OUR CABLE LETTER

THE RECENT ARRESTS OF IRISH NATIONALISTS.

Chief Secretary Balfour's Tactics Scathingly Depicted—Germany's War Manœuvres—The Use of Smokeless Powder—The Emperors of Germany and Austria will go a-hunting.

LONDON, September 20.—The talk of the day in London is the sudden seizures of the Irish leaders, Dillon and O'Brien. This movement was evidently long planned. For several weeks O'Brien had been under the closest surveillance. Although not giving ground for the warrant, his speech at Mallow, his native town, appears to have been the last straw with the authorities, although his arrest and that of Dillon had been resolved upon when the reports of their utterances in the demonstration against Bishop O'Dyer at Limerick were officially submitted to Chief Secretary Balfour. The branch of the National League at Mallow declared in their address to O'Brien that "It would be as easy for a spider to encompass the Knockarmore Mountain in his web as for Balfour and his satelites to crush or suppress the spirit of William O'Brien." In his speech in reply O'Brien uttered words of defiance which probably led the Government to show its hand quicker than it might have done. After a most cutting review of the failure of coercion in which he spoke of Balfour as a limping ghastly shadow of what he had been, O'Brien added: "John Dillon and he (O'Brien) addressed the Smith-Barry tenantry in Tipperary the other day in far and away stronger speeches than the speeches he was sent to jail for 12 months ago, but the Government had pretty near enough of prosecuting members of parliament." These words had hardly been reported to Dublin Castle when the royal constabulary were hot on the trail of the orator. On the Sunday evening following O'Brien and his wife travelled from Mallow to Killarney where he addressed a crowd from the hotel window. On Monday morning he left for the lakes in company with Sheehan, M.P., and was followed by a policeman on the cars and when he went on the water the constabulary took a small boat and kept him in sight during the entire excursion. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien started for Glengariffe still followed by the police and he was arrested there as stated in Thursday's dispatches. As Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon spared no opportunity in parliament to and particularly those at Tipperary, for their abuse of power and their general perversion of justice and authority, it is certain that they stand no chance of a fair hearing in the petty courts presided over by those inquisitors who are of an entirely different stamp from the British justice of the peace. As the tenure of office of magistrates who enforce coercion in Ireland depends upon the will of Balfour, they are all the more ready to do his bidding, and go to any length to prevent the House Rule party from coming into power. Colonel Caddell, of Tipperary, is one of those magistrates who has made himself peculiarly obnoxious. His early training having chiefly been in India, he treats the Irish as he has been accustomed to threat the abject natives of Hindostan. Balfour, not being sure of as a pliant a magistracy elsewhere, shrewdly made his warrants returnable to this man's court, that just at this time should be published by the British Government's calendar of state papers on account of Irish misgovernment three centuries ago, when Hugh O'Neil, Earl of Tyrone, was playing fast and loose with Queen Elizabeth's deputies. The papers, which are from British archives, reveal much interesting matter never before exposed to public perusal. They show how the lands of Ireland were distributed among court favorites who never set a foot in the country, how the earl of Desmond was pardoned for the accident of his birth, writing as he did from the tower of Cecil that "he had never breathed out of prison since his infancy." How great the desire of English rulers of Ireland, according to Sir George Carry, was "to keep justice out, that they might tyrannize with absolute power, confiscating both goods and lives at pleasure," and that England's policy and that of the Irish chiefs was according to the English lord deputy, "to use all of the one or the other." Tyrone seems to have made the English so sick of fighting that the bishop of Chester wrote to Lord Burleigh that it was a common saying "better be hanged at home than die like dogs in Ireland" the lord deputy declared "two thousand Scots will amazed to Her Majesty would perform more service upon the traitor than twice as many English." The Scots, however, seem to have preferred the Tyrone side, 2,000 of them having been induced to join him by offers of wives and lands. Altogether the document is an excellent campaign publication for the Liberals as showing that coercion was no more a success in olden times than today.

ANOTHER COINCIDENCE

GERMANY'S WAR MANŒUVRES

in Cuilis this week have been highly gratifying to Emperor William and his imperial guest of Austria. By the Emperor's order all cavalry of the German army are now Uhlans. The lance fork is to have a hollow steel shaft painted black instead of a wooden one. The weight will remain as before but more durability is expected in the steel handle. The Kaiser has great faith in the lance, both as a weapon of defence and attack. The cavalry are also armed with carbines. The infantry has been given tents, quite an innovation in the German army, the tents being water-tight and capable of being used as pontoon. The soldiers continue to wear for stockings strips of linen smeared with lard which they bind around their feet. The cavalry showed excellently, and the troops exhibited but little fatigue after their severe exercise. Notably are the French exercises of this week of the shots being discharged without even smoke of the gunpowder to indicate whence the fusilade or cannonade proceeded. This new method of fighting has something mysterious about it and terrorizing. On the other hand it has shown that smoke so long or points as the place occupied by the enemy. The taste also of the general procedure of the French army manœuvres were interesting and eminently gratifying, and General Billot was complimented on all hands, and especially by Russian attaches. The commissariat and medical staff, whose failure had much to do with the disasters of 1870, proved in excellent working order and the closing charge was the most brilliant in its effect.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR

will arrive in Vienna October 2nd, and will go to Styria with the Emperor Francis Joseph for a few days shooting. The party will include the Grand Duke of Tuscany and Prince Leopold of Bavaria. Notwithstanding these imperial amusements and the fact that the Czarwitch is about to visit Constantinople and British India, the tone of the Russian press is full of warlike forbodings. The Moscow Gazette says that "Austria's policy is directed solely with a view to oppose Russia in her mission of freedom and conscious of this guilty attitude toward Russia it makes Austria dread that in future Russia may find a way into the Balkan peninsula, not through Rumania, but by Vienna." The St. Petersburg Nove Vremyia speaks with apparent authority of a possible Russian interference in Armenia, and the Armenians are known to be leaving Russian territory in large numbers with aims best, it is thought, on arousing an insurrection against Turkey. The result of the

