LIQUOR AMENDMENTS

Proposed Changes in Bylaw of City Governing Sale of Intoxicants.

Formidable Petition Presented—Consideration of It Is Left Over for a Week

The council last evening had a petition signed by over 800 residents asking that the liquor bylaw of the city be amended by the striking out of section 9, by reducing the fee charged bartenders and by altering the hours for closing of bars from 11 o'clock at night to the morning to 12 o'clock at night to 6 in the morning with the exception of Saturday evening when it is proposed to make the closing hour 11 instead of 10.

The petition was a record one being yards in length. Section 9, which it is proposed to strike out provides for the hotel keeper seeing that an intoxicated man who has been served with liquor in his house is accompanied by a sober man upon leaving the premises.

Ald. Clayton pointed out that this was a formidable petition. He moved that this lay on the table for a week. He wanted to give a chance to hear both sides.

Ald. Hilditch refrred to the fact that the liquor license bylaw passed just before the last election contained two clauses which he objected to at the time. His return at the election indicated that the citizens endorsed his stand. He intended to bring in a bylaw eliminating these clauses. He suggested that this petition should stand over until that time when these features asked for could be considered at the same time.

After some little passages between Ald. Hilditch and Ald. Pattullo, the latter asked if it was the intention to bring in a new bylaw or one to amend these sections objected to only.

Ald. Hilditch said it would practically be a new bylaw eliminating these sections.

"That is a lot of work for nothing," said Ald. Pattullo.

"There has been a lot of that," retorted Ald. Hilditch.

The motion of Ald. Clayton carried.

Local News

One drunk was fined in the police court this morning.

Kelly, Douglas & Co. have asked the city council for electric power for the elevator in their warehouse. The question is being considered by the electric light committee.

C. C. Perry delivered an interesting address on Shakespeare and his work before the Presbyterian Club last evening. On Sunday evening Mr. Perry occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church in the absence of Rev. Mr. Kerr, who went to Stewart.

On the recommendation of the city engineer, McInnes & Kelly have been granted an extension of the time for the completion of their contract on Eighth avenue and Hays Cove avenue. The extension calls for 60 days' longer time. The weather conditions was the ground for the extension.

The city engineer has reported to the council upon the width of sidewalks to be adopted in the city. These are 17 feet for 94-foot streets, 12 feet for 72-foot streets and 10 feet for 56-foot streets. The plans upon which the sidewalks will be erected was also submitted, approved of by the streets committee and finally passed by the council.

On Thursday night, the local Salvation army will again entertain their many friends. An elaborate programme has been prepared, consisting of vocal solos and duets, recitations and readings, cornet solos, dialogues, violin selections, Indian club swinging, Barbell drill, etc. Gray's orchestra will render several selections and Mr. Fred Stork will be chairman. Tickets at 50 cents each may be secured from any of the officers. Go early and secure a good seat. At the conclusion of the programme, coffee, tea, sandwiches and cake will be served.

NEARING THE CLOSE

Routine Business in Legislature is Being Transacted at the Present Time.

Women Are Interested in Bills Now Before the House

(Special to The Journal)

VICTORIA, Feb. 20.—Yesterday was a day of routine business in the legislature, both sittings being occupied almost entirely by reading bills in committee. Apart from this, three bilsl were introduced embodying legislation asked by some recent requests of the national council of women.

These related to widows' dower, the inheritance act and the maintenance of wives deserted by their husbands.

The department of railways act for purpose of creating a minister of railways passed its third reading.

NO LONGER DARK

Prince Rupert streets are again illuminated. The city lighting system is proving a success and the lights arranged in clusters about the main streets are a great convenience and a decided advantage in every way.

The intention is to provide a limited number of private lights as quickly as the connections can be made. The new hospital will be early provided with a supply for lighting.

QUESTION OF BOSSES

Too Many Are in Authority It Is Believed by Ald. Clayton

The city electrician forwarded a letter last evening to the council asking for an increase in salary to $200 a month with different conditions.

Ald. Clayton called attention to the fact that there appeared to be too many bosses in connection with the work at times and as a means of settling the matter proposed to dispense with the services of the two foremen employed.

It was finally agreed to refer the whole matter to the light committee who will deal with the questions on their merits.

A SOCIAL EVENING

Longshoremen's Union Entertained Their Friends at Gathering in Industrial Hall

On Saturday evening the Longshoremen's Union of this city held the first of a series of social evenings that are to be given by that body. There were representatives of other labor organizations present and the Longshoremen made excellent hosts. Over 100 were present and about six hours' of enjoyment was provided.

The programme included music and dancing while refreshments were served with a lavish hand to all the guests.

The intention is to continue these social gatherings from time to time throughout the next few months. The gathering assembled in Industrial hall.

C. H. Saule, who has been identified with the Optimist since early in its history, has resigned his position on that paper. Since the sale of the paper he has been in charge of the business end of the office.

WAGE QUESTION IS NOT YET SETTLED

City Council Discuss the Question at Some Length Last Night---Final Action Laid Over Until Legal Advice is Obtained by Acting Mayor.

The city council last evening debated the question of increased wages to the city workmen employed on the streets and after several hours' discussion in which representatives of the Industrial workers took part, the matter was laid over for a week when the legal aspect of the case with respect to existing contracts will have been laid before a solicitor and an opinion obtained.

The council last evening had a report from the special committee that went into the subject recommending the referring of this to the electors in the form of a plebescite.

In addition to this there was a letter to George Casey of the Industrial workers from the city clerk of Rossland, stating that $3.50 a day was paid for street work in that city.

A message from Mayor Taylor, of Vancouver, was also read in which he replied to a letter saying that the rate in Vancouver was $2.50 a day, but he was moving in favor of a $3 day. He also gave the information that rents were from $15 to $30 a month; groceries $20; meat $6; fuel $3.50 anud light $2.50.

