CONSERVATION OF GROUND MOISTURE

Whence do crops draw their supply of moisture? Do they draw it from the mainly from the rains that fall during the rainy season, or do they draw it from the store of water in the soil beneath the surface which has accumulated from the April showers, the snows of winter and the rains of autum? This is the vital poi t and on it hangs the whole question of tillage If the supply is drawn from the summer rains, our tillage must be such that the soil will quickly absorb the rain and discharge the surplus supply; if it is drawn mainly from the spring, winter and autumn precipitation, our tilliage must be varied accordingly. Much will depend on the season. If the season is wet, the current rains will supply much of the moisture required, but, if the growing season is dry, the supply must be drawn from the underground supplies that have stored up the previous rains and snow.

As the amount of water lost from the soil by evaporation and by the transpiration of the plant is far in excess of the rainfall during the growing period of any ordinary season, the plant must get much of its moisture from the soil by capillarity; that is, the water travels or is drawn upward in the soil from particle to particle as required by the plant. This can easily be demonstrated by placing a few plants in crocks and setting them down into the soil, but so placed that no moisture other than the rainfall will be received by the plant. The result will be that the plants will die from lack of moisture.

This brings up the question of how to till in order to have the moisture available when needed. Fall ploughing will do much towards holding winter and spring rains. By having the soil loosened, more water is retained. Sub soiling is often resorted to as a means of so loosening the soil that it will hold more moisture. If this is done, care must be taken to only loosen the sub-soil and not bring it to the surface. Summer tillage prevents loss of moisture. If the soil is left compact and solid, the water comes to the surface and is lost by evaporation. At the same time, the soil is left cold and less pervious to the air. Frequent cultivation keeps the weeds down, allows more air to get into the soil, helps to warm the soil, and by keeping a blanket of loose earth as a covering, the water is prevented from passing off into the air by evaporation and is retained for use by the roots of the crop. After a rain it is a good practice—as soon as danger from stickiness is past—to lightly cultivate or harrow the ground to restore this blanket. It is a good plan to run a light harrow over unseeded cereals and corn after they are up. The corn may be lightly harrowed before it comes up, and a couple of times after it has come up. In harrowing cereals, care should be taken not to harrow when the grain is too small to allow it to get a good root hold. The increased moisture will more than compensate for any slight loss due to the harrowing.

Good climate, rich soil, and does not require irrigation to raise finest crops of grain, fruit and garden truck. For large map, full instructions and information, and a plat of several sections of exceptionally good claims, send $5.10 to John Keefe, Oregon City, Oregon. Three years a U. S. surveyor and timberman. An opportunity to get a good fertile free homstead near town and market.

KOOTENAY-BOUNDARY APPLE CROP DOUBLE

Fifty nine thousand boxes, or over over 100 carloads of apples is the estimate of the output this season for Kootenay and Boundary, prepared by M. S. Middleton, Assistant Provincial Horticulturist. This is about double the output of the district last year, and within the next five years over 500 cars of apples will be the production, says Mr. Middleton. The output of the boundary district will be about 45 carloads of apples this season.

Of strawberries, there are approximately 309 acres under cultivation in the district, of which the yield will be close to 1,090,000 pounds. Of raspberries, the estimated yield of 72 acres under cultivation is 308,000 pounds; of sweet cherries, there are over 200 acres of trees in bearing which will yield about 54,000 pounds; of sour cherries, there are twelve acres, which will yield about 37,000 pounds; and of other small fruits, which include gooseberries and currants, there are about 57 acres, which will yield about 173,000 pounds of fruit.

CANYON CITY NEWS

A very sad accident occurred here at about 5:30 Friday evening, when little Alymer Demers aged nine, was drowned in the mill pond.

He had started on an errand for his mother but met some little school fellows and went to the pond with them, where he was drowned before help could reach him.

Frank Corneil rescued the body.

Dr. Henderson was summoned, and although he knew life was extinct, he worked long and patiently over the little form.

Great sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents, as Alymer was a particularly bright and charming little fellow.

The casket was a profusion of flowers sent by sympathizing friends.

The funeral took place at Creston Saturday afternoon, Rev. Father John in attendance.

MINES OF HOSMER ARE CLOSED DOWN

July, 10, 1914.

In order to get a better understanding of the closing down of the Hosmer Mine by the Canadian Pacific Railway, concerning which some criticism has been made through the press recently, your correspondent obtained the following interview with Mr. Dennis, Assistant to the President, Canadian Pacific Railway.

"Since the Company established the Hosmer Mine six years ago six years ago," said Mr. Dennis," considerable sums of money have been spent in developing it and endeavoring to make it a large and permanent colliery, but for the last two years it has been run at a steady monthly loss. When we realized that there was no chance of developing this colliery on a reasonable financial basis, we reluctantly concluded, because the colliery was operated only for our own needs and to supply coke for the Trail Smelter, to close it down. It did not even supply sufficient coal for our own use, and was therefore never in the market for the sale of coal, and you can readily proposition."

