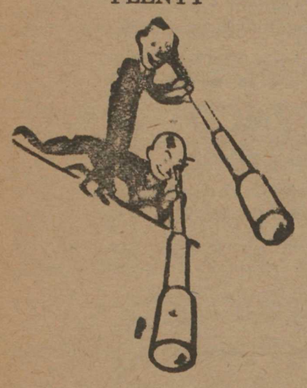
LOOKING IT OVER

AND OVERLOOKING PLENTY



And then there was the man who was late at his own wedding; yes, but not late enough.

Seen On The Street

One of the coming generation, looking for beer bottles.

Mr. W. A. McKenzie, seemingly at peace with the world.

Perley Russell, banking the profits.

Ted Cook, about to make a withdrawal.

Leaping Lena, with an Alberta air, going into winter quarters.

Charlie Moy, not looking any the worse for the depression.

Mr. Bill Lucas, saying "I told you so."

Bill Garrison, slightly hoarse.

In Police Court

Railway Act

Two transients who were taken off an incoming train by Princeton provincial police were in consequence of being charged under the Railway Act, sentenced to three days in jail, or payment of a $1.00 fine. They accepted the hospitality of the King's hotel.

Vagrancy

A transient who was taken in charge by Princeton provincial police was charged under section 238a of the Criminal Code (vagrancy) and given the option of a 1.00 fine or in default three days in jail. He failed to punctuate the sentence.

Two companions, with Anderson at the time of his arrest, will appear shortly before the local magistrate on a charge of vagrancy.

They gave their names as John McDonough and William Walsh.

"The Romance of the Bible" was the topic of an interesting illustrated lecture in St. Paul's United Church Wednesday night, by Mr. N. A. Harkness of the Bible Society. There was a good attendance.

The barometer is higher than for many days, and is steadily rising. The promised good weather may be at hand.

LOST, STRAYED or STOLEN

One pet Ethiopian poodle, answering—sometimes—to the name of Sylvester. Disposition: mild; and has all the earmarks of a good workman but, Lord, what a disappearing act he has. Anyone knowing of his whereabouts please tie a string around him and hold him till we catch up and get this wiring finished, so that we may be spared the heat o' hades, on account of cussin'.

63 NAMES ADDED TO VOTERS' LIST HERE

Sixty-three names were added to the voters' list at the final court of revision held in the court house on Tuesday, 19th September, with Government agent L. A. Dodd as judge of the court of revision. This was the expected final rush to get on the list before the approaching election in November.

The voter's list is now in process of printing.

HAMILTONS HARRIS, DRAW 25 MONTHS

Condemning Evidence By Police and Miss McKay

THE five brothers Hamilton and John Harris, were each sentenced to 25 months in prison for being in possession of goods stolen from the Blakeburn store of the Coalmont Collieries, Ltd, last November. Sentence was passed by Mr. Justice W. A. McDonald at the conclusion of the Vernon assizes, at which the men were found guilty by a petit jury.

Damaging evidence was presented by the Crown, with the result that the jury conferred only a few minutes before returning a verdict of guilty.

Arrest of the Hamilton brothers—John, Roy, Thomas, Ernest and Wilbert—followed the search by provincial police of a cabin at Tulameen where they and Harris lived.

The clue was obtained through observations made by police during a former search, result of which some of the men served a jail sentence for the theft of goods about last Christmas from the cabin of Thomas Walling-ton, prospector. The Blakeburn store was burglarized on 14th November last.

Miss Mary McKay, manager of the store, gave evidence as to the burglary. She said that work boots, gloves, sox, overalls, tobacco and similar articles formed the bulk of the stolen goods.

Provincial Constable F. G. Hatherill identified a large quantity of goods as those he had found in the Hamilton cabin, and these in turn were identified by Miss McKay as a portion of the stolen stock.

Mr. R. R. Earle, K. C., who appeared for the accused men, attempted at the outset to have the men tried separately, but the presiding justice disallowed the point.

