PRINCE RUPERT IN SHELL CONTRACT

THIS CITY, IT IS POSSIBLE, MAY HAVE A SHARE IN THE MANUFACTURING.

The Drydock Management Express Readiness to Take Part in the Work.

The question of Prince Rupert obtaining a share of the business being placed by the British War Office at various points in Canada was discussed at a meeting of the executive council of the Board of Trade yesterday.

C. N. Crowell, manager of the G. T. P. Drydock, who was present, stated that it would be possible for the Drydock to undertake the making of shell casings, provided the crude material was available and also the services of an expert operative. The other marine shops in the city also state that they are in a position to make certain parts, and it was suggested that the Board endeavor to get the Drydock authorities to get after a contract, which could be sublet if necessary as to certain parts amongst the smaller concerns. It was pointed out that Edmonton was at the present time manufacturing war material, that Victoria had just received a contract for shells, and that therefore Prince Rupert with the facilities she had should also receive consideration.

It was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the commissioner, who was instructed to get in touch with all interested, and place Prince Rupert's claims in the proper quarters.

In connection with this, lists of machinery available have been sent to Col. David Carnegie, the shell expert of the British War Office, and to the Shell Committee, Montreal. The executive of the Conservative Association of Prince Rupert have also been communicated with, with the suggestion that they take the matter up with Ottawa.

United effort on the part of the people of Prince Rupert will no doubt be successful in obtaining for the town a share of this business. A. C. Garde, M. E., was also instructed by the Board to prepare a report on the copper, zinc, and reduction works of Northern British Columbia. This report will be sent to Col. David Carnegie, who has requested that some information be sent him as to the possibilities of Northern British Columbia as a field for copper and zinc production.

Postponement of the Excursion.

On the recommendation of the entertainment committee of the Board of Trade, who pointed out that the response to the excursion literature sent out had not been of a favorable nature from outside points, the excursion which it was proposed to run to the Panama Fair was postponed indefinitely. Should conditions justify, the matter will be taken up again later in the summer.

MAKING FOR HILLS AT EIGHTY-THREE

OLD-TIME PROSPECTOR LEFT YESTERDAY FOR FINDLAY RIVER COUNTRY.

He Will Go in by Way of Prince George—Will Meet Friend There.

After long years of prospecting and washing gold in the mountains on the western slope of the continent, Mr. Whittaker, known as "Arkansas," left yesterday for Prince George to spend another summer in the placers. He will go into the Findlay River country from the interior point, reaching the country by a much shorter route than he has been accustomed to travel by way of Hazelton. At Prince George he will meet an old partner named Aberdeen, who will go in with him.

Whittaker is eighty-three years of age, but he would not be taken for that age by any one. He has spent the greater part of his life in the gold search and it would appear as if he would end his days in that calling.

In the district into which he is going he says there are satisfactory results to be got. He is able to clean up from $6 to $8 a day without trouble. There is an abundance of good ground open. This year he expects to see more than usual in the field.

FISHERMEN SHOULD BECOME EDUCATED

MODERN METHODS OF HANDLING NECESSARY TO INCREASE USE OF FISH.

Schools for Fishermen Along Modern Lines Are Now a Necessity.

Fish is certain to become a much more important supplement to the meat diet of Canadians than it is at present. It can be produced more cheaply; it possesses splendid nourishing qualities, and, when properly cooked, is a most palatable food.

Unfortunately, much of the fish offered for sale is not of a high quality. This may, in part, be traced to the crude, careless, and often wasteful methods that are used by the fishermen in taking and handling the fish, and the fact that such methods are used demonstrates the need for providing technical education for fishermen.

While Canada possesses one of the richest and most varied fisheries in the world, they are, in most instances, being exploited by men who have little or no technical knowledge of the natural history of fish, the proper methods of preparing fish for market, as well as of other aspects of the fisheries industry. Tradition plays a large part in the lives of many fishermen. It is extremely difficult for them to shake off the obsolete practices of their fathers and adopt those that experience in other countries has shown to be superior.

