PROGRESS OF THE PACIFIC RAILROAD

"Stanley," writing to the Chicago Republican, from the Bijou Hills, Dakota, April the 29th, says: Wonderful, indeed, is the rapidity with which the rolling hills are cleft, roads graded, ties laid down, and the rails secured in their places, with as much regularity and order as the best of mechanism. The Union Pacific Railroad, eastern division, is positively and undoubtedly an established fact. Within the short space of five weeks, a most suprising change has happened. From Harker to Junction City, the bottom lands are teeming with ranches lately built, and the voice of the ploughman is heard, where but two short month ago, the war whoop of the savage echoed in the greenwoods of the Smoky Hills. Pedestrians line the road, all bound for the west. Pilgrims, with their little all; their wives, children, and earthly substance, flock in numbers, and answer your queries as to whither bound, with "to the west." The railroad seems to be contagious; everybody seems to be imbued with railroad haste and energy. The city of Salina commences to raise her head. A magnificent depot is to be built to meet the demand for storage addressed to this lively city. The cars run here regularly; passengers alight and enquire anxiously, "how is biz?" and go away again, delighted to hear that "biz is tip top." Passengers can procure tickets for Salina, and in four weeks will be able to get them for Fort Harker. Squads of Irishmen, under energetic taskmasters, are scattered all along, working with might and main, as if they had an interest in the road, apart from their daily bread or monthly wages. But "excelsior" is the motto, and westward do empire and civilization wend their way. General Hancock intends to go to Fort Harker, to sign a treaty with the famous Black Kettle.

ANECDOTE OF A HIGHLAND SOLDIER.—No man who has lived among the peasantry of Scotland, will deny the effects produced on them by their popular songs. During the expedition to Buenos Ayres, a Highland soldier, while a prisoner in the hands of the Spaniards, having formed an attachment to a woman of the country, and charmed by the easy life which the tropical fertility of the soil enabled the inhabitants to lead, had resolved to remain and settle in South America. When he imparted this resolution to his comrade, the latter did not argue with him, but leading him to his tent, he placed him by his side, and sung to him "Lochaber no more." The spell was on him. The tears came into his eyes, and wrapping his plaid around him, he murmured "Lachaber na mair!—I maun gang back—na!" The songs of his childhood were ringing in his ears, and he left that land of ease and plenty for the naked rocks and sterile valleys of Badenoch, where, at the close of a live of toil and hardship, he might lay his head in his mother's grave.

GLYCERINE, the substance which constitutes the base of that terribly destructive explosive agent, nitro-glycerine, is a clear, colorless syrup, and constitutes the main and sweet principle in fats. When pure, it has no smell. It is a most useful substance for chapped hands, or for any application where it is desirable to keep the air from reaching the skin, and hence keeping it moist—the great secret in the cure of such cases. It is, perhaps, the best hair oil in the world, and never takes on taint, (heat not decomposing it save at 600 deg.) Besides keeping the hair moist, it has the merit of not being dried by air, but, on the contrary, draws moisture from the atmosphere. Thus it makes a sweet, pure, durable oil for the hair. It is also the principal medicine for ear complaints—especially a dry ear.—M. & S. Press.

A FREEZING SPRING.—Scrope, in his "Volcanoes of Central France," says that near Fort Gibaud, a short distance from Clermont, in France, there is a natural grotto, in basalt, from the interior of which gushes a small spring of water, near and about which ice is formed, even during the greatest heat of summer. The water is supposed to be cooled by means of the rapid evaporation produced by a current of very dry air, which issues from fissures in the rock, which communicate with the grotto. This air owes its dryness to the absorbent qualities of the rock through which it passes. This dry air, in passing over the spring, absorbs moisture from it so rapidly as to keep its temperature constantly at or below the freezing point.

THE EXPECTED VISIT OF THE GOVERNOR.

