Portland Happenings.

PORTLAND, June 17.—This morning was the time fixed for hearing the petition of Mrs. Harriet B. Campbell asking that the last will of Mrs. Esther Holliday appointing General Rufus Ingalls as a guardian be revoked. The hearing, however, was postponed owing to illness of Judge Catlin, of the County Court, and will not come up till next term of the court, over which Judge Moreland will preside. General Ingalls' counsel say that when the matter comes up for hearing there will be a legion of begrimmed skeletons brought to view, such as will even horrify those most familiar with the Holliday family history.

District Attorney Henry McGinn is preparing a lengthy argument in the case of Sandy Olds for the murder of Emil Weber which comes up in the supreme court tomorrow.

Theodore Vennequerhelz, a man prominent in social and business circles at Albina was reported missing under peculiar circumstances and yesterday all the property standing in his name was attached. The alleged absconder has long been a resident of Albina and is connected with some of the best families there. He has left a large number of wood choppers in his employ in the birch and the constable at Albina also says he has forged notes on A. S. Tolz, J. Brendel and others, aggregating a large sum. He is furthermore accused of having raised considerable money on bonded timber and other land. His conduct has created a sensation in Albina where he has always enjoyed the confidence of everyone. His wife has declared entire ignorance of the cause that led him astray.

Settlement of the Dispute in Regard to Territory in Africa and While England May be Said to Have Acquired a Victory in the Matter, There is Questionable Wisdom in Her Having Ceded Heligoland for Certain African Possessions.

LONDON, June 17.—The Duchess of Fife, (Princess Louise of Wales,) was delivered a still-born male child yesterday. It is probable that the child will be buried with royal honors as a member of the family of the Prince of Wales.

A special dispatch from Alexandria says: A movement is on foot to export Egyptian cotton to Massachusetts. An agent of the promoters of the scheme is already on his way to perfect the details of the plan. The movement is based on the idea that cheapness of transportation will enable Egypt to send cotton to New England centres of consumption at a profit.

The probability of a police strike is increased and the authorities at Scotland Yard, fearing the worst, are quietly organizing a reserve force. Hundreds of recruits have already been sworn in and are receiving a degree of instruction in the duties of policemen that will enable them to make it a creditable showing in the event of a general revolt of the old men against the Government's treatment of their demands.

Lord Salisbury's despatch to Sir Edward Malet, British ambassador to Berlin, containing England's agreement with Germany, declares that Germany's claim that where one power occupies a coast another power may not without consent of the first power occupy unclaimed regions in the rear and cannot be allowed in cases where the country is occupied by Englishmen. Where there are no English settlements Lord Salisbury admits there is no English title. The agreement is that England retains the Stevenson road which is to be the boundary line between the English and German spheres. The line stretches from the mouth of the Bokora west from Lake Nyassa to the mouth of the Kilambo south and from Lake Tanganyika northwards. Germany retains the region as far as the Congo State along the first degree of south latitude, the boundary diverging around the western shore of Nyassa so as to make the frontier meet the territory covered by Stanley's treaties. The agreement also accords a mutual free passage for British and German subjects through their respective territories. Germany's concession of Vita with the plains of Sanciliusado and Pitta comprises a coast line exceeding 200 miles. England is allowed the exclusive protectorate over Zanzibar and Pemba. Heligoland is ceded to Germany subject to the consent of parliament.

DELAWARE EXCURSION.

A Pleasant Holiday Trip—The Lake and Hot Springs—Notes by the Way.

(Communicated.)

At 2 o'clock, Saturday afternoon last, the Delaware steamed up the Fraser with a numerous and congenial band of excursionists bound for Harrison Hot Springs and Port Douglas, at the upper extremity of Harrison Lake, about 30 miles above the Springs. The progress up the Fraser was unusually slow, owing to a number of indispensable landings in discharging cargo and taking on fuel, but these delays (so vexatious to the man of business) added enjoyment to the excursion, as they afforded opportunities for reconnoitering and the gleaning of information respecting the localities at which stoppages were made. The landings were thronged with people, eager to obtain the latest news as to the outcome of the Provincial contest, which at that time was somewhat nongue. The boat reached Harrison Springs at midnight, having made a very quick trip, if the time wasted in making over 20 landings were to be deducted from the gross time consumed. Capt. Insley announced an 8 hour lay-over at the hotel, and the 65 excursionists were soon occupying a like number of spacious rooms at this popular and well appointed hostelry. At 8 o'clock sharp Sunday morning the boat steamed up the lake towards Port Douglas, with about 40 of the original party, leaving the less curious minority to enjoy the baths and scenery at the hotel. The trip up occupied nearly four hours, considerable drift-wood having obstructed the entrance to the slough leading to the upper lake, at the farthest extremity of which is located the once thriving, but now decaying and half forgotten settlement of Port Douglas. The slough which connects the greater with the lesser lake, is serpentine to a fault, and its acute curves seem to fling defiance to the skill of the navigator. Nevertheless, it seems to have no terror for the dauntless and persevering captain, who threaded its intricate windings with apparent ease, and at midday moored his song little craft at the wharfless settlement at the head of Harrison Lake, a spot teeming with reminiscences suggestive of the hardships of the old Cariboo'ites in their search for elusive gold dust some three decades in arrear, at which time the road leading north from this port was the popular route for reaching the phantom Mecca of the Fraser River pioneers. At the present time the post and contiguous country is given over to the keeping of the red man of the forest, there being but one representative of the white race who permanently resides in all this vast wilderness of lake, river and snow-capped mountain scenery. This "last of the Mohicans" is "Old" Purcell, a veritable type of the rough-hewn early pioneer, who has resided there so long that the rugged rocks and rippling rills of his chosen solitude have become a part of his very nature. In fact one seems to trace a resemblance between this uncouth specimen of the genus homo and the weatherbeaten "shacks" and overgrown streets of the deserted village, which serve as a fitting background to complete the picture. The boat hauled in its plank on the return voyage after a tie-up of two hours, affording time for the indulgence of antiquarian pursuits, in the gratification of which the place yields an abundant harvest. On reaching the mouth of the slough the vessel again encountered a sea of drift wood, with which the wind had been industriously filling the entrance since the boat had passed up the slough. After a little manoeuvering, however, the captain succeeded in clearing his way, and the remainder of the journey back to the hotel was completed with uninterrupted speed. The steamer stopped at the Springs only long enough to re-embark the passengers who remained at the hotel in preference to continuing the journey to Douglas, and then immediately proceeded homeward under a full head of steam, reaching New Westminster at 12:30 Monday morning.

