Japanese Murder Case May Reach Jury At Noon Today

Cannonading At Divers Points Along The Western Front

Paris, Dec. 9.—An official report says intermittent cannonading has occurred at divers points on the front.

In the region of Roye we effectively repelled a German battery, which was marked by us near Dancourt.

At Les Eparges there has been mine fighting. A group of the enemy's workers were buried by an explosion of one of our mines.

A Belgian official says several artillery actions of slight importance occurred on the Ysor front. We silenced the enemy's battery to the north of Dixmude and prevented the consolidation of the German trenches in the direction of Rouen.

HOLLAND WILL SUPPRESS FORD IF HE INTERFERES IN WAR

The Hague, Dec. 9.—In Dutch official circles Henry Ford's proposal to cause a strike in the trenches is characterized as too visionary and absurd to merit serious consideration. It is pointed out that any one attempting to foment discontent among the soldiers of any of the belligerents would inevitably subject himself to arrest and trial under martial law on a charge of inspiring mutiny.

If Mr. Ford and his peace party come to Holland they will be permitted to land and take up residence here, but The New York Times correspondent has official authorization for the statement that any attempt on his part to use Holland as a base of operations for interference with the military situation as between belligerents will be regarded as a breach of neutrality and summarily suppressed.

Dominion Whisky Firm Suspends Operations For A Year Resulting From Increasing Teetotalism.

Detroit, Dec. 9.—As a result of increasing teetotalism in Canada, largely due to the absence of many men at the front, Hiram Walker & Sons, operating the largest distillery in Canada, at Walkerville, across the river, announced that the plant would be closed for a year. During that time no whisky will be produced and all the employes will be laid off. The announcement was made by President Franklin H. Walker of the firm.

British Forces Are Holding Bulgarians Back While Retiring

London, Dec. 9.—Two successive retirements have been made by the British forces in the Balkans, it is officially announced. On December 7th the troops were withdrawn to a new line, and on December 8th they retired to another line.

Bulgarians Have Shells.

From Macedonian headquarters comes the news that the Bulgarians' attacks during the past two days have been more serious than originally reported. The Bulgarians show constantly increasing strength. They seem to be well supplied with artillery, which keeps up a constant fire.

Like the Germans, the Bulgarians deluge the opposing forces with shell fire before attacking with infantry.

Since Sunday the British lines engaged the principal share of attention. Before the superior strength of the enemy, out outposts are gradually falling back upon the main position.

A few Bulgarians taken prisoners, declare that they do not wish to fight against the Entente Powers, but are anxious to meet the Greeks and wipe out old scores.

Violent Attacks.

Paris, Dec. 9.—An official report from the army of the east says that since the last communication the Bulgarians carried out at different points along our front violent attacks, all of which were repulsed with heavy losses. The enemy's fighting continues along our front from the bridgehead to Gradre, on the Vardar River.

All Evidence Is Now In In Japanese Murder Trial--Both Accused Men Went Into Box And Gave Testimony

By noon today it is altogether likely that the jury will have the murder case in its hands, and will be trying to reach a verdict. The court sat last night until midnight getting all the evidence in by that time. This morning the addresses of counsel, and the charge of the trial judge, Mr. Justice Macdonald, will be heard. Both the men accused of the murder, Ohara and Nagano, went into the box and gave evidence on their own behalf. Both of the men showed wonderful self possession, in view of the character of the crime hanging over them.

Mrs. Komeda's Evidence.

Mrs. Komeda being called for the defence, was examined by Mr. Shoebotham. She was wakened by a great noise on the night of the trouble. She went to her husband's room. He was not there. She came down to the back door in her night clothes. She looked in and saw fighting. She called her husband, but he was not there and she went up stairs. Opening the window she looked out. She saw Nagano with a clever. He was clinched with a white man, Ohara was clinched with a tall man. She did not notice whether there was a lame man or not. Nagano and the short man were at the foot of the stairs. Ohara and the tall man were on the platform, on the right side of the door of the cafe as one went in.

Ohara Had Knife.

Ohara had a knife in his hand. She could see clearly from the light on the inside of the cafe.

She heard a man holler. She could not tell what he said, but she thought it was the tall man. The tall man went down the steps. He collided with Nagano.

