BIRTHS

PETERSON—To Mr. and Mrs. P. Peterson of Blakeburn at the Princeton hospital, on Thursady 20th September, a son.

Police Blotter

Incommoded Passage

Charged with incommoding passage on the streets of Princeton, Ed. Johnson, from a district relief camp, paid a $10.00 fine under section 238f of the Code. It was stated that he had had a few drinks and took up a prominent position on the sidewalk, making insulting remarks at people who passed.

Rode Passenger

Taken from a passenger train and charged under the Railway Act, three transients each served five days in jail.

Weddings

PARROTT-BELL

Keremeos was the scene of another very pretty wedding when at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, 5th September, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bell, their eldest daughter, Marjorie Beatrice, became the bride of Mr. Albert Edward Parrott, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Parrott of Penticton.

Rev. C. H. Ballard officiated, only immediate relatives and a few friends being present.

Charming in a gown of point d'esprit lace, with long puff sleeves and a white silk sash, the bride entered the room on the arm of her father. She wore a lace veil and coronet of orange blossoms, white shoes and stockings. Her jacket was of tuille, trimmed with lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow gladioli.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Daisy Bell, who wore a long dress of pale blue organza, with high cape collar trimmed with pale pink satin buttons, with sash to match. She carried a sheaf of pink gladioli.

Mr. A. E. Mills supported the groom.

The bridal chamber was beautifully decorated with gladioli, asters and roses, the ceremony taking place beneath an arch from which was suspended a white bell.

The groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Parrott of Penticton were present at the ceremony.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served, a three-tier wedding cake forming a lovely centerpiece.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. F. Bell in a gown of Bermuda blue, with lace trim. Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Thompson.

The bride's going-away costume was in blue.

Mr. and Mrs. Parrott left immediately after for a motor trip to Washington and Coast points. On return they will make their home at Keremeos, where both are well and popularly known.

KEREMEOS

Mrs. H. Etches had as her guests Mr. and Mrs. Richards of Ceylon and Mr. and Mrs. Etches of Vancouver

No Children's Party

No fancy dress party will be held for the Keremeos children this year, it was decided at the monthly meeting of the Keremeos Women's Institute, held in the W. I. room of the Victory Hall Wednesday. The financial statement of the flower show was considered generally satisfactory. Mrs. Mac Clarke gave a paper on education, which was well received. Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Bush acted as hostesses and served a delicious tea.

CAWSTON

Mr. Livingston of Vancouver was the guest of John McDonald and family Saturday.

R. L. Cawston of Copper Creek spent the week-end here with his brother, A. H. Cawston and family.

Edgar Dewdney of Penticton spent the past week with J. Stewart Lang at Langside Gardens.

A number of Cawston young folk, members of the Oxford Group, were guests of Miss Dora Mattice at her home in Keremeos on Saturday evening.

L. V. Newton of Penticton was in Cawston on business with the representatives of the Land Commissioner.

Miss B. Thompson of Penticton spent the week-end with friends at Cawston.

Mr. C. Tickell of Kelowna was a recent business visitor.

Fruit growers have finished picking their Macs, and are busy with Johnathans. A few Delicious are also being picked.

L. Frentice returned from New Westminster Saturday.

The Young People's Oxford Group held an open meeting in the Community hall on Sunday afternoon.

KEREMEOS FLARES INTO ACTION OVER DOUKHOBORS; FOUR ARE ARRESTED

Cawston Unaffected

FROM Cawston comes a protest over the reference last week to the Doukhobor problem.

Cawston, says our correspondent, has only one Doukhobor family, and they are good citizens and in no way discrediting the town.

The complainant evidently misunderstood our article, which in the first place was a quotation and did not necessarily represent the opinion of this new paper; and in the second, there was no reference, real or intended, to any particular family, specially an established family. Nor was the observation specifically directed towards Cawston, but applied to the lower valley in general.

It was in reference to a threatened new Doukhobor invasion, rather than to a present state, and our information was, now that Cawston land is available, the Doukhobors are turning attention there.

Invaders "Taken For Ride" But Return to Lay Charges

SHADES of Ku-Kluxers and rough and ready frontier justice were revived at Keremeos this week when a growing hostility to the advent of Doukhoubor labor, reported in last week's Star, culminated in four of the "Douks" being "taken for a ride", and in a sequel in police court when four of the alleged abductors were charged under the Criminal Code.

Keremeos is tense. Public feeling has been aroused to the extent where a mass meeting has been held, and admission of any Doukhobors to the district publicly denounced. Just what the legal complications may be is interesting.

