house the visitors, and with the city itself. Here the government will carry on a dairy, a market, and other necessary conveniences, for it is to be borne in mind that only great modern cities like London or New York or Paris would be equal to the strain that the Durbar would place upon them.

A Mighty Host.

The troops alone will number nearly, if not quite, 90,000, and the native princes will have some 40,000 followers. The royal party and the those specially invited will not exceed 400, but there will be in addition some 12,000 European and American visitors. As to the multitudes of natives who are flocking to Delhi no estimate can be made, but they are great enough to make the utmost demands on the government that has been for months making preparations for their accommodation. Handling the traffc for the coronation in London was a trifle compared with making the arrangement for the Durbar, and it is even more important in India than in England that there should be nothing to mar the success of the ceremonies, for the superstitious East would be keen to read ill-omen for the British raj into any untoward circumstance.

To One Durbar, $5,000,000.

It has been estimated that the Durbar ceremonies will cost the Imperial government some $4,700,000, and the provinces of India another million; and the splendor of the ceremonies can be surmised from the fact that the brilliant Durbar in honor of King Edward's coronation, gorgeous as it was, did not cost more than a million dollars. There will be a considerable drain, too, on King George's private purse, for he took with him hundreds of gifts for distribution among the princes, and all those who have done anything or will do anything to make the great event a success; but there is no doubt in the mind of any Imperialist that the effect of the coronation on India will be worth ten times what it is expected to cost.

Spiking Is Obsolete.

The Manchester Guardian says: "One reads in the war news that the Italians found the guns in the Tripoli forts 'spiked.' If that is meant literally they must have been guns of mainly antiquarian interest. The expression, 'spiking guns,' is a survival from the day when all that was necessary to put a gun out of action (provided, of course, that you had access to it) was a large nail, or spike, and a hammer. You simply drove the nail into the touch-hole at the breech. If the nail was long enough to turn round at the end, on the bottom of bore, so much the better. It is just as simple, perhaps simpler, to put a modern gun out of action. All you want is a hammer. The breech block of the modern gun is held close by screw threads; after the breach block is shut on the shell, a turn or two or three inches engages the threads. By knocking the burr on these threads you prevent them engaging. Any attempt to fire the gun without the breech block being perfectly closed would, of course, be material assistance to the enemy.

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Here's the Proof

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

AUTOS TO BE CHEAP.

Great Olympia Motor Show Proved Small Cheap Car Popular.

Although, comparatively speaking, only a few of the motor cars used in Canada are of English origin, the great majority of the imported cars being manufactured in the United States, the comments which an expert, Mr. John Prolleau, makes on the great Olympia Motor Show, in the London Mail, ought to be interesting to Canadian automobile owners and those who intend to become owners next year. The outstanding feature of the show was the proof it offered that the day of the big car was past. There were many big cars on exhibition, and probably there will always be large, expensive cars in use for touring purposes; but the day has gon past when the cars of great power are occupying the chief place in the calculations of the manufacturers. The small, cheap car is the car of the day and of the future, according to this expert. It is not only the car for the man who cannot afford a big car, but for 90 per cent. of the car buyers who could afford a dozen big cars if they wanted them.

Good, Cheap Cars.

The Daily Mail gives a list of some 20 cars, of British, French and American make, that can be bought with full equipment at sums ranging from $1000 to $1500, and every one of them a thoroughly good car, as the expert can testify from his own experience or from the experience of friends who have tested them. Another list containing about 20 different makes includes cars costing up to $2000, all recommended. In the second list no American cars are mentioned, not because there are not many good American cars to be purchased at this price, but because the writer does not happen to have had personal experience of them. Only one of these 40 cars, and that an American car, selling at $1100, has 25 horse power, and most of them, in both classes, have only 10 or 12 horse power. This is the feature that the Mail's expert dwells upon, the practical disappearance of the heavy car of great horse power. He points out that a few years ago great power was required if the car was to get up any speed, but steady improvements in the engine have made the 15 horse power car of today as powerful as the 50 horse power car of five years or so ago.

What to Pay for a Car

From $5,000 to $10,000 was considered no great price for a good car a few years ago. Today for $2,000 one can purchase a car as good in every respect as the $10,000 car of five or six years ago. There is just one qualification to this statement, and that only applies to a comparison between the $2,000 and the $10,000 car of today. That is unnecessary and extreme speed. The powerful car may be able to make fifty or sixty miles an hour on country roads, and take hills in its stride. Since the law punishes drivers who attempt this speed, the superiority of the powerful car amounts to little or nothing after all, and for all practical purposes the Daily Mail writer asserts that the man who pays more than $2 000 for a motor car is paying more than he needs. He goes so far as to insist that even were the prices the same, the better car of the two is the light car.

The Good Light Car.

It will give sufficient speed for all ordinary purposes; it is just as well made, just as comfortable and reliable. It will cost less to keep, and it will last longer. That the first cost of a motor car is not the most important item is now pretty well recognized. It is the question of upkeep that tells the tale of expensiveness. Tires, gasoline and oil are the chief items of expenditure. The heavy car, that is to say, the high-priced powerful car, is harder on all of them. It requires far more gasoline, more oil, and is deadly in its wear on tires. In fact, the writer tells of one friend whose fad is high-power cars who spends $2500 a year on tires. On the other hand, the owner of the 15 or 20 horsepower car has a right to complain if his yearly tire bills amount to more than $150. Of late years there has been a great improvement in the matter of reducing expense on tire account, due to the better distribution of weight, greater lightness of construction and improved brakes, the last being the most important factor in lengthening the life of tires.

The First Consideration.

