R WILFRID LAURIER

Wednesday next will be a red-letter day the history of Victoria, when the West- n Capital will don its gala attire to wel- me and do honour to the foremost man the Dominion. Canada has never lack- men of weight and influence, and until e star of Laurier arose the name of Sir hn A. MacDonald was associated in the pular imagination with the Dominion of nada throughout the civilised world. A ir comment on the work of these two eat men is that the former laid the undation of a nation and that the latter building and expanding it. Although edged to a different political faith and oclaiming a preference for an essential- different fiscal policy, Laurier has in all aterial matters continued the work of s great predecessor. Whether he has ne so from choice or from the necessi- es of the case it is not the time to consid- . After fifteen years in office the year 10 finds this brilliant French-Canadian a position of undisputed supremacy. hile there are the inevitable internal fferences and disputes, inseparable from litical life, there is no serious cleavage the ranks which line up at the command the Premier, and no immediate pros- ct that the sceptre will depart from his nds. All men agree that Sir Wilfrid aurier's hold on Canadians is largely e to his high personal character and to is genius; for he combines the two in rare degree. It is no disparagement of is able colleagues to declare that he is st in a finer mould. There is not in is make-up one touch of coarseness, and many it has occurred that he shares ith W. E. Gladstone the unique distinc- ion of impressing onlookers with a sense f other-worldliness. Both men must ave realised acutely the incongruities of olitical life; and of both it is conjec- ured that had they chosen the Church hey would have attained to its highest onours, and would have been classed by osterity with its brightest ornaments. There is no more significant sign of the times than that a man of this type should be the chosen leader of a new nation in the building. Sir Wilfrid's noble character is a standing reproach to public men who cling to baser ideals, and in the end must by the sheer weight of its moral influence determine a standard upon which public opinion will insist. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has rendered an invaluable service to Canada in welding together the interests and the sympathies of the two great races who dominate its affairs. It must be conceded that he has unified their aspirations, and the net result of his fifteen years of rule has been to draw them immeasurably nearer to the Mother Country. To-day, as he journeys through the great Western Provinces he finds a new world, where only a few years ago there was a wilderness. This new world is the wonder of the age, if not of the ages. Never has there been such an illustration of rapid and extensive growth; not hamlets and villages, but cities are springing up on every hand, and the bare patch of last year is the resting-place of to-day of a community of several thousand souls; not merely tilling the soil, but accumulating all the evidences of modern civilisation, and building cities the counter-part of the great emporiums of the East. These new cities are linked with bands of steel; ever trending further and further into what was described only a few years ago as the "Great Lone Land." The Wheat belt has been moved five hundred miles further north; the C.P.R., which ten years ago was the only transcontinental railway, was then the northern but it is now the southern boundary of Western civilization. Then men talked of Edmonton as away in the North; today it is hardly the Middle West and instead of the Saskatchewan men are planting the outposts of civilisation on the Athabasca, the Peace and the Mackenzie. And all this does not tell of the new world which is being discovered West of the Rockies, and which is being exploited from Vancouver Island to the Yukon. And this is the Dominion over which Sir Wilfrid Laurier rules and whose government he is administering on constitutional British methods. Nowhere throughout this vast domain will he meet with a heartier reception than in the Capital of British Columbia, where forty thousand loyal British subjects will recognise him as the greatest living representative of Greater Britain Beyond the Seas, and at once the most eloquent and impressive personage in the Outer Empire.

THE FLOWER SHOW

There is no doubt that the Flower Show held during the present week in the Drill Hall is the best ever held in Victoria in point of the number and quality of exhibits, the catering and the attendance. Such results would not have been attained without an immense amount of patient labour, and, as usual, the credit for this belongs chiefly to the ladies, among whom Mrs. Croft, Mrs. D. R. Harris, Mrs. Maclure, Mrs. Beaven and Mrs. Hasell were indefatigable in their efforts. In spite of exceptionable drought most of the flowers were in good condition, the exception being in the case of the roses; the exhibit of these being small and poor. Carnations did not figure as largely as might have been expected, since many of the gardens in Victoria are to-day rendered beautiful by these exquisite flowers. The feature of the Show after Mrs. Croft's really splendid assemblage of hot-house plants was the Sweet-pea exhibit; in connection with this Mrs. Beaven and Mr. Bland carried off the honours, as usual. Much has been said in the Daily Press of Mr. Bland's new development from the "Elsie Herbert," but too much cannot be said of its beauty. In shape, size, tint and soundness of colouring it excels everything previously seen, and reflects the highest credit on the skill and technical knowledge of the producer. It is doubtful whether Nature furnishes a more perfect table decoration than a bunch of these blooms, artistically arranged with gypsophila and placed in a bowl or vase of faintly iridescent Venetian glass. A word as to the table decorations. There is too great a tendency to over-elaboration, which renders the designs artificial and stiff. Undoubtedly, Mrs. Dupont well deserved the first prize, and Mrs. Hasell the second; but there was a wide gap between these and any other competitors. Many of those competing had not thought out any scheme, but appear to have worked haphazard. One or two really beautiful suggestions, including a blue corn-flower scheme, were more suitable for a luncheon than a dining-table. These may be regarded as minor defects, and are only mentioned in order to stimulate exhibitors to co-operate in making the Victoria Flower Show what it might easily be, one of the best in the world.