Keremeos people evidently thought the time had come for direct action. There was a strong current of resentment when we last visited.

It evidently did not take long to foment, for the following morning angered residents to the alleged number of thirty gathered outside the cabin where four Doukhobors were quartered. They were Fred Gritchin, William Strukoff, Pete Strukoff and George Plotnikoff, and had come from the Grand Forks district to work for Clarke and Armstrong, growers and shippers.

The Douks did as they were bade, hastily packing their belongings. They were given transportation in autos about ten miles out of town, and told to keep going, after being deposited on the King's highway, with no one to stop them from doing as advised.

Return and Lay Charges

But the seemingly docile demeanor belied their cunning, for when the residents were, as they thought, washing their hands of the Doukhabor menace, the four expelled Douks quietly returned to town, and took refuge in the law. They have evidently decided to make a fight of it, and have engaged T. B. Hooper of Princeton as their lawyer.

The charge laid is a serious one, alleging wrongful

TO CUT OUT PETERSON

Hope to Make Considerable Improvement To Coalmont Road

COALMONT-Princeton road is to be materially improved, and a large section entirely re-located, to eliminate the most dangerous section, the Peterson hill, according to informaton from Blakeburn. Work is to be commenced in the very near future.

According to our information, the concession is the result of a visit of Dr. J. J. Gillis, M. L. A. for Yale, the new step-father of the Coalmont-Blakeburn Tulameen section, and Mr. Gallagher, the district works superintendent. It is stated that they went into conference with representative men of the district, told them that there was a considerable sum of money available for work in that section, and asked where they would prefer to have it spent, specifying that it must be work of a permanent nature.

Hardly able to believe their ears after the scant attention their needs have been accorded in recent years, the Coalmont-Blakeburn people by a great effort maintained sufficient equanimity to say "Coalmont - Princeton road" and the Merritt men did not even balk at that.

But in spite of spending Yale money (no, not fines) to come to Princeton, the boys up the hill say they know when they are well off and have no intention of requesting to be put back into the Similkameen. Well, a rose by any other name is still a dog with a bad name, or how does it go.

Improvement of the Coalmont-Princeton road, and especially the Peterson hill and Red Bluffs would certainly be a godsend to this district. Virtually the sole connection with the outside world for an important mining district, it is notorious as one of the most dangerous roads in the west. Princeton will be glad to take the miners' chaff if the good news is only true.

There is, however, a possibility that it may be found impossible to go ahead with the work at this time, as a survey has shown it will be more expensive than contemplated.

Land Settlement Board Representatives Confer With Settlers

CAWSTON landholders saw recognition of their rights come a step nearer when representatives of the Land Settlement Board explained the government's attitude, and made investigations with a view to determining a policy, in a visit to the district last week end.

The matter was fully aired at a meeting of land-holders with the representatives of the Board, and the land-holders' attorney. Later, the visiting officials made individual calls on the various settlers, and there seemed to be general satisfaction.

Messrs Hopper and Smith, the Land Settlement Board representatives, laid before the land-holders at a meeting Friday night, details of the provincial government's agreement with Mrs. Ella M Lowe, who held a mortgage on the land, through default of the Similkameen Fruit Land Company, who sold acreage to the settlers under a settlement plan. It was explained that the govern-

SCHOOL MEETING PROVIDED PERLEY WITH PLENTY OF OATS AND HEY, HEY

After The Bawl

QUALIFICATIONS OUTLINED

Trustee George Allen sets forth the qualifications for trustee and voter, as provided by the School Act. His definition was questioned at Tuesday's meeting, and he did not have the opportunity to reply:

He quotes Section 79 of the Act:

Trustee—To be eligible for the position of trustee a person is required to be a British subject of the full age of 21 years, and the wife or husband of a ratepayer who has paid his or her school taxes for the preceding year.

Voter—To qualify to vote at a general meeting of the school district a person must be a British subject of the full age of 21 years, and a ratepayer.

A Ratepayer is one who is assessed and taxed in the school district for school taxes.

WAS QUALIFIED

Mrs. A. L. White complains that she was denied a vote at the school meeting on the ground that she was not a British subject. She produced Mr. White's naturalization paper.

EAST PRINCETON BUS COMPLAINT

East Princeton ratepayers were unable to present a planned protest at Tuesday's meeting, on the transportation problem. Mr. Robt. Taylor, who had been selected as their spokesman, presents their complaint.

