Easter-tide.

The recent controversy between Dr. Carman and Dr. Jackson has revived the question of literal, and parabolic interpretation. Theology has advanced its outposts far since the German critics succeeded in imposing their views upon students of the Bible. Each successive combat between the forces of the old and the new school strengthens the cause of what is not very happily styled the Higher criticism. From the orthodox standpoint of fifty years ago, or even less, which accepted verbal inspiration as a dogma, and a literal interpretation of the Bible from the first chapter of Genesis to the last of Revelations, it is a far call to the scientific attitude of today. Dr. Jackson has been sustained, not merely by public opinion, which perhaps should count for little where such momentous issues are at stake, but by the weight of theological opinion in regarding the first eleven chapters of Genesis as allegorical. It is not necessary to follow the excursions of twentieth century theologians throughout the books of the Old Testament. By a series of scientific tests they have succeeded in classifying the Hebrew scriptures, and no Bible student need be in any doubt as to which books are historical, which allegorical, or which prophetical. It was natural that whilst the Higher criticism was vigorously attacking the Old Testament scriptures, and stripping away the trappings which zealous hands had wound around them orthodox Christianity should fall back upon the absolute inerrancy of the New Testament. Here was the resting place for harassed, and perplexed souls; it might be that they must, in obedience to the enlightenment of the age, readjust their position with respect to the older book, but the New Testament was so infused with the personality of the Messiah that the faith of Christianity refused to be shaken either in its historic accuracy, or its teaching. Later the Higher criticism diverted its attack to the last stronghold of Christianity, and for twenty-five years the searchlight of scientific enquiry has been directed upon the person and teaching of Christ. The net result has been to strengthen his claims upon humanity, and to deepen the reverence in which he is held by all devout Christians. It was never so apparent to the minds of men, as it is today, that—

"The Church's one foundation
Is Jesus Christ her Lord."

There are naturally thousands of devout seekers after truth, not within the fold of the Christian Church, who disbelieve in the miracles recorded in the New Testament. There is an increasing number within the Church disinclined to accept them as narratives of fact, whilst regarding them in the same light as Grecian fables, and accepting them for their morals. It is no part of the duty of a secular journal to examine into the findings of theological controversialists, but at Easter-Tide it is impossible not to be impressed with the great thoughts which have seized the minds of men, and the vital truths to which they cling amid all the wreckage of religious conflict. It is not to depreciate the importance of historic truth, nor to cast any doubt upon the literal accuracy of the Crucifixion, and the Resurrection, to premise that the true value lies in the faith which has been implanted in the human heart that nothing of worth can be quickened except it die; and that the most potent influence for the uplifting of the world is the hope kindled by an unshaken belief in the final triumph of good. The greatest intellects, and the wisest men have discerned that there is no real ground for optimism apart from a full recognition of this truth. It is because the world believes in the teaching of the Resurrection, that men are able 'to rise on stepping stones of their dead selves to higher things." If it were possible to blot out the story of the Resurrection of Christ, and to extinguish the spark of hope, which it has kindled in the human breast, pessimism would ride rampant in every community, all forms of philanthropic and religious work would be abandoned, crime would stalk unchecked through the land and men would curse God, and die. Happily the world never had so firm a grip on the profound truths, and the profounder teachings which we celebrate at Easter tide. Its observances are the solatium of many a bruised and broken life; its solemnities recall the tenderest memories; and its hushed inspiration stimulates to renewed combat with the disintegrating forces of human society. The world which is reminded by the purity of the Easter Lily of "the long ago" may pay but the passing tribute of a sigh, but in that sober moment a new impulse may be born. Truly men will not readily relax their grip on the revealed truth which Easter observances set forth.

The Y.M.C.A. Campaign.

Every well-wisher of Victoria will rejoice at the impending campaign of the Y.M.C.A. looking to the erection of a suitable building in the City. The history of this great movement is the history of the progress of public opinion in the direction of social purity. The great founder, Lord Shaftsbury, builded better than he knew. For many years he was considered narrow, and the interpretation of his wishes by zealous leaders of the movement, contributed not a little to emphasize the impression. In those days there was not a little intolerance, and more than a little of the atmosphere of "I am holier than thou" about the precincts of the Y.M.C.A. But Lord Shaftsbury had enshrined a jewel, though it might be in an earthen vessel, and little by little the movement gained breadth, and that spirit of sweet reasonableness, which enabled it finally to gain public confidence, without sacrificing one jot of the principle which it represented. For ten years now opposition of every kind has ceased, the control has passed into the hands of public spirited citizens, who have endeavoured to steer its course by the Golden Rule. The result is, not only a vast increase in the popularity of the movement among the young men, whom it was primarily designed to benefit, but among business firms, and industrial corporations, who have come to recognize that they can make no better investment than to contribute to the upbuilding of a great training institution for turning out honest, clean living men. This is where the Y. M. C. A. stands today, and this is why it can appeal with every confidence for public support. Its plans for the future in Victoria are broad and generous, the campaign will be conducted in a business-like manner, it will be supported by the most influential men in the community, and the Capital City of British Columbia could do itself no greater honour than to respond in such a manner as to ensure the erection of a splendid, and imposing home for the most important organization within its borders.