is overwhelmingly in favor of Prince Ferdinand and his minister, Stambouloff, which has convinced the Czar that no course short of war will gain for Bulgaria Russian influence. This feeling is not without its bearing in autocratic courts like Russia and Germany. The Czar is married to a daughter of Denmark, while the wife of the Kaiser, to whom William is deeply devoted, is from Schleswig-Holstein and no two peoples are more antagonistic than the Danes and those of the state they once held in subjection. The Czar is determined by every affinity to ward Denmark and dislikes the Germans who wrested the province from that nation. While the Germans, Austrians, Russians, French and English are exercising their fleets and armies, Holland is trying the use of balloons for the purpose of reconnoitering in war. Holland has had a war of its own for about 17 years past in the island of Insumtris with varying success. It is proposed to establish a balloon corps to watch the enemies' capital and take account of his movements.

THE TWO EMPERORS.

Advices from Berlin state that the Emperor Francis Joseph and the Kaiser spent all night of Wednesday until early Thursday morning in close consultation and their majesties were especially cordial at parting. As no third person was present the subject of discussion is unknown, but the Kaiser remarked on the following day to the veteran Count Blumen in the hearing of his staff that "we now have in fact a united Germany." It is a subject of general remark that whereas there had been a good deal of courteous formality about the meeting of the Emperor and Czar, William and Francis Joseph were more like sons and father in their evident friendliness than merely allied sovereigns and the Kaiser, who had declined when in Russia a grand hunting entertainment prepared for him by his imperial host, was quick to accept the Austrian Emperor's invitation to a few days' shooting in Styria.

THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

Chancellor Von Caprivi is credited with the statement that the Triple Alliance would soon be strengthened by the formal accession of England and Sweden and that in the event of a Russian attack upon the Balkan states the German army would at once enter Russia. "Russia" says the mouthpiece of the Chancellor, "believes herself invisible, but she is one of the most vulnerable of nations. There are countries just as ready to divide her territories as she is those of Turkey. Germany ought to have back the old Baltic provinces. Sweden wants Finnland, and Austria would be a much better guardian of the Poles than Russia has shown herself to be, but we have no quarrel with Russia and do not care to have any. The German army was never in more splendid condition than to-day and improvements effected by the Emperor have won him not only the goodwill of the soldiery, but also the approval of his veteran Von Moltke, who came out of his retirement with nearly a century on his shoulders to pay homage to his sovereign. The English military attaches in Cuilis report that the troops presented an appearance far superior to the Russians at Narva, and showed a much higher average of physique and discipline. It is reported from Vienna that Germany has agreed to a permanent examination of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria, and that Austria may occupy Servia in the event of a Russian war.

Bony Runners.

NEW YORK, September 19.—The following special cable was received at the Police Gazette yesterday: "The international fight between McAuliffe and Slavin is creating intense interest. It is the chief topic here. Billy Madden is well satisfied with his man's condition, and sanguine that he will win. Slavin has been trained to perfection, and the Australian party are backing him with a vengeance. I have used my best endeavors to get free admittance for the newspaper men to witness the fight. I may succeed. Large sums have been wagered on Slavin. Many believe McAuliffe will not receive fair play, but with two referees who are claimed to be responsible and fair I think he will receive it. I shall be present and look after the American's interest, and will hold McAuliffe the £500 deposited in my keeping should he not receive fair play. I don't say McAuliffe will win but being an American and taking into consideration the fact that he holds the Police Gazette belt, he of course has the sympathy of every American as well as my own. However, I want to see the best man win and believe they will prove themselves heroes. I will cable the result at once after the battle is finished. (Signed) Richard K. Fox."

SAN FRANCISCO, September 19.—Charles Roberts and Sydney Huntington, who were arrested while engaged in a prize fight at the California Athletic Club on the night of September 12th were arraigned today and pleaded not guilty. They were held for trial, the bail in each case being fixed at $500.

Hard to Be Favorable.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—A study of the warrant upon which Dillon and O'Brien were arrested, shows that it fails to specify with any particularity the offences for which the arrests were ordered. The document is verbose and clumsy in style and matter. Mr. Healy believes that it is fatally defective, and that if the accused are granted an appeal they will be able to have the proceedings quashed.

Sir Charles Russell, the eminent barrister, apparently takes the same view, for in a speech at Darlington last night he referred to the shadowy nature of the charges and said that similar writs had been set aside in the past. This being so, he asked why might not a like fate await the present proceedings. The raising of this question by lawyers of repute has caused some uneasiness among the Conservatives. The Globe, for instance, expresses hope that a step so certain to concentrate attention upon Irish affairs and to rekindle the flames of passion which were gradually expiring has not been taken without ample legal evidence, besides a blunder in a matter of this importance should have a deplorable effect.

GREAT TORONTO FAIR

BRITISH COLUMBIAN EXHIBITS ARE MUCH ADMIRED.

In the British Columbia exhibits medals have been awarded to G. W. Henry, Port Hammond, for the best collection of fruits and vegetables; the Royal City planing mills, of Vancouver, for manufactured woods, and J. C. Henderson for a collection of fruits and animals. Diplomas have been awarded to A. M. Woodward, Nicola, for grain; Delta Agricultural Society for fruits and vegetables; R. V. Winch, Vancouver, for fruits; Provincial Government of British Columbia for collection of ore; Mrs. Sullivan, Nanaimo, for fruits and Mayor Hilbert, of Nanaimo, for a collection of exhibits and the New Wellington Coal Company for coal.