Three years ago, he says, when East Princeton had its own school operated as a division of the Princeton school, and were quite satisfied, they were approached by the Princeton school board and asked to consider instead tuition at Princeton. They accepted on condition of an absolute agreement that transportation be provided. At that time the bus ran as far as the Del Young ranch. At the last meeting a family on the opposite side of the river asked that the bus pick up their children, who had previously crossed the river, and boarded the bus on the East Princeton side. This was granted, to accommodate a single family, and the East Princeton service curtailed, so that children living in East Princeton proper, from the Williams ranch up, have to walk to the Five Mile cross-roads, which the East Princeton people claim is half the distance to Princeton. They argue that most of the families served are concentrated in their section, and if the bus can run down side roads to serve single families, it should be able to come along the main highway to accomodate the several families represented. They ask that the board make good its promise to provide transportation, or else restore the East Princeton school.

Donations towards equipping a permanent laboratory for chemistry and physics at Princeton high school have been received from Mr. W. R. Wilson and Mr. Charles Bocking

Plenty of "But-ting" and Kicking But No Flying Tackles

IN the presence of nearly four hundred persons, the kinks were ironed out of Princeton school matters on Tuesday.

It was billed as an extraordinary meeting, and it turned out to be just that with a little bit of a whole lot, and even staid and sobre old Doc asking a perfectly good Scotchman if he is a British subject—how could he be?

There is only one way to look on such meetings, and that is humorously; but it was anything but a joke to some people. In the first place, it looked like the advance of the Foreign Legion, and in the second, it sounded like Gerry and Mae West all steamed up, and Sylvest. trying to get a word in, with just about as much chance as we have of meeting Per-

DR. BUTLER IS NEW TRUSTEE

Enters School Board on His Second Attempt With Flying Colors

DR. J. D. BUTLER is the new trustee on the Princeton school board. He was elected in a stiff three cornered fight at an extraordinary meeting of the ratepayers Tuesday evening, to fill the unexpired balance of the term of Miss A. Freeman, resigned. In the largest vote ever polled at a school meeting in Princeton he gained a majority of 13 over two rivals. The count was:

Dr. J. D. Butler		123
S. R. Gibson	67
T. Dobie	43
	110	110
Majority		13

Dr. Butler will appear in three elections for the same office — carrying a three year tenure—within a year. He was unsuccessful at the July meeting, and will have to stand for re-election at the next annual meeting.

While Miss Freeman was secretary, it does not follow that Dr. Butler will occupy this post. The secretary normally is a paid official elected by the board, outside its mmebership, and it is likely the local board will adhere to this practice in future.

DR. J. D. BUTLER, nominated by P. W. Gregory.
Scrutineer—Alfred Gould.
S. R. GIBSON, nominated by E. E. Burr.
Scrutineer—Dr. D. McCaffrey.
T. DOBIE, nominated by L. Pratico
Scrutineer—Mrs. E. J. Avery.

Suggest Government Allow Extra Work to Buy Books For Unemployed's Children

CO-OPERATION of the provincial government will be sought to meet the request of the local unemployed for assistance in the provision of text books and ordinary school supplies to children whose parents are unable to provide these in the ordinary way.

A resolution was passed at the ratepayers' meeting requesting the government to meet the problem by giving such men extra relief work so that they could provide the necessary supplies. Representatives of the unemployed present seemed to be well satisfied with this action.

Trustees said that in contrast with the first demonstration at the schoolgrounds subsequent approaches of

ALLEGE ORE WAS TAKEN FROM MASCOT

Suit Against Nickel Plate Former Owners Alleges Encroachment

JONES INCLUDED

Former Hedley Gold Mining Manager Blamed

THOUSANDS of dollars are at stake in litigation involving the famous Mascot claim Hedley district.

Nature of the Suit which the Hedley Mascot Gold Mining Company has launched against the Hedley Gold Mining Company, former operators of the Nickel Plate mine, was explained by Mr. Victor J. Creeden, one of the principals of the Hedley Mascot Gold Mining Company, who was in Princeton Friday.

In stressing the nature of his company's legal action, Mr. Creeden also emphasized that his company plans to operate the property on a thorough scale.

Encroachment Alleged

Mr. Creeden pointed out that the suit entered by his company is for ore allegedly improperly taken from the Mascot fraction, now held by his company, during the course of operation of the Nickel Plate mine by the Hedley Gold Mining Company.

He also stated that the suit had been amended to include Mr. G. P. Jones, manager of the Hedley Gold Mining Company at the time of the alleged encroachment, as co-defendant.

