JAMES M. BARTON DIES OF HEART FAILURE

Early Monday morning the news was circulated round town that Jim Barton was very low. He had spent a bad night and his relatives had been summoned to his bed side. Some of his brother Masons were also there and had watched the night through with him. Twice during the night the doctor had been summoned, but it with a surprise that he finally gasped his last at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

James Barton was 47 years of age, had lived in Creston for some years and had cleared one of the nicest farms close to town. He was a hard worker and only this season had cleared up some of his land.

Under Masonic auspices the funeral was conducted on Wednesday afternoon and was one of the largest ever held in Creston. The Masons turned out in force to bear their late brother to his last resting place.

There were a large number of floral tributes testifying to the esteem in which deceased was held by nearly everybody in the district.

BOY OF TEN YEARS DROWNS IN MILL POND

The whole community was shocked this afternoon to hear of the sudden death by drowning of Almer Demers the ten year old son of Pete Demers. The boy was playing on the logs in the mill pond and slipped, falling into the water. It was some minutes before help was secured and then the foreman arrived and wading in felt all around for the body of the little fellow. After a few minutes he found it and every effort was made to resuscitate the boy but without success.

Dr. Henderson was called and with Capt. Forrester made a record run to the scene and although they were they were there very shortly after the accident occurred they could not restore the life of the little body. His parents are overcome with grief.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon.

THE FORUM
A COLUMN FOR THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Creston Review.

Sir:—Twenty years ago every able bodied male in the Kootenays was a potential prospector. and it is probably within the mark to say that at one time or another, at least half of them did take a trip in the hills. Then came the mining boom with its orgy of wildcatting, where in be it remembered that it was the company promoter and not the prospector, who peddled worthless mining stocks far and wide, and made the very name of mining to stink in the nostrils of the investor. Then after the bubble had burst came lean days, prices of metals were low, and in many instances properties were badly imaged, and on after another prospectors left the District, or turned their hands to some other occupation. And now only remnant is left, composed largely of elderly men, and practically no young men are coming forward to take their places.

The general public seem quite content with this state of affairs. To the average man a prospector seems either a fool or a crook, or such a happy combination of both that his folly prevents his crookedness from working any injury. But as a matter of fact a prospector is just as much a producer as any farmer. Metals are just as necessary to our modern civilization as the bread we eat, and until an ore deposit has been found by some prospector, it might as well be in the moon. The mines now working in this Province will not last forever, and it is to the interest, direct or indirect, of every person in British Columbia, that prospectors should be encouraged to go out in the hills. With prper encouragement mining should always be the leading industry in this Province.

In the last session of the local legislature, an Act was passed that "pointed to with pride" by the Goverment as an instance of its statesmanship, and which was commended by the other political parties as one of the few instances of Government action that met with their approval. This statue reserves to the Crown half of any radium ores found in the Province, and a grant of $5000 00 is to be made to the first prospector who makes a discovery of such ores. Note that subsequent discoverers get no grants. And we are told, and many apparently believe that the effect will be to encourage prospecting. It is obvious that the prospector finding a showing of radium ore cannot now expect to get more than half as much for it as he could have done, and probaly considerable less than half. And if the showing is any good, half of it would be worth considerably more than $5000.00. So just that way this statue will encourage prospecting is difficult to understand.

Imagine the Legislature enacting that the crown would take half the produce from all pre-empted land. And imagine all the political parties acclaiming such legislation as equitable and laudable in the interests the whole province, and it out as an inducement to settlers to pre-emp land. The principle is exactly the same, for it must be borne in mind that a settler doesn't make the land he pre-empts any more than the prospector does the ore he finds.

Another instance of the treatment a prospector receives in British Columbia is the fate of Eli Carpenter. He was the man who discovered the Paynemine, which lead to the opening up of the whole Slocan District, which now appears to be on eve of a greater development than ever. Carpenter obtained $500.00 for his interest in the Payne, and a few years later died in proverty. contrast that with the policy of Australia, where enlightened men of keener appreciation of the services prospectors render to the state. In Australi as I understand anyone an important discovery like Carpenter, receives a grant from the Government of 20,000, and is also at liberty to sell his claim for the best prices he can get, without any legislative jokers confiscating half of it.

Much is done here to encourage agriculture, and every unprejudiced person must admit that that is wise policy. Lecturers are sent throughout the Province at started intervals to give instuction and demonstration respecting the best methods of growing, shipping and marketing agricultural produce. Farmers are encouraged to co-operate in their purchases of powder and other supplies, and in their selling organizations. But while all that is highly commendable, the fact remains that probably not more than ten per cent of the total area of the Province is really suitable for agriculture while the greater part of the remainder is possibly mineral bearing ground, and should be prospected. If it is wise to encourage farmers by instructions in the best methods in buying, producing and selling, it should also be wise to lend a helping hand to prospectors in similar fashion. Prospecting, or should be plenty scientific as an occupation. Schools should be established in mining centers, where anyone holding a Free Miners Certificate could get free instruction in the principles of mining geology and in the phsical characteristics of the commercial at any rate of the useful metals, including such rarer metals as tungsten vanadium, uranium, tantalum and the like. Much could also be done to assist them in developing and marketing their finds if, for instance, inspectors, with sound knowledge and horse sense, were sent out to examine claims, and give the owners the benefit of their knowledge in frank statements of the probable value of the claims, and the best methods of working them. And if further they prepared and filed away for reference reprorts on the claims which would be assessible to intending investors, any claim owner with a good showing would find it a far easier matter to get in touch with capital than at present.

