HALIBUT AGAIN COMING IN AFTER A SHORT STOP

G.T.P. IS WELL PLEASED WITH ALASKAN TRADE

Railway Commission Will Not Make Long Stay In City

Halibut Is Again Arriving In Port After Some Check

After a continued scarcity of halibut on the local market these fish are again beginning to arrive in something approaching normal supply. There has been continued bad weather on the outside which has cut off the fishing boats from getting their supplies. The weather still continues bad, but about 100,000 pounds were brought in yesterday.

There were four American boats and four Canadian in. Of these the Corona, with 29,000 pounds, and the Nellie with 4,000 pounds were bought by the Booth Fisheries at 9 7-8 cents a pound. The Shamrock and the Rolfe with 34,000 and 9,000 respectively went to the Cold Storage at 9 5-8.

Of the Canadian vesesls the Alliance had 6,000 pounds and the Pharaon had 8,000. These sold to the Cold Storage at 9 7-8 cents. The Tuladi with 8,000 sold to the Atlin Fisheries at 10 cents, while the Borealis, which is owned by the Atlin Fisheries, had 12,000 pounds.

RECIPROCITY IN MATTER OF LIQUOR SELLING

Alaskan Traffic Has Been Very Gratifying To G.T.P. This Year

W. P. Hinton, of Winnipeg, one of the best known and efficient officials of the G. T. P. reached the city last evening. He will go east again with the Railway Commission today. He reports business with the company as fair, and says that the wheat crop of the prairies this year is going to give good returns. While it cannot compare with last year's crop, the prices are so high that the farmers will reap good returns. As an instance of how this works, he says that wheat weighing only 42 pounds to the bushel is being paid for at the rate of $1.05 a bushel.

Mr. Hinton is well pleased with the results of the Alaskan trade this year. For a beginning it proved exceptionally good. The travel by their boats was excellent, and what is better, he says all who took advantage of the trip were delighted with it. There are already bookings made for next fall in consequence of this.

UNITED STATES BEHIND ALLIES

NEWSPAPERMAN ON VISIT HERE SPEAKS OF GOOD FEELING BETWEEN COUNTRIES

He Believes Canada And Republic Should Be On Best Of Terms.

H. V. Jones, proprietor of The Minneapolis Journal, who is in the city for a few days with his son, Jefferson Jones, is pleased with this part of the country. They will make a trip to Alaska before returning.

Mr. Jones, in course of a talk, expressed the sentiment that the United States people were behind the Allies in this war. He showed in an unmistakable way that he was proud of what Canada was doing, and added that, while it was in many ways a hard thing to say, yet the war would do Canadians good. A war that was found to uphold a great principle of justice could not help doing good.

Mr. Jones never wants to say anything to cause friction between Canada and the United States. He has no use for the legislation that was introduced at Washington to cut off the fish trade from here. He likewise would like to see no restrictions put upon the American fishermen in the getting of bait here and in the shipping of halibut by boat to the United States. There is no need, he thinks, for any vexatious little matters coming up.

Prince Rupert, he believes, is destined to be the centre of the fish industry, and nothing should be put in he way of the fullest carrying out of that.

PUBLICITY TO BE GIVEN THE WEST

SEVERAL ARRIVED LAST EVENING WHO WILL AID IN PUTTING CITY ON MAP

Representatives Of Newspapers And Magazines Are In City.

Prince Rupert and the Northern Pacific coast are being put on the map this year as far as publicity is concerned, for there have been many visitors who have come and are still coming. Last evening's train brought in two writers and one who arranges for tourist parties.

The latter is W. M. Beale, of Chicago, of Beale's Tourist Agency. He has come to look over the situation from the standpoint of giving Prince Rupert and the Pacific coast its proper place in his plans.

Miss Elizabeth Bank, of The London Daily Express, was a passenger. She has come to make a tour of Canada, writing articles for her paper. She is among other things looking into the question of openings for Old Country people in this country after the war. This applies to soldiers and to others, for Miss Bank, in common with others, is at a loss to know to what extent the spirit of migration will preval after the war. It is, she says, a study to ascertain what the results of the war will be. No one can tell whether the soldiers who have mixed with those from so many other parts will return to settle down to ordinary walks of life or whether they will want to go abroad.

She was somewhat surprised on reaching Canada to find that the women here were not filling the places of men, as was the case in the Old Land. The women in Canada, she found for the most part keeping out of the occupations of men.

Miss Bank spoke of the noble part Canada was taking in this war. She said she must no longer speak of what Britain was doing; it was what the Empire was doing.

She has a great dread of Zeppelins herself, and her account of her nightly preparations for a raid is very amusing, when she couples with it what she did when one actually came, and the preparations she made to take refuge in the cellar when compared with the preparations that had been made for such an event. But Miss Bank has no fear on the water for, like a true Britisher, he says she knows Britain rules the waves, but she is not quite so certain

"I feel," said Mr. Phillips, "that

AFTER THE WAR.

At the conclusion of the present titanic world struggle, the British Empire, together with the other countries engaged in the war, will have to face a readjustment of affairs, and many and grave are the problems which will have to be met, says the Agricultural Journal, published by the Department of Agriculture, at Victoria, B.C. Millions of men will be seeking employment, and with the sudden cessation of work on munition sand other war supplies the demand for labor will be suddenly curtailed.

The rehabilitation of the countries devastated by the war will demand the energies of a large number of men, but even with this demand fully supplied there will still be thousands seeking suitable employment. It is the first duty of all the Overseas Dominions to give this matter their first consideration and to get ready at once.