Although he is a champion of the low-priced car, Mr. Prioleau says the the purchaser must demand quality before everything else. There are good and bad cars at all prices, and one is more apt, perhaps, to get a bad car for little money than for much money. The point is that there are, as he says, at least 40 manufacturers, British, French and American, who make cars of extreme quality and sell them at prices ranging from $1000 to $2000, so that there ought not to be much risk connected with the purchase if a man will take the time and trouble to make a few enquiries before buying. With the right car, he need not expect to have any renewals, except tires, for three or four years, and then only such small items as sparking plugs, valve springs and carburetter floats. The other parts of the car are now so well made that they may be expected to last as long as the car itself. These are the chief lessons emphasized by the great London show that has just closed.

PULP WOOD CONSUMPTION.

Six Hundred Thousand Cords of Wood Made Into Pulp Last Year.

Nearly six hundred thousand cords of wood were ground into wood pulp by fifty-one pulp mills operating throughout Canada during 1910. Statistics compiled by the Forestry branch of the Department of the Interior show that the total value of this wood was three million, five hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars, and that it was converted into four hundred and seventy-five thousand tons of wood pulp. Quebec is the premier pulpwood province of Canada, because of its extensive spruce and balsam forests suitable for pulpwood. The twenty-five pulpmills in Quebec reported the consumption of fifty-seven per cent of the total for Canada, or twenty-three thousand cords more than in 1909. Ontario, likewise increased the amount consumed in its fifteen pulp mills by over twenty thousand cords and used over one-third of the total consumption, forming with Quebec, 92 per cent of the total. The mills of Nova Scotia consumed nearly thirty thousand cords. New Brunswick used barely one-fifth as much as in 1909, contributing in that year fifteen per cent of the total. In 1910 the amount used was only two per cent of the total, due chiefly to the closing of one large plant. The average value of pulpwood in 1910 was six dollars per cord, and Quebec was the one province in which the price was less in 1910 than in 1909. The price in this province fell off thirty-five cents to five dollars and a half per cord. The highest price paid was in Ontario where it averaged seven dollars, while pulpwood from Nova Scotia at four dollars and sixty cents per cord was the cheapest.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Hen That Liked Kittens

Mrs. Biddy Mothered the Little Kittens

"THE Greens' cat caught a chicken yesterday," said Evelyn.

"No, it didn't," spoke up Jack. "It wasn't the Greens' cat at all. Frankie Green told me. It must have been somebody else's cat."

"Well," went on Evelyn very positively, "it was Mrs. Jones' chicken, and she says it was the Greens' cat, and they'll just have to pay for that little chicken."

"I wonder if you ever heard of a chicken that played foster mother to kittens?" began daddy, wishing to end the dispute.

"No, tell us," cried the children.

"Well," said daddy, "this hen belonged to a farmer in Pennsylvania. This farmer had a pet Maltese cat. A short time ago pussy became the mother of four nice, fat little kittens. She was very proud of them, you may be sure, and cuddled them and washed them as a mother cat loves to do. Out in the barn, where pussy had her kittens in a snug box, the chickens often came picking up the feed dropped by the cattle. The kittens were only a little over a day old when a big speckled gray and white Plymouth Rock hen came into the barn and poked into the corner where Mrs. Puss had her kittens.

"It happened that Mamma Puss was out, and Mrs. Biddy cocked her head to one side as she heard a queer little muffled cry from the box. Then there was another. Mrs. Biddy hopped up on the box and saw those four little kittens cuddling down among the straw.

"'A nice kind of mother they have,' Mrs. Biddy very likely cackled, for she hopped right down into the box. The kittens feeling something warm in the box came crowding about her. The hen drew her wings over them and, my, but those kitties were snug and cosy. When the mother cat came home and jumped up on the box she nearly fainted to see who had taken her place. The hen refused to get out of the box and stuck there until she got ready to go away in the evening. Then Mrs. Puss jumped into the box and looked over her kits. They were all right, and after they had had their supper they went to sleep.

"The next day the hen came back and drove the mother cat right out of the nest, and until those kits were able to toddle about Mrs. Biddy insisted on taking care of them. She seemed to doubt Mrs. Puss's method of bringing up a family. When the hen got the kittens the mother had to sit around and watch until she was ready to leave them and take her turn with the babies.

"No doubt Mrs. Puss was often mad enough to have gone for the old hen tooth and nail, but Mrs. Biddy could use her beak and, you see, it wasn't safe."

FREE TRADE ECONOMICS.

With regard to sugar the British people grew weary of well doing and decided not to fatten any longer on the folly of other countries. The theorists in Germany, France and Austria, who thought the difference between exports and imports was a profit or a loss, adopted a simple means of increasing their profit by selling sugar abroad at a loss. It always seems easy and simple for protectionists to make a profit in that way, but it costs too much. The nations began to see in a dim way that to secure a profit of a dollar by the loss of a dollar and a half was highly satisfactory to the people who got the dollar and to theoretical contemplators of trade statistics, but the load was too heavy to carry. In the strange delusion which theorists manifest each was unwilling to relinquish its losing profit unless the others did likewise. They agreed after two conferences to give up their burdensome profits simultaneously and to cease giving sugar to the British consumers and British industries at a loss, says the Globe.

There were agreements adopted as to sugar exports, these being of the nature of a world of international sugar combine. The pressure of sugar producers in the British West Indies caused Britain to recognize the international sugar trust. The result was an advance in the price of sugar in Britain, with a proportionate shrinkage in sugar-consuming industries and in the table supplies of the average family. Tariff "reform" theories have not made sufficient progress to enable the British people to imagine they see an advantage in this. They would rather have sugar and all the other good things than a favorable balance of trade without them. British discontent has taken the form of a demand that the Russians be allowed to sell more sugar than is specified. If this is not allowed Britain threatens to withdraw from the convention. That would allow foreign nations to give her all the sugar they might see fit for little or for nothing, and to give an eight-day clock or a parlor lamp as a bonus with each barrel. That would be regarded by our opponents of tariff relief as a sad calamity for the mother country, but the British people think that sugar is better than theories, and abundance of good things more satisfactory than statistical balances of trade.

CONSUMPTION RAVAGES QUEBEC

Climate Has Direct Relation to Health —Death Rate Among French.