During the present winter the Canadian Fisheries Association was organized under very favorable auspices. It is gratifying to note that the new association was formed for the "development of the fishing industry on commercial, scientific and educational lines." The basic problem to be solved in building up the fishing industry and in popularizing the consumption of fish is the education of the fishermen.

Schools for fishermen exist in practically every European maritime nation. It is in Japan, however, that fishery instruction is being carried to the greatest perfection.

CANADA'S ANSWER TO CALL OF EMPIRE

Sir Robert Borden made an important statement as to the number of troops of Canada under arms in Europe and in the Dominion from his place in the House of Commons a few days ago. He quoted the announcements of policy as to the organization of contingents made by the Government in October and November last. The programme had provided for the enrollment of 108,000 officers and men, and it had been carried out to date. Sir Robert gave the following figures, compiled by the adjutant-general to show the extent to which the plan had been worked out. The forces under arms are as follows: Overseas, first contingent and reinforcements, 35,420 officers and men; in Bermuda, the Royal Canadian Regiment, 982 officers and men; in St. Lucia, detachment for garrison, 100; in Canada, second contingent, C. E. F., 22,272; reserve infantry battalions and Canadian Mounted Rifles, 27,079; recruited and organized for overseas service, but not mobilized, 3,500; a total for overseas service of 89,353. In addition, there were in Canada units of the active militia on garrison and outpost duty, 9,777; a permanent force of 2,430, making a grand total of 101,560. (Applause.)

"That force," said the Prime Minister, "is more than four times as numerous as the force of British troops under Wellington at Waterloo, and twice as numerous as the total force of either Wellington or Napoleon at that battle. I think the people may congratulate themselves that in a period of only eight months so great a force has been organized, armed and equipped, and to know that the number of guns which went abroad with the first contingent considerably exceeds the number of guns Wellington had at his disposal at Waterloo."

Satisfactory Showing.

Sir Robert said that while the force was not a great army compared with the armies contending on the plains of Europe, yet, considering that Canada was a young country, he thought that the result obtained in the short period of eight months might be regarded as thoroughly satisfactory.

In short, continued the Premier, there had been sent abroad more than 36,000 men, and in the fulfilment of the programme laid down last autumn, there were in training in Canada for overseas service about 53,000 men. If account was taken of the units of the active militia on active service and of the permanent force there were in Canada in training and under arms over 65,000 men. He thought that the intelligence and zeal of those men were such as to reflect credit on the Dominion, and that Canada had every reason to be proud of the men who were going to represent her and defend her on the battlefields of Europe.

Contingent Ready for Three Months.

"It is proper," said the Prime Minister, "that I should here make a statement which would set at rest comment upon delay which has taken place in sending forward the second contingent. That contingent could have been sent forward three months ago. The War Office was informed of that fact and has been kept informed from time to time. The date at which the contingent was to go forward was arranged some two months ago. Honorable gentlemen will understand that I cannot give any information as to what that date is. I merely make this statement to set at rest the statement that this contingent is not ready to go forward. We know the reasons why the War Office has not seen fit to have the contingent sent forward. These reasons commend themselves to the War Office and we see no reason to dissent from them. The enormous number of men in training in Great Britain makes it not easy for the War Office to provide accommodation for contingents from the overseas dominions."

Sir Robert added that in view of the unfortunate conditions suffered by the first contingent during the winter, Lord Kitchener and another official desired that the accommodation provided for the second contingent should be such as to give no reason for complaint. So the date for the going forward of the second contingent had been delayed and in all that the Government had followed the wishes of the War Office.

Maintain Force of 50,000 Men.

Up to the present no call had been made upon the Canadian Mounted Rifles, but their turn, Sir Robert said, was likely to come directly the tactical situation changed in the western theatre of operations. "We are therefore," he continued, "within reasonable distance of the time when a Canadian expeditionary force of some 50,000 men will be serving overseas. To maintain that force in strength and efficiency continuous supply of reinforcements properly trained and fully equipped will have to be provided; to say nothing of remounts and constant replenishments of material of every kind.

