ALLIES VICTORIOUS ON WESTERN FRONT

The Official Reports From The French Headquarters Is Favorable At All Points Where The Germans Have Been Encountered

Paris, Feb. 20.—An official report says in Belgium along the whole front as far as and including Rheims there has been cannonading and fusilades. Our action continues.

In Champagne under good conditions we repulsed several counter attacks.

We made fresh gains north of Perthes, occupying the wood in which the enemy was strongly organized.

In Argonne there have been few engagements and little of importance to report.

At Leseparges southeast of Verdun, after having repulsed the sixth counter-attack by the enemy we delivered a fresh attack, enlarging and completing the progress which was realized yesterday.

BANKS WILL BEAR A HEAVY BURDEN

ONE PER CENT. TAX IMPOSED UPON CIRCULATION TO YIELD MUCH.

How the Impost Will Fall Upon the Different Organizations Concerned.

The tax of 1 per cent. on bank note circulation will be a heavy one on the banks, the minister anticipating a revenue of $1,000,000 from this source, which seems to be well within the mark, unless the business conditions throughout the country result in a very much smaller volume of circulation than is called for at the present time.

The last official returns on note circulation are contained in the December statement, the January figures not being due for some days yet. The December total was $105,969,755, compared with $108,646,425 in the same month in 1913.

The tax will fall on the banks according to the volume of business transacted, there being a relation between the amount of circulation and the profits of each institution.

For instance, the Bank of Montreal, which leads in circulation with $15,418,846, in December last had profits of $2,496,451. The tax would eat into that amount to the extent of something like $150,000, which makes considerable of a breach. So on down along the line.

On the 1 per cent. basis it is easy to figure out about what each bank will have to pay on the basis of their December circulation as below:

Bank of Montreal	$15,418,846
Quebec Bank	1,977,461
Bank of Nova Scotia	7,148,813
Bank of B. N. A.	4,004,627
Bank of Toronto	4,236,122
Molsons Bank	3,425,800
Banque Nationale	3,174,740
Merchants Bank of Canada	6,481,279
Banque Provinciale	1,156,878
Union Bank of Canada	5,676,534
Canadian Bank of Commerce	13,653,267
Royal Bank of Canada	12,645,768
Dominion Bank	4,143,040
Bank of Hamilton	2,684,960
Standard Bank of Canada	3,189,193
Banque d'Hochelaga	3,221,492
Bank of Ottawa	3,689,780
Imperial Bank of Canada	3,158,312
Home Bank of Canada	1,541,880
Northern Crown Bank	2,027,916
Sterling Bank of Canada	1,086,925
Weyburn Security Bank	226,122
Total	$105,969,755

Halibut Catches Are Good

Continued good catches of halibut from the fishing banks are expected. This season the fishing has opened up with excellent promise and the outlook is for a continuation of it. During the past week the port of Prince Rupert received a tremendous quantity of halibut. Two trainloads went out from here during the time in addition to other shipments made by the regular service

EFFECT ON EGYPT OF BRITISH RULE

PROTECTORATE EXISTED BEFORE IN ALL BUT NAME.

What the British Have Done in the Land of the Khedive Explained.

What effect has the deposition of the Khedive and the declaration of a British protectorate over Egypt had upon that country?

"By establishing a protectorate," explains a noted Egyptian authority in the British press, "we regularize an arrangement which was already a protectorate in all but name. There are several strong objections to annexation, all of which were duly propounded in Cairo, but there is a far stronger one which I have not yet seen advanced. We shall not now, and never shall, annex Egypt. All Islam knows the nobility of our purpose when we proclaim a new Sultan of Egypt; annexation would sound to millions of Mohammedans like another death-knell, of which they have heard too many. We can sustain Egypt and support it and protect it, we can stand with drawn sword at the gates of the East and keep barbarous hordes at bay, we can hope to see Egypt a willing and independent unit beneath the British flag, shielded by our invincible fleet; but we can go no farther.

"The task of creating in the East great nations which can stand upon their own feet under the protecting aegis of Great Britain lies before us in the new era. It will take long to achieve, progress will be slow and difficult, but that way our Imperial destiny leads.

What Britain Has Done.