One of the most valuable medical reports ever issued by a province of Canada is that of the Royal Commission on Tuberculosis in Quebec. It would be difficult to praise too highly the exhaustive labor of the commissioners of which the report is the fruit. But for one thing it might be said that for the next ten or twenty years no other province need appoint a Royal Commission to report on the subject of tuberculosis, so thoroughly have the Quebec commissioners covered the ground; and that is the fact, made plain in the report itself, that circumstances in one province, as regards consumption, may differ very widely from those in another. Quebec has revealed conditions not encountered elsewhere, says the Mail and Empire, and the conduct of the anti-tuberculosis crusade in that province must be planned with a view to these special conditions. It is doubtful if anywhere else in the world women are more subject to tuberculosis than men; it is doubtful if elsewhere in Canada the death rate from phthisis is almost as high in the country districts as in the cities.

High Death Rate Among French.

In the province of Quebec the death rate from tuberculosis is much higher than it is in Ontario and in the neighboring American States, and it is higher among the French-speaking population of the province than among the English-speaking residents of Quebec. It appears to the commissioners that the causes of this remarkable condition are found in the greater poverty of the French-Canadian population, the fact that they neglect or are ignorant of many of the simplest rules of health, and that they form the greater number of artisans and laborers and are thus more exposed to the unhygienic influence of industrial work. The English-speaking population, according to the report, fill the better industrial posts, are better paid in consequence, and live in healthier surroundings. The commissioners say that reform must proceed along the lines of attempting to improve the conditions of industrial work for the French-Canadians, and disseminating among them a greater knowledge of the laws of health.

More Women Die Than Men.

Regarding the remarkable fact that in Quebec women fall more readily victims to the disease than men, the commissioners say that for the six winter months the women of the province, as a rule, spend most of their time immured indoors, and to preserve warmth the houses are too frequently sealed against any fresh air. Even in the summer it is the custom to keep the blinds down and the windows closed, in order to make the houses moderately cool. They mention the fact that the high birth rate among French-Canadian women may also be a factor, since, following childbirth, the resistance to infection of any sort is lowered. There is also to be considered the fact that the larger families of the French-Canadians makes necessary the huddling together of many persons in small rooms, a condition that is highly favorable to the development of the tubercle bacilli. More than twice as many French-Canadian women die of tuberculosis, according to population, as English women. Compared with the incidence of the disease in the male sex, that among the women is as 222 compared with 164.

Climate and Disease.

As regards the relation of climate to the disease, the commissioners find that, apart from the effects of people keeping too much indoors, it is an insignificant one. The disease is slightly more prevalent in March than in any other month of the year, and is slightly less prevalent in September, October, November and December. They do not fail to point to the probability of the germs of the disease, which manifests itself in the spring and summer, having established themselves in the winter months. Cold in itself is not more favorable to the growth of the bacilli than heat, and the report quotes approvingly the words of Dr. Trudeau, who says: "It is not so much where the consumptive lives as how he lives that is of the most importance." The climate of Quebec is not necessarily more favorable to the spread of the disease than that of British Columbia.

A Very High Death Rate.

Just how serious the problem of tuberculosis is for the province of Quebec may be judged from the fact that one-third of all the deaths in the province are attributed to it. It is more deadly than all other infectious diseases combined. Only infantile diarrhoea of all specific diseases commits great ravages. In tuberculosis more than half the victims fall between the ages of 15 and 34, and more than one-third between the ages of 20 and 45. Only two states in the Union, which keep accurate records have a higher death rate; than any other city on this continent or in the British Isles, and in comparison with seventeen civilized countries, Quebec stands sixth as regards the death rate from tuberculosis. A first long stride toward improving her position has been made by the publication of the valuable report from which these facts are taken.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE.

Well-Known Eastern Weekly Widening Bounds.

Few papers on the continent hold the place in the confidence and respect of the people that the Weekly Globe and Canada Farmer, with its Illustrated Magazine Section, does today. For threescore and seven years it has been accorded the foremost place among the metropolitan weeklies of Canada. Not satisfied with this, the enterprising management that has made The Daily Globe one of the leading newspapers on the continent has increased the size of the Weekly Globe and Canada Farmer and added several new writers to the staff in order that it may keep pace with the progressive spirit that is permeating our urban and rural population.

The mail service and great distances make it almost impossible for a large portion of the people to get the benefit of the splendidly equipped news and telegraph service of The Daily Globe.

By this addition to the staff and enlargement of the paper, the management of the Weekly Globe and Canada Farmer hope to compensate those who must be satisfied with a paper once a week by giving them all the week's news in a brief and comprehensive form, thereby increasing the paper's usefulness, interest and educative value.

In order to get more people acquainted with it in its new form the publishers of the Weekly Globe and Canada Farmer are giving those who subscribe for one year before the 31st of December, 1911, a copy of "Daddy's Girl."

On the Shelf.

Aunt—Have you still that doll I gave you, Doris?

Doris—Yes, auntie, but it's broken and has been put away. Have you ever been broken, auntie?

Aunt—Broken? What do you mean, child?

Doris—Why, I heard father say the other day he was afraid you'd soon be on the shelf, and that's where they've put the dolly.

Why France Wants Morocco.

Morocco is a white man's country one and a half the size of France, four and a half times the size of New England and the most productive state of north Africa, perhaps the most productive area of the entire African continent. A key to the Mediterranean, almost touching Europe and a veritable market garden for that continent, contiguous to the French territory of Algeria and but 700 miles from Marseilles, with double the population of Algeria and Tunisia combined, good climate, variety of mountains and plains, including the snow crowned, classic Atlas range, which shuts off or cools the heated winds that blow up from the desert, a rich, fertile soil, abundant rainfall, well distributed rivers and a coast line of 1300 miles on the Mediterranean, 1000 on the Atlantic—Morocco is indeed the golden orange of Barbary and cannot escape the international grab bag of Europe. France needs Morocco, wants Morocco and will spare no pains, even war with a European power, I believe, to acquire this great territory of 300,000 square miles and eight to ten millions of people.—C.W. Furlong in World's Work.