"Total necessities cannot be determined because it is impossible to say with anything approaching certainty how long the war will last and the conditions which at present govern the conduct of the campaign in Europe are likely to change in course of time. But there are data on which the necessities of war can be calculated and reinforcements must be prepared on a corresponding scale. With a view to securing the result desired the minister of militia and defence has provided for the establishment of overseas training depots, one or more for each arm of the service. Already some of the surplus units which embarked with the first contingent are being utilized for the purpose. These depots will be fed by units stationed in Canada and will furnish drafts for units serving at the front. So far as at present can be foreseen, a total of about 150,000 men will be required should the war last another year. That is to say, an original force of 50,000, plus 50,000 sent overseas for reinforcements, plus 50,000 in Canada under training. A cut and dried plan cannot be laid down in war. The unexpected often happens and our own arrangements must be subordinated to the needs of the whole empire.

Status of Canadian Force.

The Prime minister read a report by Major General W. Gwatkin, chief of the general staff, setting forth the organization and status of the Canadian expeditionary forces. The Canadian expeditionary force, the memorandum says, is made up as follows:

The first contingent, consisting of the first division C.D.F. army troops and surplus units and line of communication units; the second division C. D. F. and line of communication units. A force of Canadian Mounted Rifles; an infantry reserve and depots. The first division, about 18,000 strong, which is in the field, consists of twelve battalions of infantry in three brigades; a squadron of cavalry and cyclist company; 48 18-pounder and 4 60-pounder guns, with ammunition column, three field companies of engineers; a divisional signal company, a divisional train composed of four companies of the army service corps and three field ambulances. The Royal Canadian Dragoons and Lord Strathcona Horse, A and B Batteries Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, an automobile machine gun brigade and six battalions of infantry including the Princess Patricia's regiment, accompanied the first division. The cavalry and horse artillery have been posted, a mounted brigade commanded by Brigadier General, The Rt. Hon. J. E. B. Seely, D. S. O., and are still in England. So also are the automobile brigades, and several battalions of infantry are still also in England. One composed of detachments from mounted corps provides cavalry reinforcements; three furnish reinforcements for the infantry and the fifth forms a general reserve.

The Second Contingent.

The memorandum gives the details of the second contingent. It states that two armored motor machine gun units are being mobilized, one at Toronto and the other at Montreal, but that it has not yet been determined whether these will

SEWARD TRADE WITH CITY

THE QUESTION OF BUSINESS WITH THIS CITY WAS CONSIDERED.

The Commissioner of the Local Body Will Communicate in Matter.

At a meeting of the executive council of the Board of Trade the question of getting busy in connection with obtaining for Prince Rupert a share of the trade that is bound to follow the commencement of construction work on the Alaskan Railway System was discussed.

The commissioner was authorized to get into touch with the people of Seward and also with the various transportation companies interested, especially with a view of getting the Admiral Line to make Prince Rupert a port of call between the south and Seward and Alaska.

WILL TAKE CARE OF SOLDIERS' ORCHARDS

Horticultural Branch of Province to Pay Attention to Volunteers' Land.

The Horticultural Branch of the Department of Agriculture has been in receipt of many requests from all parts of the province for especial attention to the orchards of men who have gone to the front.

In order that the necessary and proper care can be given these orchards during the absence of the owners, the deputy minister of agriculture has instructed that assistant horticulturists give special attention to requests from those who have left or are leaving for the front, or their agents or representatives. In such cases assistant horticulturists are instructed to visit the orchards and give such advice and instruction as to their care as should give best results.

Further requests may be addressed to the Department of Agriculture direct or to the assistant horticulturist of the district.

BILLY SUNDAY AS SPRINTER OF NOTE

FAMOUS EVANGELIST WAS ABLE TO MAKE FAST TIME ON TRACK.

An Interesting Episode in the History of the Great Preacher.

Since Billy Sunday has become all the rage as an evangelist a short story of the sprinting evangelist should not be out of place. Sunday signed with the Chicago White Stockings back in the 80's. He and Captain Anson are friends and came originally from the same town, Marshalltown, Iowa. Billy had earned the reputation of being fast enough on his feet to cover 100 yards in 9 4-5 seconds. He had come fresh from college after winning a score of gold medals for his swiftness and was anxious to gain fresh laurels on the ball field.