"We supported the Turkish claims to suzerainty and never failed to accord them a recognition which was in reality excessive. We saved the Khediviate by suppressing Arabi's rebellion and seating Tewfik more firmly on his throne. We stayed in Egypt to rescue it from bankruptcy, and Lord Cromer made it the flourishing and prosperous Dominion it is today. Why is Cairo quiet and contented? Why are the Egyptian ministers bravely and steadily supporting the British connection? Why does every thoughtful Egyptian in the hour of trial discard all sympathy with the foolish German-inspired "Nationalist" intrigues with Constantinople? Because, when put to the test, the Egyptian people have not the slightest genuine wish to exchange British control and protection for the rapacious and blighting oppression of a pack of mongrel Turkish adventurers, who are neither Turks nor Moslems, but hybrid agnostics of Jewish or gipsy blood who have been bought body and soul by German gold. Our honest and unselfish work in Egypt has borne good fruit. In the day of storm we are trusted.

New Policy Explained.

Britain's policy in Egypt is outlined in a letter addressed to the new Sultan by the Acting High Commissioner. The following are the chief points in the statement:

"Having definitely thrown in his lot with his Majesty's enemies the late Khedive has forfeited his rights over the Egyptian executive. His Majesty's Government regard themselves as trustees for the inhabitants of Egypt.

"I am to give you the formal assurance that Great Britain accepts the fullest responsibility for the defence of the territory under your Highness against all aggression whencesoever coming. With Ottoman suzerainty there will disappear the restrictions heretofore placed by Ottoman firmans upon the numbers and organization of your Highness' Army and upon the grant by your Highness of honorific distinctions.

"As regards foreign relations, his Majesty's Government deem it most consistent with the new responsibilities assumed by Great Britain that the relations between your Highness' Government and the representatives of foreign Powers should be henceforth conducted through his Majesty's representative in Cairo. His Majesty's Government are convinced that the clearer definition of Great Britain's position in the country will accelerate progress towards self-government. His Majesty's Government are animated by no hostility towards the Caliphate."

The New Sultan.

Sultan Hussein I. has officially taken up his residence at Abdin Palace, Cairo, where the new flag of red with three silver crescents, each enclosing a star, was hoisted as he crossed the threshold.

The ceremony, though simple considering its importance, was carried out with some degree of military

REV. R. H. GURD HAS PASSED AWAY

WELL-KNOWN MISSIONARY OF CHURCH OF ENGLAND HAS PASSED AWAY.

He Died at Metlakatla on Friday Night—Had Been in Ill-health.

On Friday night Rev. R. H. Gurd, the Church of England missionary at Metlakatla, passed away. For some time he had not been in good health suffering from kidney trouble. A few days before his death his case became very serious, although the end was not expected so soon.

C. C. Perry, Indian agent at Metlakatla, chanced to visit the home of Mr. Gurd just a few moments before his death occurred. Mrs. Gurd and her daughter were present also.

The deceased was 57 years of age. He was born in England, but for many years had been engaged in missionary work on the Pacific Coast. He was well known in Prince Rupert, where he was a frequent visitor, especially since he took up his home in Metlakatla.

It has been arranged that the funeral shall take place in Metlakatla on Wednesday next. Rev. Archdeacon Collison, an old-time friend and co-laborer with the late Mr. Gurd, will conduct the services

Church Anniversary.

On Sunday, March 7, the anniversary services in connectionm with the Methodist Church will be held. On the Monday evening following an anniversary concert will be given. This, it is promised, will be of a very high order.

CADET ORDERS.

The Prince Rupert Cadets No. 432 will parade at the Exhibition Building at 10:15 a.m., Sunday, the 21st. inst., for Divine Service, at the Methodist Church. Parents and friends are invited to attend the service.

BRINGING HERRING IN GOOD NUMBERS

Cold Storage Took Ninety Tons Yesterday---Fish Are In Excellent Condition---Expect To Put Up About One Thouand Tons More For Bait Before Season Closes

The advantage of opening up the herring grounds to fishermen by the Dominion Government is every day being demonstrated here. H. S. Clements, M.P., has by the efforts he used in this direction ensured for the port a plentiful supply of bait for the coming season.

The fishermen report, moreover that the fish that are being taken have by no means reached the spawning stage, so that no appreciable damage can be done to the grounds. The fish will not, according to the present condition of them, be spawning for nearly two months

Yesterday the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Company brought in three scowloads of herring and one of the boats also brought a cargo on board her. The catch represented about ninety tons, which will keep the staff busy today getting them put away in cold storage.

