Inadvertently last week we failed to chronicle the departure for Vancouver of Mr. and Mrs. A. Sutcliffe, who have taken up their residence in the coast metropolis. As chief accountant of the Columbia Flouring Mills Co., Ltd, Mr. Sutcliffe found it necessary to follow the moving of the head office of the company from Enderby to the coast city. Mr. Sutcliffe has had charge of the company's books in Enderby for the past eight or ten years. He has also kept in close touch with the advancement of the town, and in many ways lent his support and help. In business and social circles, Mr. and Mrs. Sutcliffe will be greatly missed. On the eve of their departure, the ladies of Enderby gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Campbell and presented Mrs. Sutcliffe with a handsome pearl pendant

AN OLD FAVORITE

May Roberts has always been a favorite with an Enderby audience, and she and her company were given a warm reception at the Opera House in "The Sweetest Girl in Dixie." The house was not crowded—a crowded house these days would be expecting too much—but it was a most appreciative audience, and the play in all details was very cleverly portrayed.

Miss Roberts appeared last night in a role that is quite unusual in an actress of her rank. She took the part of a negro mammy, a type of olden days in the South. In portraying this character, we understand it is Miss Roberts' aim to put into the character the many excellent qualities she saw in a real negro mammy in her childhood days spent in the South. Certainly Miss Roberts puts more of the real thing into the character than is usual to find—on the stage. It takes a strong and big-hearted person to find so many excellent qualities in such a character and to portray them so admirably. Miss Roberts' support was fully up to past records, and the performance throughout most pleasing. To-night this excellent company will produce "Bought and Paid For," a play of intense heart interest.

K. OF P. MUSICAL EVENING

Each year the local lodge, K. of P. entertains its friends, the public, to a treat in the social line. This year the lodge is planning something unusually fine. It will be given in K. of P. Hall next Monday evening, Nov 10th, and will be free to all. The only restriction will be that no children unaccompanied by their parents or guardian will be admitted. A large number of friends will come up from Vernon, and several prominent singers from the Okanagan metropolis will take part in the program.

Miss Bertha Dillon, contralto and Miss Maud Dillon, soprano, Mr. G. Calder and Mr. Thos. Hill, from Vernon, and Mrs. Rutherford, Miss Stevent and Mr. Courtney, of Enderby, will participate. After the concert, refreshments will be served, and the usual Pythian evening enjoyed. All are welcome. No charge for anything

MASK BALL GREAT SUCCESS

Sixty or seventy couple participated in the masquerade ball given Tuesday evening by the Enderby Orchestra, and the balcony was filled with an interested audience. It was the most successful of the dances thus far given by the Orchestra, both in point of numbers and general enjoyment. The costuming was fully up to Enderby's past efforts in this departure, some of the characters being perfectly dressed and carried out. The ladies' costumes were particularly clever. The music and the floor were the best, and the refreshments, served by Mr. Doerflinger, satisfied fully the most fastidious.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

On Sunday next, Nov. 9th, Anniversary Services will be held in St. Andrewjs Presbyterian Church, at 11 o'clock a.m., and 7.30 p.m. The choir, reinforced by other singers in the city, will provide special music for both morning and evening services. The minister, Rev. J. A. Dow, B. A., will preach at the morning service, and the Rev. Peter Henderson, B. A. of Armstrong, at the evening service.

Following the anniversary services, a fowl supper will be served by the ladies of the congregation, in the basement of the church, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 11th, at 6 o'clock. The excellence of the supper is assured, for these ladies have a reputation as hostesses on such occasions. Nor less excellent will be the entertainment to begin at 8 o'clock. The City orchestra will furnish thrilling music between the supper and concert, and at the opening of the program. The presence of the orchestra assures thorough enjoyment to all. Then the program proper is to be full of attractions. Miss Stevens, who always delights, is to recite; Mrs. Neil and Mrs. Turner have very kindly promised to sing a duet; Miss M. Murray, of Armstrong, and Mr. Calder, of Vernon, both favorites in Enderby, are each to contribute songs; and violin solos will be given by Mrs. Rutherford and Mr. Courtney; Mr. Rosoman will assist with a reading, and Mrf Glen, of Armstrong, will contribute a song. Short speeches will be made by ministers of the city churches, and everything done to make the evening an enjoyable one. The public are most cordially invited.

The poultry show to be held at Vernon under the auspices of the Vernon and Northern Okanagan Poultry Associations, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Nov. 26, 27 and 28, gives promise of being the largest poultry show held in the Valley. A particularly large list of special prizes are offered, including eight silver cups and cash prizes of $5 and $2.50.