The scenery along the lake is picturesque, and the gaze never tires of the changing varieties of scenic attractions on either shore. The lake proper presents a surface of unruffled azure, 40 miles long by from 1 to 3 in width, and the cloud-capped mountains on either side form a setting on which nature has wrought no blemish to mar the effect of the picture as a whole. The excursionists were a unit in praising the cuisine of the boat and the uniform courtesy of the captain and officers, whose constant efforts to conduce to the general comfort of their guests never flagged from commencement to finish; and it is to be hoped the management of the Delaware will only regard this trip as the initiative of a series of excursions to be run on the same route during the summer.

A WORD ABOUT THE SPRINGS.

The hotel at Harrison Springs has been established three years, and each season has witnessed a large increase of patronage over its predecessor. The hotel, with the auxiliary cottages, furnishes ample accommodations for 150 guests. And the cuisine and general appointments are fully up to the standard of any similar resort on the coast. Invalids need have no fear of being deprived of the delicacies and comforts which their emaciated condition may require. The baths are fitted up in modern style and the staff of attendants is all that could be desired. Since the Springs have been opened to the public, thousands of our infirm population have availed themselves of their curative properties, and it is a remarkable fact that during the entire three seasons not one death has occurred. This in itself is a strong argument in favor of the efficacy of the Springs for the cure of diseases for which that mineral water is conceded to be beneficial. The proprietors, Messrs. Brown Bros., are continually making improvements and adding new features to lengthe the stay of visitors. A pavilion has recently been erected, suitable for entertainments and dancing. On Sunday morning it served as a church, Bishop Sillitoe having held services there on that date. Following is a list of the Delaware excursionists, together with the names of those who are at present guests at the St. Alice Hotel: H. Galt, John Hogg, W. L. Leonard, Robert C. Johnson, G. W. Green, M. H. Soule, Vancouver; R. F. Hurd, Blaine; R. Morris and wife, J. M. Drummond and wife, John Morris, Langley; J. R. Miller, H. B. Ames and wife, Montreal; E. McPherson, Grasshopper Lodge; A. ### Murder Detected.

HAVANA, June 16.—The Spanish authorities of this city turned over to French detectives the person of Michael Eyraud, the strangler, who, on July 26th, 1889, murdered M. Gouffe, a court bailiff in Paris. Eyraud was placed aboard the steamer Lafayette, which sailed for St. Nazaire this morning.

Admiral Resigned.

HONG KONG, June 16.—Admiral Tang, English commander of the Chinese north coast squadron, has resigned. He gives as his reason for resigning that the Chinese officers of the squadron are insubordinate. Prospects for the fleet are bad, as the Chinese admirals and captains are totally incompetent.

Fricked the Law.

BOSTON, June 16.—St. Johns Nfld., special gives a description of the newest evasion of the Bait Act. A Newfoundland vessel procures a license to carry a cargo of herrings to Boston, and under a false pretense of stress of weather she calls at St. Pierre. She is there attached under process of the French court for alleged debt to a St. Pierre firm. This debt is purely fictitious, and under order of the court the cargo of herrings is sold at public auction and a large price is realized. The captain pockets the spoils and the law is successfully evaded.

Imperial Parliament.

LONDON, June 17.—In the Commons today W. H. Smith stated that the Government would move next week for an earlier assembling of parliament, the curtailment of debates on the Queen's speech and the suspension of such complicated measures as the Land Purchase Bill until next session.

Gladstone gave notice of his intention to offer a resolution that such a grave change in parliamentary practice as that contemplated in Smith's proposed motion ought not to occur.

Further Election Returns.

CHYENNE, June 17.—Returning Officer Fred. Sonne, in the presence of the candidates and their agents, yesterday counted the ballots polled in the late election for this district. As declared by that official the vote stood: Stoddard, 118; Smith, 99; Morrison, 60. The candidates elect are Ministerialists and as such pronounced themselves during the canvass.

The roads now are in excellent condition. The growing crops look well. The outlook is a most encouraging one for the farmers and stockmen.

KAMLOOPS, June 17.—Interest in the contest in this district continues to increase. The election of Hon. Mr. Vernon and Mr. G. B. Martin is assured. There is anxiety concerning Mr. Semlin, his election being considered very problematical by his friends. His strongholds have been heard from, whilst Mr. Wardle's have yet to come in. At noon, so far as heard from, the vote stands: Vernon, 296; Martin, 299; Semlin, 220; Wardle, 208; Irwin, 102. The latter may poll a considerable vote in the southern section of the district.

A Dash for Liberty.

KINGSTON, June 17.—Last night George Smith and Henry Howard, convicted of burglary at Barrie and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, arrived here and were placed in the police station until morning. This morning their cell was found empty, they having broken down the iron bars across the window and escaped.

A COMPARISON.

