FROM THE NASS

Our Travelling Correspondent

A sad misfortune occurred a few days ago to one of the fishermen with his wife and family, out from the port, while sailing past Ramsden point, opposite the mouth of the Nass river. A heavy sea was running at the time. His boat was capsized in a squall. His wife and two children who were on board, were drowned. The man, an Indian, named S. Smythe, saved his own life by clinging to the upturned boat, until rescued by the steamboat Nagasaki. The youngest child, an infant in arms, was picked up by another fisherman named James Stoat, floating in the little box-like cradle. Though very much the worse for exposure, the child was alive when found, but died about three hours after rescue.

KINCOLITH

While writing of this neighborhood, it would be an injustice to the above named Indian settlement were we to pass it over without comment. Although the inhabitants are nearly all absent at this season of the year, we hardly require their presence to form an opinion of the place. The absolute cleanliness, thoroughly up-to-date methods of the buildings, lighting of streets, the distance of houses from sidewalks are examples that could be followed by some white populations to their advantage. The able guidance of Rev. Archdeacon Collinson is largely responsible for the satisfactory conditions existing in this, the smartest looking little town on the north coast.

PORT NELSON

Port Nelson, next to Irondale, reports fish running very satisfactorily. One boat on the 10th came in with 305 sockeyes, for one catch. Mr. W. Lord says he has all the fishermen he can accommodate at present.

WHITING BAY

This embryo seat of industry, formerly known as Dog Fish Bay, bids fair to take the lead in the march of progress in this district. Although all the small settlements and cannery ports, etc., are flourishing, Whiting Bay with a naturally protected harbor, unlimited water power, plenty of land convenient to the waterfront for factory sites, situated at or just inside the mouth of Portland Canal, is unrivalled because of its freedom from ice in the winter. Your correspondent has no hesitation in pronouncing it a most desirable location and expects to see great things in the very near future.

Mr. Hamilton, the managing director, is an indefatigable worker and during the erection of the cannery has been fully employed salting salmon. He has also just had completed an up-to-date smoke house and our correspondent can testify as to the excellent success of their smoked halibut. Negotiations have been carried on for some time and are about completed for the supply of a full equipment of sawmill machinery. The present development of Portland Canal justifies such a move and it is reported that this mill will be the forerunner of several in that neighborhood.

KITSELAS CANYON

KITSELAS, B.C., July 14— The illfated Mount Royal is still bottom up at the head of the bar at the mouth of canyon and no new discoveries are being made of those lost, nor any baggage. This accident has cast a gloom over the place as those lost were intimately acquainted with residents and feel the sorrow in sympathy with kindred of the lost. This canyon is a death trap and was always named by the Indians as such and unless it is fixed, future calamities may occur far worse than the present. A plan of the canyon shows a bar on the west side at head where a channel could be forced by a wing dam and change the whole mode of navigation to comparative safety. The entering is most dangerous. Where the life of the entire boat depends on the strands of a cable against a heavy stream, it is a most venturesome undertaking to get out or in. If 30 x 100 feet at head of main channel was taken out and a permanent cable installed, the danger would be greatly lessened.

In the Vancouver World of July 12, the statement was made that the party that went to the rescue of the Mount Royal survivors was composed of a party of Indians from an Indian wharf. This is not altogether correct, for as soon as the upturned wreck of the Mount Royal come through the canyon and lodge on the bar opposite Mr. Durham's place, Messrs. Durham, Johnson, Washburn, Cecil and Beaven (the latter two Indians) were the first to launch boats and proceed in grest haste to wreck to rescue the five men on the bottom who had so miraculously saved themselves when the boat turned over, and who showed such wonderful presence of mind amid the scenes of the wreck.

Work on Golden Crown is progressing. Two miles of ditching and flume is being made, bringing on water from several small creeks during dry season to run an arrastra.

One of Mr. Bergin's men of the G. T. P. survey, came from Copper river a couple of days ago and reports that party is locating the Kitimat branch.

The charter demands that it be built before expiration of 1907 to get the $5,000 per mile bonus. The proposed line will go through good timber land and as a construction supply line it is invaluable.