SPORTS

The game in the final for the Brunswick cup, between the High school and St. Andrews (Vancouver) teams, scheduled for Saturday, has been postponed till Christmas Day. The High school team plays the Nomads on Saturday.

Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Class.

The Y. M. C. A. gymnasium class met last night and elected the following officers: President, C. T. H. Storme; vice-president, E. Cook; secretary, W. Innes; committee, L. Rolph, F. Murray and F. Staton. Representative to the physical department council, C. T. H. Storme.

The Rovers and Nanaimo played a goalless draw before 1000 spectators over in the Coal City. According to a correspondent a splendid game was put up by both sides, the stonewall defence of the New Westminster team being very favorably commented on. The goalkeeper especially is reported to have acquitted himself well, and all the efforts of the Nanaimo forwards to get the ball into the net proved fruitless. At the other end of the field it appears Sheppard was doing equally well for Nanaimo. Two fast shots were sent in within the first five minutes of starting the game, but he proved too good to let the bombardment through. For Nanaimo Pat Hewitt is spoken of as playing the star game, while for the Rovers the correspondent picks Bruce and Lyons as having showed the best form on defence. All, however, played up strong and the team are longing for a chance to get their own back from Victoria. This defeat is an unpleasant memory and they would like to wipe it out with a victory, which they believe they might secure at a second attempt.

BOWLING.

With the exception of Leslie O'Connor no one could be blamed much for New Westminster's win over Vancouver last night at the Front street alleys, the Royals being utterly incapable of collecting anything like decent scores. However, the Terminal City men were much worse in their shooting and managed to lose out by 216 pins. Bill Sloan kindly donated the high score (204), while O'Connor had the audacity to get an average of 187. The following is just what did occur:

Westminster.

Fine Concert In St. Patrick's Hall

ous blast in the face of the foe, whose bullets had slain him. Later in the evening Mr. Price sang with Mr. Lewis the duet "Love and War," which strengthened the good opinion already formed of him.

"The Italian Salad" is a sort of hotch-potch of musical terms, a very kaleidoscope of emotions, and is accordingly very difficult to sing. The choir, however, ran off this tour-de-force in shades of expression without an effort, leaving the audience marvelling at the facility with which they accomplished the feat. Twice more did the choir appear in full, and twice more did they charm their hearers completely. In "Little Church" they carried their hearers back to the old places where they were born, and raised sweet memories of simple things that all hold dear. Very different was "Tyrol," their rendering of which has been described so frequently of late in these columns.

Mr. Gwillym Taff scored a great triumph with the martial "Veteran," and the tuneful "Sally in Our Alley." The quartette gave "The Franklyn's Dog," and the humorous "Poor John."

George Llewllyn sang "The Soldier," and as an encore the "Song of the Arrow," his fine bass voice and finished style being manifest in both.

Chilliwack Agriculturists.

Chilliwack, Dec. 6.—The Chilliwack Agricultural society, at its annual meeting, decided against professional horse racing. In future local amateurs alone will be encouraged, and in this way the management expect to do away with the unsatisfactory features, that they have noticed at past meets. Officers for the coming year were elected at the same meeting. Mr. A. L. Coote was chosen president; Mr. J. T. Maynard vice-president, Messrs. H. H. Gervan, J. C. Chapman, W. Knight, Charles Hutcheson, T. E. Caskey and J. H. Ashwell directors for the town, and Messrs. J. R. Walker, H. Webb, G. I. Thornton, James Bailey, J. A. Evans and P. H. Wilson directors for the township. Mr. H. T. Goodland was once more appointed secretary-treasurer.

CENSORSHIP OF MOVING PICTURES

Dominion Government, Replying to U. S. Consul, Says Provincial Control is Absolute.

Ottawa, Dec. 6.—The Dominion government has refused to intervene in the censorship of motion pictures, now under control of the various provincial governments of the country. This was the reply made to the state department of the United States, which, through Hon. J. G. Foster, United States consul general for Canada, asked that the drastic order of the Ontario board of censors with reference to their refusal to allow the exhibition of films showing the American flag, be annulled.

According to Hon. Mr. Foster the reports of outward manifestations against the American flag are greatly exaggerated.

In view of the refusal of the Dominion to take action, there seems to be no relief for the picture men as the American consul general can not deal with a provincial government in a question of this kind.

Aftermath Of McNamara Trial

least a dozen San Francisco labor leaders.

Behind the entire probe is the hope of demonstrating who, among labor leeaders of the country, favor "direct action" and who are pledged to "passive resistance." Names of international chiefs were freely bandied about in the government building today, and it was prophesied that some at least will be under indictment here within a week.

This will reopen the whole controversy whether labor chiefs as a body have advocated and condoned violence, and it is already being charged here that the big business interests of the country plan to take advantage of the government's activity to try to break up the American Federation of Labor.

SMALLPOX RAVAGES IN QUEBEC CITY

Quebec, Dec. 6.—Smallpox, which has almost reached the epidemic stage, is rife in this city, especially in the working class districts. There are about a hundred cases in St. Malo ward alone.

The vaccination ordinance passed a year ago has never been put in operation. It made vaccination compulsory.

Anxiety in London.

London, Dec. 6.—Much anxiety is felt in official circles over the coming Durbar ceremonies. Before the King left England there were many persons to whom his visit to India did not seem advisable because of the many outrages that had occurred recently in that country. This feeling has been revived by news of fires in Delhi, although there is no proof of the fires having been of incendiary origin.

Fable From the Far East.

The hen remarked to the muley cow,
As she cackled her daily lay
(That is, the hen cackled): 'It's funny
How I'm good for an egg a day.
I'm a fool to do it, for what do I get?
My food and lodging. My!
But the poodle gets that, he's the household pet.
And he never laid a single egg yet—
Not even when eggs are high."

