Locals of Home Events of Interest Near Home and Far Away

Mrs. H. W. Keith and children returned from the coast last Thursday.

We regret to learn that Mr. G. B. Gelling lies seriously ill at the Cottage Hospital.

Donations of books to the Farmers' Institute library will be gratefully received by C. S. Handcock, secretary, Grindrod.

Morel Richardson was brought in from Avery's Camp on Wednesday morning with a severe bruise on the head, received from the cut of an ax.

Alfred High has made a record in disposing of White Sewing Machines in Enderby and vicinity, having put out no less than 40 since taking hold of the field.

Miss Stapleton was the fortunate one to draw the key that unlocked the valuable phonograph given away by Mr. Crane at the Enderby Music store this week.

Services in St. George's church on Sunday: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Mattins, Litany and Sermon; 3 p.m., Grindrod; 7:30, Evensong and Sermon.

Jump on the train this morning and go to Vernon to see the Apple show. You will come home pleased with yourself, pleased with the show, and pleased with the glorious Okanagan, of which you are a part.

Davies & Sanders, who have the contract for the erection of the Court House in Enderby, recently completed the C. P. R. station at Salmon Arm, said to be the prettiest looking station on the main line.

The second dance of the first series being given by the Enherby Orchestra was held in the Opera House last night, and proved a greater success, even, than the first, given two weeks ago—in point of attendance as well as general enjoyment.

To-day will be the big show day at Vernon. If you want to do your part, reader, to encourage this Annual Apple Show, then hustle down to the station and get on board for Vernon. See the Apple Show if you cannot contribute fruit for it.

Mr. A. R. Rogers was in Enderby the past few days, making his usual visit to his property, the Okanagan Saw Mills. The shipping business is increasing as the sawing season is drawing to a close. Orders for 14 carloads were received in one day the past week.

The Union Thanksgiving services held in the Opera House Monday morning were largely attended, and a splendid spirit prevailed. The collection amounted to $13.75. After deducting $6.75 expenses, the sum of $7 was turned over to the Hospital Auxiliary.

How much better it would be for the community if all could grasp the truth of these words: "Co-operation, not competition, is the life of business." We would then see locally milled and locally grown products advertised in every show window, instead of vegetables, fruits and flour shipped in from other sections.

Mr. S. A. Mullen, representing the Trolly Car Indicator publicity company, of Vancouver, received word this week from head office that the company had withdrawn the stock from the market, and that the indicator was going to London. It is apparent that English capital has been found to take the invention over and handle the product.

J. N. Grant is finishing his commodious home on George street. It is veneered with cement brick from J. S. Johnstone's cement block and tile works, and presents a very attractive appearance. It is one of the handsomest residences in town.

Alex McDonald started to jump all over things last Saturday evening, when Constable Bailey landed upon him, and before he could repent of his waywardness he found himself in the lock-up. He came before Magistrate Rosoman in due course and was fined $10 and costs.

Miss Simpson, C. F. Bigge and Capt. Cameron, who are developing the Gainford poultry farm, find the demand for all their poultry products far in excess of the supply. They are selling locally all they can produce, and could dispose of double the quantity if they had it to sell.

Messrs. Creed & Sage put on the most successful auction sale they have held in the district, yesterday, of the stock and farm implements and household effects at the Grand Bend farm. The crowd was a "jolly good crowd, and a fine lot of buyers," and the sale a great success.

Honestly now, do our City Aldermen think it is good business, to put strong resolutions on their minutes refusing to sanction the overriding of a city franchise by a corporation and then, as individuals representing the city, turn around and do the very thing they say, by resolution, that it would be impossible for them to do?

W. G. Pell completed the erection of his blacksmith and machine shop on Russell street this week, and on Monday started work at the anvil. Mr. Pell has one of the most substantially-built and modern shops in the Interior. It is a credit to the town. In addition to his large, well-lighted work room, he has put up shed-room for the use of customers in tying their horses. The building has metal sheeted walls and roof.

On October 6th the City Council decided for the last time that action should at once be taken to repair the intake at the water head. That was three weeks ago. Last year the snows of winter came on November 7th, and made work on the intake impossible until the high water had subsided this summer. November 7th is only two weeks hence. The money to make the repairs at the head was voted by the ratepayers and the bonds sold six months ago.

Don't overlook the Pollards at the Opera House, to-morrow night and Saturday night. They are the great aggregation of juvenile entertainers who have captivated audiences in all climes and under all flags. Friday night they will give the funniest of comic operas, "The Mikado," and on Saturday night "The Last Waltz." These people have never appeared befor an Enderby audience, and it is doubtful if their equal ever favored Enderby by stopping over.

Anyone wishing to take a course of lessons in a packing school to be held in Enderby at a date to be set by the Department, (presumably in March) is requested to send in his or her name at once to the secretary of the Northern Okanagan Institute, C. S. Handcock, Grindrod.

MODERN METHODS TAUGHT

The interests of the farmers are being carefully cherished by the Borden Government, and the Hon. Martin Burrell, as Minister of Agriculture, is carrying out his plan of extending the scope of the Agricultural Department. The spending of the grant made during last session is receiving the attention of the heads of the department and announcement is made of the work.

Several small demonstration plants in different parts of the provinces will be constructed as an aid to poultry keepers. Demonstration fruit orchards will also be established. The same methods will apply to dairying, tobacco growing, the maple syrup industry and honey production.

The minister, in his new agricultural policy of introducing better methods, will follow lines already laid, while assisting the farmer to produce better fruit and more honey, tobacco, etc. Reports are being received from farmers all over the country, who are keen on adopting the principles of the department.

In connection with the third part of the new agricultural policy, namely to teach the rudiments in the public schools, the department announces special courses for normal school teachers in nature training. It is proposed to establish agricultural branches of instruction in connection with French-speaking normal schools and it is also proposed to enlarge the scope of domestic science schools by adding to them work in agriculture dairying.

