All About Size of Your Fruit Packages

Mr. S. J. Fee in writing to this paper in answer to a leter which he received says: Re fruit packages, I cannot emphasize too strongly the advisability and necessity for a standardized pacage for different fruits The deep full pint is the only package for strawberries. And while the full pint for raspberries and blackberries, has many points in its favor in the way of a well known definite quantity, from a grower's point of view, a shipping point of view, a marketing point of view, it has many disadvantages. As I am on the marketing end let me begin at that end, taking first the retailing. The wholesale opening price for raspberries and blackberries for many years has been $3, per case. This means that the retailer sells at 15 cents a box, making $3.50 a case. This is a small margin as a retailer selling by the box can be expected to sell at Whether it is a 2-5 or a full pint, the retail price will be the same: If we tried for $3.25 on the case, it would only leave the retailer 35¢ on the case, a margin he will not work on, and if he tried for 2 for 35¢ the consumer would make a lot of unpleasant talk for him, also quite a few consumers would only want one box and do not like the 20¢ a box or the penny change. Then the change to 2 for 25¢ which son has to be made, to make a 2 for 25¢ price, $2.50 a case must be made to the retailer. A retailer will not pay $2.70 or even $2.60 and retail at 2 for 25¢, so it 25¢ which soon has to be made, to $2.75 or $2.60 from $3.00, as it leaves the retail price still 15¢ and so does not change the retail price, and so does not increase consumption, which is the only excuse for any drop And by the same token, a price of $2.40 or $2.30 should not be made for a 2 for 25¢ retail, not changing the retail price does not increase consumption. Some wholesale houses will make a $2.40 or a $2.30 price. This is simply to take trade away from others who are making a $2.50 price, as no retailer objects to a longer margin of profit and will buy from the houses giving him the longest margin. If it should be necessary to make a further drop for the retailing by the box, $2, is the only logical price to make, as that makes a retail price of 10¢ a box. Now from a case point of view, the consumers of Alberta will not pay over $2.50 a case, except for some specially nice cases, or in case of scarcity and then buy very sparingly. So we make a canning price of $2. 25,$2.15, $2.10. This making a retail price of $2.50, $2.40, $2.30. Any retailer will pick for the heavier case to give his a little longer margin, or his customers a little better value, but he will object to paying more for it. At the same time he will take a well-filled 2-5 in preference to an even slightly packed full pint no retailer wants to handle an apparently slack filled pacage. The consumer does not want it, even if there realy is more in it. Then when the berries are packed or slightly packed, the berries on the bottom will be more or less mashed, do not turn out nice for serving with cream, may show slightly wet on the bottom of the cups, will smell sour sooner. The full shallow pint will pack in the handling it gets, and we must consider, that the handling does not stop until the case is delivered to the consumer. And the grower must take into consideration the handling from shipping point to the consumer. The advocates of the full pint will point to the Puyullup berries selling in the full pints. But it must be remembered the Puyullup berry is an altogether different berry from the B. C. berry. It is a large seeded juiceless berry in comparison with the B. C. berry. It will hold it's shape and carry long distances splendidly, but from an eating point of view, does not compare with the fine flavored juicy B. C. berry, so while the full pint may be the best for the Puyullup berry it does not follow that such is the case with the B. C. berry.

From shipping point to consumer point of view, the 2-5 shallow is with out question, the best pacage, and from a grower's point he is getting just as much for the 2-5 as he would be for the full pint and he is penalized a higher express charge, picking charge and cost of production charge. From a handling point of view the different size packages are a confusion. The express companies put a weight charge on the full pint of 23 lbs and on the 2-5 of 20 lbs., and to play safe (for the express company) bill all at 23 lbs, then it 2-5 is some job to get corrections, Often in a rush, the weights will be overlooked and the 23 lbs charged on the 2-5. We cannot too strongly endorse the 2-5 shallow cup for raspberries and blackberries. And we advise using the deep full pint for red and black currants and gooseberries as well as for strawberries.

Mr. J. H. Jones of Mission City had charge of funeral arrangements.