We are informed that His Excellency Governor Seymour will arrive on this creek, in the course of a few days, when he will, no doubt, be received with every demonstration of respect, as the representative of our sovereign. If, as we are led to understand by the Victoria newspapers, he has shown any lack of assiduity in respect to his gubernatorial duties below, he cannot be charged with the same fault in relation to ourselves; as no sooner does an exigency require his presence here, than he leaves his capital to assist, by his personal supervision, in the redress of any grievances complained of; and it remains with our citizens to avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded, to lay before him in proper form, all questions in which his direct intervention may be necessary. To judge from complaints that have reached us from various sources, there are several matters of urgent importance, which require his immediate attention, and our citizens should bestir themselves to have everything ready to place before him, for consideration on his arrival, as his stay here must be necessarily short. If we neglect to shew him that we have cause for complaint, we cannot feel dissatisfied if we afterwards discover that something has been overlooked. It is one thing to grumble at mal-administration during his absence, and another to impress him with universal content and prosperity while he is amongst us. Such inconsistency has occurred on former occasions, but we trust that our citizens will not repeat the error. Much discontent has been felt or expressed by many of our people at the late decisions in the Commissioner's Court; and also with the conclusions arrived at when appeal was made to our Supreme Court. We are not prepared to express an opinion as to the correctness of either, seeing that the affairs will be properly investigated at once; but we must remind the parties interested, that if any such causes of discontent exist, they must now make them known, or forever hold their peace. The law in all cases ought to be properly administered, and if no abuse can be proved, it naturally follows that the proper course has been pursued. Another source of complaint is the bad state of the roads; we are saddled with heavy tolls, it may be supposed, in order to keep them in repair. It is true the present taxes are in a great measure levied to repay the bondholders, principal and interest, on the loans advanced by them to make these very roads; but at the same time it must be reasonably concluded that a sufficient margin was reserved to keep the roads in passable order, otherwise the tolls should have been increased. The importance of perfect communication with the mines, cannot be too highly estimated, as it must be on our mineral productions that this country will depend for a long time to come, and any barrier to the easy transit of supplies from one part of the colony to another, must be removed at any cost. His Excellency's journey to Cariboo will undoubtedly convince him of the necessity of some immediate steps being taken to improve the muddy slough between the one hundred and fifty and one hundred and sixty-four mile posts, as also on other portions of the road where the grading has given way, ignorance on that head cannot be pleaded in future. There is also another matter little less urgent than the above; we allude to the completion of the trails between this creek and the one hundred and eight mile post, by way of Horsefly; it is not merely that a shorter route would be opened to pedestrians and pack animals, but that a large mining district will be made more easy of access for miners and supplies. As we have shown in a previous article, this can be accomplished at very small cost to government, if thought expedient, and so far as we can understand the case, on terms the best calculated for general advantage. On general subjects it might not be unadvisable to remind His Excellency that the taxation is sufficiently burdensome, and that some relief might be afforded by the abolition, at least for the present, of some of the least necessary causes of public expenditure. For instance, the Assay Office might be dispensed with, and no public inconvenience felt. The cost of its maintenance may not be large, but that, in addition to other sums that might be saved by the amalgamation of certain offices during the present financial pressure, would do much to smooth away the difficulties which now embarrass the government, in relation to possible contingencies connected with the revenue. We are sure that His Excellency will listen with attention to any suggestions from our important community. To return to our own immediate requirements, we would ask what has become of our mining board? Are our mining laws now so perfect that any suggestion on the subject would be superfluous? We take upon ourselves to reject this hypothesis, else it must be admitted that our miners are a very discontented set of mortals, which we must be permitted to deny. Our citizens are perfectly aware that much unpleasant feeling has prevailed of late, touching the present form of the law applicable to certain descriptions of mining, and the advantage of a number of suggestions drawn up by a mining board on the subject, to lay before His Excellency, would doubtless have the effect of produdidg a revisal sufficient to remove the objectionable clauses. A provision is made by the existing laws admitting of such alterations by the Judge of the Supreme Court, and were the points in question properly explained to the Governor, he would no doubt recommend their modification to Judge Begbie, and so place our mining interests on a better footing. If errors have been committed in the passage of our mining laws, let them be pointed out to the Governor without delay, and the proper steps taken to adjust them conformably with our experience. We sincerely hope that not a moment will be lost in preparing ourselves for the important duties before us, so that when Governor Seymour returns to Victoria, he may do so assured that he has left no germ of discontent in this community, and we satisfied that we have done all in our power to have our grievances redressed.