No defense evidence was entered by Mr. Earle except by shrewd cross examination, and in his address to the jury.

To a statement made to the police by the Hamilton brothers that they had purchased the stolen goods in Vancouver in the spring of 1932 the Crown replied with the evidence of John Paul, travelling salesman for a well known rubber company, in which he stated that boots that the Hamiltons said they had purchased in the spring, were not on the market until the fall of the year.

In summing up, Mr. Earle argued that there had not been positive identification of any of the articles found in the Hamiltons' cabin, against which the prosecution attorney pointed to the unusual presence of such a collection of articles, all of which corresponded to those stolen from the Blakeburn store.

Mr. Earle said that Miss McKay was the smartest witness he had ever encountered on the stand.

Harris, His Lordship pointed out, explained that his purchases had been made in Vancouver in the fall, and not in the spring, as the Hamiltons stated.

EVANS GIVEN SHORT TERM

A sentence of one year's imprisonment was meted out to Arthur Evans, agitator, at Vernon assizes, for adjudged violation of section 98 of the Criminal Code of Canada. Evans was found guilty byalayman's jury of having, from Princeton platforms, incited citizens to use of violence to overthrow Canadian laws.

"It was difficult for me to tell which was the best course o pursue" said Mr. Justice W. A. MacDonald, in passing sentence, and commenting on the widely discussed case. He said that the decision as to sentence had been a matter of considerable concern to him.

"I am not generally in favor of long sentences, and I hope that leniency may be appreciated in this case," he said.

His Worship intimated that he had been besieged by the usual number of letters and telegrams from Evans' sympathizers many of them insolent and threatening.

He said that he had not been influenced by these either in one direction or the other. The natural response to any attempt to tamper with the machine of justice, he said, would be an increasingly long sentence, but he had paid no attention whatever to the threats.

Was This A Racket?

Some Theorizing On The Bear Case, With H. R. Horseflesh Shirtless Holmes

WHEN Edward J. Fitzgerald, book keeper at the Princeton Brewery, calmy took charge of a man who, at 4 a.m. had broken into the Brewery, did he simply stop the intruder—as the latter insisted—from having a quiet bottle of beer? Or did he intercept a cute little racket?

The point has been raised in discussing the incident with a man well acquainted with the Brewery and its methods.

In the first place, the observer gives a lot of credit to the cool and plucky "pen-pusher"—who is anything bu fragile as the occupation may suggest. He was complete master of the situation.

Disappearance of beer was not a new thing; in fact it is hinted that it had been going on for some time—in quantities large enough to be noticeable. The pilfering attracted the more attention the longer it continued. Early last week the plant brewed. In bottling a large number of car ons were left in the beer-room. They were counted. The following morning a check-up revealed that ten dozen were gone. The employeees began to look askance at each other. There are less tempting quarries for those who have easy access. It was suggested—and agreed—that the book-keeper who roomed in a house nearby, sleep in a small room off the beer room for a period, in hopes of settling the matter.

The very first night, he was disturbed. He flooded the place with light. He completely surprised his man, and had him subdued. He ordered the man to a corner covering him with a gun, and ordered him to lie down. "One move and I'll plug you!"—in a voice that must have been grimly realistic for it was abjectly obeyed to the letter

After the police arrived in response to a telephone call—the captured man was still lying prostrate in the corner; nor did he take the word of the officer that he might rise. He waited for the order from his cool, menacing captor.

KNEW THE SURROUNDINGS

Mr. Fitzgerald observed that the man on entering went straight to the place where the beer was kept. He used a very small flashlight,

HON. W. A. McKENZIE VISITOR TO PRINCETON

W. A. Mc KENZIE, member for the Similkameen, who, after declining the nomination previously, announced last week that he would again be a candidate for election visited his part of his constituency this week, and spent a few days among his supporters, no doubt making preliminary arrangements for his campaign, although no public announcement has been made concerning such plans.