All sections of the Dominion are receiving a fair share and the desire of the present government to assist the farmer by the introduction of modern methods will lay the foundation of future prosperity.

LUMBER CAMPS NOT INCLUDED

Although the law libraries are filled with countless volumes of law, covering hundreds of years, every week there are new problems coming up for which no precedents can be found. Some days ago in Vancouveri before Judge McInnes there came up an issue of the greatest importance to the thousands of men who work in the logging camps of the Province. The question as to whether the Workmen's Compensation Act extends its benefits to men employed in logging operations. For the first time since the act came into operation in the Province the point was squarely raised in the case referred to, in the claim of one Mrs. Sanna Hill and her four children against the Victoria Lumber Company.

The woman's husband, Gus Hill, was killed at Chemainus last October by the fall of a tree, and the woman claimed the maximum amount of $1,500 for the loss of her husband.

Judge McInnes found that on the facts of the case Mrs. Hill was entitled to the compensation she claimed within the act, but decided that the act did not apply to lumber camps, therefore no damages could be awarded. As the case raises the straight question of law, an appeal will be taken in order to provide a precedent.

Santa Claus is already picking the nicest looking dolls out of the stock imported by the Enderby Music Store and Mr. Crane is already wondering if he'll have enough to go round.

Contractor W. A. Russell Starts Work on Enderby Drill Hall

The initial work on the Drill Hall to be erected by the Department of Militia at Enderby, was started this week. Mr. W. A. Russell has the contract. Some weeks ago, when tenders were called for, Mr. Russell took occasion to go into the plans while on a visit to Victoria, and filed his tender. Three weeks ago a wire was sent to Enderby telling him to proceed with the work, but the telegram did not get into his hands, and it was only last week that he learned on making enquiry that his was the successful tender. Mr. Russell is losing no time in getting material and men on the ground.

It is understood that Mr. F. H. Barnes will superintend the work of construction for the Department.

The Drill Hall will be a $15,000 structure, and will be erected on the property given for the purpose by Mr. Barnes, on George street, just south of the Court House the Provincial Government is now erecting, opposite the recreation grounds. In addition to the single lot given by Mr. Barnes, the City purchased the adjoining lot to secure a piece of ground sufficiently large for the imposing structure.

The Drill Hall will be 42x92 feet, two stories above the basement, and will have a shooting gallery in the basement. It will be built of brick, and will be finished in accordance with the regulation plans issued by Department of Militia, which means that Enderby will have a Drill Hall equal to the best erected in the various parts of Canada.

Mr. Russell is to be congratulated on securing the contract.

COURT HOUSE UNDER WAY

Work on the concrete foundation of the Court House being erected by the Provincial Government, on George street, is now in full swing, the contractors taking advantage of the excellent weather of the past week to push the work ahead as rapidly as possible. Messrs. Davies & Sanders, of Vancouver, have the contract, and the work is in the hands of Mr. F. H. Calnan, as foreman.

The new building will be 30x55, with a 12x14 stockade in the rear. On one side will be the private rooms of the resident constable, and opposite, divided by a wall of brick, will be the court room, cell room, etc. The residential rooms will include a 13x15 living room, 12x14 dining room, and 12x14 kitchen; while the court room will be 14x22 and the cell room the same size. Two steel cells will be set up in the cell corridor.

Foreman Calnan hopes to have the roof on in three weeks, and to complete the job by the middle of November, if the weather continues favorable.

RAPID CLEARING DEVICE

Mr. J. A. Mohr recently disposed of a half interest in his Burnaby Lake, Vancouver, property, and is putting a part of the profit realized on the deal into his Glen Mary property. He has cleared and stumped ready for the plow, this season, 20 acres of valuable fruit land. Mr. Mohr introduced in doing this work a new stumping machine, which has proved marvellously successful. It is known as the Australian stumping machine. The machine is a small affair, but tremendous power can be generated, and it certainly handles the stump problem with ease. One man, Mr. Kruise, who handles the machine, with a helper, cleaned up the 20 acres of stumps in exactly 13 days. They averaged from 60 to 70 stumps a day, the stumps being from 8 to 10 inches through. No powder was used. The power is generated through a ratchet-wheel, and two men on the leaver will lift 30 tons. The proof of the pudding in this case is in the pulling. Mr. Mohr says it would be of inestimable value to the district to keep Mr. Kruise and his machine here, as it beats anything he has seen in clearing land.

CLEAN OFF THE MUD

If the City does not clean the mud off of the paved portion of Cliff street, all the good of such expenditure of money will have been lost. It was recognized early in the spring that this work would have to be done if the street was to be kept fit for travel, but frost in the ground then prevented the work being carried out. The expenditure of a few dollars just now would save the day. If left until spring the accumulation then, if we are to judge from that of last season, will have made the task well-nigh impossible, and the excellent and costly work of three years ago will be of little use. No matter how good a pavement is put down, it cannot be kept of service without being annually cleaned of the mud carried in upon it by vehicles from the side streets. The cleaning of Cliff street this fall will mean its salvation; if left until next spring the the macadam roadbed will be buried so deep in mud as to be almost lost.

MUSICAL ECKHARDTS

The Musical Eckhardts are billed to appear in the Opera House, Wednesday, Oct. 29th. This company has made an enviable reputation throughout the United States and Canada in the concert business, travelling as a family organization for the past 14 years, and have always been heralded by press and public as America's foremost entertainers. In view of the demand for popular-priced vaudeville, the Eckhardts have changed their policy this season and are presenting five high-class vaudeville acts of unusual merit.

Tickets are 50c; reserved seats 75c, and children 25c. Plan at Reeves' drug store.

MILITIA BUSINESS

From the Militia Gazette: 30th Rgt. B. C. Horse; to be provisional lieutenant (supernumerary) Roy Edwin Wheeler, gentleman, 2nd June, 1913.

From G. O., August, 1913: Military District No. 11, 30th Rgt. B. C. H.; the transfer of "C" Squadron from Armstrong to Enderby, B.C., is authorized.