The Show will be held in the Curling rink, and the judging will be by comparison, Messrs. H. H. Collier, of Tacoma, Wash., and F. Garland, Cobble Hill, B. C., being the judges ngaged.

SOMETHING WORTH WHILE

Enderbyites will remember with leasure the illustrated lecture given here in the Methodist church last year by John P. Clum. And they will be delighted to learn that Mr. Clum is to return to Enderby and give another of his interesting and instructive talks. This lecture is profusely illustrated with superb lantern slides in natural tints, and the most interesting moving picture films concerning the scenes and districts told about. In the lecture will be shown the matchless Rockies; a brief look at Victoria the beautiful, a bit of Old England on the Pacific; Seattle; Tacoma; Mt. Ranier; Portland, the Rose City; Crater Lake; Rogue River Valley; Mt. Shasta; Lake Tahoe; Riverside, the Orange City; Arrowhead Hot Springs; San Gabriel Mission; Pasadena; the Crown of the San Gabriel Valley; Mt. The lecture will be given this year under the aupices of the Epworth League, as it was last year. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to enjoy this lecture, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 12th at 8. No admission charge, but a collection will be taken for league purposes.

A rumor comes from Victoria that Hon. Price Ellison's appointment to the Senate is imminent, and that Hon. Thomas Taylor will get finance and agriculture and W. W. Foster, his able deputy, who is to run in the Island, will be taken into the cabinet as head of the works department.

POLSON & ATTENBOROUGH

IF THERE IS ONE SPOT within the city limits of Enderby that nature has especially designed for a residential suburb, it is the Polson subdivision. Its wide-open view, its bracing atmosphere, combined with its sandy sub-soil insuring perfect drainage and dry cellars all the year round, makes it one of the most desirable localities for a home to be found in the city. Several homes were erected there during the past year, another is underway, and others are being planned for the coming season. Why not build there yourself? A few choice lots for sale at $225 each; easy terms. See me. C. G. PIPER, Enderby.

COMMUNITY INTEREST LACKING

A thinker said to us the other day that he believed what Canadians, as a people, lacked most was a full appreciation of what is termed "community interest." And we fear there is much truth in his remark. We frequently see Boards of Trade and other public bodies appropriating large sums of money, and offering extraordinary inducements to get manufacturing industries to locate in the district. The manufacturing industries come. While they are plugging along like the under dog, our Canadian communities lend all the assistance possible. But let the industry, by dint of hard work and extraordinary business management, get upon its feet and begin to progress beyond the infant stage, and we find the first people to begin to "knock" it are those of the community where the industry is established. It does not seem to make much difference what the industry nor where it is located. It may employ 300 or 400 hundred men, or but 50, the local "knocking" goes ahead just the same. The product may be superior to anything shipped in from other localities, and may sell on the local market ten or 20 per cent less than the imported commodity, but the demand will be for the imported article in preference to the local.

A Calgary paper refers to the same conditions existing there, and innumerable instances of a similar nature no doubt could be cited from other localities. The Calgary paper says there are millions of money invested in local manufacturing industries and they are striving to make headway in the district, and yet they are not receiving the local support they deserve. We do not have to look beyond the Okanagan to see the same conditions existing.

What is the reason? Can any district hope to encourage other manufacturing industries to come and establish there if there is that lack of loyalty to those industries already established? Are we to wonder at the closing of local factories when we see more of the product of outside factories boosted than the product of the local mills? These are simple questions of business. In the interest of the community, how will they be answered?

BETTER CLASS OF SETTLERS

Close to half a million new settlers will have come to Canada before the close of 1913, according to an estimate based on the returns for the first eight months of the year and announced by Mr. J. Bruce Walker, commissioner of immigration. In all the increase in immigration over last year, during the period, amounts to no less than 17 per cent. on the returns for the first eight months of last year. Mr. Walker points out that should the remaining four months of this year be no more than equal to, instead of 17 per rent more than last year, there will have come to Canada nearly 450,000 people.

The class of immigrants arriving this year is better than it has ever been, and Mr. Walker states that he is entirely satisfied that the best possible class of immigrants are coming to Canada. The greater part of the increase in the returns over last year is in the immigration from Europe, and in particular from the northern European countries.