Telling The World About Us

Broadcast Over Station KHQ Tuesday Drew Much Comment

SIMILKAMEEN went on the air on Tuesday. An interesting review was broadcast from Station KHQ in Spokane, under the auspices of the Davenport Hotel's "Northwest on Parade" series.

The historical background was supported by a brief informative summary, describing the location, tourist attractions, transportation facilities, natural resources, climate, and industries.

The broadcast will be published in detail.

The announcing honors were done by Mr. Elston Wykoff. Except for one or two minor inaccuracies, the review was well handled. Princeton was unable to send a delgation to Spokane, but the publicity obtained was decidedly beneficial to the district, and the Similkameen is grateful to KHQ, Mr. Wykoff, and Mr. Davenport. It is hoped that at some future date another broadcast can be arranged.

There was some local disappointment over the changing of the time from the originally set hour but after all the review was not intended so much for Princeton as for the outside world, who no doubt escaped the confusion.

CLOTHES THIEF IS PICKED UP

ARRESTED by Princeton provincial police on information from Penticton, Fay Anderson was returned to the South Okanagan town under escort, on a charge of theft.

Anderson is alleged to have taken clothing from a clothes line in Penticton. He was selling novelties, and was picked up in the "jungle" at Princeton.

Before the magistrate in Penticton, Anderson was found guilty and sentenced to ten days in jail.

TOBACCO IS SOURCE OF DISCONTENT

Peace Restored After Thirty Odd Men Leave Camp

TROUBLE again developed at the Princeton Airport relief camp last week, but was ironed out after some thirty men had left the camp.

The issue centered around the tobacco ration.

It is explained that the tobacco ration is a legacy from the provincial system. When the federal government took over the relief camps a few months back, it was a debatable point whether it would continue the tobacco issue or adopt the straight army ration, which allows 31 cents a day for the accomodation of each man. It was decided to continue the tobacco issue, but to deduct it from the food allowance. The item was 2½ cents a day. The tobacco issue was popular with the men, but there have been recurrent complaints about food. This month the department decided to discontinue the tobacco, and utilize the full food allowance. The privilege was given the men of buying the tobacco at the government stipend, which is something like half the retail price.

Immediately at the Princeton camp there was a protest, the men feeling that they had been deprived of something, whereas the government took the view that it was merely an accomodation and an exchange.

The upshot was the customary "strike."

It was of short duration, the authorities arranging a compromise. The tobacco issue is retained, but is reduced from three to two packages weekly. The saving is applied to the food About thirty men left the camp, but the incident was peaceable.

AIRPORT CAMP TO CLOSE SEPT. 30

PRINCETON Federal Airport camp will close at the end of September. Preparations are now being made for the transfer of the men to other camps.

The construction program has been completed and a splendid emergency landing field has been prepared, under the Federal government's combined program of relief and landing field construction.

The camp was opened last December. At the peak it accomodated about 170 men. The enrollment now is less than 100.

The camp was formerly under Foreman D. McN. Lowe, and latterly under Major Griffiths.

A few men will be left behind to clean up what little work remains.

Political Enigma

PREMIER S. F. TOLMIE

PASSIVE KINGPIN in the most unusual election situation in British Columbia's history. Leader of a government that took office under the most happy auspices, and with one of the largest majorities in provincial history, but has drifted on, past its normal term, deserted by more than half its cabinet, and divorced by the party that sponsored it. Dr. Tolmie vigorously maintains that he still has a government, and will seek re-election on its record; but apparently the only originals left are himself and his right hand man, Attorney-General Fooley. The only two other devotees are two ministers who have not been elected and represent no constituency.

With only 15 days left, despite an awowal to contest every seat, Dr. Tolmie has only four candidates in the field.

LEGION HAS NEW HOME

EX-SERVICE MEN of Princeton have taken a new lease on life. Their new quarters are nearing completion, and they are very much like schoolboys with a new teacher. They say, and with a good deal of justification, that they will soon have accomodation the equal of any organization in British Columbia.

Final contracts have been let for the painting, decorating, excavating heating and carpenter work and they are certainly doing themselves well.

