An Appreciation Of The Late Rev. William Hogan's Work In The North

Written by Thomas Deasy, Indian Agent.

In the pages of Canadian history that will be handed down to coming generations there are few who have known the late Rev. William Hogan who will not look for an account of the work he accomplished among the aborigines of this coast. It has been well and truly said, that the missionaries of British Columbia occupy a unique position, living away from the centres of civilization and attending to the worldly and spiritual wants of thousands of Indians, scattered over the mainland and islands dotting the Pacific Ocean. A few of them have retired, with honours, and others are still laboring in the vineyard, seeking no other reward than the Master's.

The late Pastor was born in Dublin, Ireland, 62 years ago and graduated with the highest honors at Trinity College in his native city. Although his natural turn of mind was towards the army, he carried out the behests of his respected mother, and took up service in the church, in preference to the army. Hearing of the lack of missionaries in the British Columbia field, he volunteered and arrived in this province over twenty-one years ago, and was stationed at Metlakatla first, then at Massett, when there was but one other white man on the island. After caring for the spiritual wants of the Indians for a short time he removed to Port Essington and remained there almost a year, changing to Port Simpson where he took charge of the Anglican Church, and served there for ten years. Five years ago His Lordship, Bishop Du Vernet, requested Mr. Hogan to return to Massett, where he remained until the day of his death, and where he was instrumental in building a new church for the white residents, and had in preparation the construction of an edifice for the Indians.

He was not a man to sit down and take the comforts of life in an Indian villiage as though it was the last resort of the aged and infirm. With a constitution, unlike the majority of men, and a knowledge of the world that few possessed, he went outside the limits of the reservation and carried the Gospel among the white settlers of the North. During twenty-one years of missionary work he travelled far and near, using a small boat when no other means of communication was to hand, and rowing thirty miles a day to preach and teach to the lonely pre-emptor and his family. Sunday after Sunday, he walked from the Indian Reserve to New Massett and held divine service. During the fishing season he would travel to the canneries and fishing camps. At other times, his stentorian voice was heard in public meetings upholding the flag of his country and breathing the spirit of patriotism that has made the Briton both honoured and feared throughout the world. With the real Irish brogue, spoken so pleasantly by the sons of Erin, "Father Hogan" was sought for in the entertainments to recite from his large store of poems the "deeds of old," performed by the hardy sons of England, Ireland and Scotland. With memory's storehouse filled, the rich, raey tales of Briton's prowess by land and sea, his delivery was in tones that betokened an exceptional delineator of histronic legendry lore. In the pulpit, where he often allowed his feelings to overcome his caution, many of his hearers feared that the wreck of his standing room would be the result of his enthusiasm. Standing six feet three, with a form weighing almost three hundred pounds, and a voice that could be heard from one end of the largest room to the other, there was no denying him the floor when he stood up in a public assemblage. With a grip that meant a partial paralysis of the hand of one who accepted his greeting, the warmth of heart behind the hand-shake, brought forth a most humble apology—after the harm had been done. Duty—first, last and all the time—was his motto, and those who knew that the result of his arduous labors was telling on the "Lion of the North," were met by the assurance that he had never missed a Sunday service, no matter what weather intervened, and that he would continue in the work of the Lord to the end. Little his friends thought that the dread disease that was carrying off so many of his native proteges, would fasten on

WODEN

The many friends of Elder T. H. Watson are very sorry to learn that he is still suffering from an affection in his side and all join in wishing him a speedy recovery.

Mr. Gordon Campbell is preparing to build a handsome log bungalow on his pre-emption. Reas Dill had the contract for delivering the logs, which he did in short order.

When a pre-emptor, while packing, tears his pack and scatters oatmeal from the Woden to Echo Lake, we come to the natural conclusion that he first supped his parritch in the neighbourhood of Aberdeen, which leads us to the query: Who spilled the split peas?

Mr. Henry Holland has returned from Queenstown and joined the Woden packers.

Martin S. McDougall is busy improving the waterfront property of Elder Watson, and as the forest disappears and the buildings which were concealed show up, Woden resembles another young town, as seen from the inlet.

A curious incident which has a direct bearing on the pioneer life of this island, occurred a few days ago when Roy Hazelton, accompanied by his assistant, proceeded to his pre-emption in the wilderness for the purpose of erecting a log house. As they worked on in the stillness until the noon hour, there surprise can be imagined when a soft and pleasant female voice shouted: "Come on boys, dinner is ready." And the fact that the following day there were two lady cooks to attend the hungry workers should encourage bachelors to build on their pre-emptions. Your correspondent can vouch for this as he was the assistant.