Toronto's Industrial Exhibition ceased yesterday and has been a phenomenal success. The total gate receipts were $68,000, $10,000 ahead of last year.

The Toronto lacrosse match today ended in a draw, Toronto and Cornwall taking two games each.

CHILLIWACK CHIPS.

Close of the Fair—Athletic Sports—A Grand Concert—Loss by Fire.

(From our own Correspondent.)

CENTERVILLE, September 20.—A meeting of the society was held in the agricultural hall last evening, which brought one of the greatest fairs ever held in Chilliwack to a close, the thanks of the meeting was tendered the ladies, especially the lady judges, for the help rendered at the annual show, and on other occasions, and to the president for the able manner in which he has conducted the society during his term of office. The meeting then adjourned.

A series of games and other sports of different kinds was indulged in during the afternoon. Mr. Harry Read was the chief instigator and supervisor of this feature, being ably assisted by Mr. Max Monet. Following are the prize winners: Half mile race—1st, —Morrison; 2nd, A. Evans. 200 yards race—1st, —Morrison; 2nd, L. Chadsey. Three legged race—Evans and Monet. Sack race—1st, —Morrison; 2nd, Wm. McDonald. Standing long jump—A. Evans. Hop, step and jump—A. Evans. Tug of war, Indians v. whites—Won by whites. The horse race was declared off and the money given to the Chilliwhack band.

A grand concert was held in Henderson's Hall on the evening of September 18th in aid of the Chilliwack Brass Band. The display of local talent in song, instrumental solos, dialogues, music plays, etc., the best ever given here. The hall was completely filled and some had to go away not being room to accommodate them. The proceeds footed up the neat little sum of $100. The opening chorus in costume entitled the "Rag Jig" brought down the house. The other numbers were: Song, Thomas Marshall, "Bold McIntyre;" dialogue, "Saved by a Dream," characters, Miss Mary Marshall, Miss Sarah McCutcheon, Mr. Ed. Johnston, Mr. E. J. Marshall; solo, "Queen of My Heart," by Miss Nellie Evans; song, Mr. Malvern; song and play by Messrs. Marshall Brothers, Johnston and Antwell; instrumental duet, by Miss Maria Marshall and Henry Kipp; solo, by Miss Nellie Evans, entitled "Flower Girl," which deserves special mention; dialogue, entitled "Scandal," by Miss Mary Marshall, Miss Sarah McCutcheon, Messrs Turner and Antwell. After singing the national anthem the crowd dispersed greatly pleased with the entertainment.

A. Thomson's bus met with a serious smash-up while going to the landing to meet the Delaware on Monday. While driving along the road the bus collided with a freight wagon which caused an upset. The horses became unmanageable throwing the occupants on the road and seriously injuring Dr. Henderson (at last accounts) the patients are doing well.

A fire occurred on the farm of Mr. James Batey on the 8th inst., which resulted in a total loss of his barn, stables and entire crop. No insurance.

Knights of Pythias.

On Wednesday evening next Captain Harling with a large number of the Sir Knights of the lodge in this city will proceed to Vancouver where they will assist in the ceremonies of constituting division No. 4 of that city. The divisions from Nanaimo and Victoria will also meet there, and the chances are that there will be a large number present. When the organization of this division is completed, this will make the fourth in the Province, and when another is organized a regiment will be formed. After the meeting in Vancouver of Wednesday evening the Sir Knights of all the divisions will come to Westminster and take part in the procession in which they should make a splendid showing.

Editor Clarke Injured.

We regret to learn that Mr. J. R. Clarke, editor of the Vancouver Evening Telegram, was seriously injured on Friday evening by being struck by the yard engine while crossing the railway track at Powell Street, Vancouver. Mr. Clarke is quite deaf which accounts for the accident. The toes of his right foot were badly crushed and he was otherwise cut and bruised about the head and body. He was taken to the hospital and the great toe was amputated. Mr. Clarke is a stranger in this Province, but he has been long and favorably known in newspaper circles in Ontario, and is a gentleman of much editorial capacity. It is gratifying to know that although an old man he is making rapid progress towards recovery.

Missing.

Among the old steamboat men in the Province is, or was, John Johns, familiarly known as Jack, who has worked as fireman on many a steamer that has plowed the waters of the Fraser. For some time past until last Thursday morning, Jack worked as assistant fireman for the C.P.N. Company on the steamer Irving, and about 4 o'clock that morning, at which hour the steamer left for Chilliwack, the last was seen of him. It appears that Johns, in his capacity as assistant fireman had to make the fire that morning and was obliged to stay up all night for that purpose. A few minutes before the hour of starting he was relieved by the head fireman, and being sleepy, the assistant reclined upon some lumber, on the bow of the boat, for a short nap. The boat had not gone very far up river before Johns was missed, but it was thought he had been left behind, and nothing more was thought of him until the steamer returned to her dock here on Friday night, when upon enquiry being made, no one had seen anything of him. It is thought that after taking a short sleep he was awakened by the noise of the steamer, and in a half sleepy state was climbing over the lumber on the edge of the guard, missed his footing and found a watery grave in the Fraser. Johns was a favorite among his fellow-workmen, who are much alarmed over his probable death.

THE BENWELL MURDER.

