Peace — at Our Price

THERE is a great deal of "peace talk" on the part of Germans in high places, but let us dismiss the idea that this may be regarded as a sign of grace. "When the devil was sick, the devil a saint would be." If the Hun is crying out for peace the fact is only symptomatic that the war has become unprofitable for the "War Lords." The moral for all really peace-loving people is that the bullies who provoked Armageddon must not be allowed to get out without making full reparation for the crime that they have committed. Hitherto the Germans have regarded the war as a high national destiny, as a means of advancement for themselves and for the spread of that particular brand of Teutonic Kultur which is supposed to excel all other civilizing influences. For the last fifty years war, to them, has been a matter of supreme policy. The idea started with the wars of conquest over Austria and Denmark, and culminated in the founding of the German Empire after France had been beaten to the dust in 1870. Now, after forty years, comes Armageddon, as the result of the most stupendous military preparation and political plotting the world has ever seen. It is the misfortune, not the fault, of the German machine that things have not worked out quite in the way of the elaborate plans of the Treitschkes and the Bernhardis and their political and military disciples. But we must judge the criminals by their actions and their intentions. What, in fact, they did was to provoke war with the fixed determination of establishing a German hegemony of Europe, in the first place, and as a means of attaining to world domination. The war for this purpose was to be conducted without ruth, and, if necessary, with all the accompaniments of "frightfulness." And as the Germans embarked on their murderous undertaking after careful preparation, it is not surprising that the venture promised a huge success. The war, in fact, was a victorious procession for the Hun—up to a point—and the Hun thoroughly enjoyed it. It was to the lot of the enemies of Germany that all the suffering fell. And the victims fell in quick succession: Belgium, Northern France, Poland, Serbia, Montenegro; and—not quite to the end of the chapter—but far enough to fill the Germans with high hopes of attaining a "German peace." Now, after two years, the tables have been turned. The agressor is on his defence. His armies everywhere are in danger of being invested by mightier hosts; his murderous weapons have been rendered harmless; his submarines are caught and sunk; his Zeppelin raiders are brought down at the rate of four a month (and the game is only beginning); his artillery is overtopped by the greater efficiency of the Allies, and he knows that the resources of his enemies are only in the course of development. All the world, in fact, knows by this time that the Hun is beaten, and that in due time he will be crushed. But that is just the part of the game that the Hun does not relish. It was all right for him while he was still winning; now that he sees loss staring him in the face he begins to whine for peace. Perhaps the most shameful part of the whole story of Germany's moral capitulation is the attempt of that clownish braggart—the Crown Prince—to appear as an advocate of peace. But the thing must go through. Mr. Lloyd George has spoken the mind of us all when he tells the world, through the mouth of an American interviewer, that the war must proceed to a "knockout" blow. We have a duty to perform. The Hun who appealed to the sword must perish by the sword. When he has paid the penalty of his crime we shall give him peace on terms which will be honourable to the Allied Nations.

The Cost of Living

UNDOUBTEDLY the question of the moment is the high cost of living, and the solution rests partly in the hands of the Federal Government, and partly in the hands of the Public. As long as the latter are supine the cost of living will continue to rise. As soon as there is any public sentiment on the subject, and not before, the Government will act. At present there is no such sentiment, and the reason is not far to seek. East of the Great Lakes, Canadian manufacturers are rolling up wealth and Canadian workmen are working full time and at high wages. In addition, for the first time in the history of Canada, women, boys and girls are making munitions and other War supplies, and adding to the family treasury. It is a case of "easy come easy go." The price of bread may be double, the price of meat, fish and sugar may go up 50 per cent or more, but as long as wages are high nobody cares. Between the Great Lakes and the Rockies, while there is less industrial prosperity, the enormous price of wheat has rendered the whole of the country prosperous. Here again the income is sufficiently high to render the people indifferent to the monthly diagram published at Ottawa which tells of the steadily rising barometer in the cost of living. West of the Rockies everything is different, there is no golden grain soaring towards $2 a bushel, and there are few manufacturing industries. The Real Estate boom is dead, nothing has taken its place; 32,000 men have gone to the War; the population of B. C. has fallen nearly 100,000 from the maximum; the average rate of wage is at least 25 per cent lower than the maximum, but the cost of living keeps going up every month, and is now 30 per cent higher than five years ago. How long can this continue? How long will it be before the population of the Province will be still further depleted? Nothing but British tenacity has kept our people here, and no one knows what the effort has cost, but with a prospect of at least two years more war, it is time to begin to think seriously, and the most serious subject is the cost of living, because it is possible to bring that down, while it is not possible, sensibly, to advance wages or incomes. Here is a problem which confronts not only the Federal, but the Provincial Government, and which far transcends in importance any other. It has not been faced; the Royal Commission which visited Victoria some months ago was a howling farce, bent on discovering nothing. Elsewhere some phases of the problem have been tackled by the people themselves, as in Calgary, where the women broke the fish "ring." They could easily break some of the "rings" in British Columbia if they made up their minds to do so, and The Week reiterates its opinion that individual action is necessary if anything is to be achieved. It further holds that unless the Federal Government wakes up to a realization of the general facts outlined above, it will not have a "Corporal's Guard" to support it West of the Great Lakes after the next General Election.