A NEW PRINTING MACHINE.

Various rumors are afloat respecting a machine that is being constructed at the Times office, to print 20,000 copies of that paper, perfect, in one hour; but it appears that nothing is known of it inside, although, like other wonders, everything is known outside the building. From what we can learn, a great deal has yet to be done to bring it to perfection. Miles' boy says it is a copy of Wilkinson's machine, that was brought out some years since in America, and has been working, we believe, the New York Sun. It prints on a continuous sheet of damped paper (unrolled from a cylinder) on both sides, registering as exact as book work on a hand press. Stereotype plates of the pages are used, but of a smaller curve than those for Applegarth or Hoe. When the sheet has received the impression on both sides, it is cut by a simple contrivance and carried forward, a complete newspaper, to the delivery-board. If successful, it will surpass all newspaper machines at present in existence. Its further development will be looked forward to with much curiosity.—Press News.

MARINES ON THE WAY HERE.—We are informed that his Excellency the Governor is accompanied by a body guard of thirteen marines. It would appear by this that we are on the eve of having troublous times.

THE man James Dowling, who had his arms accidentally fractured at Last Chance creek, last week, was conveyed in a wagon to the hospital yesterday. The poor man suffers great pain.

FRESH VEGETABLES.—Our market is now constantly supplied with fresh vegetables raised at Quesnelmouth. New potatoes of good quality are bringing 25 cents per lb.

THE CARIBOO SENTINEL

MONDAY, AUGUST 5, 1867.

NON-ARRIVAL OF THE EXPRESS.—Great disappointment was felt by every member of the community, and more particularly by ourselves, at the non-arrival of the Express yesterday, and many were the surmises hazarded as to its detention, until late in the evening a party arrived from Quesnelmouth, and explained the cause. It appears that the two express wagons which are loaded with soldiers and others of the Governor's suite, had not arrived at Soda Creek on the usual day. A telegraph despatch was received at Quesnelmouth on Friday, stating that one of the stages would be at Soda Creek last night, and the other to-day, and that the steamer would leave on Tuesday, so that the Express need not be expected in here before Thursday.

IT may be interesting to the miners of Musquito Gulch to know that notices are posted at the Court House dated 29th ulto., by Messrs Pascoe & Co., intimating their intention of applying, after the lapse of ten days, to the Gold Commissioner for leave to divert 250 inches of water from Red Gulch, to supply the miners of Musquito Gulch with water at 75cts. an inch, the ditch to be completed in three months.

P. R.—The first weekly deposit of $100 each was made by Wilson and Eden towards the stakes for the coming contest for the championship of British Columbia, last Saturday evening, at Barry & Adler's Saloon. A similar deposit will be made next Saturday, at A. Hardie's Saloon, Cameronton.

GOOD NEWS, IF TRUE.—A rumor has reached us from Quesnelmouth to the effect that one ton of rock crushed by the arrastra, from the Washburn ledge, at Canyon creek, had netted $500.

MR. BALL left on Saturday morning for Quesnelmouth to meet the Governor.

FROM JAPAN.

From the Japan Times we glean the following: The political news continues to possess a certain importance. In our last, after discussing the subject of opening Osaka and Hiogo, we went on, it will be remembered, to compare the relative advantages of Kanagawa and Mikuni, two important towns on the west coast, and one of which we were led to believe, would be opened there in fulfilment of the treaty. We very much regret to announce that neither has been chosen.

The United States steamer Shenandoah arrived on the 22nd May from Osaka, having left that port on the 20th May. The French minister left for Nagasaki on the 18th, and Sir Harry Parkes, accompanied by Lady Parkes, Dr. Willis, and Mr. Locock, started on the same day for Tsurunga, then spoken of as the new port to be opened on the west coast.