It is said that the company expect to put in 2,000 tons of herring this year. As yet only about half that amount is in place in the storage rooms, but with the fishing as good as it is now for the remaining twenty days the full complement will easily be reached. No time is being lost to get the quantity. The herring boats are being kept in good shape so that the catches may be made without any lapses.

FARM AREAS READY FOR SETTLEMENT

Open Millions of Acres for Settlement at the Close of the War.

Canadian railway officials are naturally looking forward to a desirable increase in traffic when the immigration movement, which is sure to follow the close of the war, gets under way. Canada's need is for tillers of the soil and every effort will be made to attract the farming class.

Information received at Grand Trunk Pacific headquarters in Montreal from the British Columbia Government shows that the Coast Province has made preparations to welcome thousands of cultivators. The final figures for 1914 demonstrate that 1,963 land pre-emptions were taken up in the newly opened districts of the province during the year. This figure will show a large increase, it is expected, before 1915 closes, for the Government states that there are about 1,500,000 acres of surveyed land ready for the settler along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and tracts of 160 acres can be taken possession of on payment of a record fee of $2.00.

Of the surveyed lands available to settlers, there are 146,931 acres in the Cassiar Land District, with 443,000 acres in the Coast District. In the Cariboo District the available surveyed lands total 789,752 acres the greater proportion of which is along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, or tributary to the railway, the eastern half of the railway through the province being within the confines of the Cariboo District.

PRINCESS MAY WILL BE ON RUN SOME WEEKS

The Maquinna Will Be Kept on Skagway Route Longer.

The C. P. R. steamer Princess May, which is still on the run to this port from the south, will be kept several weeks longer on the same route. This is to allow the Princess Maquinna to make a few more trips to Skagway.

The Maquinna has better accommodation for live stock and for lumber than the May has. As the company has quite a quantity of these to place in the Alaskan port it is necessary to keep the May on the local run.

You make, we make, we both make big.

Pretty Wedding.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the Methodist Church yesterday when Mr. George Waddell and Miss Lottie Jacob were united in the bond of holy matrimony by Rev. Dimmick. The bride was attended by Myrtle Downard and Ruby Dimmick, while A. D. Harris was best man. Mr. John Eason played the wedding march from Lohengrin. After the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlors, when about fifty friends attended. Several toasts and speeches were made wishing the young couple all good wishes. The bride is from Truro, Eng., and the bridegroom from Liverpool.

CANADIAN CONVENTION.

About the end of July the annual convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities will be held in Victoria, B. C. This will bring to the Pacific Coast a large number of municipal office holders from all parts of the Dominion to this part. Prince Rupert, in common with other centres, will be visited by many of these men. It will be up to the city to make as good a showing as possible.

THE WAR TAX.

The attitude taken by the Toronto Mail and Empire and the Toronto Globe on the war budget when announced by Hon. W. T. White in the House of Commons, was as follows:

The Mail and Empire said:

"Every hearer or reader of the budget speech must pronounce it a very conscientious presentation of the state of the country's affairs. Mr. White has taken the people into his confidence. He has been at pains to lay the financial situation before them in the most unreserved and straightforward manner, and has not painted the prospect in rosy hues. Though his statement of the situation and his method of dealing with it is so frank, it leaves no opening for adverse criticism. No one will say that a hundred million dollars is too much to provide for the strengthening and maintaining of our military forces in the next fiscal year, should the war continue.

"To the increase in all but a few of the existing customs duties there will be no popular objection. The weight of these additions will not be felt by the great body of the consumers, and they will not detract materially from any dealer's profits.

"Similarly, the special taxes will fall lightly on those who have to pay them. We feel assured that there will be really loyal acceptance of the new taxes, and that everybody who is to contribute will do so with patriotic goodwill. It is in such a spirit the new taxes should be received. The country can do wonders if it acts in that spirit throughout the war. It can be depended on to answer this and every other call to duty in the present crisis of the Empire."

Under the heading, "Our New Taxation," the Globe says editorially: "The even sweep of seven and a half per cent. increase in the general and intermediate tariffs, and five per cent. in the preferential tariffs on all goods, free and dutiable, will no doubt give as acceptable results as if the long and intricate schedules were made over item by item. Such exceptions as supplies for agriculture and the fisheries will generally be approved.