Householders and licence holders are reminded that if they desire their names placed on the City voters' list for the ensuing year it is necessary for them to make the statutory declaration required by law, and to deliver same to the City Clerk some time during the month of October. Forms of declaration can be obtained at the City Hall.

ARE THE INDIANS EXEMPT ?

Let us admit for the sake of argument, that Inspector of Indian Reserves Commiskey stated what is actually the case, in his evidence before the Indian Commission which met at Enderby two weeks ago, which was to the effect that the Indians do not want a school on the Enderby reserve, that he went so far, in his capacity as Inspector, to appoint a teacher to take charge of the school, and the Indians objected to the school being established. Granting this to be the case, does this relieve the Indian Department from any furresponsibility in the matter ? In the ordinary white community in Canada we have what is known as compulsory education. Why not on the ordinary Indian reserve ?

The Dominion of Canada pretends to be the paternal friend of the Indians. Our laws are so framed as to make them dependents, and yet we neglect to give them the first requisite to meeting the demands of civilization—a common school education. We saddle upon communities Indian reserves, where we turn the Indians loose, to eke out an existence somehow. We provide schools for the other children of the community, regardless of color, race or creed, but the Indian child, half a mile away, has no way of acquiring learning of any kind except the vilest he can pick up in the street or at play with other Indian children on the reserve.

There are Indians on the Enderby reserve, parents of growing children, who have asked repeatedly, both of other Indian Commissions and of citizens of Enderby, that they be allowed to have a school on their reserve. They are sore in need of it. But there seems to be a determination in some quarter to keep the Indians in darkness. The men who presumed to speak for them when the recent commission came around, let it be known that the Indians did not need a school—in fact, did not want a school. And so, because, some Indians have said they do not want a school, the Indian Department sidesteps the responsibility and allows them to remain in ignorance.

We have every reason to hope for some definite action to come as the result of the investigation of the Indian Commission which met here recently. Just what policy the Commissioners will suggest is yet to be made known, but that it will be a broad policy, based upon the fullest recognition of the rights of the Indians, yet looking to a fuller development of the reserves and the Indians themselves, is already assured.

THE UTMOST FOLLY

Ex-Mayor Geo. Bell visited Enderby for a day last week, en route to his home in Victoria from the East.

Mr. Bell was mayor of Enderby at the time the old Okanagan Telephone Company got the franchise to run wires and do business here. Mr. Bell recalled the struggle the city had at that time, and the good money spent for legal advice in the matter, and finally the acceptance by the telephone company of the agreement with the city, under which the franchise was granted.

"I see by the Press," said he, "you are trying to hold the telephone company to the agreement we then had them sign. I want to say that I endorse your action. We hear of the same trouble all up and down the coast towns. The people find, when it is too late in most cases, that the company is using them there the same as they are treating you here. In most cases the people cannot help themselves. But in Enderby's case it is different. You have them bound by an agreement, under the best conditions we could make at the time, and it is worse than foolishness to let them get away with it. The city should hold them to the conditions of the agreement."

CANADA NOT HEAVY BUYER

The Dominion of Canada ranks seventh in importance among the countries of the world as a buyer of British goods. This was found in a report issued on the subject by the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa. It shows, among other things, that as a customer of the Mother Country, Canada does not stand as high in the list of other Dominions as either Australia or South Africa, both of which have smaller populations. As a matter of fact, Australia, with a population of only 4,500,000, buys more goods in the British market than any other country in the world, save British India and Germany, which rank first and second, respectively. The United States ranks next to Australia.

PROVINCE UPHELD

The Supreme Court of Canada the past week handed down a memorandum of the judgments in the Companies Act and insurance cases, in which the B.C. law was being tested. The court divided, four to two. The effect of the judgment is that the Province may continue to incorporate companies to do business through out Canada. There is a similar judgment on the reference in the insurance case, as to whether provincially-incorporated companies have the right to issue policies all over Canada. Their right to do so is upheld on a similar division.

Finest in the Country

"Enderby is a charming villiage with city airs. When Paddy Murphy shook the snow of Sandon off his feet he came here, and now owns one of finest brick hotels in the country. Although Paddy is an Irishman from Michigan, he calls his hotel the King Edward. In addition to the excellence of the meals, breakfast is served up to 10 o'clock, which is an added attraction for tourists."

OKANAGAN SHIPMENTS

A total of 1179 rarloads of fruit and produce have been shipped from the Okanagan Valley this year, according to figures compiled for the Vernon News by C. P. R. freight agents at Vernon, Okanagan Landing Armstrong and Enderby. That figure includes carload shipments only, up to Oct. 14th, but does not take into account less than carload shipments, nor express shipments, which would greatly swell the total.

The total shipments from Vernon so far this year have been 338 carloads; from Okanagan Landing, 332; from Armstrong, 196, and from Enderby, 312. These shipments were comprised of fruit, vegetables, hay general farm produce. Included in the Enderby total are 128 carloads of flour and feed manufactured there. The C. P. R. freight agent at Enderby also reports the forwarding of 452 carloads of lumber and 20 carloads of brick.

The 1179 carloads of fruit produce for which $750 a car would be a conservative estimate of value, represents an export value of $884,250.

Vernon's shipments from Sept. 23 to October 13 inclusive, were as follows: 92 carloads of fruit, 27 carloads of vegetables, two carloads of canned goods, and six carloads of hay.

Little of the crop of winter apples has as yet gone forward, nor have potatoes and other vegetables been marketed yet in any very large quantities. The output so far is therefore extremely satisfactory, and indicates that the total at the end of the year will run into larger figures.

CANADA'S WHEAT CROP

A bulletin just issued by the Census and statistics office of the Department of trade and commerce, gives the total estimated wheat production this year at 207,575,000 bushels as compared with 199,236,000 bushels last year, an increase of 8,339,000 bushels, or 4½ per cent.