Labour for Farms

THE farmers of the Duncan district have long held very definite views on the subject of labour. They maintain that it is absurd to try to build up a farming community without a certain amount of cheap labour, and universal experience justifies their opinion. There is no country in the world which has made a success of farming without an abundance of help at a moderate cost. Holding these views it is not surprising that the Cowichan Creamery Association, which represents the majority of the farmers of the district, has gone on record in a series of resolutions as opposed to the wide-reaching and renewed exclusion orders which prohibit the entry of "artisans and labourers, skilled and unskilled," into the Province of British Columbia. As a matter of fact, the condition of the farmers is desperate; from the Cowichan district alone, which is purely agricultural, 1200 men have enlisted. This has drained the country, but it is not singular to this locality, because everywhere there is a shortage of white labour, especially unskilled, for the same reason. The mines are short, the lumber camps are short, indeed the latter could not be operated but for the Oriental labour available. The question may be a complicated one, but obviously it is no more possible for British Columbia farmers to increase agricultural production without labour than it was for the Egyptions to make bricks without straw. Apart from the financial interests of the farmers, the urgent necessity of the moment, increased food production, demands that every obstacle to this should be removed. The exclusion orders were never intended to apply to farm labour; they were aimed chiefly at artisans, who in boom times flocked in from the States. Certainly it never entered into the minds of the Federal Government that actual food production should be checked by their orders in Council. Just what policy may be necessary after the War is a matter which can be more profitably considered later, but there is no difference of opinion on the point that now every effort requires to be put forward to increase production, and all those efforts are handicapped through a lack of unskilled labour, which is so widespread and pronounced as almost to paralyze farming operations. From this standpoint the resolutions of the Cowichan Association deserve and should receive the most serious consideration of the Government.

Open the Doors

THE Conservatives of B. C., or at least a few of them, have held a family council in Vancouver and have decided that the time is not ripe for holding a Provincial Convention. They think that one may be held next year or the year after, or at any rate before a Federal Election, but that it would be premature to hold one now. The Week believes that this is all hopelessly wrong. It urged the Party to hold a Provincial Convention in January last and believes that if this had been done and certain action had been taken, the two Bye-Elections would have been saved. It urged it again immediately after the Bye-Elections and still maintains that the result would have been to save a considerable number of seats to the Party in the General Election. As soon as the General Election told its tale, The Week once more urged a Provincial Convention, in order to save the situation at the Federal Election, but again its pleading has fallen on deaf ears. Those who are responsible for this decision have lost touch with the public sentiment of the Province. This is proved by the fact that no Conservatives outside the strict Party organization were invited to the Vancouver Meeting, and also that the decision on such an important question as the Convention was decided practically by a Vancouver vote, which constituted the majority of those present. The Week mentions these facts to emphasize its contention that it is hopeless to expect to reorganize the party without consulting those who have been alienated by policies and legislative acts which are as foreign to their views as to Conservative principles. The Victoria Conservative Association has given a lead in this matter which could be followed with advantage by every Association in the Province. It has formed an advisory Board of prominent Conservatives who have not been identified at all with the Party organization, but who are willing to assist in rebuilding the Party. How badly their help is required is well known to all those in a position to appraise the influences which brought about the defeat in September. To shut ones eyes to these facts is fatuous, and if the Provincial Executive has any real desire to represent the wishes of the Party as a whole, it should certainly open its doors wide and welcome suggestions from every quarter. A Star Chamber session, consisting chiefly of defeated candidates and a discredited machine is not likely to have a reviving effect on the fortunes of the Party.