It is generally believed that the next great movement in speculation and investment will be in mining. The industry in this Province is on a solid basis. If safeguards against wildcatting encouragement to prospecrors is provided there should be a marvellous development in the next decade. What British Columbia needs at the present moment is 1000 energetic young men with some technical knowledge of the subject searching the subject searching the hills. In all probability they would cause a greater adcition to the material progress of the community than an equal number of men engaged in any other calling.

Yours etc.

THE MINING INDUSTRY

Mr. Thomas Taylor, Minister of Public Works, has just returned from the Interior with a very optimistic report as to the condition of the mining industry. His statements bear out what Sir Richard McBride told Colonist readers a year ago to expect They endorce what Mr. Goodeve told us a few days ago. They corroborate the scores of rerorts made by private individuals. There is not in Kootenay anything bearing the faintest resemblance to a mining boom. What is happening is that a number of hard-headed business men are putting their money into mines and winning handsome profis. You cannot find a wildcat in the whole of Kootenay. It is all business so far as mining is concerned.

This is certainly a very gratifying state of things. It not only means much for the present, but it means very much for the future. There was a time when even the most hopeful of us could not wholly banish doubts as to the permanency of the lode-mining industry, but that has now been demonstrated. The new conditions will make it easier to secure capital for bona-fide mining propositions. —Colonist.

Money, like trade, follows the flag. Figures of loans and investments abroad made by Great Britain for the past five months show that countries under the British flag got about half of them, and Canada more than any other country, British or foreign. The Dominion borrowed in the five months the huge amount of $160,000,000 Australia came next among British countries with $90,000,000. The British total invested beneath the flag abroad was $312,000,000, so that Canada got more than half. To foreign countries, Great Britain lent $400,000,000. No country obtained anything like as much as Canada. Thus, despite a financially stagnant year, and despite all the talk about Canadian over-borrowing, and despite getting his fingers nipped somewhat here, good old John Bull didn't tighten up so very much to this country. And that he didn't is undoubtedly to some degree due to the fact that there is political connection. The Union Jack is a big asset to us in the financial way as well as in other ways.—Ottawa Journal.

The quiet and unostentatious way in which Canadians observe the only really national holiday of the year—Dominion Day—has frequently been the subject of comment and criticism by people of other nationalities accustomed to observe these events, in a more boisterous and exuberant manner. While not lacking in the essentials of patroitism or appreciation of responsibility, Canadians are disposed to take their pleasures or misfortunes in a matter of-fact way and it takes something out of the ordinary to arouse any spectacular enthusiasm. That they are capable of doing so when occasion requires has been demonstrated more than once. For the educative effect it might have on the younger generation [illegible] animated observance [illegible] of historic interest [illegible] serve a useful purpose [illegible]

In 1902, at the [illegible] the great Fernie disaster the Liberal government refused to make any donation, notwithstanding the fact that there was no Compensation Act at time and the bereaved families were entirely dependent upon public charity. Again, in 1908, they refused to help the Fernie sufferers although almost every home was wiped out by fire and hundreds left destitute. The Hillcrest sufferers can thank Providence that since then there has been a change. The Borden Conservative government immediately sent $50,000, with a promise of more if needed.—Fernie Free Press.

Mr. J. H. Turner, in an interview in London, says of British Columbia: "It is going to be the most important Province in the Dominion. I would suggest that English people who indulge in Winter sports, and are not bound by time, would give it a trial. The climate is perfect, and they can get all the ski-ing, skating, and tobogganing they want. And we have what Switzerland cannot offer—an abundance of game."

The Fourteenth Annual Meeting of the Canadian Association for the prevention of Tuberculosis will be held in the Technical College, Halifax, N. S. on Monday and Tuesday, 13th and 14th July, 1914 beginning on Monday at 10 a. m. A splendid program has been arranged for the occasion.

UNITED STATES FLYING FLEET READY FOR ACTION

Many pictures have been shown of Uncle Sam's aquatic dogs of war but this is the first photograph of the Aero Division of the Atlantic Fleet lined up ready for action at their station at the Pensacola Navy Yard. These birds of war are equipped with every modern device for dropping bombs which will explode and accomplish destruction when they come in contact with an object below. Army aviators have proven to be very dexterous in dropping explosives from aeroplanes and in addition to the aeroplane being useful as a means of locating the position of the enemy, it is now considered a very formidable device in actual warfare.
