THE WORLD'S NEWS.

SUMMARIES REGARDING STANLEY'S POSITION IN THE DARK CONTINENT.

Health of the Prince of Wales, the Cronin Murder Trials—The German Emperor's Holiday—Dishonored Winnipeg Merchants.

LONDON, October 26th.—D. W. Freshfield, secretary to sir Francis DeWinton of the Emin Bey relief committee, in an interview regarding the despatch from captain Wissman relating to Emin pasha, Henry M. Stanley, signor Casati, and six Englishmen, said that the alleged trustworthy news of the African explorers was undoubtedly the same as contained in a message said to have been sent by traders and published nearly six months ago, stating that Emin, Stanley, captain Casati, and others were at lake Albert Nyanza in November, 1888, en route for Upwapwa. Continuing, Freshfield said the authorities of the Congo state have, since the publication of their despatch of September 12th, received sufficient evidence to enable them to regard as authentic news that Stanley, several months ago, parted from Emin pasha on the eastern shore of lake Victoria Nyanza, and started in the direction of Mombasa, where they expect him to arrive early in November. Stanley then attempted to reach the coast by passing down the west side of lake Victoria Nyanza. In this endeavor he was unsuccessful and retraced his steps towards the north, reaching the eastern shore of the lake accompanied by Emin. On the border of the lake he made a long stay, awaiting supplies, and at last left Emin there and set off, as I mentioned before, for the coast. My hypothesis of Stanley's intentions is as follows. His start along the west of Victoria Nyanza would, if continued, have taken him by way of Mirlala or Tebora towards the coast, opposite Zanzibar. Both these places are mission stations, and they are, or were, connected with the coast by a series of missionary posts, so that once at Tebora, Stanley would have been on the high road to the sea. Since the quarrel between the Arabs and the Germans, the whole of the interior become unsettled and it is by no means clear how many of these missions still exist and to what extent they would be able to facilitate the journey. Neither Stanley nor Emin at Albert Nyanza would be aware of the turn events had taken in the country so far to the south. But the revival of Arab barbarity and hostility has penetrated to the north of the great lake, and a revolution that took place not many months ago in Uganda probably accounts for the abandonment of Stanley's march south. According to reports that preceded the above mentioned telegram the leaders had to fight their way both in Nagumo and in Uganda. It may be that the resistance met with was the result of the change of plan, or that their was fighting on the southward journey in Unjora and on the latter eastward journey in Uganda. It has generally been assumed that from Victoria, Nyanza, Stanley would make straight for the coast, either from the south side of the lake toward Zanzibar and Lamu, a port recently occupied by a British chartered company. But reports described the explorer as moving down the eastern shore of the lake, and sending detachments to points along way south. All the evidence goes to show that Emin never had any intention of leaving his province. It will, therefore, surprise no one to hear that he has not accompanied Stanley beyond the shore of Victoria Nyanza. In all probability the explanation of this journey with Stanley is that Emin and his army acted as escort to their visitor through the wood difficult and dangerous part of his homeward route. The situation of the relief expedition when it reached Albert Nyanza was critical. And as the depot on the Aruwimi had been reduced to a remnant, Stanley's forces on rejoining Emin would be in a position very slightly if at all improved and hardly fit to undertake alone the campaign against a warlike tribes and new ferocious rulers of Uganda.

Investigating Cronin's Murder.

CHICAGO, October 26th.—The Cronin trial was resumed this morning. The first witness was county physician Todd, who testified that only dr. Eghert, his assistant, and himself had a combination to the vault in which the plate with the false teeth taken from Cronin's mouth was kept. He had not entered the vault since Cronin's death. Dr. F. G. Moore, present at the autopsy, was called and described the wounds and marks of identification on the body.

An exciting episode occurred during Moore's evidence. The witness was asked by attorney Forrest if he had not been in the court room while drs. Egbert and Peckins were testifying yesterday and if he had not read the testimony they had given. The replies to these questions were in the affirmative, witness adding that he knew of no rule of the court that forbade him to read testimony. Thereupon the counsel for the defendants moved that the whole of dr. Moore's testimony be stricken from the record on the ground that it was given in direct violation of a rule of court. After a moment's pause, judge McConnell replied, "I think this is a violation of the rules. The testimony of the witness is ordered to be stricken off." Intense excitement ensued. Counsel for the state were on their feet in an instant. W. J. Hynes was the first to speak. "If that rule is to obtain, your honor," he shouted, in a voice that could be heard out in the corridor, "we might as well adjourn the case now. It is impossible for us to keep our witnesses from reading the newspapers." Hon. Luther Laflin Mills interrupted at this point, "The rule of this court," he ejaculated, with arm and finger outstretched toward the bench, "was definite and clear cut. It was that witnesses would be excluded from the court room. We have obeyed this rule in the most strict sense, and if this new ruling is to prevail we may as well, as my colleague says, "stop this case here and now." A lively verbal war followed in which Forrest, Mills, and Hynes participated. Forrest insisted on the strict legal interpretation of the rule. Hynes retorted that if the witnesses were not to be permitted to read the papers the result would be to bring the case to a stand. Honest men would come there and admit they had read testimony while others would deny it, and the advantage would be with the liars and perjurers. "Then don't bring perjurers here to testify," shouted judge Wing at the top of his voice. When the commotion had subsided judge McConnell with calm and deliberate manner announced that he had reversed his decision and dr. Moore's testimony was admitted to the record. The defense took exception. Patrick Dinan, the north side liveryman, was then called to the stand. He testified that detective Coughlin on the day of dr. Cronin's disappearance had engaged a rig for a friendly description of how the mysterious stranger had called for it, how the now celebrated white horse had been hitched up, and other details which were made public shortly after the discovery of the body by the workmen in the lake View conduit. Forrest wanted all this testimony stricken out but the motion was peremptorily denied. The cross-examination failed to shake the liveryman's story. He said that the first person that took out the white horse after May 4th was captain Schack, and who had possession of the rig when it was consigned by Frank Scanlan. The witness went on to say that after he had told his story to captain Schack he met Coughlin. The detective said to him, "Well, I hope you are satisfied now." Dinan replied he had done the only thing he could do. "Well," said Coughlin, "I'd hate to put anything dirty in your way. Yours is a clear case of weakening." To this the witness responded, "Well, if you put anything wrong before me I'll weaken mighty quick, as quick as a lay steer." Further cross-examination failed to weaken the liveryman's testimony and when he was released from the stand recess was taken.