LETTERS OF THANKS

The Red Cross workers of Abbotsford who assisted in packing Christmas parcels for the boys at the front and in England have been very much gratified at receiving letters of thanks from many of the recipients. The boys say the parcels contained the very things they need, partiularly the pair of sox, that accompanied each parcel.

Abbotsford has been to the fore, in looking after the comfort of those gone from her midst.

Conditions in Germany

Necessarily all statements emanating from Germany of an unfavorable nature are unofficial, but those that have lately been made public are so circumstantial that it is difficult not to believe them to be well founded. One of them is that the drafts upon the man power of the nation have been so great that boys and men between 17 and 45, who have been declared unfit for military service, are being dragooned into the army, and one statement describes the process as similar to the slave-driving in Belgium. Another statement, which is vouched for by the paper publishing it,is that food is very much scarcer than is generally believed and that people are dying of hunger. We find it impossible to rejoice over these things except so far as they may serve to render the end of the war nearer. That climax may come as many of us supposed it might come at an earlier stage of the war, by an uprising of the people against the militarism that has fastened itself around their necks.

A brief summary of the war, taken in connection with the internal conditions of Germany,will show the hollowness of the claim that she is in a position to discuss terms of peace as a victor. The first object of Germany was to seize Paris, then crush Russia and thus be able to compel Great Britain to assent to whatever Berlin might propose. This ambition was defeated at the Marne, and history will accord to Field Marshall Joffre due honor for the wonderful service he that day rendered to liberty. The objective of the invasion of Russia was Petrograd. That has been frustrated. The second great effort in the West was directed to the capture of Calais and the occupation of the French coast. That was defeated at Ypres. Later we had the zeppelin campaign against England a most miserable fiasco. Then came the thrust at Verdun, which was expected to be both a dynastic and strategic triumph. It not only ended in failure but in disastrous defeat. Then the Entente powers assumed the offensive, and on the Russian front inflicted disaster after disaster upon the Enemy. In the West this movement found erpression in the Battle of the Somme, a prolonged series of Allied triumphs. Turkey was urged to participate in the war in the hope that thereby a road would be opened to Egypt and India. Once more failure was encountered. German intrigue attempted to secure co-operation from Greece join the flank of the Allies at Salonika. Failure again, although it looked suspiciously like success at one time. Then came the supreme effort against Roumania. For a time this looked like a series of victories, but Mackensen's forces have been checked. Germany told the world that von Hindenburg's name was a synonym for victory; but that commander seems to have shot his bolt. Osia Minor was to have fed the hungry millions of Germany, but it has failed to do so. Roumania was then looked for as a source of food supply, only to prove a disappointment. Under these circumstances, for Germany to pose as a victor is as absurd as for President Wilson to pose as an arbiter of the fate of nations.—Colonist

RIVAL OF HOME MERCHANTS

Announcement has been made that a dividend of ten million dollars has been declared by a Chicago mail order house for the fiscal year ending December 1. In this connection it is well to remember the investigation made by the Illinois legislatlre,some months ago, into the operation of several big stores in Chicago. The claim was made that the girls who work in these stores do not receive a living wage a nd that as a result they are forced into lives of shame.

The truth of these averments was generally sustained by the investigation. It was ascertained that the minimum expense of a girl in Chicago who is wholly dependent upon herself is $8 per week. A great many girls receive less. A large number received substantially this sum. A few received more. There was much in the situation that was deplorable, much that needed remedying.

But another interesting feature of the probe was the relation of the enormous profits made by at least one big mail order house in Chicago. Seven millions profit annually with a thirty million investment is, to use an expressive term, "going some." This firm does a heavy business in Montana and throughout the northwest. It claims to be able to undersell Montana merchants and gets a great deal on this promise. There is reason to believe that this undersellwere really tested out, and the Montana home herchant could be given his due,the chances are that he would win out, and would actually give his Montana customer more for the money, all things considered, that the foreign merchant.