VIOLATIONS OF LAND ACT

Prince Rupert Empire: "Timber limit and land locators in Skeena Land district have not been observing one of the most important provisions of the Land Act, and many of them will find that their locations ore invalid. If a locator makes a mistake in staking land or a timber limit, the mistake must be corrected before the application is finally passed by the lands and works department. The Land Act requires locators of land and timber limits to publish a notice of their locations in a newspaper and in the British Columbia Gazette. If there be a newspaper published in the land district in which the land applied for is situate, then the notice must be published in that newspaper. Such publication is obligatory. There are two newspapers published in the Skeena land district. The Sun at Port Essington, and the Empire at Prince Rupert. The Sun has been published at Port Essington since May 18th of this year and hundreds of land and timber limit notices for land situate in Skeena land district dated since then have been published in Vancouver and Victoria papers. All such locations are invalid. In order to make them valid, the notices must again be published, and in a newspaper published in Skeena land district. While this may work a hardship on both the land locators and the Vancouver and Victoria newspapers, the law is the law and it should be observed as strictly in the publication of a notice as it is in the staking of a limit."

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

Miss Loudoun has returned to Essington after a months' visit in the 10-cent-show-town belt.

Ken Smith, who built the Dominion telegraph line from Aberdeen to Rupert in two months and six days, was in Essington this week on his way south. The constructed line was turned over to J.T.Phelan, superintendent of Yukon government telegraphs, who arrived at Rupert on the Royal last Monday. From Rupert Mr. Phelan goes on an inspection tour as far as Hazelton and expects to be back in ten days. The rate for commercial messages to Rupert will be the same as to Aberdeen and Fort Simpson. Mr. Phelan goes north on the next Hazelton.

A syndicate of Iowa capitalist has just completed the purchase of a hundred and seventy-six square miles of timber limits in central Vancouver island. The amount involved will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars, although the precise figures have not been disclosed. The Iowans were represented by Mr. W. E. Simpson of Iowa Falls, who has been a visitor in Vancouver at various periods during the past month. The syndicate will erect mills on the island and will cut lumber for the export trade. The acquisition of limits on the mainland is contemplated, and negotiations for large areas is now in progress. Mills will also be erected on the mainland and the product will be sold to the domestic trade. The limits just acquired on Vancouver island were cruised by Mr. W. D. Maxcer, a well known lumberman of Junction city, Or., and a small army of assistants.

The traps for the Essington gun club arrived this week and have been installed, and despite the fact it is our busy and "growing time," several inspections of the ground have already been made. One party, headed by Captain Wadhams, which included several of the gentlemen from the delayed steamer Northwest, visited the range on Tuesday and pronounced it an ideal one for good shooting.

J. J. Sloan took the Royal for Vancouver, Friday.

Another strong institution has sent a pilot into northern B.C. Mr. J. Anderson, inspector-general for the B. N. A. bank, passed through here here on his way to Hazelton where he goes to spy out the land. Mr. Anderson was at one time the manager of the B. N. A. bank in Atlin, and his knowledge there gained specially fits him in passing on the merits of a new country.

The Lifeboat Assn., incorporated by royal charter, with our public-spirited townsman, G. Crippin, as hon. pres., gave their initial entertainment and dance Wednesday night. The solo, "Somewhere," by Mr. L. S. V. York, Victoria, was the gem of the evening, and elicited well-merited applause. This form of entertainment is an innovation in Essington and should have encouragement.

Tomorrow in the Methodist church, service at 11 a. m. will be in English and Tsimshean. A service of song at 7 p. m. will precede the ordinary service. All are heartily welcome.

Among the fur losers by the Mt. Royal wreck are R. S. Sargent, of Hazelton, who was shipping out $800 worth of skins; R. Cunningham & Sons, Ltd., $1,000; and Alex Oaks, $750. Hopes are entertained that a good many of these skins will yet be recovered, as they were packed in boxes, and in all likelihood drifted ashore.

R. J. McDonell went to Victoria yesterday.

Judge Young and family leave Port Simpson on the next May for Atlin.

Three canneries on the north side of the Skeena river—North Pacific, Cassiar and Inverness—are about to enjoy luxuries not accorded to their more unfortunate confreres on the south side. They are to have 'phones installed. Arrangements to that end are in progress. The connection will be made over the Dominion telegraph line and the necessary boxes, etc., are being installed by H. G. Sprague, the gentleman who but recently succeeded in giving electric light to Prince Rupert.