THE PLOT THAT FAILED

Thanks to an enlightened public opinion and the spirit of fair play which pervades Victoria, Mayor Morley's plot to get rid of the City Engineer by the 'under-ground route" has failed. But for the vigilance of the Times' reporter it is probable that the scheme would not have missed fire. But once again it has been demonstrated that it is impossible to beat the man with a nose for news. No one was surprised at the action of the Mayor; he opposed the appointment of Mr. Angus Smith, and has never extended any cordiality to that gentleman since he came to the city. He has allowed Mr. Smith's subordinates to report to him, and has even lowered himself to receive communications from them which were intended to discredit the City Engineer in his eyes. When he thought that the Engineer had been caught in a useless and extravagant expenditure he induced Ald. Bannerman, the Chairman of the Streets Committee, to back him up in an offer to bribe Mr. Smith to retire by paying him a year's salary; a course entirely indefensible on every ground; for, as has been very properly pointed out, if Mr. Smith was incompetent he was not entitled to a year's salary, and if competent, the City had no right to discharge him. The public has won the battle for the Engineer; for on every street car and at every corner opinion was crystallised in the statement "the man has not had a fair show." Mr. Smith may, or may not, be a competent engineer; that remains to be proved as far as Victoria is concerned, but it must be remembered that he came with excellent testimonials from one of the most progressive and rapidly expanding cities in the Dominion; no doubt he has yet something to learn about local conditions, and probably the ratepayers will have to sacrifice a few dollars while he is learning, but that would be true of any outside appointee. Mr. Smith has been hampered in the same way as his predecessor by Aldermanic and Mayoral interference. That will not occur again, because, for the first time, the City Engineer is placed in legal and absolute control of his Department. He may engage whom he likes and he may discharge whom he likes. This should give him a fair field. It will not banish intrigue on the part of those who for purposes of their own wish to acquire and retain control, but, if Mr. Smith has back-bone, he will shut his eyes to all this kind of thing, say nothing and "saw wood"; he will then demonstrate before many months have passed whether he is a competent engineer and a good organiser. If he fails in either department he will have to go, but not by the "under-ground route."

TOO MUCH POLITICS

It is difficult to resist the conviction that if Mr. C. S. Baxter had not been a prominent official of the Conservative party, he would never have been hauled into court for an alleged infraction of the Postal Act. The Week does not see any reason why Mr. Baxter should have been so anxious to save his wealthy clients the small amount involved in extra postage. His action in this regard says more for his honesty than his judgment, but apart from that there can be nothing but blame for the postal authorities in initiating a prosecution upon such an absurd basis. The Department must have known that conviction was impossible, and that the only result would be publicity, and probably that was all that they aimed at. Mr. Aikman's argument was unanswerable, viz., that the public had a perfect right to choose the office at which they would mail their letters, and as long as the correct postage was paid from that office to the destination there was no fraud on the Department and no infraction of the Act. If Mr. Baxter had handled stamped mailed matter to its destination, other than by means of the Post-office, then he would have usurped the functions of that Department and committed a breach of the Act. All he did was to have thirty thousand letters conveyed from Victoria to Vancouver in bulk and mailed in Vancouver with the correct postage. Acting Magistrate C. J. Prior, who handled the case with much ability, very properly held that to deny him this right would be to conflict with the public interest. He pointed out that if the letters had been mailed in Vancouver with a two-cent stamp the Postal authorities would not have rebated one cent on the ground that the postage was over-paid. By the same rule they had no right to demand the payment of one cent between Victoria and Vancouver for a service which they had not rendered. It is conceded that the Postal Department is a branch of the public service to which a monopoly has been granted, and that this monopoly is conceived in the public interest and must be protected. But there is a wide difference between protection and the abuse of a privilege. The recent proceedings against Mr. Baxter clearly indicate that the latter was attempted; and it would have involved a serious curtailment of the public rights if the attempt had succeeded.

THE METHODIST CONFERENCE

Victoria is highly honoured by having been chosen for the holding of the Western Methodist Conference which will be inaugurated here on Sunday next and which will be continued throughout the following week. Of all the religious organisations which the world has known since Apostolic days, the greatest is that founded by John Wesley. In making this statement The Week is not ignoring the claims of the Salvation Army, which, however, is not solely a religious organisation, being quite as much distinguished by its philanthropic and economic as by its religious activities. General Booth has much in common with John Wesley. He is a man of the broadest symapthies; a believer in practical Christianity, one who cares for the bodies as well as the souls of men, and who, through a long life has practised rigid self-denial. But here the resemblance ends; John Wesley was a scholar, a theologian and a mystic. He founded a Church, where General Booth has organised a system. The Methodist Church has what every church must have, a creed and a theological foundation. Conceived on the broadest lines, it has appealed to the masses of mankind as no other church has done. John Wesley said, "The world is my parish"; the world has responded and to-day the Methodist Church is essentially the Church of the People. To its ranks it has attracted some of the best of men and the most brilliant of preachers. In England at least two of the greatest orators of the last century, Dr. Punshon and Hugh-Price-Hughes, belonged to its ministry, and it is doubtful if any church produced two greater preachers in the nineteenth century. It is not only, however, in its greatest representatives that the Methodist Church has been rich, but in the high average standard of its ministry, and in its devotion to good works. On this continent Methodism is a power, and holds an unchallenged position as an influential and popular religious organisation. It is not necessary to agree with the whole of its policy in order to appreciate its singleness of purpose, and to acknowledge its spiritual influence. In Victoria it is the strongest church, and will furnish an opportunity during the coming week to listen to some of the ablest men in the Christian ministry and to make the acquaintance of the President-elect of the British Conference, who is one of the most attractive and forcible preachers of the day.

