A Cat That Ate.

The Jess who lives in 16 Mott street, New York, is a fine looking fellow, with a mustache and chin whiskers like bunches of horse hair. His people, once every week, supply the table in front of the shrine where he hangs with all the delicacies of the season. Until two months ago Jess was supposed to stay his appetite by inhaling the aroma of the feast and the smoke of the incense. Every Sunday the stale viands were replaced with fresh food.

One Sunday when the attendant examined the table he found that half of the roast pig had been devoured. He almost fell on the floor with surprise and fright. He looked out of the corner of one of his eyes at Jess, half expecting to see him move; but not even a blink of Jess's slant eyes was noticeable.

The food was there for Jess, and he had a right to eat it if he wanted. But such a thing had never been heard of before. Week after week the food disappeared and the attendant went around among his friends and told them the marvel.

The new mayor and high priest of Jess determined to make an investigation. Accompanied by his secretary and the whole Chinese police department, composed of one man, Foo Yak, he went to the temple. He searched all the nooks and crannies of the shrine. One or two roaches ran over the carved gilt work, and a big gray whiskered rat fled across the floor and struggled through a hole in the corner. As the mayor turned around he saw sticking out from under the satin robe that covers the sacrificial table a human foot.

"Ai ya," he shouted, pointing at the row of toes. "To la loo la gay yah, yah," or words to that effect. The police and secretary came up, and in an instant the curtain was withdrawn. Under the table lay a wretched, ragged heathen asleep, and by his side was the half eaten ham of a roast pig.

"What you do here?" asked Jew Shing Poo, the mayor, waking him up. "Come, go out of here."

"My go out! My belong allee same one pieces Jess. What for my go out?"

His name was Ah Jim, and he showed fight. It was evident that he was demented. A policeman was sent for and Ah Jim was arrested.—New York

OLD WORLD TOPICS AND NEW WORLD GOSSIP.

Comments of the London Press on the Kemmler Execution—Cardinal Manning an Arbitrator in the Cardiff Labor Difficulty—A Number of Torpedo Boats for the North American Squadron—A Large Shipment of Frozen Meat from Australia to England—London Shipping Injured by Recent Strikes—Moffatt College, Near Montreal, Burned and Three Hundred Students are Quartered in Sheds.

LONDON, August 6.—In the editorial columns of the Standard is an article strongly condemning the publication of the minute details of the execution of Kemmler which other papers have indulged in, and denouncing the practice as demoralizing; at the same time the paper devotes two whole columns to the subject, including a detailed report of the proceedings in the death chamber, also a summary of the autopsy and the opinions of experts. The evening press are as unanimous as the morning papers in condemning the electrical execution on the strength of the first experiment. The Evening News declares that public opinion throughout the civilized world demands that Americans shall not repeat the outrage committed at Auburn yesterday. The Pall Mall Gazette deprecates the observance of the cruel methods in the execution of criminals, but condemns the diatribes of the morning press as unjust and unwarrantable. The American people, it insists, are the best natured and gentlest people in the world and actuated by motives of humanity in every undertaking.

Although neither Lord Dunraven nor Cardinal Manning has signified their willingness to act as arbitrators in the labor trouble at Cardiff, it is believed that both will be asked to do so by both parties to the dispute and that they will accept the invitation.

Ben Elliott, labor leader, addressed an immense meeting of union men in the public square at Cardiff last evening. He counselled the men to remain firm, but to refrain from violent demonstrations which would only have the effect to weaken their cause. Already there are signs that the directors of the companies are disposed to compromise on the basis of half of what the men demand but on the matter of the absolute exclusion of non-union men, the principal demand of employees, the directors are still firm in their refusal to accept dictation, or to depart in the slightest degree from their resolve to engage whatsoever class of men they choose to employ.

The Lords of the Admiralty have decided to send immediately a number of torpedo boats to the North American squadron.

The steamer arriving from Auckland today brought a cargo consisting of 40,000 sheep and 3,000 leaves, all dressed and frozen. This is the largest cargo of dressed meat that has ever been brought to England.

At Munich today the daughter of Herr Miller, formerly a member of the Bavarian ministry, was struck by a bicycle while walking in the park and instantly killed.

Shipping firms say that the port of London has been greatly injured by the recent strike, that the tendency of steam carriage is toward Liverpool and that steamers which would be discharged and loaded in Liverpool in four days and in London in eight days before the strike, have occupied twelve days since that event. It is claimed that the dock laborers purposely delayed the work in order to get extra pay after hours.

The mayor and several members of the municipality of Limerick have been expelled from the National League in consequence of their action in voting against Mr. Dillon.

One thousand cement workers at Medway have struck for higher wages.

Mr. Preece, chief electrician of the post office department, in an interview this evening, recalled the fact that he had denounced the use of electricity for the execution of criminals before the British Association in 1889. He reiterated the views he expressed at that time and declared he did not believe a powerful Leyden battery effective in the taking of life. The American plan, he thought, was as good as any, but the difficulty was to know what amount of electricity was certain to produce death without torture. From a scientific point of view he thought the execution of Kemmler was a failure.

VICTORIA, August 7.—[Special to TRUTH.]—At the Rifle Association meeting the scores averaged higher than yesterday but still show below last year's record. The number of competitors are about ten below last year, which is accounted for by a number of marksmen being detailed for duty at Wellington. The following are the winners in today's matches. Imperial Parliament.

LONDON, August 7.—In the Commons this evening Sir James Ferguson stated no arrangement had yet been made with the Newfoundland delegates. The under council, in regard to the inshore fisheries, he said, would expire at the end of the present season.

Regarding the treatment of Jews in Russia, Sir James said that reports had been received from the British ambassador at St. Petersburg, that the Russian Government emphatically denies the statements made by the correspondents of the Times in recent despatches from the Russian capital.

Replying to criticisms of Turkey's dealings with Armenia Sir James Ferguson regretted Schwann's unfortunate language, which he said was almost enough to excite the Armenians to rebel. Admitting Turkey had been acting with brutal cruelty, it was only just to say she had acted much better in this case than in the former time. It would be unjust to induce Turkey to suppose a revolution was imminent. Professor James Bryce said the Government was keeping the House ignorant of events in Armenia. He hoped the powers would unite in a stronger remonstrance to the Sultan.

