LIBRARY, LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY JUN 13 1913 VICTORIA, B.C.

VOL. 2, NO. 31 LILLOOET, B. C., FRIDAY, JUNE 13, 1913. $2 PER YEAR

Dominion Day Celebration.

From present indications, the citizens of Lillooet will, this year, excel their former endeavors in the celebration of Dominion Day. As will be seen by the programme on the sixth page of this paper, there is a large and varied list of prizes, covering a three day festival. That there will be a very large attendance there is little question—probably the largest ever attending a similar celebration in Lillooet. In the horse races we are going to have competition with Lytton, Ashcroft, Clinton, and far-off Chilcoten, while in the athletic sports there is now enough young element in the district to put up a first-class exhibition. Perfect order will be maintained, the various committees having determined that nothing of a rough nature will be allowed to creep in and mar the name of old Lillooet.

An Orderly Community.

Lillooet is, indeed, an orderly town, considering the cosmopolitan nature of its population. Crime of a serious nature is seldom heard of, and outside of an unfortunate inebriate or an occasional infraction of the Indian Act, the magistrate has a snap. This is as it should be, and due credit should be given where it belongs—to the police department. A too-officious constable can sometimes stir up more strife in his own misdirected view of affairs than would be found in a town of an acknowledged bad character, thus causing the antagonism of the citizens; but when he tries to properly administer law from a common sense view, he commands the respect of the community, and will always find a helping hand when occasion arises. Lillooet is a town where a man can bring his family to, today, and live a life of peace.

Police Court Proceedings.

Ah Dan, an up-to-date representative of the Flowery Kingdom, appeared before Indian Agent Graham, on Wednesday, charged with supplying intoxicants to Indians. Evidence in the form of seven bottles of booze and the testimony of a sorry-looking Indian lady helped to separate Ah Dan from fifty-five good dollars, and, as a further admonition, he was also taxed the costs of the case.

Sarah Diablo, an aborigine belonging to the Fountain family, blushingly admitted that the policeman was correct when he charged her with being drunk. She claimed that the aforesaid Ah Dan was the cause of all of her present woes. She was given a chance to pay $10 to the government.

News Away From Home.

No question about it, one has to go away from home to get the news, even if it is old news, and the following item, referring no doubt to the robbery at the famous Golden Cache mine on Cayoosh creek, some fifteen years ago, is reproduced in an eastern newspaper. And a most extraordinary item it is:

"The Golden Cache, operating on Lillooet creek, in Klondike, missed a great deal of amalgam from their sluice boxes. They have one of the richest gold placers in the country, and it was thought strange that their cleanings were so slim. They determined to keep watch for the thief. One night when the moon rode high, one of the miners saw a calf near the boxes, often reaching over the brim, drinking the muddy water. The thefts of the amalgam continued, when one night as the calf again appeared, the miner in sheer wanton fired a charge of buckshot at it. With shrill cry of agony the supposed animal rose upon its hind legs, and, staggering a few paces, fell. The miner ran to where the calf was lying and saw a human leg, with the feet wrapped in socks, protruding from the animal's body. To his surprise he discovered that the thief was a young woman.

For over a year, disguised as a young man, she had been residing at a neighboring camp. The company sent thirty miles for a surgeon, but before the latter arrived the girl almost bled to death."

There certainly was a robbery at the Golden Cache mine about the time referred to in the above item, but of a far different nature than recorded. The stolen gold was in the form of amalgam taken from the plates of the stamp mill—about $2000—and was placed in the safe by Colonel Rives, the superintendent. The following morning it was discovered that the safe had been tapped and all of the amalgam taken. The padlocks were both broken off, and after removing the swag one of the locks was put back in position. A man named Mason, who had been employed around the mill, was arrested by the Lillooet constable and stood trial, but the evidence against him was vague, and he was dismissed.

This clean-up of the Golden Cache was being anxiously watched for all over the province, and it was hoped that it would be satisfactory and give the outside world more confidence, as there was a large sum invested in the property. But the mine did not come up to expectations, and the robbery of the clean-up is as much a mystery today as it ever was.

W. W. Jones, the old reliable rancher in the Bridge river district, arrived in town Wednesday. From appearances, Mr. Jones has secured a corner lot on Easy street.