"Conjectures as to the results are of little value. The protection to be paid local producers is increased. On many lines it would be prohibitive, and will thus defeat the purpose of increasing the revenue. The increased note issue is fully warranted, though there may be criticism as to the method and purpose. The Globe has often pointed out that our gold reserves would safely sustain a much larger volume of circulating currency. But it is not well to endorse an issue made to aid railway promotion until there is assurance that the interests of the Dominion have been safeguarded."

HATE OF GERMANY PERVADES EMPIRE

SIR A. CONAN DOYLE WARNS KAISER'S SUBJECTS OF SITUATION.

British Peoples Will Remember Conditions Long After the War.

Wherever we touch Germany in its present phase (writes Sir A. Conan Doyle), whether it be the Overlord himself with the megalomaniac messages, the princes with their looting of chateaux, the Foreign Office with its trick of stealing American passports for the use of German spies, the army with its absolute brutality, the navy with its tactics of mine-laying in neutral waters, the press with its grotesque connections, the artists with their pictures which are so base that the decent Germans have themselves at last rebelled against them, or the business men with their assertion that there is less economic disturbance in Germany than in Great Britain—wherever, I say, you touch them you come always upon what is odious and deceitful. A long century will have passed before Germany can wash her hands clean from murder, or purge from her spirit the shadow of this evil time.

If the words of one humble individual could reach across the seas there are two things upon which I should wish to speak earnestly to a German; the one, our own character the other, the future which he is deliberately preparing for the Fatherland which he loves.

The Sporting Spirit.

First as to ourselves: We have never been a nation who fought with hatred. It is our ideal to fight in a sporting spirit. It is not that we are less in earnest, but it is that the sporting spirit itself is a thing very largely evolved by us and is a natural expression of our character. We fight as hard as we can ourselves, and we like and admire those who fight hard against us so long as they keep within the rules of the game.

If you look back in history you will find that this absence of hatred has always been characteristic of us. When Soult came to London after the Napoleonic wars he was cheered through the city. After the Boer war, Botha, De Wet and Delarey had a magnificent reception. We did not know that one of them was de-

The sale of Product No. 99 is strictly confined to the high-class supply houses. Its cost of manufacture is therefore not affected by Dept. or "price cutting store" influence that so often drives manufacturers to the use of inferior chemicals and processes. Nor is the dealer allowed to reduce the retail price under penalty of having his supply terminated.

"99" destroys accumulations of lint, paper, cloths, hair, slime, grease, vegetables, soap, fruit and many others. It is harmless to finest plumbing.

DON'T ARGUE DON'T PUT OFF TEST IT

This preparation has been so generally successful in clearing drains that it is bought over and over again by those who have tried it, but inasmuch as no on can know the actual condition existing within a pipe, it is absolutely impossible for the manufacturer or the dealer to guarantee the result.

stined to prove a despicable and perjured traitor. They had been good fighters; the fight was done we had shaken hands—and we cheered them. All British prize fights ended with the shaking of hands. Though the men could no longer see each other they were led up and their hands were joined. When a combatant refuses to do this it has always been looked upon as unmanly; and we may say that bad blood has been left behind. So in war we have always wished to fight to a finish and then be friends, whether we have won or lost.

Germany After the War.

Now, this is just what we should wish to do with Germany, and it is what Germany is rapidly making impossible. She has, in our opinion fought a brave but a thoroughly foul fight. And how she uses every means to excite a bitter hatred which shall survive the war. The Briton is tolerant and easy-going in times of peace, too careless perhaps of the opinion of other nations. But at present he is in a most alert and receptive mood, noting and remembering very carefully every word that comes to him as to the temper of the German people and the prospects of the future. He is by no means disposed to pass over all these announcements of permanent hatred. On the contrary he is evidently beginning, for the first time since Napoleon's era, to show something approaching the hatred in return. He —and "he" stands for every Briton across the seas as well as the men of the Islands—makes a practical note of it all, and it will not be forgotten, but will certainly bear very definite fruits. The national thoughts do not come forth in wild poems of hate, but they none the less are gloomy and resentful with the deep and steady resentment of a nation which is slow to anger.

And now, my problematical German reader, I want you to realize what this is going to mean to you after the war. Whether you win or lose—and we have our own very certain opinion as to which it will be —Germany will still remain as a great independent State. She may be a little trimmed at the edges, and she may also find herself with some awkward liabilities; but none the less she will be a great kingdom or republic—as the Fates may will. She may turn her hand to trade and try to build up her fortunes once more—for even if we suppose her to be the victor she still cannot live for ever on plunder and must turn herself to honest trade, while if she loses her trade will be more precious to her than ever. But what will her position be then?