EDITOR TRUTH: Sir,—In your issue of this morning is a letter from "Workingman," to whom I beg space in your valuable paper to reply. While not specifically charging Mr. Corbould or Mr. Townsend with the numerous offences which he says Mr Ladner is innocent, yet "Workingman" would have your readers infer such guilt against them. "Workingman's" grievances as against Mr. Corbould seems to be that he is a lawyer, and, ipso facto, cannot be the workingman's friend, but must necessarily be his oppressor. When he makes this charge "Workingman" forgets that the ablest advocates of labor rights have always been lawyers, and that Sir John A. Macdonald, Edward Blake, and the ablest supporters of popular rights in the House of Commons to-day, are lawyers. Your correspondent under a nom de plume may attack Mr. Corbould's reputation, but your readers will judge not by such criticism. Among his strongest supporters Mr. Corbould includes many working men whom he will gratefully remember and whose rights he may be depended upon to champion in the same able manner as he has contended for those of his clients, and workingmen will, I trust, support Mr. Corbould who is the best man to represent us.

Yours &c.,
AN ELECTOR.

LOSS OF MEMORY FOR SIX MONTHS.

A Singular Story of a New Hampshire Man's Aimless Wanderings.

A strange story of loss of memory is that told by Arthur Dow, who disappeared Aug. 30 last from Littleton, N. H., and was found by his wife in Seattle, Wash. At the time Dow disappeared from Littleton he was a successful merchant there, having a business worth $300,000, on which he realized $36,000 a year. Dow was a church member, a strictly temperate man, and enjoyed the confidence of the entire community. He was married to an estimable lady and had two daughters, aged 8 and 9. He disappeared, no one knew whither. Rewards were offered and detectives employed, but to no avail. His wife and friends, after a month of inquiry, gave him up for dead, supposing he had met foul play. He left his business affairs in such good condition that his wife's friends soon straightened them out.

In February Mrs. Dow was greatly surprised to receive a letter from her husband dated Tacoma, Jan. 27. Its tone indicated mental incapacity. Mrs. Dow at once telegraphed to Mrs. Philip Winser, a married sister in Seattle, to go to Tacoma and take care of her husband. Then she boarded a train for Seattle. Philip Winser went to Tacoma and found the missing merchant. He looked wild. His hair had grown down to his shoulders and his beard was long and unkempt. He told a strange story. He said that when he left home he had a hallucination that a man in Plymouth, N. H., would sell him a large amount of coal at a fabulously low rate. He went there, but imagining the man had gone west followed. He lost all memory of his own name for several months, which were perfect blank. He had checks and $120 in his pocket.

When he got to Portland, Ore., Nov. 11, he came partly to his senses and tried to buy a ticket to go home on the train. The price was $70 and he had only $50. He remembered that he had relatives in Seattle and bought a ticket there, but on the train he relapsed again and lost all idea of identity and remained at Tacoma. He has an indistinct idea that he was an inmate of a hospital for many weeks. He thinks he owes a large bill for medical attendance, but the impression is vague.

His instinct of self preservation led to securing work in a sash and door factory in Tacoma. A short time before he wrote to his wife he was seized with the grippe. When he recovered from this, although in debt, his mind seemed to brighten. He realized who he was and wrote to his wife, telling her he was in debt for board and medical attendance, and to send him enough money to pay his way home. He was brought to Mrs. Winser's house.

When his wife arrived the scene between the long lost husband and wife can better be imagined than described. Mr. Dow had brightened perceptibly, and hopes of recovery are entertained. The family were talking about Masonry, when Mr. Dow remarked: "Why, I am a Knight Templar. I forget all about it till this moment. In my troubles if I had known I would not have wanted for anything. I would have been cared for and restored to my wife and family; but I forgot the fact, too, when I failed to remember my name. It is funny, but it seems to me I forgot everything. The past is a complete blank for several months."—Chicago Tribune.

TOMORROWS ELECTION.

The Colonist last night charged THE TRUTH with doing some improper thing or other in having published two letters hostile to the candidature of Mr. CORBOULD. Our esteemed contemporary should know that a newspaper's columns should always be open to the expression of opinion by correspondents holding all manner of different views on public questions. THE TRUTH's columns always are, and that is the reason why the two letters objected to found a place in our columns yesterday. The Colonist will realize the truth of our statement in this matter when it learns that we are very strongly in favor of Mr. CORBOULD's election. Messrs. TOWNSEND and LANGLEY are both very estimable citizens, but we do not think that either of them possesses the ability of Mr. CORBOULD as a parliamentary representative. So far as we can see all of them profess to be in favor of the present government of the Dominion, and their variations of opinion as to the Government's policy, generally speaking, are so very slight that they all practically stand upon the same footing. These being the facts, it is simply a choice between three men.

The charge has been made against Mr. CORBOULD that he has been too much engrossed in his own private business to attend to public affairs. Now, this is really a matter which will commend Mr. CORBOULD to the opinion of many. A man who has the capacity for hard and successful work on his own behalf will at least have the abilities necessary to attend to the interests of his constituency. Mr. CORBOULD is a man of education, tact and discretion, and his opinion on any subject affecting the Province would be received at Ottawa with attention and much weight would be attached to it. As objection has been raised to him as being a lawyer, but at present there is no legal gentleman sent to the Commons from this Province, and the members already there have not infrequently felt that this was a drawback of considerable seriousness. There are bills to be drawn up, legal points to be acquired into, and many technical matters to be discussed and decided upon in the interests of the Province, which, in the absence of a representative of legal qualifications, are very likely to be but poorly attended to. This slow in the representation of the Province at Ottawa would be remedied by the election of Mr. CORBOULD.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

If the mining industry in Southern Kootenay should turn out anything like what is predicted for it, it will indeed be something tremendous. The production is freely made that Southern Kootenay is as rich in minerals as the state of Montana. Let us look at the product of a single mine in that state. The Anaconda mine in Montana does business on a scale that is staggering for the ordinary mortals to read about. The following figures regarding the work done of this great corporation's business for the month of May:

| | |
|---|---|
| Ore received | 38,[illegible] tons |
| Ore produced | 35,[illegible] tons |
| Wood received | [illegible] cords |
| Lumber received | [illegible] feet |
| Matte shipped | [illegible] tons |
| Freight charges paid | $[illegible] |
| Pay roll | $[illegible] |

Over one hundred and thirty-five thousand a month for labor, and more than two hundred and twenty thousand a month for freight charges represent a pretty big business for one single mining corporation, but this company is about to put up a smelter annex of 300 feet long, to accommodate 36 additional Brackett furnaces, throwing in a preliminary way the use of 17,000 patches of stone work, and the laying of 3,000,000 bricks. Such a showing as the above may open the eyes of people to the possibilities of British Columbia.