Hearing of the suit, which will likely be in the Supreme Court, is being stayed pending the completion of surveys and tests to ascertain the full claims of the Mascot people against the Hedley Gold Mining Company. This cannot be determined until additional surveys have been made and samplings completed on the fifteenth and seventeenth levels of the old Nickel Plate workings, now under water.

Extensive surveying and sampling and drilling has been done to determine the claim, and Boyle brothers are now drilling in an effort to complete the information The present claim is for 226,288 cubic feet of ore allegedly taken from the Mascot fraction through the Nickel Plate workings. This has allegedly been taken through different levels of the Nickel Plate mine. Claim will be made for gold at the present price, and damages will be sought.

Tunnel Work Not Issue

Mr. Creeden said that the driving of a tunnel through the Mascot by the Hedley Gold Mining Company was not the issue. They had the Four hundred years ago the little group of Redskins and French Voyageurs, who gathered around Jacques Cartier at Gaspé, needed no aid to hear the great discoverer of Canada declare the land the property of "Le Roy de France." This year, however, so great were the crowds of visitors at the commemoration exercises, that a large Northern Electric Public Address System was required that all might hear what was said on that historic site.

When Right Is Wrong

THERE are times in the course of human events when it is hard to say whether it is right to do wrong, or wrong to do right.

Keremeos people do not want Doukhobors in their midst. There can be no doubt about that. Also, in view of the fact that they have settled there and made their homes and their investments it would seem only right that they would have something to say in such matters. They have made up their minds that they have, and in a direct and forceful way. It is by long odds the most sensible and kindest way, and yet, it is a matter of doubt whether it is the right way; and also a matter of legal interpretation; and, we fear, according to the letter of the law, this doubt is considerable.

We like frankness, we like direct action; but as rational beings, we must also hold with constituted authority.

We have a good deal of sympathy with the people of Keremeos. We can easily understand their attitude. But we cannot wholeheartedly endorse it. We can only say that it is indeed regrettable that it should be sometimes necessary for man, in doing what is right in the eyes of his own conscience, to do what is wrong in the eyes of the law.

There is a general inclination in such cases towards re-action. After a flare of courage that prompts direct action, there is a public reaction, when the dangers of unbridled direct action become magnified, and we say that no aggravation can possibly warrant taking the law into our hands.

We quite agree that the principle of direct action in a constitutional country is wrong. But we also insist that after all laws are a means to an end, that end being justice. While it is obviously wrong for private citizens to take unto themselves judiciary powers, it is also quite wrong that the ills of society are not more adequately dealt with by the laws which are presumably for its service.

There is no doubt that the Keremeos people have ample grounds for vexation. No one can blame them for not wanting Doukhobors. It has been only too well established that the Doukhobor is undesirable.

The law, however, recognizes the Doukhobor, and he is cute enough to take refuge in it; this in spite of the fact that as far as general recognition of the laws of our land and our civilization are concerned, he is absolutely lawless. There never was a sect that gave our legal code more worry; and yet he knows when to take shelter in the law.

Keremeos people may well feel a little bitter at the working out of the law in this case. The law should protect their interests, but it actually seems to be working against them.

It seems to us that the laws of this country should protect good people from a sect that has proven itself absolutely undesirable, and with no intention of becoming an integral part of our civilization.

The Doukhobors have as a class proven themselves a nuisance, and no government which has just had to herd hundreds of them on a penal island can sanely criticize a happy community like Keremeos for wanting to protect itself from them.

It is a tricky problem, but after all it is one which the government of this province, and not the people of Keremeos, created, and it is up to the government to give them protection that they are, according to the laws of the province, unable to take upon themselves.

There is just this about it, however—and we think it is really the way out—it is virtually within the power of Keremeos to solve its own difficulty. If the good old-fashioned generosity that we know Keremeos can serve up is to the fore, there is little to be feared. We think the Keremeos growers concerned are big enough to recognize a principle, and sportsmen enough to submerge their own interests in those of the common weal. As long as Keremeos plays the part of Romans in Rome's quarrel, there is little need to fear laws or invasions either. Is not that the best way?

and forcible expulsion, with a maximum penalty of three months' imprisonment, or $100 fine.

The four men who have been charged are William Forrester, Fred Crooker, Joseph Bush and Alfred Ezra Mills, all well known young men.

Hearing was commenced before Magistrate L. H. Patten Wednesday, and the two counsel, W. R. Long of Penticton for the defense, and Mr. Hooper immediately en-engaged in a lengthy battle on the point of adjournment, Mr. Boyle finally gaining a stay of proceedings until Monday, 24th.

