Canadian Forces Made Strong Offensive On The Somme

Able Address Delivered By Sir George Foster On The War And After

The residents of Prince Rupert had the pleasure last evening of hearing an address upon the war, with an admonition to be prepared for the after effects last night. The speaker, Sir George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Dominion Government, is well qualified for such a task. His address was a finished one, perfect in diction and most inspiring and entertaining. He spoke for over two hours, but at the end there were none who did not wish him to go on still longer.

The meeting was held in the Empress Theatre. G. A. Woodland, Vice-President of the Board of Trade, presided.

In his introductory remarks he referred to the pleasure he had in visiting Prince Rupert and made passing reference to the election that had been held. The public men who undertake the government of a province like British Columbia at a time like this had a task that would require the most careful thought. No other province had ever undertaken three such great tasks as this Province, now with a change of government the enforcement of prohibition and the admission to the voting of woman. It was a task to call for most sober thought.

The war had disappointed everybody of calm mind. The vast majority of people thought it was impossible that a world war could be launched. The world as a whole was never so astonished as when the war clarion was sounded and they knew they were in for the war of all the ages.

With war launched, the world thought it would be swift even if short. They were disappointed again, for after twenty-six months progress the war was at its acme in ferociousness. The question comes why it has taken two years to settle. The reason was not far to seek if they widened their vision. The reason was that the Allied powers were not prepared for war and the Teutons were. For the greater part of the two years the Allies have been holding on until they got ready to meet the Teutons on equal terms. Had the Allies been as well prepared as the enemy the war would not have lasted longer than perhaps six or eight months. What had held the situation until they got prepared? It was the one branch of the service that was ready—the British navy. The navy swept the ocean of every vestige of the German navy. It kept the ocean avenues open to carry men and munitions. Not a troopship had been lost. The German navy, safe in Kiel watched, quashed its teeth and swore, but could not prevent. If the influence of the British navy had not been felt on the sea Germany would have won long ago. After two years of this the Allies were ready and the big push began.

The British Empire embraced four hundred millions of people. It possessed the richest of stores and yet the British Government was unprepared to make adequate resistance to the menace. It was creditable to the people not to be prepared, but it was a disappointment that it was not prepared. And so there was a lesson to be learned as to what should be done in the future.

It is impossible to say how long the war will last. One reason is because it is impossible to know just what the conditions are in Germany. She must be growing weaker every day. From this on she will never be able to put more "punch" in her aggressive action. The Allies are able to put more "punch" from now on. There must come the time when the collapse will be visible.

The question is asked, what is the spirit you found in Britian and in France. The French soldiers were different to all others. They were fighting for their women, their homes and their fatherland. They were fighting for all they held dear. They were right behind him within whispering distance. You do not find it elsewhere for that reason, and the French soldier was par excellence, "the soldier" of the war.

The speaker drew a graphic picture of the Verdun fight for six months. And all the while, he said, the British

MAJOR PECK PAYS TRIBUTE TO DEAD

IN LETTER TO GEORGE D. TITE HE REFERS TO DEATH OF LIEUT. RUSSELL

He Had Been Given His Commission On The Field.

A letter received by George D. Tite from Major C. W. Peck makes feeling remarks to Lieut. James Russell, who died in hospital a little time ago and who was formerly bookkeeper at Tite's store. In the letter Major Peck has the following to say respecting Lieut. Russell.

"It is very sad as he had only lately got his commission. I was glad to be able to help him get it and he deserved it well as he was a good soldier who had done his duty most valiantly.

"Just before the great action at Mount Sorral in June he was promoted with two others on the field—the night before the battle—with the guns booming all around us.

"On that sanguinary field we lost 10 officers, but all the above three came through all right, and so many senior officers had been shot away that two of them were temporarily in command of companies and one second in command. In other words,

CANADIANS FIGURE IN THE DRIVE

ADVANCE OF A MILE MADE ON THE SOMME BY THEM

General News From The Front Is Of Continuing Successes.

London, Sept. 16.—The Canadians advanced nearly a mile in the Somme offensive and captured a number of prisoners and guns. They discovered the German trenches filled with dead as a result of the bombardment preceding the infantry attack.

British Success.

The British have torn open the enemy defences at Thriepval and in a terrific battle the German losses were very heavy. Three villages have been captured and the British now occupy all the high ground around Pozieres and have captured a German redoubt which was regarded to be impregnable.

In The Balkans.

The Allied drive in the Balkans is now in full swing and the Germans and Bulgarians have been driven back all along the line.

On the right wing the Serbians did magnificent work, driving the Bulgarians back upon Florine, about seventeen miles south of Monastir.

King Constantine of Greece says that the Greek nation will be ready to join the Entente Allies when an advantageous moment arrives.

GETTING EXHIBITS READY FOR FAIR

A. R. NEALE, ASSISTANT HORTICULTURIST, GIVES SOME ADVICE

Prince Rupert Gardeners, He Says, Should Not Be Backward.