The muley cow remarked to the hen,
As she masticated her cud
(That is, the cow did): "Well, what then?
You quit and your name is mud.
I'm good for six gallons of milk each day,
And I'm given my stable and grub;
But the parrot gets that much—anyway
All she can gobble—and what does she pay?
Not a dribble of milk, the dub!"

But the hired man remarked to the pair,
"You get all that's comin' to you.
The poodle does tricks and the parrot kin swear,
Which is better than you kin do.
You're necessary, but what's the use
Of bewailin' your daily part?
You're bourgeois; work's your only excuse;
You can't do nothin' but jes' produce,
What them fellers does it Art."

WHAT'S THE USE OF SHAM?

Why Not, After All, Be Honest in Daily Living.

That old cry of "cui bono?" is supposed to be in the hallmark of the pessimist, but many a self-satisfied one would do well to put the test of "What's the use?" to her daily living.

What's the use of a charitable purse and an uncharitable tongue? Kind words are infinitely more than coronets—or donations on a subscription list.

What's thce use of posing as a peable role in society and a snap dragon in the family circle? Walls have ears, also neighbors have tongues, and the real you is not unknown.

What's the use of posing as a pendant with a dime novel taste? Mentality does not need labeling, and you'll never convince the person with brains that prefer Darwin to the Duchess.

What's the use of playing young when the years have you in their grip? Age is not so unlovely that the aging should treat it as a disgrace. Far better a charming old person than a pitiable mimicry of youth.

What's the use of kicking? It does not make life sweeter to think yourself a victim—nor does it increase your popularity.

What's the use of cultivating automobile tastes on a walking income? There's joy and health in a good walk if you once fight the speed craze.

What's the use of striving for the big puddle, when you would be so much happier in the small one? Learning one's limitations saves heartache.

What's the use of slipshod work? This is an age that demands our best; if we give counterfeit we pay counterfeiter's penalty.

What, after all, is the use of sham of any kind?

QUEEN MARY'S INFLUENCE.

Her Majesty Lends no Countenance to Extremes in Modes.

It is the prerogative of royalty to have a style of its own, and in this respect Queen Mary is a notable example. Brought up from her earliest years in a simple, unostentatious manner, she has never adopted the extremes of fashion. Her taste has inclined her to graceful dignified modes such as become her fine, handsome figure, and the example which she sets proves an excellent influence in checking the taste for bizarre styles.

The queen has never worn a hobble skirt, still less a harem costume and in face of the persistent and almost universal attempt to fashion arbiters and leaders to induce women to array themselves in frocks of the scantiest materials. Her majesty held to her own mode of reasonably ample skirts, and has thereby won the gratitude of British manufacturers. Last May, when the queen's dislike of the light, scanty skirts was made known, court dressmakers received back their clients' costumes in hot haste to put an extra breath into the skirts. Some grumbled at the trouble and disarrangement which this caused in the workrooms, but time has shown how wisely was the queen's influence directed not only towards the discountenancing of an extreme and awkward mode, but to promoting increased trade in dress stuffs.

The new fashion was reducing costumes to a minimum of material; manufacturers and drapers were beignning to find that the quality of goods ordered was falling off, and that, too, in the Coronation season, when most people were buying more new clothes than usual and record sales were anticipated. If the queen's influence did not kill the scanty skirt, it certainly stemmed the tide of fashion towards greater extremes, and put many thousands of pounds into the pockets of both manufacturers and retailers of ladies dress materials.

The wisdom of the queen's example was shown by the aftermath of unemployment among the makers of ladies' underskirts which followed the adoption of the hobble skirt. For not only does that narrow garment take a small amount of stuff to make it, but it precludes the wearing of skirts underneath, and the consequence the Northampton girls lost their occupation in the making of underskirts and were put to less profitable work. The recent strike and lockout of some 1200 girls followed.

Turning to headgear, the queen's influence has been entirely on the side of moderation as to size. Neither Her Majesty nor Princess Mary ever wears large hats. Many years ago Queen Alexandria introduced tha most bewitchingly becoming and compact form of headgear known as the Princess bonnet, which ladies have of late been content to leave to the almost exclusive possession of nurses. The light, small toque followed in the train of the princess bonnet and still holds its own. For many years Queen Mary favored the small toque above all other kinds of headgear, but she has recently adopted a style of her own in a hat of moderate size with a neat small brim shading the eyes. Trimmed high on the left side with flowers or ostrich plumes, the queen's hat achieves a happy medium between the closely-fitting toque and the modern broad-brimmed hat.

The queen's taste in veils may further be instanced as an example of her influence, in preserving simple and becoming fashions. Her example has kept the spotted net in use in spite of the recurrent crazes for large spotted and curiously patterned veils which in extreme cases distorted the features of the wearer, and gave the effect of a black crocodile running across the face, or an alligator attempting to climb one's cheek bones.

The queen is a good business woman, and prides herself on being thoroughly practical. There is no thoughtless extravagance in matters of the royal wardrobe. As Princess of Wales she frequently went shopping, like any other lady, and kept herself informed as to current prices. Her Majesty has not entirely abandoned this habit now that she is queen, and several times a year the West End emporiums which have the honor of her custom. She prefers to see things as they are displayed in the shops to relying for her inspection at Buckingham Palace.

The queen's influence is all on the side of moderation in dress, whether as regards the fashion adopted or the cost, and she is punctilious in dealing with all accounts promptly. There might have been fewer upheavals in the history of European dynasties had such wise methods prevailed as those which distinguish the court of our king and queen in all matters of expenditure.

Some people seem to talk about advice in such a way that it serves as a sort of advertisement to it.

Many a smart man has made a startling discovery. It was simply a smarter man.

Try not to get out with the man who has it in for you.

ABSENTMINDED.

Men of Genius Whose Thoughts Were Went to Wander Astray.

Absorption in their work is often carried to such extremes as to make men of genius strangely oblivious to what is going on around them. Many amusing stories are told illustrative of this tendency to "absentmindedness." According to Sir David Brewster, when Newton left a room to get anything he usually returned without it.