Immediately after landing the party took a special train for Athens were they were welcomed by the Greek minister, foreign diplomats and others. Alighting from the train the party entered state carriages and were driven to the palace. The route was lined with troops behind which there were immense crowds of people, who cheered the visiters enthusiastically.

Portugal's Dead King.

LISBON, October 26th.—The funeral services over the body of the late Louis I., king of Portugal, took place today. A large number of notable persons including foreign diplomats and cabinet ministers were present. Among the floral offerings was a wreath placed upon the coffin by the widowed queen, bearing the inscription: "A souvenir of the soul, heart and eternal love of thy inconsolable wife in death and life, Maria."

The cortege started at 9.30 a. m. Immediately behind the funeral car followed the representatives of Germany, England, France, and Turkey. Then came the royal mourners, the last carriage being occupied by the new king, Carlos I, in company with the duke of Montpensier and the duke of Aosta. The cortege arrived at the Pantheon at 4.30 in the afternoon and was met by monsignior Vanutelli, the papal nuncio, and the diplomatic corps and members of the royal household, who awaited its arrival in St. Stephen's church. While the party were seated in the barber's chairs, Shay who had been particularly obnoxious all afternoon made some insulting remarks to Kelly, when the latter jumped up and seizing a razor slashed Shay under the left ear, inflicting a terrible wound. In the excitement that followed Sullivan left the shop and calling a cab drove home. The police were notified and Shay was taken to the hospital in the ambulance. Kelly gave himself up shortly afterwards.

Gladstone's Compliment to American Statesmen.

LONDON, October 26th.—Gladstone addressed a large meeting at Chester tonight. In the course of his speech he contrasted the condition of the English workmen of today with that of fifty years ago, showing there had been within the last half century an increase of fifty per cent in wages, and the workmen of today enjoyed better and cheaper food and clothing. He urged his hearers and workingmen generally to study the history of the American revolution. The system of government in America combined that love of freedom and respect for law which formed a rare element of national greatness. The revolutionary statesmen of American, he declared, were the greatest of any epoch.

The latter is building a road into this city, but, to do so must cross the Manitoba tracks. It reached the point yesterday afternoon, but an injunction was served restraining it from crossing the Manitoba's right-of-way. The Manitoba also sent a long train of cars and two engines with a large force of men to hold the crossing point. It was expected last evening that the Duluth, Crookston & Northern Pacific people would attempt to force the crossing and that serious trouble would follow.

The loss will be nearly $20,000, about half covered by insurance. Miss McTavish, after letting her sister down from an upstairs window by means of two blankets tied together, when the building was ablaze, jumped headlong to the street and was badly injured.

A Mysterious Church Fire.

QUEBEC, October 26th.—The parishioners Cathedral of Port Neuf, are greatly excited over the mysterious happenings in connection with the recent fire at the Catholic church. It seems the flames would suddenly and without any apparent cause burst out in the most unexpected places—among the surplices, in the boy's clothing, in brooms, in front of the altar, in carpets on the floor, and it is even asserted that the table cloth was consumed on a table at which the nave was sitting. At the request of the church authorities, monsignor Hawel and a couple of other household clergy are to investigate the matter.

Warring Factions.

MONTREAL, October 26th.—The Club National, of liberal organization, held the stormiest meeting in their history last evening, several prominent members nearly coming to blows. It was largely attended by leading men of the party and there was a wordy war for three hours duration between the two factions, one made up irreconcilables of the old Rouge Liberal school and the other of Nationalists friendly to the Mercier government. There was an organized effort to oust Lebouf, the president, for having condemned Mercier's alliance with the Castors, and it succeeded.

WELCOME TO STANLEY.

ARRIVAL OF THE VICE-REGAL PARTY AT THE TERMINAL CITY.

The Day and the Decorations—A Brilliant Reception—The Addresses—Words of Praise and Prophecy—Departure For and Arrival in New Westminster.

VANCOUVER, October 26th.—The governor-general has come and gone and although he will return again on Monday still the back of expectancy has been broken and those who longed to see her majesty's representative have had their desire gratified. For days everyone was on the tip-toe of expectancy and those who had seen his excellency were questioned as to his personal appearance, his ability as a speaker and a hundred and one other questions all of which were of course duly answered.

Although the sun did not shine from a cloudless sky yet the Friday was propitious and withheld the rain until after the arrival of the vice-regal party. The streets were tastefully decorated for the occasion a fact which his excellency congratulated the people on notwithstanding that he has been subjected to an ovation of nearly three thousand miles in length. On the barrens of the lake Superior coast he was hospitably greeted by the inhabitants of that inhospitable region. He appreciated it and congratulated them on their taste in selecting such a picturesque place for their abode. At Winnipeg the threshold of the illimitable prairies, they showered their welcomes upon him and when after journeying across the prairies he reached the shadow of the Rockies, he was still the recipient of addresses to all of which he replied as any gentleman would. At last he crossed the backbone of the continent and at once a [illegible] came over the occupants of the vice-regal special. Their furs were cast aside as they descended the western slope towards the ocean of peace and entered the balmy climate of Canada's land of promise—British Columbia!

The special with his excellency, lady Stanley and suite, rolled into the terminal station of the greatest railway in the world at 13.30 o'clock, and amid a hiss of escaping steam and the cheers of the multitude they alighted and entered carriages which were waiting for them at the depot. A magnificent arch of evergreens spanned the street at the corner of Cordova and Granville streets, which reflected credit on the designer and builder, Mr. A. J. Nunemaker. The arch consists of four corner towers between five and six feet square. They are placed about thirty-five feet apart and support the whole structure. Topping each tower is a pinnacle, which rises to a height of nearly fifty feet above the sidewalk. The four arches are joined in a common centre capped by a tall flag pole.