Editorial Notes

According to the Seattle Argus, which has always taken a keen interest in the "jitney" movement with an eye to regulating it in the public interest, with due consideration for other interests, the city of Portland has recently taken definite action which promises to relegate the "jitney" problem to the limbo of problems that have been solved. On and after November 15 "jitneys" in that city must have a franchise in order to do business. They will be required to operate on streets now occupied by street cars, and to serve districts not now having transportation facilities. A transfer system will be required, and a bond to guarantee perpetuation of service. In the opinion of The Argus this will put the Portland "jitneys" entirely out of business, unless they are permitted to charge a dime, which is as low as they can operate. But, on the other hand, if "jitneys" were allowed to operate as they have been doing, it would be only a question of time until all transportation would be ruined. Anyhow, says the Argus, the Portland council had the nerve to settle the question, which is more than the Seattle council has yet displayed.

The Colonist is to be congratulated on having come out flat-footed against War profiteering by Eastern Canadians. The Week has in preparation a list of firms with the dividends paid during the last two years. It is not aware that the Canadian Government has taken any portion of these fabulous profits except the ordinary Income Tax, which is a mere bagatelle. It looks as if we wanted a Lloyd George in Canada who is not afraid to do the only just thing in this connection. Sir Robert Borden little dreams of the harvest which he will reap some day if his Finance Minister does not take drastic action, and make it retrospective. There are thousands of people in the West who have worked hard all their lives, have lived honestly and frugally, and paid their way, and now for the first time, in consequence of War conditions, are unable to "make both ends meet." Moreover they have given their sons to the Empire, and are stinting themselves of the necessaries of life in order to save a few cents to buy wool for socks and to make a modest little contribution to half a score of War Funds. Yet while they are doing this, they read day by day of millions being piled up by Eastern manufacturers and contractors out of War contracts, and some Companies with Members of Parliament and even Knights on their directorate are drawing profits running to several hundred per cent on their investments. If this is not "blood money" the phrase was never justified, and if it does not have a day of reckoning, there is no such a thing as the logic of events. Surely, our god is not on a journey, he must be fast asleep, but he will have an awakening.

Everyone would be glad to see a moving picture industry established in the vicinity of Victoria. The Week has repeatedly advocated this, and believes that we possess all the climatic and other advantages necessary. For that reason, it is all the more desirable that any venture which is started should be well considered and should receive popular support. The Week knows nothing of the scheme which has been evolved by the Committee of which Mr. Frank Higgins is Chairman, except that the personnel of the committee is a guarantee that it is bound to be a practical business-like proposal. The Committee, however, should take the public a little more fully into its confidence, mainly because it seems to have become associated with a picture industry promoter who did not inspire any great amount of confidence by the business methods which he adopted when he first came to Victoria. Let the Committee tell the public all about it, and they may rest assured that there will be adequate support for any project which they may recommend.

The Daily Press announces that "Pastor" Russell is dead. On the principle of de mortuis nil nisi bonum, The Week will let it go at that, but begs to remind the police authorities that his disciples survive and that their anti-recruiting propaganda is being continued with undiminished vigour. Some of the apostles have been laid by the heels, and now that the High Priest has gone, it would seem as if the whole movement of the Bible Students' Association should be squelched in the interests of recruiting.

For Jack At Sea

THE WEEK directs special attention to the various movements on foot for the benefit of the British Sailors' Relief Fund. This Fund was started in England under the auspices of Lord Landsdowne and Lord Charles Beresford for the benefit of the dependents of men lost during the War, both in the Navy and in the Mercantile Marine. It is to feed, to clothe and to educate; and above all to make the sons sailors such as their fathers were. The Canadian Branch of the Fund was started in Montreal by Mr. G. K. Ross, President of the Harbour Commission, and is under the Patronage of the Duke of Connaught and Sir Robert Borden. The British Columbia Branch, authorized by them, is being conducted by the Navy League, with the assistance of a large committee of representative citizens; collections are being made in every part of the Province, and it is hoped that a large sum will be raised for the only appeal which has been made for sailors. The Rotary Club has generously come to the assistance of the Committee and has organized a splendid Sailors' Concert, to be given entirely by men of the various ships in port at the Royal Victoria Theatre on Thursday next. It has also undertaken the organization of an envelope collection, which has been sanctioned by the City Council and will extend from Friday, November 10, to Sunday, November 12. We may be hard up, we may have given every dollar we can afford, but we must squeeze a little more for JACK AT SEA. Victoria has always loved the sailor and honoured the Navy. No city is better posted on the magnificent services rendered by the Navy in this War. No city is more sensible of its own obligations in this respect, and The Week confidently counts on seeing a right royal response for this one gift which it is our privilege to make.