FOUR MILLIONS ON ROADS

The gigantic sum of $4,000,000 has been expended by the Provincial Government upon road extension and improvement work within the boundaries of British Columbia during the past season, according to a statement just issued from the department offices of Hon. Thomas Taylor, minister of Public Works. There is now on hand the sum of approximately $400,000 for maintenance during the winter months. There are in existence at the present time in the province 18,000 miles of roads and trails

FOSTER'S WEEKLY REPORT

Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Nov. 5 to 9, warm wave 4 to 8, cool wave 7 to 11. The disturbance referred to will be of greater than usual force in all its weather features on the Pacific Slope and in the middle and northern Rockies, but will decrease in force east of Meridian 90 after Nov. 7th. Next disturbance will reach 'acific valleys about Nov. 9, great central valleys 11, eastern sections 13. Cool wave will cross Pacific Slope about Nov. 12, great central valleys 14, eastern sections 16.

A NUT TO CRACK

A Chicago press dispatch says that more than a million pounds of fresh dressed meats arrived in that city from Canada in one day immediately following the removal of the duty—aod here is the amazing part of the report—that the prices ranged from 6¾ to 8 cents per pound. Chicago can get Canadian beef at 6 and 8 cents a pound while our dealers must pay 12 to 15 cents. Why?

"MIXED FARMING" WINS

An authority says: "The farmers who have suffered in the West this year are those whose whole income is derived from grain. Those who possessed a few cows, pigs and chickens were never short of cash."

This is the same old story—true in every country—and as true of the fruit men as of the wheat men. The "mixed farmer" always has been a winner and always will be.

Most people think too much about what others say about them, and not enough about what they say about others.

CHANGE IN BANK PRESIDENT

Mr. R. B. Angus has resigned as president of the Bank of Montreal, but will continue on the board of directors. Mr. H. V. Meredith will take his place. Sir Frederick W. Taylor is to leave London and take the general managership of the bank, and Mr. Braithwaite is to become assistant manager.

Sir Frederick W. Taylor, who has been manager of the London agency of the Bank of Montreal, is typical of our Canadian financiers. In a recent interview in Montreal, where Sir Frederick has been visit ng, he said, speaking of the London market:

"Briefly, all the borrowers throughout the world that depend on the London market, have of late found it not only wise but imperative to restrict the size of their flotations to the smallest extent possible, and also to limit their commitments to essential expenditures. Further, owing to the money crisis, which, by the way, is still in progress, the terms to business borrowers has been on a steadily rising scale and far more onerous than for many years past.

"These remarks apply to Canada with this addition, that the enthusiastic reception accorded Canadian securities in London for several years past, has vanished, and, although our credit—I am speaking generally—continues good and the Dominion, as a whole, will doubtless be able to continue to borrow in London, it will be with less ease, and consequently in smaller volume than in the past, beside which, all offerings will be subject to careful scrutiny.

"I may remark that Canadian flotations in London for the calendar year to date, aggregated £42,000,000, which is in excess of last year."

Mr. A. E. Taylor, president of the Enderby branch of the Bank of Montreal, is a brother to Sir Frederick, the new general manager of this great financial institution.

MEAN BUSINESS AT GRINDROD

The North Coast Land Company, of Vancouver, purchaser of the Carlin tract at Grindrod, is losing no time in getting the property in shape to offer to the right kind of settlers. The tract will be advertised as the Grindrod Fruit and Garden tracts. It is the purpose of the company to put out a descriptive booklet of the property, and to interest in it only the class of settler who has a practical knowledge of this particular branch of agriculture. A detailed cruise will be made of each lot in the tract, and the company is now considering several items of development that appear to be of value. At the present time the company is clearing a small tract opposite the Grindrod station, and Mr. McEwen has purchased and is now improving a small tract adjoining the acreage the company is having cleared.

—Today a man is known by the company he promotes.

CHEAPER CLEARING

A week or two ago we published a short story referring to the excellent work done in clearing ten acres on the Glen Mary property of J. A. Mohr, by Mr. Kruise, with his little Australian stump puller. Mr. Mohr has been deluged with enquiries relating to the stump puller. Some people read into the article things it did not say. These are the facts: Mr. Kruise owns and operates the machine. Two men handle it. In thirteen days they pulled the stumps on ten acres of Mr. Mohr's land, the stumps averaging ten inches through and the number of stumps pulled per day being from 60 to 75. Mr. Mohr says if we had a stump puller of this type in the district permanently there would be much more land in crop.

WHEN THE ROBBINS NEST

There is promise of a large amount of building being done in New Denver next season. Murdock McLean will build a two-story concrete and brick block, 20x80 feet on the corner of Josephine street and Sixth avenue. George Trickett will build a two-story building on the corner opposite. Hermann Clever will extend his block to Bellevue avenue. A syndicate will build a two-story building on the corner of Sixth and Bellevue. A. C. McKay will build a business block on the lots on Eldorado avenue recently purchased from D. Mero. A number of residences will also be built.—Slocan Record.