Ald. Clayton

Ald. Clayton, in support of the motion in favor of a plebescite, said it would be necessary to go into the matter a little. He stood in exactly the same position as he did when he answered the questions of the Industrial workers before the election. He asked then, in reply to the privilege of granting the 45 cents an hour that they should give something, namely, that they should give citizenship in return. He stood by that. The Industrial workers had since election time passed a resolution condemnatory of the council and insisting upon no conditions. He himself did insist upon a condition —that of citizenship.

It was false that he had changed his attitude. He preferred therefore to have this referred to the electorate to decide. Were he to decide it offhand now he would be against the increase without the condition he insisted upon, that of citizenship.

Workers Heard

Ald. Kerr suggested that any delegation from the Industrial workers should be heard.

This was agreed to.

Mr. Carroll said that the workers felt that if this went to the people it would be voted down. It was felt that many who supported the Manson ticket at election time would not vote. Thoshe who voted the Mobley ticket would unite to vote against this to put the Manson ticket up against it. He thought they should give every one the chance to work and not make any distinctions. If the council said "no," tonight the workers would have some respect for them; if they would refer it to a plebescite, the workers would have no respect for them.

Citizenship Essential

Ald. Clayton pointed out that in California work was conditional upon citizenship, reading from a union journal. In Victoria, he found from the Times that citizenship was to be insisted upon in selecting city workers.

Ald. Pattullo asked what was meant by the statement that aldermen before the election agreed to give the increase. He would like to know which of the aldermen had given such a promise.

Mr. Carroll said Ald. Clayton, he believed, said as he now said; Ald. Morrissey said he was in favor of giving it to the married men. The other aldermen were in favor of it. Mayor Manson said he was willing to take the matter up with the workmen. The labor men felt so satisfied that they were to have the support of these men that they had 111 electors pledged to vote for the Manson ticket.

Mr. Ross thought if Ald. Hilditch took it for granted that his election meant the endorsation of his stand on the liquor bylaw then he should also take it for granted that it should be an endorsation on this matter.

Ald. Morrissey

Ald. Morrissey traced the history of the labor situation here leading up to 37½ cents an hour for an eight hour day. Contractors had entered into arrangements with the city on this rate. The city had to be protected against breaking faith with the contractors. He could not stand for breaking faith with these contractors. If 45 cents an hour for an eight hour day were allowed for all workers this information would go out and it would upset the conditions on the whole coast.

He favored 45 cents an hour for married men who were citizens of Prince Rupert.

He did not approve of a plebescite.

He moved that the maximum rate of wage for common labor be not more than 45 cents an hour or less than 37½ cents an hour on the basis of an eight hour day; that in all contracts let, the wage scale should i neach case be that prevailing in the province at the time.

Mr. Casey contended that it would be unfair to submit this to a plebescite. It would practically be the property owners who would vote. It was onl yto be expected that they would vote against it.

He believed that were the proposition turned down the workers would go farther. He felt that the council should settle the question. If the council felt that the workers were asking what was not fair then vote against the demands. If they felt on the other hand that the demands were fair vote for it.

If such a course was taken the workers could consider the point. A move could be made under the Lemieux act for a conciliation board which he felt could be invoked.

The working class could not afford to divide their forces. He felt that it was impossible to arrive at what was the fair wage.

Ald. Kerr wanted to know if 45 cents were allowed would it have any effect upon existing contracts.

Ald. Hilditch replied, "none at all."

Ald. Newton Moves

Ald. Newton was in favor of the referendum principle. He felt that on this issue the members of the council had an indirect referndum and he felt warranted in dealing with this now. He moved that the request for 45 cents be granted, to commence March 1, and that all contracts entered into after that date should provide for a minimum wage of 45 cents an hour for an eight hour day.

Mr. Shaw wanted to know how a man could become a citizen unless he were given a chance to get a living here while he qualified for citizenship.

Mr. Fisher did not think that it required so much debate to decide upon giving men working in the ditch increased pay when they gave it to office employees without trouble.

Ald. Kerr was in favor of Ald. Newton's motion if he would eliminate the word "citizen." They were living in a cosmopolitan city and he did not want to take exception to any one.

Ald. Newton corrected Ald. Kerr, stating that there was no reference to "citizen" in his motion.

Ald. Morrissey felt that the city was a party to the contracts. If the wages were increased the city would be liable.

Ald. Smith

Ald. Smith felt with Ald. Morrissey that if the council interfered with the wages of the contractor it would be held responsible for the difference in the wages. That was his opinion. He might be wrong but he would want to look into it carefully and suggested laying this over.

He deferred sentence.

INSPECTOR IS HERE

Captain Fletcher is Studying the Local Post Office Situation.

The Question of Prince Rupert's Needs Is Being Looked into by Official

Capt. E. H. Fletcher, inspector of post offices with headquarters in Victoria, is spending a few days in the city. The inspector has nothing to say as to his mission, but it is believed he is here to gather full information relative to the needs of the city and the district surrounding it in the matter of postal facilities.

The demands that have been made from time to time for changes in the matter are being studied by Capt. Fletcher, who will be able to report in detail upon the matter.

The official will endeavor to ascertain all that is possible with respect to the local situation, investigating himself everything bearing upon the subject. He will thus be in a position to deal intelligently upon the subject which has been debated by the Board of Trade at different times.

INSCRIBED STOCK

Municipalities Are to Be Given Power to Issue Such a Class

The bill of the present session to amend the municipal clauses act, contains a clause providing for the issue by a municipality of inscribed or registered stock. In view of this the bill introduced by the city of Prince Rupert to gain this power, will be withdrawn by Mr. Manson as the power will be conferred upon all municipalities.

The bill contains a clause making it compulsory for a municipality to send to the Anti-Tuberculosis Sanitorium any person requiring attendance and willing to go, who is not able to meet the expenses necessary.

Saloon licenses are also to be abolished none being renewed so as to terminate later than January, 1914.