The time is drawing near for holding Prince Rupert's Fourth Annual Fall Fair, and growers all over British Columbia are beginning to consider what fruits of their season's labors are worthy of exhibition. The following information is given by A. R. Neale, Assistant Horticulturist, on the subject: The busy gardeners of Prince Rupert should not be backward in bringing forth their produce for competition. The Fall Fair is a fitting windup to the season's work and affords an opportunity to the grower not only to gauge how successful he has been in his work, but also to obtaining comparison, new ideas and better ideals for his future work. Although to some extent those

The fish were nearly all taken within a three days.

Billy Woodworth Has Gone To Get Interesting Pictures At Forrester Island.

Billy Woodworth, who has been in the city for several days, left yesterday for Forester Island to take views of the sea birds that abound there. That has been created a sanctuary for the sea fowl and thousands breed there every year. He expects to get very interesting films.

In the trim little schooner Fearless, Woodworth and a party composing Harry Coffee, also well known here, Felix Bramstin and Victor Krondal are touring the Alaskan coast line taking moving pictures for the Universal Film Company.

Later Woodworth expects to go down the coast and take the Panama Canal route to the eastern coast of America. He has recently taken a most interesting line of films at Tracey Arm, and was privileged to get it just as a great block of ice broke off and plunged into the water.

MARY PICKFORD SCORES TRIUMPH OF VERSATILITY

Superb As Italian-American Girl In Famous Players "Poor Little Peppina."

If there have even been any doubts as to the versatility of Mary Pickford, the Famous Players Film Company's star will dispel them by her wonderful performance in that company's splendid production of Kate Jordan's "Poor Little Peppina." Following upon her last Paramount Picture, "Madame Butterfly," in which she so perfectly characterizes the little Japanese girl, Miss Pickford in this production, which is the feature at the Majestic Theatre Monday, creates a character new to her admirers—an American girl who has been stolen by Italians when a mere baby and brought up as one of their own children. Her native tongue and all thought of her real parentage totally obliterated, she is to all intents and purposes a real Italian girl. But there lingers about her an indefinable something reunited with her parents by a simple little prayer that forms the only heritage of her childhood.

"Poor Little Peppina" is a big thrilling story which abounds in heart-interest and suspense, with here and there a hearty laugh as Mary Pickford struggled with the difficulties of her first cigarette and her general initiation into boydom.

The Eclair Gazette, screening the latest in war news from the Allied front will also be a feature. A special matinee will be put on from 3 to 5.

The Dominion's Royal Commission took evidence here yesterday and will leave for the south this evening. They are staying aboard the private car Natalie during the stop in Prince Rupert.

Sir George E. Foster, the Chairman of the body, explains that the work which is being done will work in admirably with the settlement of plans for after the war, although when appointed the war was not considered. The outbreak came after a good part of the evidence had been taken as to production and resources. Great Britain, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and Newfoundland had been covered. The war broke in then and now they were completing Canada. It happens that the information that was obtained was got under normal conditions, which was an advantage. Now the question of intertrade and similar s bjects that have been affected by the war will be well considered, with an eye to the lessons of the war.

Yesterday the Commission, composed of Rt. Hon. Sir George E. Foster, Sir Edgar Bowing, William Lorimer and Joseph Tatlow, sat at the City Hall with Mr. Harding, the Secretary, and Mr. Bridgman, the Clerk.

About two years ago data was prepared by Capt. McCoskrie with regard to the harbor by request. Yesterday W. H. Tobey, of the G. T. P., appeared before the body and laid before them the plans for harbor development contemplated by the railway company.

J. Fred Ritchie also gave them information as to the mineral resources of this part. He showed samples of ore of different kinds in which Mr. Lorimer was deeply interested.

George R. Naden supplemented this information given by Mr. Ritchie.

In the afternoon the members of the Commission visited the drydock and other points of interest in a commercial way in the city.

GET IN AND PUSH.

The election is practically over, awaiting only the soldiers' vote, which cannot materially alter the situation at Victoria. It is evident now that Mr. Brewster will be Premier and will have in a very few days now the task of forming a government. Prince Rupert citizens, irrespective of party, should do what they can to see that this city's representative is not passed over in the choice made. This city is the centre of the great north, and in Mr. Pattullo, has a representative that will compare favorably with the majority of those who are available for cabinet position. In extending congratulations to Mr. Pattullo upon a victory that looks assured now, we add to it the hope that he will be called into the cabinet and thus be in a position to more ably advance the interests of the constituency he represents than he would as a private member. We admit it is a disappointment to us to see the Conservative party hand over the management of affairs however. We have never believed that all the ability in the country reposes in one party. Mr. Brewster is himself an eminently safe man. We hope he will do the honor to the local representative of calling him into his council as a cabinet minister. It is something we feel he is entitled to and something the City of Prince Rupert deserves. Irrespective of party feelings, residents of Prince Rupert should at all times be prepared to get behind and push in the interests of the city. There has been too great a tendency on many occasions in the past to let pettiness enter into affairs, with the result that the city has suffered. This is not an occasion, above all times, when the citizens can let personal feelings stand in the way of progress.