The deputy returning officer at Richmond in his doubtless well-meant endeavors to prevent the electors falling into the mistake of voting for Captain TIMBRICK who had retired from the electoral contest in Westminster District, has caused confusion and consternation. It seems that before issuing the ballot papers to the voters he with pen and ink scored out the name of that candidate. When the returning officer proceeded to recount the total vote on Monday last at Brownsville, the question arose whether the papers so marked could be reckoned. Mr. WARWICK in the exercise of his discretion declined to throw out the Richmond ballot papers, because his over zealous deputy had made a foolish error. We consider that in allowing the Richmond vote the returning officer pursued the only proper course open for him. Had he disallowed the papers upon which the name of Captain THOMPSON had been ruled through, the effect would have been that practically the whole of the North Arm would have been disfranchised, not by the act of the electorate, but through a blunder on the part of the persons having charge of the elections at that place. As far as the electors were concerned they fulfilled the law to the letter, and no one questioned that the papers in point distinctly and plainly testified the wishes of the persons who placed them in the ballot box. That being so, it is for the judges to decide whether the votes were in accordance with the strict letter of the law, and until they say that the act of a returning officer's deputy is to have the effect of disfranchising a large and intelligent portion of the electorate we hold that Mr. WARWICK could in all equity pursue no other course than adjudge the voting papers from Richmond good. It is satisfactory to know that the course which Mr. WARWICK pursued in this matter met with the cordial approval of both Mr. SWORD and his agent. Had these voting papers been thrown out, the only effect would have been that the order in which the three successful candidates figured would have been changed somewhat, Mr. ROSSER being third on the list instead of first.

The election in Quebec yesterday, so far as the returns received indicate, show that Mr. MERCIER has been returned by a very large majority. As the father of the famous Jesuits Estates Bill and the leader of the French-Canadian Nationalist party, Mr. MERCIER has shown that he is the popular idol. So far as heard from only 19 Conservatives have been elected to 35 Liberals. Enough is known to show that Quebec is strong on the Nationalist platform, and that the extraordinary efforts that were made by LAURIER, CHAPLEAU, and others of the French leaders in the Dominion House, to crush the Nationalist party, have proved wholly futile. In the three Provincial general elections held this year—in Ontario, Nova Scotia, and Quebec—the Liberal leaders have developed wonderful strength, showing that whatever may be the sentiment in these Provinces regarding Dominion affairs, they are well satisfied with Liberal administrations in their local affairs.

THE VIOLET AND THE ROSE.

That day we parted, Margaret,
I looked into your English eyes;
Those violets with dew were wet!

Then, fellow to the violet,
I saw the pale blush rose arise
That day we parted, Margaret.

It touched me with a soft regret;
It filled me with a sweet surprise;
Those violets with dew were wet!

Fair garden where such blooms are set!
I had not hoped to win the prize
That day we parted, Margaret.

But now one memory sweet I let
Add courage to my wistful sighs—
Those violets with dew were wet!

Sweet flowers, I come to pluck you yet,
Though growing under alien skies!
That day we parted, Margaret,
Those violets with dew were wet!
—Dorothea Dimond in Frank Leslie's Newspaper.

TWELVE GRAVES.

The Union Pacific mail and express train had been held up.

The robbery was so cunningly planned and boldly executed that the people of Rawlins Springs felt themselves aggrieved, and a band of choice spirits pledged each other over the bar of the Oriental saloon that they would follow the desperadoes who had insulted their town by committing so great an outrage, and never return until they had captured the outlaws and wiped out the stain with their blood.

One hotel, one livery stable, half a dozen barrooms, and as many gambling saloons, with a music hall and an immense cattle pen, made up the town of Rawlins Springs. Numerous fights had occurred there. The little graveyard on the side of the hill contained twenty-two mounds, and on the head boards of all save one were inscriptions which explained how the occupant of the narrow home had met his death with his boots on. The one unmarked grave was occupied by a man who died a natural death, and it had not been considered necessary to record so uninteresting an event. Never had a train robbery been committed there before, however, and it was natural that the citizens should feel themselves insulted.

It was dark when the express train stopped long enough to allow the passengers to eat their suppers at the Rawlins hotel, and on the evening of the robbery it was even darker than usual, because a great storm was gathering and the heavy clouds shut out the light of the moon and the stars with an impenetrable veil. Two miles below Rawlins, the train halted to take on water. It was just after making this last stop that the passengers in the sleeping cars realized that something unusual was happening. The train suddenly began to slow up, and a minute later the people in the car next to the express heard a sudden order to hold up their hands. Then from each end of the car came a man with his face muffled in a handkerchief and a big revolver in his hand. With perfect coolness every passenger was examined, and money, watches and all other valuables were levied on. Then one man was left to keep the people quiet, and the other cars were gone through until nobody in the train was left unexamined. When the work was done, a long whistle was given, and suddenly as they had appeared the robbers slipped away in the darkness.

The train was taken back to Rawlins Springs, and there it was found that the express car, too, had been robbed, and on the floor in front of his safe lay the messenger, shot through the heart.