"WELCOME TO OUR CITY VICE-REGAL" appears in large letters wreathed in evergreen on two faces of the structure, while the remaining two bear the words "Vancouver's Greeting." The whole arch is one mass of living green, which, on Monday night, will be illuminated with nearly one hundred incandescent lamps. From this arch the visitors will view the fireworks on that night. Leading from the arch right down to the depot and along the principal streets of the city are evergreens, which give those thoroughfares an extremely handsome appearance. At the footbridge spanning the track, and which leads down to the station, another arch was erected by Mr. Nunemaker, which bears in large letters the one word "Stanley." It is in keeping with the more pretentious one further up the street and is almost equally handsome. The appearance of his excellency was the signal for a cheer which was repeated again and again. Of course mayor Oppenheimer, the city fathers and the reception committee were in waiting. It was a great day for his Worship for never since he left "der Vaterland" was he the head and front of such a gathering of citizens. His Worship was introduced to his excellency by mr. Abbott and then the party seated themselves in the carriages prepared for them. Heading the way was a carriage "fair to hand" in which lord Stanley, lady Stanley, hon. Edward Stanley, A.D.C., and the mayor were seated. A squad of police under acting chief McLaren led the way and kept the enthusiastic populace sufficiently far from the wheels to prevent injury to any of them. A mounted escort was provided by the uniformed camp Knights of Pythias. They were: Messrs. H. C. Clarke, G. R. Upham, J. F. McFarlane, F. M. Blomquist, G. Fisher and J. W. Palmer. The marshals were sergeant McMurphy, and G. Black. The worthy sergeant attracted the attention of his excellency from the fact that his breast was one blaze of decorations. He had the Cuffe medal for the South Africa war, the Crimea medal, the Turkish medal, the French war medal (one of three hundred presented to the British army for valor) and lastly the medal for long service and good conduct. Tenantcd carriage contained lady Alice Stanley the hon. captain and mrs. Colville, and mr. H. Abbott. A third carriage contained miss Hester, mr. McMahon, of the grenadier guards, and lieutenant colonel Prior, A.D.C. Next came that with Sir James Grant, Frederic Villiers, (war artist of the London Graphic,) G. R. Major, and mr. Harvey. The carriages containing the city fathers, members of the board of trade, the reception committee and citizens followed.

The procession passed along Cordova street to Water street thence to Carroll street and along Cordova to Richards and Hastings streets and back by way of Granville street to the hotel Vancouver. The procession was a long one and the route by which it passed was lined with spectators. Arrived at the hotel which was decorated with flowers, evergreens and bunting for the occasion considerable the party alighted. On a platform on the side of the street opposite the main entrance upwards of a thousand school children were assembled. This too was decorated with flags, evergreens, and with the crowds of little ones who some day will be the statesmen and mothers of the fairest province of the dominion presented one of the most attractive features of the reception proceedings. When everything was ready the following address was presented by the mayor:

To the right honorable lord STANLEY, governor-general of Canada:

May it please your excellency:—We, the citizens of Vancouver, desire to express our gratification which we feel at the arrival in our midst of the representative of her most gracious majesty the queen, and we beg to tender you and lady Stanley a hearty welcome.

The first occasion on which a viceroy of Canada has visited this, the youngest city in the dominion, we hail the arrival in Vancouver of your excellency, as the official recognition of the completion of that great national work, the Canadian Pacific railway, an undertaking to which Vancouver owes its existence, and of which it is the western terminus. From that circumstance and from the [illegible] geographical situation which our city occupies, we believe your excellency will realize the important part which Vancouver is destined to take in the future commercial development of the dominion.

It was with the highest feelings of satisfaction that we learned that your excellency's government, in conjunction with the imperial government, had decided to subsidize a line of mail steamships between our city and the ports of the Orient, whereby the trade of the dominion will be enlarged, our commercial relations with the teeming populations of China and Japan be extended, a new field be opened for Canadian manufacturers and the sources of employment for our artisans be widened.

We have heard with much interest that your excellency's government, imbued with the patriotic idea that the various parts of the empire should be drawn closely together by commercial ties, has decided to send one of your most trusted ministers to visit the government of our sister colonies in Australia, with the view of making such mutually satisfactory arrangements as shall fulfill the purpose of his mission. We trust that his labors will be crowned with such success that before long we will have direct mail and telegraphic communication with our cousins at the Antipodes, so that the dominion of Canada will form the central position in a great route for travel and trade between the mother country and the greater Britain in the southern seas.

Your excellency's varied official career and the numerous high posts to which it has pleased her most gracious majesty to call you, will have given you both opportunities for learning both the vastness of British commerce and the immense responsibilities for its protection, maintenance, and expansion, which devolve upon those to whose hands is entrusted the direction of imperial affairs.

As a result of your excellency's experience, we believe you will readily perceive the important situation which our city must occupy in relation to both British commerce in this quarter of the globe, and the means adopted for its protection. British Columbia stands as a sentinel over British interests in the north Pacific, and Vancouver as the terminus of the railway, as the port of arrival and departure of lines of mail steamers, communicating with Hong Kong, and in the near future, as we hope, with the great commercial ports of Australia, must command the careful attention of both the dominion and imperial governments, as the means to be adopted for its protection form attack by any hostile power in case of war. Our spacious harbor, and the natural environments of our city, seem to show that this is the proper site, not only for a great commercial city, but for a naval station and a place of arms worthy of the might and riches of the great British empire.

During your excellency's sojourn in our midst, we trust that you will be pleased to visit our city, and to observe the progress which we as a people have made in building it up. But little more than three years have elapsed since Vancouver was totally destroyed by fire and the public and private buildings which panoce today have all been constructed since then, and are but an earnest of what, under the prosperity brought about by the wise measures and prudent legislation of your excellency's government, we hope to accomplish in the future.

We also hope that your excellency will be pleased to visit that noble tract of forest which, granted by your government for the benefit of our people, you were pleased to consent should be called after your illustrious name, and to view the proportions of this noble gift to the people of this city for all to see and enjoyment for all time to come.

In conclusion, we would once more express to your excellency and to lady Stanley the feeling of loyalty and pleasure which are excited within us by your presence in our midst, and we trust that the visit of yourself and family to Vancouver will be a pleasant reminiscence of your excellency when you shall have left our coast and be occupied once more with the weighty cares and responsibilities of the government of this great dominion.

THE SCHOOL CHILDREN'S ADDRESS.

Then followed an address by the school children which was presented by master Johnny MacLeod, little miss Edith Harvie at the same time presenting lady Stanley with a bouquet:

To lord Stanley of Preston, governor-general of the dominion of Canada:

Your excellency—The pupils of Vancouver are delighted to see you and lady Stanley in our midst and would unite with their fellow citizens in extending to you, both as governor-general of Canada and as representative of our beloved sovereign, queen Victoria, a cordial welcome to the city of Vancouver.