The physicist Rouelle was notoriously absentminded. One day while performing a laboratory experiment he said to his students:

"You see, gentlemen, this caldron over the flames? Well, if I were to cease stirring it an explosion would at once occur that would make us jump."

As he spoke he involuntarily ceased stirring, and his prediction was fulfilled. The explosion took place with a frightful noise, every window in the laboratory was broken, and Rouelle's audience fled wildly outside.

It is related of a gifted ecclesiastic, Bishop Munster, that, returning home and finding his door placarded with the announcement, "The master of the house is out," he calmly remained in front of the door, awaiting his own return.

Buxton, the mathematical prodigy, during a visit to London was taken to see Garrick in "King Richard III." Afterward, being asked how he liked the play, he said he really did not know what it had been about, as he had been too busy counting the words spoken by the different actors and the number of times each went in and out.

Ampere in a moment of preoccupation perciled a problem on the back of a cab standing in the street and was vastly astonished when the starting of the cab caused his problem to disappear. Lombroso says that much the same thing happened to Giola, who, in the excitement of composition, wrote a chapter on the top of his bureau instead of on paper.—Ainslee's Magazine.

Hall Caine's Role.

Hall Caine, with his long hair, his beard and his flowing cape, is fairly well known to everybody, if only from photographs. This fact encourages one to tell a story.

It happened when one of Mr. Caine's plays was running at the Wild-horses-won't-drag-it's-name-from-us theatre. The author decided that the least he could do after the performance was to go round and congratulate the leading lady. So when the curtain fell he went round behind and tapped at the lady's dressing-room door.

The lady sent her maid to see who it was. The maid went.

Now, the passage outside was rather dimly lit, and when the maid opened the door and saw a strange-looking figure standing outside she promptly ejaculated "Oh!" in a tone of extreme surprise, shut the door and returned to her mistress in a state of some bewilderment.

"Well," asked the leading lady, "who is it?"

"I—I scarcely know, miss," gasped the maid, then, as a brilliant afterthought, "unless it's the bearded lady!"—Tatler.

A Clerical Pun.

On one occasion at Athy, where Canon Stavely, the English divine, was then stationed, he was visited by the archbishop, whom he induced to visit a new coffee house which had just been opened in the interests of temperance. Naturally the distinguished guest was served with a sample cup of coffee. He tasted it, while Canon Bagot and the manager waited in complacent expectancy of commendation.

They were disappointed. The cup was hardly set aside by the bishop, who ejaculated, with prolonged and unmistakable emphasis:

"A-bom-i-nable!"

Then the manager suddenly remembered. "Oh, your grace," he explained, "a box of matches fell into the coffee tank this morning, and I did not think it right to waste all the contents of it."

"If your grace will come again," promised Canon Bagot, interposing quickly, "I faithfully promise you a matchless cup of coffee."

An Earl's Adventures.

The Earl of Ranfurly, who recently celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday, has had an adventurous and interesting life. Governor of New Zealand from 1897 to 1904, he was one of the most popular men that colony ever had, and his term of office was prolonged by the unanimous wish of the people. He holds considerable tracts of land in Australia, where he spent some years at fruit-growing. He is a keen yachtsman, and in his collegiate days used to keep a steam yacht, in which he always traveled from Cambridge to London by way of the Ouse, the Wash, and the East Coast. He has had quite a fair share of narrow escapes. On one occasion, when he was playing polo, he was nearly killed by some marksmen practicing at a neighboring range; another time he was knocked down by a couple of runaway horses, and had a third escape when he had to jump from the windows of Government House, Wellington, when a fire occurred there.

Needed a Week's Notice.

It is now fifty years since the British postoffice bank was established. In the early days there were some hazy ideas as to the rules of the bank. "Shure," said an old woman at an Irish branch. "Oi want to bank five pounds. Can I draw it out quick if I want it?" "Indade Mrs. O'Brady," replied the postmaster, "you can draw it out to-morrow if you give me a wake's notice."

The Lost Train.

An Irishman got a job as a porter on one of the English railroads. Shortly after he began his duties a woman went up to him and said:

"I have just lost the train. How long shall I have to wait for the next?"

"Be jabers, you had better go and find the one you lost, else the company will be after yez," returned Pat. —London Answers.

THE "NINE DAYS' WONDER."

William Kemp, the Jigger and Jester, Was the Original One.

It was a certain William Kemp, the most original famous dancer of Queen Elizabeth's day and the creator of low comedy roles in Shakespearean plays, who was the original "nine days' wonder," for Kemp, with ribbons on his jerkin and bells around his legs, jigged and capered all the way from London to Norwich, a distance of some 125 miles. He danced along for nine days and thus made his name and the expression part of household conversation in every hamlet in England and on the continent as well.

Accounts of Will Kemp occupy many pages in the books on Elizabethan drama and those on the manners and customs of the time. It is universally conceded that Kemp created the character of Dogberry in "Much Ado About Nothing" and that of Peter in "Romeo and Juliet."

As for the "nine days' wonder," Elizabethan writers, Ben Johnson among others, often refer to him. He was the subject of many pamphlets, and Kemp himself wrote an autobiography.

Only one copy of Kemp's "Nine Days' Wonder, Performed in a Dance From London to Norwich," is extant, in the Bodleian library at Oxford. But there have been several reprints. Kemp, who describes himself as a man who spent his life "in mad jiggs and merry jestes," recounts blithely and wittily how he and his taborer made their way through Romford, Chelmsford, Sudbury, Rockland and Barford Bridge to Norwich.

They were entertained royally along the route and despite the bad weather, which delayed them, would doubtless have arrived at Norwich long before the twenty-three days were up had not the good folk along the road been so hospitable.

Kemp started from the house of the Lord Mayor of London, and at Norwich he was received by the mayor of that flourishing town, who presented him with a sum of money and pensioned him for life.