The council by a three-fourth's vote of its members and the consent of the Lieutenant Governor in council, may accept property in lieu of arrears for taxes, etc.

CHURCH PARADE

Knights of Pythias Attended Divine Services in Methodist Church

The local Knights of Pythias order paraded last Sunday afternoon to the Methodist Church, where an appropriate sermon was preached to them by the Rev. Charles Sing.

The preacher gave the members of the society good advice in the matter of fraternalism. The choir of the church rendered a special service of song for the occasion.

About fifty members of the order were present.

THE G. T. P. TAXATION

A letter read from William Manson, mayor of the city, at last night's council meeting, contained the information that D'Arcy Tate, solicitor for the G. T. P., was coming to the coast and he understood the main object of the visit was to go into the assessment question with him (Mayor Manson).

His Worship promised to advise the council as to what progress was made in any negotiations which might follow Mr. Tate's arrival.

The news that such a meeting is to take place will be welcome news to citizens. It will be sincerely desired by all classes that a basis of settlement may be reached that will be agreeable to all.

While the letter from the mayor does not state whether Mr. Tate will come north, it is probable that a visit to Prince Rupert will have to be made by the G. T. P. solicitor before a basis of settlement can be reached with the council.

The directors of the Hospital are meeting this afternoon.

BORDEN'S OPPOSITION

Leader of Opposition Gives Reasons Why He is Against Reciprocity Agreement.

He Is Opposed to Upsetting the Lines of Trade Already Established

Speaking in the House of Commons upon the proposed reciprocity agreement with the United States, the leader of the Conservative opposition, R. L. Borden, expressed himself as opposed to the proposition.

Mr. Borden said he could not agree with Mr. Fielding that there had been proper time for the consideration of the agreement. Only two weeks ago, the matter had been presented to Parliament and only on Tuesday last, twelve days after, was the government's proposal presented to the House. They had been in posession of information for eight hours. These, he said, were not proposals which should be rushed through Parliament.

The proposals embodied practically a new tariff, so sweeping that no one could estimate their ultimate effect with accuracy. He would like to point out to Parliament and the country that this was the year 1911 and not 1851 and it was idle to discuss proposals from the standpoint of the year 1854. It was true that in the last half dozen years of the treaty the production of Canada was stimulated, but they had to remember that conditions were peculiar. Changes were due to the civil war when production in the United States had been lessened.

Building the Dominion

Mr. Borden dealt with the stupendous task of welding the scattered portions of the Dominion into one and of the building up of British institutions.

"Since 1866, we have paid out of the treasury about five hundred million dolars in railways and the federated provincial governments have to the extent of one hundred and twenty-seven million dollars more guaranteed bonds of various railways," he said.

He dealt with the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Hudson's Bay road and also the construction of the Georgian Bay canal and the enlargement of the Welland canal for which demands have been made.

Mr. Borden reviewed the progress of Canada during the last forty years and claimed that the prosperity of Canada was now an assured fact. Not the least worthy of mention, was the raising of the standard of living during these forty years. From his own experience in Nova Scotia he said that there was no comparison between every-day comforts of life at the present time and that enjoyed when he was a boy.

Will Kill Trade Channels

"Will you tell me," he asked, "that we, in Canada, have not every right to be satisfied with the progress we have made?"

Canada's trade has flowed east and west. If now this direction of the flow of trade is to be changed and it is to flow north and south, where is all the sacrifices Canada has made and where is all the treasure she has poured forth in a consistent effort for the past forty years?

If our trade is to flow north and south, where in the world is the significance of the Georgian Bay canal, of the Hudsons' Bay Railway, of the enlargement of the Welland canal? In a word, what is the use of all these contemplated works, whose necessity was based on the former and not on the future condition of affairs. The finance minister, said Mr. Borden, referred in his speech to the treaty of 1854-66, and drew morals from it. Well, today, conditions are entirely different. In 1866, Canada had not developed to the same point as today, a point which, aided by modern transportation and cold storage has made Britain commercially nearer than the United States, a fact that certainly was not true under the reciprocity treaty.

The finance minister had referred to the fact that this country had a standing offer for reciprocity with the United States on Canada's statute books from 1866 to 1897. Let the government be reminded that it was the policy of the government in power to take off that standing offer of reciprocity with the United States from Canada, and the tariff revision of 1897 offer was not renewed by Canada.

A National Policy

True, many reciprocity offers were made to the United States as the finance minister recalls, by Sir John Macdonald and others in the period following 1866. In the election of 1891, this same question was argued and in that election, the people of Canada declared in favor of following the national policy that Canada should seek out markets of her own in the trade of the world. That path which was entered upon when the national policy was introduced in 1879, should be followed up. That was the decision of 1891.

Why, continued the speaker, should the United States ,after 30 years of rejection of Canada's offer, come now to the conclusion that this was the time for them in their own interests to seek a reciprocity treaty with the people of the Dominion? The United Statesh has at all times framed its fiscal policy in its own interests and in this as in some other matters, it can well give a lesson to Canada. It can give Canada a lesson in its conservation of its own resources; it can give Canada a lesson in the way its public men and men who are not public, have united to elevate the nation's public life; it can give Canada a lesson in the manner in whica the people accept their responsibilities.

Fiscal Changes

Fiscal changes are impending in the United States. For thirty years a very high tariff, a tariff twice as high as Canada has in force, has been in force in the United States. Indeed, the country to Canada's south is the greatest example of a protectionist country and at the same time the greatest example of a free trade country in the world. It is a protectionist country insomuch as the high tariff wall has been built around the greatest manufacturing and greatest agricultural country in the world, a country with a population of ninety millions. It is at the same time, the greatest free trade country in the world, seeing all the people and territory inside this tariff wall are absolutely free to trade with each other, unhampered and unchecked.