The appointment of Mr. Seare, as Japanese Commissioner to Osaka, which we announced in our last issue, has given rise to some discussion.

In commercial circles the time has been a quiet one, disturbed only by the occurrence of a bankruptcy, that of A. McKechnie & Co., milliners and fancy goods merchants, which, so far as appears at present, seems likely to be a disastrous one to all concerned. The silk and tea markets are both exceedingly slack, as might be expected at this time of the year. Of our chief staple there is very little in the market; most of the stock is of an inferior description; but for the very few bales of really good silk, of which there is a small quantity, holders are remarkably firm. Little is doing in the tea market, buyers awaiting the arrival of samples of the new crop.

The meeting of the greater Daimios, so often announced, and so often postponed, is about to take place at Kioto. The old (inkio) princes of Satsuma and Owagima have already arrived there, and the Shogoon has returned thither, after his entertainment of the foreign ministers at Osaka. 'Stotsbashi (for by that name he is best known to our readers) appears to be a really able man. In our leading columns we announce his reconciliation with the Osari family, from whose partisans at one time was anticipated serious opposition to his rule and danger to his life.

The survey of the new settlement at Osaka by Capt. Bullock is nearly completed. We presume that it will be ready for exhibition on Sir Harry's return. Our correspondents unite in reporting that it is a good situation.

Much distress exists at present among the population of Oska, two or three dead bodies (of beggars apparently) are seen floating down the river daily, and the people, generally the lower classes, appear wretchedly poor, and that look of content and comparative comfort, which is remarkable in these districts, is quite absent from their faces.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

WILLIAMS CREEK.

Mining prospects on this creek have at no time during the present season looked more hopeful of fruitful results than during the week that has passed. The ground sluice claims above Richfield that we have long predicted would yield a golden harvest to their fortunate possessors, are now surrendering their hidden treasures in large quantities, and were it not for the stoppage of claims on the lower portion of the creek, by reason of the obstruction of the Bed Rock Drain, our report this week would have borne comparison with the receipts of any week during the palmy days of 1863 & 4.

Bradly Nicholson co. are averaging about wages.—Taylor co. are doing well.—Deadwood co. are making from $10 to $12 a day—Wilson co. took out for the week 56oz.—McLaren co. washed up for the week 174oz.—Brouse co. washed up on Thursday 90oz.; total for week 136oz.—Dutch Bill co. made a very important discovery last Saturday. It seems they have been working for some time on the top of a soft rock under the supposition that it was the regular bed rock, and took out good pay; finding that this rock contained a little gold, they were induced to dig into it about 18 inches, when they discovered a gravel deposit underneath which prospected $6 to the pan; after washing this dirt half a day they obtained 12oz. As it is very apparent this slide rock covers the greater part of their claim, big pay is naturally expected; they took out 60oz. for the week.—Steadman co. are making from 1oz. to $20 a day to the hand.—Six-toed Pete co. are ready to clean up.—Cornish co. took out good pay last week.—Tyack co. cleaned up their boxes after ground sluicing and had 25oz. They will clean up bed rock this week and take out big pay.—Barker and Sheeps Head cos. are sinking shafts.—Australian co. are making $8 a day on the high rock on the west side of the creek.—Davis co. washed out 144oz. for the week.—Aurora co. took out for the week 330oz.—Never Sweat co. are making $10 a day to the hand.—California co. made wages for last week.—Forest Rose co. took out 51oz. for the week. Prairie Flower co. are making about wages.

STOUTS GULCH.

The Floyd co. have not got ready for washing yet.—Alturas co. washed up 190oz. for the week.—Taffvale co. are now within 20 ft. of their own ground and will be washing this week.—Jenkins co. are making about wages while running a drain tunnel to tap the Mucho Oro claim.—Mucho Oro co. took out 40 oz, last week.—Durham and Emery cos, are prospecting.

CONKLINS GULCH.