Public Aroused

Meanwhile, the incident has fired public interest, and it is evident that a test is to be made.

Following the expulsion of the four men and their obvious intention to make a fight of it, a public meeting was held in the Victory Hall Monday evening, and a resolution was unanimously passed condemning admission of Doukhobors to the Keremeos district. It is likely the accused youths will find plenty of public support.

Mr. S. R. Gibson will represent the Princeton Board of Trade at the provincial Good Roads convention at Harrison Saturday. A strong effort, headed by the Penticton Board of trade, is being made to influence the provincial government to rush completion of the Hope-Princeton road.

Land Settlement Men At Cawston

ment was now in possession and control of the land, and were anxious to come to an agreement with the settlers on a basis of recognition of payments made to the original settlement company.

The purpose of their visit, they said, was to get first hand informaton, to enable the government to determine a fair policy.

The case of the settlers was presented by several of their number, who told how they had bought land from the settlement company in good faith, unaware that the company had mortgaged its holdings to the Lowe Estate. Then, when the Similkameen Fruit Land Company failed, they found their payments were not honored.

Mr. Straith of Victoria, who has for some years been retained by the land-holders as their legal adviser, also addressed the meeting, citing the legal difficulties in the way of a settlement, and giving a review of his efforts in connection. He has been active on the matter for the past seven years.

Mr. C. H. Tupper, M.L.A. for the Similkameen, was also present, and expressed his personal pleasure at seeing a difficult issue near settlement, after twenty years of legal entanglement. He was glad to have been able to assist in the solution.

All the speakers recognized the efforts of W. A. Mc Kenie, the former member, in the interests of a settlement.

They also acknowledged that Mrs. Lowe had been reasonable, and desirous to co-operate in a settlement.

There is a general feeling in Cawston that it is now only a matter of time and office routine before the entire issue is straightened out and land-holders can proceed with a new feeling of security in ownership, and that the release from legal entanglement will result in an influx of new settlers to the fertile bench-land.

Thousands Involved In Mascot Claim

right to do this by arrangement with the Gold Commissioner. The suit claims return for ore taken by other operations.

The injunction is being renewed from time to time, until the plaintiff company has the necessary information on which to base its full claim.

Mr. J. W. DeB. Farris is acting for the plaintiff, and Mr. Lawson of Victoria for the Hedley Gold Mining Company.

The suit has delayed the winding up of the affairs of the Hedley Gold Mining Co., which was to have been accomplished 2nd August. In consequence of the Mascot company's suit, an injunction has been obtained which prevents the winding up of the Hedley Gold Mining Company's affairs until the hearing of the claim.

To Work Property

Meanwhile, Mr. Creeden insisted that his company is preparing to launch operations. He stated that considerable drilling and exploration work had been done, and that a camp would soon be started and a tunnel driven this winter. A mill will eventually be built, he said.

He reiterated that there were no shares on the market, all financing being taken care of privately.

Suggest Unemployed Work For Books

the unemployed had been very decent and reasonable. Mr. T. Dobie, speaking for the unemployed organization said that they wished to cooperate in every way.

Mr. Allen explained for the trustees that the School Act called for assistance to children of indigent parents, and Mr. Hall, former member, stated that in the past no deserving case had been denied assistance. This, however, was an extraordinary case, Mr. Allen said.

He said that the teachers and board had managed to provide children of unemployed with borrowed books, but delegates objected, and demanded new books. Mr. Allen said the board had expended $12.00 for scribblers, etc., but did not see its way clear to continue indefinitely.

It was held that this was really a problem of relief, for the government, and suggested that if the governmented granted extra work for hunting licences, there was no reason why they could not do the same for education.

Ladies Do Well In Interior Golf Play

WHILE they failed to win any of the major honors four Princeton ladies who competed in the Interior golf championships at Vernon did quite well.

Miss A. Freeman with 117 was beaten in the semi-final of the first flight play and Miss M. Garrison, 127, was defeated in the final of the third flight, in which Mrs. A Sorenson, 129, also competed

Mrs. W. B. Ewart was the only winner, taking the fourth flight.

The tricky course was rendered more difficult by rain. Low score was 100, and qualifying score was 112.

All reported a most enjoyable outing.

Plenty of Action At School Meeting

In the first place, it became almost necessary to shoot either Sam or Ged to get a chairman, and then where would our bas-e section be? Incidentally, Dr. J. D. Butler was elected trustee it was decided to ask the government to grant fathers on relief extra work so they could provide their children with books and school supplies, and they forgot to read the minutes before adjourning, but that's just the big news. Let's get back to the story.