Thirty thousand dollars in all had been taken. One of the passengers claimed that when the signal to leave had been given he had seen four men jump from the train. It was to capture these four and recover the stolen treasure that the good citizens of Rawlins had pledged themselves.

Twenty of the boldest men of Rawlins started on the man hunt. Every one of them had for years lived a frontiersman's life and was accustomed to risk his existence on the slightest provocation, and it therefore seemed a trivial matter for such a number of well armed men to capture four fugitives, no matter how desperate they might be.

With the daylight on the morning after the robbery, the cavalcade of vigilantes left Rawlins, and rode down to the water tank. Without difficulty they found the place where several horses had been tied, and it was easy work to see that from that point they had been led a distance of a mile or more, and had then been ridden at full speed toward the mountains. For ten miles the track of the fugitive was plain and distinct, and then as the ground became more rocky the trail faded away until it finally disappeared altogether. For several miles the vigilantes rode on in the same direction, but when they found not the slightest trace of the men they were following, they concluded that the robbers had changed their course, and it would be necessary to begin all over.

By the orders of the leader of the vigilantes, the twenty men spread themselves over the prairie with the agreement that they should meet at sundown and report any discoveries which had been made. When the stunted trees began to cast long shadows over the prairie, one by one the men returned to the trysting place disheartened and tired. Finally, however, the hopes of all were revived by the arrival of one of the party waving something over his head as he came galloping up. The article he was waving proved to be a red bandanna handkerchief with two holes cut in the shape of eyes piercing it. With the handkerchief as the sole trophy of the hunt, the whole party returned to Rawlins Springs.

That evening a leave was held at the Oriental saloon, and the handkerchief was placed on exhibition behind the bar. Suddenly a small man who had entered the saloon unobserved caused a deep sensation by asking to examine the trophy of the hunt, and then by announcing that he knew the train robbers.

The small man was generally known as the keeper of a prairie store ten miles out from Rawlins, and he told how four men whom he recognized as Tom Austin, of Texas; Dave Simmons, from the same state, with Rube Reynolds and Long Jim Farnsworth, from Colorado, had ridden up to his store on the afternoon preceding the robbery and had each purchased a red handkerchief, and he could further swear that the handkerchief before him was one of the number he had sold.

A consultation was immediately held, and it was agreed that from the place where the handkerchief was found the robbers must have doubled on their tracks and taken the route to Texas. In spite of the fact that the four desperadoes were well known, and should they be caught up with a desperate fight was inevitable, a party was quickly formed to pursue them and effect their capture.

The twenty vigilantes had dwindled down to ten when the start was made the next morning, but those ten were all men of tried courage and endurance, and if they once struck the trail no one doubted that they would stick to it until they had accomplished their purpose.

For four days the ten men rode south without getting on the track of the robbers. Some of them knew the country well, and they were assured the fugitives would be obliged to stop at certain points where water could be found. Their surmises proved correct, because on the morning of the fifth day the remains of a camp fire was discovered near a spring of water, and the hoof marks of the horses showed that the party who had camped there was composed of four men.

On the evening of the seventh day, just as the vigilantes rode over the crest of a rolling hill, they came suddenly upon the men they were in search of. It was evident that the robbers had given up all idea of being pursued. They had built a fire, and around it the forms of three men were lying, while at a little distance a fourth was preparing a supper.

The two parties saw each other at the same moment. There was no necessity for any talk. Each knew the other's object, and the robbers were as determined to resist capture as the vigilantes were to carry out the purpose which had brought them so far.

A voice from the crest of the hill called for a surrender, but the only answer was a derisive laugh, and without moving from his recumbent attitude, Long Jim Farnsworth sent a bullet into the midst of the party, which emptied one saddle and warned the vigilantes of their danger. Immediately they spread out and poured a volley into the four men, who were by that time standing with their repeating rifles waiting for a charge.

After five minutes of continued shooting the air became heavy and impenetrable with smoke, and by mutual consent the firing ceased to allow the air to clear itself. When it became clear enough to see again, only two of the train robbers were on their feet, and each of them seemed to be suffering from some grievous wound. They still had their faces to the enemy, however, and when called on to surrender they only laughed and told the vigilantes to come on.

The work the robbers had accomplished was visible, because four riderless horses were dashing about and on the ground lay four motionless figures.

A few moments and the fight was renewed, and this time there was no stopping. Again and again the rifles cracked until they were empty, and the music of the revolver replaced the rifle. Suddenly the noise ceased. Numbers had gotten the victory for the vigilantes, but their loss had been immense. Only three men reached the campfire, around which the four bodies lay almost touching each other.

As the victors turned the bodies of the robbers over a groan escaped from Long Jim Farnsworth, and it was seen that some life remained in him yet. Slowly his glazing eyes opened, and slowly raised, his left arm he beckoned one of the vigilantes to his side.

With trembling lips he whispered that the treasure had been cached, and he would locate the spot if the vigilante would bend over him. Without hesitation, his request was complied with, and then with unlooked for energy, the dying desperado suddenly drew his right arm from under him and plunged a long knife into the heart of his enemy. With a half smothered laugh his limbs stiffened out and he died.

Twelve graves mark the spot where the fight occurred, but not one cent of the money taken from the train was recovered, although it was diligently sought for by the only two survivors of the ten men who went to capture Farnsworth and his gang.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Color of the Sea.

The cause of the generally blue color of the deep sea is accounted for by reference to certain principles connected with the science of optics. Probably most are aware that light consists of the set of colors which we see so beautifully displayed in the rainbow. Now, it is the law of light that, when it enters any body, and is either reflected or transmitted to the eye, a certain portion of it, consisting of more or less of its colors, is lost in the body; the remaining color, being reflected, strikes our visual sense, and whatever color that may be, the object seems of that color. Now, it chances that the portion of light most apt to be reflected from masses of transparent fluid is the blue, and hence it is that the air and the sea both appear of this color.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Boy Millionaire.