Getting Busy.

In the interests of law and order, and equally in the interest of law-abiding hotel-keepers, the police are to be congratulated on having secured a conviction of John Irving, proprietor of the Goldstream Hotel, for illegally selling liquor on Sunday. The only redeeming feature of the case was that Irving pleaded guilty. The good work, however, should not stop at this stage; there are numbers of country hotels or inns, which are persistently violating the same law. They do so to the annoyance of the public, and the discredit of respectable licensed victuallers. Public opinion would sustain the police in an active raid against these law-breakers. Now is the time to begin before the dry and thirsty season establishes them in a renewal of their evil course. This is primarily a matter for the Provincial Police, and their action will be closely watched.

Waking Up.

The Island Development League is doing a good work in more ways than one, and noticeably so in arousing other more or less moribund organizations into activity. The Nanaimo Board of Trade for instance, is getting busy, and realizing that, if it is to share in the advantages of a progressive campaign, it must do something definite within its own borders. It has placed on record a demand for a conspicuous place in any railway development scheme, and is objecting to Government aid on the Mainland unless connection is made with the Island. Whether the bridging of Seymour Narrows is within the range of practical politics may reasonably be doubted, and the most competent engineers believe that, for many years to come communication between the Mainland and the Island, will be effected by means of train ferries. This may be what Nanaimo has in view, and if so, it is a reasonable proposition and one which should be urged upon the Government by the Development League. There is little doubt that in the near future a railway policy will have to be submitted to the Province, and that it will include extensive developments of transportation on Vancouver Island, is a foregone conclusion. The chief advantage of the new organization with its numerous affiliations, is that it covers the whole Island, and ensures that no section shall be overlooked.

Fruit Inspection.

The Week has time and again called attention to the gross inadequacy of the fruit inspection of this Province. It has tried to fasten the responsibility upon the right party, but without success. It does know that the Minister of Agriculture is getting grey under the incessant quibbling and bickering between the fruit inspectors, the tree sprayers, and the fruit growers. It is quite certain that there is a lack of harmony among those who are entrusted with the inspection of fruits and orchards, and unless some settled plan of procedure can be evolved, under which all these officers will work together for the common good, for the protection of the public, and at the same time for the upbuilding of the industry, the Department will make no mistake if it cancelled every appointment and started out with a new staff. How necessary this is may be gathered from the fact that last season trees were destroyed indiscriminately, when they might have been saved by proper treatment. In other cases, trees were sprayed with an ineffective chemical, and the money expended in this way was wasted. Time and again cargoes of imported apples have been on sale in Victoria, of an inferior grade, to condemned consignments of the local product. All this involves heavy loss to the fruit grower, and is a distinct blow to the industry. It arises largely from incompetency, and jealousy. The Province has had about enough of it, and the time has arrived for "mending or ending."

Rough House.

The workmen in Haggerty's camp had a fine time at the beginning of the week, when they filled up with bad whisky, and smashed everything in sight, including each other. The whisky must have been very bad, for the men lost all restraint, and developed destructiveness to an amazing degree, for when they had smashed everything else, they attacked the pickles and condiments to say nothing of the cooking utensils. Four bruised and battered men appeared in the Police Court to answer for their strenuous performance, but strange to relate no conviction followed. This was not the fault of the magistrate, but was due to lack of evidence. One cannot but wonder what would have happened in Court if the proceedings there had followed a coroner's inquest, as might easily have happened. With the country painted red all the way from Goldstream to Victoria, and four roaring drunks, handcuffed and manacled, brought down in a wagon, it seems as if it should have been possible to make the punishment fit the crime. However, perhaps, it is taking too serious a view of these little jubilations, which may after all be a necessary relief to the tedium of building the Mill Bay Road.

Cock and Bull Story.

Former Deputy Warden Bourke of New Westminster cut a very ridiculous figure in the Vancouver Courts this week, when he abjectly apologized to Mr. A. D. McIntyre, a lawyer of Kamloops, for suggesting that he had secured the release of Bill Miner. In addition to the abject apology, Bourke also had to pay heavy costs. Bourke is the man who caused the matter to be brought up in the Dominion House, by Mr. J. D. Taylor. It is now clear that he furnished false statements, and public opinion will agree that he is getting off very lightly with an apology and costs; all of which goes to show that charges affecting the honour of men, should be very cautiously handled, especially where the slanderer has an axe to grind.

Hitting the Nail On the Head.

The number of newspapers prepared to criticise the pusillanimity of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the present crisis is increasing. The more they look at his conduct the less they like it. Toronto Saturday Night calls his policy "mushy." Several papers twit him with offering England "brave words" but not a dollar. One of the neatest comments is to be found in a paper which rarely allows itself the luxury of strong political comment, being essentially a commercial journal. But this is what it says on the topic of the moment: "Some papers comment on what they call the admirable way in which the Parliament of Canada kept its head during the time of the Dreadnought fever. The thing was only equalled by the deliberate way in which the same Parliament kept its money."