NADU

Mr. Love, who recently arrived here along with his father and mother, brought in a quantity of lumber to complete his residence. Mr. and Mrs. Love are delighted with the district.

Enoch Rice has opened a boot-making shop and is now open to receive orders.

Postmaster Alex. Johnson has just completed an addition to his residence which will be used exclusively as a post office. The mail is now delivered by the carrier from Massett on boat days.

The funeral of the late Rev. William Hogan took place last Thursday afternoon and was largely attended. The new fishery cruiser Malaspina, Capt in Newcombe, arrived at Old Massett in the forenoon from Prince Rupert, bringing over Miss May Hogan, Bishop Du Vernet, Rev. W. E. Collison, Mr. McIntosh and Captain McCroskie. The Indian brass band and the Boy Scouts were also in attendance.

Mr. Edward Evans is doing fine work with his new Herculean stump puller, but the recent snow has delayed the work somewhat.

that robust frame and place him on a bed of sickness, from which he did not rise again. Within one month from the attack of illness he passed away, and the countenance so well known in the North will no longer be seen in the pulpit, and the voice that was always raised in protest against wrong, will no longer be heard in the churches of the diocese.

The Indians of the Queen Charlotte Islands will miss their respected pastor even more so than the white communicants. He resided among them, declining to change his place of abode, although requested to do by his white congregation. He lived and died among the children who required his services, and with whom he spent the days and nights of his middle-age and declining years. At his earnest request the body was laid to rest in the south-east corner of the Massett Reserve cemetery, close to the sound of the sad sea waves, and within a few feet of the inlet, on which he spent a great deal of time journeying from one settlement to the other.

Twenty-one years, without a break in ministerial work, the deceased pastor struggled to uplift those entrusted to his care. It was the delight of all visitors to Massett to inspect the rectory grounds and view the garden in which he spent many days of the year. With his esteemed and beloved wife, the deceased had a welcome for high and low, rich and poor, and all were impressed with the hearty welcome accorded at the Rectory.

Realizing that he was passing away, he called around him many of his parishioners and informed them that he had done his "level best," during the years that he ministered to them, and was prepared for the journey to that bourne where so many of his flock had preceded him. The following lines, which he used in many of his discourses, may well be applied to the late Mr. Hogan:

When you've done your work as well as you can
And your past is clean and your conscience clear,
When you know that you haven't wronged any man,
When you've made no foe to be faced with fear,
The busy world may be still inclined
To deny rewards you have longed to claim,
But it cannot rob you of peace of mind
Or bring to your cheeks the blush of shame.
And the world, however it may connive
To keep you down and hold you back,
Must respect the hopes that you keep alive,
Though its praise may be for the gifts you lack,
And the scorn on the lips of the richest man
Is not a thing you have cause to fear,
When you've done your work as well as you can
And your past is clean and your conscience clear.

Wonderful Progress Along The East Coast

C. M. Adam Returns From Trip to Queen Charlotte City and is Greatly Surprised to Find Such Rapid Development During Past Few Years.

Mr. C. M. Adam, of Graham Centre, who returned recently from a trip to the southern part of the island, was very much impressed with the large amount of development work which has taken place there since his last visit, over four years ago and has the following to say regarding same:

At Tl-el River, Mr. Turney is to be congratulated upon the excellent showing he has made in the short space of time he has been there, and considering the difficulties he has worked under, Mr. Turney has one of the most complete farm-yards on the island. It includes horses, cows, pigs, poultry, rabbits and pheasants, the last named doing very well under Mrs. Turney's careful attention, and she should be proud of having the first pheasantry on the island.

Our old friend Mrs. Hodges and her son have a very fine location on the river and have already large paddocks of natural pasture all fenced, as well as a large stock barn and dwelling-house, not to mention the fine herd of dairy cattle, horses and poultry.

Messrs. Walsh, on the old "Mexican Tom" ranch, have certainly made an excellent stock proposition of the property. They have large areas of pasture all fenced in and a large modern stock barn well filled with hay. Their herd of cattle has come through the winter well and will have a large num- of beef cattle fit for market in a few months.

Messrs. Cooke, Ray, Greenstreet and Aspenwall are all busy on their respective locations, improving their buildings and executing small repairs.

At Lawn Hill, Mr. Wm. Duncan has quite a clearing, as well as a commodious barn in which he houses his numerous live stock. Mr. Duncan has been particularly successful raising oats and barley and is enthusiastic over the island's possibilities as to the growing of grain.