Worth $5,000,000 and only 10 years old. This is the state of affairs with little Marshall Roberts, the son of the late millionaire, Marshall O. Roberts. He is the youngest millionaire in town, and one of the richest. There are hundreds of children in New York who will probably some day inherit one or more millions, but little Marshall Roberts already inherits his vast fortune, and in eleven years it will be entirely in his control.

His fortune is most of it invested in real estate and government bonds, and four or five well known men are his guardians. His income when he comes into his fortune will be $200,000 a year, which is almost $550 a day.—New York Journal.

A Hackman's Nerve.

John Cauley, a hackman, averted a disaster to his equipage, himself and his fare one morning, no doubt saving the lives exposed and laid the foundation of his fortunes under circumstances peculiar to life in the great metropolis. He dives in Brooklyn, owns his own hack and drives over every morning to a stand at the city hall.

Just before 6 o'clock, Edward Haskins, a cattle and horse ranchman of Sydney, Neb., took Cauley's hack to go to the northeast portion of town. When Eighteenth street and Fourth avenue was reached the hack was going at a rapid pace.

Suddenly a gong resounded behind the hack, and Cauley turned to see a chemical engine turning into the avenue from Seventeenth street, with the horses at a gallop. The hack was on the left side of the street under headway not to be checked within a dozen yards. A furniture truck and wagon coming down filled the other half of the street. It was the thought of an instant to Cauley that he must cut around the corner to the right and leave the chemical free to its tornadolike course up the avenue. Another engine now appeared, with its horses on a dead run.

Destruction seemed inevitable. Cauley was already thrown back upon the roof of his vehicle with all his weight and strength upon the lines, but the rolling hack was pushing upon the heels of his horses, and its impetus was assured to carry it into the middle of the cross street. There doom awaited it in the shape of a great, brass, fire breathing engine. It was a moment of fate, and Cauley was equal to it. With the same dextrous stress that he intended to apply in rounding the corner he turned his plunging horses into the gutter, over the high curb with a frightful leap and surge of the springs, across the walk and headlong through the folding doors of a dry goods store. There, quivering with their full length within the store, the horses were halted. The engines, narrowly passing each other, swept on with a cheer for the hack.

At the Hoffman house later on Mr. Haskins said: "I was scared, but when I saw my driver backing the horses out of the store, without a hair turned, and apologizing to the excited store people for his intrusion, I was struck with admiration. I was white, and when I saw that not a cent's damage had been done, and the driver was saying coolly, 'It's all right, sir; no harm done!' I made up my mind that a man of his nerve with horses was a man for me. Anyhow, I owed him something. I've bought his hack and given it to his brother, and I'm going to take him down into No Man's Land to superintend a herd of 1,400 head of horses."—New York Telegram.

Money for the Congo State.

The king of the Belgians is in a difficulty, and looks to the anti-slavery conference to help him out of it. For some years his majesty has been paying no less than £80,000 per annum out of his privy purse to support the administration of the Congo state. The Belgian parliament will not relieve him of a farthing of this heavy charge. By an agreement of the European powers the king is forbidden to recoup himself by the imposition of customs duties upon the Congo. The position has become serious, and the drain upon the king's private resources can no longer be borne. He hopes, therefore, that the anti-slavery congress may make a recommendation to the powers to reconsider their decision, and in the interests of civilization and good order to allow the collection of moderate dues within the Congo state.—Chicago Herald.

Travel on the Atlantic.

The recent terrible storms that have swept the Atlantic, some of them certified to by sea captains who have been on salt water all their lives to be the worst they have ever seen, have demonstrated that the great ocean steamers, with their capacity for hundreds of passengers, are, humanely speaking, absolutely safe. These storms, of unprecedented severity, have in no case been sufficient to disable one of these ships. Of course there is danger always. There is danger from accident—fire or collision; but, barring that, and looking to the stanchness of the ships, there is assurance that the present floating palaces will reach port about as certainly as they start for it.—Indianapolis News.

A Priest of the World.

A most popular priest of New York is Father Ducey. During the past year his hair has turned to a crisp and silvery white, and it adds a certain benevolence to his always amiable face. There is just a suggestiveness of the clerical cut of a priest's attire about Father Ducey's coat, else he would be taken for a man of the world or an Irish orator. His theory is that a clergyman should be seen about among his parishioners, and go where they go. Hence he dines at the Brunswick, the Hoffman house, and other popular restaurants, is a visitor to the Russian baths up town, and a prominent figure generally wherever New Yorkers congregate.—New York Sun

A Maine Fatality.

Ezra Kenney and his wife Nellie crossed from their home on Moore Island to Green's Landing for the purpose of doing some shopping. They started for home about 6:30 o'clock. Next morning Mrs. Kenney's body was found floating in a small cove with her hands, arms, feet and legs horribly mangled from trying to scale the sharp, ragged cliffs that line that portion of the shore. The boat was anchored, and the body of Mr. Kenney was found entangled in the rope that held the anchor.—Lewiston Journal.

Masters of coasting vessels are finding comfort in the good ice freights offering from Kennebec ports. A fine quality of pond ice has been harvested and the ice dealers are now ready to forward it to cities south. To New York $1.25 and free wharfage is offered; Norfolk is taken at $1; Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia at $1.10. Tonnage is in demand.

Parliamentary Election 1890

To the Electors of New Westminster District:

GENTLEMEN,—Having been requested by a large number of electors of this District to offer myself as a candidate to represent you in the House of Commons, to which request I have much pleasure in complying, I beg to state that should you do me the honor to elect me as your representative whilst giving the present Government my free and independent support, I would do my utmost to favor the following amongst the many measures that I consider would be beneficial to the interests of this Province and the Dominion at large:

To urge the further improvements of the navigation of the Fraser and other rivers, the protection of their banks, the improvement of any harbors in this District, and the construction of canals where necessary for the purpose of allowing farmers and others every facility to reach a market.