At The Street Corner

By THE LOUNGER

I notice by the daily press that poor old Jem Mace is "down and out"; he has reached what appears to be the inevitable goal of all pugs —poverty by the booze route. All the same, I am just a little surprised in Jem's case, because all the years I knew him he was one of the most abstemious of sports. Up to the time he met Coburn, he was next thing to a total abstainer, which means that he only indulged in an occasional glass, and never failed to put an appearance in the ring in first class condition.

Looking over the long list of pugs, whom I have seen perform, I think that Mace was the most scientific of them all. True, he belonged to the old school, and his stand-up attitude presented a remarkable contrast with the crouch that is so fashionable today, but there is not in the ring today, and probably never has been, a man quicker on his feet, with more lightning speed in his punches, and with a cooler head.

Mace had no particular punch of his own special invention, such as was claimed by McCoy. He was an all-round fighter with the courage of Sayers, and more science. Mace shone when all fights were with naked knuckles. I saw him up against King and Goss, that's a long time ago, and he was the master of both of them. I met him on his sensational tour with Herbert Slade, the Maori marvel, who turned out to be nothing but a great big slob, for although he weighed 225 to Mace's 160, and had twenty years advantage in age, Mace could put him out of business at any stage of the game.

Mace's legitimate successor was Mitchell, who was almost as brilliant a fighter, but he came in with the gloves, and unfortunately after attaining a few phenomenal successes got "swelled head." But the worst thing that ever happened to Mitchell was falling into the clutches of Pony Moore, who made him a boozer, and put an end to his career.

Mace was a good sport to the last; I shall never forget his two last appearances. The one was in a marquee in Wolverhampton about thirty years ago, when he donned the gloves with Alf. Greenfield, and made that tricky gentleman look like thirty cents. Less than twenty years ago, and when he was nearing sixty, he put up a show fight at Glasgow with Mitchell. Of course this is ridiculous for a man of his age, and he made about as poor a showing as did Sims Reeves on the concert platform, for some years before his death.

I am rather surprised to learn from the obituary notice that Mace is 78. I should have placed him at about 74 or 75; however, it is sad to think that a man who fought so many splendid fights, and never did a mean trick, should have to finish up in the poor house. I have always thought that the greatest fight conceivable would have been between Mace and Fitzsimmons, if they had been of an age. They were matched in weight, and while Mace was more scientific, and much quicker Fitzsimmons had a heavier punch. It is not a little singular that the two greatest champions of the last fifty years were both middleweight men.

I am quite aware that the above is a digression from my usual line, but there are many Old Country sports in Victoria, who I am sure will appreciate a reference to Mace. As a matter of fact, with the return of Summer weather, I must begin to get busy in my accustomed haunts, for there is plenty to note, and plenty to comment upon. I want to congratulate the Chairman of the Streets Committee on the manner in which he is rushing the installation of the salt water main on Government street. So far it is the quickest job I have ever seen done in the city, and is gratifying evidence that we are indeed living under a new regime.

Now I want to say a word about the new fire chief; there seems to be a good deal of boosting for ex-Chief Deasy, but for several reasons I think it would be a great mistake to give him the appointment. Some of these reasons should not, in fairness to him, receive too much prominence, but it would be a mistake to suppose that Victorians have short memories. In the next place I am informed by men who worked with Chief Deasy for years that he was not the best man in the world to get on with, and finally, although he did good work in Nelson, and is undoubtedly an expert fireman, he was not regarded as an ideal chief. Having made inquiries as to the qualifications of the several candidates I am going to ask my friends to support Joe Wachter, who is an experienced fireman, a steady, sober man, popular with his colleagues, and one capable of instilling enthusiasm into the members of the brigade.

I want to call the attention of the Streets Committee, or possibly I should say the Parks Committee, to the manner in which trees are being planted on some of the boulevards, particularly on Cook street. Between Cook and Pandora, and again between Cook and Fairfield Road, there are a number of splendid old trees. I notice that new ones are being planted between them, which is surely quite unnecessary, as it will crowd the boulevard, and impede the growth of the younger ones.

My last kick this week is the old standing complaint about the triangular piece of land at the corner of Government and Belleville. Now that the C. P. R. have commenced to tidy up their own corner the city should certainly do something to remove an old standing grievance, and an eyesore. Which reminds me that an American visitor, with whom I was lounging in the Palm Room of the Empress Hotel one day this week, directed my attention to the view from the windows looking towards Douglas and Humboldt. Beyond the ground which has been so tastily planted and laid out by the C. P. R. the aspect is anything but encouraging. A picture of the mud flat, and the rows of cabins, which disfigure the upper end, would be most effective in keeping visitors away from Victoria. Considering that the Government gave all this flat to the city, it does seem as if it should have been possible to raise sufficient money to make it presentable.

Old Gardener—Bliss us a' mem; we hae guid daylilicht here!

They had been engaged just seventeen minutes by the clock, when a scornful look appeared on her face that was calculated to wither the orange blossoms.

"I can't imagine, dear," he said, sadly, "what has come over you so suddenly. I simply asked if you were romantic, when—"

"Oh, George, forgive me!" she exclaimed, with a convulsive sob, as she threw her arms about his neck. "I thought you asked me if I was rheumatic."

On Leaders.

By BOHEMIAN.