KETTLE VALLEY ROAD

Kettle Valley railway work trains are now through as far as Prairie Valley, back of Summerland, and track-laying is proceeding steadily, at the rate of half a mile to a mile per day. The road-bed being completed to the Summit it will not be many days before steel is extended to that point. The trestle bridge over Trout Creek canyon was so far completed last Saturday to admit of the passing of the first train, and since then track laying has been going forward with all possible speed.—Summerland Review.

STOCK IN GOOD CONDITION

Officials of the live stock branch of the provincial department of agriculture have just completed work in the various parts of the province.

"Our inspectors state that with the exception of a very few herds, conditions are excellent in regard to the absence of tuberculosis in cattle," announced Mr. W. T. McDonald, provincial livestock commissioner.

"A Bould Virgin"

She Hoped For Strength From Above, but Got on Well With What She Had

By F. A. MITCHEL

One morning in the year 1660, more than two a half centuries ago, a young man and a young girl walking side by side passed what was then called the ordinary, afterward the tavern and which we now call hotel, in the village of Hartford, Conn. The ordinary of that day was the central feature of the town. There political affairs were born, discussed; from there domestic news, gossip and scandal were sent forth. Indeed, the ordinary embodied everything in the village.

It was not kept merely for money making purposes. Since a stopping place for travelers was necessary in the town one of the first citizens was invited to take charge of it. The reasons for this were manifold, though the most important was that since liquor must be sold—so it was then considered—and since our ancestors were thoroughly impressed with the abuses liable to this traffic they desired the management of a man they could trust.

Now, on that morning when the young man and the young woman, Jacob Murline and Sarah Tuttle, passed the ordinary at Hartford within the taproom sat an Englishman who had just made a forty days' voyage from London to America for the purpose of studying the manners and customs of the colonists with the intention of writing a book about them on his return. He was sitting with the landlord, who had just brewed a bowl of flip, a concoction of beer sweetened with sugar, molasses or dried pumpkin and rum, into which had been thrust a redhot iron called the loggerhead, causing it to seethe and foam. The landlord was giving his guest some account of the said manners and customs in vogue in the colony of New Haven.

"Do you see that girl walking with that young man? Well, there's trouble brewing there. The girl is old Goodman Tuttle's daughter, and she's keeping company with young Murline without her father's permission. He'll get fined a dozen lashes at the whipping post if he doesn't mind."

"The whipping post! Have parents power here to whip those who pay attention to their daughters without their consent?"

"Indeed they have, and a goodly custom it is. The laws of the colony say that any tempting without the parents' sanction cannot be done by speech, writing message, company keeping, unnecessary familiarity, disorderly night meetings, sinful dalliance, gifts or in any other way."

"And if they disobey this law?"

"Heavy fines may be imposed with a plentiful supply of lashes to the inveigler of the girl."

"And is she not punished?"

"Not by the law. Her father can attend to her case as he likes."

"Is the punishment in public or in private?"

"In public, of course. We have no private punishment here in the colonies. Heaven knows there are in this desolate land few amusements. Our punishments serve us in this respect in good stead. When I was in Boston last, drinking with others a cup of sack, we were mu[illegible]verted at seeing a man who had had too much of the same mixture laid by the heels on the ground, with a bar of iron fastened and locked to his legs with sliding shackles and a bolt. There were salvages (savages) present who stared at him, not understanding this method of torture."

While the two were talking Jacob Murline, who had passed with his love out of sight, repassed, going the other way, and under very different conditions. A citizen held one arm, another citizen held the other arm, while Goodman Tuttle, the father of the girl he had been walking with, led the way. On Tuttle's visage was a stern and relentless look that boded the prisoner no good.

"Now," said the landlord of the Hartford ordinary, "you have an opportunity to witness one of our customs, showing how parents discharge the duties the Lord has imposed upon them in the case of their offspring. They will take the boy to the magistrate, where he will be tried for inveigling the girl, and later you may derive much pleasure at seeing the cat o' nine tails laid on his back. And mayhap if the judge has not had sufficient sack this morning to steady his nerves and replenish his temper after the five bowls he had here last night the pleasure derived may be heightened by the gashes on the swain's back being supplied with salt and vinegar. Come, let us finish the bowl before us and be off."