Does Labor as a Republican.

As a number of American gentlemen were recently discussing the overthrow of the Brazilian empire, one of them expressed an opinion that Don Pedro had willing withdrawn from the throne, and another, ex-President Hayes, replied that he believed Don Pedro to be at least a republican, fully in favor of republican institutions. Mr. Hayes then, according to the Nashville Union Herald, told the following anecdote:

At the centennial celebration at Philadelphia, in 1876, I sat next to the emperor of Brazil. Just before Mr. Evarts began his great speech, Don Pedro drew from his pocket a well worn, well creased copy of the Declaration of Independence, a fac-simile of the original, with the written interlineation and corrections.

"This," said he, turning to me, "was given me by an American friend over ten years ago, and I have had it as a constant companion ever since. It's a grand, good document. I've made a close study of it."

While the Declaration of Independence was being read from the orator's stand the Brazilian emperor, with bowed head and eyes fixed intently on the well worn document before him, followed the sonorous word for word.

The impressive reading, and the accompanying thought that the project of "free and independent states" had been gravely accomplished, evidently made a deep impression on him. When the orator had courteously ceased the emperor, with bowed head, still kept his eyes on the last words of the page before him. Then looking up, his eyes dimmed with tears, he said, in a husky voice:

"A wonderful document! a wonderful document!"

"When I recall that incident," said Mr. Hayes, "there is not only pathos but prophecy in it."

A DASH FOR LIBERTY

BOSTON PRISON THE SCENE OF AN INCITED OUTBREAK.

All the Available Policemen of the Boston Force Guarding the Insurgent Convicts—At a Convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union a Number of Dioceses Indulge in Language Which Creates an Uproar—The Argentine Difficulty is Now Ended and the Citizens Appreciate it to Such an Extent That They Become Enthusiastic in Their Reception of the Newly-Made President.

BOSTON, August 7.—A general riot is impending at the state prison and 150 Boston policemen are on the scene armed with revolvers. The trouble is an accumulation of difficulties attendant on the enforcement of the Bertillon system of measuring and photographing prisoners, aggravated by the attempted escape of "Chicken Walsh," his recapture and subsequent punishment. At 2:45 today there was a general outbreak in the workshops. The men refused to obey the orders of their keepers or to return to their cells. "Chicken Walsh" was ring leader. After dinner the prisoners marched back to the shops very quietly, but hardly had they entered when a terrible and general yell broke out. The windows and furniture were broken and the men rushed into the yard and the entire crowd dashed for the various walls. The guards fired at first to terrify them but as several nearly gained the top of the wall the bullets were aimed to kill. It is, however, thought nobody was seriously wounded. The officers with clubs and pointed revolvers held the prisoners at bay until reinforcements arrived. Every available man on the Boston police force is now at the prison and fully 300 officers are massed in the yards and corridors. The guard on the wall has been more than trebled and all are armed with Winchesters and have instructions to kill any man who attempts to scale the walls. No count has yet been taken of the prisoners but it is known many have not been returned to their cells. Some of these are known to be hiding in the yards and it is thought one or two may have succeeded in reaching the outer world. Cordons of police guard the streets leading to the prison and the general public, including reporters, are excluded.

An Uproarious Meeting.

PITTSBURG, August 7.—At today's session of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America the report of officers and committees and the reading of papers on various topics were heard. First vice-President Father Shealy's report embodied reports from all the subordinate unions showing that the organization has a total of 763 unions with a membership of 53,219 in America. A motion to insert temperance lessons in the Catholic school books gave rise to stormy scenes. Father McTighe objected, stating that the church never sanctioned the movement and declared that a glass of wine, beer or ale will injure no one. Groans and hisses greeted his remarks and the convention was in a tumult. The chairman ruled Father McTighe out of order. That gentleman was not to be squelched and again took the floor, saying: "The insertion here all German Catholics who uphold the church but want their beer." Father McTighe was again called to order. An excited Boston delegate who attacked the chair was compelled to apologize. The committee on resolutions reported urging legislation in the interest of total abstinence by all the states of the union and recommended the establishment of total abstinence societies in every church parish for the benefit of children, and urged the publication in school books of selections from the utterances of some of the leaders of the Total Abstinence Union. The resolutions were adopted. A motion to refer the wheel back question to a general council caused a repetition of turbulence, McTighe making a vigorous objection with pointed remarks. He was repeatedly hissed and created a perfect bedlam by saying, "salooni cannot go and must not go. Let us direct our efforts in new channels and win temperance by prayer and fasting." Father Shealy, author of the disturbing question, demanded that Father McTighe withdraw his remarks. McTighe demanded that a minute be made of his protest and left the hall. The motion was adopted.

Pellegrini's Palace.

BUENOS AYRES, August 7.—Telegrams of congratulation on the peaceful settlement of the disturbed condition of affairs are arriving from all parts of the republic and the public are around to a high pitch of enthusiasm. President Pellegrini delivered an address to the people in which he said the motto of the new government would be "Justice and Liberty," for which the executive and government will depend upon for their defense in public opinion. The address was received with deafening cheers.

RE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

EDITOR TRUTH: Sir,—You publish in this morning's issue a letter signed "Observer," who is certainly true to his name, as he has picked out all points which appear to him weak in the letter published by my fellow architects and myself in your issue of Wednesday. I will endeavor to answer all his queries, taking them in the order of his letter.

1. The points we find fault with in the "accepted plan" were stated in our letter to the City Council, which as also published in the Columbian of Monday, 28th July, and your paper of the 29th. I think they were clearly stated in that letter, which, I conclude, "Observer" did not see, as he now asks the question. With regard to the question of the extra six feet: Six feet extra in most buildings is an advantage; but in this instance it is not a question of whether an extra six feet would be better or not, but simply a case of following the instructions laid down. That is all.

2. "Observer" is perfectly correct when he says that "the absolute 60 feet is shown" on our, or rather the Council's "suggested outline of buildings," so that I cannot see that he really requires any answer to his first query, as he answered it himself.