At The Street Corner

By THE LOUNGER

I have news; I have great news; I have news to burn, and I am so excited about it that I can hardly keep on sitting at my desk to write it. There is a HANSOM in Victoria. I know there is, because on this day of grace, Aug. 10th. I saw one, the time being about 8:30 a. m. I looked three times to make sure, and it was so. But for two trifling incidents I would have had a drive in it. First of all it was occupied, and secondly I hadn't got the price. But the sight of that cab took me right back to Picadilly, where we all belong, and if I had kept on looking I know that I could have seen a "sandwich" man coming up behind it. What associations the sight of a dear old hansom brings up! It spells "London," and when all is said and done, though we may "boost" for our individual capitals, and swear that God's own country is just exactly where we happen to be, yet, the Anglo-Saxon knows that London is the hub of the universe and the Mecca to which we are all looking.. Good old hansom!

A wicked and most malicious paragraph appeared on page 12 of The Victoria Times, dated Aug. 9th. I take pleasure in exposing it because I happen to know the people to whom it had reference. From the paragraph referred to a reader might be excused if he believed that three wagon loads of drunken rowdies went out for a picnic last Sunday with vast accumulations of "booze" on board. Acording to The Times they were noisy and insulting; they disturbed passengers peacefully sleeping on the E. & N. train; they hurt the feelings of the roadhouse keepers by showing them bottles; in fact they behaved like blackguards. That is how the cub-reporter of The Times wrote up a very quiet and harmless picnic party which left Victoria last Sunday morning. There were twenty-five in the party; they took sandwiches and, I believe, a little beer. They were all respectable members of society and were the last people on earth to insult people on the highway. They returned by 8:30 p. m., and disembarked within twenty yards of the Police Station. This in itself should be sufficient guarantee that there had been no abuse of that personal liberty which British law not only allows but demands. The Times, of course, was looking for a sensation; it also hoped to make capital out of an alleged infringement of a law passed by its political opponents. The Times is guilty of publishing an entirely false statement; one which is calculated to bring the Government of British Columbia into disrepute; one which might have an adverse bearing on people thinking of settling in Victoria, and one which will make all right-thinking people more sure than ever that "you don't read The Times for news, but simply to pass the time away."

* * *

It has more than once been pointed out to me that there is room for reform in the way in which Victoria merchants clean their premises in the early morning. It is not extravagant to ask that store-keepers should have their windows washed and their frontages cleaned before eight. But many a time I have been down town at half-past eight and seen men and women walk in the roadway because the hose-pipe is working on the sidewalks. It will be useless to enter a denial; this is a fact and known to be such. This preparatory work for the day's business should be done much earlier. It is a big "give-away" to any city, boasting the claim to be a city, to have this sort of thing happening every morning. They get up earlier in the States; incidentally, I might remark that poor little England. whom we all like to look upon as a poor relation, gets her washing done before business commences. There are still a few things which the Colonies can learn from the Mother Country, and this is one of them

At the risk of being called a plagiarist I am going to tell a story. I heard it for the first time today, but am told that The Colonist printed it a fortnight ago. Well, I'll take a chance. We have readers in places where The Colonist does not penetrate, and there may be Colonist readers who did not see the item. It goes thusly:—Two women on Government Street. Saith one, "What a ch-y-arming gown you are wearing, dear and where did you get that hat?" "Oh, I got it at—." "Oh, is that so, and did you see that the Cohoes have arrived?" "Indeed; well I suppose they are staying at The Empress." Tableaux. Exit Lounger.

* * *

I have often wondered who owned Trounce Avenue. I know that it is not city property; I have been told the name of the owner more than once, but I can't remember it. But I have found the real owners and seen them. They are the boys who work for the C. P. R. Telegraph Company. Undoubtedly, they own the alley. See them practising their bicycle tricks on it; see them shave the unwary pedestrian; watch to their horse-play and listen to their jokes, and no doubt will be left in your mind.

* * *

The Victoria Fire Brigade is one of the soundest institutions which we have in the city. It does good work and deserves all the bouquets which can be thrown at it. Therefore, let it be understood that the following remarks are not meant in any disparagement of our fire service, but the joke is too good to keep, and The Lounger thinks it only fair to acquaint his readers with the same. The B. C. Fur Store was on fire; the brigade hastened to its relief. "There is a woman inside," shouted the Chief; "which of you brave lads will volunteer to save a blazing female" One man came forward, hurled himself into the hell of fire and smoke and emerged bearing a female figure But it was slightly melted for he had rescued wax instead of flesh and blood, the latter having escaped by the back door. Still, the intention was good and shows that our firemen in Victoria are ready to go through fire and smoke if there is any chance of effecting a rescue. Incidentally, seeing that we are talking about the B. C. Fur Store, it might not be out of place to remark that the Company are going to re-model their frontage, and intend to have a bigger and better store than they had before.

* * *

Something ought to be said about Chinamen. I am a great believed in the Chink because he fills a long-needed want; he is clean, and, above all, he is industrious. But—and it is a big "but," I want to make a "kick." There are bars in town which make a big display of Union cards; drop in there before eight in the morning; the odds are that you will be served by a Chinaman. I don't say that the drink is any the worse for the service, but merely wish to point out that such service is hardly in keeping with the prominently exposed card. Again, there is one house in town which authorises its Chinaman to empty the slops down the main drain just outside the establishment. This procedure is neither healthy nor sanitary. Attached to the premises are offices where such refuse could be thrown away. But it is nobody's business bue The Lounger's, and so, nobody cares.

* * *

I have written till I am tired with respect to the erection of public lavatories in Victoria. A new complaint has come to me, and from it I understand that the public is inconvenienced by not having any public lavatories at Foul Bay. It is useless to waste time and space in expatiating on these matters; everyone knows that they are needed, and it seems a pity to advertise such a place as Foul Bay as a holiday, or week-end, resort, without catering to the needs of the holiday-makers.

