SMOKE.

FROM SMELTERS.

Does not injure vegetation.

It is now safe to say after a long run of the smelters in the Boundary and Grand Forks that their fumes are not to be feared. Only on the crown of Jubilee mountain, where the thickest fumes from the Anaconda smelter are generally passing, are the forest trees dead or dying. Annual vegetation is nowhere injured.

The same may be said of Boundary Falls where nothing but Mc.Caren Creek gulch shows the marks,

At Grand Forks the fruit trees are as healthy as ever, though much was feared for them.

A dam furnished with a sluice gate is being built at the mouth of Long Lake.

Jeffries is now the chapion bruiser of the world.

Last week's garden party was a success