The Words of a Philosopher.

After much worry and anxiety, and language almost leading him off the narrow path of rectitude, Dr. Clarke has his new building about completed. Standing on the corner of China alley and Main street, he was in a philosophical train of thought the other night. In a quiet, well-regulated voice, he was commenting on the enormous price of lumber, the cautious manner in which you have to speak to carpenters to get them at work, and the independent and aristocratic manner they go about the job when they once get started. The doctor was of the opinion that the drug business, from a business point of view, was a failure in Lillooet. With such a fine climate, everybody of a cheery and robust appearance—not even the prospect of a man getting sick—he could not, no matter how he studied, see how he was going to get his money back. He concluded that, to be a financial success in Lillooet, a man must learn the carpenter trade.

A Hint to the Prospector.

Prospectors and others always need to remember that, in opening up a new camp, absolute honesty in regard to values is essential. A well-defined lead may not have values at the surface and yet be a good property, while all possible effort at deception will not make a mine out of a barren lead; and such effort being certain to detection, results in a serious set-back to a district which may have real merit. A case is in mind where a clumsy effort to deceive resulted in a withdrawal of all proffers or notice from intending investors, when a straight statement of fact and honest showing would have secured what prospectors want—a good price for an undeveloped claim. It is not well to bank too much on the possible ignorance of the man sent to examine the property, but vastly safer and fairer to give him credit for a little knowledge; and purely as a matter of business policy, more satisfactory all round not to attempt any cheap little tricks that are sure to be found out and are sure to hurt the whole district. One such transaction often gives a deserving locality a set-back that will take years of genuine merit and proved value to overcome.

Some rich-looking ore has just reached Lillooet from the Bridge river section, taken from properties recently located. One of the discoveries is in the vicinity of the old Tommy Green cabin. It is a silver proposition, and shows indications of a big mine.

Our Baseball Affairs.

The Lillooet baseball team has at last settled down to earnest practice. In the election of Baker as manager and Barber as captain, the boys have secured energetic and capable men. Their defeat last Sunday has had a tendency to put more life into the game, and from now on we may expect to see "some ball." The first practice under the new management took place on Wednesday evening, and they seemed serious in their work. The whole team is in perfect harmony, and one common victim seems to lay in the direction of Lytton—when next they meet.

AROUND THE TOWN

George Prosser is once more back in old Lillooet.

Ex-Mayor Findlay, of Vancouver, was in town this week.

A. H. Morton is here again for a couple of months' fishing in this district.

The Lytton baseball team paid us a visit on Sunday and defeated the home lads.

Mrs. Dr. Christie, with her baby and father, have returned to Lillooet after a pleasant holiday in the south.

At a meeting of the Baseball Club this week, W. R. Baker was appointed manager, and Fred Barber captain.

Herbert Taylor started out to his claims on Gun creek, Monday. He expects to be away for a couple of months.

C. P. Dam has commenced work on his placer claim in the vicinity of Sucker creek, and expects to have about ten men employed in the course of a few days.

Mr. Forbes, secretary of the Coronation Mine, with headquarters at Victoria, paid a visit to the mines last week. He says work at the mine is to be resumed on an extended scale.

At a meeting of the Dominion Day Celebration Committee, held in the Excelsior Hotel on Tuesday night, the sports programme was drawn up and final details made for festivities on the First. The programme will cover three days' celebration.

Through the kindness of Mr. W. W. Jones, of Bridge river, we had a glimpse of a letter written by W. E. Lawson, a gentleman who was, last year, in charge of the geological survey of this district, and who is about to be transferred to the Yukon. Mr. Lawson evidently thinks a great deal of this district, and very much regrets that the geological department has seen fit to shift him to another zone. From the tone of the letter he is not only impressed with the resources of Lillooet, but has a kindly feeling for the inhabitants thereof, particularly in the Bridge river section.

To Advertise Our Minerals.