The Case Proceeding and the Evidence Conflicting.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., September 20.—The trial of Reginald Burchell for the murder of F. C. Benwell begins at the assizes here on Monday. Mr. E. B. Osler, Q. C., will prosecute, and Mr. George T. Blackstock, Q. C., will defend, other less legal lights being present to assist either party. The approaching trial has excited an extraordinary interest, and the evidence against the accused is discussed on every hand. The accused comes originally from Bainbridge, England. Assuming that he is proven to be the guilty man by the preliminary testimony a more diabolical and cold-blooded crime cannot be found in the records since Cain's first homicide. As to the history of the crime, passing over his early days in England we find him a young fellow of about twenty-six, making a new home for himself in Woodstock. It was in the autumn of 1888 that he came here with the avowed purpose of learning farming—farming in the English sense. What is known as the gentleman farmer is what he pretended to be. No one could mistake him for the farmer of every day. He was too fond of the roses and raptures of existence to tie himself down to real work. No man in Woodstock dressed quite so well; none could tell a better story and stop just at the proper point; none had his Burke at his finger-ends quite so glibly; hardly a man of them was better in the floating field, and as for dancing, his was graceful as falling water. He boarded with his wife at Mrs. John McKay's, lived well, drank champagne in preference to anything else, and was one of the facts of the town. And Mrs. Burchell was outwardly for a woman all that he was for a man. Pretty, lady like, with that soft voice that goes so far towards making up the charm of English women she captivated all who came in contact with her, without an effort. That was the charm of the couple. It was easy to like them. Mrs. Burchell's blue eyes seemed not yet to have lost the unconscious innocence of babyhood. It would be hard for any man not to trust her. She was the daughter of David Stevenson, of Upper Norwood, and had married Burchell secretly. Among some of the people in Woodstock Mr. and Mrs. Burchell were known as Lord and Lady Somerset, or at least they believed Somerset to be his father's title.

Six months of high living in Woodstock had brought him many debts and something must be done. In some English journals he inserted an advertisement like this:

Canadian Advertiser, married man, having farm in Canada, wishes to meet with gentleman's son to live with him and learn the business with a view of partnership; must have £500 to extend stock; board and lodging given and interest at 5 per cent. until partnership effected; healthy climate; highest references. Address Box—

And as the answers came his schemes unfolded. He would go to England and help the plans along, and in May of last year he disappeared from Woodstock, leaving debts and no unsavory record behind. So Woodstock passes out of the drama of the murder and the scene shifts to England.

Here his advertisement brought him in contact with his victim, or rather two of them. Douglas Raymond Pelley, son of R. P. Pelley, of Walton Place, Vicar of Saffron Walden, Essex, and a cousin of beautiful Lady Pelley, who was one of the suite of Lord Lansdowne, formerly Governor-General of Canada, was the first of his acquaintances and is in Canada alive. Frederick C. Benwell, of Cheltenham, England, his second acquaintance, is in Canada dead.

After much correspondence touching the nature of Burchell's business in Canada Pelley paid over £170, and was to receive in return all his expenses and 22½ per cent of the profits. "The gist of the correspondence," said Pelley, telling of it afterwards, "was that Burchell owned one mile and a half from Niagara Falls, a large farm, on which was a large brick house and barns, the former heated by steam and lighted by gas and the latter by electric light. I understood that the business carried on was buying horses in the rough and grooming them to sell for profit; that the farm was used to raise horse feed, and during his absence his business was looked after by two hired men; that his overseer was a Scotchman named McDonald, who lived not far away, and also that he had a branch business that he had only an interest in at Woodstock, Ontario, and had furnished rooms there in which he and Mrs. Burchell lived; that there was quite a number of Englishmen at Niagara Falls, and a club had been arranged which he was instrumental in organizing, and that the members lived in English style and had English servants."

According to Burchell the farm was a kind of Eden and success was to be had for the reaching out. Arrangements were made to sail on the Germanic which left on the evening of February 5, and shortly before sailing Burchell told Pelley that another venturer, Benwell, was to sail with them. He intimated that Benwell was not much of a fellow and it would be just as well for Pelley to have nothing to do with him. So Pelley was introduced to Benwell and at first treated him rather coolly. Mrs. Burchell was all tact on the voyage and made matters pleasant for everybody. Benwell told Pelley that he, too, was to join Burchell in the horse business, and when Pelley complained about another partner and threatened to withdraw, Burchell said: "Never mind, I shall find some way to get rid of him." Burchell enlivened the voyage with rainbow stories of profits to be made, and he had already sold two horses that had been shipped from England at a profit, announced that he had an agent named Maloney in New York looking after his interests, and so on. Sure enough, when the Germanic arrived Maloney was on hand, and Burchell greeted him cordially and introduced his two friends. The Germanic arrived Friday, February 14, in the evening, and four travellers went to the Metropolitan Hotel. The next morning they started for Buffalo and at noon the next day put up at the Stafford House there.

Buffalo was very near the mythical farm, and Burchell had to do much fine talking to keep the two young men from pushing on. It was finally decided that Pelley and Mrs. Burchell should remain at the hotel while

From these it is found that we imported $2,228,934 worth of goods from the United States; $976,139 worth from Great Britain; $395,076 worth from China; $90,774 worth from Japan. Next, as an exporter hither, comes Siam with $21,165 and then Germany with $20,847 worth. The United States, as is natural, having regard to their nearness and the consequently easy transmission hither of perishable and fragile goods, the largest exporters to this Province and what is also satisfactory is that Great Britain takes the next place. Too often German wares succeed in cutting British productions from the imports of the colonies, but this is happily not so here, Germany, as yet, taking a very subordinate position in regard to British Columbia trade. The extent of the imports from China, Japan and Siam is rather striking and indicates that there should ere long be developed a great and profitable return trade with those countries in British Columbian products. Another point worth consideration in regard to the figures quoted is this: A prohibitive tariff always tends to restrict a mere trade with the state or states against which the duties chiefly operate, and these British Columbia statistics show clearly how much the states will thus have at risk by reason of the adoption of the McKINLEY policy. The United States may injure the Dominion by their prohibitory measures; but they will also seriously assail a most valuable foreign trade with their neighbor, Canada.