"If I hit the ball once I can beat it out at first, no matter who gets it," said Sunday to Captain Anson, and the boast did not escape the old man. He gave William, the great talker, a trial. They were then playing on the lake front at the foot of Harrison Street. Jimmy Ryan, who was working out at short, was so astonished at the mercury-footed young man that he forgot all about throwing the ball. Sunday's wonderful speed was the means of placing a good bank account in the pockets of many of the White Stockings. After the new find had stolen more bases for his time in service than any other man in the league his fellow players declared they would use him effectively against some of the numerous sprinters they encountered on the eastern trip.

Those days the cities and woods were full of foot-racers. Even Anson, who looked usually on such with a discouraging eye, longed for the chance to show the world what a wonder he really had on the roster of his club.

The Chicago club met its first angel in Detroit through the agency of big-hearted Ed Williamson, one of the greatest shortstops that ever played ball, to my way of thinking. There was a fellow named Hunky Sullivan, who was the pride of the Michigan metropolis. He had been in the habit of showing off at the park each time a ball club made its appearance, and had a lot of fun with the ball players, who were pretty big men, as a rule, those days, such men as Roger Connor, Captain Anson, Fred Dunlap, Dan Brouthers, Sam Thompson, and many more, who were not built to be sprinters, but you can believe me, they could pickle the ball some.

This Sullivan person was a runner of no mean ability, and frequently claimed he could give any man from Chicago three yards start in 100 and make him concede defeat. Williamson was delegated to secure a match and arrange the meeting.

With the diplomacy of a secretary of state big Edward went about the business. Sullivan and his manager fell into the trap like young coyotes. It was decided Sullivan should put up $1,500 furnished by Sunday's friends. It was also decided the two should start at the same mark. Sunday did not go to the trouble of substituting the regular sprinter's attire for his baseball uniform, but ap-

COURTED ENQUIRY.

In connection with the irregularities that have been unearthed at Ottawa, the members of Parliament who sought to get at the bottom of anything that looked suspicious found no Blockade Brigade standing ready to head off the enquiry whenever it became unpleasant for ministers and their friends. Let them continue their researches. So also let the country have the details of the transactions investigated by Commissioner Howard Ferguson. These deal with reported maladministration in the Northwest, and deserve public attention. It may be remembered that in the autumn of 1911 a Parliamentary Committee was engaged in the investigation of certain charges made by Mr. Magillacuddy against Mr. Frank Oliver, then Minister of the Interior. Mr. Oliver had defiantly demanded a full enquiry into the source and destination of $69,000 placed to his credit in one of the banks about the time that a certain Order-in-Council was passed concerning lands. Bank officers had been summoned to elucidate the transaction and were on hand when the Government members of the committee proposed an adjournment of several days. Conservatives suggested that this might choke off the enquiry, but the majority assured them that the committee would be called again. Before the committee met Parliament was prorogued and dissolved and the investigation was buried. This is not a good precedent.

HOW BRITISH WON NEUVE CHAPELLE

LETTER FROM ONE WHO TOOK PART GIVES INTERESTING INCIDENTS.

Cool Action of the Troops Under Fire Everywhere in Evidence.

Perhaps the most interesting letter received in Victoria from the battlefront since the war began has arrived from Lieut. F. C. Holden, of this city, says the Victoria Times. Writing to his brother under date of March 1, Holden, who is with the 5th Mountain Battery, R. G. A., B X force, says:

"No doubt you will have heard of our little affair at Neuve Chapelle on March 10. It was a great day, I don't think any of us ought to have been alive at the end of it. We gave them more than they wanted.