There has not been another creek or gulch in the country where the tide of success has been more fluctuating than in this gulch. Season after season since 1863, the advent of the Ericcson discovery, prospecting of the most expensive character has been prosecuted, in some instances with partial success, and despite the many drawbacks and failures that are daily to be met with, the hope of ultimate reward is urging a thorough search to be made for the lost lead on both sides of the gulch. In the course of a week or two some developments will undoubtedly be made, which will either raise the fame of this gulch to its former greatness or sink it lower in public estimation.

The United co. washed out last week 76oz. Ericcson co. did not take out anything last week, having been engaged in preparing to work from their upper shaft.—Reid co. have started to work in their upper shaft and that of the New Zealand co., and expect to do well this week.—Home Stake co. are sinking a shaft near their side lines.—Hood co. are sinking a shaft back in the hill, near the Grouse creek trail.—Renfrew co. are blasting bed rock from bottom of shaft and will start drifting during the week.—Just Struck It co. are still running through rim rock.—Galour co, have gone through a spur of bed rock and got into a very loose wash, the drifting through which necessitates the use of face boards.

MUSQUITO GULCH.

The Minnehaha co. expect to reach bed rock towards the latter end of the week.—Willow and Discovery cos. are doing well.—Jeffree co. took out about 30oz. for the week.—Holman co. are taking out good pay.

BEGGS GULCH.

The Ancient Brition co. have not yet reached bed rock, but will, it is thought, be able to do so during the present week. A company near the mouth of the gulch are ground sluicing surface gravel and making from 1oz. to $20 a day to the hand.

MCARTHURS GULCH.

The Discovery co. finished washing up the pay dirt taken out of their tunnel during the winter, and had over 200oz., which yields them an average of $8 a day for the time employed. Another company further up the gulch are running a prospect tunnel.

LOWHEE CREEK.

The water which diminishes very fast in this creek during the prevalence of dry weather, has already begun to fail to such an extent as to prevent hydraulic claims from running off any more top dirt, and all are now washing up their ground sluices with very satisfactory results.

Kelly co washed up for week about 130oz.—Vaughan Sweeny co. had for week 40 oz.—Boyle co. are making wages.—Plumbago co are making from $10 to $12 a day.—Flume co. are taking out from $8 to $10 a day, working over old ground.—Now or Never co. have been drifting up stream on a channel containing a very heavy wash, but have struck no pay; they intend now to run 20ft. further into the hill where a well defined channel is known to exist.—Moorhead co. has been paying $10 a day to the hand.—Chittenden co. will take out good pay this week.—Sagemiller co. This claim has been purchased by the Moorhead co, so as to enable them to run a drain to the upper portion of the latter company's ground, which has never been worked, and in which good pay is supposed to exist.—First Chance co. washed out for the week 100 oz.—Calaveras co. have not completed their drain tunnel, but expect to get through this week.

CEDAR CREEK.

Times are very lively at this camp. The Discovery co. are working 10 men and making $16 a day to the hand.—Sappers co. are making wages; 4 men at work.—Aurora co. are working 15 men and averaging $20 a day to the hand. They cleaned up for a two days run last week 37½ oz. This claim is in thorough working order and will yield good returns for years to come.

BLACK BEAR CREEK.

From the present appearance of things, it is supposed by many that good diggings will yet be found on this creek. Prospecting is being prosecuted with great energy, and everyone is in high spirits.

KEITHLEYS CREEK.

Anglo American co. are averaging good wages; they cleaned up $200 last week.

ANTLER CREEK.

Larkin & co. are making wages.—Smith & co. are still going ahead with their tunnel and running through a very heavy wash of gravel.

Several other companies are at work lower down the creek, all of whom are making about wages.

STEVENS CREEK.

There are about 30 men busily engaged in prospecting this creek, by means of shafts and groundsluicing. The Flume co. picked up a piece in their ground sluice, last week, weighing $92, when they commence washing up they are certain of good pay. One company got down with a shaft last week at 25ft. and washed out 2 oz. from the bottom.