Social News

Society was well represented each day at the Arts and Crafts Exhibition held during last week in the four spacious rooms above the Union Bank Building. From early morning until late in the evening these artistic rooms were thronged with interested visitors. In the first two rooms were seen some beautiful studies in oils and water colours signed by some of our local and well-known artists which came in for a large share of admiration and comment. To the committee, Miss Crease, Miss Alexander, Miss Mills, Mr. Bamford and others, is credited the arduous work of arranging these rooms, which was no small matter, and greatly contributed to the success of the exhibition. In the "Gift Room," which was in charge of Mrs. Bridgman and Miss Finlayson, with several interested helpers, were valuable, useful and artistic gifts, all of which were donated, the proceeds to go to the "Sailors' Relief Fund." Needless to say generous prices were realized on these "gifts" for so worthy a cause. The "Craft Room," with Miss Mills in charge, proved a fascinating centre. Here there was on display some very beautiful pieces of real lace, hand painted covers, tea cloths, d'oyleys china, cushions, and miniatures, the latter by such well-known artists as Mrs. Dennis Harris, Mrs. Daniels and Miss Grace Rosher. A table set apart artistically draped in real lace and soft crepe, was a great attraction. On this was a display of exquisitely hand-wrought jerellery and cut precious stones, and made-up ornaments, pendants, necklaces, tiaras, bracelets, and brooches, all of which were designed and executed by Miss Alice Lisle (of the "Three Arts Club," London) who, with Miss Wollaston and Miss Beckton, were in evidence all the week. Perhaps the most interesting to all visitors was the "Returned Soldiers'" table with Private Moore, "Dad" of the 48th Battalion, a returned wounded soldier, in charge. Some beautifully fine wood-carved articles were shown, done by some of the returned Soldiers at the Military Convalescent Hospital at Esquimalt. A revolving book case to hold about 8 volumes was priced at $3.50 for duplicates of this. Private Moore received many orders, as well as for various shaped photograph frames, in one of which a splendid photograph of "My Colonel" (Colonel Willie Holmes) was proudly shown by Private Moore. Jewel boxes and a tiny carved set of Belgian furniture, "Dad's" own work, done during convalescence since his return, were also given a large share of admiration. Want of space prevents us from particularizing on this subject, but we hope every one will help these poor brave wounded men, who have suffered and fought for us. We can never, never repay them, but we can help a little by giving them lots of orders for these useful and dainty articles in the making of which they are perhaps helped in no small measure to fill in the tedious months of painful convalescence. A pretty feature was the tea-room, which was in charge of Mrs. Hose and Mrs. Philips, of Esquimalt, for the first two days, who were assisted in dispensing tea by Mrs. Izard, the Misses Storey, Pearson, Hudson, Jones, Belson, Bridgman and Leeder, realizing a goodly sum for the "Sailors' Relief Fund."

*

The Navy League Chapter, I.O.D.E., undertook the tea arrangements for the rest of the week, Mrs. Doig, regent of the chapter, and Mrs. Appleby were hostesses on Thursday. The room was charmingly arranged and the dainty tea-tables with softly shaded lighted candles, and bowls of lovely golden brown "Murns" and Autumn leaves, made a most artistic and cosy setting. Mrs. Thaw, Mrs. de Noe Walker, Mrs. Crompton, the Misses Grace and Isabel Monteith, Miss Buckingham, Miss Nora Lugrin and Miss Sylvia Appleby were the helpers during the afternoon. Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Edwardes, Mrs. Travis, Mrs. Guy Langton, Mrs. Sidney Child, directed the tea arrangements on Friday and Saturday afternoon, and were most ably assisted by the Misses Tobin, Donovan, Clayton, Prothers, Neames, Belson, Harvey, Innes, Lewis, Simpson, Rhodes, Cox and Rosenthal.

*

A most enjoyable time was spent by the members of the Babies' Aid Society, when Mrs. Stuart Robertson threw open her residence, "Straum," 1023 Belmont Avenue, for an attractive afternoon tea and musicale. Despite the inclement weather, many members braved the rain and responded to the invitation of their popular hostess. The rooms were beautifully decorated with the season's flowers, in the dining-room, the table being most effectively treated in gold and black, and the Halloe'en elements were successfully introduced in the Jack-o'-Lantern shades. Delicious refreshments were served in buffet fashion, by several young ladies, members of the society. An attractive programme of vocal selections was rendered by the following: Mrs. H. Briggs, Mrs. R. H. Pooley, Mrs. Paird, and Miss Misner, ably accompanied by Mrs. A. J. Gibson.