"We lost our mayor unfortunately. I got a bullet through my water bottle (quite near enough, as the bottle was hung between my arm and body), and I was hit in the fleshy part of the neck with a piece of shell. Nothing serious, fortunately. The next day I got out of the house I was sleeping in, as I heard some trouble starting. And no sooner had I left the room than in came a shell and ripped up the straw where my pillow was and filled my sleeping bag with debris. On the 10th, however, I was concealed 150 yards down a road; the main attack was delivered as indicated, when the trench immediately in front was captured. The infantry wheeled to the left, and cleared the trenches on the flank, bayonetting the devils as they went along, and waving a blue flag to show the exact position of their head. The Germans fled across the road 150 yards in front of my gun. The total German casualties were 18,000 for the day. We have been burying hard ever since, and the unsavory job is not yet completed. In my new position we had to go into action with a sack of chloride of lime. Our infantry cleared the village behind within fifteen minutes of the word 'Go!' I saw the whole show, and really, I don't want to see anything like it again, although a lot more will have to be done before this bloody war is finished.

"I got one poor devil hit in three places under cover, and gave him some water and had a long chat before he gave in. He spoke a little English and was very grateful. Said they had been told that the war would be over in a few weeks, as Russia had been conquered. He finished up quite contented. I was much amused at a party of about one hundred Germans being marched to the rear by two little British Tommies, each with a German helmet at the back of his head and about ten hung around his waist, and puffing a fat German cigar, pleased as Punch, amid a hail of shell.

"I made a long tour of the captured trenches. They were beautifully made with gorgeous dugouts, fitted out with the loot from the neighboring villages, chairs, stoves, beds, etc. The trenches were littered with cavalry helmets, spurs, rifles, etc., and even though the majority of the bodies were removed the drains were bright red.

"The first charge of our infantry was started from 75 yards from the German trenches. They all went forward smoking and laughing as though nothing unusual were happening. One fellow actually stood on our parapet, struck a light, lit his Woodbine, then said to his pal below: 'Come on, Bill; let's go at 'em!' and sailed forth. When we captured a good length of the trench the centre went on and the flanks started working down the trench with bomb throwers, chucking a few bombs into a section, and then dashing in, and so on straight down the trench. Four thousand yards were cleared in this way. It was an awful slaughter, but encouraging after what we have had to put up with at 'Wipers' (Ypres) and other places.

"The A. S. C. officers never come within shell range, but are doing magnificent work. Our rations are at refilling point at 12 noon every day, and the battery wagons fetch them in to us. They have to work hard even if it is touring the country in a car, but they have not got to put up with the hardships that the rest of us have to. There is also the General Service Corps, which officers the railways, landing places, etc., and is a kind of A. S. C."

accompany the second division abroad. Speaking of the force of Canadian Mounted Rifles, Gen. Gwatkin says that when the army council decided on the form the assistance from Canada should take, disappointment was felt particularly in the west at the exclusion of cavalry and mounter rifles. So long as trench fighting continued mounted troops were not required in the western theatre of operations. But they were required in Egypt, which was threatened with invasion, and, moreover, it was not unreasonable to suppose that the situation in Belgium and in France would undergo a change. Therefore, it was decided to proceed with the mobilization of thirteen regiments of mounted rifles. In addition the twelve "first line" battalions of the second division, there are in Canada twenty-four "reserve" battalions in various stages of development. These will be utilized as circumstances require; in Canada for draft giving purposes, or in England as training depots, or as complete units at the seat of war.

Gen. Gwatkin says that in addition to the three infantry depots and the cavalry depot provided in England for the first contingent, the 23rd, 30th, and 32nd battalions have lately been sent over to serve as depots for the infantry of the second division. Depots have also been formed in England for artillery, engineers and army service corps, etc. In Canada there are recruiting and training establishments for each of the units which the permanent force contributed to the first contingent and to the garrison of Bermuda.

General Gwatkin appends to his report a statement showing that in the various Canadian forces are enrolled 101,460 officers and men, divided as follows: Canadian overseas forces, 85,753; units recruited and organized for overseas service, but not mobilized, 3,500; units of the active militia on active service in Canada, 9,777; permanent force in Canada, 2,430.

A Magnificent Response.