The landlord and the author of a future work entitled "A Voyage to New England," with a highly diverting account of the manners and customs of the colonists, published in London in 1662, drank the remains of the plutonic mixture before them—the author with a grimace—and proceeded to the meeting house, which was the only available shelter for a court except the ordinary. They arrived soon after the prisoner, and the inhabitants of the village were gathering for one of the few diversions they were ever accorded. Everybody knew Jake Murline and Sarah Tuttle for a pair of innocent young persons, who were passing that delightful period when lovers may sit intwined in each other's arms while the clock is striking the happy hours away. And now Jacob was to pay the penalty for their happiness, for every one knew that there were witnesses who had seen them hugging and kissing apparently without thought of what was to follow such conduct when indulged in without Goodman Tuttle's consent.

Goodman Tuttle was there, expectant of vengeance, and presently his wife came in with their daughter, who showed in her visage and demeanor an unholy protest against parental authority. They took seats in front, while the space behind was filled by citizens and Indians. Then the judge, all being assembled, asked Goodman Tuttle to state his charge against Jacob Murline.

"The charge," replied the accuser, "is inveigling my daughter's affections."

"What proof have you to substantiate it?"

"On May day last without asking my permission the prisoner had some boisterous lovemaking with my daughter. It began by his seizing her gloves and demanding the forfeit—a kiss. Whereupon they sat down together, his arm being about her and her arm upon his shoulder or about his neck, and he kissed her, and she kissed him, or they kissed each other, continuing in this posture for about half an hour."

"Call your witnesses," said the court.

Since this outrage against parental authority had been committed on a holiday when all were Maying together, there were plenty of witnesses to prove it. Some testified because they were obliged to, but many did so that the town might be accorded the amusement of seeing Jacob tied to the whipping post receiving the strokes of the cat-o'-nine-tails. Perhaps there were some who were selfish enough to testify in order that they themselves might be accorded this favorite amusement. When the testimony was all in Goodman Tuttle, confident of receiving a goodly sum of money from the prisoner for fines and anticipating the pleasure of hearing Murline's howls under the cat, looked much pleased. The spectators were getting ready to go out to witness the punishment, and it appeared that nothing could interfere with the merrymaking. The judge asked Jacob if he had anything to say for himself, whereupon Sarah Tuttle, shamefaced, arose and said sorrowfully:

"I have something to say, your worship."

"What is it?"

"Jacob Tuttle did not inveigle me at all. I wished to induce him to kiss me. In fact, I enticed him. I dared him to steal my gloves that he might have cause to demand a kiss."

Here was a damper on the assembly. By these few words the case against the prisoner fell to the ground.

"You're a 'bould virgin,'" cried the angry judge, "and I must fine you for inveigling the prisoner instead of fining the prisoner for inveigling you."

"But," exclaimed the disappointed Tuttle, "I shall have to pay the fine. My daughter has no money."

"That's nothing to me," retorted the court. "I'm here to administer the law and must administer it as it is. It's lucky that I'm not compelled to administer the cat as well." Then turning to the prisoner he added: "The Lord will administer the cat to you, you jade! You've set a pernicious example to all the maids of the colony, and I am troubled that I can make an example of you only by the fine."

"I'm sorry, your worship," replied Sarah demurely, "and I hope God will help me to carry it better for time to come."

Since Sarah had thus far "carried it" pretty well for herself in saving her lover from a frightful punishment for making love to her it does not appear why any assistance was necessary. To outwit her father and the judge, besides depriving all present of the pleasure of the only amusement vouchsafed them at herdover's expense, was a work not to be despised.

When the court was dismissed the Londoner and the landlord went back to the ordinary, where, in order to blunt his disappointment at not having been able to give his guest a specimen of the favorite amusement of the colonists, he brewed an extra strong bowl of flip, pumpkin flavored, and to make it doubly effective gave it a dash of mustard.

Excuses of Messenger Boys.

Mr. Herbert Samuel, the British Postmaster-General, related some amusing stories of excuses made by messenger boys at the prize distribution and display of the Brady Street Club for Working Lads, in the Pavilion Theatre, Mile End, London, recently. In his official capacity, explained Mr. Samuel, he employed about 14,000 telegraph messengers, and he heard a good deal about boys and their ways. The boys always tried to maintain a high standard of conduct, and if they fell away they were always very ready to own up.

The postmaster in one town called upon Messenger Brown to "explain your conduct towards an old gentleman in George street." The following reply came:

"To the postmaster. Sir,—As I was passing through George street an old gentleman stood in the street. I threw a potato at the gentleman. I am very sorry, and hope it will not occur again."