T. Dunn, manager for the U. S. & C. Co., Rupert, passed south on the Royal yesterday.

Prov. Constable Vickers took two prisoners down on the Royal. One was C. Stevens, special constable, Hazelton, who got 3 years before Judge Young, at Simpson, Tuesday, for perjury. The other was J. Freeman, supplying, 3 months at Westminster.

The body of Solomon Green, who was drowned by falling out of his canoe, while crossing to Balmoral some weeks ago, was recovered by a Japanese fisherman Thursday. A $200 reward for his body was offered by friends. The remains will be taken to Simpson.

J. E. Kirby, constable, Hazelton, was in Essington this week. He came down with several prisoners and witnesses who appeared before Judge Young at Simpson.

The party of capitalists from the middle American states, and also extensive dealers in land in the Canadian west, headed by banker C. G. Edwards, of Mayville, N. D., left Essington for Hazelton and Aldermere on the Northwest Thursday morning. The party spent an enforced week in Essington owing to certain necessary work which had to be done to the Northwest before her departure up river. Mr. Edwards is president of the B. C. T. & C. Co., and this is his first visit to this section of B. C. The company of which he is the head have spent a large sum of money in exploiting the resources of the Bulkley, and its ramifications extend to townsites, river boats, coal lands, agricultural and other ventures. About the naming of the Claxton addition Mr. Edwards was non-plussed. "It can't be Claxton," he said, "and I am at a loss for a name." We suggested Skeena City, but this, too, was perplexing, as it would lead to no end of confusion by writers omitting city from their correspondence. It was then suggested that he advertise for a suitable name and thus afford Essingtonians some substantial subject to debate on during the long winter months that are in the prospective. Mr. Edwards is considering this idea. J. C. Halliday, the resident manager for the B. C. T. & C. Co., left for Vancouver on the Royal yesterday and expects to be back in 10 days.

Mr. Macdonald, manager Inverness cannery, was in Essington this week.

H. E. Kirby took passage on the Royal yesterday for Vancouver.

Provincial Land Surveyor Grey went up-river on the Northwest Thursday morning. The visit of Mr. Grey to the district has been one of much concern to the residents of the interior. His first work will be to determine and report on the feasibility of a wagon road or trail into the Bulkley from the canyon. After passing on the merit or otherwise of a wagon road, Mr. Grey will proceed to Aldermere where uncompleted government survey work, initiated last year, will be brought to an end.

The Venture took out last night 300 cases of fresh, sweet salmon from the A. B. cannery.

BIG FIRE AT VICTORIA

Victoria, B, C., was visited by a $250,000 fire on the 24th, which had its origin in Chinatown and spread to the residential section south of the city hall, covering an area a mile in extent. The spread is attributed to poor water supply.

The one burning question at Rupert is meat and the following lines have suggested that bacon be called in:

You're salty and greasy and smoky as sin,
But of all the grub we love you the best;
You've stuck to us closer than highest of kin
And helped us win out in the West.
You froze with us up on the Laramie trail,
You sweat with us down at Tucson;
When Injuns was painted and white men was pale
Then you nerved us to grip our last chance by the tail
And to load up our Colts and hang on,
You've sizzled by mountain and mesa and plain,
Over campfires of sagebrush and oak;
The breezes that blow from the Platte to the main
Have carried your savory smoke.
You're friendly with miner or puncher or priest,
You're as good in December as May,
You always came in when the "FRESH MEAT" had ceased,
And the rough course of Empire to westward was greased
By the Bacon we fried on the way.

We swear that you're not fit for white men to eat,
And you're virtues we often forgot;
We call you by names that I dare not repeat,
But love you, and swear by you yet.
Here's to you, old bacon, fat; lean streak and rind,
All the Northerners join in the toast,
From mesquite and yucca to sagebrush and pine,
From Essington down to the Mexican line,
And from Tonapa out to the coast.