Boycott of Germany.

It will be appalling. No other word can express it. No legislation will be needed to keep German goods out of the whole British Empire, which means more than a quarter of the globe. Anything with that mark might as well have a visible cholera bacillus upon it for the chance it will have of being handled after this war. That is already certain and it is the direct outcome of the madness which has possessed Germany in her frantic outcry of hatred. What chance they have of business with France, Russia or Japan they know best themselves; but the British Empire, with that wide trade toleration which has long been her policy, and for which she has had so little gratitude, would have speedily forgiven Germany and opened her markets to her. Now it is not for many a long year that this can be so, not on account of the war, but on account of the bitterness which Germany has gone out of her way to import into the contest. It is idle to say that in that case we should lose our exports to Germany. Even if it were so it would not in the least affect the sentiments of the retail sellers and buyers in this country, whose demands regulate the wholesale trade But as a matter of fact, what Germany buys mostly from the British Empire is the coal, wood, etc., which are the raw materials of her industry with which she cannot possibly dispense.

What Might Have Been.

But the pity of it all! We might have had a straight, honest fight and at the end of it we might have conceded that the German people had been innocently misled by their military caste and their press, and the idea that their country was being attacked, and so were themselves guiltless in the matter. They, on their side, might at last have understood that Britain had been placed in such a position by her guarantees to Belgium that it was absolutely impossible she could stand out of the war. With these mutual concessions some sort of friendship could possibly have been restored, for it is to no one's interest, and least of all ours, that the keystone should be knocked right out of the European arch. But all this has been rendered impossible by these hysterical screamers of hate and by those methods of murder on land, sea and air with which the war has been conducted. Hate is a very catching emotion, and when it translates itself into action it soon glows on either side of the North Sea. With neither race, to use Carlyle's simile, does it blaze like the quick-flaming stubble, but with both it will smoulder like the slow red peat. Are there not even now strong, sane men in Germany who can warn these madmen of what they are sowing for the next generation and the one that comes after it? It is not that we ask them to abate the resistance of their country. It is understood that this is a fight to the end. That is what we desire. But let tem stand up and fight without reviling; let them give punishment without malice and receive it without wincing; let their press cease from lying, and their prophets from preaching hatred—then, lose or win, there may still be some chance for the future. But, alas! the mischief is already, I fear, too deep. When the seeds are sown it is hard to check the harvest. Let the impartial critic consider von Muller of the Emden, and then, having surveyed our press and that of Germany, let him say with whom lies the blame.

EFFECT ON EGYPT OF BRITISH RULE

splendor, notable troops of all races of the Empire taking part. Abdin Square is a large open space bounded on all of one side by the long white palace, which was under military guard.

The Ceylon Planters' Rifle Corps noticeable in their light khaki uniforms with black shoulder straps, stood in a rigid line across the square, straight and even as a newcut hedge. A darker line of Australians met them and curved round the street out of sight, amid the pressing throng of natives attired in all conceivable tints.

Before the palace a guard of the Egyptian Army and the Lancashire Fusiliers was drawn up. All the houses, balconies, and the roof tops overlooking it were thronged with spectators, and women veiled with sombre yashmaks were to be seen peering here and there.

Striking Scene.

At half-past nine the thunder of a salute betokened the arrival of the Sultain. First came his bodyguard in their pale blue and white uniforms, superbly mounted, the first ranks on chestnuts, then greys, and then bays.

Then, amid a loud noise of the clapping of hands, the cheers of the populace, and an ovation from the British in the stand, the Sultan appeared, riding in an open landau. Barefooted runners with wands ran before the carriage, the coachmen wearing a livery trimmed with gold lace.

Though small in stature the Sultan presented a most royal appearance, the fine traits of his features being noticeable as he kept his hand continuously at the salute. The troops presented arms as he entered the palace with the Premier. Then the Egyptian authorities dipped the flag and cried, "Long live the Sultan Hussein I.!" The flag was dipped and the cry was raised three times at a minute's interval.

Then came Mr. Milne Cheetham, the Acting British Agent, and other members of the Agency, dressed in frock coats, and amid the cheers of the onlookers they entered the palace, where the Sultan formally received them in the Throne Room. The Sultan afterwards held a levee, which was attended by the notables from all parts of the country, together with the religious and military authorities.