The great country which produces thirteen thousand million dollars of a total trade annually consumes 97 per cent of its total output. Then, too, the high cost of living of recent years has been the answer of the present subject of discussion among its people. Then, too, the resources of the United States have been exhausted at a very rapid rate. That this is so is shown by the recent speech and statements of Mr. Taft, the American president, to Congress. Mr. Borden here quoted Mr. Taft's speeches to show that the object of the United States was to gain access to Canada's natural resources, to our timber and minerals and other resources which the United States itself had so used up that they were beginning to become scarce and thus expensive.

These facts explained why the United States was now willing to trade with Canada and so if the present proposals were introduced and accepted by Canada, they even threatened to upset our whole system and our whole balance of trade.

One Great Objection

One objection to the present proposal was that the market it offered was so unstable. In five years from now, unless something might occur to upset the present arrangement, Canada would then have to go back to the position she was in commercially today, but if that happened, does one think that Canada could be able to start where she now left off by any means?

Is it not better to increase generally and gradually than to risk all for the sake of one country's trade? There is an old saying that should apply here, "What we have we'll hold" (cheers).

Not a Treaty at All

The present proposal is a very delicately balanced affair. In fact, it is not as the finance minister states, a treaty at all. It rests simply on a letter and its reply between the finance minster of Canada and the President of the United States, which tells of an arrangement that both sides hope will be consummated some time. In this arrangement, what if after a time we decide to put a duty on some articles on the free list, the two sides have agreed upon. The finance minister states that we are at perfect liberty to do so, but he also states that the agreement has to be considered as a whole and that the change of one article in it may upset the whole arrangement. Now, if that is so, is it not so also that some time from now, in a year, say, after the agreement has been put into force, will it be everything or nothing then, too? If we alter one item in the future, the United States may then say that the whole agreement is off and all it will have to do is to present a copy of the recent speech of the finance minister and say: "Here it is in the words of your own finance minister."

On the other hand, a treaty is a thing that for a certain time exists and can be interpreted under the usage and laws of nations. This understanding, however, creates a much more difficult and dangerous situation.

States vs. England

Mr. Borden then said that at present the British importer into Canada pays more than the United States importer. Mr. Borden quoted figures to prove this.

In future, he said, the United States must exercise a profound influence on Canada in a commercial way. He went on to elaborate tendencies at present in Candada that would be exaggerated when this new trade agreement was in full force with its full influence felt by the two countries .

Touching on the argument that one good result of the arrangement would be to provide a wider market for Canadian produce, Mr. Borden said that if the national issue is to be disregarded and wider markets in the United States from which the empire is to be excluded, are to prevail above every consideration, the conclusion is logical and inevitable that the path of reciprocity as proposed will lead to commercial union and from that to political absorption.

He quoted President Taft's remark to the effect that the people were coming to the parting of the ways and said that it certainly applied to Canada, because it is proposed that what the various provinces have built up in the course of forty years was to be sacrificed for the sake of Washington.

If these things were not foreshadowed in the agreement then he was very much mistaken.

In proof of this assertion Mr. Borden read from the declaration of Geoffrey Drage that such a trade agreement would result in the political suicide of Canada and from an article by H. M. Whitney of Boston, in which it was asserted that reciprocity would result in the building up of the Atlantic American seaports.

Proper Fiscal Policy

Mr. Borden then went on to say that the proper fiscal policy for Canada to adopt is one which would provide in the event of a necessity for tariff reduction ,for a revision upon a reasonable and scientific basis. He would recommend such a tariff as would aim at government of country, employment of our labor, increase of our population and utilisation of our natural resources. It would aim at giving producers reasonable opportunity by equalizing cost of production. In this connection, Mr. Borden declared that it would have been well if a permanent tariff commission had been named so that tariff would not be made by rules of thumb. Manufacturers sometimes desire lower tariffs to crush home competition, at least strong ones do, and a permanent tariff commission would assist the government in getting at information governing all demands for tariff increases or reductions. To illustrate, the government ought to be able to produce facts to either corroborate or refute the arguments advanced by Mr. Meighen, "for a reduction in duties on agricultural implements."

Western Canada Conditions

Referring more particularly to the conditions in Western Canada, Mr. Borden expressed the opinion that the problems in regard to transportation and terminal elevators were of more vital importance to the west than the tariff question. If the government would deal with those matters in a proper way, he believed the people of the west would be prepared to treat the tariff question along broad and generous lines. The people of the west would be prepared to treat the tariff question alon gbroad and generous lines. The people of the west were anxious for the day swhen the country would be dotted with smokestacks of factories and this would not be accomplished under the proposed arrangements.

They were anxious for the construction of the Hudson Bay railway and the government should rush this work with all possible speed. Regard should be given to the expressed desire of the west for government operation of this railway with running rights for all lines of railway over the road. He believed that the government should take the necessary steps to operate terminal elevators and to see that absolutely no harm is done to the growers of western grain.

An abattoir and cold storage system should likewise be inaugurated. These were the things which would bring about the upbuilding and prosperity of the country.

Careful Consideration

Mr. Borden trusted the government would not proceed hastily with its proposals. He thought the government would do well to withdraw them from the consideration of the House for the present. In conclusion, Mr. Borden, after pointing out the sacrifces of two great races, the English and the French, in the building up of Canada, said:

"I trust that the Canadian people will not lightly relinquish the task to which their energies and the energies of their forefathers have been consecrated for so many years. I trust that the standard will not be thrown aside and a retreat begun when the battle is more than half over. The self-denial and sacrifices and the patriotism demanded of us today in order that this nation may maintain and carry out the ideals and the purposes for which it was called into existence are as nothing to those which were required of our fathers who founded this confederation. Loyalty to their consecrated demand that we should continue with firm heart and unabated hope upon the path on which we entered nearly fifty years ago."