Vancouver merchants are becoming too fat. They are making too much money out of real estate, and fast falling into the ways of Victorians. Their range of vision appears to be set around Point Grey and Lulu island, and outside this magic circle, to them, British Columbia is a "no man's land." Ask eight out of ten Vancouver merchants where the Skeena is situated and they will tell you in Alaska. Place an order with any of them and they will ask you if you want it before close of navigation or early next spring. They know no more about the itinerary and sailings of northern boats than they do of the wording of the national anthem—and still they are becoming ponderously wealthy. The north does not object to their becoming rich. They object, though to treatment that found favor 35 years ago, when the steamer Beaver made an annual trip to the north and supplied the district's wants. That day has gone by and if Vancouver and Victoria wholesalers want to find favor with northerners they will have to ship orders on return boats, which can easily be done, if they increase their staffs and pay less attention to the real estate columns. The Skeena river has a payroll close on $20,000 a day during the season of activity and it is easily understandable that laxity at the wholesale supply centre means a hardship to all. Hang up a map and time table in your office and do business with the north!

The first number of the Prince Rupert Empire is out. It is a good strong name and will live, despite the fact that the mayor of Rupert did not baptise the infant with his good will. The publication is indeed creditable, and it affords us the pleasure of dwelling on the thought of having an opportunity in the future to clip from the columns of an exchange good fearless and authentic information relative to the spot that is on the lips of thousands of people today, not only on the coast, but the entire North American continent. There appears to be only one measure in the slug rack for John Houston, and that is 16 ems. All the papers he has established in British Columbia—four—have been out of the conventional, even in name, and shows in no small degree the independent, winning-out spirit of this celebrated pioneer of the west. Long life to the Empire.

Officials of the Dominion government are now in British Columbia arranging for the establishment of six Marconi land stations and it is stated that two of these, the main station at Victoria and that at Pachena, will be completed in six weeks. The Pachena telegraph station will be operated from the lighthouse, which will be ready for establishment within two weeks, according to the latest reports from the island coast. Other stations will be built at Cape Laze, the point on the northeast coast near Comox, and when this station is in operation, steamers with wireless apparatus will be able to keep constantly in communication with Essington, the metropolis of the north, and the public generally.

Wholesale and illegal cutting of timber on valuable pulp leases situated on Gilford Island and owned by the Pacific Pulp company, is under investigation by timber inspector Murray. The pulp leases are described as very valuable, and the alleged depredations will mean the loss of thousands of dollars to the leaseholders. Gilford island is situated off the northeast coast of Vancouver island. It is famous for its vast berths of ideal pulp wood, as well as larger varieties of timber.

AMONG THE RANCHES OF KITSUMGALLUM

KITSELAS, B. C., July 14.—A stroll among the ranches of Kitsumgallum does a chevalier of the pen and pick an immense amount of good. It is a goodly sight to see the farmers turning up the soil, digging up roots and burning the stumps. In their place springs up luscious strawberries, healthy-looking potatoes, lettuce, onions and every kind of vegetable necessary to sustain life.

Kitsumgallum has a peculiarity unlike most fertile valleys, in that it has been subjected to two different forms of soil deposition. The Skeena low land of alluvium, comprising an area one mile wide by three miles long, is replaced further north by a plateau about 300 feet high; perfectly level and covered by a sapling growth of birch, alder and willow and also a heavier growth of hemlock, spruce and cedar. Towards the foothills, 5 or 6 miles back, it is more broken and covered in places by marshy land. In a northwesterly direction towards the lake, 12 miles, is a large tract of unsettled land slightly broken. The clay sub-soil seems to have the same origin as the Lakelse, Skeena and Kitimat plateaus together with the same elevation and characteristics. When this territory was in a sub-aqueous condition, these clays formed and the top drift of gravel and sand, latterly owing to the regional uplift of the coast range, the Skeena and Kitsumkalum cut down through the mass and left these benches high and dry, the finest fruit land in the north.

On Mr. Charles Weeks' ranch, which is nearly past its infantile state and can with truth be classed a farm; although his barns, water mains and huge tanks are as yet in the embryo state, they will soon become a reality. Strawberries are ripe and inviting; turnips, a foot high; cabbages with good solid five-pound heads; potatoes, seed from Ashcroft or any other dry belt that seems best adapted to this locality, up in bloom with healthy dark green leaves; potato seed from the Fraser deltas not doing so well; wheat, 56 ½ inches tall, volunteer grains, caught from crop year before, with heads 4 inches long and showing every evidence of maturing early; timothy, 56 inches high, blooming heads 9 ½ inches long; corn from Italy looking prime; Australian salt grass, beginning to take root, is a great fodder and has a surface spread of 18 feet from a single plant, feels at home here at Kitsumgallum and is endeavoring to outshine its original birthplace—the Antipodes. This is quite a model experimental farm. The seeds seem to respond at once to the soil; in fact everything grows. In the words of the pioneer settler, Mr. Weeks, "We can raise anything; we can raise cain, (cane) stumps, and man to rejuvenation" on the brisk air of the flat. He contemplates putting in 1,000 trees this fall. At 21 feet apart this is about 100 trees to the acre, and in three years these trees will bear nearly a box of apples apiece, which means $1 per tree at least. In the meantime the ground is planted in strawberries and small fruit.