Not long ago, continued Mr. Samuel, the written explanation offered by a boy messenger when there had been some disturbance in the office read:—

"Messenger Smith called me a wooden-head, so I poured hot tar over his dinner and punched him on the nose. Hoping this will meet with your approval."

At all events, remarked Mr. Samuel, they might claim that, so far as the boys were concerned, they regarded truth above all things.

It Was a Dog.

Mr. George Smedley, the Toronto banjo and guitar player, is doing well "across the line" with his big vaudeville act. Mr. Smedley had a thrilling experience while playing a small Ontario town some years ago. It was a fall fair concert, and those who have attended concerts on the evening of the fall fair know that the presence of the "fresh" young man is very much in evidence. During Mr. Smedley's first number he was interrupted by some one whom he thought was imitating a dog yelping. Mr. Smedley stopped his work, advanced to the footlights, and gave the supposed imitator a "piece of his mind." "If that 'dog' up there in the gallery," he said, "will come down here for half a minute I will make him feel like the cur that he is." Then Mr. Smedley resumed his selection. At the conclusion he was generously applauded. Advancing to acknowledge it, Mr. Smedley heard a shrill, childish voice of a boy up in the gallery saying these words: "It was a dog, Mr. Smedley." And to bear convincing testimony, the boy held up a yelping dog by the back of the neck.

The Woman Militant.

Those militant women,
Those ladies, gadzooks,
Who think that good actions
Are more than good looks,
Are busy these days
In their sweet, gentle ways
Of smashing the windows
And bursting the doors
Of all public buildings,
Of houses and stores,
And throwing their brickbats
Promiscuous at men,
And getting arrested,
And at it again,
To show the man
How women can make laws
By showing to man
How women can break laws.
Oh, feminine logic!
Say, ain't it the goods
That's bound to get woman's Rights out of the woods?

Wrinkles Have Gone Out.

In a shop recently a well known actress who is noted for her perennial youth asked for a traveling bag of alligator skin. The shopkeeper, who had none of that particular sort, brought out instead some of smooth leather.

"And you tell me this is alligator skin?" objected the actress. "Why, where are all its wrinkles?"

"Ah, madam," replied the wily dealer, who knew his customer, "wrinkles are out of vogue. The correct alligator bag is made from the skin of an alligator that has been massaged."—Tit-Bits.

MUSIC AND MISERY.

Ills, Aches and Pains With Which Performers Have to Contend.

Pianist's cramp is more painful than writer's cramp and is the bane of all virtuosos. It is caused by the constant contraction and expansion of the muscles controlling the fingers. It becomes chronic when not guarded against, and many a promising virtuoso's career has been blighted in this way. The only remedy is to rest the overtaxed muscles and then work them up gradually to meet the strain of constant playing.

All concert pianists are subject to split finger tips. The constant stroke of the balls of the fingers on the hard ivory makes the flesh so delicate and tender that frequently playing becomes acute agony.

Violinists suffer a great deal of physical inconvenience. Most of us have an idea that the violin is held against the neck and shoulder by the player's left hand, which grasps the arm of the instrument. All great violin teachers insist that the left hand be left entirely free, and to achieve this the violin is actually held by the player's chin. In this attitude his head is held in a distorted position, and this, working against the elevation of the left arm and shoulder, causes compression of the heart and lungs and curvature of the spine.

Performers on wind instruments suffer many inconveniences, and in some instances their work leads to permanent physical disability. Bulbar paralysis from continued use of the tongue and lips is an ever present danger. Doctors have a fearsome name for the commonest result of wind playing. In plain language it is overdistention of the lungs. This stretching of the lungs from constantly heavy inflation leads to engorgement of the blood in the right cavities of the heart, and this produces dilation of the heart and hypertrophy.

Mental peculiarities of oboe players are traditional in the orchestral world, in spite of the fact that most oboe players are normal. Some explain that the oboe player is mentally affected by the fact that he is forced to blow through an exceedingly small aperture and the expiration is unusually prolonged. Others insist that the peculiarly melancholy quality of the tone produced and the invariable character of the music written for the oboe are responsible for any peculiarities displayed by its executants.

After this somewhat grewsome recital it is cheering to know that one instrument at least can be counted on to bring health and longevity to those who practice it. This is the flute. Doctors recommend it for incipient consumptives, as the operation of playing the instrument involves the precise motion of the lungs of most benefit to the consumptive—that is, full inspiration, not too full or strained, followed by slow and gentle delivery of the breath.—John Warren in Washington Star.

Simplify Your Home Grounds.

Don't inclose your property with hedges. Irregular borders of trees and shrubs are better. Hedges cut up a landscape and ruin it with their hard, artificial lines. Borders harmonize with the environment, have variety and give interest the year round.