* * *

Now that the City Fathers are making a move in the direction of improving the City lighting, I would respectfully suggest that they establish a revolving search-light in Beacon Hill Park for the convenience of the many persons who frequent it between nine p. m. and mid-night. It is very inconvenient to stroll around, especially when there is no moon, and to preserve the proper distance from the nearest loiterer. At present the only artificial light is the occasional flash of a police officer's "bull's-eye" and that is apt to be more disconcerting than helpful I do not see why an effective lighting system should be confined to the streets of the City. It is needed far worse in its purlieus.

* * *

It is not very often that I have the privilege of congratulating the City Council on good work done, but I must confess that I am very pleased to see that they have succeeded in removing the standards on the middle of the Causeway, and that they are renewing the lights on the retaining wall. Such action is good, and seems to afford a decent excuse for the existence of the

MUSIC
AND THE STAGE

The Victoria Theatre

A full criticism of Margaret Ang-in "The Awakening of Helena hie" will be found in the column ed by "Bohemian."

The New Grand Theatre

The Fassio Trio, equibibrists, have n the star attraction at the above atre this week, and they well de-ve all that has been written about m. Their turn is distinctly high-ss. I liked Grey & Peters in their ling "stunt." They are clever and using. The New Grand bill is a d one this week, and from the wd there on the evening when I s present, it would seem that the deville lovers of Victoria realise t they are getting just exactly at they want.

Pantages Theatre

Next week Pantages Theatre will another musical company hold-the boards. The Rose Musical medy Company is said to be ex-ent. The class of entertainment vided will be on the same lines that produced by the Lewis & ke Company, but I hear that the arrivals are more musical and e a stronger cast.

Romano's Theatre

The second film of "The Betty" been delighting large numbers people at Romano's theatre week. This series is comic and ood laugh-maker. In more seri-guise is "A Trip on a Trawler the White Sea." An excellent and an education in itself.

The Empress Theatre

The Redman's Honour" is a pow-l melodrama and was well de-ed in the middle of the week at Empress Theatre. A laughable edy relating to one McNabb, t me away feeling at peace with self and the world. Amateurs' ht is always worth attending at e Empress. Occasionally one ghs at the wrong time, but I know better way of spending an evening n in hearing the amateurs, and e Empress attracts about the best wd.

The Majestic Theatre

I like my cool, green Majestic. It a most excellent place to spend hour in the heat of the day. "The ttle Fiddle" films were distinctly od; melodrama was supplied by he Proenix," a really creditable play. There have been other pic-res, of course, but I am only eaking of those which happened to ike me the night I was there.

MOMUS.

The National Opera Company

The National Opera Company will ve two performances at the Vic-ria Theatre next Monday and Tues-y evenings, August 15th and 16th, esenting "The Bohemian Girl," alfe's standard grand opera, on onday evening, and Gilbert & Sulli-n's famous comic opera, "The Mi-do" on Tuesday evening.

The National Opera Company mes here with a reputation for ex-llence second to no company that s ever toured the Northwest. They ve been playing in Vancouver to rge and enthusiastic audiences for e past six weeks, presenting each era for an entire week. The com-ny is composed of several star eratic vocalists, head by Aida Hem-, prima donna soprano; Elva oix Seabrooke, contralto; James evens, baritone; Frank Preisch, sso; George Kunkle and Alf Sykes, medians, and a hoste of other well own operatic artists. The singing orus of the National Opera Com-ny is one of the best in the coun-, and unstinted praise has been corded the National Opera Com-ny by the press and public in ev-city in the Northwest. They yed for six weeks in Portland; ht weeks in Seattle, and made a r of Oregon and Washington and tish Columbia towns and cities.

Prices—50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50

The popularity of the two operas to be presented in Victoria will doubtless attract many admirers, for they contain many of the most popular airs ever written. Miss Hemm's rendition of "I Dreamed that I Dwelt in Marble Hall" is something long to be remembered. Mr. James Stevenes, a baritone with a magnificent voice, appears as Count Anheim in "The Bohemian Girl," and Pooh-Bah in "The Mikado"; Mr. Frank Preisch, as "Devilhoof," in "The Bohemian Girl," and the "Mikado" in the opera of that title; Miss Seabrooke will be the Queen in "The Bohemian Girl," and Katisha in "The Mikado." It is safe to say that no better cast of principals was ever seen in these operas before in the Northwest. Mr. Charles Couture, the tenor of the company, is a young and handsome leading man, with a splendid voice; he plays Thadius in "The Bohemian Girl," and the Wandering minstrel, Nanki-Poo in "The Mikado." The company bring their own orchestra, magnificent costumes for each opera, and a wealth of special scenery. The sale of seats began on Friday, Aug. 12.

New Grand Theatre

Always a big favorite as a star of minstrel organizations, Manual Romain, whose exquisitely sweet tenor voice has won him fame as a ballad singer, returns to the Grand next week in a musical oddity that eclipses all of his previous successes." Before and After the Ball." The sketch is in two scenes and affords Mr. Romain a splendid opportunity to show the qualities of his mellow voice. Mr. Mr. Romain is assisted in his present vehicle by Miss Sadye Palmer and Mr. Roxy LaRocco, the noted harpist from the Metropolitan orchestra, New York. Lovers of high class music will enjoy a real banquet of melody when Mr. Romain and his company appear next week.

Mlle. Olive, the dainty French juggling artiste, returns to the Northwest after an absence of several years during which time she has toured the entire world, apeparing in all the leading theatres and halls. She has added many novelties to her offering, which is the most brilliant and skillful novelty yet presented at The Grand. She presents a series of thrilling feats with wonderful dexterity and grace. In this era of feminine development of physique, when every college and seminary boasts of professorship of physical culture, it will be of interest to The Grand patrons to see one of the most perfect figures in the world.