We have much pleasure in presenting lady Stanley with this bouquet, and our wishes are that we may have fine weather and that your visit to Vancouver may be a pleasant one.

Signed in behalf of the nine hundred pupils of Vancouver. J. M. MacLeod.

Vancouver, October 25th, 1889.

HIS EXCELLENCY'S REPLY.

In commencing his reply his excellency said he was sorry for the welcome he had received as represented at a loss for words sufficient to thank the people of Vancouver of her majesty. Although not the first governor-general to visit Vancouver he was the first who had come there by an all-rail route which links the eastern and the western portions of the empire and which brings them into closer connection with each other. There was perhaps some historical fitness in this fact, as in his capacity as secretary of state of the colonies, it had been his pleasure on the completion of the railway to flash congratulations across the broad Atlantic upon that great event. Next he touched upon the advantages in climate possessed by the people of this province in the working out of a prosperous future. He had seen on one of the banners "The welcome of a happy people without a grievance." [Laughter and applause.] He was one of the first, he said, to recognize the importance of this transcontinental route and as secretary of state had drawn the attention of the government to it, and he had urged the granting of the subsidy which had enabled steamers to be placed upon the line between the East and Vancouver [great applause]. Phœnix like Vancouver had arisen from her ashes and was rapidly becoming a city fit for the metropolis of any country [cheers]. It was the city through which would pass a large proportion of the mighty traffic of the empire. It had a magnificent future to look forward to, and its commodious harbor would yet be filled with the ships of every nation [applause].

He paid a tribute to the mayor and corporation for the part they had taken in building up the city of the west. In conclusion he hoped that he would find the same prosperity in those parts of this great dominion he had yet to visit, and the same loyal devotion to her majesty [applause]. The address of the school children was then replied to. He was a plain man, he said, and he knew from personal experience what it was to be a child. He knew what a holiday meant to the little ones, and therefore, on behalf of his young friends, he would ask the mayor to proclaim Monday next a holiday [great applause].

ADDRESS FROM THE MUNICIPALITY OF LANGLEY.

To his excellency sir FREDERICK ARTHUR STANLEY, baron Stanley of Preston, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, knight of the Grand Cross of the Most Noble Order of the Bath, governor-general of Canada, and vice-admiral of the same:

May it please your excellency:—We, the reeve and council of the township of Langley, district of New Westminster, in the province of British Columbia, in behalf of the residents of our municipality, most humbly and respectfully tender to your excellency and lady viceroness Stanley our most sincere and cordial welcome to this western province, and at the same time express to you our devotion and loyalty to the throne and person of our beloved sovereign lady queen Victoria, and the honor which you her distinguished representative confer upon us by visiting our district.

We regret that on account of the severe of the country the obstacles to traveling prevent your excellency from making a personal visit and seeing for yourself our fine valley with its wealth of soil and adaptability for farming operations together with its magnificent timber, and thus to enable your excellency to form some idea of its attractive resources.

We heartily wish your excellency and lady Stanley a pleasant stay in our locality, and a kindly remembrance of your visit to this interesting and important portion of her majesty's dominions.

In conclusion, we trust that your excellency and lady Stanley will accomplish your journey to the Pacific coast with safety and enjoyment, and that you may be individually blessed with long life and the highest happiness.

On behalf of the residents of the township of Langley. (Signed),

ROBERT MCKEE, reeve.
W. F. BURNS, Councillor.
GEORGE RAYMAN,
Township Council Clerk.

His excellency replied thanking them for their words of welcome and regretting that lack of time would render it impossible for him to accept their kind invitation.

Cheers were then given for the queen and lord and lady Stanley, at the conclusion of the address a number of the citizens and leading Indians of the district were presented to his excellency. The city band, and the Indian band, under the leadership of George Hood, rendered a number of selections in excellent style.

Shortly before three o'clock the vice regal party returned to the depot, where they embarked on the special train which had carried them across the continent, and a few minutes later steamed out for New Westminster.

At New Westminster.

ADDRESS: THE TRUTH, New Westminster, B. C.

The Truth

Daily Edition.

The lacrosse game yesterday demonstrated the fact—a fact apparent to every disinterested person who witnessed the game—that the betting habit is ruining the sport. Hundreds of men had had no further interest in the game than to win the money they had wagered; they cared nothing for the fine points made by the players; they had no desire to see fair play—except only when the play affected their bets; they did not go to the ground for any other purpose than to gamble. Those who were most loud-mouthed and abusive in their speech were the men with the most money wagered.

The betting habit goes further in its work of demoralization. Players are imported, not because those who import them wish to see a scientific display, but because they hope to win money. The expense of getting these imported players is large and it is to be recouped from the bets won; otherwise they would not be imported. The imported men have no local pride in the game; they are merely on the ground for the money that is in it. The home player, with intense local pride, is laid aside for the imported one who within a week after the game will probably forget the name of the club with which he played, while the home man is disgusted and demoralized at the treatment he received.

Then again it is not sport when engaged in for the money that is in it. There is no local player who can not afford to bear his share of the expense of keeping up his club organization; there is no need for charging gate-money, there is no need for casing people for seats to witness a game. And right here is where alderman Ewen earned the praise of all men who take pride in New Westminster and her local institutions. As one of the park committee, he strenuously objected to allowing any charge to be made at the gate leading to the grounds; he maintained that the city had expended a large amount of money in making the park so that its citizens and visitors to the city could seek recreation therein; that it was to be forever free to their uses; that it was a bad precedent to allow gate-money to be charged, and that a stand against the practice must be made some time, and might as well be made at first as later, when usage would make it far more difficult. And right there is where alderman Ewen was right.

Rather unfavorable comments are being offered on the action of the celebration committee with respect to the presentation souvenir to treasurer Fraser. That mr. Fraser performed the duties of his office for the celebration committee, and that he has otherwise rendered valuable assistance in carrying out the program, no one denies. But at the same time, why single him out from the many others who labored faithfully in order to make the celebration a success, and present him, in recognition of his services, with a gold headed cane; why not serve all the committeemen alike. Mr. Moresby and several others are equally deserving of some token of recognition. The celebration fund was subscribed for a particular purpose, and the right of the committee might be questioned to dispose of any portion of it outside of the prescribed lines. If they were desirous to make a presentation to any particular person, why not go down in their own pockets to do it, instead of depriving the base teams, who are in a manner the protectors of our property, of what many think properly belongs to them.

