THE PROSPECTOR

VOL. 2, NO. ~~50~~ 49 LILLOOET, B. C., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1913. $2 PER YEAR

THE SEATON LAKE HATCHERY.

At this season of the year a visit to the hatchery is both interesting and instructive. Situated just below the mouth of Seaton lake it presents a pretty picture and commands every facility, both natural and artificial, for the propagation of the famed sockeye salmon. Everything about the buildings and grounds is kept in perfect order, presenting a scene not always witnessed around a fish hatchery. After spying around and endeavoring to appear wise on the hatchery business we found that it would be necessary to ask some questions, and accordingly approached an old Indian woman who was squatted on the beach industriously splitting salmon up the back and stringing them on poles just visible in a haze of smoke. Asked if she was getting lots of salmon this year, the old woman grunted out: "Halo! Halo salmon!!" She also said something about our being a "cultus whiteman," and made other statements that seemed of a hostile nature. After a few more remarks which proved anything but of a satisfactory nature, we decided to hunt up the boss of the institution and see if we could get any pointers from him. This proved to be Leroy Ledgerwood, who, in a very few words explained the reason for the much-discussed salmon shortage on the spawning beds of interior British Columbia. It seems that in the canyon of the Fraser, at Hell's Gate, a rock slide had dumped hundreds of tons of debris into the river, causing a serious obstruction, so much so that fish could not pass that point. The blockade caused a tremendous current, and for miles the river was almost blocked with fish unable to ascend. Recently the obstruction has been removed, thus giving the fish a chance to make their destination. Mr. Ledgerwood states that a great many of the salmon coming on the first rush were in bad shape, a large percentage being unsuitable for hatchery purposes, but that a later run has proved more satisfactory, and that he will at least be able to secure about one half of what might be expected had the river been open.

From another source we learn that J. P. Babcock and D. N. McIntyre, fishery commissioners, were the men making the discovery of the salmon blockade. Observing the enormous run of sockeyes on the Fraser this year and the exceedingly small proportion reaching the various spawning beds, notably Chilco, Quesnel, Shuswap, Seaton, Anderson and Lillooet, they found that the trouble was in the canyon of the Fraser between North Bend and Yale. Every eddy contained hundreds of the fish behaving in a manner unusual to them. Considerable numbers, however, passed through Hell's Gate, which is the narrowest chasm in the Fraser, and after proceeding through comparatively quiet water were in evidence in vast numbers in the last gorge at the head of the canyon. Above this point no fish were seen. After two days' heavy blasting with powder furnished by the C.P.R., besides skilled help, a temporary passage way around the blockade was effected.

LOCAL AFFAIRS

BORN.—At Lillooet, B. C., on 15th inst., to the wife of Daniel Hurley, a daughter.

G. C. Keen, of the Anderson lake passenger boat, spent a few days in town.

Mark Eagleson is at Clinton this week.

P. J. Salvus, contractor on the C. P. R. as well as the P. G. E., paid us a short visit this week.

Our Scotch constable has been on duty at Clinton this week.

Lizzie Abel (L9) is once more on a six months' vacation to Kamloops.

Some excellent trout are now being caught in Seaton and Cayoosh creeks.

A. G. Rebagliati, the Lytton merchant, was in town this week.

Joe Russell, deputy game warden, left for the Bridge river district a few days ago.

Herb Taylor and H. Schwartz are out on a big game hunting trip.

Geo. Bell, the old-time manager of the Victoria Hotel and at present mayor of Tyauchton, arrived in an auto last evening.

Mr. A. F. Noel arrived home yesterday, after a business trip to Vancouver.

Dan McLeod's road gang, now camped this side of the Bridge river mouth, will be through with their work in about a week.

W. J. Abercrombie is again at the old stand, having arrived from Victoria, where he had been visiting relatives.

The Lytton-Lillooet 'phone line being completed, the construction gang is back in Lillooet, where S. A. Macfarlane is paying off.

Wood is getting scarcer and going up in price. You must pay $10.50 per cord for 16-inch blocks, and feel thankful to get it.

Large numbers of railroad laborers are daily arriving in Lillooet and striking out for the various construction camps.

Quite a number of Lytton's young ladies favored Lillooet with their presence during the early part of this week.

Dan Hamilton, from the South Fork, has been in town for several days attending to some mining business.

Gassie Thompson, in town on Monday, informed us that his little town at the head of Anderson lake will soon rival Lillooet.

Quite a few of the Coronation old-timers are in town—Charlie Copp, Jack Chism, and F. Olsen being a few of them.

G. Kent, civil engineer, arrived in town Tuesday afternoon. He has some work to perform in the vicinity of Cayoosh creek falls.

Just now the hatchery presents a lively scene, the staff doing their best to retrieve part of the great loss sustained through the recent blockade at Hell's Gate.