The performance of Zerell Brothers, who come here Monday, consisting of the most difficult equilibristic feats imaginable, is accomplished in a manner that seems impossible. The artistic finish given each item is quite a revelation, being far away from the ordinary. This particular point gives these boys a high place among the athletic acts of modern times.

"The singing Lesson" is the title of a captivating musical divertisement that will be presented here by Will H. Maxwell and Daisy Dudley. The oddity is from the pen of Will H. Creasy, the noted playwright and contains amusing situations and bright dialogue. Miss Dudley and Mr. Maxwell are high class vocalists and the selections offered in this playlet are of a supreme order.

A duo of dainty artists are the Misses Bockman & Cross, who will be seen in a series of character songs and dances. These merry maidens have an offering far advanced from the beaten tract of the sister team. Their songs and dances are delightfully new and cleverly executed, and as for costume beauty, they are in a class by themselves.

The pictures and illustrating are also provided for next week's vaudeville entertainment here.

BON VIVANTS SAY "JOHNNIE WALKER AND WHITE ROCK"

Discernment in the matter of "Scotch" and mineral water is a recognized attribute of the bon vivant. It is well reflected in the preference for Kilmarnock and White Rock.

Unrivalled as a dilutant for Walker's Kilmarnock Scotch is White Rock Lithia Water, "the best cold bottle of hte day." A table water not only sparkling and palatable, but absolutely pure and of unapproached deliciousness. A trifle more expensive than the spurious imitations upon the market, but wise people prefer to pay the extra small price for White Rock Lithia on account of its undeniable purity and health-giving goodness.

Call for Kilmarnock Extra Special in the square bottle; this brand is 12 years old, aged in sherry wood and of unparalleled mellowness.

White Rock may be obtained in split size if desired. Your licensed grocer can supply you with Kilmarnock Scotch and White Rock. Insist upon having the genuine.

Margaret Anglin and Helena Richie

BY BOHEMIAN

On Monday night Margaret Anglin appeared at the Victoria Theatre in a dramatisation of Margaret Deland's novel, "The Awakening of Helena Richie." For ten years I have had a high opinion of Margaret Anglin and have always expected that she would take the highest rank among emotional actresses. After Monday night's performance I have my doubts. If she were not an actress from whom one had a right to expect so much it might be possible to say that she achieved a "success d'estime." As a matter of fact she walked through an insipid, morbid, illogical play in an accomplished manner, but without once touching the emotions of her audience or causing a thrill. This was probably due more to the hopelessness of the play than to any inefficiency on the part of the actress, and it becomes a greater wonder than ever how Miss Anglin was ever induced to take it up.

Twenty years ago, or it may be a little more, Margaret Deland, until then an unknown writer, wrote a novel entitled "The Quick and the Dead." It had many blemishes, being crude, ultra-sensational and, in places hysterical; but it had the saving grace of piquancy and it throbbed with passion. The authoress was at once launched on the sea of literary fame and attained a notoriety which she has never lost, although none of her subsequent works have possessed the real merit of her first bizarre production.

"The Awakening of Helena Richie" is a morbid, improbable and illogical book; false in its philosophy and false in its psychology. All the faults of the book are reproduced in the play, which is little more than a paraphrase, and not really a dramatisation. Whole pages of the book are lifted into the play and the plot is not altered in the least. Helena Richie has married unwisely and after submitting for years to the most brutal treatment, has left her husband, who leads a life of dissipation and is rapidly drinking himself to death. Meanwhile, she has met Lloyd Pryor, an attachment is formed and he visits Helena at the New England village of Old Chester, whenever he can get away from his business engagements in Philadelphia. When the play opens Helena is obviously infatuated, whilst he is just as obviously disillusioned, already beginning to tire of his toy and cautiously looking out for some avenue of escape. It would have been impossible for such a "bounder" as Eugene Ormonde made Pryor, to impose for a moment on any woman, much less on a refined gentlewoman like Helena Richie; and yet it was not till the third act that the dramatist allowed her to see through his specious devices and to denounce him. The impossibility of such a character attracting or holding Helena Richie marred the whole play, and destroyed whatever effect might have been produced by her supposed "sacrifice" in giving him up.

Both Margaret Deland and the dramatist would have us believe that the sacrifice was made as the result of a gradual awakening, brought about mainly through the influence of a little boy, some seven years old, known as David Allison. There have been instances both in novels and in real life where a child has been the means of changing the situation, but no such precocious little prig as David Alison with his "Buster Brown" hair and dress, and his scarcely concealed insolence to his elders could ever have been considered capable of exerting such an influence outside the pages of a dime novel, or a coloured supplement. If Helena Richie had to make a choice between the coarse "Sheenie," represented as Lloyd Pryor, and the "Infant terrible" featured as David Alison, the wonder is that she did not turn to the much milder alternative by means of which the romantic youth Sam Wright solved the problem by ending a life which was not worth living. From this it will be seen that the very motif of the play was incredible and false.