GROUSE CREEK.

The prospects of a lively fall are becoming every day more apparent on this creek. Claims which in the early part of the season were abandoned or considered worthless are now either paying well or giving promising indications, and a very large area of mining ground has lately been located on the upper section of the creek. which, it is believed, will prove to be highly remunerative. We have been unable to get a full report from this creek for the past week, but can vouch for the following particulars:

Heron co. washed up for the week 56oz., procured by cleaning up bed rock that had previously been worked.—Wild Goose co. are making wages.—Discovery co. are finding good prospects back in the hill a greater distance than they have ever before reached.—Full Rigg co. are taking out good pay.—Ne'er do Weel co. washed out last week 70oz. They found three nuggets weighing respectively 5, 3 and 2 oz.—Ontario co. are just opening a drift, they washed a little of the gravel not near bed rock and got 3oz., one piece weighing $21.—Shy Robin co. are making wages.—Fountain Head co. got through the rim rock on Friday last, and struck the channel which prospects well.—Rocky Point co. are making good wages.

The following is a recapitulation of the quantity of gold taken from the different claims on the creeks and gulches mentioned in the foregoing report, exclusive of those that are stated as paying wages:

AERIAL NAVIGATION.

Many of our readers may not be aware that experiments have been in progress for months past near San Francisco, under the direction of one Frederick Marriott, for constructing and perfecting a machine capable of navigating the air. These experiments are in a fair way according to recent accounts, of realizing the most sanguine anticipations of the inventor. It is not beyond the bounds of probability in this age of great inventions, to predict that the invention will prove successful. The following is a description of this Avitor or aerial machine as given in the Bulletin:—

The first machine on the Avitor principle has been named the Hermes, and is now standing in a large building constructed for the purpose, at the Shell Mound Park, one mile and a half from the Millbrae Station, San Mateo county, on the San Jose and San Francisco railroad, and about nineteen miles from this city. On entering the shed, we found a large and solid looking vessel, though made of the lightest fabrics, supported in much the same way as vessels designed for navigating the sea are, while in process of construction, and surrounded by a similar scaffolding. The shape of the Avitor is that of a hybrid between a fish, and a short-billed, short-necked, plump bird, stretched and in in the act of flying. The outlines and general features are as unlike the sketches and caricatures that have been put out, as a crab is unlike a quail. The total length from stem to stern is seventy-six feet, to which must be added twelve feet of tail, making eighty-eight feet over all. The greatest diameter of the body is twenty-one feet; the height from where the keel would be, if it was a ship, is twenty-one feet. A transverse section taken a little forward of the central point between the stem and stern, would show not a circular but a heart shape; the crown depressed, and the greatest width being at about one-third of the distance below the highest part of the back of the gas holder. From the tip, stretching backward on each side, forty-three feet, and attached to the body of the vessel at the shoulders, or broad part alluded to, are thin membranes, or horizontal wings, fixed and rigid, and made of the same material as the integument of the main body. These planes act much as the wings of a bird when sailing through the air, and will steady the machine when afloat, and prevent its rising and falling with every revolution of the propelling screws These extensors or wings are ten and a-half feet wide at the terminating points, near the propellers, thus giving a total breadth of forty-two feet to the machine at the centre. There is a portion of these wings, on each side, about ten feet square, which is movable. These movable parts are hinged on the forward edge, and there is about eight feet of fixed extension between them and the extremity of the wings. These movable planes can be depressed or elevated twenty-two degrees, up or down, at the will of the engineer and when the machine is flying, will either increase or decrease its altitude, as a bird, by the inflection of the wings, can skim the surface of the earth, or mount to higher altitudes The rudder is as nearly the shape of a fish's tail as it can well be, and is controlled by light, stout cords, connected with a small steering wheel in the engine room. The tail does not move exactly as the rudder of a vessel, but partially revolves on a rod projecting from the internal framing. When the helm is amidships, the rudder is perpendicular, but when the steersman wishes to port, or go to the left, he inclines the upper limb of the tail to that side, a motion which throws the lower limb as much to the starboard or right side. According to the speed at which the machine is going, this would divert her course, and in an element presenting so little friction as the atmosphere, and a body shaped to overcome resistance so easily as the Hermes, it would probably only require a dip of two or three degrees in her tail to make her describe a circle in very narrow limits.