When Ohara and the tall man were struggling on the platform, and before he ran out, she saw Ohara strike the tall man with a knife. He raised the knife and struck him in the neck.

Nagano Had Clever.

Witness was quite sure Nagano had the clever. She did not see him with any other weapon in his hand. She saw the small man after the tall man ran along the road, run in the same direction.

Immediately after the tall man collied with Nagano she noticed blood on Nagano's white clothes. When Pittman and Angus ran away she saw Ohara follow them. She did not see any other person follow.

Witness came down stairs after the fight and went into the cafe. She set things in order, assisted by Kamura. Her husband came in while they were working and told her not to touch it, as he wanted to show the police.

Ohara came back. He approached the man who was lying on the ground. Nagano was standing there.

Under Cross-examination.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fisher, witness said she looked into the restaurant through a window. If she put her head through she could see nearly all in the restaurant. There are two windows in the back of the restaurant. She looked through the window only a very short time.

She saw a white man throwing dishes. A white man had a stool in his hand. She was sure it was not Nagano nor Komeda. She did not know what he was holding the stool for. She saw two Japanese, Ohara and Nagano inside at the time.

When she went up stairs she searched for her husband but could not find him.

While she was looking out the front window she did not see any come out of the restaurant. Witness was frightened. She did not think anyone would be killed. She kept quiet.

While witness was down stairs Nagano came in wearing the coat. He took off the coat and threw it over or out of the window. He washed his face of the blood on it.

Mr. Patmore's Examination.

Cross-examined by Mr. Patmore, witness said Nagano only, was the owner of the restaurant. Komeda rented the whole building. Nagano leased the restaurant from him. She was concerned about her husband, and when she looked out the window she could not see him. She looked all round and could not see him.

She denied that she saw her husband running after Pittman with Ohara.

Asked if she would swear that only one Japanese ran after Pittman, and that was Ohara, witness agreed she would.

Mr. Patmore pointed out that three witnesses saw Nagano with a knife.

She denied this. Nagano had a clever.

She saw only two people on the front platform when she put her head out the window.

Afternoon Sitting.

Upon resuming court in the afternoon Shagaro Kimura ws called as a witness. He had his meal at the cafe that evening and asked Nagano if he could help him. He washed dishes. He was there when a man came in for soup. He learned later this man was Carlson. He recalled the disputes as to the men getting soup. One man who was very drunk came in and ordered a bowl of soup, and after having two soups said he had no money. Ohara asked why he took it when he had no money. The man offered to leave his cap for the 20 cents owing. Witness advised taking the cap, as it could be given the police next day and the man located. Ohara said cap was not worth 5 cents, and these men did not care much about caps as they went about the streets bareheaded.

Later Carlson went out. Ohara and Komeda followed him and caught him by the suspenders and brought him back in. Komeda held the man by the breast and said not to let there be trouble. He should pay the 20 cents.

How Trouble Started.

One of the three men who came in first, told Komeda to let go of the man. Trouble began. The lame man used his crutch. The short man began throwing dishes. The window was broken then. Witness felt it was serious and he got out through the back window. Shimoshi, another Japanese, got out the same time.

He went to his own room upstairs. As he was going in he heard great

CANADIAN TRADE AND FINANCE

HON. W. T. WHITE DEALT WITH SUBJECT IN PART

How The Increased Production Works To Advantage Of Canada.

At the Canadian Club luncheon held at the Windsor Hotel, in Montreal, Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, spoke of some of the outstanding features of Canadian trade and finance during the war. Previous to the outbreak of war, Canada had a large adverse trade balance amounting for the fiscal year 1913 to $300,000,000, for 1914 to $180,000,000, and for the six months from April 1st, 1914, to September 30th, 1914, to $64,000,000. To this had to be added the interest owed annually by Canada upon past borrowings aggregating one hundred and forty million dollars. In the past this adverse balance of trade had been met and interest paid largely from the proceeds of fresh borrowings, principally in London. When, therefore, the war broke out and our borrowings abroad were suddenly cut off, the danger to be apprehended was that we should have to meet our external indebtedness by gold exports.

How It Was Met.