When he again reached London, where he had "put out" a sum of money against accident along the road, Kemp was repaid fourfold. It was in 1599 that Kemp performed his "nine days' wonder." It is written, but with doubtful authority, that the idol of the Elizabethan populace afterward capped this feat by jigging over the Alps.

In the old woodcut in the account of Kemp's "daunce" "that most comical and conceited Cavalier Monsieur du Kemp" is seen in Elizabethan morris dance costume jigging away to the music of pipe and drum of his taborer.

Famous Smokers and Antis.

Mr. Gladstone detested tobacco. Thomas Hardy, the great novelist, has never smoked a pipeful nor a cigar in his life. Ruskin abhorred smoking of all kinds.

Sir T. Lauder Brunton does not use tobacco in any form. Other eminent men, past and present, who have disliked tobacco are John Stuart Mill, Sir Robert S. Ball, who never smoked but once, when he was at school; Gen. Sir William Butler, Dr. W. B. Carpenter, the great physiologist; Matthew Arnold, Dr. Alexander Bain, Professors Skeat and Murray, the philologists; Frederick Harrison, Professors Freeman and Gardiner, and Mr. Lecky, the historian; W. D. Howells, and Sir Erskine May.

Non-smokers are, therefore, in very good company. On the other hand, Mark Twain said he commenced smoking when eight years old, and smoked 300 cigars a month from the age of thirty onwards. Edison, at work, chews tobacco constantly. George A. Sala said he was a constant smoker, but if he could begin life again he would never touch tobacco. Mr. G. A. Henty smoked from after breakfast until he went to bed at 3 a.m.

Hero of Balaclava.

"Well done, young Wombwell. I'll write to your father in Yorkshire tonight to tell him how proud he ought to be of his son." Such was the remark made to Sir George Wombwell, who recently celebrated his golden wedding, by the late Duke of Cambridge, when the remnant of the 17th Lancers—the "Death or Glory Boys"—to which Sir George was then attached as a cornet, returned from the "Valley of Death."

Sir George rode on the right flank of Lord Cardigan as extra galloper. Twice he had his mount shot from under him, but he went to within a hundred yards of the terrible batteries unscathed. For his gallantry he was promoted, and ultimately retired from the army in 1855, on succeeding his father in the baronetcy.

Largest of Flowers.

The largest of all the flowers of the the world is said to be the rafflesia, a native of Sumatra, so-called after Sir Stamford Raffles. This immense plant, says The Scientific American, is composed of five round petals of a brickish color, each measuring a foot across. These are covered with numerous irregular yellowish white swellings. The petals surround a cup nearly a foot wide, the margin of which bears the stamens. The cup of the rafflesia is filled with a fleshy disk, the upper surface of which is covered with projections like miniature cows' horns. The cup, when free from its contents, will hold about twelve pints. The flower weighs about fifteen pounds and is very thick, the petals being three-quarters of an inch.

An Ancient Bet.

Near the ancient country seat of the Carews in Cornwall, England, stands a quaint old church, to the door of which are nailed four horseshoes. These have been in their present position for nearly 500 years. A former member of the Carew family made a wager with a friend that he would ride his horse a mile out to sea in Tor Bay and back again. The feat was more difficult than appears at first sight, for the cross-currents are dangerous, even for boats.

He won the bet, however, and nailed the four horse-shoes of his steed to the church-door to commemorate the performance.

ANCIENT ARITHMETIC.

Problems Schoolboys Had to Solve Thirty-six Centuries Ago.

There is a ray of vindictive comfort for the modern schoolboy in the fact that for over 3,000 years his schoolboy progenitors have been worried by just such problems in arithmetic as annoy him most.

Among the archaeological discoveries made in Egypt is a papyrus roll, in excellent condition, dating from about 1700 B. C. This roll, which had a long heading beginning, "Directions how to attain the knowledge of all dark things," proves beyond doubt that the Egyptians of that time had a thorough knowledge of the elements of arithmetic.

Numerous examples show that their principal operations with units and fractions were made by means of addition and multiplication. Subtraction and division were not known in their present form, but correct results were obtained nevertheless.

Equations are also found in the papyrus. Here is one that brings the Egyptian schoolboy home to us:

Ten measures of barley are to be divided among ten persons in such manner that each subsequent person shall receive one-eighth less than the one before him.

Another example given is: There are seven men; each one has seven cats; each cat has eaten seven mice; each mouse has eaten seven grains of barley; each grain of barley would have yielded seven measures of barley. How much barley has been lost?

The papyrus also contains the calculation of the area of a circle, attempts to square the circle and finally calculations of the cubic measurements of pyramids.—New York Tribune.

ENLIVENED THE SCENE.

But Hero's Improvisation Did Not Help Leander Much.

Innumerable are the tales of actors in difficulties. Here is one related of Christian Brandes, the dramatist, who in his youth belonged to a strolling company which played pieces of an extremely primitive kind.

On one occasion the play was entitled "Hero and Leander," the dialogue being left pretty much to the discretion of the players. It had been agreed, however, that Hero was to be coy and not confess her love for Leander till he had again and again expressed his readiness to be hanged, burned and drowned in her behalf. But the lady was soft hearted, besides being exceedingly fond of Brandes, nor could she listen unmoved to the first passionate pleadings of the youth, who explained that he had swum across the Hellespont to see her. "My dear Leander," she exclaimed, "I cannot resist you. Accept my hand and my heart."

Leander knew not what to say. All his prepared phrases were useless. The manager came to his aid with a loud whisper addressed to Hero, "In the fiend's name, improvise a few words and retire!"

The poor girl, turning to the audience, repeated her lesson. "In the fiend's name, I improvise a few words and retire," and then tripped off the stage, greatly relieved.—London Graphic.

A Rossini Joke.