The propellers are two-armed, 8 feet in diameter, by 34 inches in breath, with a pitch of 25 feet. The outer shafts are 1 inch pipes and the inner ones or driving shafts are ¾in. tubes. The engine is on the direct action principle, and is fixed against a light upright plank under the propeller shaft. The diameter of the piston is 3¾ inches, and the length of stroke 10 inches; the engine makes 175 to 200 revolutions per minute. Without shafting or wheels it is 371bs. weight, nominal power 2¼ and real power 4 horses. The entire weight of the machine when in proper working order will weigh 1171 lbs.; the quantity of gas necessary for supporting this weight will be 14,500 cubic feet.

THUNDER STORM.—We were visited yesterday afternoon with a heavy thunderstorm, which had the very beneficial effect of laying the dust and clearing the air of its sultry vapors.

THE regular weekly Express and Mail will leave next Thursday on account of the delay of the up mail.

MEMORY NEVER DIES.

Memory, thou canst never die,
Therefore we shall strive to leave
That with thee which will not grieve;
When we view the record o'er,
And receive thy just reply,
"Thou hast written, here's the score."

On our tablet, from our youth,
Doth the plainest records stand,
For we wrote with earnest hand;
Then believing all would keep
Strictly in the path of truth,
Wrote the records plain and deep.

Though the dust of years may fall
On thy records till they seem
To be fading like a dream,
Neath the dust they're standing yet,
Though we cannot see them all,
Still we never can forget.

For there comes a time when all
Of this dust is swept away;
Brightly in the light of day,
Whether bringing joy or pain,
In obedience to our call,
All the records shall be plain.

Memory, thou canst never die;
Therefore we should strive to have
That with thee which will not grieve;
When we view the record o'er,
And receive thy just reply,
"Thou hast written, here's the score."

A GHOST STORY ANALYZED.

A house in Milwaukee has been haunted in a particular chamber since the death of a child, who, as gossips said, had died of parental neglect. The parents left the house immediately after the death of the child, giving as a reason that the associations with their lost child were so sad, they preferred a change of residence. Another tenant came in, and the sleeper in that room was startled at night by the pattering of little feet overhead, by low moans, and now and then a night would be made terrible, by an unearthly whistle. The house became tenantless, and the curious flocked to the haunted chamber.

The landlord felt the necessity of retrieving the character of his house, and himself moved into it, he occupying the haunted chamber. The first night passed without any ghostly manifestations, and the second night he went to bed more courageous than ever. But the noises were heard, and he, not daring to move, lay in terror until morning. He related his experience to a neighbor, who had more sense than most of his neighbors, and who proposed an investigation.

The Milwaukee Sentinel gives the result. Search was had, and the discovery made that a couple of doves had their cot in the garret, on which was no floor. These doves there did their cooing and billing—hence the moan; the doves trotted around on the plastering—hence the patter of little feet; the doves flapped their wings—hence the sound of winged monsters; and the doves displaced particles of plaster, that rattled down the room sides. But the whistle. Whence came that melancholy sound? Further search discovered a child's whistle used to fasten a rattling window—hence occasionally, when the wind blew, the whistle whistled; and that is the end of that ghost story.

J. WILKES BOOTH.—A correspondent of a New Orleans paper relates that a friend of his has won a wager of $500 by proving that Booth is still alive. He says: "His whereabouts are known to five persons only, who know that he is Booth. He is living in obscurity, not far from his native land, and is perfectly safe, as his disguise is so complete his own brother would not recognize him."

CONFEDERATION.—The Montreal Witness says that the British Government have informed Governor Seymour that one of the first measures to be brought before the Canadian Legislature, will be the extension of the Confederation to all the British North American territories.