"We realized" continued Mr. Dennis that the closing down of this mine would cause some inconvenience to the miners, and that we would be reducing employment in the Crows Nest District, and I can say with regret that if we could have even operated the coal mine to meet expenses it would not now be closed."

"What about the townsite, and those who will now be left with property practically on their hands?"

"The C. P. R. had nothing whatever to do with the establishment of a townsite at that point," replied Mr. Dennis, "the townsite is not situated on the C. P. R. property, and was laid out and belongs to a local syndicate who bought from the Crows Nest Pass Coal Company; there is therefore no responsibility on the part of the C. P. R. in this connection, and I may add that the Company had provided homes for its workmen immediately adjacent to the mine. I do not think that there will be great hardship suffered by the miners through loss of employment in this mine, as we can employ some of them in our other collieries, and as there are many other collieries scattered through the Crows Nest Pass where they can find work; there is no doubt some hardship for people who have bought land, (and are living in the townsite above referred to owing to closing down, but I don't think that the C. P. R. can in any sense be held responsible for those who bought land in that townsite, as they bought property there, and took their chance in establishing themselves in a town of that kind with the full knowledge of what they were doing, and particularly in view of trouble that arises at all coal mining towns, resulting from closing down of the mines owing to shortage of orders, strikes etc."

Referring to the incident the Blairmore Enterprise says:

Twelve hundred miners have been thrown out of work and the town of Hosmer, is about to be abandoned by its population, owing to the fact that the coal mines at this point, owned and operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway, have been shut down and closed forever. The work of dismantling the machinery is well under way. Merchants and property owners in the town are almost paralyzed because their land is worthless once the mines have been closed for good—coaling being the only industry that supports town. Rumors to the effect that the mines would be shut down had been prevalent for some time, but thecitizens of the town had been living in hopes that the reports were unfounded However, the climax came la t week when the work of dismantling the machinery of the mines commenced, and many miners who were not burdened with families immediately left for other points.

The Hosmer mines have been a big disappointment from the start and the development work has been going on at a heavy loss in hopes that something would materalize. However the seams instead of widening and the conditions bettering, the opposite was found to be the fact on investigation by the mine officers in charge.

Finally it was decided to close up altogether as the mining could only be done at a great loss. Whereupon twelve hundred men have been thrown out of employment and the business of many merchants in the city turned to failures through the summary closing of the mines.

The abandoning of Hosmer will make the second deserted town in that district, the town of Morrisey being the first town to be abandoned owing to the failure of the mines to pay. It is known that millions of dollars were spent in trying to re-locate coal at Morrisey and it is understood mer mines by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

Hosmer has been one seething hotbed of excitement for the past week, and a riot almost broke out on several occasions. The shutting down of the mines so suddenly caused the merchants to realise on every assignment they held, thereby taking almost every cent coming to the men whose credit is now cut off. The balance of their wages they are unable to secure until next week and many of them have not a cent to live on in the meantime.

WEEKLY COMMENT BY OUR EXCHANGES

The action of Magistrate Shaw of Vancouver the other day in dismissing the twelve cases brought before him for selling fruit on Sunday will meet with the approval of the big majority of the people of this province. The magistrate gave as his opinion that if bread was a necessary food and it was not unlawful to sell it on Sunday, the same could be said of fruit.—Phoenix Pioneer

Phoenix is at present the most prosperous mining camp in the interior of the province, and all indications point to it remaining such for many years to come. The principal mines in the camp are owned and operated by the Granby company, a concern which has the reputation of making a success of anything it undertakes. The town is fortunate in having such a strong company operating here.—Phoenix Pioneer

The Princess content in connection with the Chahko-Mika, has been started in Kaslo as well as Rossland. The Kootenaian says: All of the leading towns of the Kootenay and Boundary are being invited to send a "princes" to the carnival, said "princes" to be the prettiest girl, the nicest girl, or otherwise, as in the opinion of the natives shall entitle the chosen one to the honor. If Kaslo cannot send down a "princess" to Nelson who will make the representatives of such provincial places as Fernie, Cranbrook, Rossland, Grand Forks and Greenwood look a little off color, then we'll have no further occasion to ever do any drum beating about the real fine girls we have here.—Miner.

department of trade and commerce, has decided that in future Canada's trade commissioners in forein lands shall be men educated to the business. He proposes that so far as possible they shall be university men, and that before entering upon their commissionership duties abroad they shall have served an apprenticeship in the department at Ottawa, getting acquanted with the routine. Of course, being a university nam has its advantages, but for such positions should not be regarded as an essential. Many a man who never saw the inside of a university has proved himself the superior of university bred men in public service. As for the apprenticeship proposal, it is altogether good.—Calgary Herald.