The situation was met in three principal ways. The people had begun to economize, with the result that they consumed less and had consequently more to sell. Imports began to contract and exports to expand. The campaign for the greater production and high prices for produce had assisted the process. This year's agricultural production was by far the greatest in the history of the Dominion. Then there was the purchase of munitions and war supplies on a large scale in Canada. At present this amounted to about $20,000,000 per month. This had greatly increased Canada's exports.

Favorable Trade Balance.

The result of all these factors has been that instead of an adverse balance, Canada has now a trade balance in her favor, which is increasing every month. For the six months ended September 30th our excess of exports over imports was $45,000,000. During the first year of the war gold exports had been avoided by the borrowings abroad of the Dominion Government. These borrowings had aggregated nearly two hundred million dollars, of which over one hundred millions were for war. It was not generally realized that over two-thirds of Canada's war outlay is expended in Canada. If the Dominion Government had attempted to raise its war expenditure in Canada, rather than by borrowing abroad, Canada would have lost a great part of her gold to settle her international balances. Furthermore, we should not have been able to make any such military effort as is now to our credit. As the trade balance was now favorable and likely to so continue, we were in a position to supply a portion of our own war expenditure by a domestic war loan.

Economic Outlook.

As to the economic outlook in Canada, Hon. Mr. White considered it good. The proper policy, he said, was still to produce as much as possible and exercise reasonable economy. Those who cannot go to the front should produce and save. This would give us the sinews of war to continue the struggle. If Canada could add two or three hundred millions annually to the value of her production she could sustain the burden of the war, which involved the payment of a rapidly increasing annual interest charge upon an expanding public debt. The economic motto for Canada was still: "Production, production, and again production."

Germany Must Crack.

Speaking of the war, the Minister said that Great Britain had worked wonders in clearing the seas and organizing her present large army. He had no sympathy with pessimism. Pressure was being steadily applied to Germany, and in time she would crack. Germany was really in a state of siege and on the defensive. While realizing fully the gravity of the conflict and the marvellous preparedness and military prowess of the enemy, he had always felt confident of the result. This was not an empty optimism, but an optimism founded upon the substantial grounds of the immense superiority of the Allies in wealth and resources. The question is sometimes asked, "How long can the Allies hold out?" The answer is that the Allies can hold out a great deal longer than the enemy. The way to victory might be long and arduous, but the issue was not in doubt.

noise. He put his head out of his window. He saw the tall man and Ohara struggling with each other, and the short man was Ohara, fighting at the foot of the steps. Ohara and the tall man were on the platform. There were several others there.

Witness saw Nagano with the clever coming back into the cafe, after the short man ran away.

He heard the tall man saying something and he started down the steps. Ohara followed the tall man. The tall man collided with Nagano at the foot of the stairs.

Witness had not had anything to drink. He never drank anything in his life. Ohara had been drinking.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Fisher, witness said Ohara was a fisherman he thought. Ohara was not employed at the restaurant.

Mrs. Komeda Recalled.

The witness was then asked to stand aside for a few minutes, while Mrs. Komeda was recalled to answer a question, one of the jurymen, W. J. Potter, wished to ask.

Mr. Potter wanted to know if witness was related by blood or by marriage to Nagano.

Mrs. Komeda said she was not related any way.

Resuming the cross-examianation, Kimura testified that the first of the fight was when the tall white man struck Ohara with a chair. Murphy struck Komeda with his crutch.

Witness did not see anybody strike the tall man. Just as the two separated the tall man ran down the steps. He thought he was saying something, but that might be imaginary

The short man ran away first, at the time the tall man reached the sidewalk.

Cross-examined.

Cross-examined by Mr. Patmore, witness said he was a tailor at Port Essington. He was not a great friend of Nagano's. His impression was that Nagano fell down when the tall man collided with him.

In answer to the court, witness said he heard someone offer to pay for Carlson's soup. The trouble had started then. When he looked out of the window he saw only Ohara and the tall man on the platform. He saw the clever in the hands of Nagano, and something glittering in the hand of Ohara.

A. N. Perkins, manager of the hotel, testified to the three men, Pittman, Angus and Murphy being in the hotel. He overheard Angus and Ohara, and believed they were discussing paying for the meal. He paid for it.

Nagano Called.