The clergyman, Dr. Lavender, admirably played by John R. Crauford, redeemed the play from absolute vulgarity by his careful and conscientious work, but even he was required to occupy a false position, and to expend his energy in working out an anti-climax. On learning the true condition of affairs between Helena and Pryor the Doctor concluded that she was not "a fit and proper person" to have charge of a young boy. On being taxed she admitted all that was necessary but told the Doctor that she had separated from her lover, had given him his final conge, and had made up her mind to devote herself to the care of the boy. This was her "sacrifice" and she made it at the moment when she had learned that her husband was dead, that there was now no bar to prevent her marriage with Pryor and that he was ready to marry her. Yet, it was considered necessary that she should stand another test and when the Doctor himself carried a letter, bearing the Philadelphia post-mark and the name of Pryor's firm on the envelope to Helena, he resolves that the requirements of the case will be met if she ignores the contents of the letter. She does this very completely by the simple expedient of tearing it up unread; wrereupon the dramatist makes the Doctor believe that Helena has passed through a fiery ordeal in such a manner as may convince him that she may be safely entrusted with the boy, and he hands him over to her in the next act. In this he ignores the fact that Helena had previously made every sacrifice possible, and the incident of the letter could add nothing of conclusiveness. It is on a par with an episode depicted in Margaret Deland's first book, "The Quick and the Dead," where the heroine is finally convinced that she really does love and is faithful to the memory of her dead husband because, when she finds the stub of one of his half-smoked cigars on the floor of his den, she cannot resist the impulse to hug and kiss it.

The incongruities of the book and the play, as pointed out above, are by no means confined to the principal characters. Apart from Dr. Lavender and Helena Richie no character was adequately represented. Indeed, the intent of the dramatist was clearly misunderstood; the prim New England characters were burlesqued, and no gentlewoman would ever have had such clowns in her employ as her servants were represented to be. The part of Sam Wright has a conceivable basis, because many a mature woman has had a boy lover, at any rate in the pages of fiction, but surely no woman of refinement would have tolerated such a hopeless youngster as Sam Wright was made to appear, nor would a youth of that type have blown his brains out for romantic considerations. Mr. Louis Nethersole, the manager, has certainly not been happy in his cast, for any air of probability which it might have been possible to import into the play was completely spoiled by the unsuitability of the actors and their entire misconception of its purport.

There can be but one conclusion and that is that Miss Anglin has made a huge mistake in lending her brilliant powers to a play which is lamentably devoid of merit; which ignores the probabilities; which takes a false view of human nature and of life; which betrays lamentable ignorance of the most elementary principles of psychology; and which in the fullest sense of the word is "not worth while."

I read an article recently on the life of Daniel Frohman, in which the author stated that Mr. Frohman's greatest difficulty was to get good plays. He keeps a staff of readers, never less than twenty, and they read and report, on an average, on two hundred plays a month. Nothing could carry stronger conviction of the truth of Mr. Frohman's statement than the fact that so brilliant an actress as Margaret Anglin has been driven to present the play under criticism. I am told that it is supposed to be a problem play, but, if so, then Margaret Deland and her dramatiser owe a thousand apologies to Oscar Wilde, Pinero, Haddon Chambers, Somerset Maugham and even Bernard Shaw, to say nothing of Ibsen, whose genius alone made this class of drama tolerable.

CORRESPONDENCE

Does Farming Pay

The Editor of The Week:

Sir,—It strikes me very forcibly that there is a wrong impression on the public mind concerning clergymen and farmers. When they send out men of broader minds for clergymen you would see how the Church would flourish. There are some grand exceptions, thank God, and there the Churches are filled. When men fail in everything else they send them farming to B. C., when it really needs hard-working men who can farm scientifically. Yours truly,

JAMES KNIGHT.

The "Sale" Question

That we never have "Special" or "Periodical" Sales is known by almost everyone. No doubt you often ask yourself "Why don't Weiler's have a sale?" Such a question we take great pleasure in answering, as follows:

There must be something wrong with the goods if they're claimed to be sold at "less than cost price," or else when you buy at the "regular price" you are paying a great deal more than the goods are worth. Is this not common logic?

Now, at this store, when our goods come in they're marked to sell at the lowest possible figure, and this figure at all times remains the same.

Every article in this store, every day in the year, is a true bargain, not the abused word "Bargain," but a bargain in the true sense of the word. It may not have a "Special Sale Tag" on it, but it's honestly worth what it is marked, and will give the buyer lasting satisfaction. We have one price, and that price is the same, whether you buy it to-morrow or next year. Giving "correct weight" all the time has made us hosts of friends in this community.

We are careful what we buy, as we must first invest our money in furniture, carpets, draperies, etc., and the further fact that we do not hold "Sales," we must exercise great care in selecting our merchandise, or lose.

Owing to the fact that we are authorities on decorative styles, and furniture periods causes some people to regard us as "high priced," but investigation will convince the most skeptical that we are the lowest priced store in the city when considering quality and price.

If you have not been in our store, make it a special point to do so soon. Come whether you are interested in buying anything or not. We want everyone to know that we are fully equipped to furnish anything from a small bungalow to a big mansion, and that we guarantee everything we sell.

During this month ESPECIALLY is it necessary for you to inspect our stock before you purchase a single article for your home.

ND-SHAKING

The French suggestion to abolish handking as a form of salutation rests upon ery logical basis, for with the French it uperfluous. But it does not follow that it were abolished in English-speaking ntries the result would be satisfactory. e Latin races have a monopoly of demtrative osculation, and enjoy it.

ONTANEOUS

In yesterday's Colonist the following raordinary paragraph appears: 'This eged demand for a tariff preference for nadian wheat did not originate in Cana, although, of course, if the British ople choose to give it, Canadians will lcome it. Our British friends cannot made to understand too plainly that people of Canada want them to do ctly what is best for themselves."

Will The Colonist kindly explain how reconciles this statement with the attile of Mr. Fielding at the Second Colal Conference in London, when he disctly stated that the Canadian people ked for some "quid pro quo," and he ld not guarantee the continuance of the eferential Tariff without reciprocity.