3. "Observer" has been slightly misled, perhaps, by the way the "instructions" were printed in your paper, as the "other accommodation to be provided" was, by mistake, printed in the same paragraph as the requirements on the "second floor," instead of a separate paragraph as in the original copy. I do not suppose that any of the plans put the police court, etc., on the second floor, but "Progress" is not the only one which provides for the police court in a separate building, as I myself placed it in a separate block, opening on Clarkson Street, in the design I sent in, and I do not consider that either Mr. Grant or myself broke the instructions by doing so but rather on the contrary.

4. Observer is perfectly correct when he says it is a difficult, if not an impossible thing, to see the difference in elevations which are "equally proportioned in every part," but of a different length. But I think anyone who knows anything about proportion would at once see the difference if "9 per cent in the length" were taken off and nothing in the height, which would probably be the case if Mr. Grant's plan were altered to suit the "instructions." I quite agree with "Observer" that the matter ought to be settled as soon as possible, and I will answer for one of the "modern male Rachaels," that he will stop "lamenting" even if he does not get a place, if only the matter were settled on the lines laid down in the "instructions" given to us.

I am, yours truly,
RICHARD P. SHARP, M.S.A.
New Westminster, Aug. 7th. Architect.

THE FERRY.

EDITOR TRUTH: Sir,—I notice Mr. Punch's letter in the Columbian of the 6th instant. The junior member for New Westminster District takes pains to say that he in no way influenced the Council of Surrey in their action regarding the ferry landing on the south side of the river, but at the same time, whilst making that statement, he admits that he is opposed to the more convenient site. Mr. Punch having placed these matters before the public, I am of course bound to believe him, but it seems strange that at first he should be at great pains to cash his hands with the whole affair, and then to state that he agrees with with the action of the Council. He says that the shortening of the length of the ferry trip by the proposed new arrangement to that now in use, would result in a very small advantage. I have not gone into that in any great detail, but taking the Columbian's figuring on the question it would mean something like a trip to Hong Kong in the year. I do not swear by that publication, but if Mr. Punch desires to air his mathematical knowledge he now has an excellent opportunity. As to the value Mr. Punch places on his property—with that I have nothing to do. I am not altogether sure that I am just to Mr. Punch in crediting him with having penned the letter which appeared over his name. There are not lacking signs that the communication emanated from quite a different source. "The hands are the hands of Esau, but the voice is the voice of Jacob." CHABON.

FLOWER AND FRUIT SHOW.

The Last Day of the Exhibition a Grand Success.

The second day of the Fruit Growers' Exhibition was a grand success in every way. During the whole of the morning the judges were hard at work on their part, which they performed to the entire satisfaction of all the exhibitors, and as a consequence the doors of the building were opened at 1 o'clock. During the whole of the afternoon visitors were continually arriving, and at no time was the building overpacked, which was a decided advantage to those visiting, they having had an opportunity to closely examine everything. Among the prize winners the names of N. O. Tilly and A. C. Wilson, of this city frequently appear as exhibitors of flowers; while Thomas Cunningham, A. C. Wells and John Kirkland carried off many of the first prizes for fruit culture. A meeting of the directors was held during the afternoon but on account of the press of immediate business which required the attention of so many of their number, it was decided to hold the annual election of officers on the first day of the Chilliwack fair next September. Mr. A. C. Wells was invited by the meeting to read a paper on that day, on the "Profits of fruit culture in Chilliwack," and a similar invitation was extended to Mr. John Kirkland to read a paper on "Apples showing the most profitable growth in this Province." As both subjects are in the hands of practical experienced growers doubtless they will be well dealt with, and worth listening to. During the evening a large number of people, including His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Nelson, honored the exhibition by their presence. The selections played by the military band, under the leadership of Mr. Watson, were listened to by all with marked attention, and if the able director only heard half of the compliments which were bestowed upon him as a thorough bandmaster and musician he would feel a very legitimate pride in the results of his decidedly painstaking labors. Many a musician would make but an indifferent bandmaster, and while it may be said that Mr. Watson is a talented player, he has too, that rare faculty of being able to impart his knowledge to others. The only complaint we have to make is that the band forgot its loyalty in omitting to close this, the most successful exhibition of its kind ever held in the Province, by playing the time-honored national anthem.

Last evening while one of our local store keepers was proceeding along a path leading from the Camosun road his steps were suddenly halted by the presence of a large bear which obstructed his path. Bruin showed no intention to get out of the way on the man thought discretion the better part of valor and not being very anxious to come in collision with the bear determined to retreat which he did rather quickly.

The search for the Etta White, which was made yesterday, proved fruitless and it is now likely she will be left to the fishes. The water a few feet from where she struck the rock is exceedingly deep, and although repeated attempts have been made to find her they all proved without avail.

Yesterday afternoon, a boy named Thomas Nevins, who was employed carrying water on the steamer Danube at present in port, while going down the companion way, tripped and fell, breaking his ankle. He was taken to the hospital in an express wagon, where his wound was dressed and he was taken care of. He will be about again in a few days.

WASHINGTON, August 7.—The census office has just completed a rough count of the population of Chicago. It shows the population as 1,099,576, an increase since 1880 of 595,991, or 118.32 per cent. This makes Chicago the second largest city in the United States.

REMARKABLE EXPORTS.