It is said by those who are in a position to know, that the Lytton-Lillooet telephone line is the most distinct-sounding of all branches in the upper country.

The Lillooet fire rangers are constructing about ten miles of trail on the shores of Blackwater lake, on which will be kept a boat to aid them in their fire-fighting expeditions.

J. M. Williams, of the McGillivray Mountain Mine, has returned from Chilliwack, where he interviewed his directors. Mr. Crossland, the mining expert, reports very favorably on the property.

Mr. Croughan, superintendent for Burns, Jordan & Welch on Seaton lake, passed through Lillooet yesterday to take charge of railroad construction near Clinton, the Seaton lake work being almost finished.

C. P. Dam, supt. of the placer mining camp on the South Fork of Bridge river, arrived in Lillooet during the early part of this week and proceeded on to the coast, where he has been called on important mining business.

F. M. Wells, M. E., returned on Monday from a trip to the North Fork, where he paid a professional trip to the mineral claims owned by Dr. Christie, of this town. His report on the property is of a very favorable nature. Mr. Wells is connected with the Surf Inlet Mining Co., of Princess Royal Island, where he holds extensive mining interests.

We will soon have the dark evenings with us, and as practically the whole of our population has business with the postoffice, would it not be a good idea to persuade some authority, dignitary, or even a policeman, to start a small fund for the maintenance of some kind of a light at the entrance to that institution. The postmaster does the best he can under the circumstances, but he cannot be expected to illuminate the exterior of his headquarters out of his private funds.

A section of the province which by its formation was suggested by Dr. Geo. M. Dawson, of the geological survey, as probably mineralized, but which has never been more than superficially prospected, is the copper belt running almost parallel to the Fraser river between Lytton and Lillooet. This belt is bounded by granite and a wide belt of magnetic iron ore, and the geological aspect strongly suggests the presence of mineral. The first copper ore was found there about 35 years ago by Joe Watkinson, and who still holds some valuable claims in that vicinity.

Wo Hing & Co. have started on the foundation of what will be, when finished, the tallest building in Lillooet—three storeys and a concrete basement. Asked what line of business he would conduct on the new premises, Mr. Hing studied the heavens for a moment, jingled some gold coins in his pocket and whispered that he did not know, at present, but might have an idea by the time the building is finished. He would then inform us. Wo Hing intends to spend considerable money in the town of Lillooet.

THE ROUTE OF THE P. G. E.

A correspondent to the Vancouver Sun says that great interest is being aroused throughout the Cariboo district by the change of route of the P. G. E. railway from the Fraser valley to a route somewhat approximating the old Cariboo wagon road. It will be remembered that the government promises of 1911 were that the P. G. P. was to follow the Fraser valley to Fort George, and all the recent government maps indicate it on the west side of the river. Now, however, the route is to be changed to cross the river at Lillooet and come out near Clinton, many miles from the Fraser. It will now traverse the country through which the wagon road is built from four to twenty miles east of the Fraser.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY.

OCTOBER 17, 1913.

Just 20 years ago last Sunday The Ledge was born in Nakusp. At that time Nakusp was a hot railway town and had four policemen. Now it is an agricultural village, and for years this paper has had no subscribers there. It was Dan McGillivray and Frank Fletcher who induced the writer to start a paper in that camp. They have gone to push clouds with the angels; also Ric Fraser who set the first type for this famous journal. The editor and financier is still holding the pen, and will probably do so for a few more moons. —Greenwood Ledge.

Correct. Ric Fraser was the founder of the Prospector about fifteen years ago, and induced the present incumbent to stick some type. At that time we had a few dollars and thought we were on the high road to prosperity; but times have changed, so has our cash balance. Fraser was a good boy, well-liked, and, as a consequence, nobody paid him for his paper. Now, after many years, we are again in the old shop with less capital than ever, and some hard jokers to deal with. The other day a man rushed into our little shop and wanted to know why in thunder he did not get his paper regularly, and threatening to withdraw his patronage. In looking over the account book we find that this same gent has not paid one cent towards the Prospector fund during the past four years. Yet we had to accept his abuse and even tried to blame the postmaster in order to quieten him down. But this old subterfuge did not have the desired effect. Another man—and he was not even a bogus subscriber—wanted us to explain why the P. G. E. railway track has been shunted to the opposite side of the river, and also wanted to to know why the Prospector hadn't stopped that kind of work. We tried to explain that, so long as the smoke of the locomotive is within smelling distance of the town, real estate values would be at the same notch as would result even if the railroad people had made a depot in the centre of Lillooet, and we got some more abuse. Such is the life of a country newspaper man. Col. Lowery thinks he will be able to hold out for a few more months. We hope so, and can only add that when St. Peter thinks fit to refuse him admission through the same gates that the Ledge has helped to popularize, the men of Kootenay will miss an able and much-abused man.