Kier Hardie's Views

Keir Hardie was the principal speaker recently at a demonstration under the auspices of the Independent Labor party in the town hall at Cumnock, Ayrshire. Mr. Hardie expressed his pleasure at seeing so many ladies present, and said that in the closing days of last session the prime minister gave him a definite pledge that during this parliament full facilities would be given for a women's suffrage bill to go through all its stages in the House of Commons. He thought, therefore, that they might look forward with certainty to being able to vote when another general election came round.

This parliament, he proceeded, would not only deal with the House of Lords, but also with a number of other big and long overdue questions. Home Rule was now on the list of immediately practical questions. Welsh disestablisment was also a certainty, and a big reform bill which would abolish plural voting, amend the registration laws and practically give us adult suffrage would also go through. The Labor party would insist upon the reversal of the Osborne judgment, and would not accept payment of members' and official election expenses as an alternative.

To unaerstand the position let them look for a moment at the results of the election. When the House was dissolved the Liberals and Unionists were evenly balanced w it1 h ue' cmfwyp cmfwy cmfw with 274 members each. By a strange coincidence they were again evenly balanced, though each of them had lost two seats. It was thus evident that neither Liberals nor Unionists of themselves, could form a cabinet or carry on the government. In addition to the two orthodox parties there was the Irisn party of 84 members and the Labor party with 42 members. The Liberals, therefore, had to choose between an alliance with the Unionists or an alliance with the two other parties he had named and, naturally, as things were, they preferred an agreement with the Labor and Irish parties to a coalition with the Unionists. Let him remind them of what the growth of the Labor and Irish parties had been. In 1900 he (the speaker) was returned for Merthyr, and during that parliament they won three seats at by-elections. At the general election of 1906 they secured 29 members, in January, 1910, increased their strength to 40 members, and in December of the same year to 42. Labor was now one of the recognized parties in the state, and that of itself was a great gain to the working class. In most of the industrial constituencies in a three-cornered contest their party could poll a minimum of a third of the total electorate.

Party government in the old sense was over, and the group system was bound to become, as it had become elsewhere, more and more the composition of the House of Commons. When such questions as the Lords and Home Rule had been settled the progress of their party would be more rapid than it had been in the past. Among the questions now well in the running for settlement was the right to work bill. They had already secured that the school children should be provided with food and that the aged poor should have a small pension. Now their object was to give security to the capable worker by ensuring that when he was out of work through no fault of his own, the state should either provide employment at a living wage or maintenance. Another question that was beginning to assume some prominence was the establishment of a legal minimum wage, which he fixed at 8s. a day for underground workers and 30s. a week for surface laborers.

A man had gone to lecture in a country village, and took as his title, "The World and Its People."

The vilage wiseacre listened very patiently until the lecturer asserted "The population of China, my friends, is quite as large as that of the rest of the world combined."

"Rot!" said the wiseacre. "Talk a bit o' sense!"

"It's a fact, sir," proceeded the lecturer. "What would you say if I told you that Chinra's population is five times that of the British Empire?"

"I should say nuthin," was the reply, "because I should know it warn't right!"

PLUGGERS

"Did you say you were a month in your last place?"

"Yes, madam—a week with the family on the top floor, a week with the lady on the third floor, a week on the second and a week on the ground floor." — Meggendorfer Blaetter.

The Bubonic Plague

Dr. Andre Chantemesse, professor of hygiene at the Paris Faculty of Medicine, has contributed the following article on the plague to the New York Herald:

"The western regions of Mongolia and the district east of Lake Baikal are the home of a rodent, a kind of prairie beaver, called the tarbigan, which reacts readily to the attacks of the microbe and presents an unexpected peculiarity, being just as sensitive to infection by the pulmonary type of plague as an ordinary rat to infection by the bubonic form.

"Although the role of the Mongolian rodent is new in the history of the epidemiology of plague, it is not, however, entirely unknown to scientists. Professor Schotteiin of Stuttgart, already has described several instances in which the tarbagan spreads germs of disease along the course of the Siberian rivers.

"In the year 1910 numbers of trappers were atracted to Mongolia by the abundance of these animals. Suddenly toward the end of October six trappers were successively atacked by the malady, beginning with violent fits of coughing, followed by abundnt expectoration of blood and ending in death.

"This was the pulmonary form of the plague. The disease spread with extreme rapidity. The terror-stricken Mongolian peasants fled from their villages. Many seeking refuge travelled along the Chinese Eastern Railway in the direction of Harbin and stations of the Manchuria Railway, carrying with them the germs of the disease.

"The details of the measures enforced by Russian authorities to stop the progress of the scourge are not known, but in general they are based essentially on the isolation of the patients in suspected cases and disinfection by fire. If the patients were not numerous it might be reasonable to hope to arrest the epidemic by strict measures, but what power can they have on an affrighted population, so terror-stricken that it can only seek safety in flight, dispersing cases, some suspected, some inoculated and simply in the incubation stage?

"Accordingly the governments of Russia, China and Japan and the European legations at Pekin are taking energetic steps all round the centres of the disease.

"The roads leading from Mongolia are strictly supervised, and the trans-Siberian, the Chinese Eastern and the South Manchurian Railway companies have been expressly called on to take every precaution o prevent the spread of the contagion.

"As the Manchurian plague appears to be transmitted by expectorated matter or coughing patients, the masks used by physicians in the Middle Ages on approaching plague-stricken individuals no longer need be a subject of derision.

"PROF. CHANTEMESSE."

"Well," reluctantly admitted the hard-pressed Yorkshire horse dealer on the witness stand, "I'll admit the animal was blind o' one eye, an' I won't deny he'd springhalt in his off hind leg, an' I'm not sayin'—seein' the two vets has sworn to it—that he wasn't spavined, an' I'd a sort of suspicion myself that he was a roarer; but he was a gr-r-rand hoss!"—Tit-Bits.