The number recently to hand of the Winnipeg Commercial is full of interest to the people of this Province. There is not a page from cover to cover but some article of interest in relation to our country figures on it. One of the most interesting columns in the whole publication is that under the above title. As the writer very justly observes, people who rush through to the coast on the cars too often go away with the idea that British Columbia possesses very little natural wealth. The absurdity of any such rash conclusion is very easily shewn. The too prevalent notion that this beautiful country is a sort of second-rate Arctic region, a land of snow and ice, is gradually being dissipated under the educating influence of cheaper modes of travel and the circulation of newspapers. Exports from British Columbia will compare very favorably with those of any part of the Dominion in proportion to population. It is to be remarked that these exports consist largely, not of manufactured goods, but of the natural productions of the country. The import of raw material from other lands, for the purpose of manufacture, is comparatively speaking unknown here, although the time is coming, and that very rapidly, when the factories of British Columbia's cities will send the incense of their smoking chimneys towards the blue canopy of heaven. What the possibilities of our land are in regard to manufacturing industries it would take a bold man to dare predict. But while it is a fact that the export of manufactured goods scarcely figures, the truth remains indisputable that the total exports from British Columbia for the year 1889 totalled up to $6,811,511. These figures may very properly be said to be enormous. They represent the high water mark of our exports, and therefore, being, too, the latest returns, are the most satisfactory evidence we could wish for as to the prosperity of our people. The Commercial grows, with some reason, optimistic as a result of considering these figures. It is computed that our population is about 80,000 souls, and our contemporary asks: "What portion of Canada, or of the continent, with a like population, can show such export figures?" They certainly are most satisfactory, but wait awhile. In a very short time these returns will be augmented to such an extent as to startle mankind and hold the exchanges of the world by the ears. British Columbia as yet has not touched but the ragged fringes of her natural wealth, and if only people who today are well content at the return of a small percentage for the investment of their capital, did but realize the unfathomable depth of the riches of this western land, we should see such an immigration of wealth and labor as would cause the remembrance of the Cariboo gold fever to pale before it. We can only hope to hasten the time when this land shall be populated through its length and breadth, when its valleys shall everyone smile back to the azure skies, when the cattle on its thousand hills shall in a measure reveal the fullness of its glory, and when its golden wealth of gold and mine, of thoroughly developed fisheries and endless manufacturing industries shall unroll before the eyes of admiring mankind the greatness of this Pacific Province. To hasten that time by incessant detailing of the truth concerning British Columbia whether in conversation with the stranger within our gates, by letters to friends in less favoured lands, or by the judicious agency of the public press, is the privilege, and should be the pride of each one of us in some degree. We hail such signs of the times as this recent number of the Winnipeg Commercial. The spreading of the truth means for British Columbia the more speedy advent of her great and glorious destiny, the arrival of the day when the Pacific Province shall be known, and under development from limit to limit. This generation may not see that time, but it can do much to hurry it on.

ELECTROCUTION.

KEMMLER has been electrocuted, and his martyrdom (we can find no other name to call his death), should, and will we believe, settle that no other person shall for all time to come, be wantonly sacrificed in heartless inhumanity, even though he may have darkened the sun with the magnitude of his crimes. "Man's inhumanity to man" has reached its climax in the death of KEMMLER. The experimenting upon living animals with the knife has been defended vigorously by scientists, probably no less humane than their neighbors, but KEMMLER was the first and must be the last human being to be deliberately sent to "that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns," by doubtful method. The details of the execution were horrible. They were more, for they were barbarous, and seemed to reach that point where extremes meet, for triumphs of civilization as exemplified in the electrician were brought into requisition to do the work of savagery. The bill for the adoption of execution by electricity was the outcome of the following recommendation of the governor of the State of New York, made in 1885: "The present mode of executing criminals by hanging has come down to us from the Dark Ages, and it may well be questioned whether the science of the present day cannot provide means for taking the lives of such as are condemned to die in a less barbarous manner. I commend this suggestion to the consideration of the legislature." In 1886 a commission was appointed to report upon the existing system with the result of recommending a change. The law came into operation in January, 1889. The readers of the public press are familiar with the delays in the carrying out of KEMMLER'S execution. They came to an end on August 6th, instant. The remarkable circumstance about the affair is that it should ever have been permitted to have taken place. Its efficiency as a mode of speedy death was problematic, and difference of opinion on the matter was general, even among men of great scientific attainment. Health's Journal in an article written some time last year upon "Execution by Electricity" says "the effect of the electric discharge is an instantaneous extinction of life; but it must be said that this result is not in all cases a foregone conclusion." From this it is evident that the authorities well knew they were playing with the life of their man when they finally determined to electrocute him. The event of Wednesday will, we should not wonder, hasten the abolition of death penalties.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

One result of the Chin-Lushai expedition seems to be that on the borderland of Bengal and Burmah we have discovered conditions of human life almost prehistoric in their characteristics. We are assured that the various tribes inhabiting this mountainous region, which is almost inaccessible, resemble in their mode of existence the most degraded—or rather the least developed—aboriginals to be found anywhere. They have no knowledge of medicine, are naked, or nearly so, know nothing of religion, and are filthy in their habits. Only two acquirements place them on a parallel with their new masters. One is that they display considerable mechanical ingenuity, and can actually construct wonderful cantilever bridges. The other distinguishing quality of these mountaineers is that which tribes of them are in the habit of getting very drunk, swallowing enormous quantities of native beer. Whether this peculiarity or that of mechanism may be taken as proof of an ancient and extinct civilization we must leave the philosophical anthropologist to determine.

Coffees were difficult to describe, but Mocha, the best known variety, existed in two varieties—the "long berry" and the "short berry." The former was greyish-yellow in color, and gave a rich mellow liquor. The other was small, and of a pale greenish-yellow tint; the infusion was the same as the other, but cleaner and more delicate. Mysore was a good-sized bluish-grey berry, with more or less silvery covering, and yielded a fine, strong and clean liquor. Ceylon was a fair sized, pale greenish-hued berry, giving a beverage with a fair body, full but smooth flavor and very clean. Costa Rica was bluish-green, large and bold, giving a strong, useful, though somewhat coarse liquor. Java was a very fine coffee, with large oblong berries, varying from whitish to pale yellow and greenish. The liquor was strong and clean. Brazil was useful for mixing with other kinds, but it had a peculiar, almost unclean flavor.

Advices from Wuchang, China, tell doleful tales of the poverty of the inhabitants of the surrounding district. Many of them are so poor that they cannot afford to bury their relations, and consequently it is no unusual sight to see whole districts strewn with unburied coffins, which the local charitable institutions are rather slack about heeding, although they are supposed to attend to such matters. The attention of the authorities has lately been drawn to the subject in a way that will have the effect of awakening public sympathy with the poverty stricken people of the districts, and providing assistance for them in the exercise of the last sacred functions towards their deceased relatives. One morning in the early part of the second moon a great number of these coffins of the poor were found broken open, and rifled of whatever little valuables they contained. The most barbarous disregard of the sacredness of the dead had been exhibited by the plunderers in their search for the little articles of jewelry which the Chinese always put into the coffins with their dead. The authorities are on the track of the wretches, who are liable to decapitation, if caught.

