KEEN RIVALS OPEN BASEBALL PLAYOFF FINALS ON SUNDAY —AND YOUR NEW GROUNDS

Hedley — They Came up the Hard Way — Gets Big Chance Against (Almost) Undefeated Princeton Home Brews

WELL, folks, this is it.

What Cain was to his beloved Abel—ho slewed the guy with the jawbone of an ass—; what Abra was to Ham, and Ham was to Eggs — in the dim days when there was ham, so Princeton is to Hedley in the baseball embroglio; and what Jena was to Napoleum and paint and putty was to Jena, so is Sunday to baseball here.

If you're mathematically minded, the equation works out thisaways:

P+H-√Pi r²×xy=?%!!!

And if you can't figure that one out, don't go to a psychiatrist — go along to the ball game and see it worked out. Nobody else can either, and that's why the playoff.

The Similkameen baseball romance of 1947 is quite a story, and there's two sides to it. These two come together on Sunday in the death throes, and that's the explanation of a score or more of our most lovable young men going around this week chewing raw rhinocerus cutlets with plenty of blood and —grr.—gristle. But first the tale of two cities, and Sunday will tell to which tail the can is tied

Once upon a time Prince Charming founded a fair city. He sold its charm for a mess of hops, but that's beside the (.)

This town was Princeton, and they had a pretty fair ball club. In fact the best in the town, but so did Hedley for that matter

But to get back to Princeton, and we all do sooner or later.

They won every game in the blinking schedule, which oddly enough gave them top spot. In very fact they won lots of games not in the schedule, and have beaten them from Kamloops to Kelowna. In fact they have lost only one game in some 20, but we're coming to that.

Now let's go to He— beg pardon Hedley. When they talk of the big revival these days they don't mean the gold mines — they're only worth a mere hundred million bucks. They mean the ball club, their major pride. Where the ball team goes, half Hedley goes with it; they'll be here on Sunday.

In the opening game the Hedley faithful saw Princeton nose out their darlings 37-2. It went on like that long enough to give the natives a stranglehold on the championship of the bottom. Then the townsfolk decided to make patriotism practical and sent out for a ball club.

That might have touched off an import war that would have squared the national debt, but the other towns decided to fight back with home town spirit and that's the way both sides still feel about it.

Hedley climbed into the playoff finals all right, and proved one thing, that Princeton can be beaten, and they are one team that can do it—the only team that has done it.

On the other hand, Princeton has proved that they can still beat Hedley—at times.

There you have it, and Sunday's issue simply depends on which of those times it is to be. But that would seem to be the key crisis of sport.

Both will be shooting for the highest possible stakes — the Valley championship and the right to meet the Okanagan champs for top honors in these parts. And as both have won all they have played against the Okanagan teams, it means you'll be seeing the best there is hereabouts.

Apart from that, if they were only playing for peanuts, no one who has seen a Hedley - Princeton duel needs any coaxing. Both teams are at full strength and primed for the occasion, and are too well known for that to require elaboration.

A story in itself, it will be the first function at Princeton's new Memorial Park, an occasion of significance to both players and fans. All's set for Sunday.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

by Don Graham

One of the small but important things that helps a man succeed is the ability to remember names.

When you call a man by his name you show an interest that strikes a responsive spark. He feels that he has registered with you and that, in your opinion, he is important. And it tends to stamp you as observant, alert and on the job.

The value of this habit in dealing with customers and people in higher positions is obvious. In fact, the principle can and should be applied to everyone we meet.

There is an almost magical difference in the effect of "Good morning.' and "Good morning, Mr. Ferris!"

Try improving your name-memory and see if it doesn't help to advance you in your career.

PRINCETON ELKS AT COAST CONVENTION

PRINCETON sent two representatives to the provincial convention of the Elks' lodge at Vancouver. Mr. Ed Samaan delegate, but Mr. Tug Wilson went along to kind of keep an eye on him. As it would have taken the rest of the fraternity to keep an eye on Tug, they decided to let it go at that.

Mr. D. Smithers of Oliver was elected Grand Esquire.

★ MY FRIEND M'GILLICUDDY is to-day a very disillusioned young man; correction, old man. You see, M'Gillicuddy is a chap of tender sensibilities, whereof he has nurtured the conceit of a companion tenderness of years.

Believing in the immortal—and occasionally immoral—soul of right, he has clung implacably to the sunnier side of doubt, the spirit rather than the letter (which is as good excuse as any for not writing them), believing with what he fondly imagined was a deathless faith that all is good, and nature immaculate, and only man in wilfulness is vile.

So, disliking cattiness, he preferred to be kittenish, assuming, in the airy creed of Peter Pan, that he was as spry as he felt. He was, and woke up yesterday feeling like Methusela, minus the begetting.

So it was into Life's Highway Motors for a check up and tune up. The diagnosis is, like his bus, he is definitely Model T.

Last week he had his rear end out—the bus, that is, and after racking a couple of museums, he got it going again He is now looking in the animal boneyard for a fair conditioned dinosaur differential.

It went hard with M'Gillicudy to realize that when he skipped through commando stunts with the cream of manhood and played duck on the rock with the kids it was all a fraud, that he was writing bum cheques on a fund of poetic etherealism of which there is no bank account, for inherent in his idealism M'Gillicuddy is an essentially honest bloke, after the honesty of Robin Hood.