NEITHER IS WRONG

The Optimist in its policy of belittling everythng that is done by the McBride government is fearful that the impression may get abroad that that government is doing to the best of its abiltiy what is calculated to benefit Skeena in common with the other parts of the province. It therefore seizes upon the remarks of Mr. Manson in the Legislature that $225,000 of an appropriation is not sufficient for Skeena to attempt to show that The Journal is wrong when it says liberal appropriations were made. No one who makes even the most superficial study of the situation presenting itself here will for a moment deny that several times $225,000 could with advantage be used in the district. A much more liberal contribution than has been made would not need to be wasted in finding splendid avenues for expenditure.

The Government, however is hedged in by the funds available and the future as well as present day demands that must come upon it. Cut off by Ottawa without what is acknowledged by those who have studied the question, to be fair reasons for a demand for better terms, the province of British Columbia must finance great undertakings with limited capital. The McBride Government has faced the proposition with which it was confronted and the people of the province have stood by the Premier manfully in the effort to develop this great province in spite of the denial at Ottawa to consider the strong claims for better terms.

From a state of practical bankruptcy for the province, when the banks refused money, Premier McBride has pulled the province through a difficult stage in its existence. Assuming power under such unfavorable conditions the people of British Columbia patriotically consented to the government cutting down the expenditures in every way possible with respect to public works and increasing taxation. The step which had to be taken by the government was what is always recognized as an unpopular one but it was done, and when the situation was put before the people they heartily endorsed the move, consenting to bear the inconvenience until such time as the government could lift the burden somewhat. Gradually the government is doing that. The appropriations for the public works are being increased and the taxation is being reduced. That great statesman, Hon. William Templeman, voicing, doubtless, the opinion of the Ottawa government instead of lending his aid to secure for this province what was its rights, offered as a solution that the Laurier government should increase its expenditures in the province in the way of subsidies to railways and other public works rather than allow the McBride government to administer any further sums. It must be acknowledged that this was a most unique system of repaying debts and found a very cold response from the electorate.

In spite of all the difficulties encountered, the provincial government has stayed with its task, and backed up by the electorate has put the province in such shape that it ranks second to none in the Dominion with respect to wise administration.

Appropriations for public works in the country cannot be made from the standpoint of the demands alone. The funds available must be considered and the McBride government has always considered these two aspects, in this respect differing from the old regime in this province when the revenues never seemed to be taken into account. It is this business administration that has made the present government a name for itself in the province. Appropriations are liberal or are the contrary by comparison. In this respect the vote for the Skeena is undoubtedly a liberal one and the district is assuredly coming into its own.

The appropriation is certainly inadequate to carry out all the work that those interested, including the members of the government, would like to see carried out. The whole of the vote for roads and trails in the province could with advantage be spent in this district and yet there would be work to be done. Such a thing is impossible. The government is obliged to keep the appropriations within the range of the revenues. The opening up of the vast new areas in the country will bring with it demands for roads, for schools and all the other necessaries that go with such development. The government realizing this and looking forward is forced to exercise due economy in the administration of the public business. With the largest vote in the province coming to this district an evidence is afforded that this part of the country is regarded as the most important in the whole province at the present time. The Journal takes pleasure in proclaiming that fact to the world and will continue to do its duty to the district in keeping it prominently to the front.

We will take equal pleasure in putting forward the fact that the Dominion government is to spend large sums here. We have no pleasure in belittling what is being done by any government for the development of the city and the district. We are thankful for it all and ask for more.

SLIGHTLY EXAGGERATED

Through its fascination for the Liberal party which it serves, the Optimist is inclined to be blinded in its view of affairs with which the Ottawa Government is connected. In its frenzy to find fault with the McBride Government, the Optimist made the statement that the Dominion Government was spending a sum on a dry dock for the port eight times as great as the whole appropriation of the Provincial Government for the Skeena. Taking into account the anguish under which this Liberal organ was laboring as a result of the announcement with respect to the estimates as they affected this district we did not take occasion to correct what we felt must have been a slip on the part of the editor. The repetition of the statement in a more boasting way calls for a correction, however.

The Dominion Government is not expending any such sum as is represented upon a drydock here. It is understood that the Grand Trunk Pacific or some company closely allied with that corporation is prepared to spend a million and a quarter upon a floating dock at this port. In agreeing to do so the company will earn a subsidy granted to any company that will undertake it amounting to 3½ per cent a year for a term of 25 years. Now under those terms the Dominion Government will pay $43,750 a year here on that dock, which is a great deal nearer one-eighth of the sum appropriated by the province than it is eight times the amount.

We are not stating this in the way of finding fault with the Dominion Government in this matter, although there are good reasons why there should be a large sized dry dock or floating dock of the first order provided at Prince Rupert by the government. The policy of the Dominion Government, however, for the coast at the present seems to be to guarantee a low rate of interest to any concern that will provide docks at the points agreed upon. The policy from the standpoint of the government is an exceedingly conservative one for with the subsidy which, it must be admitted, is not exceedingly liberal, there are conditions by which the government steamers are given the first claim upon the facilities when required, so that there is assured to the government a dock at a very low cost.

With the carrying out of the naval policy and the consequent increase in government owned ships on this coast it cannot be long before this port must of necessity, as the natural northern base for the fleet have first-class docking facilities afforded here and also land defences to guard the entrance to the harbor and render those docking facilities absolutely safe.

With abundance of money to spend in the east upon ports of far less importance to the country than this one is there is no denying the fact that in spite of what is being done by the Dominion here, there is a fine scope for larger and more expeditious expenditures.

There is, however, enough being done by the Dominion Government which has a reputation of moving very slowly with respect to works on the Pacific coast, to warrant the belief that that government realizes the important part which the city is to play in the industrial life of the west. We hope, however, that the organ of the Liberal party in the city will not in its zeal to advance the interests of that party misrepresent matters to the extent it has done in this particular case.