A Great Principle of Bridge Building.

If one plank would hold up 100 pounds on the centre, then the two planks placed side by side would hold up 200 pounds, while placing the planks one on top of the other, and nailing them firmly together, they would hold up 400 pounds. In this way we see that, in order to increase the strength of the bridge we must faster than we increase the amount of material, the increased amount of material should go into the depth of the beam and not into the width of it. This is one of the first principles in the resistance of material, that the strength of a beam varies directly as the width—that is, if we make the beam twice as wide, it will hold twice as much; and that the strength varies as the square of the depth—that is, if we make it twice as deep, it will hold up four times as much. If we make it three times as deep, it will hold up nine times as much of a load. So that you can readily understand that, in order to increase the strength of the bridge or beam without increasing the material in the same proportion, this increased amount of material should be put into the depth and not into the width.—Prof. C. D. Jameson in Popular Science Monthly.

His Hair Turned Gray.

A printer, well known in Atlanta, had an experience during the past few days which he is likely to remember. Like many a better man he got hard up in Birmingham last week. He wanted to come to Atlanta and he crawled into the first vacant stock car he saw, and as it was night, rolled into one corner and went to sleep. He was awakened in a little while by a lot of mules which were driven in on him.

"Overall! well, I think I was," he says in telling the story. "But I wanted to come, and I thought I could pacify the mules so they would let me alone. I soon found that wouldn't work. They eyed me suspiciously, then bit at me and kicked me until I began to realize that there must be some change or my last days had come. I made up my mind to ride one of the mules. I tried one and was promptly landed against the top of the car. Then another, and another, with the same result. The fourth one was docile, and on that mule's back I rode for a day and a night. It was the most horrible ride anybody ever experienced, and you need not wonder at my hair turning gray."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Royal Potato Seller.

The tradesmen to royalty are entitled to put the Royal arms over their shops, and those of the Prince of Wales have the right to show his three upright feathers in the same way. One night the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Edinburgh were returning home rather late. When they passed Jos, the well known "tater" man in Pall Mall, they took a fancy to taste his warm and savory commodity. Jos with a red hot baked potato from the can, for which they paid a penny each and proceeded on their way. Jos had recognized his customers, and on the next day his "tater can" was done up with a glaring gilt sign showing the Royal feathers, and the legend, "Purveyor to H. R. H. the Prince of Wales." His stations of his apparatus oppose the Marlborough house, to the prince's mingled amusement and chagrin. The prince sent an esquire to order him away, but Jos refused to budge, and kept on doing a rushing business. At last the prince ordered Sir Francis Knollys to have him off, and the feathers were removed.—Detroit News.

Ancient Graves.

The graves of the form called "ship" are ones, dating from the early iron age, have been discovered near Aalborg, in Jutland. Similar graves having only been once encountered in Denmark. They are made of stones in the form of a ship, the outline of the body being strewn at the bottom. Further, nine graves with skeletons of later iron age have been found near Vinstrup, the size of the bones indicating that they were persons of small stature. In addition, four smooth rings of bronze, which, no doubt, formed a necklet, have been dug out of a peat bog in the same locality. A runic stone of great interest has been discovered at Kinnerulla, in West Gothia, Sweden, having hitherto been covered with moss. The portion uncovered represents a ship, the figures of two men, a great number of saucer shaped cavities, wheels, etc., engraven on the rock, but there are to be a great many more signs below. Some one has taken possession of it, and a full survey is being made.—London Standard.

Cloth Made of Glass.

A new and interesting invention has recently been given a practical test, namely, a process for making cloth from waste glass. In melting hundreds of tons of a broken Bohemian substance, the textile produced have many advantages over all other goods; it is incombustible, can be manufactured in all colors and of any desired length or thickness. The one property of incombustibility will render it invaluable to working near or with fire. It is also for ladies' dresses, and for other purposes, in place of silk, and it is said to be as glossy and lustrous, and is more easily dyed. It is stated to have all the apparent characteristics of silk, being as soft and more elastic. Its usefulness will, of course, depend much on its durability.—St. Louis Republic.

Literary Confusion.

As an illustration of the ludicrous results caused by bookbinders putting one book over another, Mr. C. Spurgeon, son of the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, mentioned in a letter that he recently in London, when he and another gentleman were announced to preach at evening services, he was astonished to read the following announcement: "Go Reward.—Two Fat Heifers. Mr. J. J. Knight and Mr. C. Spurgeon." Another read as follows: "Pigs fattened in six weeks on The Hermit, edited by Dr. Kennedy. Price twenty, and kills flies, beetles, insects and all kinds of vermin. Perry Davis' Painkiller for smoky chimneys, and notice to moth and rust your infants on Rush's marking ink, per bottle.—Cora Examiner.

RIVAL EXPERTS GIVE INFORMATION ABOUT A CURIOUS CRAFT.

Scouring, Dyeing and Patching the Garments That Have Seen Better Days. The Old Fashioned, Simple Process, and the Methods of a "Scientific" Cleaner.

One whole side of the shop was hung with what some people call "pants," in regimental order, dangling two by two from frames in a serried column, awaiting occupancy by their several owners. All of them were spick and span, like new, because they had just passed through the cleaning mill. In fact, that was precisely what the establishment might properly be termed. The sign outside said: "Steam Dyeing and Scouring."

A rather dilute specimen of youthful manhood with incipient side whiskers and a shrill voice was engaged at the moment in submitting to the notice of the attendant a grease spot of considerable size on that portion of the trousers he wore which is ordinarily concealed from view by the coat tails.

"I told you when you brought them here," said the shopman, "that cod liver oil was the one thing we couldn't remove from cloth. The only thing I can suggest is to cut out the stain and put in a patch."

The young man posed himself between two opposite mirrors, and, with coat tails still uplifted, surveyed with evident dissatisfaction an endless perspective of stylish customers, with unpleasant stains on the seats of their pantaloons, extending in a line toward Pennsylvania avenue.

"I don't think I would care to have that done. They're my very best trousers, you see," he replied, gravely, and a moment later he walked out.

The writer, who had come in just in time to witness this performance, asked how it was that pantaloons and other clothes were cleaned.