They have leased the old Princeton Coal and Land Company office. They have been materially assisted by the co-operation of Mr. P. W. Gregory of the company, and by donations by Magistrate Percy E. Rowlands, an ex-president, and Mr. A. E. Howse.

The new quarters, which, appropriately enough front the Cenotaph memorial to fallen comrades. It is large and roomy, and provides ample accomodation not only for regular business and entertainment, but also for any special functions.

There is the additional accomodation of licensed premises, which is expected to take care of the financing.

Volunteer labor has come forward to take care of the improvement of the grounds and other matters not covered by contract. The premises will be opened shortly.

Snow Fell Here On Tuesday

Backward Weather Ended In Strange Way—Fine Days Are Promised

SIMILKAMEEN folk who are heavy sleepers might easily have been excused had they, on awakening Tuesday morning, drowsily but enthusiastically shouted "Merry Christmas!"

Actually, they were just two months less one day ahead of time. But the symptoms were there.

A coating of snow proved that there was method in the madness of the weather man in serving up a week of unseasonably cold weather.

It has been the poorest September in years, with very little of that bright sunshine and those mellow moonlit nihgts that make September traditionally one of the finest months of the Similkameen's weather calendar.

It may mean a break in the the weather, and that we will now have a month of belated Indian Summer.

HEENEY ASKS FOR HONEST POLITICS

What a hope!

Independent Candidate Outlines Policy At Keremeos Meeting

EFFICIENT representation in the interests of the people was the promise made by Captain Thomas Heeney of Hedley who terms himself "Similkameen's real independent candidate", in opening his campaign at Keremeos Thursday last.

Capt. Heeney promised to be the ideal representative, a servant of the people.

He was greeted by a large audience.

Capt. Heeney summarized his attitude as follows:

"I shall be a real representative in every sense of the word. I shall, as well as being your representative in the legislature be your representative and contact in matters concerning your business and organizations. I promise that you shall see me often; not once in every four or five years, and especially about election time.

I promise you that I shall take a personal interest in your affairs in farming. I shall interest myself through the production period, until the products are marketed; and in your home life on the farm.

I shall concern myself, and will take a personal interest in, all the branches of agriculture—familiarize myself, as your representative, in order that I may be posted on conditions. I will, as I have said, give you my personal assistance in your organizations, helping you in matters of marketing in its many phases; also in transportation. I promise you I shall be a regular visitor to all plants and industries, assisting personally, if I can, as well as in my capacity as your representative.

"I promise to be your liason officer, keeping contact between all classes of business and industries; also keeping touch with all classes of industrial labor; seeing the conditions under which you are working; hearing your troubles and difficulties in a kindly and sympathetic manner; assisting in the co-operation of all classes of industrial life, and encouraging the spirit of co-operation between industries and public utilities.

"For, in order that we may have success, there must be co-operation in industry, for the success of one depends on the success of the other"

NO MORE PARTY POLITICS EXTRAVAGANCE

Mr. Heeney said that he was categorically opposed to party politics, which, he claimed, had in the past twenty years, dragged over the province an intolerable burden of debt. Borrowing, in face of a debt that required interest payments of thirty millions annually in interest payments, oppressing the taxpayer, and givnig nothing in return.

The speaker proposed a more equal distribution of relief.

His platform follows:

"Agriculture—We must put the agriculture industry and its many branches on a paying basis if we hope to have prosperity. Upon the fate of agriculture hangs the fate of civilization. When agriculture is prosperous the factories are busy and labor is fully employed. Steady employment of labor, and good pay makes for good times.

"Transportation—Further reduction of freight rates for the shipping of poducts into this province in o this province, and out of it to prairie and eastern markets will be a great help to agriculture. I will endeavor to get equalization of freight rates. I am of the opinion that railways would also benefit by

MC GEER HERE ON SATURDAY

G. G. (Gerry) Mc Geer, well-known figure in British Columbia public life, will open the Liberal campaign in support of the candidature of Charles H. Tupper in the Similkameen, on the Princeton platform Saturday, in the course of an Interior speaking tour.

