GIVE BLOOD TODAY!

Our Staffer Gives Blood

By SANDRA SCOTT
(Ubyssey Features Editor)

Bleeding is quick, easy and painless.

What's more, it should leave you elated as you think of the life you may save.

After giving my first pint of blood, I'm convinced that every student should make this effort to support the Red Cross.

Here is the procedure:

In less than half an hour, health officials in the Armories will register you, take your specific blood type and perform the actual task of eliminating one pint of blood through a shot in your arm.

After registration, you will be led behind drawn white curtains, where approximately 30 beds have been set up to accommodate donors.

There, nurses will seat you on a bed, look after your every whim and fancy and set up apparatus.

Five minutes is all it takes.

Then you will be led by the hand to recuperate for 15 minutes.

Perhaps the best part of the procedure is the cup of good coffee you receive for being a good kid.

After effects? Hardly ever.

Blood Drive closes Friday at 4:30. Adopt the Ubyssey slogan, and BE A BLEEDNIK.

Argue Criticizes Canadian Policy

CCF Leader, Hazen Argue, discussed Canada's present government policies at a noon hour speech in the auditorium Tuesday.

Argue, whose topic was "Canada's Role in International Affairs", spent most of the hour criticizing the control of Canadian industry.

Our industry, he maintained, is in the hands of a small number of powerful persons, a condition which is allowed to flourish by the present government.

"Canada cannot continue," Argue stated, "to allow her resources to be controlled and exploited by enterprises motivated by personal greed and lust for power."

New Society Needed

In his words, "We must build a new society which attempts to remove poverty, suffering, and economic injustice and which is based on social justice, brotherhood of man and individualism."

Argue suggested price fixing, more equitable interest rates, and freer money to help overcome inflation.

This is, in part, an outline of the proposals of the CCF to facilitate a high Canadian standard of living.

Socialism

Argue also suggested public ownership of large corporations, whose services are a public concern, together with a capital gains tax, to suppress industry control by single persons.

CCF reaction to current international affairs was asked for during the question period.

Argue stressed that all policies of military and economic aid must be planned in conjunction with the United Nations.

In conclusion, he recommended the recognition of Communist China and her admittance into the U.N.

REGISTER NOW FOR CAMP ELPHINSTONE

Those who are still planning on going to the Leadership Conference at Camp Elphinstone this weekend and who have not registered should do so immediately at the AMS office.

Chairman Elwood Driedger offers the following recommendations for all Conference delegates.

For those who do not have transportation to the boat, buses leave Brock Hall at 5:15 p.m. Friday.

The boat leaves the Harbour Navigation dock, foot of Gore 6:15 p.m. Friday.

Bring your own bedding, a sleeping bag is best. Also bring warm clothes, and a flashlight.

The boat returns Sunday, arriving in Vancouver about 6:15 p.m. Bus transportation to UBC will be provided.

Delegates To Convention

Two UBC delegates left this morning to attend the World University Service of Canada National Assembly being held at McGill University.

WUSC chairman Norman Gish and Dr. John Conway, faculty adviser to WUSC, will attend the fourteenth assembly.

Two observers, WUSC secretary Barbara Scott and vice-chairman Rod Dobell, are attending with the delegates.

The assembly will elect their officers and directors for 1959-60 and determine their policy and program for the coming year.

The UBC delegates will present several resolutions to the assembly.

Engineers Lead In Blood Drive

Engineers are currently leading the Blood Brigade.

Education and Arts follow in second rank, with Forestry and Pharmacy close behind.

In inter-faculty competition, Aggies have challenged Engineering and Forestry to a bleeding contest.

The losing presidents will be tossed in the lily pond by the winners.

The Aggies also have retained their tradition by challenging Home Ec.

Loser will throw the combined Home Ec-Aggie mixer.

In speaking to the university, the Philippine Ambassador to Washington, General Carlos Romulo, warned that the survival of our western way of life depends on Asia.

He said that if the 500 million uncommitted people of Asia should ever embrace Communism, this would mean the virtual annihilation of Democracy.

To a westerner, especially an American, it is inconceivable that any nation would willingly accept Communism rather than Democracy as a system under which to live. So convinced is the West of its superiority in things political, economical and cultural, so thoroughly indoctrinated is the West as to the infallibility of the electorate, of capitalism and of the Protestant Ethic that for Asia to freely choose Communism as a way of life is not rational.