Don't bisect your lawn with a drive or avenue.

Don't set trees and shrubs in straight lines except where absolutely necessary, as on streets; group them.

Don't make a circle in the lawn around every shrub. Plant bushes in borders or beds.

Don't trim every bush into a ball, cube or pyramid. Allow trees and shrubs to assume natural forms.—Country Life in America.

Nearly Shot by Proxy.

In 1862 M. Clemenceau served two months' imprisonment for shouting "Vive la Republique!" and in 1871 he was very nearly shot by proxy. He returned to Paris from a provincial speechmaking tour on the day on which Thiers and the Versaillais succeeded in entering the city. Blood was up, and his enemies were looking for him. A young Brazilian who resembled him was arrested in mistake for him and conducted to La Petiniere to be executed. Happily, however, he shouted for the Brazilian consul, and the Brazilian consul turned up in time to rescue him.

Applied Maxim.

"My dear, I am very sorry, but the man who was fixing here said the fastenings were too short to put up this portrait of yours on the wall."

"All right. Just give me rope enough and I'll hang myself."—Baltimore American.

Anaesthetics For Plants.

Most plants living for a greater period than a year require certain intervals of rest. It is at these times that energy is stored up for future activity. The more complete this period of quiescence the better is the development and the quicker the rate of growth when the plant awakens from its sleep. Dr. Johansen of Copenhagen, after an elaborate series of experiments, has given to the market grower an effective method of rapid flower production based on an intensification of the plant's resting period. For long it has been known that vegetable tissue is much affected by the vapors of chloroform and ether. After a good deal of investigation the Danish professor was able to demonstrate that plants submitted to the influence of these anaesthetics were afterward capable of an astonishingly rapid growth. So satisfied has the practical grower been that the treatment will be exceedingly helpful to him that the method is being extensively employed.

The manner of procedure is decidedly interesting. When in an entirely restful condition specimens of lilacs, azaleas, lilies of the valley and other plants are placed in an airtight box. A small vessel affixed to the lid of the box is filled with chloroform or ether and the cover is placed in position. Being heavier than air, the vapors rush to the bottom of the box and mingle with the plants. At the end of forty-eight hours the specimens are taken out and grown in the ordinary manner. Nothing in the way of forcing is required, and without the employment of any great degree of heat the plants develop in a most remarkable manner. Lilacs were in full bloom within a fortnight after being placed in the vaporizing chamber, while lilies of the valley were hardly so long in coming to maturity. In no way did the treatment harm the plants, which produced flowers and foliage in profusion.

An Ivory Mat.

Many people have never even heard of such a thing, and it is not to be wondered at, for these mats are exceedingly rare, and it is said by those who know that only three of these beautiful curiosities exist in the whole world. The one we now write about is the largest one made. It measures 8 by 4 feet and, though made in a small hill state in the north of India, has an almost Greek design for its border. It was only used on state occasions, when the rajah sat on it to sign important documents. The original cost of the mat is fabulous, for 6,400 pounds of ivory were used in its manufacture. The finest strips of ivory must have been taken off the tusks, as the mat is as flexible as a woven stuff and beautifully fine.—London Graphic.

BOY SCOUTS.

The ideal of the Boy Scout movement has not often been better presented than by the editor of The Toronto Star, who writes:

"Boys are apt to be mischievous, not because they are malicious, but because they are active and love action, and want to see 'something doing.' The Scout movement teaches them that there is more fun in mending a broken window and running away than in breaking a window and running away. At least, that is the way we understood Scouting.

"It is a solid fact that there is an immense amount of fun, romance and adventure in helping your neighbor. If you want to add the spice of mystery and intrigue and conspiracy, help your neighbor in such a manner that he will not know where the help comes from. Surprise him. Mystify him. You can do this far better by helping him than by hurting him.

"Up to this time, heroism, self-sacrifice, adventure, romance, mystery, have been associated with war; that is, with enmity. There is a magnificent field open to any man or any body of men who will link these ideas up with help instead of with injury. We want to see the Scouts holding fast to that position and developing it to the fullest extent. It is the great idea of the age, the idea that is abreast with twentieth century civilization, the idea that is full of possibilities of benefit to the human race. It's leaders will be ranked among the original thinkers of the age, and of all ages."

WAS HE RIGHT?

When the late King Edward was asked upon one occasion what he would do if the people of England abolished the monarchy and instituted a republic, he said: "What should I do? Nothing! The people of England would ask me to be their first president!" Another instance of the ready wit of the late king.