To encourage agriculture by protecting all such articles that can be produced in this Province, and to lower duties on all that cannot, and which are absolutely the necessaries of life, and increase the tariff on luxuries so that the consumer would be even taxed less than at present.

To increase the representation in proportion to the wealth and importance of this District.

To increase and have adequate mail service to all portions of the Province and free letter delivery in cities.

No diminution in the Chinese Restriction Act.

To have the Fishing Regulations amended to meet the requirements of this Province.

To have a Dry-Dock constructed at some suitable point on the Mainland to meet the growing demands of this District.

To urge the exchange of Lands in Peace River for the Lands in the Railway Belt.

And that Mining Machinery be admitted free of duty until such is manufactured in the Dominion.

To appoint efficient Immigration agents in all important localities.

To urge the Dominion Government to contribute to make Roads and Bridges through Dominion lands.

To urge immediate aid in any measure to prevent the overflowing of Dominion lands in this Province and to reclaim those subject to inundation.

Having been a resident of this District for over twenty years and knowing its requirements, I should be in a position to advocate your interests, and also my having had the honor to be your representative for the last four years in the Provincial Legislature would place me in a position of knowing something of Legislative routine.

I hope to visit each polling station during the canvass and more fully explain my views on the various topics of the day, which would be impossible to do in a short address.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
WM. H. LADNER.

"RAINBOW"

Commencing on THURSDAY, May 15th, 1890, the steamer Rainbow will leave Victoria every Wednesday, calling at the different ports, thence to Nanaimo, Comox, Texada Island and all the logging camps on Discovery Passage and Johnston Straits.

From there she will go to Port Neville, returning to Victoria by the same route.

Parliamentary Election. 1890

To the Electors of New Westminster District:

GENTLEMEN: As I have already announced, I beg to offer myself as a candidate for the seat in the Commons made vacant by the death of our late member, and I come before you as a supporter of the Government of Sir John Macdonald, reserving to myself, of course, the right to act independently should the action of the Government in any matter seem prejudical to our interests.

I would strongly urge immediate attention to the improvement of the River where required, for the protection of the rich agricultural lands of the District, and, if elected, I shall at once proceed to Ottawa and leave no stone untumed to secure the immediate appointment of a competent engineer with a view to the prompt undertaking of this most important work.

As you are aware, the duty on certain kinds of mining machinery has been remitted in this Province as a special concession to British Columbia on account of the special conditions obtaining here. I would strongly urge the further application of this principle of special tariff arrangements, so as to relieve consumers of goods which must be imported, while preserving the protection of our agricultural and other interests.

The land laws of the Dominion, having been framed without close consideration of our requirements, are in many points unsuitable, for example in the conditions as to clearing. I would endeavor to secure immediate reform in this important matter.

Subsidies having been granted to railways in the various provinces of the Dominion, I should urgently present the claims to similar assistance of railways within our own Province.

Should the City of New Westminster decide to build a bridge across the Fraser, I should use my best endeavors to obtain a substantial subsidy for the work, urging that an undertaking of this character should rank with canals and railways as one entitled to national aid.

The next census will undoubtedly show such an increase in the wealth and population of this District as will constitute an undeniable claim to increased representation in the Commons. That claim, if elected, I shall support to the utmost of my ability.

Although, with the growth of the District, the mail service has been improved and extended, it still lags far behind our requirements. I should give special attention to this part of your representative's work, feeling that it is one which is of vital importance.

I should urge the enactment of such fishery regulations, especially in the issuing of licences, as would, without any injustice to the canneries, the importance of which to the prosperity of the District all must recognize, fully protect the free fishermen, and encourage the settlement amongst us of the greatest possible number of that industrious and hardy class of men.

All enactments and regulations for the protection of white labor would receive my hearty support.

Continued work towards the improvement of the harbors of New Westminster and Vancouver, and the efficient lighting and buoying of the same, is a matter which would have my closest attention at all times.

In a word, I should constantly urge upon the Government the wisdom of a liberal policy in public works in this District, the vast resources of which make it certain that such a policy would be amply justified by results.

Trusting to have the opportunity of seeing every elector before polling day.

I am, Gentlemen,
Very sincerely yours,
214 tf GORDON E. CORBOULD.

To the Electors!

At the request of a number of prominent residents of the District of New Westminster, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Representative of the District in the House of Commons.

THE CITY.

The Chief's Salary—South Arm Service—Supreme Court—The Contest in Cassiar—Demand Big Pay—New Advertisements Today.

The Chief's Salary.

There is probably no man in the employ of the city that receives less salary for the amount of work he is required to do than the Chief of Police. As sanitary inspector alone his services are worth $50 per month, and to properly fulfil the duties of that office he should receive that salary in addition to his stipend as head of the police department. A trusty, faithful servant should receive the highest possible wages. The people will not begrudge it.

South Arm Service.

The council should certainly appropriate something towards a proper daily service between this city and the South Arm of the Fraser. The settlements in that portion of the Lower Fraser Valley are among the most important tributaries to this city, and their trade will certainly (and of right ought to) go to the most convenient market, and the one offering the better inducements. Vancouver is putting forth every effort to capture this trade, and if New Westminster is not up and doing she will soon find herself side-tracked.

The Contest in Cassiar.

Nomination day in the district of Cassiar has been fixed for the 1st of August, and the election of a member to represent the district in the Provincial House takes place on the 1st of September. A gentleman who knows Cassiar well, and speaks without political prejudice, says that Mr. Hall is a sure winner. Judge Graham, whose only object in entering the field was to keep out Mr. Cunningham, the Opposition candidate, has retired in Mr. Hall's favor, and the fight will be a straight party battle, in which, unfortunately for him, Mr. Cunningham is handicapped by his own unpopularity.