The success of every movement depends on the leader. He need not necessarily be the one who has evolved the main idea, but he must be the one to carry it out. There have been a few great men in the history of the world, who could both make the bullet and fire it, but the combination is rare. In military and naval movements a Council of War must precede the action. It is upon a judicious combination of forces that success depends. For years before the Franco-German war broke out, the military schools of that military Empire were planning and scheming, and had the armies of Europe set out upon a chess board until they had reduced the possibilities of their movements to a science. The result was that the most glorious campaign in history proceeded with the accuracy and regularity of clockwork, and the great Field Marshall, Von Moltke, was able to place his finger, days in advance, upon the site of every great battle ground.

Not less marvellous in its mastery of detail was the precision with which Bismark's master mind worked out the scheme, which resulted from a successful war in effecting the dream of his life—a United Germany.

In later days the experience of the Franco-German war has been paralleled in the brilliant and decisive Russo-Japanese war and in the concluding stages of the Boer War, when Kitchener and Roberts acted in conjunction. It is doubtful if the former has ever been excelled as a military organizer, and his latest work in India, under new and exacting conditions, has but added to his fame.

But it is not only in military affairs that the great qualities of leadership are displayed; the Victorian era has furnished many brilliant illustrations of men born to rule, born to originate and lead great popular movements, and born to achieve success. Men like Disraeli, Gladstone, Bright, Peel, Palmerston, Salisbury, Balfour and Chamberlain, stand out as great leaders. They have all been associated with some policy which has immortalised them, and if they have not all achieved success, they have achieved immortality.

With the development of Greater Britain, and the grappling with Imperial problems by statesmen from beyond the seas, the development of leadership became inevitable, and although so far the Colonies have only produced one really great statesman of outstanding excellence, they have produced many men of high attainment and noble character, who only just missed being great leaders. It takes big issues to evolve big men, the greatest issue which has ever been presented to the Colonies, that of Imperial Federation, is now to the fore, and with the hour will undoubtedly come the men, born of the responsibilities of a high position, and of the traditions of our race.

The Premier of Canada has impressed his personality on the Empire and today holds a place in the popular esteem second only to that enjoyed by Sir John A. Macdonald. But Sir Wilfrid Laurier has limitations which are recognized even by his most enthusiastic followers. If to nobility of character and a high humanitarian purpose he added the gift of decision and executive force he would cross the rubicon which differentiates talent from genius and excellence from greatness. But this will never be, and one of the finest and courtliest of men will pass into the pages of history without realizing the ambition of achievement. If, as the highest authorities declare, the Empire is really face to face with a crisis, and Armageddon is in sight, then without a doubt the leader will arise in some part of the Empire, probably where least expected, and crystallize into action the impulse and latent energy of the British peoples.

Editor The Week.

Sir,—I should so much like to have your opinion upon the following: Am I correct in saying the flag exhibited here as "Irish," is only a rebel flag, as it does not bear the "Crown above the harp?"

From an Irish Loyalist's point of view am I not right? I should like, if possible, to have my opinion substantiated by good authority.

LOYALIST.

Victoria, B. C.,
April 7, 1909.

Editor The Week.

Dear Sir,—In answer to query from "Loyalist", "Am I correct in saying the flag exhibited here as 'Irish,' is only a rebel flag, as it does not bear the 'Crown above the harp'?", permit me to say:

Such a flag is the "Irish National flag," in proof of which I quote from "Library of Universal Knowledge," Vol. 8, p. 346—"In a manuscript in the Herald's Colege of the time of Henry VII the National flag of Ireland exhibits the harp in a field vert "(green)."

No mention is made of the Crown above the harp. Later, in same volume, same place, we read: "The royal badge of Ireland as settled by sign-manual in 1801, is a harp of gold, stringed argent, and a trefoil vert, (green), both ensigned with the Imperial Crown."

The Crown was added to the royal badge in 1801. But the National flag of Ireland exhibits no crown. We maintain that Ireland never admitted the loss of her nationality—she maintains her nationhood, consequently her time-honoured flag.

This of course will not please friend "Loyalist," and when he asks whether the Irish flag, "without the crown" is not a "rebel" flag from an Irish Loyalist's point of view, I answer, that is his point, from which he may view the question, but from an Irish Nationalist's point of view I maintain that the "National flag of Ireland" has ever displayed and does display the harp "without the crown" —yet we too are quite as loyal to the British Crown, as some who are repeatedly reminding us of their "loyalty."

Yours faithfully,
CLEMENT CAINE.

A Lady's Letter

By BABETTE.

Dear Madge:

"Dress," says Bob Acres, "does make a difference." Carlyle points out the same grim fact in Sartor Resartus, when he declares that a naked House of Lords would inspire no awe.

There are a few peoples still in this Twentieth Century of grace who ignore dress, but these chiefly because of the torrid heat at the equator. The adult costume of the native of Hawaii was once described as "a smile, a malo, and a cutaneous eruption." The children were clad in even less, or as Mark Twain has it, "in nothing but sunshine—a very neat-fitting and picturesque apparel."

It is true, we are told, that "in the days of man's innocency" (Aand pray when was that?) men wore no clothing, not even a coating of tatoo or talcum, but in these latter days of chiffons, laces, and "full dress," we feel, with Huckleberry Finn of affectionate memory, they were by no means "dressed fittin'."