The project of running special fast steamers between Milford Haven in South Wales and Labrador, and thence carrying by improved railway facilities, passengers and freight rapidly across the Dominion, seems likely to be realized, as influential English capitalists are behind the venture. This will, it is said, shorten by at least 3 days the communication between Great Britain and this Province, and prove of immense advantage to both, for there is no doubt that Canada and England suffer alike by the fact that the "liners" running between Liverpool and the states are more convenient, faster and better than those travelling to Quebec, Montreal and Halifax. The result is a large diversion to the states of British trade and British emigration. An Irish correspondent of the Montreal Star suggests that as a counter effort to the Midland scheme of the London & Northwestern railway, the greatest railway of the United Kingdom and vitally interested in transatlantic trade, may not improbably promote the establishment of a line of fast steamers between Galway and the New World. Historic Galway, a picturesque but unhappily half-deserted port, is in fact about the nearest to the American continent of old ports in the United Kingdom. If this scheme were also accomplished the rivalry of Liverpool, Galway and Milford could secure the splendid communication between the Old and the New World and assuredly weld closer together the interests of Great Britain and Canada to the lasting benefit of both. The Galway project having already been once tried without success is unfortunately, however, a less likely venture than the Milford one.

The enthusiastic Irish advocate of it brings, by the way, an amusing argument in its support. A Galway man named Eyre, he says, helped Columbus on the Pinta to discover America. Certainly if there was not an Indian aboard there must have been a Scotsman, "never so much at home," as the adage says, "as when he is abroad." A proverbial joke this, at which our Scotch friends can always afford to laugh, for here and elsewhere they are amongst the best and most capable citizens, and do well for whatever land they choose to make their home. Nought they ever forget their native land.

Dean Swift's Brother Dead.

NEW YORK, September 20.—Frederick Swift, for many years an eminent lawyer in this city and relative of the celebrated Dean Swift, died this morning of heart disease at the age of 56 years. He was a graduate of Yale and was formerly counsel for the Adams Express Company.

THE BENWELL MURDER.

Benwell and Burchell went on to the farm out from Eastwood alone and surprised the employees. Then if everything was all right Benwell would remain on the farm while Burchell came back for the two others—Pelley and Mrs. Burchell. The first two were to start at 6 o'clock the next morning.

The next morning was Monday, Feb. 17. Bright and early Burchell rapped on his victim's door, and the two went out into the gray dawn of the morning. Eastwood was reached at 11:14 in the morning. The conductor recalled how the two men got off there. So few tickets are sold to the little station that the name is written on the ticket by the agent, not printed. Eastwood is about six miles from Princeton, the place selected for the shooting. Burchell knew the ground well. A pond there was said to be bottomless. He must kill his man, hide the body and return to Buffalo, all between sunrise and sunset. And the body was found just a little distance from Princeton station; in a dense growth of underbrush and forest that rises over a marsh. Near by was Pine Pond. Mrs. Burchell had said before that Pine Pond was a delightful place for picnics; that she had driven over the ground. It is surmised that the original design was to do the killing near to Pine Pond and throw the body into the water. An attempt seems to have been made to drag it in that direction, but the almost impenetrable thickets and underbrush rendered this impossible. Besides, the bullet wounds cared blood, and blood was a tell tale factor that must not be trifled with. And so the body was found by two wood choppers, the little village gaped and gossiped over the matter, surmised and wondered, and ended by burying it. A few days later it was exhumed. Fancy the deliberate preparations of a murderer who, among other implements of his trade, remembers to take with him a pair of scissors to cut from the garments of his victim any mark which might make identification possible. Nothing could be easier than the killing. The friends were passing through a rude narrow road cut into the forest. Burchell stepped back a pace or two, drew his revolver, placed the muzzle close against the back of Benwell's head, pulled the trigger and the deed was done. Another bullet near the eye made the work certain. The powder burned away the flesh. The murdered man never knew his murderer. For how long stood still there in the thick woods, over the oozing marsh. It was something of a struggle to get the body into the underbrush and towards the bottomless pond, and the dead man's collar was torn by the hauling. So the corpse, hidden away securely in a woody swamp, never penetrated, was left to the winds, sunshine and bark. To the station. Everything was safe. Burchell had cut away every name. Said left absolutely no clue to the dead man, yet somehow near the body was found a cigar case, marked with the full name of the victim—"F. C. Benwell." Curious fatality!

The work of getting rid of Benwell had taken but a short time and Burchell walked from the scene down the road to Eastwood, a little station six miles away. The air was brisk, and invigorating and the walk was taken leisurely, as he had several hours to spare. He knew that a freight train going back to Buffalo would pass there about 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. He had studied the time table to some effect and he meant to go back to Niagara Falls on that train and thence to Buffalo. Again that strange fatality cheated out and caught him. Had he taken a passenger train then it is probable that his presence might not have been noticed. But a freight train carries so few passengers they are easily recalled. And so when the murder was charged to Burchell, George Hay, a train man, easily identified him. The careful murderer had put on a special suit of clothes for the occasion, and among other things wore a great astrachan cap, so as to make himself look more like the farmer he pretended to be. That cap made identification easy. Nearly every minute of the time between Burchell's getting off the train at Eastwood at 11:14 a.m. with Benwell and getting on again at 3:30 has been accounted for by later evidence. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hayward saw the two young men walk away from the station in the direction of the place where the body was found. William Virtue, a Woodstock builder, saw the men leave the train. John Cosby, a farmer, driving along the road, met the murderer and his victim journeying towards the copse that was to end the life of one of them. Alice Smith met Burchell after the murder journeying on towards Eastwood. He shook hands with her and inquired jaunty after her grandfather. Two other girls saw Burchell at the same time and recited Miss Smith for nice acquaintance.