New Westminster is not the only town in British Columbia that makes good promises to its foreman, only to break them. On the return of the Vancouver fire boys from the Tacoma tournament, the people of that city made them promises of much; but have the promises been kept? The firemen say they have not. This is wrong. The Vancouver boys team did more to advertise the terminal city on that trip, by carrying off first honors, than many are aware of. To part pay the boys for this advertising, the people should present them with the medals so generously promised the day of their arrival home.

The Rev. Father Sylvestre, O. M. I.

He was for many years superior of the Oblate order and president of St. Louis college in this city and is now the rector and superior of the Roman Catholic university at Ottawa. From this royal city to Peace river and from Alaska to the Rockies he is well known, and in that vast district he has innumerable friends of all creeds and classes, and they will be glad to hear of his well-deserved promotion. At the inauguration of the university on the 9th instant he delivered a discourse which is described by the eastern journals as "evidence of learning, wisdom, and prudence." We regret we cannot give a full copy but the following contains the essence of the discourse. He said:

"I shall not delay you to describe the wonderful progress, both material and intellectual, of this, the queen province of the dominion. Its material progress is known to you all. The flourishing universities of Toronto, Queen's, Victoria, and Trinity college, sufficiently show the efforts which have been made by our separated brethren to promote intellectual advancement. As Catholics have done their share to promote the material progress of the dominion in general and of this province in particular, I doubt not that they are also willing to contribute generously toward the success and prosperity of this Catholic university. Her Catholic young men will now be afforded all the the facilities and advantages of a complete university education. This institution has long been empowered by the parliament of the country to confer the highest degrees in arts, law, and medicine, but the crowning glory has been bestowed upon it by his holiness Leo XIII., in raising it to a place among those great and noble institutions—the Catholic universities of the world. Hitherto the college of Ottawa has done great and good service to the country, but henceforth we may confidently hope, with the blessing of God.

"The want of such an institution for the Catholics of this city and province does not require to be proved. It is needed for the reverend clergy. No one doubts that the priests of Ontario are zealous, pious, and learned; but unbelief and irreligion are daily becoming bolder and more irreverent; history is falsified; the sacred mysteries of religion, and the truths of faith are denied and ridiculed; the arts and sciences are employed to overthrow, if possible, all religious principles, and even the church of God. Hence priests must become profound scholars, in order to be able to refute those false and erroneous teachings, and to discover and expose the sophistries of the enemies of truth. Such priests must have a university education—the ordinary course followed in the seminary will not suffice. Besides, it is high time for Canada to provide for a Catholic English literature. No such literature, as yet, exists, nor can we expect it to come into existence unless we have the men who have the time and opportunity to pursue such a course of study as is to be found only in a university.

"We want a Catholic university to form men who may become eminent at the bar. It is not sufficient for the Catholic lawyer to be highly instructed in the civil law of the country, he requires to be thoroughly instructed in the divine law of God, and it is especially in the Catholic university that he can acquire the knowledge which will enable him to detect and confute the designing sophistry of the enemies of God and of the people.

Nature has made this dominion a great and rich country; but to make it a great nation we need honest, upright, and learned judges and legislators; men able to take part in framing just laws for a state; men worthy of the confidence of both rulers and ruled, and such men are best formed in a Catholic university.

If the clergy and the legislators require a Catholic university education, how much more so is it needed for those young men who devote themselves to the study of medicine and natural sciences. What have of Christian faith and principles has not materialism wrought in men who practise these sciences? It may be the rough and uncouth materialism of the beginning of the present century, or, the polished and methodical positivism of England; or, again, it may be agnosticism so prevalent in many places at present; but no matter what name or title it may assume, there is no one able to banish it from the dissecting room, or from the chemical and physical cabinets, except the Christian teacher. Let our medical men and scientists receive their education in a Catholic university and then men will be treated as rational beings, nay, as beings destined to a divine life, the family will be respected and society protected from a thousand evils which now afflict it. Then Christian principles will prevail, industry, energy, and self-sacrifice will achieve wonders in the arts and sciences.

* * * *

"In conclusion, I appeal to all the friends of this Catholic university to work hand in hand together to make it worthy of its name and of the English speaking people of this dominion. It will neither destroy nor absorb the other institutions of learning, but it will unify and strengthen them all. I therefore appeal to the alumni to promote the prosperity and glory of their alma mater, to the Catholic laity to aid in making it an honor to their holy religion and a blessing to their posterity. I appeal to the reverend clergy and most reverend archbishops and bishops of this province especially, to watch over, protect and promote the welfare of this Catholic university that it may always be a great seat of learning, the school of true Christian science, the stronghold of faith, and one of the principal glories of our holy mother the Catholic church in this dominion of Canada."

PACIFIC COAST HAPPENINGS.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 26th.—This is the sixth day of the bicycle race. The score this afternoon was: Oaks 636, Rollins 606, O'Brien 586, Knapp 621, Reading 600, Murphy 652.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 26th.—James Finch, a sailor who came here on the British ship Amazon from Australia ill, was sent to the marine hospital. He left against the opposite advice of the surgeon this afternoon and went to the office of the British consul and demanded a certain sum of money. Clerk Moore said he refused him unless he received an order of discharge from the hospital. Finch drew a revolver and Moore fled. Finch fired, but the shot missed. Before he could do further harm he was arrested. He is sixty two years of age and partially demented.

VISALIA, California, October 26th.—William Mc-Tim, an ex-driver, aged fifty years, had a leg crushed by a redwood log yesterday. He died to death in three hours.

Boulanger's Father.

General Boulanger's father was a shabby little old man who used to hang about the poorest cafes on the boulevards, ready and happy to do any job for a franc, from taking a letter to a cocotte to ascertaining for you the last quotation on the Bourse. He was agile, active, very poor, and tolerably honest. At our time he was generally to be found not far from the Maison Dorée. He was, in the eyes of the cafe and restaurant waiters, a celebrity, for he was reputed to be of very great age, and it was well known to all that he was the father of a general.

An Outbreak of Diphtheria.