Oats show a total yield of 391,418,000 bushels and an average yield of 40.57 bushels as compared with 361,418,000 bushels, and an average yield of 39.25 bushels. Barley gives an estimated total yield of 44,348,000 bushels, and an average of 31.08 buthels per acre, as compared with 44,014,000 bushels and an average of 31.10 bushels in 1912. For this year the total production of rye is 2,559,000 bushels, of peas 3,970,000 bushels, of buckwheat 7,600,000 bushels, of flax 14,912,000 bushels, of mixed grains 17,178,000 bushels, of corn for husking 14,086,000 bushels, of beans 989,500 bushels, as compared with a total yield last year of, rye, 2,594,000; peas, 7,773,500; buckwheat, 10,193,000; flax, 21,681,500; mixed grains, 17,952,000; corn, 16,569,800; beans, 1,040,800.

FINE ARMSTRONG VEGETABLES

"Never in my life have I seen better vegetables, though I have judged exhibits for years in Ontario and other garden spots of Canada," declared J. L. Hilborn, of Summerland, one of the judges at the Armstrong Fall Fair, last week.

"The potatoes, beets, carrots and parsnips shown at Armstrong were exceptionally fine. I have often judged larger exhibits, but never any of similar quality. Armstrong celery, too, is easily superior to that grown in the famous Michigan celery belt."

MAKING THEMSELVES USEFUL

A writer in a Shanghai magazine mentions the excellent work done there by the Boy Scouts, in the recent Chinese trouble. "Two at least," says he, "of the Red Cross Hospitals are appreciating the good work that they are doing, in helping to bandage the wounded. Night and day at most of the Refuge Houses these Scouts are helping to dispense rice to the hungry refugees, and making themselves useful in directing the refugees to places of rest."

EARL JR AGAIN WINS

At Lexington, Ky., on October 15th Earl Jr won the 2.01 pacing race in straight heats from Braden Direct. The purse was $1500; Braden Direct came in second, with Ross K. third.

CHRISTMAS APPLES

A carload of Okanagan apples will leave on board the s.s. Manitoba on November 6th, for Great Britain from Montreal. The car conveying this fruit will leave Vernon on the morning of October 25th, and will carry the best apples in the Valley as a Christmas box to people in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, under the auspices of the Vernon Board of Trade.

ANOTHER DISASTER AT SEA

The Atlantic steamship from Rotterdam to New York, named Volturno, with 657 passengers and crew on board, took fire in mid-ocean and in a terrific gale, on Oct. 10th, and it is reported from the vessels which were called to her rescue by wireless that 236 of the passengers and crew are missing.

Wonders Never Cease!

¶ Men fling messages over the ocean without wires—fly in the air—look through brick walls with a X-Ray. Wonders never cease!

¶ Thirty years ago Hobberlin's determined that a dormant power should be brought forth, and made to exert an influence in men's clothes. And behold! Today that influence is causing wonder in the entire field of tailor craft.

¶ It's the Hobberlin twenty-dollar suit to measure. It is our business to give wonderful values—to give a suit at $20 that will stand the criticism of the man who has paid $25 or $30 elsewhere.

¶ Choose the material you like best, at a popular price, including those splendid Mourne Mountain Cheviots, Scotch tweeds, fancy worsteds, cassimeres, homespuns. Whatever the material, we guarantee it will be satisfactory in fit, style and tailoring. To measure at $20.

TEMPER AND GREEN TULLE

And a Ring That Was Thought to Be Lost.

By SARA M'CONNELL.

He was busy getting the thought of her out of his mind, sore put to it to be free and his own man again. She was capricious, inconstant, vain; she was self willed and full of wiles; she was—oh, she was Alexandra Lee. He would not think of her.

A great deal that had happened that night was blurred to him. But the bang of the carriage door as they started home reverberated in his mind like the crack of doom. It had slipped from his hand and swung to with a crash. Alexandra's laugh mocked him. "With any one else, George, I'd have said the door slammed."

He remembered how she looked as he turned, something strange in her eyes that matched, in impression, the misty multitudinous ruffllings and billowings of her gown—that frivolous, fluttering, elusive green tulle he had watched all evening as she danced with every other man in the room—with Herbert Hartley, a dawdling, gangling derelict, a signpost to every path but that of rectitude—of all men in the world, Herbert Hartley!

From her carriage corner Alexandra sighed. "I've had such a good time, and now I suppose there's the piper to pay."

"If you mean there is Hartley to settle for"—

"Herbert? You've a tone that hints at 'thirdly and fourthly, brethren,' and poor Herbert! He's so much more of a song than a sermon."

That began it. He had never meant to quarrel, only to deal with her in a firm, prompt fashion, as a man should. But he lectured her.

She bent down as he ended. "Are you there, Alexandra?" she asked of the floor. "Poor dear, there is nothing left to pick up. Oh, I'm tired, tired! I'm stifled. I can't breathe. There, take it back!" And she tossed the ring across to him. "Now one can draw a free breath."

"Alexandra!" he begged.

But he had cut, and she meant he should pay. And hers was a pretty gift of table turning.

He held his anger down. No more doors should slam by chance about him, and it was only as they neared the house that he interrupted:

"We haven't gained anything this way. Discuss me again. The point is Herbert Hartley."

"Then I must put on my bonds again? Where is the ring?"

But he hadn't the ring.

"You had it last."

"I laid it in your lap."

But it was not in her lap, on the seat nor in the carriage. Alexandra laughed. "Oh, thrifty George, are you sure you've not taken it back for safe keeping?"

He stood a long moment at her door.

"And Hartley?" he said.

Insistence was match to her powder.

"How can I answer unless we're engaged? And people can't be engaged without rings, can they, George? You seem to think with mine on that I fail to remember. Bring it back to me and—good night."

After a week of wrath mingled with pain he got himself under control and wrote her. But the answer came back the same absurd, maddening, almost insulting reiteration—the ring, always the ring. A perversity first or a pretext, did she use it now as a weapon? He hadn't the ring, she knew.