DEN-POWELL

Greeting to Lt. General Sir R. S. Bad-Powell, the hero of Mafeking and the ginator of the Boy Scouts Movement. Victoria has not made much fuss of the neral it is because it is realised that he ot a notoriety-monger and that demontion would be distasteful to him. His liant exploits in the South African will be recorded in the pages of his, but in its inception and development it is possible that he will attain even greater fame through the movement to which he has now put his hand. The one want of the Empire, especially in the Colonies, is enthusiasm for military service. This problem will be solved when Boy Scouts have been organised throughout its borders. On Saturday night the General will tell the public of Victoria all about this great work, and the Victoria Theatre, where he will speak, should be packed.

ASSASSINATION

It is useless to moralise on the assassination of Mayor Gaynor of New York. Every man who hopes for the moral regeneration of the race will pray that his life may be spared. Meanwhile, it is impossible not to be saddened by the reflection that the murderer's bullet seeks the best men, and lays low those who can least be spared. The culprit in the present case seems to be one of the most callous of all the men who have sought the life of a public servant. Apart from the inadequacy of the motive the non-chalance of his subsequent remarks, as published in the New York papers, would seem to indicate that he placed no value on human life. And this tendency seems to be increasing in the United States; it is a terrible reflection on American civilisation. Unless the evil can be grappled with much more effectually peaceable citizens will lose all sense of security.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR

Among the uplifting influences of the age must undoubtedly be classed The Christian Endeavour Society. It is an undenominational movement in which zealous Christians of all churches unite. The basis is neither creed nor theological dogma but a common desire to promote morality. In as far as the movement signifies lofty ideals and joint action it is worthy of the fullest support. It is a practical agency which believes in "doing," and does not satisfy itself with merely "saying." It is continually attracting adherents in every part of the civilised world, although its stronghold is on the American continent. There can be nothing but a hearty greeting and the right hand of fellowship for the Christian Endeavourers who have invaded Victoria this week, and who have assuredly done much to stimulate the movement among the local churches.

NOBLESSE OBLIGE

The Week has been asked to call attention to the conduct of a gentleman (sic), who made a nuisance of himself in connection with the arrangement of the tables at the Flower Show. In a totally unwarranted manner he undertook to defy the instructions of the Committee and insisted on his wife's table being placed in a certain position. He was not merely insistent, but offensive; going the length of shouting and stamping his foot at a lady member of the Committee who politely remonstrated with him. Her very sapient comment on the incident was "after seeing him in action, I can quite understand those nasty letters which he often writes to the daily papers." It is a pity that there was no police officer present to show him outside. There will be an added terror to the already sufficiently exacting duties of a Flower Show Committee if irascible, elderly gentlemen are to be allowed to "tag" on to their wives; and a repetition of the conduct complained of would necessitate an addition to the time-honoured notice "Children, dogs—and husbands—not admitted."

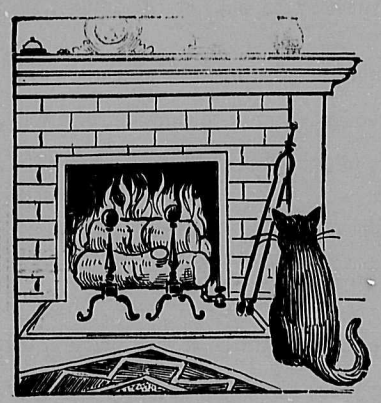
BOTH WAYS

It is a poor rule that does not work both ways. While the Dominion Postal authorities are hauling a local firm over the coals for an alleged infraction of the Postal Act, it may be as well to suggest that there is room for improvement in the Internal Administration of that important branch of the public service. For some unexplained reason it frequently happens that letters mailed in the street boxes are not delivered for several days, and test cases have proved that in some instances they do not reach the general office until the next day. Recently a notice of an important meeting reached the addressee while the meeting was in progress, although the notice had been mailed at the General Post-office twenty-four hours before, and actually bore the Post-office "time" stamp twenty hours prior to the meeting. This morning The Week is in receipt of a letter from a well-known old-timer, enclosing the head lines of the issue of The Week for July 23 and of the Toronto News for July 18; an accompanying letter states that these were delivered by the Postal authorities on Saturday last, Aug. 6th. The Week is not unmindful of the difficulties under which the Postal officials labour and is also aware that, owing to the miserable wages paid, most of the leading Post-offices of the Dominion are undermanned; but, it must be admitted that this is probably the most important department of the public service, and no consideration should be allowed to impair its efficiency. When such lapses as are pointed out above are of constant occurrence, it creates a doubt whether there is not a screw loose somewhere, and it behooves the responsible authorities to make a special effort to discover what is wrong and to restore public confidence by remedying it.

Many August Weddings Are on the Tapis

Therefore it is not amiss perhaps to say that the first essential towards good housekeeping is an up-to-date Gas Cooking Apparatus. The benedict-to-be should see that his bride will experience the joy of a stove that is always ready, an oven that is always right and a heat that can be regulated scientifically. Wisdom in this because it will save money, time and trouble.

A Gas Range means that one can cook any meal of the day, summer or winter, with ease and comfort. Let one of our men set up a Gas Stove or Range in your kitchen and you will find that you have the most modern and convenient cooking equipment of the age. The cost of its maintenance is far less than fuel for a coal range.



We would like all Victorian near-future-benedicts-to-be to call here at our new Salesroom on Yates Street, and inspect our unrivalled stock of Gas Ranges, Gas Stoves, Gas Radiators, Gas Water Heaters, etc. Every one warranted to be as we say or money refunded. We can sell a new Gas Cook Stove for $20, connected free. Easy payments if desired.

Victoria Tennis Tournament

As the Finals of the Victoria Tennis Tournament had not been played when the last issue of The Week went to press, I deferred my comments for a week. And since then the reports of Capt. Foulkes' brilliant play at Montreal and Toronto have come to hand, and lend an added interest to the doings of the Victoria champion.