Mr. Fred Bobley, also of the pioneer class, has a nice place; portion of it on the Kitsumgallum flat and bench. His garden is on a lower flat in a rich vegetable mould mixed with alluvium and does srrikingly well. The tree nursery on Mr. Henry Franks' place shows up well without any loss and are in full leaf. Those planted in a thin soil catch well and are thriving; a few died owing to the packing and shipment. The soil is a light, sandy loam with a great deal of iron, giving the red color after burning. Before firing it has a yellowish color and mixing with the vegetable mould and organic matter makes it very productive, especially for fruit. Burning don't seem to suit it. Where clay sub-soil is close, sufficient moisture in driest season is present. Where fine gravel and sand underlie the soil, irrigation would be a great improvement, although not necessary.

There are about fifteen resident pre-emptors; a good, large hotel and store at landing, which is now called "Eby." The name is short and euphonious and helps to give credit to the enterprising spirit of Mr. and Mrs. Eby, who established the hostelry and store in the woods as it were, for the benefit of the settlers and travellers and it is to be hoped they reap the benefit of their plucky stand. Not only is it lonesome in their isolation, but the lineal descendant of the prehistoric pedachytral combined bird-bat-reptile creatures, saw-bill armored, puncture your epidermis, flap their wings and turn on steam to the suction pump, with music, during, before and after the operation. These are in myriads and Mr. and Mrs. Eby are getting used to them. It breaks the monotony. It's only mosquitos and a fund is being subscribed to coal oil a swamp near by—their breeding grounds. This is the most economical way of fighting the pest, for if you use violence and kill one, a thousand come to his funeral and behold you have to get soaked with an intoxicant of superior power and lay yourself out in a conspicuous place with malign intentions. When you awake you are somewhat lighter, but what satisfaction to see your tormentors highly festive in groups and couples, in all shapes, stalking and tumbling, fighting ing for first place at the feast. It only requires a club now and a wonderful transmutation sets in. They are not 'toxicated low, but furnish part of earth's fertilizer. Mosquitos vanish as soon as settlements settle. Even they are not the only pests that cannot withstand the domination of the Caucasian.

Dave Stuart's orchard shows up like a young forest. The apple trees have to be propped up to prevent the limbs from breaking down under the load of fruit. Strawberries on Mr. Chas. Durham's property measured 3 inches in diameter. While the entire settlement are feeding upon the vines, no perceptible decrease is evident in the crop. Currants, black and red are ripening. Gooseberries, like marbles clustered together as thick as the stems can hold. Murello cherries upon 4 ½ ft. trees, (2nd year) bearing, endeavoring to ripen, are watched with tender solicitude. Raspberries are bearing a prolific crop.

The Kitselas hotel is nearing completion and it would not be amiss for Essingtonians to come up and stand a treat of arboricultural delights for the gastronomic and vision. The spacious room can accommodate those addicted to the light fantastic, while the Kitselas band will be in attendance.

WHEN THE METLAKATLAS RAIDED FRASER RIVER

Old Indian Tells of Stirring Days at the Old Hudson's Bay Post

Old Inneas is a historian. There are not many Siwashes of pearl 90 years, that can tell stories of the old Hudson Bay post days, and it was lucky to catch the white-haired Indian as he stepped onto the bank, and with an agility surprising in such an old man, dragged his dugout clear of the waters of the Fraser, above, towards the hill that was once Langley Fort. From the eminence there was a commanding view of the long reaches of the river, both up and down the stream. Deep trenches marked where palisades had stood, and here and there were traces of hummocks that had held little brass cannon that nearly a century ago had swept away the canoes of many Indians.