Life was turmoil once Alexandra entered, and he remembered with what perverse astuteness she had said herself: "I'm like a mustard plaster on your mind. You'd better take me off before I raise a blister."

But she was in every wind that blew, and without her nothing was worth while that once had been.

So for a fortnight he had gone about his accustomed ways, and, though many a flutter of familiar skirts had set his heart a-jump, yet he never had met Alexa since that night. Then a case of some importance took him out of town with such sharp demand upon all his faculties that he had known a sort of respite.

But back in the town his work was all to do again. He went his way down to his office. He bowed to people who drove past with a swift hope that Alexa would not be with them. And then unexpectedly with a group near the Hurds—there was Alexa!

Yes, it was Alexandra and Evelyn Hurd and with them Herbert Hartley.

The group stood until he had almost reached them, when Hartley turned, and Evelyn went back to the house, while Alexa stopped by the Hurds' waiting carriage.

He knew she had seen him long before, but—it was one of her insincerities he most disliked—she acted out acute surprise. He put a stiffer guard upon himself.

A stiffer guard! She called it by another name. She hated him when he was like that. How futile he made her feel, how trivial, how vain! Well, at least she would make him feel once more and betray it. She would wring out of him a protest.

And then her mind misgave her. Was she being left with the situation on her hands? Would he accept without protest? Would he never speak? She looked up and then down again to her ungloved hand on which his eyes were fixed. A seal ring of Herbert's took the place of the one that was lost. A joke—a stupid joke—but stupidity lent her a stammering tongue.

"George, George!" she called after him, but she entreated only an inflexible back. With Herbert's name on her lips and Herbert's ring on her finger, she was indeed left committed to the situation the last of her desiring.

Alexandra flaunted Herbert Hartley in Greenfield's face. She waved him abroad like a banner. If the town hummed with rumors of her, she helped the rumor wax, but helped it to no explanation.

But with her family there was one topic that, like the weapon used in committing a crime, seemed always impossible to dispose of. The nile green tulle—why didn't she wear it? And that was the one thing she couldn't do.

It was their house dressmaker that in a measure vanquished her at last. "One, two, three," measured the woman. "That's only once and a quarter, and I'll need as much again. Those ruffles on your nile green underpetticoat—they're a match, Miss Alexandra, and we're in a hurry."

Alexandra went into her room, shutting the door behind. The tulle hung upon the hooks with a kind of defiant grace, as if it still held something of its owner's quality. She took the gown down slowly and spread it gently out upon the bed. How happy she had been when she had worn it—the last time she had been happy!

She had meant they should have a memorable evening, she and George and the gown. And how had it so fallen out? Coquetry? What did it mean except that if it were good to be with George it was a joy still subtler to dance away with some one else knowing his eyes held her, followed her, and that for each the crowded room held only the other? Provocation, alluring, half a mystery to herself, it was like a fold of the silk that shimmered over its silk lining.

She slipped down upon the floor by the bedside and began to rip the flounces. What was it he said that had made her so angry? Her vanity was as endless as her caprice. He shouldn't have said it, and yet—it was true enough. Well, she had warned him. He was well rid of her. He had come out of the matter with a better grace than she had, except about the ring. No doubt it had been found long ago. It angered her afresh to think how stubborn he had been not to have told her. The way to make her feel how small she was was not to tell her so—that never served—but to take the big way and put her in the wrong by being generous. If he had given her a chance, half a chance—

The scissors snipped, snipped. It was thus she had laid a sharp tool on her happiness. She was cutting the stuff, but what did it matter? She was always cutting and tearing something dear to her.

And the ruffles must come off, they said. She bent nearer. She might as well tear and be done.

What was this hard thing on which the scissors struck and caught? Not, surely not— In her hand lay the ring.

"Alexa!" He had come at her urgent summons, but hotly rebellious. And yet Alexa, there before him—a curious figure hung about with green silk ruffles—Alexa, grieved, remorseful, pouring her heart out. How was it possible to withstand her?

"And I suppose," he said, the ring half back in its place again—"I suppose I'll have to marry you to save you from"—

But she would not let him speak the obnoxious name.

"You'll have to marry me to save me from Alexandra Lee."

Testing For Butter Fat.

The percentage of butter fat in milk depends almost entirely upon the individuality of the cow. The breed has something to do with it, of course, but not so much as the individuality. Feed cuts no figure. It is possible to increase the flow of milk by proper feeding, but not the percentage of butter fat. The Babcock test is the only means by which this percentage can be determined, and this is a good thing to use before purchasing dairy stock.

Liberty.

Liberty is the right to do what the laws allow, and if a citizen could do what they forbid it would be no longer liberty, because others would have the same powers.—Montesquieu.

WHAT VOTE IS IGNORANT?

The Answer Seems to Depend Upon the Point of View.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw is constantly called upon in public to answer the argument against the "ignorant vote," projected by people who are afraid of it. Dr. Shaw is not afraid of it and takes frequent occasion to show why, and also to show how relative a term ignorance is, how much a matter of the point of view.

"If you want to see real intelligence," she says, "go down on the east side in New York, as I go, and allow yourself to be questioned. Once, when I had answered questions until late in the evening, a young Russian girl came to me and said: 'I believe everything you say. Of course, we who have suffered and have been driven from our country and who have a constant fight to live know the conditions and what we need. But how about those ignorant women in Fifth avenue around the park, who have never done any of these things? They will not understand.'

"After that I went into a meeting in a Fifth avenue home, where I saw women of position and wealth, women such as I had never before seen at a suffrage meeting. At the close of the meeting one of them came to me and said: 'Of course, suffrage is all right for women such as are here. I believe everything you say. But how about the ignorant women on the east side?'"—New York Post.

POWDERED CANE SUGAR.

An English Physician Says It Is a Powerful Heart Stimulant.