The mining industry of B. C. is about to receive a measure of recognition and more substantial aid, especially in the matter of advertising our mineral resources to the world. We understand the minister of mines has instructed the provincial mineralogist to have about a dozen complete sets of all the economic minerals now being mined in this province, collected, arranged and put on exhibition at places where they are certain to attract the attention of mining men, capitalists and mining corporations. To properly cover the whole province is no small task, but if suitable men are selected as collectors, the minerals may be ready for shipment to exhibition points in Europe or elsewhere by the ensuing fall. Quite a number of collections of minerals for exhibition at fruit fairs and other exhibitions have been made in this and other parts of the province, but so far as we know no systematic collections to represent the whole province have yet been made. Many really splendid specimens of ores from this and other camps in Kootenay, sent to Nelson, Spokane and elsewhere, have been wasted, destroyed or appropriated by private individuals, but it is likely that the sets now to be collected will prove of advertising value for many years as they are intended principally for permanent exhibition.

It is reasonable to expect that all citizens and others interested in mining and the general welfare of the province, will aid in every way possible to make the collections complete.—Slocan Record.

The Sources of Tin.

This metal, although it is one of the most important and useful of the metals, is only produced in a few widely-separated locations. These are the Straight Settlement from which the largest part of our supply is derived, Australia, Cornwall and Bohemia. Cornwall held for many years control of the market, but has now fallen to a subordinate place owing to the continually increasing depth of the mines and the fact that they had been worked for a long period, not having been laid out for great outputs or intended to be sunk to a great depth, which has necessitated the remodelling or abandonment of the deeper ones. It is curious to notice in a review of the different districts producing tin how the same mineralogical conditions seem to characterise its usual occurrence throughout the world, when it is found in solid rock. Granite is the rock in which its veins occur, and is usually more or less decomposed. It also carries the mineral known as schorl, which is a variety of tourmaline and has long narrow black crystals. Mica is usually largely present in the granite, and there is but little felspar. In Cornwall veins which carry copper in the slate produce tin when they reach the underlying granite. The tin produced in the Strait Settlements is almost entirely from alluvial deposits, as is also much of that from Australia. The oxide of tin (cassiterite), from which the metal is derived, is not a striking mineral such as a prospector would notice if he was not acquainted with it, and is therefore passed over. It is usually grey, but sometimes yellow, brown or black, and has a resinous appearance. It contains 78 per cent. tin. Under the blowpipe, with carbonate of soda, it fuses to a button of metallic tin. It cannot be fused alone. It exists in several districts in the United States although it is not profitably mined.

The Idle Rich.

Generally speaking, an Indian on horseback is a goodly figure; an Indian family making a trip in a cart drawn by Indian ponies is picturesque. The same family proceeding down Granville street in a motor car is simply absurd. "The movies" should have captured this Siwash family the other morning as they rolled through town with a fine air of luxury. It would be hard to say how many made up the party—they seemed to overflow the car—and as it was only a family affair and nothing formal or stiff about it, half of them sat on the other half's knees. The dames were bareheaded and wore the conventional dress of the reserve. They stopped for refreshment here and there, alighting from the car with great composure. How many ice-cream cones they purchased the writer may not hazard, but reckless extravagance was no name for the way they carried on. The only occupant of the car who looked unhappy was the chauffeur. He did not seem to enter into the affair with much zest. A number of people looked after the car enviously and gave the opinion that the cheerful aborigines were enjoying the fruits of the Kitsilano sale (be that as it may), or squandering the silver trail of the tourist with a passion for baskets or the mats the Capilano women weave so well.—Province.

The Mother Lode Idea.

With an idea that the physiological principles run through the formation of ores, many miners believe in what is termed the "mother lode." It has grown to be a popular superstition in almost every mining district that somewhere in the locality a mother lode can be found compared with which the kid lodes amount to nothing. As a matter of fact, there is no such thing as a mother lode, unless at some great depth in the bowels of the earth a number of veins carrying similar classes of ore run together in a body.

Rich Placer Strike.

A rich placer strike is reported on the Alaska side of the Shushana river, tributary to the headwaters of the Tanana, fifteen miles across the divide from Copper Camp, at the head of the White river. Two men are said to have shoveled in $900 in a few days. Billy James and his partner, Nelson, are reported to have made the strike.

James is now there. Nelson visited Dawson a few days ago and got away for a return trip. A large party has left Dawson on the steamer Vidette for the mouth of the White river to pole up the river or take the trail. The poling trip lasts three weeks and the trail half the time. Some are talking of crossing the country through the hills direct from Dawson. The owners say the Shushane is a vast gravel belt extending from the Kantishna almost to White Horse.