The British Columbia Manufacturers' Association continues to push their Buy-Home-Products Campaign. There is ample field for good work in this direction. Walk through the stores and take note of the wares of Eastern manufacturers there offered for sale. One finds that many could be manufactured in British Columbia and command a wide market here, in the Yukon and on the Prairies. The wonder is that capital has not taken advantage of the local opportunities to a greater degree. Most of the articles used in the household come from Eastern Canada manufacturing centers. British Columbia may make the best mattresses in Canada but carloads of the Eastern manufactured article are imported and the sale pushed. B. C. brooms and brushes may equal the Eastern article in quality and compare favorably in price, but the well-known Eastern brand finds a readier sale. This suggests that the Buy-Home-Products campaign to be successful, implies a persistent advertising campaign on the part of the B. C. manufacturers. Well directed publicity would familiarize local consumers with B. C. wares and stimulate their local pride in supporting a Buy-Home-Products campaign

The Prairie cities have not overlooked the importance of encouraging local manufacturing by arousing local interest in home products. The result is to be seen in the steady increase in manufacturing in the Northwest. At the recent annual meeting of the Winnipeg Board of Trade it was shown that during the five years, between 1905 and 1910, the prairie provinces more than doubled their industrial output, the census showing a value of $77,000,000, while today it is estimated at $100,000,000. In Winnipeg the output of $19,000,000 in 1905 had grown to approximately $45,000,000 last year. Normally, 18,000 hands are given employment.

The census of 1910 values the output of British Columbia factories at $65,204,235 an increase of $45,756,457, or 234.77 per cent in a decade. Ontario made an increase of only 140 per cent in the decade. The employees numbered 33,312 in 1910 as against 11,454 in 1900. This indicates a pretty healthy growth in manufactures in this province But British Columbia could manufacture much more than this and then not supply the local demand, if such were directed to the patronage of home-made wares. British Columbian.

The ante-mortem utterances of great men have always attracted special attention and have a peculiar sacredness, as showing what had been nearest to the heart of the utterer prior to his passing, and in consequence of the esteem in which they had been held during their lifetime. "Joey" Chamberlain—as he had been generally and affectionately called in Birmingham—was undoubtedly one of the great statesmen of the empire.

His passing is much too recent to determine the particular place which will be ultimately assigned to him among the statesmen of the highest rank, but that it will be an exalted position there is no doubt. After his vision of empire had come to him, Cecil Rhodes having been his chief inspirer, he was unanimously so regarded, except by the Soialists and extreme radicals to whom he had become anathema. And his valedictory to the people of the empire, delivered by him shortly before his passing away to a particular confidant, was, as well as it could be remembered by him, as follows:

Yield nothing Fight it out to the end. Your cause cannot fail because it is based on the imperishable principles of British unity. Don't bother overmuch about tactics. Stick to your guns. You are bound to win, whether you win sooner or later depends on your courage and tenacity.

That, the epitome of his own life after his severance from the Gladstone government, is the message which he left and the spirit which he would enkindle throughout the British Empire. Daily News.

FEEDING STOCK FOR GAINS.

The hog consumes an enormous amount of food according to live weight, but it is an economic consumer when compared to the steer and the sheep. The hog eats heartily and greedily, but if given the right kind of food it will make gains rapidly. Compared with other meat producing animals, the hog consumes less for the amount of gain. Burkett says that on the basis of 1,000 pounds live weight the hog uses 275 pounds of dry food to 160 for the sheep and 125 for the steer per week. Of this the hog will digest 230 pounds, while the sheep will digest but 120 and the steer but 88 pounds.

It is estimated conservatively that to produce 100 pounds increase the steer requires 1,100 pounds of dry matter in food, the sheep 910 and the hog 420. Estimating the increase in live weight for food consumed on the unit basis as one for the steer, sheep will be 1.5 and hogs 5; hence we see from this comparison that the sheep in proportion to its weight eats more food than the steer and yields a greater increase, but the pig eats more heartily and yields more meat than either.

It is interesting to feed young pigs and note their keen appetites and see the gains made. This is always more striking when the feeds are weighed and the pigs put on the scales from time to time and the gains noted. For quick results the swine is the animal for our farms. It grows fast and with little investment is soon ready for the block or for market.

FRIDAY, East Kootenay Day

Creston A Special Train will leave Cranbrook on Thursday evening, calling at Creston, returning Saturday Morning in time for business. Those wishing to book rooms in advance apply to R. C TEVIOTDALE, P. O. Box 221, Nelson, B. C.

On Ottawa my thoughts I fix and muse upon our politics, and on the men who make our laws those martyrs to their country's cause who take a fortnight's time to reach the final vote upon the "Speech": who jaw and scold and criticize from morning prayer until they rise; who like in print to see their name and make of politics a game; who rather for would scap and fight and hold late sittings every night, than to get work and hurry through the business they're supposed to do. They'd rather rise a party cheer by words and speeches insincere than use their own God-given sense and clamber through the party fence. Let us have men who will espouse their country's not their party's cause and let him limit their debate and not take weeks their views to state on questions that could soon be solved were party prestige not involved. A straight division gets my goat; I'd rather see a member vote according to his own belief and not dictates of his chief.—Exchange.