Sugar has had its champions as well as its opponents. Its advocates have declared that, aside from its nourishing value, it carries with it a quick stimulation that is without perceptible reaction.

"On the other side," says the Bakers' Weekly, "we have had radical utterances connecting sugar with some of the most incurable of organic diseases. But an English physician recently contended that cane sugar is almost a specific in the treatment of certain diseases of the heart. Emphasis is laid upon cane sugar."

Dr. F. S. Locke of King's college, London, has kept the heart of a mammal beating for eighty to ninety hours after death of the animal simply by keeping the heart muscles sprinkled with powdered cane sugar. These later experiments with cane sugar, especially with reference to dilation of the heart muscles, show that in numerous cases cures have been effected that are of three or four years' standing.

Felling Trees With Wire.

The axman is being put out of business in the forests of Germany by the introduction of a new method of felling trees by the friction of a steel wire, which is able to work its way through a twenty inch tree in about six minutes. The wire is drawn rapidly about the tree and the heat generated by the friction is sufficient to burn a thin carbonized kerf, which is both smoother and cleaner than the cut of a saw. The charcoal layer adhering to the trunk is extremely thin and allows the structure and any disease of the wood to be distinctly recognized. There are many advantages in this method, notably, no waste, decreased labor, absence of all apparatus usually required, and the machine can be used in close quarters not sufficient for men choppers.

Five Forgotten Favorites.

Five famous women whom many think of as having passed away years ago were recently all under one roof at the opera in New York city. They were Maggie Mitchell, the once famous actress; Lotta Crabtree, the famous "Lotta" of the stage of her day, and three song birds, Annie Louise Cary, Clara Louise Kellogg and Emma C. Thursby. And yet the average person would have said that the majority of these women passed away years ago. On the contrary, they are all hale and hearty. But we quickly forget "favorites" of stage and opera.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Cost of War.

The annual war budget of the following ten nations is, in round numbers: Spain, $39,000,000; Turkey, $55,000,000; Austria, $82,000,000, Italy, $95,000,000; Japan, $53,000,000; France, $233,000,000; Germany, $217,000,000; Russia, $285,000,000; Great Britain, $312,000,000; United States, $282,000,000, the total of which is $1,653,000,000. It will be seen by reference to the figures that the United States comes third in the list, being a close second to Russia, with Great Britain leading Russia by a few millions.—New York American.

From His Own Experience.

A west end schoolteacher was attempting to drill the class in the use of the word "felt." She expected some of the children to say "The ice felt cold" or "The stove felt hot," or something of that sort. She was much discouraged when one little alien who had raised his hand to volunteer a sentence said, "I felt down stairs."

AEROPLANES IN WARFARE.

Italy Proves Their Value In Her War Against Turkey.

When the prediction was made, not long ago, that the aeroplane would be an important factor in future warfare, it was considered absurd by many of those who had given special study to the subject. Why, did not experiments show that the machine could not be depended upon? Pshaw! The enemy could riddle it in less than no time. Such arguments found favor with those versed in the science of war, as well as with others identified with aviation. The air was full of discussions pro and con when—unexpectedly came the news that Italy was at war with Turkey and that a fleet, or flock, of aeroplanes was to be put in commission over in Tripoli.

Results have fulfilled the prophecy and the flying machine has proven itself a distinct necessity. It was, perhaps, in defensive work that the airman provided the best evidence of his value. Scouts, noting the enemy's plans, position and manoeuvres, furnished reports which brought about severe losses to the Arabs' offensive movements. As for the aggressive, the aeroplane has yet to prove its worth. Bombs dropped by aviators caused much disorder within the Turkish ranks, but comparatively little damage. Effective service was rendered by officers circling above the line of battle, directing the fire of the big guns of the battleships, as well as that of mountain artillery.

France has long been the leader in aviation, and has gained an advantage over other nations by early recognition of the value of aeronautics in warfare, fostered by liberal appropriations by the Government. Fate decreed, however that Italy should have the advantage, through her war with Turkey, of being the first to gain practical experience in utilizing this new arm of service. But the demonstration will prove of value to all the powers.

While England, Germany, Russia and Japan have spent considerable sums of money in experimenting with aeroplanes and dirigibles, the United States has done very little. The army received a congressional appropriation last year of $125,000, and has probably a dozen qualified aviators and less than that many machines. The navy has also made some experiments, including trials of the hydro-aeroplane, an invention of recent date. The slow development of flying is not due to the lack of an appropriation, or to the lack of aeroplanes, however, but rather to the lack of officers to operate them.

Literal Interpretation.

A sneak thief had got into the car and made off with a fellow traveler's pocketbook. A greeny, who was evidently on his first trip to the city, had taken the episode in with a certain amount of relish and, despite his supposed greenness, apparently knew more about the identity of the guilty one than any one present when the alarm was raised.

He touched the conductor on the arm and pointed to a man who was hurrying down the block for dear life. "There's the thief," he chuckled dryly.

The conductor turned on him sharply.

"You —— fool! If yer saw 'im pickin' th' gent's pocket why didn't yer report 'im 'stead o' lettin' 'im slip off that way?"

"That sign up there scared me," returned the hayseed.

"What sign?"

"Th' one thet sez 'Beware of Pickpockets'."

Admiral's Retirement.

Rear-Admiral W. O. Storey, who has retired, is 53 years of age and entered the service in January, 1872, serving as a midshipman in the Malay Peninsula in 1875-76, for which he has a medal with clasp.

Specially promoted to lieutenant in September, 1882, he served in the Dryad during the operations near Suakin in 1884, and became commander in June, 1896.

After filling various positions of importance, he was in April, 1909, appointed to the command of the Eastern Coastguard district, with headquarters at Harwich. This post he vacated on October 1 last, a fortnight after his promotion to flag rank, at the same time relinquishing a good service pension.

Not as It Sounded.

Used as he was to scenes of turbulence, no doubt even the conductor would have been shocked had he not been right on the spot to see what occasioned the shrill outcry. He called out "Eighty-ninth street!" and immediately a startled voice rang out:

"Oh, wait a minute, till I get my clothes off!"