The life that our men have led in the trenches will to a large extent have unfitted them for the routine of office-work. They will crave a more independent and open-air life, and thousands are even now looking forward to leaving war-scarred Europe, with its sad and painful associations, at the end of the war, and making homes for themselves in new lands of opportunity, and the country that offers the best inducements will get the men.

The best that we have to offer cannot be good enough for those brave men who have been daily facing death in every form for the protection of our homes and families. What have we in British Columbia to offer? Surely we have all that goes to make life pleasant in this, the Western outpost of the Dominion of Canada. In our beautiful fertile valleys, on our plateaux and bench lands, with a climate unexcelled in the world, with unique scenic attractions, with our seas, lakes, and rivers teeming with fish, and our mountains and valleys with game birds and animals, we have room for thousands of settlers on the land, who can make happy homes for themselves and families.

PEREMPTORY.

these articles cannot serve any other purpose than to bring into contempt this commission and, acting under your instructions I have subpoenaed for you this morning the editors of the two papers and such reports as I was instructed to have present."

Commissioner Galt called Edward Beck to the stand.

"Before I am sworn I would like to make a statement," said Mr. Beck. "First, I would like to have read the commission under which this investigation is being held."

"Take oath," said the commissioner.

"I will not take the oath until I have made my statement," was the reply.

The judge told him to proceed.

"Acting under what I consider proper advice," said Mr. Beck, "I decline to submit to examination before this commission, which is illegal, unlawful and without jurisdiction. I decline to give evidence because this commission is being used as part of a political plot which had its inception in the desire to reap vengeance on certain public men. I decline to be sworn."

"You are the editor of these papers?"

"I decline to be examined."

"You do not seem to realize your position," said the commissioner.

"What is the evidence that this man is editor of this paper?"

Mr. Phillips replied that his name appeared as editor in the columns of the Telegram.

"You're in contempt," said the commissioner to Mr. Beck. "I order that you be imprisoned in the common jail in Winnipeg for a period of one month and pay a fine of $500. Mr. Priniger will you take Beck into custody?"

B. R. Deacon was then called. He took oath without objection. He said he did not know who wrote the article complained of. It came to him in the routine way and he sent it to the printer.

"Were you not aware," asked the judge, "that the whole basis of the article was absolutely false?"

"It came to me from a source that I thought justified me in sending it right up. It came from Mr. Beck," said Mr. Deacon.

"It was very, very gross contempt of this tribunal," declared Commissioner Galt. "I order that you be committed to jail for two weeks and pay a fine of $100."

Stanley Beck, who was sworn, said he would not concede that there were any falsehoods in the story.

"You gave the information on which it was based?"

"I presume I did," was the reply.

"I commit you to the common jail for one month," said the judge.

Knox Magee took the oath and said he wrote the article in the Post.

"This tribunal," he said, "has no authority under its constitution or the laws to punish me or anyone else for contempt."

The commissioner ordered that Mr. Magee be committed to jail for one month and fined $500.

good, who fights as well as he talks and who outwits Napoleon's arch enemy, Prince Talleyrand, with the aid of a clever woman, the Countess de Rocquelaure.

The story is cast in the period just before Napoleon's fall. "The Little Corporal," knowing that Talleyrand and all Paris is against him, commissions Gerard to secure certain papers he had concealed some years previously in the Tuileries. The Emperor's messenger finds Brigadier Gerard fighting a duel of honor with a French officer who questioned the exceedingly "tall" stories Gerard had been telling of his exploits against the Austrians.

Gerard drops his duel to engage in a battle of wits and forces with Talleyrand and his spies. The adventures he experiences make a tremendously thrilling photoplay. The Brigadier outwits Talleyrand with the aid of the Countess, who has fallen in love with the swashbuckling soldier adventurer and Napoleon, chuckling at his emissary's triumph, gives his consent to the marriage of the aristocratic noblewoman and the "ranker."

HELEN HOLMES IN SERIAL AT MAJESTIC

"The Girl And The Game" Will Be Continued Tonight At Theatre.

Chapter Four of "The Girl And The Game" at the Majestic Theatre tonight shows Helen's Perilous Escape. Storm's efforts to save the burning cars meet with reward and he is made engineer of the limited. Meanwhile Rhinelander in charge of the Tidewater line is pushing Seagrue, closely in the cut-off construction race. Then comes a announcement from Rhinelander's financial backers. They will withdraw their money unless he can relocate the pass through the Superstition Mountains, the pass that is charted and on the survey that Spike stole for Seagrue. Rhinelander rushes to Oceanside where the C. R. & T. directors are to meet. Seagrue invites Helen to his camp for dinner. Seagrue's wines she persistenly declines. He attempts to embrace the girl. She seizes a bottle and srikes him across the forehead. Seagrue crumbles and falls and Helen seizes the precious paper and flees into the night. Seagrue pursues her. Helen comes to a cliff. Seagrue is close at her heels. She stands poised a moment, she leaps down, down. Seagrue sees her sink, then sees her rise and swim to a launch. Helen in a moment has the engine humming on its way to Oceanside. Seagrue flags the limited. Helen signals Storm in the cab of the limited engine. He willfully delays his train and Helen and Seagrue arrive at Oceanside at almost precisely the same time. Seagrue has Helen arrested, charged with the theft of the survey. In spite of her protests, the precious document is returned to Seagrue. Helen returns disconsolate to the launch where she meets Storm, who for his actions in delaying the limited has been discharged. Then Helen's eyes rest on the deck of the motorboat. There, where she had spread the wet blueprint to dry, is a perfect impression of that much sought for document. Water and sun have done their work. Jerking a knife from his pocket, Rhinelander cuts the canvass from the deck and all rush back to the directors' meeting. The financiers pledge their financial support and Helen, Rhinelander and Storm speed contentedly back to Signal Station.