Perhaps it would be as well to deal with Mr. Schwengers first, as all tennis talk at the Pacific Coast turns on his performances. Although he had a hard game with Cardinal there is little doubt that, taking the week through, Schwengers never played better tennis in his life. No man is always at his best, and in tennis, as in other games, even a crack often plays his best game against the strongest player, and sometimes comes within an ace of defeat at the hands of an inferior. Cardinal played a game which bothered Schwengers, he was particularly accurate in placing the ball down the side-lines, and his pace was so great that when Schwengers was playing at the net, he could not reach these returns. Yet, Schwengers is most dangerous at the net and may be counted on to kill every ball he reaches. Cardinal knew this and aimed at forcing Schwengers to play a base-line game. This the champion did in self-defence after he found that his opponent was passing him too frequently, and from that moment the issue of the game was never in doubt, because Schwengers can not only drive and place from the base-line, but can kill a ball as well with his over-head stroke. This is what he did. As long as Cardinal's returns were low and fast Schwengers drove them back, showing equal facility with his fore and back-hand stroke, and kept the ball low, but whenever it was high enough he killed it with an over-hand volley. I have no wish to depreciate the splendid game which Cardinal put up; he won a sett and gave the champion a good race all the way through, but, I do not think that he is really in the same class and, in my judgment, he is never likely to come as near to victory again.

When Schwengers met Tyler on Saturday in the Championship game there was a very different tale to tell. He played brilliantly from start to finish; scored on winning aces and made few errors; whilst, on the other hand, Tyler put at least half the balls either into the net or out of court. Schwengers' game was characterised by steadiness, resource and brilliancy; Tyler's was brilliant in spots but very erratic and, on the whole, weak. The score was a practical whitewash. No doubt, Tyler's explanation is quite correct; he is short of hard practice, and this makes all the difference when a man is up against such a strong player as Schwengers. These remarks naturally lead to a comparison between the local champion and the Dominion champion, Capt. Foulkes. The latter, although over forty years of age, is probably playing better than he ever played before, and when it is remembered that A. W. Gore held the championship of England for three years after he passed forty, there is no reason why Capt. Foulkes should begin to show deterioration. The way in which he beat such men as Greer and Sherwell in Montreal and Baird in Toronto makes him out to be a wonder; and knowing these players well, I cannot but conclude that in the captain Schwengers would find a foeman worthy of his steel. Having seen all the crack Canadian players during the past fifteen years, I maintain that Schwengers is the strongest of the bunch, and, if, as expected, he meets Capt. Foulkes on the Victoria courts in an exhibition game, I think that he will win. But the margin will be narrow, and it will be a battle of giants. I only hope that tennis enthusiasts may have the opportunity of witnessing this game before the present splendid weather breaks up.

Miss Marion Pitts fully maintained her high reputation; for when she met Miss Phillips she had a practical walk-over, although that lady had vanquished the best players in the Tournament, including Miss Violet Pooley. Miss Pitts plays a winning game; her activity and pace are surprising, and it is no disparagement of the Victoria and Vancouver lady players to say that there is not one who can give Miss Pitts a really hard game.

Everyone regretted that Miss Violet Pooley did not do herself justice, she came through all right in the Doubles, in partnership with Miss M. Pitts, but in the Singles was altogether off colour, and played much below her usual standard.

Of the visitors, Miss Allen, Miss Pearce and Cardinal, Gilliatt, Jukes and Ryall attracted attention. Of the local players Miss Phillips, Miss Haynes and Mrs. Langley were conspicuous; among the local men the best work was done by Marshall, Cambie, C. Schwengers, McRae and Dewdney, although the latter fell off after giving promise of a first class performance. Jack Rithet played a surprisingly good game, considering that he came onto the courts at the last moment without any practice, and I am satisfied that with a good partner and with preparation he is one of the best Doubles players we have. The most consistent play of the week was shown by McRae, who on points is undoubtedly the best Doubles player on the Coast. He is both steady and brilliant; his servi is one of the most difficult and th hard drive of his down the centre li is rarely returned.

The Tournament was a huge su cess. The only "kicker" was a ne comer and he will lose the habit if stays in Victoria. The Kootenay ve eran, W. H. Dickson, to whom t Committee entrusted the manageme of all the details, achieved a gre success. No fault can possibly found with his work, and the arrang ment is one which can be repeat with advantage.

I must not close without a ref ence to the official scorer, who ma his appearance at the Victoria cou for the first time, and added grea to the public interest in the gam If the Committee can see their w to furnish proper appliances the novation should become permanen

Messrs. Pooley, Luxton & Pooley, Victoria, B.C.

The above Company has acquired the right to prospect for, work and sell oil and gas on a tract of land situated at Muir Creek, near Sooke on the South-west coast of Vancouver Island, about 20 miles from Victoria. These rights extend over an area of 11,159 acres.

A well-known California oil expert, Mr. J. W. Frank, who is the Company's consulting engineer, has reported most favourably on this property as to its geological formations, and a contract has already been let to the Murray Drilling Company to prove the ground.

DRILLING OPERATIONS HAVE COMMENCED AND THE WELL IS NOW DOWN 250 FEET WITH MOST PROMISING INDICATIONS, SIMILAR TO THOSE FOUND IN THE PENNSYLVANIA OIL FIELDS

An issue of 30,000 shares of the Company's stock has been placed on the market for development purposes.

Application for shares made until further notice will give the shareholders an option to apply for three shares at par for every share now applied for after oil is found, and the shareholders will be at liberty to take up this option within thirty days after due notice has been given them by the Directors.