Yet in spite of our fondness for the ancient tale anent the hardiness of Godiva, and in face of the fact that Hercules was killed by a dress shirt, we feel ourselves safe in predicting that everywhere popular opinion is prejudiced in favour of clothes. Indeed, a philosopher has gone so far as to say "Society is founded on cloth.

Apart from the mere considerations of aetheticism and art, clothes may be said to have a purpose. They are of use for two reasons: Firstly, to keep the rain off, and secondly, to prevent automobiles from shying at us.

Next to a stout heart, nothing helps a man so much as clothes—I mean good clothes. They are not mere superficialities; but on the contrary a good paying investment. We assert this with assurance for the reason that not more than ten men will read your character from your face, for every five hundred who will decipher it from the cut of your coat or the tilt of your hat. This may be a doctrine of false worths, but "'Tis true, 'tis pity; and pity 'tis 'tis true."

Thackeray said that to dress badly was to throw away so many points in the game. Sterne also held dress to be a valuable asset and claimed if you lived in a garret and dined on an onion you must not betray it in your clothes. Goldsmith declared that a well-attired man holds the passport to the highest grades of society. Thoreau had the same conviction, for "It is astonishing," he writes, "how far a merely well-dressed, good-looking man may go without being challenged by a sentinel." This we may reason out, is because the well-attired man is supposed to be a gentleman just as a man with cap and gown is supposed to be a student for it is now, as in Shakespeare's time, "The apparel oft proclaims the man.'" We do not mean to say that clothes make up the man, but when you come to think of it the only part of him not clothed are his hands and face—truly a small proportion of his area.

And as to this small remaining proportion it is highly important that it, too, should be well-groomed. Old "Gorgon" Graham in writing to his son Pierrepont, says, "Appearances are deceitful, I know, but so long as they are, there is nothing like having them deceive for us instead of against us. I have seen a ten-cent shave get a thousand-dollar job."

The same idea is brought out in the incident reported from Moscow in the cowering cold of winter. One morning, a General presented himself before Napoleon in full-dress and freshly shaven. Seeing him thus attired, the Emperor said: "You are a brave man, my General." The man's clothes were the external wrappages showing him superior to defeat and demoralization—outward and visible signs, so to say, of an inward and spiritual grace.

A LADY'S LETTER.

ly on the head when he remarked, "Dandies always fight well."

In Canada, this was exemplified by the first settlers at Quebec from whose ranks arose such heroic youths as Adam Dollard and such brave maidens as Madeleine de Vercheres. Although menaced on all sides landward by hordes of blood-thirsty savages and in constant dread of hostile fleets to seaward, it is recorded of them by an eye-witness that they paid great attention to their dress. This is the more remarkable when we remember they had to weave their own serges, linens, and buntings. A Swedish professor who visited Quebec in 1749 describes the women of that time as wearing "elaborate headdresses, short skirts, high-heeled shoes, flirting their fans of turkey-feathers and trilling their light little songs of broken-hearts and lovers." It is true the Swede did not approve of these habiliments or doings and said it would require an earthquake to shock the settlers into "modesty of attire," but there are some of us, in truth many of us, who applaud these braveries of our long-since dead-and-gone grandmothers. We have no doubt grandfather was properly diverted and beguiled by the gewgaws, by the whisper of the skirts, and general modishness of his spouse. It was all so very pretty and not in the least sinful. Of grandfather, himself, Charlevoix said, he "enjoys what he has and makes a show of what he has not."

And besides (put a pin in this Sir) the fact of dressing smartly and in gay clothes made their life and position more assured with the savage tribes of the Canadian forests.

It is a good move to look something very special when you have to deal with wholly untutored folk. This may be illustrated by an incident in the career of Lord Curzon. In his early travels he visited Afghanistan, which journey he made at the risk of his life and purse. To protect these he called to his aid an eminent military tailor who built him a uniform of scarlet and gold so dazzling that the Afghans could hardly bear to look at it. Thus bedizened, he passed through their country, not only unscathed but everywhere being reverenced as a tremendously superior person. It may thus be seen that while knowledge is power, dress runs it a close second.

But apart from the bearing a man's dress has on others, it has also a distinct effect on himself. The wearing of cap and bells would debase a bishop into a clown, just as the wearing of striped clothes turns prisoners into hardened criminals or lunatics.

A well-tailored suit with a correct tie and shoes inspires a man with confidence and rouses him to his responsibilities. We should have added a collar to this outfit because its absence will upset a man's poise as quickly and certainly as if he stepped on a banana peel. Besides, the mere absence of a collar will make a handsome, intellectual face look positively vulgar.

A man invariably changes his outlook with his clothes. This is the reason he is more religious on Sundays than on week-days. A dirty coat makes dirty actions natural. A shabby suit makes a man shy of his fellows just as a Prince Albert coat and silk hat gives him a sense of superiority. They are to him as a sword and buckler. In this respect, men are very much like lettuce salads; their excellence is largely a matter of dressing. This is the reason tailoring may be described as one of the principle fine arts of the age.