The store is still standing. The tenant of the fort farm uses it as a granary, and the heavy timber now shelters nothing but the farmer's grain. The line of the palisades is still to be seen. Old earth and stone fire-places mark the places where the traders' homes stood. One of the old houses is still used by the ranchers. McLeod, who was factor in the early seventies, used it as a dwelling and sent many a requisition to Victoria for a new house. The roof leaked, and every time a storm came, the factor and his family fled to the shacks built against the stockade.

Alorde, the chief factor from the fort at Victoria, came up the Fraser on a visit one day, and the wily Scotchman quartered him in the shaky house. In the middle of the night a terrific gale sprang up, and the terrified chief factor, fearing the house would collapse, fled in his nightrobe through the pouring rain to the friendly shacks of the traders. In the morning, he and McLeod laid out the plans for a new house, and the next ship to England carried the requisition.

It was all different in 1817. Old Inneas told the story. How he fixed the date is difficult to imagine, but other years he mentioned were correct. In those days there were few white men seen on the Pacific coast. Lewis and Clark had not commenced their memorable journey. The nearest fort was on the Columbia River, where old John McLaughlin commanded, and he seldom made the journey round to the smaller fort at Langley. The ships of the Hudson's Bay Company would sail around Cape Horn from England once every year bringing supplies of powder and blankets to trade to the Indians, and taking away the wealth of British Columbia.

Most of the Indians lived higher up the Fraser, and came down in their canoes when the ships arrived. They were always peaceful and never quarrelled with the white traders.

Their only trouble was with the Metlakatlas. Once or twice a year these fighting Indians from the North would come down the coast on a foraging expedition and ravage the land of the peaceful dwellers along the banks of the Fraser. Sometimes there would be as many as two thousand of them, well-armed and defiant. They would carry away the rich crops of the valley, the women and all the loot that could comfortably be carried in their war canoes. They never interfered with the Hudson's Bay traders at the fort. Little fights in northern inlets had caused them to have a wholesome respect for the white men.

Old Inneas tells the story of how the raids of the Metlakatlas were stopped. His father was on the deputation of wise old men of the tribe that waited upon the factor and promised to pay a yearly tithe to the company if he would use his men and "sticks that talked" to put an end to the pillage.

It was in July or August that the looters generally came down on their expedition. "Just now," said old Inneas, "when corn was almost ripe, like so," and he pointed to a waving field of grain near by.

The factor persuaded all the Indians to leave their homes and camp on the island opposite Langley; where they were hidden by the heavy timber. Down the river, where New Westminster now stands, were posted three scouts, ready to signal with a smoke fire when the canoes of the Metlakatlas were sighted. Three weeks they kept their vigil, the looters had been detained in Burrard Inlet, and were behind their schedule time.

Then the watchers at the fort saw the smoke signal of the outpost, and prepared to give the marauding Indians a surprise. The fort mounted one large gun; old Inneas pointed out the marks of the hummock at the corner of the palisade that faced down the river. The factor had placed a land mark on the opposite shore, and knew just where his shot would hit each time. He waited until the leading canoe was in line with this sight, and fired.

"Piff!" said old Inneas, warming up like some old warrior, and puffing a great cloud of smoke from his pipe.

"Boom!" Then canoe sink and bad Indians, they swim round in water and climb into next canoe."

The Metlakatlas were disconcerted by the attack, but they continued their journey up to the fort. The fire from muskets of the white men killed many, and other canoes were sunk. Then the Indians on the island launched their dugouts and completed the rout. The chase lasted to the mouth of the river, and never again did the men from the north come down to raid the peaceful villages of the Fraser.

On the island there are many relics of the old fort, a brass cannon, green with age, and an old musket that must have seen service before Waterloo. Old Inneas has several blankets that belonged to the fort, and an old token of the Hudson's Bay company. There are other ancient relics scattered about among the Indian villages up the river; the old Siwash tells of an old record of the supplies that came to the fort which is now in the possession of an Indian at Mission. Some day these will be discovered, and an interesting history of the early days of British Columbia should result.

James A. Dale, who murdered Peter Godereau and Joseph Celle, at Carmi, near Greenwood, last October, was hanged in Kamloops on the 18th.

PORT ESSINGTON PORT SIMPSON

A new master for the tug Boynton arrived on the Royal Sunday, and the tug, in company with the barge Canada, left for the south on Monday. The barge carries 200,000 feet of lumber for Vancouver.