Sir Robert said that the House and the country would realize that in the organization of a force of more than one hundred thousand men very great work had been done in Canada during the past eight months. He desired to express the deep appreciation which he, and he was sure all Canadians, felt of the magnificent response which had come to the call to arms. No one doubted that when the need came the people of Canada would be ready to respond to that call. "But," said the Premier, "I venture to think that in every province and in every community of Canada that response has been so warm, so loyal and so splendidly patriotic that every one of us feels more proud than ever before of this great Dominion." (Applause.)

ARAB REBELS ATTACK ITALIAN COLUMN

Rome, April 16.—An Italian column operating in Tripoli under the command of Col. Gianiazzi for the protection of the harvesting of the barley crop southeast of Misda, has been attacked by a force of 1,000 rebels, according to advices reaching Rome. The rebels after a sharp fight were beaten off and their losses were heavy. The Italian column had 18 men killed and wounded. Misda is about 100 miles south of the city of Tripoli.

The Anheuser-Busch Plant covers today more than 142 acres—equal to 70 city blocks. It gives steady employment to 6,000 people, and to 1,500 more in its branches.

Every process, every room, is immaculate.

Every bottle is Pasteurized and Inspected. This Quality-Plant, started nearly 50 years ago, is a model of modern facilities.

The hundreds of visitors who go through every day know that nothing of its kind could be made any better than Budweiser.

peared in his heavy shoes, flannel shirt and knickerbockers; but he did take off his shoes and run in his stocking feet. The $1,500 was furnished by Sunday's backers, who were his fellow players, and who agreed to give him a percentage, provided he won. Billy limped around before the signal was given to start, and created the impression that he was not in his apparent calibre.

The impression of the crowd was greatly changed though, when the contestants stood on the mark. It was seen that Sunday's lameness was only put on and that he prepared for the crack of the pistol with the pose of a veteran. The battle down the line was much closer than Sunday's supporters expected it to be. It seems like it was Billy's habit of causing all sorts of frights to his friends by jeopardizing the result and afterward snatching victory from defeat. When ten yards from the finish he slowly drew away from his contestant and won by a yard to spare.

Besides the $2,500 posted on the result of the race, it was estimated that the Chicago players cleared $5,000.

SMASHED CONVENT IS MAJOR RIGBY'S GRAVE

London Times Writer Praises Kootenay-Boundary Officer—"His Was a Soldier's Death."

The following letter was received by the Nelson News from Gerald S. Rees, formerly of Nelson and now in Kitchener's army at Ruffey, Sussex, England, and has to do with the death of the late Major Rigby.

"On taking up the Times this morning the enclosed cutting met my eyes and I read of the death of Major Rigby with the deepest regret. The sorrow for the loss of a gallant gentlemen will be felt in the far western land where he was known in the days of peace and plenty before the outbreak of this terrible war.

"There were many of us who attended the farewell reception to the first contingent in Nelson in the fall of last year who doubtless held in mind then the solemn thought that some of these brave men were then bidding their last earthly farewell to their friends and loved ones, and the memory of that farewell becomes very acute and the price of victory is brought home to us all. The name of one more brave soldier has been added to England's Roll of Honor, but his memory will ever be held most dear. The spirit of sacrifice is not dead, and the music, the melody of the 'One Clear Call', sounds over land and sea wherever the sons of Empire have made their homes."

The article referred to by Mr. Rees in his letter is as follows:

"We had our first real loss today, when we lost our company officer, Major Rigby. He was shot by a German sniper in the trenches. I need hardly say that we are sorry, as that would not express the sense of loss which we all feel. No one could ever wish for a finer officer or a better gentleman—we can never have a soldier like him again and as time goes on we shall feel his loss the more.

"Our poor major did not know fear. His idea was to inspire his men, and in that he had succeeded. We all hope we shall soon have a chance to avenge his death. His funeral was a most fitting one. He was buried near a smashed convent—a few officers stood as he was carried through the boys from the trenches, who were getting rations to bring back with them. He was laid to rest in his uniform by the flash of the guns and the flare of the searchlight and star shells. His was a soldier's end!"

EXTRACTS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal mining rights of the Dominion in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only; but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 per acre.