TOOL FACTORY

NEW WESTMINSTER —Another industry is soon to be added to New Westminster's already long list of factories. Mr. B. F. Dowd, representing both local and eastern capitalists, was in town and procured an option on a site, on which will be manufactured all manner of tools, including hammers, wrenhes, chisels, etc. Three buildings will be erected almost immediately and after the plant is complete over a hundred men will be employed. The firm will probably be known as the Drop Forge Manufacturing Company. The site is opposite New Westminster, a short distance from the bridge. The factory will be the only one of its kind west of Chicago, and is another indication of the increasing importance of this city as a manufacturing centre. Close to $125,000 will be invested, and it is understood that a prominent Vancouver man is one of the backers. Work will be started inside of two months. The site was procured through Messrs. Reid, Curtis and Dorgan.

B. C. TREES IN IRELAND

VICTORIA—An interesting experiment in reforestation is being conducted by Sir Richard Musgrave on his extensive estates in County Waterford, Ireland, where, in land that has for years been waste, the seeds of the British Columbia cedar and spruce were planted some few years ago, with the result that trees of twelve feet height and upwards now clothe the erstwhile bleak bottomlands. Sir Richard has recently sent to Surveyor General E. B. McKay for further supplies of seeds of the cedar, larch and spruce, it being the intention to follow up the successful experiment.

CHURCH EXTENSION

VANCOUVER—At the conference in the Baptist Church on Hamilton Street, Mr. Harkness, general secretary of the Baptist Union of Western Canada, explained to the meeting the methods and the purposes of the union in its relation to the local churches generally, and the Vancouver churches in particular. The proposition made by the speaker that the churches should undertake to colect a minimum donation from each of its members for the year of $6.25 was heartily endorsed. The whole amount collected will be devoted to the extension of the work of the Baptist Church in Canada. Later in the evening this was put as a motion and carried unanimously.

During the course o fthe meeting it was stated that Messrs. Estabrook and Harkness had visited Victoria when they had met a similar body of men by whom the same action with regard to funds had been taken.

The united action of the two conferences means donations amounting in the aggregate to $15,000 for the year in British Columbia.

GOVERNMENT SURVEYS

QUESNEL—Gore & McGregor are sending three articled third year men from the coast to join P. Landry, provincial land surveyor, in order to clear up the government due work, season 1910-11. The roads are heavy and the transportation is very hard for dog team and snow shoe men, but the work must be done in order to cover government due notice of private surveys. Mr. Landry and Mr. Forin Campbell will proceed up the Quesnel river some fifty miles and commence Wm. Blair's surveys. Mr. Landry will then return to the Ten Mile Lake and finish private surveys there and on the Cottonwood river. He will then return with Mr. Campbell and finish the surveys on Quesnel river.

LIQUOR PROHIBITION

Government to Enforce Law Respecting Sale of Intoxicants to Minors

One feature of the provincial liquor law which latterly has been somewhat of a dead letter in so far as its enforcement in the coast cities is concerned, is that prohibiting the sale or gift of intoxicants of any sort to minors—a minor being distinctly and specifically defined as any person under the age of 21, says the Victoria Colonist. No one in touch with conditions as they are in the cities, can be unaware that this provincial prohibition is seldom given a thought by barmen unless the extreme youth of the prospective customer is obvious; or that many girls unde rthe age of 21 are daily served with liquors in the restaurants and never a question raised as to the age of the fair applicant for a cocktail or a glass of beer or wine. It is understood that steps have quietly been taken of late to emphasize that the law as enacted is meant to be obeyed, and carelessness in his dealings in this particular feature of the law may mean the payment of heavy money penalties by thoughtless licensees or else the loss of the license.

The trade cannot deny that fair and ample warning has been given, and it will be well for licensees throughout the province (and especially in the cities) to remember that any sale or gift of liquor to a minor in British Columbia is distinctly an infraction of the law—that a minor is any person under the age of 21, and that the burden of proof under this act, is always upon the person accused thereunder.

HENRIETTE OVERHAULING

With the expiration of her charter to the Canadian Northern Pacific Fisheries Company, the Grand Trunk Pacific steamer Henriette is laid up for a short time, and will receive a thorough cleaning and overhauling before resuming regular service. Her first run after the overhauling will be to Prince Rupert with general freight.

The Henriette, commanded by Captain Buckholtz, with Mr. Thompson as mate, has been engaged principally in carrying materials and stores for the new whaling station under construction at Naden Harbor. It is said that when this station has been completed, another will be commenced in the far north, at some point on the Arctic Ocean. Two whalers, probably the William Grant and the Sebastian, will start in a few days for a cruise off Barkley Sound. They will take their catches to the Sechart station. The new whalers, the Brown and the Blue, the last of the fleet on the way from Norway, have passed into the Pacific following the White, the Black and the Red, which were last reported at Callao, and are now on the way to San Diego. The Blue and the Brown passed through the Straits of Magellan last Sunday.

RELATIONS CORDIAL

Countries of Europe Show in Disposition to Incite War at This Time.

Peace Reigns in the Various Diplomatic Circles According to French Minister

When M. Pichon made his lond-expected statement on foreign affairs in the French chamber the other day, among the members of the diplomatic corps in the gallery were three ex-foreign ministers, now the ambassadors of their respective countries in Paris, listening to him intently They were M. Isvolsky, Signor Tittono and Baron von Schoen.

M. Pichon's speech, which was not far short of two hours in duration, was optimistic throughout. The French foreign minister sees no cloud on the horizon; France's relations with all countries are cordial and as for the excitement over the Russo-German negotiations, who could object to Russia's coming to an understanding with Germany in regard to Persia when France had set the example by coming to an understanding with Germany in regard to Morocco?

M. Jaures asked an awkward question. The Socialist leader wanted to know whether France had been kept informed of the course of the negotiations in regard to the Bagdad railway and Persia, but M. Pichon refused to be drawn. He somewhat hastily remarked that the answer would carry him too far, and hurried on as if anxious to quit delicate ground.