STOLEN FROM THIEVES

"Everything she had went at auction."

"Public sale?"

"No, bridge."

• •

A belief that the race is not always to the swift no doubt accounts for our widespread confidence in tips.

• •

"Chapleigh appears to be such a contented body."

"Yes; but in so many instances ignorance is bliss, you know."

• •

"He expects to be rich some day."

"What's he done?"

"He's invented a waterproof bread for lettuce sandwiches."

• •

Wife (bitterly)—How can you talk that way? You know that I never pester you for money."

Hub—"No; but the people you buy things from do."

• •

"I don't believe he is a real duke."

"How about his old family jewels?"

"Did he show you any old family jewels?"

"No; but he showed me the pawn tickets for some."

• •

He is an old-fashioned father, which explains why he said to the young man: "Are you sure you are able to give my daughter the comforts and luxuries to which she is accustomed at her home?"

To which the young man promptly replied: "As your daughter's salary has paid the rent and bought most of the food and clothes for your family, I think we can worry along."

New Venue to Westminster for Trial of Paul and Spintlum.

In view of the fact that the jury at Vernon were unable to agree upon a verdict in the trial of Moses Paul and Paul Spintlum, charged with the murder of constable Alex. Kindness, it has been found necessary again to change the venue of the trial.

Kamloops was contemplated as a possible court with a special assize sitting for the hearing, and the coast towns were also reviewed in this connection. Finally it has been decided to traverse the case to New Westminster. The assizes there will commence on the 16th inst., but as the calendar is heavy it is impossible that this case will be considered until nearly the end of the month.

Fresh subpœnas will be issued in due course.

W. H. Kendrick Convicted of False Pretences Charge at Clinton.

W. H. Kendrick was found guilty at the Clinton assizes of receiving money under false pretences.

Kendrick arrived at Lytton about July of last year, representing himself to be Thomas Rennie, the lacrosse player of New Westminster, and borrowed ten dollars from a Lytton resident which amount was not returned.

The victim gave Kendrick a personal cheque which the accused endorsed with the name of Thomas Rennie.

Young Presbyterian Pastor Declares Small Towns of B. C. to be Gate of Hell.

Declaring that he had walked 350 miles from the very gate of hell, a weary trek on foot, then had made a lengthy train trip of 4000 miles to tell them the amazing story of the grip that sin had on his district at Fort George, Rev. C. M. Wright, boyish-looking, flushed, but eloquent, sincere and convincing, even to the veterans of the Presbyterian General Assembly, caused a sensation at a meeting which packed Massey Hall a few days ago.

An eloquent appeal to the young men of the Presbyterian Church of Canada to take up the burden of carrying the Gospel to the remote districts of the Dominion, was the burden of Mr. Wright's address.

"I am sure if the awful conditions I know of are revealed to young Presbyterians, sturdy sons of the church will respond nobly,' he said.

Though Mr. Wright was the youngest speaker of the day, and almost boyish in appearance, his address caused a deep impression. He described his work as the most discouraging anyone could be asked to undertake.

In the far northwest foodstuffs were at a premium, lumber and building materials were held at an almost prohibitive figure, and a condition of atheism practically existed. He had encountered people who declared the Bible a farce and the church an unorganized and tottering institution, and many believed them. Men of all nationalities were there with one common idea of gain.

In the smaller towns all manner of vice was rampant. Hotels, with bars where four to six bartenders were working, were the most flourishing places in the community, with the exception of the disorderly houses. In his own town, he said, the church was gaining strength and he was encouraged.

SUSPECTED OF MURDER.

Four Men Held in Vancouver May Face Serious Charges.

That among the four men under arrest in Vancouver on a charge of murdering police constable James Archibald, there is also the probable murderer of Charles Atchison, who was shot in a hold-up at Kamloops last November, is one of the theories that the Vancouver police is now working on, it is reported.

This theory has been given weight by the discovery among the possessions seized by the police of a watch which was stolen in a burglary last autumn at Port Moody. A second watch which was stolen at Port Moody has also been found in a pawnshop in the city. The description of the three suspects at Port Moody tallied in many respects with the descriptions of the three men who took part in the hold up in the C. P. R. yards at Kamloops and in the murder of Atchison, and led the police to believe that their identity was alike.