ABLE ADDRESS DELIVERED.

were organizing and making munitions for the British push on the Somme. Then the pressure on Verdun was lightened.

The French women were wonderful. Almost every home had passed through its Gethsemane. Yet the women had taken up the work of men. France, as a result, presented a picture of fruitfulness in the fields as if nothing were happening. The women were doing it. The French nation had reincarnated itself and was a nation marked in fibre in contract with what it was before.

Sir George then turned to the call of arms in Britain when the war broke out and she placed 125,000 men. That was all the prepared men that could be put in the field. But they were soldiers second to none, and Frenchmen tell today it was that British army that saved the day. Britain had then raised an army of 5,000,000 men, and most of those men were enlisted voluntary. It was magnificent to pass through Great Britain and see the spirit. The war had eaten the core out of class prejudices. There were probably 700,000 women in Britain making munitions, where they were not employed before. The women learned more quickly than men; they did as much work; and took as much interest in it. The feeling was that Britain must see it through and would see it through no matter how long it lasted, or what it cost.

The speaker paid a high compliment to the hospital work which he had seen. Sir George told of his trip through France and the visit to the actual front.

He also told of his visit to the British fleets. He had been to them after the battle of Jutland and gave most interesting accounts of what he saw, stating, that if ever the German fleet did come out and gave them a chance it would be a finish for the Germans.

Dealing with trade the speaker said that a condition would exist after the war that would have to be dealt with. Canada would have 500,000 men taken from producing in the country. The country was sending out $1,000,000 worth of munitions daily. These workers were taken from beneficent manufacturies and put at this.

The war was costing millions of dollars. All were paying more for living as a result of the war. There would be a tremendous debt to take care of. The situation should be faced of how to best prepare for peace. There would have to be work for the returned soldiers and for those in munition factories. The war will result in thousands of changes. Speculation in real estate would pass. Speculation was a vicious thing. There ought to be some method by which fictitious prices should be put on townsite lots. The sober second thought of the war would right this. He believed labor and capital would get closer together. The two were coordinated by providence to work together. Enterprising ability must bring them together. Now was an auspicious time to get together the three.

Trade was not what they should be shouting for. It should be production, and that would bring trade. Develop the natural resources on sane lines. Trade is only an incident of production. Speculation will never make a country rich. Production only will do that. Beneficent production alone will lift the country up. He admonished them to conservation.

On the conclusion of the speech a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the speaker on the motion of T. D. Pattullo and William Manson.

The sale of refreshments, including lunches, tea, etc., at the Fair will be under the direction of The Red Cross Society, the proceeds being for "Our Day," the day set aside throughout the Empire for raising funds for the British Red Cross So-who garden in the city are handicapped, it is evident that when they have encouraged their soil to produce the quality of the produce is equal to any in this northern district. But it is one thing to grow a crop successfully and another to prepare it correctly for exhibition, This latter is, of course, to a great extent an ability to be acquired by experience. However, there are a few leading features to be considered: First of all read over the rules and regulations for entry carefully, for the carrying out of these not only goes a long way towards the winning of prizes but aids those responsible for the arrangement of the exhibits and the judges on the day. It must be remembered that the rules are to make the competition equal and fair, and also to assist in the smooth running of the whole thing.

GETTING EXHIBITS.

Having done this, next ascertain how many classes you can enter for and the reqisites for each, then obtain an abundance of the variety and gradually eliminate everything until you have found the nearest to what you consider the ideal exhibit to be. In doing this there are several points to consider: First of all size is rarely to be sought, for it is usually indicative of coarseness, aim rather to show specimens which have the truest type, moderate and uniform size, maturity, market quality and freedom from blemishes.

After choosing the best specimens you can find, the next important procedure is to prepare it carefully; many good exhibits are disqualified because they do not fulfill the requirements of the contest. Many more of good quality are not placed as high as they should be, because they are not prepared in such a way that their good points are readily visible. A good plan, as a rule, is to prepare everything in such a way that it would look attractive on a market stall. In general, the housewife's standard should be also that of the exhibitor. That is to say, a neat and clean appearance, uniform size, freedom from all roughness and unnecessary appendages.

MORE MEN THAN WOME HAVE APENDICITIS

Surgeons state men are slightly more subject to appendicitis than women. Prince Rupert people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka, often relieve or prevent appendicitis. This mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is surprising. If Prince Rupert people will deal at home they will find our price about the same as elsewhere for equal quality, as our freight bills are not heavy, and home dealers will be encouraged to keep proper stocks.

Let us compare, for instance, Eaton's price, $5.70 on a 7 Jeweled Waltham. Our Price is $6.00, but it is worth the 30c to see what you are getting when you want it, and have it guaranteed right here.

Take also the highest priced Waltham, a 23 Jeweled Vanguard at $44.60. Our Price is $45.00. Not very much difference.

Many articles, of course, are not so easily compared, and are made in many qualities and often look big for the money in the catalogue.