The foreign minister's reference to the entente cordiale was especially hearty. "Our entente with England has never been closer or more thorough," he said. "There is not a question on which the two nations do not agree for common action. It is one of the chief blessings acquired in the course of the last six years.'

It was a comforting spectacle, he continued to see the close union of Republican France and Monarchial England, hand in hand, working in all circumstances in the cause of peace. King Edward's memory must ever remain dear in France (hearty applause).

After a friendly reference to Austria, in which he said that in the Bosnian affair France had not ceased to act in concert with Russia and England, M. Pichon continued:

"Bosnia and Herzegovina was Austria's protectorate, transformed into annexation. Russia at once perceived that he question was European, and demanded the meeting of the signatory powers to the Treaty of Berlin, but at the same time showed herself anxious to safeguard the peace of Europe. M. Isvolsky allowed it to be understood that, in any case, the annexation would not involve a casus belli.

"Can we be reproached for not having done all in our power in order that the affair might end by agreement among all the powers? No. When the sky is clear alliances cannot be judged. When the clouds appeared Russia saw that she could count on our alliance. She did not, however, think that it was an occasion for conflict. We were of the same opinion. This justice was rendered us abroad. I ask that it be rendered us in France.

"Our alliance with Russia was never more vigorous or solid. No event has come tot rouble it. It has no thought of aggression; it will be exercised in the interests of peace. Indications have been sought in the speech of the German chancellor, but M. Bethmann-Hollweg was careful to guard against unfavorable interpretation. He has declared that the Russo-German agreement has no aggresive character. It is the same with our alliance with Russia. The German chancellor affirms, in his speech, the necessity of the statu quo in the Balkans. That is also our policy. All friends of peace must rejoice at this declaration, which accords so entirely with our views (applause).

"The agreement with respect to Persia is, too, a new pledge of peace. Russia was already in agreement with England in regard to Persian affairs; we must be glad that she is in agreement with Germany.

"Neither in its tendency nor in its object is there any change in the Franco-Russian alliance. There are some who—ever criticising the government's policy—have asked if we are not going towards isolation? No! We are united to Russia by an alliance, to England by our entente, to Spain by pacific agreements, to Japan by other agreements. We entertain friendly relations with Italy."

A tramp called at the house of a gentleman and said:

"I've walked many miles to see you, sir, because people told me that you was very kind to poor chaps like me."

"Oh, they said so, did they?"

"Yes, sir, that's why I came."

"And are you going back the same way?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then, in that case, will you be good enough to contradict this rumor?"

NO SUBSIDY

Although definite announcement on the subject has not been made in so many words, it may be taken for certain that all hope has been abandoned that the Australian Commonwealth will continue to subscribe to the Vancouver mail service. The postmaster general states that the amount of the subsidy hitherto given for the purposes of the postal service is larger than is warranted, and he thinks the opportunity ought to be taken to discontinue it. Much satisfaction is expressed in New Zealand at the decision of the Canadian government to foster by means of the new service closer trade relations with the southern dominion.

Before election he said he was in favor of 45 cents an hour if they became citizens. He did not mean by that that he was opposed to any nationality. He meant by citizen a man who came here and was supporting his family here.

He would support the motion if he found it would not interfere with contracts now made.

In reply to Ald. Newton, Ald. Smith said that he felt that the fact that the wage of 37½ cents mentioned in the contract was the recognized wage by the city at the time made the city liable were an increase made. He would like to consult a solicitor on the matter.

Ald. Newton suggested adding a rider to the motion to the effect that it would be granted only on condition that it did not so effect existing contracts.

Ald. Smith thought that it would not be wise to hinder any motion in that way.

Ald. Hilditch

Ald. Hilditch explained that there had been three motions in the committee. It had been decided to agree for a plebescite. He had his doubts upon such a vote carrying. He would work as hard as he could for it. He felt considering the prices submitted from Mayor Taylor of Vancouver that it cost about 10 per cent more to live in Prince Rupert than in Vancouver.

He felt that the increased rate would bring such a better class of workers that the increase would be warranted.

He did not think that the city altering the rates would have any legal effect in holding the city responsible. The contracts might have a "moral kick," but he would have no legal claim while he did not think that 45 cents an hour was too much at present yet, when the railways arrived, living would be as cheap as in Vancouver. The unions should then be obliged to fight their own way.

He felt that his should be settled by the vote of the council.

Ald. Pattullo

Ald. Pattullo said that the committee brought in an unanimous report, yet two members of the committee now voted against it. He was not opposed to giving the workers 45 cents or even 50 cents if he considered only the local conditions. But the whole industrial situation had to be considered. He did not consider that the committee had conducted an investigation. Only one side was heard. He would like to have the facts from Vancouver. He also felt that Mayor Manson should be here in order to assist in this work. He was the head of the council and should be able to give advice.

He thought that this should go back to the committee for further consideration, taking into account the conditions in Vancouver.

If he were forced to vote on the matter now he would vote against the motion, not because he opposed giving the increase but because he thought it should be more fully considered by the committee.

Ald. Hilditch Explains

Ald. Hilditch complimented Ald. Pattullo upon his diplomatic speech. He explained that he had called the committee together before the reply was received from Vancouver because he felt that the committee should take the responsibility. When the committee met there were three members beside himself. There was a motion, an amendment, and an amendment to the amendment, which left the situation absolutely tied up. He called upon the committee to decide upon some action unanimously and the report was accordingly adopted.

Ald. Clayton said that the matter of investigation was not necessary to the men who promised before election what stand they would take. He would not support conditions that would result in employing men who would send money out of the city.

Ald. Morrissey said if no legal liability was involved he was ready to vote for the motion of Ald. Newton.

Finally after considerable further discussion Ald. Newton, in view of acting mayor's fear that there was a legal difficulty, consented to let his motion stand over for a meeting of the council as a committee on Thursday evening.

The motion carried on condition that the matter be decided at next Monday's meeting.