STARTA, KANSAS, October 26th.—The Russian settlement five miles west of here is afflicted with an epidemic of diphtheria which bids fair to depopulate the place. There are only three hundred Russians in the settlement, and there are now twenty seven cases of the disease. Six persons died last week and eight so far this week. The situation is very bad. They take no precautions to prevent the spread of the disease.

Dedicated to the Memory of Bryen O'Lynn.

Good people, beware of delusions,
No matter what others may say,
Never on Bryen O'Lynn draw conclusions,
For he has long since passed away.
Bryen O'Lynn has long since gone to sleep,
With his kindred and foes far o'er the deep,
Yes, my dear people, there is nobody knows,
When he will awake from the long calm repose.
Now we must here be brief for time cannot last,
And ghosts in these days are a thing of the past;
A Spirit is invisible wherever he goes,
And Bryen we'll leave to his long clam repose.
The greatest attraction this week you will find
Is Wintemute's boots, of the elegant kind;
Our boots are not Brogues from o'er the sea,
Nor yet are they made by the heathen Chinee.
Our labor is white as the down on a goose,
And our leather the best that is put into use,
We have boots here from London and boots from New York,
Boots made of calf skin with insoles of cork.
We have long gum boots and rubbers galore,
And Kangaroo gaiters from Australia's green shore,
We have boots and shoes with their soles full of tacks,
And barnigans kid that was shot with an axe.
"Visitors to the Exhibition," now here is a treat,
Just drop into our shop on Columbia Street;
Examine our stock and prices at ease,
And be convinced that our sole aim is to please.
Your feet and your pocket we know we can suit
And you will never regret dealing with Alf Wintemute.
Remember the place wherever you go,
And buy at the store with the sign Buffalo.

Johnny—"Mamma, is a lie dangerous?" Mrs. Treat—"I don't know, my child. Ask your father."

Geographical. Teacher—"Howard, what does N. B. mean?" Howard (after a supreme effort)—"New Brunswick."

Proud mother—"Oh, John, the baby can walk!" Cruel father—"Good! He can walk the floor with himself at night, then."

"You play tennis, of course, Mr. Snigglemitt?" "Aw, no! I only dwess faw tennis. Get all the weputtation without the tewwible fatigue."

"Good-bye, Emma dear. Will you be a true little woman until I come back?" "Of course, dearest; but don't stay away long."

Lady (in intelligence office)—"Have you ever minded children before?" "No, mum; but I've made many a child mind me."

Natural apprehension. "Why do you smoke such infernal cigars?" "Oh, just to kill time. Why?" "I thought perhaps you wanted to kill me."

McFingle—"How's that new cook of your—commercial?" McFingle—"Very. We haven't had to buy a broom since she's been at the house."

Charles Frederic Worth, of Paris, France, is a well-to-do dress maker. He started out a poor sewing girl in Paris. His sex saved him from a life of shame.

Watermelon seeds were found in an Egyptian tomb that was three thousand years old. There was no doubt about there being watermelon seeds, because the mummy was all doubled up.

Profley—"I hear you've been getting married, Tucker." Tucker—"Yes." Profley—"Whom did you marry?" Tucker—"Milly Jones, her mother, her step-father, and two maiden aunts."

Mrs. Pancake (to tramp)—"Well, what do you want?" Tramp—"Here, mum, is the pie I stuck up to your window yesterday. There may be two or three teeth stickin' to it, but otherwise I don't feel any."

He—"It is a fact, madam, that at present I know only two women in whom I have found all the virtues and excellences their sex considered." She—"And what is the name of the other one?"

Mrs. Snaggerty (reading fashion report)—"Mr. the Directoire and Empire styles are to be abandoned. What next, I wonder?" Mr. Snaggerty—"Something still more abandoned, I suppose."

Put a beggar on horseback, and he will ride to the devil; but he will never be able to show the cold, indifferent, haughty stare of the office boy who swings in the "child man's" chair during the latter's absence.

Such is the power of fashion's behest, that were Wales to carry his trousers on his arm, one half the dudes in christendom would be following his example. The other half would be waiting to find out which arm.

Complainant—"He applied an opprobrious epithet to me." Judge—"What was it?" "He called me a lying scoundrel." "Well, you seem opprobrious, but still I won't restrain you. It may have been appropriate."

Caleb—"I have just been looking at Uncle's latest study of the mule—showing mule swinging on a branch, against a background of cold, gray sky." Odes—"What do he going to call it?" Caleb—"Winter."

Book agent—"Going from door to door, madam, is a tiresome business." Lady—"Yes, sir, and it is very tiresome to have people come to the door and try to sell us things." Book agent—"Well, madam, I'm glad you feel that way about it. I'm a married man myself."

Mr. Newlywed—"Mamma, I want you to be very careful about the painter's art in our new house. We want it to be perfectly sanitary, and I want you to see that the painter does his work properly." Mrs. Newlywed—"Why, Jack, I'm surprised at you. I thought you knew that the painter's art is one of the most beautiful of the fine arts. I'm sure I shall be very careful about the painter's art in your house, and I shall see that he does his work in the most artistic manner possible." Mr. Newlywed—"Well, mamma, I'm glad you feel that way about it. I thought perhaps you might be careless about the sanitary part of the painter's art in our house, and I wanted you to be very careful about it. CHAMPIONSHIP LACROSSE.

A MATCH BETWEEN WESTMINSTER AND VANCOUVER RESULTS IN A DRAW.

Both Clubs Play Imported Men; and Both Clubs now Sorry for It—The Home Team Outplayed in the Last Two Games.

The lacrosse match which has been the all-absorbing topic of conversation for the past two weeks took place at Queen's park yesterday afternoon; in reality it was a vast betting ring under the pseudonyme of an athletic contest. Both sides had imported men to play for them, and the natural consequence was that it was a struggle not so much for the cup or the championship as it was for the benefit of the numerous backers of the respective teams. All local interest naturally flagged when it was found that the personnel of the Cup teams had been changed in favor of men specially imported from the east. The excitement was due not to a pure interest in the play but to the large amounts that had been stacked upon the result. Considering the conditions above mentioned, it was not at all strange that the play was anything but friendly; it was very unsatisfactory to both the contesting teams. The chief characteristic throughout was the unrestricted exercise of the malicious rancour and petty personal spite of men who have neither the manliness nor the generosity to deal honestly with an antagonist, nor enough spirit to fairly suffer defeat. And this state of things may confidently be anticipated as long as the same tactics are pursued. As long as this baneful and infectious practice of converting these matches into mere betting rings survives, so long will the contests be unsatisfactory.

