Further arrests this week show that Chief Maitland-Dougal and his constables are determined to make the selling of intoxicants to Indians so hazardous both to buyer and seller that the small profit to be derived will not be worth bothering with. The police are determined to put a stop to this trafic and the good work they are doing is bringing praise from all quarters.

Rumors of a provincial election have been rife for some time and it has been pretty generally understood that it would come off some time this year but a definite announcement from the Premier was needed to make it a sure thing.

Barring an unforeseen happening before election day the McBride government is practically assured of a return to power. It is not saying too much to say the present government is more popular right now than ever before.