When man and wife quarrel bitterly over some trivial point before company, it embarasses the latter very much. Common politeness should keep quarrels from public notice. But don't quarrel at all.

The man who pays good wages and doesn't grind too hard, gets the hands.

The best we can do is the least that should be expected of us.

It is better to know too little than too know a lot that isn't true.

Making both ends meet is not quite enough; they should lap over a bit.

It takes a good man to know when to grab a bargain in stock or land; but a better one to know when to let go.

Despite all that they read of the ways of sharpers, some folks continue to be taken in by well-dressed, oily-tongued rogues.

In setting out berry plants, stop and think whether you can get pickers or not; for if you can not, to set out too many plants is to invite loss.

FEED THIRTY THOUSAND

The C.P.R. could transport within five or six days an army of 30,000 from Vancouver to Halifax, giving each person a berth to sleep in and supply 90,000 meals a day, or practically half a million on the five and one-half-day journey across the continent. This estimate offers some idea of the magnitude of the road's sleeping and dining car department, which employs 4000 men.

If the sleeping and dining cars of the C.P.R. were made up into a single train, with a locomotive between each ten cars, the train would be 14 miles long. To man it there would have to be 3000 sleeping and dining car attendants, with several hundred additional men at terminals to look after the supplies. This is exclusive of the men required to operate the train, as brakemen, conductors, firemen, conductors, firemen and engineers. All possible precautions are taken to see that all these employees are physically healthy and clean, and with this end in view, a chain of homes for the men has been established across the continent.

ESSENTIAL TO EMPIRE SAFETY

"No apology is necessary," says The Navy, (London), "to call attention of the far-reaching influence of the future action of the Canadian people in the determination and the capacity of the British Empire to obtain command of the sea. The three large armoured units promised on behalf of the people of Canada by its Prime Minister are of vital influence to the future of British superiority. Everybody knows that the heart of the Canadian people is sound that their intentions are of the best and their desire for the unity of the Empire unquestioned.

"Mr. Borden's devotion to his own principles is beyond the criticism of all fair-minded men, and most Canadians are probably in agreement regardless of political faith that their contribution to the Empire navy will be realized in fact in a very short time. In this country, however, the main consideration is that wherever the ships come from they are essential not merely to our supremacy, but to our safety."

A PRINCIPLE INVOLVED

The object of The Press in repeatedly calling attention to the position taken by the City Council on the telephone question, is to focus attention upon the important municipal principle that is at stake. It is not a question of increase in rates and reduction in hours of service that is of paramount importance. These matters can be very easily settled by the telephone users themselves. If they don't like the service all they have to do is to order the phones out But looming up much larger than this, is the question of the overriding of a franchise agreement duly and regularly passed by the ratepayers, and the submission of the ratepayers' representatives to such overriding, by the adoption by the city of the telephone company's new regulations.

Our City Council is a member of the Association of B. C. Municipalities, which is an organization looking after legislation affecting municipalities in just this way. Corporations are ever ready to take advantage of every weakness in municipal government, and one of the objects of the Association of B. C. Municipalities is to prevent such encroachment on the part of corporations. It seems, therefore, to be a very awkward position for the City of Enderby to be placed in. As a municipality we guarded against the encroachment by the telephone company, and limited its scope in making demands of its patrons to certain conditions set forth in a franchise by-law passed by the ratepayers. The telephone patrons of Enderby have never found fault with the telephone company so long as it complied with the conditions of the franchise agreement. It was only when the company altered its charge and its hours of service that the telephone users objected. Then, when the City was placing such brave resolutions on the minutes of the City Council, the telephone users, almost to a man, signed a petition to the company asking it to return to the old hours of service and the rental charge stipulated in the agreement with the City. Then later, when the City Council got cold feet, and in a single day undid all the good it had been building up in two months past, the telephone users who signed the notice to the company giving them thirty days in which to either return to the old hours of service and franchise rental charge or take the phones out, likewise got a chill in the feet, and only a few of them stood pat. They argued, and reasonably, too, that when the City had thrown them down so completely hey were not sufficiently organized to force the company to comply with he agreement.

No other town in the Valley had the foresight to make conditions with he Okanagan Telephone Company in the matter of hours of service and rental charge, therefore they are not in a position to do anything else but comply with the new regulations or discontinue the phones. Enderby's position is quite different. The people made the conditions alright, and the telephone company signed them, which makes them as binding as any other agreement made between legal parties. But our City Fathers have thrown away the advantage which was the people's and we are in no better position than had the City never taken the pains to make an agreement with the company.