*

Miss Williams, of the Girls' Central School, announces that the drawing for the three water colors donated for the Belgian Relief Fund has taken place, and that the winning numbers are as follows: No. 44, first prize, "Foul Bay," by Mr. Donnell; No. 123, second prize, "Mount Douglas from Cordora Bay," by Miss Mills, and No. 26, third prize, "Deadman's Island off Esquimalt," by Miss Mills.

At The Street Corner

BY THE LOUNGER

I want to express once more my appreciation of the work of the Arts and Crafts Club, and especially of some of the really fine examples which they managed to collect for their recent exhibition. It is not often that Victorians have an opportunity of seeing as fine a picture as Arthur Burchett's "Bulwarks of England," which was exhibited in the Royal Academy sixteen years ago, to say nothing of Mrs. Beanland's "Blue Boy," also exhibited in the R. A. and her "Apple Blossom," which is an even better picture. Any of these works would find their way to the "line" in any art-loving country, and I must express my surprise that the Victoria Press has not made more of the fact that Mrs. Beanland is a Victoria woman, who has certainly brought "kudos" to her native city by her really splendid artistic work. Among other oils which impressed me were the remarkable landscapes by E. King and two unpretentious but impressive works by W. J. Huston, "Broom in Beaconhill" and "Forest Stream." Among the water colours were many real gems. The first place must be given to the high class work of Miss Mary Mason. Her most pleasing example is "Desdemona," but probably the most meritorious is the "Study of a Man's Head," which reveals a knowledge of technique only found in a perfect artist. A little gem by Miss Mason is "The Lake in Kew Gardens." There are two charming water colours by Miss Stikeman, "Ten-Mile Point" and "On the Spey." There is also a very beautiful study by M. L. Mills, "A Lake, Saltspring Island." I must confess to a liking for "Little Stonegate," by W. Boddy, and for "Hugh Tower," "Isles of Scilly," by M. L. W. Bridgeman. No exhibition of Water Colours in Victoria would be complete without a collection from the brush of our facile artist, Mr. Bamford. He has a large number in the recent Exhibition, of which I greatly admired "Little Qualicum Falls" and "Sproat Lake Falls." I am afraid my ability to criticize anything among the Crafts is decidedly limited, and I had better leave it to an abler pen, but I must chronicle my admiration for the very noble design of New Christ Church Cathedral, executed by Mr. J. C. M. Keith. This design was prepared some twenty years ago, and yet stands unapproached as a suggestion for the new Cathedral. I understand that it has been highly commended by such authorities as Sir Gilbert Scott and I hope that after the War our Church dignitaries will make a special effort to utilize it. My concluding comment on a most delightful exhibition is that private munificence or Governmental endowment should long ago have made it possible for Victoria to have a permanent Art Exhibition. We have the artists and the nucleus of an exhibit which would do credit to the Dominion.

*

I am afraid that the cry of "naughty boys" is almost as stale, flat and unprofitable as the cry of "wolf," and I am not going to weary my readers with any lengthy diatribe on the subject, but I wish it were possible to bring the matter home to those who are at any rate partially responsible. I attach no responsibility to the boys. I hold the view that no boy will behave properly unless he is either taught or made. In Victoria he is partially taught and not even partially compelled. Only a fortnight ago I had to complain of the intolerable rudeness of boys to school girls. This week I have been asked to say something about their disgraceful reception of a popular singer at the Royal Victoria Theatre last Sunday night. It goes without saying that the boys did not know any better, which only enforces my argument that it is some one's duty to teach them better. Rudeness in the home and in the street are bad enough, but rudeness in a public place which amounts to insulting a lady in the presence of an audience, should surely be impossible in a city claiming to be civilized. I wonder if amid the universal demand for Clubs, it is not possible to have a Boys' Club. Everybody else seems to be catered for in the Club Line, except boys, and I have known occasions when even Bishops condescended to devise special entertainments in order to keep the boys of their diocese out of mischief. The Bishop of London has been most effective along these lines, and is often followed by an army of street urchins, who treat him with the utmost deference, and hang on his slightest word. I am not sure that Bishops are available everywhere for this kind of work, but I am sure that it would be beginning at the right end, and it is time some one made a beginning.