"The process is very simple," the shop man said. "It is merely a matter of soap and hot water. A pair of pants, say—and the same thing applies to other clothing—is first thrown into a big kettle of hot—not boiling—water and allowed to soak for half an hour. Then they are taken out and laid upon an inclined trough like table for scouring. This is done with a sponge, a stiff brush and quantities of ordinary soft soap. First the outside of the garment is cleaned by rubbing with the sponge and scraping with the brush, and next the inside, turned inside out, is treated in the same way.

"When this has been done, the pants are thoroughly rinsed in three successive editions of cold water, and, after being wrung out, are hung up in the hot air room to dry. Finally they are pressed out, and then they are ready for delivery. In cases where goods left here are very moderately dirty we only dry clean them, that is to say, the spots are taken out with benzine and they are pressed. Like most cleaners, we do mending and repairing, and it is no unusual thing for us to have a customer who takes it for granted that, for the small amount we charge, the clothes he wishes to have cleaned will be made over again, as to buttons and patches, like new, incidentally. Very many articles are left on our hands, mostly by people who find themselves unable to pay the charges upon them. Impecuniousness is the ordinary reason for such failure, but it would surprise you to know how many of our customers die or get into jail, so that they can't very well take their things away. All that kind of coats and pants along the rear wall belonged once to men now dead."

"How do you dispose of such things?" asked the newspaper man.

"To ordinary customers. People often come in here and inquire if we have this garment or that to sell cheap. As a rule we have something of the sort desired. We never sell to the second hand clothing men, because they don't pay fair prices."

The view of this interesting subject taken by an expert whose sign hung out only a few doors away was very different. Said he:

"It must have been one of those cheap cleaners that you interviewed. There is a primitive method practised by such as they, with soap and warm water, which do a very well for amateurs. Not did you ever see a grease spot destroyed by soap and water? Hardly, I think. It will disappear temporarily, only to come out again as offensive as ever after a little dust has had time to settle upon it. To really cleanse a pair of pantaloons, for instance, a much more elaborate method of procedure must be adopted. In this establishment a scientific system does the work. To begin with, all the men's clothing that is brought in is divided into three classes—very dirty, moderately dirty and comparatively clean. The three grades represent pretty accurately three corresponding classes of customers. It is undesirable to mix them up. Suppose—to take an extreme case—the germs of some disease were present in a certain coat; they might be communicated to other garments, and our business would suffer. Therefore it is that, after the clothes to be stitched have had numbers stitched into them with white cotton, for purposes of identification, the foreman divides them up.

"And the very dirty ones?"

"They have first applied to them a solution of chloroform, ether and benzine in equal parts with water. Next they are placed in a machine by which steam is forced through them at a tremendous pressure. What is the result? I can best explain it by referring to the chief disadvantage of the primitive process. Consider, if you please, that each piece of cloth has three sides, a right side, a wrong side and an inside. The inside is the web and woof of the material. Get a bad grease spot on your trousers, of course it goes right through the stuff and no amount of ordinary soap and water will remove it. You may sponge it out of the right side and the wrong side, but it still remains in the substance of the inside, and sooner or later it will reappear on the surface. We avoid all this by forcing the dirt out on the surface with the steam blast and washing it away as it comes. After the steam two more applications of the benzine, ether and chloroform are made; the article of dress is dried in a 'whiz,' or revolving tub, by centrifugal force; it is then hung up in the hot room to dry, and is subsequently pressed for delivery. There is no sort of spot that will not come out after that treatment. Moderately dirty things we treat but once with the chloroform solution before steaming, and clothes that are only slightly soiled we merely sponge the stains out of and finish with the iron."

"And how is it about women's dresses and such things?"

"For them we use mostly what we call the 'dry' process. This means the application of chloroform and ether. Both are wonderfully volatile, you know, leaving the fabric dry a second or two after they are put on. Just how they are used is a secret of the trade which I am not at liberty to disclose. Most cleaners employ benzine liberally, but in this shop as little of it is employed as possible, though it is a powerful cleaner, because it is a greasy fluid, and clothes treated with it catch dust readily afterward. The most difficult thing to clean is velvet. To make it look like new costs about $1 a yard, and few customers are willing to pay that."—Washington Star.

Old Time Whippings.

"A boy cannot be whipped smart," said a school master of the olden time; "because if he has not just done a piece of mischief he is just going to do it." In the days of this school tyrant, the cane, the rattan and the "clapper" were in almost hourly use.

The author of "Sketches of Brookline" describes the "clapper," the principal instrument of punishment used by Master Adams, a teacher who made his mark on his pupils.

It was a circular piece of leather, three-quarters of an inch thick and five inches in diameter, with a round hole in the center. A stout leather handle, flexible and stiff, two feet long, was attached to the circular piece, and made it suitable for spanking. Master Adams kept this "clapper" at his boarding house, where the first culprit in the morning was sent to bring it, that he might, while on the way, reflect on what was in store for him.

Another instrument of punishment, the "uniped"—suggested by the Latin tripod—was a stool with only one leg, and that in the middle. On this the offender was seated, and of course had to strain his muscles to prevent gravitation bringing on a fall.

On a long, low seat in front of the first row of desks sat the little ones, ranging from 4 to 6 years of age, who were called up once in the forenoon and once in the afternoon to name the letters of the alphabet. The rest of the time they were expected to "sit up straight and keep still," something which no bright, healthy child is able to do, for even an hour.

On day the little children disturbed the master by their uneasiness. He laid one child face downward on the platform floor. Another and another was laid beside him, then others piled upon them, till he had made a pyramid, with the greatest rogue on top. Then he seized the "clapper," and applied it to the topmost child, while groans and cries in every key proceeded from the squirming pile.

The public opinion which in these days hardly tolerates the modern whipping of school children, is a revulsion from the cruel whippings of a former generation. The present method may be weak; the old method was certainly unjust, not to say barbarous.—Youth's Companion.

Asbestos Mining in Canada.