Ototoman Nagano, one of the accused, was called to give evidence on his own behalf. He testified that he owned the Oriental Cafe. Ohara was not a regular employee. He remembered Carlson coming to his cafe. He came a little after 11 o'clock. Three other white men were sitting on stools, Pittman, Murphy and Angus. He had seen Angus before, but not the other men. Carlson had two bowls of soup. He then said he had no pay. Ohara took a hold of him and asked why he would not pay. Murphy then said something and Ohara let go, then Carlson ran out.

Witness ran after him to get his name. He did not know it. He went back, however, as there were a lot of people in the cafe to attend to. Ohara went out as he came in. Shortly after Ohara, Komeda and Carlson came back into the restaurant. Ohara was holding Carlson and demanding the money.

Accused had resumed work and was at the range. He turned round to see Angus throwing plates. Angus was then near Ohara, who was holding Carlson. Angus struck Ohara.

Fighting Began.

When he looked again Ohara was still holding Carlson. Angus was not to be seen, apparently having gone out. Ohara was struck and Carlson went out.

Accused shouted in Japanese, "Stop," when he saw the fighting, and Carlson came down to where they were fighting. After Carlson went out Komeda closed the front door. He heard, just at that time, someone smash the glass in front. They began fighting with the crutches then. Accused at this time was trying to separate them.

Angus came in and taking a stool hit witness on the head. Ratchford and Pierce followed Angus in.

Angus then began throwing dishes at witness.

Soon after this the white men went out. Ohara followed them. Witness, while Angus was throwing dishes at him, protected himself by using the clever. Angus was carrying an armful of dishes and backing up to get out, Witness was following up. He followed up using the clever to cover himself. They went down the steps. Witness, as he passed, felt some hot liquid on his face. He wiped it with his sleeve and found it was blood. He was angry at Angus for breaking his dishes. He did not strike Pittman with any weapon. Witness followed Angus to the bottom of the steps.

Besides himself Ohara was the only one he saw with a weapon. It was a knife to separate bone and flesh.

It was a tall fellow that collided with him at the foot of the stairs when the blood flew in his face. About that time Angus ran away.

After Angus ran away witness went inside and took off his coat and washed his face.

Accused said he was never in trouble before. He was 29 years of age, and about 5 feet 5 inches.

During the fighting inside Pittman took part. Pittman's fighting was particularly with Ohara.

The court adjourned at 6:30 in the evening until 8:30.

Evening Sitting.

Upon resuming, Mr. Patmore cross-examined the accused. He declared that he never spoke to Ratchford nor Pierce about paying for Carlson's meal. He did not see Komeda strike at Carlson with a crutch. He did not see Carlson's nose bleeding. Witness never tried to hit Pittman with a chair. He did not, with Komeda, back Murphy against the counter. That was Komeda alone. He never had a knife in his hand. John Pittman did not strike witness on the platform. He did not remember whether he hit Angus or not. He did approach Angus, however.

When Pittman collided with him, his back was turned towards Pittman. Witness nearly fell down then.

Asked if he had talked with Komeda over this case since the event, witness said he had not.

Denied Collusion.

Mr. Patmore asked if he had agreed with Komeda to swear that he (Komeda) did not have the clever in his hand that night, if Komeda's wife would swear that he (witness) did not have the knife.

Witness denied this.

Witness also denied that he had ever spoken to Kimura about the case.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fisher, witness said when Ohara picked up the knife at the meat block, Ohara said, "we must protect ourselves." He stated that Ohara had Murphy against the counter when Pittman took a stool to Ohara. It was then that Ohara got the knife and got after Pittman.

Accused said he was very angry at Angus. Had he got him he might have struck him.

Ohara Gave Evidence.

Ohara, one of the accused, was called by Mr. Patmore. He told of the coming into the restaurant of Pittman, Murphy and Angus. He described the trouble that arose over the soup, and the running out of Carlson. Witness followed him. Carl-

WHERE BRITISH SHINE.

In the war news there comes the information that the British forces have been thrust into a position in Macedonia where they are obliged to fight a retiring action. It is not the first time in the present war that British soldiers have immortalized their names by their wonderful retreat. No army in the world probably can cover itself with the same glory in retreat as can the British. To retire before overwhelming numbers as the "contemptible little army" did at Mons, and then finally rally and inflict a signal defeat upon the foe requires far more sterling qualities than are required in gaining victories. Just as the records of the British army in retreat from Mons will go down as one of the most magnificent feats of the war, so may the retirements before the overwhelming forces in the Balkans of the present time be but the introduction to the victories that may follow.