The fact that the electorate is not infallible, that capitalism is not the "best" economic system for every situation, and that the Protestant Ethic is not acceptable to all peoples has not been made obvious to the West.

The evolvement of the Democratic political system has been the result of an historical pattern which does not fit the historical pattern of Asia. Fortunately for the West the threat of total destruction from forces, natural or manpowered, was sufficiently small that her citizens were not constantly looking for their bare existence. With the threat of death not imminent and the supply of food secured, the leisure time which resulted could be used for the attainment of knowledge. Western men had the opportunity to develop a refined system of representative government that depended on an educated electorate.

Asia has had a different history. The threat of natural and human forces in Asia during recent centuries while the West has had comparative tranquility prevented the spread of knowledge necessary for the support of Western Democracy.

If Asia chose a political system that was based on the principle of an educated electorate, it would probably result in a complete reversal of the purpose of representative government.

In considering the West's supposedly superior economic system, certainly the economic achievements of the USSR in the past 45 years would convince the Asian that communist socialism in productivity equals if not surpasses democratic capitalism. If the measure of the superiority of an economic system is its ability to achieve the highest standard of living with optimum efficiency in the use of resources, Communism does not appear behind Democracy.

The western "modified free market" economy functions well in the West with its industrial strength and its demand for goods which does not far exceed the supply of them. To the reasoning Asian, considering the present lack of industrial strength and the population pressure in his country, a more centrally controlled economy would be more satisfactory. To develop an Asian nation from a medieval economy to an industrial society would require control and a great deal of concentrated power, much more than would be tolerated in a western economy.

Perhaps the Western conception as to the Superiority is most incorrect when applied to Asian culture. To Americans, cultural Asia represents broadly nothing more than Confucius sayings, chop suey and firecrackers. The low social status of eary Chinese-Americans undoubtedly attributed to this lack of interest, while in Europe more informative opinions of Asian culture were held.

Western Europe in the past 2000 years has had no monopoly on the birth of geniuses, philosophical, literal or musical or artistical.

The religious philosophers of Asia have influenced her peoples so deeply that western preachers of the Protestant Ethic have made notably little advances considering Asia as a whole.

There is one tenant in the western way of life which makes our way of life superior to Communism. It can be enunciated as weakly or strongly as individual philosophy dictates, but in the over-all tone of the democratic states it is quite clear.

This is the Democratic belief in the dignity of the individual, or to be more orthodox, the belief in the invincibility of the soul. It is the maintenance of this tenant which makes our way of life vastly superior to Communism, not our political system or our economic system.

As General Romulo emphasized, the West must convince Asia of its genuine support of this doctrine. Only then can the West be assured of Asian alliance.

Editor,
The Ubyssey,
Dear Sir,

On Tuesday, Oct. 6, at noonhour, I paraded into the Auditorium with a crowd of students, expecting to hear an informative talk by the House Leader of the C.C.F. party, Mr. Hazen Argue, on "Canada's role in international affairs." Instead I heard thirty minutes of pure, unadulterated C. C. F. party politics. I am thoroughly "Thinking Man's Party" for trying such a low-down method to get U.B.C. students to listen to their propaganda. I hope in the future they don't expect anyone to turn out to hear any more of their mud-slinging party members or leaders.

Yours truly,
Hew Kidston,

OPPORTUNITY FOR INQUIRING MINDS

Each year C-I-L provides fellowships for promising young scientists doing post-graduate research at Canadian universities. Through this program, now in its eighteenth year, over 200 students have had the opportunity to carry out original work under university direction thus adding to their own, and Canada's, store of scientific knowledge. Grants to endow chairs of science and to expand existing university facilities further support the development of inquiring minds. C-I-L's own activities, so dependent on constant development and research, also provide scope and a congenial atmosphere for many trained talents, working together in the ever-new world of chemistry.

SOME OF THE RESEARCH PROJECTS CARRIED ON BY HOLDERS OF C-I-L FELLOWSHIPS:
isotopes produced in nuclear fission • chemistry of wood carbohydrates • wood pulping with liquid ammonia • soil fertility • electrically activated oxygen • gas engineering • nitrogen derivatives of steroids • the use of gaseous ammonia as a plant nutrient • mechanisms of organic reactions using radioactive carbon • spectral analysis of molecules • reactions of active nitrogen • waterfowl habits.