Yesterday morning looks dank and chilly; the prospect was anything but hopeful for the afternoon's play. Despite the inclement weather, however, large numbers arrived from Vancouver on the early train with the visiting team, and as many more came over in the afternoon. The townspeople here were mostly lost on witnessing the event; a great number of the stores were closed early so that those engaged in them might have an opportunity of being at the grounds. While the match was progressing the heart of the city was practically deserted.

The grounds presented a somewhat doleful appearance. The steady drizzling rain had rendered the field miry and slippery; it looked most uninviting. At about half past two the spectators began to pass through the gates and when play was called the grand stand was tolerably well filled and people crowded the fence and balcony of the exhibition building as well as the space beneath the stage. A few isolated wagons were seen about the field. The teams were in readiness at about three o'clock, and the business of throwing umpires was proceeded with. S. Lowe of Victoria and captain Scoullar of this city were selected and consented to act; the Vancouvers, however, opposed Mr. Scoullar's election and that gentleman consequently resigned in favor of D. S. Curtis of Victoria. When the teams were ranged on the field ready for play their positions were:

Vancouver		New Westminster.
H. Finch	goal	Collin
A. F. Sterling	point	McDonald
D. Quigley	cover point	J. Whyte
J. Smith	1st defence field	J. McGuan
J. Bigham	2nd defence field	J. Stuart Campbell
W. Law	3rd defence field	J. McMartin
H. Rankin	centre	J. Low
D. Smith	3rd home field	C. C. Stewart
J. Simpson	2nd home field	Lewis
H. McGregor	1st home field	Ryal
W. McLean	outside home	Hill
W. Wood	inside home	Cambridge
W. S. Taylor	field captain	J. R. Foley
F. W. Matthews		Roberts

A few minutes were occupied by the placing of the men, and the regulating of watches; but everything was arranged as rapidly as possible, so much on account of the rain as anything else, and the referee was called over to place the ball. At 3.30 the word was given and the play began.

FIRST GAME.

The ball was faced by Low and Law, and was thrown by the latter far down the field. A lively tussle followed between Whyte and Smith, the former got the best of it and tipped the ball to McDonald, who sent it over to Lewis. He caught it splendidly and immediately travelled towards the other goal in a manner that surprised the Vancouvers. He was checked by Simpson and made a good throw. It was caught by Finch and returned. Again there was a lively struggle, the Westminster goal was assailed by a wild confusion of kilts and maroon and a heap of whirling humanity. M. Quigley came out with the ball and shot it far up the field. Lewis followed it up and ran at goal, but threw but missed. McLean returned the ball to centre and Simpson showed some excellent play and succeeded in coming off the victor. He threw to Quigley, who caught it, McDonald stood his ground and received the Sage hit fairly in his attempt. Whyte then passed the contesting couple and got the ball. He left the scene like one shot out far up to the Vancouver goal. It was passed upon by the players at that end and Cambridge was seen to be travelling down the field closely pursued by Smith. He suddenly stuck his head in the ground, stopped, and turned back; shot rapidly by and Cambridge threw the ball to Lewis. Stewart picked it up and made a splendid run. He dodged his way through the array of humanity and, when checked, threw it to Lewis. Ryal picked it up and passed to Cambridge who was immediately collared by Simpson, and some good play was witnessed; Cambridge finally got the ball and travelled like a greyhound. He made straight for the flags and sent a shuddering howl from the spectators around the first goal.

SECOND GAME.

After an interval of ten minutes the second game was begun. It was brief but it was exciting; it lasted five minutes. McGregor made the first good run and was checked up by McLean. The ball was handled down the Vancouver flags for about half a minute and travelled up the field. Ryal made a subtle effort to pick the ball up but Sackling got away with it. He threw to the side and Stewart picked it up. He was tackled and in the fight broke his hockey. Ryal picked the ball up and dodged in good shape and Law checked opposite well. He picked the ball up and passed it between the flags, thus gaining the second goal on the home team.

THIRD GAME.

The third game was not so public of good play as the first and preceding. The first piece of work was a brilliant catch and throw by Quigley and a fine pick-up by McLean. Campbell, to whom it was thrown, was of the opinion, and a general understanding. Stewart finally made for the antipodean goal for all he was worth, on the left side of the field. He was hotly chased by Bigham and Smith, and in the encounter which ensued, as others arrived around the ball, the spectators close to grief. The ball was returned from the Vancouver goal by Sackling, who caught in fine shape and dodged out in a manner that elicited loudly of applause. He then brought the ball about the Westminster flags, and that part of the field was soon a chaotic mass of players and sticks. Here the spectators were in the way, and constants called for the field to be cleared. An eight minutes interval ensued, during which the police and the field captains had their hands full in persuading the people to keep back. Play was at length resumed and McDonald threw between Smith caught it and made for the Westminster goal. The ball was taken from him and returned, and Bigham and Lewis wrestled for a considerable time and Stewart made a fine "scoop." Bigham headed him off, took the ball, and made a good run. It was returned by McDonald and caught by Sackling, who was stopped by Ryal after a good run. Simpson finally got the ball and drove it towards the Westminster goal. Collin was there to stop it as usual, but the lacrosse foiled him. The ball rounded the goal, passed through, and rolled between the flags. This was Vancouver's first point; and Simpson's stroke was acknowledged with deafening applause. The game lasted seventeen minutes.

FOURTH GAME.