Burchell got back to Buffalo about 7:30, and to the hotel where Pelley, his second victim, and Mrs. Burchell were stopping about 8:30. The one victim was out of the way and the murderer was pleasant and genial over the completion of part of his work. Pelley asked him where he had left Benwell. He said he took Benwell to Mr. Dingold, at the farm, and said that Benwell did not like the place nor the people and did not care to associate with such people, and that Benwell had not eaten much all day. He said he gave him some addresses of people up the country and he had sent Benwell off to see those places to see if he liked those latter, Benwell would probably go to Hellowith, at London, whom he had met on the steamer. Pelley questioned Burchell pretty closely about the day's doings. The conversation between Pelley and Burchell as to the latter's whereabouts on that day has been already told. Pelley became his companion to visit Benwell and it seems that Burchell had determined to cut his career right there at the Falls. The rapids told no tales and the job would be an easy one. As they were walking along Burchell asked his companion if he would not like to go down the river bank. They were by the cantilever bridge at the time. Some rickety steps led down the embankment. The two men crept down to the middle the steps were broken and the remainder of the staircase was rotten and falling away. As they were going down Burchell called Pelley's attention to some overhanging rocks. Just as he was about to look up he saw a man down near the bottom of the bank. He had just got down to where the planks divided. In some way a suspicion, Pelley says, sprang up in his mind and he retraced his steps. From that moment he distrusted his companion.

A few nights later they were crossing the suspension bridge together. The wind was blowing heavily. When about the middle of the bridge Burchell cried out:

"Come over here to the other side of me and protect me from the wind."

"A sudden thought struck me," Pelley said in telling the story. "No, I replied 'you keep on that side yourself.'"

The story of Burchell's arrest and that of his wife is too well known to require rehearsal. The above are the facts as they appear to be indicated by the preliminary testimony taken before the magistrate, and if the verdict of the jury shall be in accordance with that evidence, no man ever more richly deserved the gallows than Burchell.

WOMAN'S WORLD

THE BEAUTIES AND JOYS OF THE SWEET SUNBURNED FACE.

The Importance of Women—The Dowager Queen of Portugal—A Recluse for Women—The Study of Grace—The Question of Chaperons.

"When I was a girl," says a woman not yet very gray haired, "we thought it was not quite nice for a girl to go out without a veil. When I first began going about the streets without even a little thin veil over my face I felt rather bold and not happy. It was much the same feeling we had when we left trimming off our dresses three or four years ago—as if we were not quite dressed." In those days sunburn was unknown in the full blown rose of its present perfection. There were never stories told of girls paying fifty cents a piece for an imitation freckle then, and the peony like noses and damask cheeks of the present which refuse to pale for days at a time would have been accounted an infliction, an affliction and a most dire misfortune if they had chanced to befall maid or matron.

The love of out door life first conquered the aversion to sunburn, then those who had not the love put on the semblance of it, and now there are many who deliberately choose sunburn. Possibly they know it not as a deception, and imagine that by the aid of oh's and ah's and by exclaiming "Lovely!" they have added to the sunburn the joy that goes with it. After all, who can define the joys that go with a good lobster like sunburn for any member of our Atlantic species at the least? On the Pacific shore let womankind wear face masks on the beach, let men with broad sombreros defy the painting of the sun, but on our stern and rock bound coast the feminine sailor hat and the time honored straw that supplants the beaver give sunburn its full chance.

After a day at the seashore there is, on almost any Boston face, enough local color to set up in business a realistic novelist or any reasonable painter in oils. When old Sol paints red it is with delicacy and discrimination, and an apparent regard for the trade in camphor ice, cocoa butter and the tubes of roses and glycerine.—Boston Transcript.

The Dowager Queen of Portugal.

She dressed with taste and elegance, her jewels were among the most costly of any regent's, and her household was ruled with an etiquette that proved that she never forgot her rank, even if it pleased her at times to disguise it. This she does most frequently when bound upon some of those errands of mercy for which she is famed, and which have gained her the name of "Angel of Charity." Philanthropy is with her as much a passion as hunting, music or painting. She is at the head of all Portuguese charitable establishments, which she directs in person, even to the minutest details.

Always to the fore if any disaster occured, any appeals were made to the public purse, she did not confine her charitable exertions to public calamities only. Exiles are the anodotes told of her good deeds. Many and many a time has she quitted the palace at some early morning hour unaccompanied, simply dressed in black, and none of the household dare ask whither went her majesty, for all knew she was bound on some secret errand of mercy. Once when a civic guard, recognizing her and seeing her enter one of the lowest quarters of Lisbon, followed her to watch over her safety, she sternly forbade him to divulge what he had seen or to unmask her anonymity. In all cases of distress brought under her notice she desires if possible to judge for herself and behold with her own eyes.

It was no uncommon sight to see her on quitting the cathedral after morning mass surrounded by a crowd of poor people, who knelt as she passed, kissed the hem of her dress or presented some petition. These she invariably took in her own hand and read on her return home.—Leisure Hour.

The Importance of Women.

I heard a distinguished judge in an up town club burst into a torrent of abuse because the papers devoted two or three columns to what he called the interminable nonsense about who Mrs. Astor might be. "Nobody cares a rap," said the judge, throwing the paper across the room, "whether old Bill Astor's wife is called Mrs. Astor, Mrs. William Astor or Mrs. Dinglass. As for her niece, her name is Mrs. William Waldorf Astor, and everybody who knows her calls her Mamie. It's the most transparent nonsense for the papers to devote such valuable space to a family squabble."