On a political platrorm or any other, "Gerry" is always an interesting speaker, of the decisive type, and comes with added prestige, fresh from telling the McMillan commission all about banking.

Gerry made a memorable "spich" here in 1929, at the first Similkameen Associated Trade Boards Banquet.

PRINCETON, B. C., THURSDAY, 28th SEPTEMBER

A New Deal

It may a be long time before the Similkameen finds the perfect politician, and it will no doubt be even longer before he finds himself in a legislature of perfect fellow-representatives; but at least one man has come forward to champion some of the qualifications which would, if not making the perfect legislator, at least materially enhance the value of the present crop.

When we commend the points of personal service as specified by Mr. Thomas Heeney at Keremeos the other night, it does not follow that we endorse Mr. Heeney's candidature. It appears to us that the privilege of a secret ballot is just that; and as long as individual freedom persists, it is no affair of any newspaper to tell the electorate how it should vote. If you want to know what the politics of this paper are, we shall tell you that it has none, and if you want to know how we vote, we shall tell you by marking a cross against what we approve.

We are all, however, intrested in good government. We are bound to be, in the long run, in spite of the fact that we often deceive ourselves by voting against it, because we think that we may profit thereby.

We have said a lot, in our dilations on government, about the golden rule. Sentimental rot; idealism. Well, suppose we become cold and practical, like the rest of you. Let's change it to golden eggs. You comprehend?

Once upon a time there was a goose—or was it—but you know the story.

You do not have to be well versed in physics to try this experiment. Take one only container, with a faucet affixed. Pour in one quart of water (depression) turn the faucet, and collect the water in a graduated measure. Unless you have a little fairy in your home, you will retrieve just one quart of water, except for a few drops that cleave to the sides of the tank.

Ridiculously obvious as this may seem from the practical angle, it is alarming how people ignore it when it comes to govern-

Unless you have a little fairy in your member's chair, you can no more get magic returns out of the government ank than you can out of your own tin one; and generally, the more magic, the less of the taxes come back, if you get us.

In other words, all that you can ask of a government is honest administration—so says Mr. Heeney .in effect.

Mr. Heeney is right; only half right, we think, but certainly right as far as he goes We would add to the qualification of honesty that of intelligence. It is not enough that a mariner follow his compass; it is imperative that the instrument be correct. The ideal government would be one composed of the best brains, directed by the best hearts. Efficiency and honesty would be nailed to the masthead; popularity, now all important, would be the most trivial consideration.

We have told you before about economic specialists; it is a big subject and—even we—cannot hope to achieve perfect government in one editorial; so to return to the limitations of our point.

Picture the representative Mr. Heeney paints. A fatherly man, with the interests of his flock at heart; a man who lives among his people and works for them; anticipates their needs, and in the most direct fashion, legislates for his people. Of course, in practice, when the good shepherd ran back to the legislature to get this and that done he might find that it was not as easy as it seemed. There are other members in the house, and all are not as perfect as the model we have before us.

But one perfect parliamentarian would be a step in the right direction. And until we have one, we can never have the house full.

Even conceding that one perfect servant in the present house could not create a millenium, he could do something towards it, and he could do a lot of good in his own community.

Take a man who said, and meant it, "No party; no axe; I am going to represent this community. I am going to be fair."

He would, as explained, spend his time going about the community, examining its needs, reporting them to his government, and dong his best to see that they were taken care of. He would explain and interpret the acts of the legislature, rather than defend or denounce them. He would be honest with himself and his flock, which, in absolute degree, no adherant of the present party system can be.

He would visit the mines; he would be firm but appreciative, and he would be listened to and talked to. He would ascertain the grievances, decide on their merits; or, if he could not, refer the matter to someone who could. He would have personal contact, would recommend with authority, he would retain respect. He would be a point of direct contact between the people and the system. He has a right to be.