Mining is carried on by cutting down the hills of asbestos bearing serpentine, much as a farmer cuts down a stack of hay or straw, or by open quarrying on the level. The rock is blast out, and the asbestus, separated from the containing rock, is "cobbed"—i. e., separated by hammering from adhering foreign matter. This "cobbing" is a comparatively easy matter in the case of the finer quality, as it usually separates readily from the gangue, but in the lower grades much difficulty is experienced in separating the fibrous matter from the enclosing rock. At best there is great waste. Much of the asbestus is in thin or narrow veins, and is wasted, as by the present mode of operating it does not pay to separate this from the serpentine. A machine that will enable these narrow veins to be utilized is a desideratum.

When "cobbed," the asbestus is graded according to purity, color and length of fiber into three grades and bagged for shipment. The finest quality or "firsts" finds ready sale at prices ranging from $80 to $110 per ton; "seconds" fetch from $30 to $70 per ton; while "thirds" may be valued at $15 to $15 per ton. In good mines the yield of asbestus is from 3 to 5 per cent. of the rock quarried, and the cost of mining may be put down at $25 to $30 per ton. Returns obtained by the geological survey of Canada show that, for the year 1888, Canada's output was 4,404 tons, valued at the mines at $220,000, and this the output of nine different mines. Over three-fourths of the whole was shipped to the United States; small quantities going to Great Britain, Germany, France, Belgium and Italy, and being used in domestic manufacturing.—Professor J. T. Donald in Popular Science Monthly.

Sponge Trade of Cuba.

Sponges are found both on the northern and southern coast of Cuba, but the chief ports to which they are brought for sale are Batabano on the south coast and Caibarien on the north.

Consul Little, of Havana, says that the classes included are sheep wool, velvet, hard head, yellow, grass and glove. Very little reef, if any, is found in Cuba. On the south coast, sheep wool and velvet are more abundant than on the north coast. Cuban sponges find a market chiefly in England, France and the United States. The island itself consumes about one-tenth of all the sponges brought in, and these are used especially for the damping of tobacco and for cleaning centrifugal machines on sugar estates.

The sponge fisheries employ about 1,000 hands, chosen exclusively from among the matriculados, or seamen who have served on Spanish men-of-war, and are still bound to serve when called upon.

On the south coast are employed vessels ranging from about five to twenty tons, carrying from four to eight men, and each vessel is provided with from three to six small boats. On the north coast open boats with one or two men each are used. The annual value of the sponges brought in by these vessels is between $150,000 and $180,000.—Exchange.

Charles B. Thorne, Practical Joker.

One day, says Whiting, there was a matinee, and old Tom Morris was taking his usual nap in the Morton house cafe. It was 11 a. m. The matinee occurred at 2:30 p. m., and Morris, who played a servant's part, was the first one on the stage. Thorne saw the old fellow asleep and he put up the job. The cafe clock was pushed forward three hours. Then Thorne bribed the theatre's call boy to rush in, arouse Morris, and tell him he was late. This he did. Poor Morris rubbed his eyes, glanced at the clock, saw the hour, and then rushed into his dressing room and made up for his part in a great hurry. With perspiration pouring from his face—for it was midsummer—he sat down to await his "call." All seemed quiet. Then the old fellow looked at his watch. It was 11:15 a. m. He swore a good deal, but rather than wash and "make up" again he sat in his dressing room for three mortal hours, and when he went on the stage he cast a reproachful glance at Thorne. He knew who was responsible.—Chicago Herald.

Portugal's King and Queen.

King Carlos of Portugal, who possesses sixteen Christian names, while his younger brother answers to no less than thirty, is personally one of the most amiable of monarchs. He is a handsome blonde young man, who carries himself with a military air, and is credited by his personal friends with considerable decision of character. He is a devoted sportsman, an accomplished musician, speaks seven languages, and paints in water colors—in short, he is a bit of a savant, like his relative, the unlucky ex-Emperor Dom Pedro. The queen is believed to be popular. She is tall and handsome, and was very carefully educated. She does not share her husband's passion for music, but is a student of history, delights in mathematics, and is a clever sketcher. She speaks French, Portuguese, English and German. She is said to take a deep and intelligent interest in public affairs, and to be exceedingly fond of her adopted country.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The steamer Delaware arrived from Chilliwack and way ports yesterday afternoon bringing 25 passengers and a full cargo of produce, amongst which was 165 bales of hay, 87 boxes plums, 70 boxes apples, 40 sacks of potatoes and 13 head of stock. She cleared again this morning for up-river.

Mr. McKenzie, the contractor, has been awarded the contract for the erection of the new Methodist Church at Sapperton.

Partners, Olympia, Wash., 8579. The exhibition of Oakes' Swiss Bell Ringers and Comedy Sketch Club at Columbia hall on Monday evening was well attended. The performance was all it was advertised to be, and even more. Harry Eades, the facial artist, takes the cake. The entire company did good work. The greatest comedy and musical event of the season, carrying over seven thousand dollars' worth of musical instruments. Oakes' Comedy Sketch Company and Swiss Bell Ringers. Each member an artist. Will appear at Herring's Opera House Monday evening, August 11th. 285-3t

Idaho Statesman, Boise City, Idaho.—Although it is too late to be of any immediate service to the John H. Oakes' company which played last evening at Capital Hall, still we wish to express our appreciation of their performance. The company, though small, has not a weak member in it. Harry Eades, in funny facts deserved all the applause he won. His representations of an old man of the Irish washerwoman of Jennie and nobody's child were simply wonderful from the facial point of view. Frank Hollister won a storm of applause, being called back the third time. The balance of the troupe were equally as good. We can assure them that on their next visit to Boise they will be welcomed by crowded houses. Will appear at Herring's Opera House August 11th. 285-3t

Westminster Wins.

The junior lacrosse match which took place yesterday at Queen's Park in the presence of a large concourse of people was undoubtedly a splendid one, for the men on both sides were evenly matched, and if any appeared the better of the lot, it was Vancouver, because several of their men were taken from the first team. The teams were as follows:

Vancouver.		Westminster.
Brown	Goal	F. Peele
Scurry	Point	Morrison
Higgins, E.	Cover Point	M. C. Clute
Brannan		J. Fraser
Higgins, C.	Defence Field	Sarsons
Miller		Macpherson
Campbell, H.	Centre	C. Grant
Lockhart		H. Taylor
Myers	Home Field	Wing
Hamilton		Turner
Quinn	Outside Home	Clute
Campbell	Inside Home	E. Taylor

Mr. McPherson, of this city, umpired for Vancouver, while Mr. Schofield, of Vancouver, umpired for Westminster. Mr. Foley acted as referee.