Yet a moment's thought would have convinced the judge that the papers were on the right track. The question of which of the Mrs. Astors has the right to the distinctive title of the family was of more interest to thousands and thousands of feminine readers than Mr. Blaine's letter to Mr. Frye or any supreme court decision that has ever been rendered. The subjects which claim the attention of women have a mortgage on publicity today.

Women are everywhere. They are cashiers, typewriters, stenographers, clerks, canvassers, doctors, dentists, editors, lecturers, lawyers, deacons and railway presidents, and their influence is felt in every walk of life. Annie Goodwin was a working girl. This is one reason for the great uproar which has been aroused by her fate.—Philadelphia Times.

Miss Anderson's Tour.

Mr. and Mrs. Navarro are spending the latter portion of their honeymoon in a tour through the Midlands, and have been staying at Nottingham, with which town the bride has grateful associations, having produced "A Winter's Tale" at the Theatre Royal some years ago with great success. They attended high mass at the Roman Catholic cathedral on Sunday, and were more or less in evidence in the streets of the town next day, but so unexpected was their appearance that, though the features of the bride are familiar enough to most people, they happily escaped recognition, and the inevitable mobbing of the curious which would have followed. "How like Mary Anderson," said the proprietor of a shop where they made some purchases to a friend, and the resemblance was certainly striking.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Pretty Toilet Article.

Make a very pretty hairpin holder in this way: Remove the bottom of a small round Japanese basket, stuff with hair combings, crochet of Saxony, in the old fashioned loop stitch, two pieces three inches square, insert in top and bottom of the basket, suspend by loops and ends of one-fourth inch ribbon and you have a pretty, useful and inexpensive article for the dressing table. To vary this I made one leaving the bottom of the basket in, filling with hair and covering with the loop stitch top; the mat to set it on was made about five inches from the center, the last four rows crocheted very full to imitate a frill. This was tacked to the bottom of the holder, which had a dainty bow on one side, the pins being stuck in the top.—Cor. Housewife.

Painted from a Cut.

Mrs. A. H. Hinman, of Brewer, had a hard experience with a bad pencil and penknife the other day. She was sharpening the pencil when the knife slipped and plunged some distance into the palm of the hand, making a bad gash from which the blood spurted freely. She rushed to the sink and turned cold water directly upon the wound and the effect from this struck to her heart, causing that organ to stop for a moment and she dropped to the floor in a dead faint. In this manner she was found by some near neighbors, who immediately sent for a physician, but by the time he arrived she had recovered.—Lewiston Journal.

A Veteran Who Deserves Her Pension.

Dunkirk, N. Y., has a veteran of the war in the person of a woman. Mrs. William Sinfield, to whom congress has just granted a pension of $15 a month. By special permission she enlisted with her husband in Company E, Seventy-second regiment, New York Volunteers, and was in the battles of Williamsburg, Seven Pines, Peach Orchard, the second battle of Malvern Hill, the second battle of Bull Run, the battles of Chantilly, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. She has earned her fifty cents a day.—Exchange.

Women Printers.

At one time women threatened to become formidable rivals to the men as printers, but the invention of typewriting has opened to them a more congenial occupation, and the number of female typesetters is said to be decreasing. There are not over 300 women printers in New York now, though formerly they were so numerous as to excite the hostility of the typographical unions.—Chicago Herald.

A Princess' Book on Lace.

Princess Beatrice is writing a book on lace, which promises to be a standard work, as her royal highness has one of the largest and best collections in the world, and is continually adding to it. She loves lace, and has made a special study of its varieties. It is probable that the book will be illustrated by the royal author.—London Letter.

Mrs. Eleanor Sherman Thackara, daughter of Gen. Sherman, is a new comer in the literary field. She lives in Philadelphia, and intends to write a series of articles on the educational and philanthropic institutions of that city. "The Three Great Training Schools of Philadelphia," which appeared in a recent number of The Cosmopolitan, is the first attempt of Mrs. Thackara.

New cloaks designed for the damp weather and cool of evening have been brought out and meet these requirements. They are made of roseda cloth in cress green, silver gray or fawn brown, with long fronts edged with gray fur. They are lined with shot silk and provided with a high Medici collar of fur, which is readily adjusted.

Mrs. Martha J. Lamb, editor of The Magazine of History, has been engaged to deliver a series of lectures before the Twill society. Last Friday she opened the course in the parlors of the Brighton Beach hotel, taking for her subject "The Uses of History."

Jenny Lind is said to have left a voluminous journal with numerous letters from people of distinction, which her husband, Otto Goldschmidt, will use as a nucleus for his life of the gifted singer.

Trades' and Labor Council—The Hastings Road—Will Move This Week—The Star Chamber—The Procession—A Great Theatrical Event.

Trades' and Labor Council.

The New Westminster Trades' and Labor Council held its regular monthly meeting last evening. In addition to routine business, the appointment was made of two delegates to the proposed Provincial Labor Convention to be held here on Wednesday, the 25th inst., for the purpose of organizing a Provincial Federation of Labor. The report of the Labor Day Celebration Committee was received, showing Westminster's share in the success of the day to be highly creditable to the city and the local council. The committee received a hearty vote of thanks. Messrs. Nye and Stewart were the delegates elected.

The Hastings Road.

The attention of the authorities concerned is called to the state of this road beyond the city boundary for a distance of 2 or 3 miles. It is worn very hollow in the centre, so that the rain water rushes down it instead of along the side ditches. This will, when the rainy season comes, damage the roadway greatly, and render it almost impassable for vehicular traffic. It will then, too, cost more to set in order than if now repaired. A telegraph wire has also, at a point beyond Thorne Hand, fallen across the highway, so as to become dangerous to horses.