Not that he held in irreverence the pretty platitude that grey hairs in righteousness make antiquity honorable, for that too fitted into his poetic creed; but just that, like grandfather's clock and the one hoss shay he and his bus would go on until the spring of the spirit got case hardened and snapped, and then break into pieces in one piece, so to speak.

So you see, his whole poetic faith flopped in the stethoscope.

In pristine innocence, for instance, he believed that the earth was flat, because he always landed that way in a hard tackle. He believed that beauty is truth, truth beauty, and that is all you know and need to know.

It isn't so. Nature, with his shirt off in a tremendous white room, is plain revolting, and there's utterly nowhere you can hide. And they're all so heartlessly materialistic and mechanical about it. They mark down your licence number and check you from headlight to rear bumper. They make shorts of all the glamour girls your obsolete setting plays host to, and stills of those departments no self respecting bug would be seen in, like tonsils carbonized with printer's ink.

That noble organ, the chest, is a black and sordid chunk of suet, pitted with bomb craters. The corroded tubes bring a reproachful image of a little old Dutch lady with a big stick

When they come to the heart they put on a specially suspicious Sherlock Holmes look, because no printer is supposed to have one. Of course they find the trouble there, and they shatter all the fond illusions which trustful fools—like M'Gillicuddy before yesterday — fancifully imagine to centre there. You are neither immortal nor miraculous, just 98 cents worth of inedible butcher bull on, even if some soulless fellows, antitypes of M'Gilicuddy, do manage to make a couple of million bucks with it

There's your trouble, you have a Rolls Royce gear box, or the ambition for it, and a strictly Model T fuel pump. You'd best not step on the accelerator too fast or you'll stall your engine and put out your lights. Of course your valves need grinding and you came fitted with the wrong diaphragm, but these days there's no good putting new parts in old wrecks. One thing, you'll never die of the opposite condition, which would, on the surface, seem every bit as bad.

That cheerful corallary seems to have brought M'Gillicuddy to more of his wonted "up" disposition for like all fine-drawn spirit, he is a temperamental lad, and we know all his moods

They prescribed some more hi-octane for his oats, and he's quite frisky again to-day, and excusably turned grossly materialistic, utterly determined to exact full value for his bawbees, even if it means laughing at his shattered image.

So he came up with the dog-eared one about the doctor recovering, and, since we suspect he felt rather sensitive about that shirt, especially as print caught underwares usually leaves its trade-mark, turned quite righteous about what he terms definitely unfair trade union tactics. If the doctor and the nurse made him take off his sark, he protests, he was entitled to expect reciprocity.

But his new found materialism blanched when we reminded him that that one was entitled to add a bawbee to his bill.

They apparently hadn't any machine for examining his immortal soul, but it doesn't matter now, since they showed him enough to make him abandon it in the strategy of more wiles per gallon. In his new found materiaism he might even make enough to pay the bill— if he lives long enough.

★ IN LUTON they have come up with an odd case of ghosts The Luton we knew was a bonny Bedfordshire town of straw hats and a bum football team; but some of you may come from there; we had better be careful

This Luton ghost is commercially minded, in a negative sort of way. Because tenants hear noises like a large bird flapping on the wall, they won't pay up, and the owner wants the assessment cut. The committee will ponder on it.

Without pondering, we could be doing with some ghosts, especially those of present day politicians.

CO-OPERATION!

A MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Forest fires are the greatest obstacle to the management of our forest lands as a permanent source of employment for our citizens. It is not good business to spend money on forest improvements or leave any part of a stand of trees uncut (to serve as a source of seed) unless we ensure that fire will not ravage the improvements or the uncut seed trees. The Government needs your co-operation in limiting or eliminating the annual scourge of fire. In actual fact the "Forest Act" of British Columbia lists a number of things you, as a citizen, are required to do. These include reporting all forest fires you see; securing a permit to light any campfires near the forest during the months of May to September,; and helping to fight any forest fires that you may run across or be asked to fight. Fighting a forest fire is dirty, exhausting and sometimes dangerous work. It should, however, be regarded as a privilege by all right-thinking, able-bodied citizens, because it is in the interests of every member of our population.

SHIPS TO SEA

Natural resources and manufactured products are exported by sea to many countries...

—and with them to the four corners of the earth go Consolidated's metals and chemicals. "Ships to Sea" represents—Export Trade—a vital element in Canada's economy. Of all provinces in the Dominion, B. C. in particular, is blessed with a supply of natural resources far in excess of what its peoples can use. Only by export trade can we maintain our mining, fishing, lumbering and agriculture in a healthy and vigorous condition. Only by export trade can B. C. take care of its post war increase in population. Only by export trade can B. C. continue to hold its place in the forefront of the Western Provinces. Only by export trade can B. C. continue to have the highest percentage of gainfully employed of any province in Canada.

TELEPHONE SUPPLY SITUATION STILL GRIM

Plans call for the expenditure of millions of dollars within the next few years on telephone expansion in B.C. But it is frequently necessary to change the program to fit the supply situation. For this reason, the present telephone situation is not a happy one. Efforts are being made against all sorts of odds to get the telephone system back to normal. Progress is being made, but it must be admitted that it will be a considerable time before the goal is reached In the meantime, the B.C. Telephone Company and Associated Companies wish to express their appreciation for the understanding and patience shown by the public.