How much stress could be averted, inside communities and between communities, if such men, with all their imperfections, could be the representatives in all our constituencies ? Personal contact and inherent honesty would do much to cover up the faults of our system.

In this part of the riding one could cite over the past five years scores of instances when the presence of the member would have been of great service; when a point of contact such as we have described would have been invaluable.

It is true, you acknowledge, and it is fain to argue against this type of representation, but it is beyond the scope of our present system.

How you err! It is precisely what our system calls for. Examine it and see. The representative is just that.

It is quite true, however, that under the present functioning of our system it is well-nigh impossible. In normal times no man being just his normal honest self has a ghost of a chance in the political whirl. Party road-rollers are too crushing.

This is not an attack against any one party, or the party system, but against the avenues into which it has drifted. Before we can clean up our country, we must clean up our parties, and before we clean up our parties, we must start on ourselves.

There are far too many people, who otherwise consider themselves honest, and good citizens, ready to take advantage of machine party affiliations for us to hope to cure it of its ills. It is a short-sighted policy. We pay dearly for our free premiums in the long run; and we can only take out of the barrel what we put in—less what sticks to the sides, the expenses of honest government.

There is no excuse for privilege, no defense of machine tactics; no excuse for a member failing to be the point of personal contact he might be. What constituency is there that could not lay blame at the feet of its representative on this score. He, personally, is not responsible, you say. It is the sys-about the size of a bullet cigarette lighter, which gave just enough light to let him see to work, and would be undetectable from the outside.

He asked the man what the idea of his intrusion was, and the latter said that he only wanted a bottle of beer. Asked how he had got in he said he had entered by the back door.

He admitted he had been there before.

If the man, as he said, only wanted a bottle of beer, how are the periodic thefts of considerable quantities accounted for. It must have been a strange thirst that made him take such a risk at that hour.

How did he know the place so intimately? If he just wanted an odd bottle, why did he go to the beer-room where the cartoned beer was kept, rather than getting one more easily accessible near the machines. Why did he come immediately after bottling? And if he only wanted a personal supply. why did he, after making a haul of ten dozen, return the following night?

One man could not possibly use the quantity of beer stolen; nor could he take it away by himself.

ORGANIZED SYSTEM

Sure enough, the back door, it was later observed was open.

It was also found that a window had been forced on the third storey.

The man could have, quietly and unobserved, approached the place from the rear, and mounted the roof from the bluff. He then could force a window on the third floor, looking out on the roof, and come downstairs—as police evidence of footprints showed that he apparently did. He could then open the back door from the inside, and carry the cartons of beer to waiting accomplices. They were probably there when the intruder was foiled, and skipped when the lights went on.

The supply of beer taken evidently served several men; who either drank it or sold it.

What is the rest of this story that these threads of theory seem to point to? Police have not mentioned this angle, but they are no doubt not overlooking it.

And now for the humor of this grim tale of mystery, and this saga of courage. About that gun.

The employees decided that it would be useless to bring the police in. If the place were watched, the intruders would obviously steer clear. They must be caught in the act.

Psychology plays a lage part in the meeting of bandit and his foe be it victim or besettor. So it was in this case. The cool, menacing clerk got the jump, and the intruder was stumped.

The clerk probably never stopped to think that the intruder might be a tough hombre, armed to the hilt, and mentally prepared for any emergency.

The wicked looking weapon was an old .22. It was not loaded, and to try to fire it would probably have meant suicide.

tem, or its distortion.

He, you and I, and our system are all at fault in permitting this distortion, we reply. It is something we should never have tolerated, and something we should put down our foot on at once

There have been some excellent men in our political parties, and the parties have some great achievments to their credit. But the wire-pulling system they operate under was never an attribute to any such greatness.

It has retarded the development of our land; it has done more than any one other factor to create dissatisfaction with our system.

In matters of policy this paper is generally a supporter of the government. We respect authority. We may disagree with what a government does, but we recognize that while the government is in power, it is incumbent on us all to support it, elected as it was by the majority of our fellow citizens.