In the first game the ball was faced off by Grant and Campbell and almost immediately it was sent very close to Westminster's goal where it seemed to keep persistently for some time, until it was thrown down to Vancouver's goal, where it stayed a while without much effort. The rubber then went to Westminster's goal and it was put through winning the first game for the visitors in 25 minutes.

The second game lasted but three minutes the ball having been skilfully put through by Turner.

The third and fourth games were hotly contested on both sides, but both were taken by the home team.

The Vancouvers took the fifth and sixth games, while the last, which was to decide the match, was taken by Westminster.

For the Vancouver team Scurry, Quinn, Higgins and Hamilton did some solid work, and in fact the whole team seemed to be able to handle the ball better than our men. For the Westminster team little Mike Grant, who played centre and checked Campbell, who is one of Vancouver's best men on the first team, did some first-rate handling of the ball. He managed to trip up his checkmate on several occasions, much to the delight of the onlookers.

McQuarrie will some day make a rattling good player, for he checked a hard man, Scurry, who is another of Vancouver's first-team men.

The two Taylor brothers undoubtedly did the best work of any on the field. They will some day make very fine lacrosse players, if they require a continual practice.

Clute looked like a Trojan, but he must not get so excited, then probably he will have more confidence in himself.

Turner played a good game for one who has not practiced much.

We would advise the boys before going through a similar ordeal to practice harder, then they will not be obliged to drink so much water, which is certainly not good.

Something Every Person Wants to Know.

How to be healthy and feel good. Now, if you want to purchase the above articles it will pay you to examine the stock at Campbell's corner, Front Street. New stock arriving daily. You will also see the best assorted stock of ready made clothing in the city, all fresh and new, no cases opened up this week. Pants of all sizes, Suits for small people, Suits for large people, Suits in sacks, cutaways and frock, double and single breasted. Our aim is to have one of the best clothing stores in the country. There will also be found a good assortment of trunks, valises, hand bags and rugs, straps. Everything to be found in a first class clothing and gents' furnishing store. 285-3t

MARKETS REPORT.

There has been no very perceptible difference in the amount of business done during the past week, and if there has been any at all it has been increased somewhat, even more so than at the corresponding season of last year. The new hay is beginning to make its appearance upon the market in large quantities, the tendency being to cause a drop in the prices of a couple of dollars or so per ton, on account of the heavy yield on all the farms throughout the Province. The hay this year is of a very superior quality, no damage having been done to the crop by the local showers that have taken place. Potatoes remain at a steady price all over the city, it not being likely that they will go much lower during the rest of the season. The shipments of fresh salmon on ice to New York, Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg during the past week have been larger than ever they were before, the Local shippers having expressed over the Canadian Pacific over 30,000 pounds during that period. This quantity is something enormous, and simply shows that Fraser River salmon is becoming more and more popular as a delicacy in the eastern markets. The produce from the district by the steamers is beginning to arrive in large quantities and within the course of a fortnight or so these quantities will be very largely increased, while the boats will be taxed to their utmost capacity to handle the freight. Plums are beginning to appear on the market, and a more delicious fruit one could not possibly wish for. The prices are fair with a downward tendency. The lumber shipments still continue to be large, and so also are the local demands.

The following is a revised list of the ruling prices for the week:

Hay—$10@$12 per ton.
Oats—$40 per ton.
Bran—$22 per ton.
Hungarian Flour—$6.25 per barrel.
Premier Flour—$5.75 per barrel.
Ogilvie Flour—$5.25 per barrel.
Butter—Wholesale, 25c per lb; retail at 60c per roll.
Eggs—Retail 400/50c per doz.
Potatoes—60@c per pound retail, wholesale, $20 per ton.
Mutton—Wholesale 12½c. per lb.; retail 15c. per lb.
Veal—Wholesale 10c. per lb.; retail 12½c. per lb.
Beef—Wholesale 6c. per lb.; retail 12½c. per lb.
Salmon—For shipment, 6½c@7c. per lb. wholesale.
Strawberries—Wholesale 6c. per lb.; retail 8c. per lb.
Lemons—60c. per lb.
Cucumbers—Retail $1.50@$4 per cordful delivered.
Oats—Retail, per ton $35.50.
Wool—Wholesale 10@12c. per pound.
Hops—$5 per 100 lbs. green; $8 per 100 lbs. dry.

Matrimony.

On Wednesday evening last Mr. John Winters who has been the head steward of the Colonial Hotel dining room for some years past, was married to Miss Maria McCormick Coutts, a most estimable young lady, at the residence of Mrs. McMartin on Edinburgh street. The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thomas Scouler, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, in the presence of a few of the immediate friends of the high contracting parties. After the trying ordeal had been gone through the company sat down to a most sumptuous wedding breakfast at which toasts for the future welfare of the happy young couple were freely proposed. Mr. and Mrs. Winters have gone on a honeymoon and will be absent from the city about a week. The best wishes are joined with those of the numerous friends of the happy couple for a prosperous course through life.

Police Court.

(Before T. C. Atkinson, P. M.)

H. H. Williams was unlawfully beating the horse of A. O. Lund. After considerable unnecessary expenses the case was dismissed with costs.

H. H. Williams was charged with having used threats and violent language towards A. O. Lund. The evidence of Mr. Lund went to prove the charge and the defendant was bound over in the sum of $200, in two sureties, to keep the peace for six months.

A. O. Lund was charged with unlawfully beating the horse of H. H. Williams. This case was dismissed with costs.

Tom Welsh, for being d. and d., was dismissed with a caution.

W. R. King, charged with an infraction of the street watering bylaw. Mr. King thought it was a hardship for one whose office was in a business building to pay the sprinkling tax, and we believe it is his intention to test the bylaw. Remanded until today.

The stand at the exhibition occupied by the productions of Mr. F. T. Robinson, of the Forest Hill nurseries, has been favorably commented upon by many people. Robinson's flowers were not allowed to enter into competition.