Everybody stood up and craned necks over their neighbors' shoulders. What they saw was a laundress tugging at a clothes basket which had got wedged in the doorway.

A Deep Thinker.

The new teacher was somewhat uncertain as to the nationality of her latest charges. She was not kept long in doubt, however. "Yoke," she wrote on the board, then asked in her most musical tones as she looked graciously round the class, "Can any little boy or girl tell me the meaning of that word?"

A small blond boy raised his hand. "Ay know," he said hoarsely. "It—it ess when you say somet-ing funny."

Good Form

Social Amenities of the Schoolgirl.

If there is one way more than another in which a young girl can show bad form it is in the way she treats the men acquaintances of an older sister. Sad to relate, the type of pert younger sister exists, even flourishes, unless there be a strong hand to put her down. And because older persons frequently laugh at her and the girl succeeds in "fussing" her older sister the younger one considers herself a huge success and continues in a manner or with lack of it calculated to create a prejudice against herself that only long years can wipe out.

If there is ever a time when a young girl will do well to keep herself out of the way it is when the friends of her older sister are present. Grownup persons, parents and their friends have a certain toleration of children, little or big, which girls and boys of nineteen and twenty cannot be expected to have. There really isn't any use in a little sister making herself unpopular, even if she does create a laugh while so doing, and there is no question that she will be heartily under the ban of an older sister whom the other makes a target for her sharp tongue or whose secrets she "gives away" because the child thinks they are funny.

To tell the truth, it is not only the grown girl who will appear better by the younger one's absence, but the "little sister" herself will gain greater popularity. Grown girls and men who go to see one of their own set do not care to have their time and attention monopolized by one who is too young for their notice or at least whom they consider to be such. Yet because they are well bred they must be polite to her, being annoyed proportionately.

One great objection to a young girl's being with her older sister's friends and probably the strongest reason why she should not be is the almost irresistible temptation to talk personalities, frankly to tell what she knows, not always stopping there, but unconsciously exaggerating. It is not at all improbable that the others may find this amusing, even instructive, in the side lights thrown on the characteristics of older sister and her friends, but that, as a rule, is far from desirable. If it is a joke the younger girl tells or a personal fact that would be unknown save for her it is remembered in the set of acquaintances and also that the younger one divulged.

The listeners may be highly interested at the time, unwittingly flattering the juvenile talker by their attention, but it counts against her later, just the same. Not only does she make herself vastly unpopular with her own family, but outsiders are prone to consider her a "terror," saying, "She ought to be suppressed," themselves developing a fear of her tongue that makes them prefer her absence to her presence.

The same is true if the younger sister refrains from personalities and merely occupies the attention of her sister's friends in other ways. She puts herself forward then undesirably. She gains the reputation of being pert, and instead of their regarding her as a sweet and attractive young girl they think of her as one to be avoided.

The surest way out of the temptation of being funny at the expense of an older sister and her friends is to keep away from where they are.

That does not preclude "having fun" with the older sister when there is no one else about.

The Little Boy.

The little boy sat under a shade tree with his back against its trunk and tenderly rubbed his inflamed eye.

"When I'm rich," said the little boy, "I'll buy something nice for mother."

He was a fairly good little boy and he didn't forget the conventionalities.

"But first," said the little boy, "I'll build a big jail a mile high an' I'll hire a thousand p'licemen an' I'll have a cell full o' rats, and then I'll put that red headed little gink of a Bobby Moses in it fer blackin' my eye!"

For in the normal mind of youth revenge is sweeter than love.

True to Life.

Manager—The critics say that in the play, "A Wronged Wife," you do not exhibit enough emotion when your husband leaves you, never to return.

Popular Actress—Oh, I don't, don't I? Well, I've had two or three husbands leave me, never to return, and I guess I know as much about how to act under those circumstances as anybody.

Not Holding His Own.

When at college a fellow student always managed to be away on Sunday. At last his companions discovered that he went courting, and, wishing to have a bit of fun, they sent him the following telegram:

"Hope you are holding your own."

He wired back direct:

"Cannot get rid of the old folks or I should be."

The Cost and Waste of Effort in Over-Organization in Small Cities

This is the way an eastern college professor expresses himself on the question of the over-organization of church and social life in most parts of the country, to which brief reference was made in these columns last week:

"This is a problem of the man in the town and smaller city. It probably has little significance in the larger cities, but this, I do know, it surely does apply to towns and cities of from 2,000 to 25,000. The problem is nothing more than that of man's entertainment and the manner in which it is furnished. The entertainments are put on for the social and intellectual betterment of the community, to relieve the weary and careworn for a brief period and thus make life more pleasant. The advertisements read something like the foregoing, but the actual fact is that most of these so-called entertainments are the schemes of some promoter, local or otherwise, to procure money for some cause.

"Some will say at once that this is no problem, that a man may select what he desires and let the rest go, but the actual experience of many persons is quite to the contrary. It is not always an easy matter. Theaters and moving pictures are managed on such a basis, generally, that it is no problem. The individual goes or remains away as he sees fit. But these constitute only a small part of what the average man is called upon to patronize. It is the entertainment under the auspices of the church, the lodge, the boys' club, the girls' society that presents the difficulty. These entertainments are put on for various purposes, of course, but usually the organization is very much in need of the money. This seems a sure and an easy method of getting it. Sometimes it proves to be anything else than easy, but there is always fascination in having the other fellow pay.

"But does not the public demand this very thing? Must we not be amused? However we may answer the last question, it is certain that the public is not always happy over the paying. It is also certain that the public, or that part of it on salary, cannot help itself to any great extent. It may turn down some of these promoters, but this cannot be done in all cases.