It is our opinion that a good many people—and papers—do their protesting at the wrong time. When an election looms, they have their tongue in their chek, fearful lest they give some offense, and miss one of the plums.. Everything every candidate promises is applauded. Once he is in the saddle, the man they jockeyed for is a scoundrel and a double-crosser.

We say that now, as the election approaches, is the time that the electorate should come forward with its complaints; come forward quietly, courteously, but firmly, and let it be very plainly understood that they are no fools; that they know very well that no more can come out of the barrel than goes in; that they expect to put in as much and no more than they will have to draw out; and that not too much sticks to the sides.

They have a right—and a duty—to look every candidate in the eyes and say: "We endorse your party, because we understand its platform and endorse it. We expect from it only such acts as its platform and its traditional policy may dictate. We repose in you, individually, and in your party, our confidence. We take for granted, in that you offer yourself for election, and your party endorses you, that you are honest, in the absolute sense, without any politcal or party strainings. We send you as our representative, not as any cog of a party machine with interests other than ours. We expect to give you a square deal, and we want one in return."

There are few of the 200 odd candidates lining up today that could honestly say that they stand under that qualification: and few of the electors who could say that they will vote according to it. If we could demand the oath of honesty from ourselvs and our aspirants, we could perhaps safely trust the matter of intelligence to our judgments. and be on the way to better government.

COLES AGAIN IS CHAMPION

JACK COLES, most promising of the local young exponents of the royal and ancient game, again won the Princeton Golf Club championship, when, for the second year in succession he rode rough-shod over veteran opposition in the annual competition. Coles was at his best—and well he might be—as he disposed in the last rounds of the club's best bets in Alf Sorenson and Ernie Gray. Scores in the tournament were:

First round—Coles beat W. B. Ewart; Sorenson beat Field; Hooper beat Forsythe: Gray beat S. Ewart..

Second round—Coles beat Sorenson, 5 and 4; Grey beat Hooper.

Final: Coles beat Grey, 5 and 3.

HOOPER WINNER IN FLAG COMPETITION

T. B. Hooper hit the high spots of his form on Sunday, and came out on top in the Princeton Golf Club's flag competition. He planted his standard on the fairway of the ninteenth hole. V. G. Field was also well on approaching the eighteenth hole before his allotment of strokes gave out.

School inspectors DeLong and Carter have been in the district during the week.

"Labor—Shorter working hours, with a progressive scale of wages for all classes; better working conditions in the mines, more particularly the coal mines ,and a more careful supervision; also a contributary form of insurance to protect in case of illness, injury or out of work.

"Industry—Encourage industrial development by protecting honest investors from capitalistic manipulation."

"Highways—Better and more efficient and economic administration of highways, by the appointment of a director of highways, who is an administrator, and who knows how to build and maintain highways.

"Railways—Construction of the Pacific Great Eastern from Squamish to Vancouver, together with a plan for colonization of the valleys along the railway, and the development of tourist and sport traffic to make the railway pay its way.

"Tax Reduction—I will make an effort to bring about reduction in the present high cost of government administration, which is putting such an unfair burden on the taxpayers, who are having such a struggle to provide for themselves. I am determined to have the tax on the small wage-earner removed, and a more equitable system, by making the higher incomes pay more heavily."

LADIES PLAY FOURSOME

A two-ball foursome played by the ladies of the Princeton Golf Club failed to bring out many candidates, but nevertheless provided interesting competition. Mrs. W. B. Ewart and Mrs. A. Sorenson were the winners.

MY TELEPHONE DOES SO MUCH FOR ME

"I certainly wouldn't want to be without my telephone," said Mrs. Partridge. "It does so much for me. It runs errands for me—a telephone call brings things from the store when I don't want to go myself. My frends are widely scattered, but but my telephone, at a moment's notice, brings them to me for a chat. And believe me, it's quite comforting to know that there's a telephone handy in case of sudden illness, fire or burglary."