In putting forth a plea for fine apparel, we must not be mistaken as advocating dandyism or a finical foppishness like that of Beau Nash, Beau Fielding, or Beau Brummell, although, in this connection, it is not to be forgotten that William III offered the honour of knighthood to Nash for no other reason than that the Beau was a well-disposed, handsome youth who dressed superbly. On the contrary, what we urge is the folly, from a business or social standpoint, of being slipshod and shabby in a world where four times a year even Nature puts on new clothes.

It is true many noted men wear clothes that are frayed, faded, and baggy; but this is because they feel their position sufficiently eminent to warrant their neglect of personal appearances. In other words, their contempt of the nicities of dress is, in reality, the outcome of pride, or what the Man on the Street would vulgarly but aptly designate as "swollen head." This is an old form of pride—a pose practised years and years before the Christian era; for we read in Greek history that Socrates twitted Antisthenes, the leader of the school of cynics with it. "Antisthenes," he gibed, "I see thy vanity through the holes in thy coat."

It is reported of a certain enormously wealthy English Duke that his ragged clothes have placed him on a par with the needy knife-grinder whose would-be exploiter told him—"Torn is your coat, your hat has got a hole in it,—so have your breeches.'

There are, of course, rare instances where devotion to old clothes arises out of a queer unexplainable twist in an otherwise well-balanced mentality. Such men must be circumvented by domestic strategy as was Dominie Sampson who, you will remember, was so cleverly reclothed, piece by piece, that the process was wholly unnoticed and thus failed to elicit from the good old Dominie his usual puzzled ejaculation, "Prodigious!" These, however, are not men to imitate. Extremes of any kind are to be deprecated but, in dress, of the two extremes—rags and gorgeousness—we would rather emulate Beau Brummell's much caluminated butterfly for

"The butterfly was a gentleman
Which nobody can refute;
He left his lady-love at home,
And roamed in a velvet suit."

BABETTE.

Bondage.

(By Reginald Wright Kauffman)

I am the slave of day,
And underneath the sun
I play my part with stubborn heart
Until the day is done;
I do the petty task,
I earn the grudging pay,
And none can guess I wear a mask,
Indentured to the day.

But when the sun has set
And labor ends again,
How easy to forget
The walks and ways of men!
Deep in my heart I seek
The lilac and the rue,
The white rose and the rose of red:
The memory of you.

What though the miles divide,
What though the years are past?
Across the night I dream aright,
And am myself at last;
A bondsman of the day,
While day is on its throne,
The secret stars all know I am
Your slave, and yours alone!

They met at the lunch counter.

The girl with fluffy hair had ordered ice cream, cake, chocolate pudding, and cream puffs.

"For the lands sake, Belle!" exclaimed the girl with the picture hat. "How can you get away with all that stuff?"

"I'm dieting," freezingly answered the girl with the fluffy hair.

WHEN OLD SOL SMILES

If you have a good Gas Range in your kitchen life is worth living in the warm weather. So different to cooking the cook (more especially if the cook is yourself) over a hot coal or wood stove. If you do not like cooking all the more reason for making your labor as easy as possible.

A housewife will revel in the possession of a Gas Range, appreciating the saving in time, strength and worry, the cleanliness, accuracy and healthfulness of gas for cooking purposes. Henceforth she will have no kindlings to buy, no coal to carry in, no ashes to take out, no blinding, choking smoke in starting wood or coal stove, no blistering heat while cooking and no fear of fire from over-heated flues. Early breakfast will have no terrors for her, just as easy will she be able to get up a late supper for unexpected guests. If she has a dinner to cook which takes hours, she will set the Range right and she will find it hours later just exactly as she left it.

A Gas Radiator or a Gas Grate forms a charming addition to any residence. Either is extremely useful to a lady or a man who "batches" even if only one room forms "home." A furnace may be balky, or out altogether, steam heat may become obstreperous, wood or coal fires entail labor in relighting, but a Gas Heater is always ready with the turn of the tap and scratch of a match. It is a most economical apparatus, the expense stops the minute the gas is turned off. It can be brought into service in a second without work, so different from fire-building. It will not only give the required warmth, but will at once dispense a genial air of hospitality. As a little heat is required almost every day of the year in British Columbia, a Gas Radiator, or a Gas Grate, should be installed in every house.

You are most cordially welcome to visit our showrooms whether you desire to purchase or merely to look. We will gladly explain the many advantages of Gas for cooking and heating purposes.

Sporting Comment

The victory of St. Ives, the French runner, in the Marathon Derby at New York last Saturday came as a surprise to many followers of Marathon races, but now the race has been run and an opportunity been given to look into the records of the plucky little Frenchman, it can easily be seen that he is a good one. In an interview given before the race Shrubb plainly stated that Ives was the dark horse and the one of whom he was afraid, and it proved to be the Frenchman who put him to the bad. Of the showing made by Longboat, I can only say that it leaves a very bad taste with all true Canadians. Longboat when in condition can easily run a better race and why he should disappoint his supporters as he did on Saturday is something that can only be answered by those who know. It looks very much as if the master hand of Tom Flanigan was again at work and it would not be surprising if the Frenchman and Longboat were matched for another Marathon within a few months. The whole aspect of the race, was anything but for sport, this side of the question being entirely overlooked for the question of money.