"Let us assume the average case. Jones has a son on the high school football team, a daughter in a girls' club, a wife deriving the intellectual and social benefits of a woman's club while he himself belongs to a lodge, a business men's club and participates in some church activity. There is no doubt in his mind at all concerning the worth of the organization, but everyone needs money and most of them will seek that money at some time through the course of purveying entertainment for the public. If Jones seeks to have his neighbor help out in this process, on the assumption, of course, that the neighbor would be delighted and greatly benefitted, then Jones must return the compliment by going to the entertainments that his neighbor's set of organizations puts on.

"It is just drinking around, you know. In the end this man realizes that of his salary much has gone to keep himself in the good esteem of his promoter friends, men, women and children. He has paid much out for this, and, while he has enjoyed much, there is an ugly feeling in his heart when he looks at his bank account, and he may say some mean things to his wife and to his grocer for his greed in selling needful supplies. The cause may have been worthy, the entertainment may have been very pleasing, but in the great multiplicity of organizations has come the inability to support all and the thing is overdone.

"The democratization of our life may be responsible for the multiplicity of organization. The greater the number of such organizations the more opportunity there is for each of us to satisfy that desire for public activity, to fill an office, but it all takes money.

"We feel that we are unable, as club members, to pay, and so we ask the public to help out in a most worthy cause. If it does not do this, or if anyone working on a salary does not do this, then condemnation follows, probably loss of trade or loss of position. To keep up adds greatly to the cost of living.

"Two things are possible as remedial measures, it would seem. We have put sanity into some of our holiday entertainments through the arouse public opinion. May it not be possible to put more sanity into this matter of organization? Second, it is not more unreasonable to censor the intellectual and social food of a community and to regulate the quantity in some degree to the actual demand than it is to regulate our physical food."

THE RESULT THAT COUNTS

Out of the Chateaguay election and the discussion as to what brought about a Government victory, one fact emerges, namely that a seat in the province of Quebec, carried by the Liberals at the general election two years ago, has been carried by the Conservatives. There may be differences of opinion upoo every other point that can be made by either party as to what the election implies, but there can be no dispute on this one. And it is the result that counts in politics.—Victoria Colonist.

DEPARTMENT OF WORKS

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
Grindrod School

SEALED TENDERS, superscribed "Tender for Grindrod School" will be received by the Hon. the Minister of Public Works up to noon of Wednesday, the 20th day of October, 1913 for the erection and completion of a large one-room school and convenience at Grindrod, in the Okanagan District.

Plans, specifications, contract, and forms of tender may be seen on and after the 13th day of October, 1913, at the office of Mr. D. McEwen, Secretary to the School Board, Grindrod; Mr. L. Norris, Government Agent, Vernon; or the Department of Works, Victoria, B.C.

Intending tenderers can obtain one copy of plans and specifications by applying to the undersigned, for the sum of $10 (ten dollars), which will be refunded on their return in good order.

Each proposal must be accompanied by an accepted bank cheque or certificate of deposit on a chartered bank of Canada, made payable to the Hon. the Minister of Public Works, for a sum equal to 10 per cent. of tender, which shall be forfeited if the party tendering decline to enter into contract when called upon to do so, or if he fail to complete the work contracted for. The cheques or certificates of deposit of unsuccessful tenderers will be returned to them upon the execution of the contract.

Tenders will not be considered unless made out on the form supplied, signed with the actual signature of the tenderer, and enclosed in the envelopes furnished.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

J. E. GRIFFITH,
Public Works Engineer.

ELEVATOR SINKS TO EARTH

Winnipeg, Oct. 19.—Sinking steadily for over twelve hours since Saturday noon, the huge C. P. R. internal elevator at Transcona now is tilted like the leaning tower of Pisa at an angle of thirty degrees from the perpendicular. The foundation of the great structure, which is composed of 65 concrete cylinders, five rows of thirteen each, began to sink at one corner at the rate of two feet every ten minutes. With a capacity of one million bushels, the elevator was nearly full of this season's grain, which is exposed at the top, owing to the massive cupola, containing the distributing machinery, having collapsed when the lean of the structure was too great for its overhanging bulk.

The first movement was noticed shortly after noon on Saturday, and before the engineers could do anything to stop the tilting, the bridge joining it to the transfer house went down, but although the great bins sank several feet below their true level, the transfer house was not affected and the bins still held together as a unit.

The elevator cost about $700,000, but it is not known if it can be salvaged or if it must be demolished and a new structure erected. As for the grain—if no rain falls into the exposed bins there will not be a very heavy loss, the chief difficulty in this case being the problem of removal before the close of navigation.

BENEFIT DAIRY INDUSTRY

A new policy which, it is predicted, will have a far reaching effect on the improvement of the dairy industry in British Columbia, is announced by Hon. Price Ellison, Minister of Agriculture.

The value of permanent milk records has long been recognized by the Provincial and Dominion Governments as an actual asset to the farmer and a benefit to the dairy industry, and after months of careful investigation of the procedure followed in the principal dairy countries of the world, a plan has been evolved by the department that, it is believed, will increase the value of these annals.

A competent inspector, trained in the science of cow-testing, and a complete outfit for his operations, will be allotted to every district in the Province, pasturing at least 400 cows within certain limits, the cost of his employment being borne partly by the cow-testing associations of this district and partly by the Provincial Government. This work will be supervised by the Dairy Inspector, and will involve the bonusing of the associations by a sum amounting to from $250 to $500 per year.—Victoria Colonist.

WILL LEARN A LESSON

Mrs. Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader of England is on a visit to the United States. She is credited with saying that she is there "to show the women of America how to get the vote," but if the truth were known, she is there to learn how the women of the states have secured the vote. Mrs. Pankhurst might be a very sincere woman, but she is a poor leader and a poorer teacher. The women of America have already gained more ground, by their quiet, sane methods, than Mrs. Pankhurst's followers have gained, or will ever gain, by their methods of lawlessness and strife.

When down town, and the weather is damp and chilly, step into the Enderby Bakery tea room and have one of those cups of delicious tea. It will make you forget all about the weather.