Rossini promised a place in the opera orchestra to a trombonist and then forgot about it, says the Musical Courier. At one of his dinner parties the butler announced the visit of this *same protege. Rossini hastened to wel*come him and, relieving him of his instrument, disappeared a few moments, to return with his friend. Handing the instrument to the trombonist with a request to let the company hear him, Rossini prepared to listen. Trombone to lips, the musician rose—dismay, no sound, cheeks bulging, eyes distended. In vain the unhappy man makes superhuman efforts to produce harmonious sounds. At last! Oh, effort supreme! With a sound like a hoarse goose cackle there shoots from the trombone a mass of sticky macaroni. "No harm, my friend," said Rossini; "you have proved yourself a strong musician." And the next day the coveted position was offered to the trombonist.—Boston Transcript.

Sunlight and Germs.

Here is an instructive experiment made recently on the effects of sunlight. Some germs of the terrible disease, anthrax, were sown on two plates of gelatin, and while one plate was kept in the dark the other was placed in the sunlight. The germs grew, and at the end of ten minutes there were 300 colonies or groups in the sunshine plate and 400 colonies in the dark plate.

One hour later the result was: In the sunshine plate, none; in the dark plate, 2,520. No disease germ thrives in sunlight.

Modesty.

Modesty is one of the sweetest and most desirable qualities one can possess, and yet too much modesty hinders advancement. When this quality is overdeveloped it antagonizes aggressiveness, without which no great success can be attained.

Parried.

Wife—A tree, you know, gets new clothes every year—hat, parasol, everything. Husband—Yes, darling—and makes them all itself.

What She Might Catch.

She—They say there are germs in kisses. What do you suppose a girl could catch that way? He—A husband.—Exchange.

Resist thy inclinations in the beginning.—Thomas a Kempis.

NAPOLEON AND SUICIDE.

His Draft of Poison and His Comments on Self Destruction.

It is said that when all seemed lost to Napoleon in 1814—the year before Waterloo—he thought of suicide as an end to his career. He actually took a draft of poison, but the essential element in the concoction had lost its efficacy. He, however, conquered his inclination to self destruction, which he ever afterward held in abhorrence, even during his hopeless exile at St. Helena. When during his first consulship one of his grenadiers killed himself Napoleon issued an order to the guards:

"The Grenadier Gobain has killed himself owing to a love affair. He was otherwise an excellent soldier. The first consul commands that the guards should be informed that a soldier ought to conquer the grief and bitterness of his passions; that there is the same courage in enduring with patience the pangs of the soul as in facing bravely the fire of a battery. To give oneself up to grief without resistance or to kill oneself to escape is to abandon the field of battle before being beaten."

In a conversation with Goethe, Napoleon blamed the poet for allowing Werther to commit suicide, and in 1816 he said to O'Meara:

"Suicide is the act of a gambler who has lost everything or of a ruined profligate. I have always thought that a man shows more courage in supporting the evils that afflict him than in getting rid of his life."

TRAGIC IN ITS BREVITY.

The Story of the Duel Between Hamilton and Burr.

The story of the Hamilton-Burr duel is tragic in its brevity. The little party of five—the principals, their seconds and the surgeon—was on the ground not long after sunrise. The preliminaries were soon arranged. As Pendleton, Hamilton's second, gave him his pistol he asked, "Will you have the hairspring set?"

"Not this time," was the significant reply, and then the men faced each other.

According to the best authorities upon a disputed subject, Burr fired at the word. At the report Hamilton started forward with a convulsive movement, reeled, involuntarily discharging his pistol into the foliage above him, and fell headlong. Burr, with an expression of pain upon his face, sprang toward him, but Van Ness, his second, seized him by the arm and hurried him down the bank and into their boat.

Hamilton, being lifted up, revived for a moment and gasped, "This is a mortal wound, doctor." Relapsing again into unconsciousness, he was again revived by the fresh air of the river. "Pendleton knows," he said, trying to turn toward his friends, "that I did not intend to fire at him."

At 2 the afternoon following he had breathed his last.

The Snake Stone.

In most accounts of snake charming in India the snake stone plays an important part. When the charmer is bitten the stone is applied to the bite and is supposed to aid in his recovery. Writing in the London Field, Lieutenant L. Mackenzie gives some notes on two of these stones, which he had the opportunity of seeing. They were triangular in shape, flat and rounded, with smooth polished black surfaces. They are said to come from the hills of Tibet and to be the solidified saliva of the markhor. This animal is spoken of in Lieutenant Mackenzie's note as the "Persian snake eater." Its saliva is thought to contain an antidote to snake poison. The markhor is a species of wild goat found in India, Tibet and Kashmir.

Jean of Arc's Bell.

In the cathedral church of Notre Dame, Paris, there is a bell which dates from the days of Joan of Arc—"the blessed bell" which sounded the tocsin when the Maid of Orleans appeared in August, 1429, and Paris was besieged by the English. This historic bell, referred to by Victor Hugo in "Notre Dame de Paris," was given to the cathedral in 1400 by Jean de Montaign. It was refounded in 1686 and then rebaptized under the name of Emmanuel Louise Therese in honor of Louis XIV. and Marie Therese of Austria.—London Globe.

He Knew Jim.

Jim had made an unsuccessful attempt to conquer the world and came back to the Tennessee town dirty, worn out and hungry.

"Uncle John," he said melodramatically, "I came home to die."

"No, dod gast you," said unsympathetic Uncle Jim, "you came home to eat!"—Success Magazine.

It Surely Will.

"And you like chicken, Sam?"

"Gee! I certainly does, boss."

"And you get 'em once in awhile?"

"Oh, sure, boss, I gets 'em."

"How do you get 'em, Sam?"

"Well, boss, you know dat ol' sayin', 'Love will find the way.'"—Yonkers Statesman.

Quick Time.

Ada—Men are slow! It took him nearly two hours to propose to me last night. Floss—And how long did it take you to accept him, dear? Ada—Just two seconds.

Consolation.

Binks—Confound it! I've gone and sat down on that chair I varnished this morning. Mrs. Binks—Well, for once you've stuck to your work.—Boston Transcript.
