ANOTHER WAY TO DO IT

The following from the Sumas News, and might act as an incentive;

"It is a well established fact that when it comes to prying a hard-headed business man loose from his toil begotten dollars, it takes a woman to turn the trick A man will make a life and death struggle against another he-human before he will cut the bands on his bundle of kale and distribute the same for the public weal and welfare—and his own. But he'll make a bonfire out of the entire bale if Winsome Winnie wills it. Witness; the average man won't buy himself a new necktie once a year. That is, if he's happily married and isn't trying to make a hit with Mrs. Trubble or Ohyoukid. The old tie is good enough, and he refuses to let go of four bits to buy a new one. But along about the time his birthday rolls around wifey goes to him and puts up a play for a new bonnet. She lands a ten-spot without a struggle. Five of it buys the sky-piece—or ribbons and flub-dubs and doo-dads enough to make over the old one. And she surprises pa with a birthday present of a dozen new ties—and he's tickled most to death.

"The idea of a Woman's Auxiliary for the commercial body of a town has been worked out with great success in many cities of the West."

Lionite Demonstration

(From Fraser Valley Record)

The exhibitionn of Lionite given this week at the Agricultural grounds should demonstrate to the people of this section the superior qualities of this most excellent article. It is at present time made at or near to Abbotsford and a number of demonstrations made on the other side of the river has proven to the people that it is just the right article to take out stumps at a very low cost and at the same time be perfectly harmles to the man who uses it. It requires both heat and concussion to do the work of destruction and then does its work well. Experts have given Lionite some very severe tests and in each case Lionite has done well.

Mr. D. M. Stirton, the inventor of Lionite, established himself at Abbotsford last fall. He had spent some two years on his invention and recently sold his Canadian rights to the B. C. Safety Powder Company, who intend to manufacture Lionite and make it popular with the people of the Fraser Valley. It is claimed for it that it is much cheaper and does its work better than any other powder on the market.

The Band of Hope will hold their annual basket pic-nic at the Old Orchard, Abbotsford, May 24th under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Everybody welcome.

Mrs. Tretheway returned from Westminster Wednesday evening

Our Ottawa Letter

That the Liberal Conservative party is absolutely united in its opposition to reciprocity and its devotion to the leadership of Mr. R. L. Borden, was demonstrated at the recent banquet in Ottawa tendered by the Conservative leader to Hon Richard McBride, premier of British Columbia, and Hon Albert Rogers of Manitoba. The events of that evening completely demolish the elaborate tissue of falsehoods built up during the past year or two by the yellow press of Canada.

The coming of British Columbia's premier to Ottawa excited no little interest. His wonderful career, his unvarying success and his picturesque personality appeal to the people of the east. Wherever McBride went in Ottawa he was followed by large crowds, and many of his old friends and acquaintances were delighted to find that they still held places in his memory. He certainly has the real gift of not forgetting names or faces. Everyone whom he ever met before received from Mr. McBride during his visit here a personal greeting that was sincere and unaffected. His striking resemblance to Sir Wilfrid was a matter of universal comment and there was great desire on all sides to hear him speak. Mr. R. L. Borden, in presenting the premier of British Columbia, paid a tribute to his personal loyalty to him and his unswerving devotion to the principles of the Liberal Conservative party. Amid thunders of applause he plainly intimated that Mr. McBride would be summoned to the Federal Arena.

It was no easyt ask which confronted Mr. McBride when he rose to speak at theBorden banquet. The many representations which have been made concerning his attitude toward the leadership could not have been absent from his mind. At the same time he and his audience had just heard the tribute paid to him by Mr. Borden. Curiosity was on tip-toe to ascertain if he would accept the call from his leader; the fact moreover that he was a stranger and a man about whom so much had been heard made it difficult for him to come up to the popular expectation without seeming to push himself too much into prominence. But McBride met the test in a splendid manner. His speech was a masterpiece of tact and eloquence. He proclaimed himself ready at any time to take any position that he might have assigned to him by his leader on the battle-field.

Everyone realized that this would mean for a time a great sacrifice, but at the same time everyone realized that in Mr. McBride, Mr. Borden would find a powerful lieutenant and one well worthy some day to become a Minister of State.

Mr. Rogers is more or less familiar figure at Ottawa and thus less curiosity to hear him than to hear McBride. Nevertheless all present realized that his acceptance of Mr. Borden's call was no less important than Mr. McBride s Like th eBritish Columbia man he put himself unreservedly at the disposal of his leader. Mr. Borden goes into the next campaign with these two masters of statecraft as his lieutenants.

Attorney-General Bowser made an excellent impression. He frankly said that the province would be reluctant to give up its great prime minister. At the same time he had no hestation in saying that the people of British Columbia would be found no less willing to make the sacrifice on the altar of patriotism than was Mr. McBride. Mr. Bowser got his audience into good humor at the start; he apologised for not being in evening dress, and declared amid applause and laughter that he did not want the representatives of the east to go away with the impression that McBride was the owner of the only dress-suit in the province of B. C.

The vast supplementary estimates recently brought down indicate beyond peradventure that the government is getting ready for an election. The fact is staring them in the face that they cannot force through reciprocity without first obtaining a mandate from the people. Even Sir Wilfrid Laurier's threat to absent himself from the imperial conference and the coronation didn ot stampede the opposition. Through Mr. Borden they suggested three courses which he might take, any one of which might enable him to perform his plain duty to the Empire He affected at the time to make light of these suggestions and more than intimated that he would follow his own course without any regard to the wishes of the Canadian people. Indeed he went so far as to say that he considered the reciprocity agreement as of more importance than the great problems to be considered by the Imperial Conference. He retained his top-loftical position for a few days and then suddenly wilted. Even his own supporters refused to stand by him in his petulent demeanor. Without any attempt at explanation he came down from his perch more quickly than he had ascended to it and started for England at the time arranged.