*

Among the many War Funds which claim our attention and deserve our support, that for the Relief of the Jews in Russia is one of the most deserving. I am not aware that Victoria has yet contributed to this Fund, although there is a Canadian Branch which has already raised the handsome sum of $110,000. The need for assistance is increasing daily, and when we think of the magnificent efforts of our great Russian Ally in the War, we must, however hardly pressed in other quarters, reserve something for this Fund. Our neighbors south of the Line have set us a good example, and have been responsible for sending to the Russian Jews no less a sum than $6,000,000. The Fund has many zealous workers in Victoria, and intends to supplement its ordinary efforts by a Tag Day to be held next Friday. The Week bespeaks a generous contribution for the aid of our distressed Allies.

PANTAGES THEATRE

A most interesting and entertaining vaudeville programme will hold the boards at the Pantages next week, beginning with the Monday matinee.

Horelick's Dancers present an unusual novelty, a ballet divertissement entitled, "The Gypsy Camp," introducing some remarkable whirlwind and fancy dancing.

Santucci, the musical wizard, is making a hit with his repertoire of classical and popular numbers, which are proving very popular with the audiences all along the circuit.

Barry and Folford offer a singing number bringing back memories of the good old days of vaudeville and their idols; their offering is most enjoyable, especially for those who have seen the varieties of two scores of years back.

Frear, Baggett and Frear present a juggling novelty entitled, "Baseball Idiosyncrasies," while Howard and Fields Dining Car Minstrels offer a singing and comedy number that is a treat; the singing of the two minstrels is very enjoyable, and is repeatedly encored by the audience.

Shepp's comedy circus of highly trained cats, dogs, ponies and monkeys will contribute a feature that will be entertaining to old and young alike, and the comedy of the bill will be enhanced by another Charlie Chaplin film.

SOTTO VOCE

By the Hornet

That the County of Essex is noted chiefly for the importation of scrap aluminum from Germany.

*

That in a recent air raid many windows were broken as the result of suction, herein lies the resemblance to police court proceedings.

*

That though General Foch has passed the age limit, he is not to retire; he refuses to become one of the Old Fochs at home.

*

That the Bishop of Birmingham thinks that padded seats are great obstacles to religion, what about padded sermons.

*

That one dear old lady in Essex, hearing the cheers when the Zeppelin fell, expressed the fear that the Huns were introducing the Continental Sunday into England.

*

That the latest spelling of Hohenzollern is "Hunshollerin."

*

That the depreciation of Austrian money below that of Germany clearly shows that their finances are not quite up to the Mark.

*

That the fact that a famous author first suggested the idea of the Tanks is considered by the Germans sufficient justification for poisoning our Wells.

*

That in Johannesburg they encourage the natives to come to the popular dances by advertising "dress optional."

*

That the Fates are rather unkind to President Wilson in leading the Huns to sink the Marina at such an unpropitious moment.

*

That if the incident had not occurred until after November 7th, he might have seen the path of duty more clearly.

*

That as it is the ex-Judge is likely to score at the expense of the ex-Professor.

*

That the fine courtesy extended by President Wilson to the British Government in the matter of the submarines is no doubt a recognition of the services rendered by the British Navy to the American at Manila.

*

That judging from the Vancouver meeting, the leaders of the Conservative party are anxious to let the public know that though "cast down" it is not "destroyed."

*

That Mr. Brewster did the right thing in placing himself in the hands of his party, which promptly elected him leader.

*

That the public will be glad when they have heard the last of Gosden and J. T. Scott.

*

That the animated controversy about the Public Market conducted in the columns of the Daily Press should be an excellent advertisement.

*

That The Week has no sympathy with the people who are too proud these times to carry their own marketings home.

*

That nothing would have such a sensible effect in reducing the cost of living as for all small marketings to be carried home by the purchaser.

*

That up to the outbreak of War the most fashionable ladies in France did this with the assistance of their maids.

*

That the British Sailors' Relief Fund is making excellent progress, thanks to the enthusiasm of the many friends of "Jack of the Sea."

*

That if all the Western Dailies would line up as the Colonist has done, the Federal Government might be impressed with the fact that "charity begins at home."

*

That "Hornet" sees no reason to change his opinion that we shall not know the result of the Prohibition Referendum until the last vote is counted.

*

That it would be interesting to know what the Prohibitionists think of the fact that the Soldiers' Vote everywhere has gone against them.

*

That the "Sister Susie" Club is an admirable institution, which has made excellent progress in a short time.

*

That unfortunately the expected visit of Sir Ernest Shackleton to Victoria will not materialize, owing to an urgent call to Australia.