FORMER RESIDENT.

staff of the Cold Storage.

He has been awarded the D. S. O. for conspicious gallantry at the battle of Loos on Sept. 25 and 27.

While there have been reports relative to this before the identification of the former resident of this city with the officer winning the honors was not complete. A letter received at the Journal office from Lieut. J. W. Nicholls, of the 62nd Battalion, C. E. F., now at Vancouver, states that the officer in question is the one who lived in this city.

The service rendered by him, was that of going into a house alone during the fighting at Loos and captured seven Germans, although shot in the face and badly wounded by one of them. He was also the officer mentioned in despatches, who organized the bombing attack of the grenadiers on Sept. 27, operating from the "Chalk Pit" against the Copse at great personal risk and helped materially in its caputre.

Lieut. Pusch left here for Winnipeg, where he was studying law when the war broke out. He went immediately to the old country, to London, where his father lived and joined the 19th County of London Battalion, being in the London Regiment, St. Pancras. With that regiment he got to the front very early.

SAD DEATH.

The boy, as far as can be learned, was amusing himself by sliding down the balustrade in the school, when he toppled over and fell to the floor below, a distance of fourteen feet. Dr. McNeill and Dr. Kergin were summoned and arrived very soon on the spot and had the boy removed to the hospital. He had fractured his skull by striking a radiator on the floor and died within a very short time after at the hospital at 2:57.

The accident occurred about 1:25, just before the assembling of the school. It is believed that the only one who saw him actually fall was John Martin, a boy of six years, who attends the school. The stair is a winding one, and the boy falling from the higher level passed the lower balustrade and hit heavily on the radiator.

The boy is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. MacPherson, who will have the entire sympathy of the community.

An inquest will be held at 2:30 today.

WAR CLOSES.

When the European war began, Mr. Walker stated, the distillery had 7,000,000 gallons of whisky on hand. Material reduction of this stock through Canadian consumption, which was expected as a matter of business routine, failed to materalize.

son sat down in front of the Skeena Commercial. Witness took hold of him, and pulling him up took him to the restaurant. He described the fight in the restaurant between himself and Angus. They hit each other a number of times. Murphy struck witness with his crutch, but witness got the crutch away. He tried to hit Murphy, but missed and hit Carlson's head. Witness was himself knocked down.

Nagano jumped over the counter when Angus went towards him. Nagano took a knife. Angus threw a stool at witness. Witness tried to get out the back window. He took a knife and came back to the door. Witness said he went out first. Nagano followed him. Murphy was standing on the right-hand side. Witness stabbed him with his knife. Murphy staggered and crawled away. He went to go in but met Nagano coming out. He turned. Pittman was there and grabbed the arm of witness. Nagano came outside and Nagano stabbed Pittman. Pittman let go the arms of witness and ran down stairs. Nagano went after Pittman. Angus grabbed Nagano and the latter stabbed Angus. When Pittman let go of witness he returned to the entrance to the cafe. At the bottom of the stairs Pittman collided with Nagano.

Followed Angus.

Witness went back to the restaurant and met Nagano coming out. He saw the blood on Nagno and asked if he was hurt. Nagano said "no." Angus ran after Pittman. Witness followed Angus as far as the hill and then came back. Two men were standing near the stairs. He thought they were going to attack him. He raised his knife and then the men ran away. He stood a few minutes and then went to the Caledonia Hotel.

Witness denied that he stabbed Pittman. He never struck at him.

Examined By Mr. Shoebotham.

Cross-examined by Mr. Shoebotham, witness said he followed Angus. He had his knife up. If he had caught Angus he would have stabbed him.

He had kicked Murphy after he had been to the Caledonia Hotel and had seen Tominka. This would be about three or four minutes after he chased the men away.

Nagano and witness were good friends now, witness said.

Witness said he had had a little to drink before noon that day. He had been in jail before. Had served 6 months for fighting.

To Mr. Fisher.

In reply to cross-examination by Mr. Fisher.

The knives being produced, witness said he could not say which of the French knives he had. He had one and Nagano the other.

In reply to a juryman, he said he did not know who had the clever.