Whether he had always intended to do this and was merely making a cheap bluff when he talked to the contrary or whether he became frightened at public opinion is not material. The fact remains that he was forced to go to the Conference and that he was only too glad to accept one of the propositions tendered to him by Mr. Borden.

FRIDAY, MAY 19, 1911

(From Fraser Valley Record)

What are the shareholders around Mission City doing about the Fraser Valley Sugar Works that was to have "The first sugar works in British Columbia in operation by September 1st, 1911, and and the first 40 tons of sugar grown and manufactured in this province will be for sale September 2nd, 1911," and to which company a number of citizens around Mission City subscribed?

The Fraser Valley Sugar Works Ltd., is advertising "Factories; Mission City, B. C." There are no factories belonging to the Fraser Valley Sugar Works, Ltd. in Mission City that this paper is aware of, nor has the Fraser Valley Sugar Works, Ltd. secured any land in Mission City for the purposes of building factories.

At a recent meeting Dr. Schumacher and Mr. Peters made the statement that they had been promised 600 acres for the growing of sugar beets. In a recent advertisement in a B. C. magazine we notice the following; "Over one thousand acres of land have been promised for growing sugar beets" This advertisement appears in January. How much of this land is at the present time sown in the Fraser Valley? And how much around Mission? How much on Matsqui prairie? How much any where in the Fraser Valley? Those who have shares are surely entitled to know this.

We will have a jam factory here where the sugar could be used to advantage.

Several of those who have subscribed have asked us questions about the Fraser Valley Sugar Works, Ltd. and we believe they are entitled to know something about how the company is getting along.

ADVERTISE IN THE POST

Make the truth known about the business that you are supposed to be the head of.

The only man who should not advertise is the one who has nothing to offer in way of service, or who cannot make good. All such should seek the friendly shelter of oblivion, where dwell those who, shrouded in Stygian shades, forgether gloom, and are soon out of the game. Not to advertise is to be nominated for membership in the Down-and-Out Club. The acceptation of the nomination may not be long. But the science of advertising ist he science of psychology. And psychology is the science of the human heart.

The advertiser works to supply a human want. He educates the public as to what it needs, and what it wants, and shows where and how to get it. The merchant who lives on the assumption that al lpeople know where his store is and what he has for sale. Well it is a lucky day for a merchant when his business is good and his name is always before those who purchase goods.

Talking about advertising an exchange says that 'Of all the plenipotentiaries of publicity, embassadors of Advertising, and bosses of press bureaus, none equals Moses, who lived fifteen centuries before Christ.

'Moses appointed himself adwriter for the Deity, and gave us an account of creation, from personal interviews, which have been accepted for thirty-five centuries.

'Moses wrote the first five books of the Bible and this account includes a record of the author's romantic birth and his serene and dignified death. Moses is the central figure, after Yahweh, in the whole write up.

'Egyptian history makes not a single mention of Moses or the Exodus and no record is found of the flight from Egypt except what Moses wrote. At best it was only a few hundred people who made the flight, but the account makes the whole thing colossal and magnificent.

'The phrase the "Chosen People of God" was a catch phrase unrivaled. Slogans abound in the writings of Moses.

'Moses made his god supreme by his writings, which were able and convincing

'The whole world has been won by them.'

All literature is advertising and all genuine advertisements are literature.

The author advertises men time places, deeds, events and things His appeal is to the universal human soul. If he does not know the heart throbs of man and woman the joys, the hopes, the ambitions the tastes, needs and desires, his work will interest no one but himself and his admiring friends.

Advertising is fast becoming a fine art. Its theme is human wants and where and when and how they may be gratified. It interests inspires, educates—sometimes amuses—informs and thereby uplifts and benefits, lubricating existence and helping the old world on its way to the Celestial City of Fine Minds.

WHO PAYS FOR THE ADVERTISEMENT

Wouldn't you prefer if you had a clothing store, to sell a hundred suits of clothes in a day, making an average profit of $2.00 a suit, to selling ten suits in a day with an average profit of $5.00 per suit.

Suppose that, to sell the hundred suits a day you should spend, say $20.00 per day in advertising.

Who would be "taxed" for the advertising? Your patrons? Scarcely—when they pay you three dollars less than they would have to pay for the identical suits to the merchant who does not advertise.

You? Scarcely—when you make a great deal more money than you would if you "saved" your advertising appropriation.

Your non-advertising competitor—in the penalty he pays for not doing so large a volume of business as he could do by advertising, and taking a smaller per-sale profit?

That's it precisely!

——o——

You will admit that doctors some times make mistakes, won't you? suggested the cross-examiner.

"Oh, yes; the same as lawyers," was the cool reply of the medico.

"And doctors' mistakes are buried six feet under the ground?"

"Yes, that's right, too" said the other; "and the lawyers' mistakes often swing in the air, How does that strike you, you bottle-nosed old shyster?"

——o——

CURED HIM

A little man in the west of England rushed to the river last summer, swearing that he wouldd rown himself. When he had waded in to the depth of his waist, his wife who had followed him seized him by the hair, and then, as a local editor described it, "she led him back til lhe reached a place where the water was about two feet deep where she pulled him over backwards and soused him under, and pulled his head up again," "Drown yourself (down he went) leaving me to father the brats! (another plunge) get drunk! (another souse) and start for the river! (another dip) Better use the water instead of rum! (another dip and shake of the head.) I'll larn ye to leve me a widow!" After sozzling him to her heart's content, she led him out a wetter if not a better man, and escorted him into the house and closed the door.