According to the descriptions circulated by the Kamloops police in which they offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the murderers, the three men were described as being: No. 1, a man about six feet tall, slender and dark, aged about 25; No. 2, aged about 30, thick-set, and speaks with a gruff voice, and is about five feet seven inches tall; No. 3, aged between 25 and 30, short and chunky of build, about five feet seven inches in height.

The descriptions were not very detailed as the affair took place in the dark and gave little time for close observation. The three railway men, Charles Atchison, Carl Brophey and Fred Dayton, were surprised by the three thugs, who drew revolvers and ordered the men to hold up their hands. Atchison failed to obey the order and started to show fight, when he was immediately shot dead. The fatal bullet, like that which killed police constable Archibald, was fired from a 38-calibre revolver. After this cold blooded murder, one of the robbers, the one described as No. 3, covered Brophey and Dayton with a revolver while his companions went through the pockets of their dead victim. They took away a gold watch in his possession which has not yet been traced.

In the Blackwater District.

In the long, long ago, years before the white man had entered into this part of the country, when the native siwash was at war with the Chilcoten Indians, and each man walked with his life in his hands as it were, there was one place which was at one time a great resort for the Indian. This was the Blackwater district. Using the oxidized and decomposed matter and making a paint of it, the Indians would get themselves up in a most hideous and unearthly manner. In later years this painting ground was shown to the white man, and now what was once the meeting place of an army of wild Indians, previous to them going to war with the neighboring tribes, is now one of the most promising and satisfactory parts of our rich mineral district of Lillooet. In a beautiful basin, with Blackwater lake to the north and surrounded by grand and monstrous mountains, with their glittering snow-capped summits, lies the Blackwater mining camp, which, with the present construction of the P. G. E. railway, will in a very short time be one of the most promising mining camps in the province.

The ore is base and in large quantities, some of it going 15 per cent. copper apart from the carrying of gold and silver. On one of the claims a man can walk along for over one thousand feet and trace the vein, which is on an average over 25 feet in width. Other leads are in sight, both good and well-defined.

To the north of Blackwater lake is the divide and summit between McGillivray creek and Blackwater, up both sides of which are staked numerous good-looking claims, among which are the Silver King, Queen, Prince, and Princess. This ledge can be seen at a distance running along the mountain like a big white snake. The average width of the vein is about eight feet with a foot wall of diorite and a hanging wall of porphyry. Assays go about $40 to the ton, very high in silver and considerable in copper.

To the west of the Blackwater lake is a claim which is a fine copper proposition and assaying very high. The resemblance between the Rossland and Blackwater ore is quite noticeable. As already proved, these ledges improve by depth, and now with the railroad in close proximity, there is not the least doubt that in a very short time we shall see the erection of a smelter in the Blackwater district.

Traffic on the Lytton road is heavy just now. Between freight teams, automobiles, stages and foot passengers the old Half-way house presents a lively scene.

These are the days when the prospector may be seen getting a little grub together and striking out for the hills.

Most all of the jurors at the Clinton assizes have returned to their Lillooet homes.

PROGRESS OF P. G. E.

Two Thousand Men Between Lillooet and Ft. George.

OTHER SURVEY PARTIES IN FIELD.

Line on Howe Sound to be Located Some Time This Week.

Surveyors at work on the location of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway down Howe Sound will be sent, when they have completed the survey at Horseshoe Bay, to Soda Creek and Quesnel, important points between Lillooet and Fort George, on the main line. The railway will be rushed to completion in time for work on the grade this summer.

More than two thousand men are at work on the construction of the line between Lillooet and Newport at the present time. These gangs are strung out along the grade between Newport and Lillooet in several camps. Some work is being done on the section between Fort George and Lillooet, but the work must necessarily be delayed there until the survey is finished through Quesnel and Soda Creek. Three parties of surveyors are already working on the northern section of the line, and two more, with the surveyors from Horseshoe Bay, will be sent north.

The survey around Horseshoe Bay is expected to be completed at about the end of the week. When that is done the railway will be ready for the gangs, who will construct the grade through West and North Vancouver if the property-owners there will give their approval.