The defeat of the Cambridge crew at the hands of the Oxfords upset the calculations of many critics but when a crew goes out for a practice and beats the best time ever made in a race, that crew should be given some consideration. It appeared to be a foregone conclusion that Cambridge would win with its well tried crew, but the best laid plans "gang aft a glee."

At last the statement has been made by the officials of the New Westminster and Vancouver Lacrosse Club that the players have been getting a hand-out every season. This sounds very good after the delegates from these clubs at the meeting held in Victoria last year, had signed a statement that they would see that the players of the clubs they represented played strictly amateur. This is another instance where sport is played not for the sport there is in it but for what can be made out of it. Truly, a bright idea for players in an amateur association. As far as Victoria is concerned the players last year were strictly amateur and there is no reason why the clubs which broke the regulations should not be penalized. Now that the association has affiliated with the Canadian Federation, I suppose the matter will be overlooked, but this shows that the system of running amateur associations in B. C. is entirely too lax.

The local team made a start for the season yesterday morning and although the practice was not a strenuous one it served as a starter and shows that there is material in this city for a first class team.

The baseballers are rounding into fine form and should show good ball during the coming season. It is very apparent, however, that unless some very quick work is done in connection with the grounds, the diamond will not be ready for the opening game.

The International Basketball championship of the Pacific Northwest has been won by the Y.M.C.A. team of this city after a very hard season. So close was the race for the trophy that two extra games were necessary to decide the supremacy between Vancouver and Victoria, and although the Terminal City players won the first of these games, the locals came back strong in the second and gave their opponents a stinging defeat. The local boys deserve great credit for the consistent manner in which they have played during the season and it is only necessary to add that it was through regular practices that they have been able to win the championship. In referring to the work of the team it would be unfair to overlook the work of Physical Director Findley, who has been largely instrumental in bringing the boys to their present stage of perfection.

Although the Marathon race at Oak Bay took place yesterday I will defer my remarks until our next issue.

A. Y. P. Exposition.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, better known as "Fighting Bob," was a visitor in Seattle during the past week in the course of his lecture tour of the country, and during his stay here was the guest of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition officials for a trip around the fair grounds. The Admiral was the first noted visitor to the fair who has been taken through the interior of any of the buildings. On the occasion of his visit the party went through the Manufactures and Oregon State Buildings, in both of which exhibits are being installed. Admiral Evans expressed his approval of the fair in the following words:

"If one should comb all the world he could not find a more beautiful spot for an Exposition than the site of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Fair. I have never seen anything myself to equal it. It's a veritable jewel of a place. And the Fair will be ready, too, in my opinion."

"Fighting Bob" is not a man given to many words, but his quiet remarks about the exposition were fully appreciated by the fair management. The Admiral saw the Exposition Grounds with most of the large buildings complete, and a score of the smaller ones nearing completion. The fair grounds will be everywhere dotted with these smaller structures, and they do much to complete the general plan of the grounds, and to give the finishing touches to the completed picture as it has been planned by the landscape men and the architects. Among the small buildings now being finished are the Dairy, Good Roads, Women's, Grand Trunk Railway, Arctic Brotherhood, Masonic, Y.W.C.A., and Hoo Hoo Buildings. Then there are three county buildings, representing Spokane, Chehalis and Yakima counties, and of course the dozens of shows along the Pay Streak.

The construction of booths has commenced in the manufactures building, and from the preliminary work it is evident that the big national concerns which will exhibit there are sparing no pains or money to install shows that will please the visitors. In the Oregon State Building the greatest progress has been made in interior decoration and the installation of exhibits. In the great dome, artists are at work on a panoramic painting of Oregon scenery, which is being decorated with native grains and grasses of the state. On the second floor the decorating is well under way, while on the main floor cabinet makers are at work constructing cases for exhibits, and shipments of exhibits are being unpacked. Those already on hand include exhibits of fruit, grains and farm products, polished woods, and stuffed and mounted animals. Other consignments have not been unpacked. Oregon was the first state to complete her A. Y. P. building, and bids fair to be the first to complete her exhibit.