During the past week numerous parties have been wending their way to the berry fields of Essington, midway between Cunningham's mill and the town—and the full pails brought back attest in no small degree the adaptibility of the soil and climate to the culture of berries. One private strawberry patch which is the admiration of all Essingtonians and tourists, is the garden of Mrs. Maahs, opposite the Salvation Army barracks. The berries are as large as some potatoes Victoria merchants have seen fit to send north, and the ruddy hue of the luscious fruit is appealing not only to the eye but the palate as well.

Harry K. Thaw has stomach trouble. The base of complaint has changed from his head to his stomach. His physicians intend to inspect the food sent in to him from outside the prison, and will advise what portions to reject. He has also been advised to take less exercise in the prison, and more than he does when he is out of doors in the afternoons. Poor old Thaw! What an infliction it is to be the possessor of too much cash.

In the vicinity of Greenwood, B. C., recently, a gang of section hands was employed by the C.P.R., and the party was supposed to consist of men only, until one of the number was taken suddenly ill and in the city hospital gave birth to a child, which the ladies of Greenwood describe as a very pretty infant. The woman was a Hindu. Dr. Monroe, inspector of the port of Vancouver, may possibly know of some more such men.

UNATTACHED PEOPLE.

"The Presbyterian church is represented by Rev. Mr. Kidd; but his church, like the Empire, has not been, as yet, given permission to locate in Prince Rupert. He, like the editor of the Empire, has found a place to sleep and a place to eat, through the kindness of friends."—Prince Rupert Empire.

Mr. Kidd and John Houston are not the only pious people who have been refused permission to open up shop and follow vocations of a questionable character in the G.T.P. appanage.

Mrs. Tipp was just such another. This lady was an Australian and a barber, a petite artiste of renown in the Antipodes, and about the time the G.T.P. bill was up for its third reading, was wending her way across the Pacific. She wanted to get in on bedrock—clutch forelock soundly.

At Vancouver she equipped herself with several of Mahoney's movable houses and with her ready-made furniture landed in Rupert one bright sunshiny day last fall.

"Where is the head of the town?" she asked a busy man on the wharf.

"Over there, madam," and he pointed to a small building to the right. Away she went, elbowing her way hurriedly along lest she be too late for a site and a lot.

A big, good-natured Kentuckian smiled as Mrs. Tipp laid bare a coil of plans and profiles of her houses made-to-order-while-you-wait.

"I want a good lot, sir; one with a sunny slope," she spoke up.

Again the Southerner smiled.

"Yes, I expected to see the road in about this time. You Canadians are so awfully slow; in Australia we are so much more alive to railroads."

"Are you a married, madam?" asked the gentleman from the blue grass state.

"A widow," she coily responded.

"W-e-l-l, w-e-l-l; too bad, but the company's orders are not to allow unattached women on the townsite," said the official.

"Awful, wretched! Is it a crime to be a widow? Must I marry again in order to be allowed the privilege of living in the north?"

Mrs. Tipp wept, sobbed and cried and invoked pity.

"These are the company's instructions, madam, and we must observe them to the letter," continued the official.

There was a moment of suspense.

"Must marry then?" sobbed the interrogator.

"Our instructions are plain, lady; must observe them; else our heads will fall into the basket.

"Then, I'll marry. Where would be the most likely place to throw a net for such a fish?" enquired Mrs. Tipp, now recovered and ambling in her mind for a prospective little deuce.

"There are several cities not for distant—Essington and Port Simpson—likely abodes for such an undertaking. Simpson is the capital and the percentage of marriages is greater there than elsewhere in the district," coldly rejoined the tall southerner.

"Keep a lot for me; going to Simpson; will be back in a week; I'll have the license with me," said Mrs. Tipp and she left for the old fort town.

She married and came back. Still permission to locate in the holy city was withheld. Mrs. Tipp lost heart shortly after and left her dear, old kind-hearted nautical husband and removed from the district. A letter received recently says she is at Panama—in the zone of Teddy's big ditch.

The palatial Princess Royal, the new C.P.R. boat on the Skagway-Victoria run, came in on a full tide Sunday night, docked at Pier No. 1 and was visited by a large number of Essingtonians who acclaim the new liner the most finished boat plying in northern waters. Captain Troup stated the boat had more than fulfilled all anticipations formed by builders and company.