The Exchequer Court will hear the important case arising out of the lease of Deadman's Island, at Vancouver, to Theodore Ludgate, on November 10. The original date fixed for the hearing of this matter was September 8, but an adjournment was agreed upon by the parties concerned. Much interest centres in the case here as the witnesses will include Sir Frederick Borden, former minister of militia, and Hon. W. S. Fielding, ex-minister of finance. A question has arisen as to whether or not the final lease extending the period of the original lease was actually signed and the ex-ministers may be asked to tell what transpired in cabinet council at the time. The present action is being taken by the department of justice on behalf of the city of Vancouver, the object being to break the lease and restore the land to the city.

Rapid progress is being made with the work of transforming the locomotives on the C. P. R. subdivision between Vancouver and North Bend into oil burners. Mr. Cottrell, district superintendent, stated recently, that 20 of the engines, 6 of which are used in the local yards, have already been converted. There are about 40 locomotives on the division and thus half of the equipment has been adapted for the new order of things.

Demands for a shorter working day without a reduction in wages have been made by trainmen of the western division of the C. P. R., according to an announcement made at Winnipeg. The men asked that the working day be shortened one hour. Representatives of the railroad and of the men are holding conferences.

WESTERN TOWNS NOT BAD.

The recent reports, published broadcast, of a wide-open Fort George, B. C., and the attempt to establish a recognised red-light district are being severely criticized by many interested in the colonization of the northern interior. George J. Hammond, one of the best posted men on the development of that section of the province, said recently:

"From the sensational reports which have been published, especially in the eastern papers, the impression is given that Fort George and the other new towns of Central British Columbia are wide open and wild and wooly. As a matter of fact, the citizens of the central interior are just as law-abiding as those of any other section of the province. Of course, in a new country of big distances that is just being opened to civilization, where there are thousands of men employed in construction work, the same conditions can not be expected as in the older settled districts.

According to our fall season's patterns we find that the ladies are taking to suspenders. It will take them a long time to acquire men's resourcefulness in improvising nails, safety pins, tooth picks and bits of string as a substitute when a loose button loses its source of responsibility.

Rapid work is being done on the track laying of the Canadian Northern railway west of Kamloops, and there now remains only 119 miles of track to be laid between that city and the coast. A new bridge of steel 760 feet long has been built over Stoyama creek on the south bank of the Fraser, near North Bend.

Hunter Jack's Gold Farm Discovered.

One of the most successful placer miners in this district, up to the time of his death, was an Indian named Tashpola, better known as "Hunter Jack." Jack used to mine some part of the year near the South Fork of the Bridge river, but where he found his big nuggets no one ever knew, and Jack never told anyone. This knowledge he kept strictly to himself, but the quantity of gold he sold here, besides the fancy price obtained by the splendid nuggets he exhibited, proved conclusively that, somewhere, Jack had found his Bonanza. Many people speculated as to where the locality was, and many sought the Eldorado, but no one found it.

Jack was a mystery to the white man and a terror to the Indians. He was supposed to belong to the Seaton lake reserve, but he never lived there; he had a cabin near the South Fork of Bridge river, but where his wanderings from there took him no one ever knew.

Jack was fond of his whisky, and bought it wholesale like a man. He has been known to have two dozen bottles in his possession on returning to the hills. He was not mean with it, and was a generous dispenser to any thirsty white man who met him on the trail.

However, like others, too much of a good thing was the end of him. Holland's gin conveyed him to the spirits, about four or five years ago, and the secret of his wealth was supposed to have died with him.

And now comes the story. The source of Jack's wealth has long been a theme amongst the Indians and a puzzle to them, and for the last two or three years an Indian well-known as Mission Peter has been prospecting in some of Jack's old haunts. Peter, if we make no mistake, was some relation of Jack's, and it is possible that, in his cups, Jack may have let some hint drop as to his private mining ground. Anyhow, Peter discovered a very promising piece of country near the Whitewater river, and, from the signs still remaining, came to the conclusion that it must be the old placer ground of Jack's. Not being satisfied with his own tumtum he consulted a white man, the white man being Charles L. Copp (there is no whiter man), late superintendent of the Coronation Mines. Mr. Copp thought there might be something in it, and about three weeks ago he and Peter started with a small pack train.

Mr. Copp has now returned, and he is satisfied that they have found one of the richest placer fields in British Columbia. The old sluice-boxes, about 8 feet long—bought by Jack from the Chilcoten Indians—were found old and decayed, and other unmistakable signs went to prove that this was Hunter Jack's Eldorado. Mr. Copp thoroughly prospected the ground, with great success; the gold is coarse, and from the appearance of the surrounding country there are every indications that good quartz ledges may be discovered there.

A medical journal has an article on how to lie when asleep. How to tell the truth when awake would be more important.

Lillooet has every appearance of a railroad town these days, and considering the cosmopolitan nature of its population, quite orderly.