Mr. Scharffee has a commodious hotel at Lawn Hill, where weary travellers are well looked after by Mrs. Scharffee. The proprietor is a busy man, and besides the hotel runs a general store, as well as being postmaster, and needless to say does well in every position.

After Lawn Hill is reached there are numerous ranches in the making every half mile, and it is interesting to note the optimistic strain everyone talks in upon interrogation by a stranger.

There are several locations on which a large amount of work has been done, but notably that of Mr. Brown's being the best in the district.

A few miles further and the wireless station is reached, at what is known as Dead Tree Point. Here is located Canada's furthest west wireless station, which is operated by Mr. Hillier. The location is a very pretty one. The grounds are neat and tidy and the buildings in keeping with the other stations of the Dominion Government on the Pacific Coast.

At Hydah, Mr. W. J. Leary has a very fine location, and as well as being postmaster, has a general store, in which he carries a very complete stock. His exhibits at the Prince Rupert exhibition carried off a large number of first prizes, a testimony of the productiveness of the soil of that district.

At Skidegate the B. C. Fisheries have improved and added to the oilworks, giving this settlement quite a business look with their freshly painted buildings. The B. C. Fisheries have also a large plant across the inlet at Aliford Bay, and it is expected that operations will be resumed before long.

Mrs. Fraser is proprietrix of the Skidegate hotel, which to the weary travellers of years gone by, used to be an old haven of rest, and we are glad to say that it is still so under Mrs. Fraser's careful management.

At Queen Charlotte City a large amount of development has taken place and the numerous stores, workshops and residences give the "city" quite a metropolitan appearance.

Mr. W. J. Smith is proprietor of the Hotel Premier, and anyone in search of a fine quiet holiday could not do better than pay this popular hostelry a visit.

Postmaster Geo. D. Beattie is proprietor of the Queen Charlotte Department Drug Store, which is as up-to-date as any to be found in the province. Mr. Beattie has a large and varied stock of goods, suitable to the needs of the islanders, and the large business he does is well deserved.

Queen Charlotte has other stores conducted by Messrs. Cochrane, Sachs and Barge, who all do a thriving business.

The development of the last four years on the east and south end of Graham Island has been extensive, and to one who has been away that time, has to be seen to be appreciated. Considering that the whole of this country was a virgin forest four years ago, and today we find the thriving settlements of Tl-el, Lawn Hill, Hydah and Queen Charlotte City, all having areas of cleared land which is producing wonderfully. The pioneers of the above mentioned districts are to be congratulated upon the zeal and earnestness in which they have done their work, and we feel that the reward which is due to them will be more felt as the years roll on.

Successful Band Concert At Skidegate

The Skidegate Concert Band, under the leadership of Mr. A. Solomon, gave a very successful concert on Friday, Jan. 23rd. The hall was tastefully decorated with evergreens and bunting and the large audience listened attentively to the first three items on the programme, which were rendered by the band in a very praiseworthy manner. Miss Mabel Crosby then gave a recitation, "The Lost Chord," in a most creditable manner, and the applause she received was well merited. Mr. H. Green followed with an illustrated song, "Break the news to Mother," which was well rendered. Mrs. Wesley then gave a very fine rendering of "Just next door," which the audience applauded very warmly. The event of the evening, which seemed to be appreciated very much by the Indian audience, was "Pochahontas." Miss Crosby acted the part of the heroine with excellent taste, and Mr. Jones played the part of the hero with admirable precision. Mrs. Crosby gave a very excellent rendering of "If this rose told you all it knows," and had to respond to an encore. Messrs. Solomon, Green, Watson and Moodey gave "Good Old Jeff" in costume, and the applause they got was well merited. "Arizona Joe," partner and Chink, gave a very clever sketch, which in itself was well worth seeing. A very fine solo was given by Mrs. Gladstone, "Some day I'll wander back again," and the pleasing manner in which she rendered this fine song brought forth a volume of applause which she richly deserved. The "darkey" quartette brough up the rear with "Camp Town Race, which they gave in true southern style and well deserved the encore, which they responded to promptly.

Mr. H. E. Green thanked the white people and Indians for their presence there that evening, and announced that a dance would follow and any who cared to stay would be made welcome.

A large number availed themselves of the invitation and the band, conducted by Mr. Solomon, dispersed first-class music. Dancing was kept up until 2.30 a.m., when supper was served in good style and thoroughly enjoyed. Before leaving everyone present expressed themselves as having enjoyed the evening thoroughly, and a great deal of the credit is due to Mr. Solomon for his untiring efforts in bringing the artistes to such a state of perfection.