Just about all the meeting lacked was a couple of tin helmets and the tenth commandment, and perhaps the piccolo section. We have already said that the bass section was doing something new in the line of split harmony; and it was Harmon-y at that, because when the resourceful banker (they have a habit of being that way) suggested (no one has seconded it yet) that the nominations be held open for half an hour, we all wondered how we could look at each other that long without getting into half a dozen or so fights, the (good) gracious Mr. Waterman suggested that Mr. Harmon sing, or was it Nero who fiddled?

Anyway, there was something electric about it all, with just such a feeling as when you open one of Mr. Waterman's bills, if you get us.

But let us start at the beginning. In the beginning God created — oh well, we can skip that, for the setting must have been a couple of centuries later than that, though we were always expecting Ben Hur to drop in.

It was like one of those things we perambulate in to the amusement of John D. (no, his reverence's initials have a C)—awful hard to start, a little shaky on the turns, and stop all of a sudden. And it wasn't one of those stream lined models with the Mae West front.

When they got to the point where they could start the meeting at the school house they found they couldn't, for the crowd was modelled after the Dionnes, five at a time, many times. So after the deputy chief, with a stern jaw, but, honestly, just a wee bit doubtful as to how his first effort would turn out—well, after he had got Messrs S. R. Gibson and G. G. Lyall as nominees for the chair; yes, he was in a fix. But the gods, or dogs, or something, came to his aid, and by that time there was just too many present to be all there.

We Expand

Now when they got to the Orange hall—which, by the way, your riverens, is summat for your history book—George no doubt breathed more easily at having got out of the jackpot, for, by what manner of parliamentary procedure we know not, and never were accused of knowing much, they decided that what was already done before the adjournment was null and void (like Perley's top-piece) and in fact had not been done at all yet, if ever. So they called for new nominations. And glory be if they didn't pile on the base in two sections, and nobody could say who was to be second fiddle among the basses, or how the rest of us were to get to first base.

The point was, how to get the old crate started. Everybody and his neighbor's dog (Scotch for 'dug') knew that he had to be prepared to give his left tonsil when it came to electing a trustee, but no one was prepared for the eye strain on the chair. Just how they reconciled the vote is one for you and Greta Garbo, but where Greta has the feet, Ged got the hands.

Ged said he wasn't fussy, but we don't know so much about that, thereafter, we mean.

A "Long Count."

The next bout of the evening was billed as the main event, but there were a lot of unexpected preliminaries, in which a prominent, both ways, attorney, and the driver of the honey-suckle chariot were to the fore. The idea was to weed out the Jews from the Conservatives, so to speak.

And while they were still examining the bandages, it was noon by the north clock, according to the watchful Mr. Hall, and they forsook the town pump, did a trot round the hall while three wild-eyed scrutineers gave them the gaze, or daze, and then proceeded to figure out the day's take. It looked like one of Wag's sales in better times. The way they were consulting the book all night looked like Tattersall's on Derby day, or Wag in one of his anxious moments. It was rather sad about Wag at that. He thought the paper was a sweepstake ticket and put it in his pocket instead of in the ballot box, and he was very much disturbed that they wouldn't hold the vote over again, seeing that there was only a majority over all of 13.

Perhaps it wouldn't be a bad idea if we told you who was running:

Perley says that doesn't matter now. Neither does his gum boil.

Dr. Butler struck a serious note in a few remarks following his election. He said he considered he had been elected to promote the interests of two bodies—the pupils and the ratepayers. He said he considered these his only obligations.

Then he compared himself to a boat race or a world's champion, or something, and said his opponents would have another chance next July, or when does McLarnin fight the Rainbow again, anyway?

Trustee Irwin then gave a nice exhibition of footwork, or kicking.

The Three R's and Two Doubleyuh's

According to Hoyle (or was he also kicked out for not being a British subject?) this was only half time, as point No. 2 on the agenda was consideration of a request by the unemployed for assistance in the purchase of school books.

This started out fine, but petered out by as usual passing the buck to the government,a resolution being carried asking the government to allow extra work to men with children attending school, so that they could provide the required articles without setting a dangerous and expensive precedent.

Then the East Princeton folk wanted to talk about Friday's favorite subject, the bussie, but that was out.

Then someone observed that that was all they could do, according to the agenda, and so, it being a strictly proper meeting, it adjourned