Will Move this Week.

The crown timber agent and the Dominion lands agent, both of whom have their offices in the eastern half of the ground floor of the post office building, have received orders to vacate their premises and remove to one of the upper flats in the building, which removal will in all probability take place towards the end of the present week. The post office will be removed to the old Government assay office next door, which has recently gone through a process of overhauling and refitting. The changes to be made in the post office building will be gone through as rapidly as possible, and when finished it will give everyone more room.

The Star Chamber.

Some of our machinery men have just received notice to provide little that tenders are being called for the pump to be placed on the new ferry boat to be used in case of fire. The tenders have to be in by Tuesday noon, which is a very short time for tenderers who have a large amount of other business to attend to. Besides it is necessary to send east for quotations for the supply of some of the parts, and it is manifestly impossible to get these quotations and have the tenders in at the specified time. It is complained that the whole thing looks as though it had been cut and dried before the notices were issued.

The Procession.

Mr. Thompson, the chairman of the Procession Committee, has been very busy with his work during the past few days, and if the procession is a failure, it will be no fault of his. But it will not be a failure, on the contrary it will be the finest thing of the kind ever witnessed in the west, and north of San Francisco. Many of the largest firms in the city will have two or more wagons in the march, while the committee have undertaken the arduous task of getting up no less than six caricatures of unique design. Several will be highly artistic models of the business to be represented, while one will just about go under the arch at present building on Columbia Street. There are to be some fancy carriages, which will fill in the tail end, and although last, will be by no means least in point of elegance among those in the procession.

A Great Theatrical Event.

The Russell Jewell Dramatic Company have been specially engaged to play at Herring's Opera House on the first two nights of the great agricultural exhibition, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 26th and 27th. The first evening they will present Bartley Campbell's grand spectacular drama, in 6 acts, entitled, "The Sunny South or a White Slave," and on Thursday night, Sept. 27th, they will present the beautiful military drama in 5 acts, entitled "Lynwood." The above plays will be produced in metropolitan style, with special scenery, wardrobe and music complete. Reserved seats are now on sale at Herring's drug store, and as there will be a great crush on the day of the show parties desiring a good seat had better secure it early.

He will be in the city during next week, to attend the exhibition, which he will write up for his paper; afterwards he will visit the district settlements.

The Tennis Tournament.

Excellent progress has been made during the past week by the ladies who are taking part in the tennis tournament while the gentlemen seem to be getting along rather slowly. Homer, 6-2, 6-2; Miss Margie Homer beat Mrs. Parkes, 6-1, 6-4; Miss Alice Homer beat Miss Horton, 5-7, 6-2, 7-5; Miss Margie Homer beat Mrs. C. E. Woods, score not given. Among the gentlemen who have played thus far with the scores are as follows: Bell beat Kenny, 6-1, 6-2; Walker beat Holt, 6-2, 8-6; Bell beat Fagan, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

ORDER IN THE GALLERY.

Empire Theatre, Sir,—Week before last I went to the theatre, and was well pleased with the acting of Miss Goodrich and her associates. There was one thought, however, that came forcibly to me. What a seeming abundance of material for a sermon on the evils of playgoing. Indeed, I had never before sat in an assembly of respectable people, where, for two hours and a half, downright blackguardism held such sway—where it reigned so long without reproof. I was, therefore, not in any way surprised to hear how strongly and bitterly some members of the troupe spoke about the conduct of the spectators in the gallery. It required only a glance to perceive the anger and disgust depicted on the face of the gentlemanly musician who played so skillfully, as he heard the one, unbroken chorus of vulgarity that greeted his performance. Perhaps it would be hard to find, in any other part of Canada or in the United States, another place of amusement, where such villainous and disorderly conduct is tolerated.

Those who pay fifty cents or a dollar for a reserved seat may well ask why should the patrons of the swamp, the denizens of slimy rattleroos and of other disreputable places, be allowed to come in at 25 cents a head, and act just as they please and can things to suit themselves. Why should well bred ladies and gentlemen be compelled, every time they go to the opera house, to listen to the yelling, stamping, whistling, cat-purring shrieks, and vulgar exclamations of a few ill-bred blackguards? Shouting at men when they make their appearance is bad enough, but when it comes to hooting at women and making unseemly remarks about them, as they enter a theatre, no matter who these women may be or how intimate the acquaintance between them and those who jeer at them from the gallery, the tone of the place is too low for ladies of refinement. The moral atmosphere has become vitiated, the house should be aired, and the gallery disinfected.

At the outset, I said this state of things might furnish a preacher with a text on the evils of play going. Let me correct friend, shallow-brained moralizer, however, adopt it as a theme, for the theatre as such is in no way to blame. The fact is, of late there has been a sudden and rank development of blackguardism in our city, and in consequence, tell either as much as in open house, the blighting influence has been felt. In proof of this, I have only to remind you of what took place at Longley's a few weeks ago. But let the vanguard of the same foul-mouthed brigade go to that quiet sanctuary on the hillside, and while the sacred courts were thronged with men, women and children, make vile hideous with obscene and blasphemous language?

But my object in writing is not so much to find fault as to suggest a remedy. Let some person be placed in the gallery of the opera house to keep order, and let those who will not conduct themselves in a proper manner be arrested, brought before a magistrate, and fined. It would cost only a dollar or two a night to have a policeman on hand. If asked, some of our citizens, who cannot now get their sisters or wives to go with them to see a theatrical performance, would be willing to pay a small amount to ward this object. The Russell-Jewel company will be here this week, and as one who has a heartfelt interest in the success of the theatre and the good of the people, I would urge that something be done to prevent the Royal City from becoming known all over America as a hotbed of hoodlumism.