Demand Big Pay.

The schooner Venture, Capt. McLeod, which returned to port yesterday, was unable to do any sealing as she intended when leaving here. Her captain visited the West Coast stations where Indian hunters are usually obtained, but at each place the Siwashes demanded exorbitant wages, and refused to ship unless their own terms were accepted. For each skin the hunters asked $4.50, together with $300 for their "boss," and $30 and two sacks of flour as a bonus for each canoe. At those figures sealing could not be made profitable, and so in the hope of obtaining white hunters, the Venture came home. She brought from the West Coast 72 barrels of oil, and a few stray skins.—Colonist.

Supreme Court.

(Before the Hon. Mr. Justice McCreight.)

McQuarrie v. Lemon—Action for an account of partnership dealings between the plaintiff and defendant. The defendant disputed the plaintiff's claim to an account in respect of all the matters claimed, but on the case being called the parties agreed to an account as claimed being taken. Mr. Eckstein for plaintiff, Mr. Campbell for defendant.

Mr. John Campbell, who was called to the bar of this Province, was introduced to the court by Mr. Eckstein yesterday.

The Nautical Nuisance.

Captains of river steamers plying between New Westminster and Harrison Hot Springs have registered vigorous protests lately about the inconvenience and loss of time occasioned in opening and closing the dilapidated draw of the Harrison River bridge. For several years the gearing on which the draw revolves has been badly sprung and is sometimes so difficult to open that steamers are obliged to hitch ropes to one end of the draw and pull it open, a-la ferry boat style. In its most yielding moments it requires seven men to swing it and these men have to be supplied by the passing steamboats, which necessitates a landing on either side of the bridge to let off and take on the men. To say that the river captains are becoming hostile to the apparent indifference of Canadian Pacific railway authorities is to state the case with candor, and it is to be hoped that the superintendent of bridges will have the draw repaired as soon as possible.

FACTS AND THE REAL TRUTH.

EDITOR TRUTH: SIR,—The letter of a so-called Workingman, in your issue of yesterday, reminds me of the story of Balaam. Not because he wrote like the prophet's ass, but because he ends by blessing, where he intended to curse. Could any advocacy of Mr. Corbould's candidature be more effectual than his?

It is true that Mr. Corbould was Mr. Cunningham's opponent at a recent election, and was beaten. Mr. Brown was also Mr. Cunningham's opponent at the last election. I suppose "A Workingman" would have liked Mr. Brown to have been beaten also. Mr. Corbould is no worse for being on the same side as our present local member.

Mr. Corbould has been indefatigable in the Local House, in the interests of his clients. "He almost slept there," writes "A Workingman." Is not this the finest recommendation we could have, of his energy and ability, and should we not hasten to retain him in the interests of the people of this Province? Workingmen can appreciate hard labor, whether of mind or body, in others. Let us then vote squarely together, and send a hard worker, a true knight of labor to our interests in Ottawa. We won't ask him to sleep in the House, but to be wide-awake.

A man's no worse for being a lawyer, if he acts squarely as man to man should do, and no one can charge Mr. Corbould with neglecting his clients' interests. He has been accused of neglecting his own and his friends interests in his present candidature, by letting his opponents get two weeks ahead of him. Perhaps some are not aware that Mrs. Corbould's recent illness was so severe, that her husband for a fortnight could hardly leave her. No real working man will complain of him for that.

In conclusion, we have the chance of sending to Ottawa, to promote our interests, at no cost to ourselves, a man whose services some business men have been glad to purchase at a high price. If we miss this opportunity, the man would more readily follow our instructions sent to him by a properly organized labor party, than would Mr. Corbould. Yours respectfully,

X. or L.

Laying Cable.

HALIFAX, June 17.—The cable steamer Westernland, which arrived from Bermuda today, reports the bottom very smooth and soft. She expects to complete the work of laying cable between Halifax and Bermuda the end of the month and it will be in working order a few days later.

Long Jump.

CINCINNATI, June 17.—Meredith Stanley, the world's champion bridge jumper, made a successful dive from the Suspension Bridge at 1 p.m. today, a distance of 100 feet. He struck water head first and after coming to the surface he climbed into a boat waiting for him and helped to row ashore.

Justice McMahon has granted a writ of habeas corpus to discharge Eliza Rossiter from custody. She had been sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs or 2 months imprisonment for profanity on the street.

Salmon are now running in very large quantities. Yesterday W. H. Vianen's fishermen caught from fifty to eighty to the boat, and all spring salmon of immense size, many of them weighing as high as seventy pounds. Mr. Vianen says the run of spring salmon, and their immense size, beats all previous years of which he has any knowledge.

In Imminent Danger.

The Slokan Ferry in Kootenay, which was repaired only some two weeks ago, again met with an accident, in which several gentlemen barely escaped with their lives. It seems, says the Revelstoke Star, that the scow had just left the landing, when the connecting cable snapped in twain and away she went, carried by the strong current, in the direction of the rapids. She was happily arrested in her mad career by a providential snag, which coming in contact with the vessel, gave sufficient time for the passengers to jump on dry land. Jack Evans, who had charge of the ferry, stuck nobly to his post, and endeavored to save the craft by throwing a rope over the obstacle. In this he did not succeed, and she drifted out into the middle of the Kootenay, when Jack, considering it madness to remain longer on board, hastily disrobed, and jumping into the swift stream, struck out for the shore, which he reached after much difficulty. The passengers, among whom were Messrs. Haskins, Brown and Kelly, the Legislative candidates, were afterwards transferred from the other side in a raw boat and proceeded on their journey to Sproat fully impressed with the narrowness of the escape.