By this time the play was beginning to be rather rough and it was evident that should the slightest provocation occur many men on either side would not have nerve enough to bolster themselves. The first noticeable piece of play was a brief but lively tussle between Stewart and Law. Stewart got away with it and made a good run closely followed by Smith who recovered the ball. He was in turn tackled by McMartin who played pluckily but failed. Smith threw high and far and Stuart Campbell made one of the best catches of the day. He ran and was tackled by Sackling who got the ball and threw it to Quigley; the throw was straight to goal; McDonald stopped it. For about two minutes the ball hovered about Vancouver's flags and then it flew beyond and out of bounds. When it was again in the field Simpson got it and threw to Smith; he missed and Whyte scored a splendid "pick-up." Whyte threw on goal, but Finch was there and caught; he returned the ball to center field. Campbell and Smith were next engaged in a hard fight for the sphere and both missed. Lewis got it and made a good run, he was followed and stopped by Rankin. The ball fell and Stewart picked it up. McGregor confronted him and a tussle ensued; in fifteen seconds that part of the field was the scene of a free fight. The contest was disgraced by an outbreak of malignant jealousy and petty spite that ended in the aggressor being ruled off the field. It appears that time had been called and Stewart reiterated the call, he was told to "shut up" by McGregor, whom Stewart forthwith consigned to everlasting perdition. McGregor had threatened to "do up" Stewart, and struck him fair in the face with his fist. Stewart was not captivated with his familiarity and wielded a blow with his lacrosse that displaced two of McGregor's teeth and sent him staggering. Words had done several foul acts before then; his captain had already cautioned him for his rough play. He rushed at Stewart and belabored him with his lacrosse, two more quickly joined him in this interesting diversion and Stewart had a bad time. A regular melee followed in which hard words and harder blows were exchanged. Polley did his best to stop the row but fared badly for his trouble. The spectators and the police rushed in and the matter was smoothed over. McGregor was ruled off the field. Play was recommenced after an interval of fifteen and twelve minutes. McBean made a splendid run and was checked in a masterly fashion by Quigley. The ball was then thrown out of bounds. Stewart got it and shot it down; it was caught and returned by Sackling. For awhile the play was hot about Vancouver's goal, when Quigley sent the ball far up the field to the right; it was returned and Rankin and McMartin dodged and struggled where it had fallen, while Bigham was travelling up the field with the ball. Twice the game was hot around the Vancouver goal, but from this point the Westminster flags were hard pressed. At 5 minutes past 5 m. Morris declared to act as he could not see the ball. He was immediately surrounded by a howling mob. He finally consented to continue and after a lapse of four and a half minutes the game was continued. Finch picked the ball up in a dexterous fashion and ran as if he was going somewhere. He was pulled up by McDonald who by a good piece of play, gave McMartin the ball. Then time it passed to Stewart, who threw down the field. Quigley caught it and returned it to the Westminster end. For a few minutes the sphere flew from one goal to the other, and Whyte made a famous throw. The ball was caught by Ford at the Vancouver end and was finally returned by Finch, who sent it a tremendous distance. It was then that the finish of the day took place. After a lot of manœuvering Woods threw at the flags and the umpire decided a goal. This made the score two each. There being but one more available minute and little light, time was called. The result was a tie. The umpire was not positive whether or not his decision was correct but thought the ball went through. It was too dark to be certain. Three cheers were given by each club and the crowd rapidly left the grounds.

Many apologies were tendered the referee for ungentlemanly conduct by those who had lunacies invited to remember themselves; all were sorry that so much unpleasantness had occurred.

The New Westminster club has challenged the Vancouvers for any day this week for any amount; the personnel of teams to be exactly the same.

SINCE.

I hereby beg to give notice that all bets made on the Vancouver-New Westminster lacrosse match are declared off, the game being decided a draw, result being two games each when time was called.

(Signed) F. W. MATTHEWS, referee.

A Big Base Ball Game.

New York, October 26th.—About 5000 persons witnessed the seventh game for the world's championship between New York and Brooklyn at the Polo grounds today. The weather was threatening, but the grounds were in good condition. Brooklyn put Lovett in to pitch and when that young man retired in favor of Bobby Caruthers at the end of the second innings he looked as if he regretted ever having crossed the big bridge. New York gauged his delivery and pounded out singles, two-baggers, and homers until run getting became monotonous. In the second innings Jim O'Rourke sent the ball sailing over the fence and it was probably the longest hit ever made on the grounds, as it cleared the fence by at least 30 feet. The cranks applauded the hit by standing on the seats and yelling like maniacs. The visitors made but two runs after this innings, Caruthers proving a puzzler to them. Brooklyn played a plucky up-hill game, but could not overcome New York's big lead. The score was New York 11, Brooklyn 7.

Trying to Shift the Responsibility.

New York, October 26th.—Among the resolutions passed by the executive committee of the National electric light association at their meeting today was the following: "That the currents now in use in this and other cities of the country are absolutely necessary for the successful and economical distribution of electricity for arc and incandescent lighting purposes, and that the accidents which have recently occurred in this city have been due to faulty construction and defective insulation, coupled with restrictive legislation and divided responsibility which for years has prevented such comprehensive repairs and reconstruction as would have insured safety and good service."

The Prince's Failing Health.

New York, October 26th.—The Times of London today says: "The prince of Wales stand the journey to Athens so badly and his failing health was so obvious that it was suddenly arranged two days ago that he should set sail for Egypt in a man-of-war on Monday, accompanied by his two sons. This breaks up a whole series of festive arrangements, beginning with a court ball on Tuesday, so far as English participation goes, and it would evidently not have been decided upon without serious cause.

Building Society Meeting.

A meeting of the New Westminster building society took place last evening, when a drawing of $1000 for an appropriation was made. The fortunate winner was H. F. Anderson, agent for Canadian Pacific railway company, whose number was 203. The next meeting of the society will take place on the 14th December next. Owing to an excess of three hundred members, the society will elect two additional directors at the next meeting.

A Colored Pastor's Predicament.

PORTSMOUTH, October 26th.—This afternoon rev. J. M. Armistead, colored, pastor of the Baptist church, was arrested on a charge of seduction. The victim is a young colored girl, a member of the congregation. The charge is that Armistead seduced the girl under promise of marriage and after accomplishing her ruin married another.

Not a Happy Lot.

BATTLEFORD, Northwest Territories, October 19th.—At the court here McGinnis and Atkins, two policemen, were sentenced to serve two years each in the Manitoba penitentiary for entering the house of A. Maurice and taking possession of a quantity of beer. Sheriff Hughes leaves today with the prisoners.

There's Luck in Odd Numbers.

WINNIPEG, October 26th.—Thomas Norquay, brother of the late John Norquay, is definitely in the field for Kildonan. This makes three candidates, namely, James Taylor, John Grass, and Norquay.

They Are Happy Now.

MONTREAL, October 26th.—The Nationalists are jubilant over the result of the contest for the legislature in Jolliette. Bureau, the ministerial candidate, increased the majority he obtained in 1886 of 116 to 199 this election.