This much is true of ninety-nine out of every hundred Montana mer chants—they are paying their clerks better than starvation wages. They are not paying interest on stock which is part water to the ratio that seven million dollars profits bear to thirty million dollars investemnt. They are paying taxes for the support of local schools and municipal enterprises. They are supporting local churches and charities. They are boosting for Montana and their own communities. They extend credit when the flour barrell is empty and when the children need shoes. They give aid and encouragement to every movement calculated to make Montana a better place in which to live. The Chicago merchants are not doing these things for Montana. They demand cash in advance and use their enormous profits in building up Chicago and Illinois—to some extent it appears at the sacrifice of the virtue of Illinois girls.

This recent big dividend of the Chicago concern should open the eyes of Montana patrons of eastern mail order houses. The Montana merchant ought to be put in the balance against his foreign competitor and given a hearing and a square deal. If Montana people who have been in the habit of buying in Chicago will go into the subject they may find themselves in the position of the tightwad who spent all his time seeking to prevent a small leak about the spigot of his cider barrel, only to learn later that the bung hole had been left wide open.—Conrad Indepentent.

What is true of the Chicago mail order houses may most likely be true in regard to our eastern mail order houses. They don't extend credit; they don't pay taxes to build up our institutions; they don't help us in any way to make Mission City or any part of the Fraser Valley a better place to live in; and there is just a possibility that they do not pay wages in all cases beyond a mere existence. Patronize our home merchants and get good value for your money with the chance that in your favor of being able to return the goods if they are not satisfactory, and the store's profits going towards helping the community in a thousand ways big and small.

We Promise Not Never Again

A few weeks ago we published 8 pages to the Fraser Valley Record, and the editor of the Burnaby Courier, the new paper for Burnaby district, thought we were going to do it every week and in his generosity he wrote the following: "We wish to take this opportunity to compliment and congratulate Editor J. A. Bates of the Fraser Valley Record, published at Mission City, on his enlarged and greatly improved paper.

"Keep up the good work, Bates; Mission needs more men of your stamp. It's a pleasure to see a newsy and clean weekly besides our own published in this neck of the woods.

"More power to your elbow and continued success to the Fraser Valley Record, is the sincere wish of the Burnaby Courier."

Brother Courier believes evidently in the Creed: "Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving , cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them; the kind things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go."

ARE YOU GOING TO VICTORIA?

February is the convention month in this province and several meetings of importance will be held in Victoria within the course of the next few weeks.

Farmers and all others interested in agriculture in any way in British Columbia are looking forward with interest to these gatherings the first of which is the meeting of the Board of Horticulture which is to be held in Victoria on the 9th and 10th of February. Closely following this comes the meeting of the B. C. Fruit Growers' Association. This convention is scheduled for the 13th and 14th. Many interesting subjects will be discussed and a large number of fruit growers in different parts of the province have promised to attend.

Next in the list comes the B. C. Stock Breeders Association Convention. Addresses of interest have been arranged for this meeting, as for the others and everything taken up will be not only of use, but also of interest, to those attending. On the second day of the B. C. Stock Breeders Association convention the Farmers' Union holds the first of the mass meetings arranged for the 16th and 17th of February.

Many of the visitors who will be in attendance at the other conventions have expressed their intention of staying in Victoria in order to be present at the meetings arranged by the promoters of this new organization.

Reduced fares have been granted by the railways but those who intend attending the convention must not forget to ask the agent, when purchasing tickets, for a standard certificte. Without this no reduction well be available.

Why Not Give The Whole Truth?

The Nicomen Island Ratepayers' Association sent a resolution to the Mission Board of Trade for endorsation protesting against the encroachment of Oriental market produce vendors. The resolution was not endorsed.—Vancouver Daily Province.

The following is the resolution which the Mission City Board of Trade was asked to endorse: "Inasmuch as the farming industry of B. C. has been jeopardized by the Chinese vegetable grower and pedlar who are sapping the province of thousands of dollars yearly, and whereas white people cannot live and educate their children in open competition with Chinese, and whereas it is legal to peddle in almost any part of the British Empire, and whereas it is desirous that legitimate marketing be encouraged in B. C., therefore be it resolved, that petitions be forwarded the Minister of Agriculture asking that legislation be enacted at the coming session of the Legislature, making it illegal to peddle vegetables in the Province of British Columbia, and that Orientals shall not sell vegetables except in Oriental stores."