WHAT WE HAVE DONE

Six weeks ago we offered for subscription 300,000 shares of the Preference Stock of this Corporation. Within that comparatively short time, over one-third of the capital necessary for the purchase of the 100 square miles of timber limits and for the erection of the first unit, 90-ton pulp plant, has been subscribed, and every dollar has been secured from Vancouver Island. What does this splendid result mean? It means, if it means anything, that the people of Vancouver Island are awakening to the great possibilities in the development of their natural resources, and are prepared to support any industry that is built upon good, clean, sound, substantial business principles and which has for its object the utilization of the timber or mineral resources. When we organized the company, considerable criticism was manifested because we were obliged to sell our stock through the medium of the press and by personal solicitation. We adopted this plan because it was the only policy which promised success, and the only manner of bringing the proposition to the attention of the intelligent thinking people of Vancouver Island. The majority of the big enterprises of the world are those that have been built up by popular subscription from the plain people. In every political, industrial or educational movement in this or any other country it has always been the plain intellectual people who have responded to its formation and made it possible. As a matter of fact, the majority of the large corporations of both the United States and Canada are made up of small stockholders. The railroads of the United States alone have over 500,000 stockholders. The United States Steel Corporation has 110,000; Pennsylvania Railroad 60,000, 28,000 of which are women; Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, 30,000; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, 25,000; New York Central, 22,000; American Sugar Co., 20,000; Bell Telephone, 24,000; Pullman Car Co., 13,000; American Smelter Co., 10,000; General Electric Co., 12,000; National Lead, 8,000. The average individual holding in the above stocks represents only 85 shares. If we are to develop the great natural resources which nature hath so bountifully supplied us with, we must get out into the great highways of life and shout its praises. Not only should we develop the Wood Pulp and Paper Industry, but there are other industries of equal importance likewise development. Notwithstanding the tremendous advantages possessed by British Columbia in the Manufacture of Wood Pulp and Paper by the fact of having unlimited Pulpwood and magnificent waterways, this industry has remained absolutely undeveloped while Ontario and Quebec, with far less natural resources, have forged ahead at a tremendous rate. During the last few years millions of dollars of new capital has been invested in the Pulp mills of the Eastern Provinces, giving employment to thousands of people, and making possible new enterprising towns. Experience has shown that the only manner of making these new enterprises possible is to get out and arouse public opinion, so that the people can see for themselves the tremendous possibilities possible in the utilization of their natural resources.

One year ago the British Canadian Wood Pulp and Paper Company of Vancouver was organized. At that time it was universally predicted that sufficient money could not be secured in Western Canada to assure the success of such an enterprise. Within ten months over one-quarter of a million dollars has been subscribed and the Company are now about to open one of the most modern Pulp and Paper Mills in Canada. The above Company will manufacture nothing but Book, Ledger, Bond and Writing Papers, while the local Victoria Company will confine itself exclusively to the manufacture of News Paper, Ordinary Wrapping, Building Paper and Box Board. The manner in which the people of British Columbia have responded in the support of these two Companies is conclusive proof that we no longer are obliged to look to the Eastern Provinces or to England for sufficient capital to develop our resources or to make possible industries essential for the building up of our country.

Upon the incorporation of this Company we secured almost 100 square miles of Pulp Limits on Quatsino Sound, at the Northern part of Vancouver Island and are now rushing work on a 90-ton Pulp plant, which we are reasonably certain of having in operation by December 1st. There is no question but that the stock which we are now offering will eventually prove one of the best dividend paying propositions ever offered for subscription in Western Canada. At the present time ti is absolutely impossible to buy stock in the majority of the Pulp and Paper Mills of Canada and with our tremendous pulp limits and other natural advantages regarding water ways and proximity to the Oriental markets, there is no reason why we should not pay considerably larger dividends than the Eastern operating plants. The Eastern Pulp and Paper mills are now moving paper into Australia, Japan and China at a freight rate of about $13.00 per ton. Not only are we able to manufacture these products much cheaper than the Eastern mills but we are likewise able to secure a freight rate to the Oriental markets at from $3.00 to $5.00 per ton. At the present time there is a universal shortage of both news and wrapping paper, and the question of securing sufficient wood pulp for the manufacture of finished paper is yearly becoming a more serious question. It has long been the conviction of expert authorities on paper that it is only a question of time before British Columbia with her vast forests will become the leading producer of Wood Pulp and Paper in the world.

The Preferred Stock is entitled to a cumulative dividend of 7 per cent., payable out of the net profits of the Company before any dividend is paid on the Ordinary Stock; after a like amount has been paid on the Ordinary Stock, both Stocks thereafter participate equally.

WE NOW OFFER FOR SUBSCRIPTION THE REMAINDER OF THE FIRST ISSUE OF

Music and Stage

Harry Beresford Coming.

Interest centers around the appearance at the Victoria Theatre next week of Mr. Harry Beresford in "Who's Your Friend?"

Mr. Beresford was last seen here in "The Wrong Mr. Wright," when he drew a crowd which taxed the capacity of the Victoria Theatre. Excellent criticisms have this season been given to Mr. Beresford and his company from New York to the Pacific Coast. San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle have added such unreserved praise that patrons of the Victoria Theatre may confidently expect the most laughable comedy seen here this season, when that playhouse raises the curtain on his laughing success, next Monday and Tuesday, April 12th and 13th, respectively.

Happy Canada.

Canada should be happy. Persia is torn by internal dissensions; Turkey is being constitutionalized; Spain and Portugal fear revolutions; France has trouble between cleric and anti-cleric; Austria and Hungary have race troubles; Germany fears isolation by a British-Russian-French combination, the United States has its colored problem. Canada has only an excellent harvest and good trade prospects.

The following verses must have been the work of a genuine anti-woman-suffragist:

If all the harm that women have done
Were put in a bundle and rolled into one,
Earth would not hold it,
The sky could not enfold it,
It could not be lighted nor warmed by the sun,
Such masses of evil
Would puzzle the devil,
And keep him in fuel while Time's wheels run.

But if all the harm that's been done by men
Were doubled and doubled and doubled again,
And melted and fused into vapor and then
Were squared and raised to the power of ten,
There wouldn't be nearly enough, not near,
To keep a small girl for a tenth of a year.
