The King Edward hotel is supplying its patrons with fresh corn on the cob, fresh from its Earl Jr. gardens, just as though it were early summer instead of early fall.

One of the cars jumped the track near Armstrong last Sunday as the train was southbound, and it required several hours for the wrecking crew to place the car upon the rails again.

An 85-lb baby pumpkin in the window of the Okanagan Land Company's office, from the garden of H. Greyell, indicates where a lot of pumpkin pies are coming from this winter.

A meeting of the board of investigation to hear all questions relating to water rights and applications will be held at the City Hall, Enderby, on Wednesday next, Sept. 30th, at 1 p.m.

Mrs. Murrin spent the past week on a visit to her Alberta home, where she went to be present at the marriage of her brother. She expects to visit the coast cities before returning to Enderby.

Anniversary services will be held in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday, Oct. 4th. These will be conducted by the Rev. J. W. Stevenson, M. A. B. D., of Revelstoke. Special music will be furnished by the choir.

Later advice from Ottawa announces that Monday, Oct. 12th, is the day finally decided upon for Thanksgiving Day, instead of Thursday, Oct. 8th, announced in a despatch from Ottawa last week.

Enderby theatre-goers who enjoyed the company of English Versatiles on their two previous engagements here will be delighted to learn that this excellent company will appear in the Opera House on Saturday evening, Sept. 26th.

Commencing Monday, Sept. 28th, a change of time will come into effect on the S. & O. Southbound train will leave Enderby at 10.39 instead af 11.54 as now; while the northbound will leave at 16.44 in- instead of 11.54 as now; while the except Sunday.

The war prices in force at the Enderby Music Store are appreciated by the buying public, and Mr. Crane has placed many a dainty article of chinaware in the homes of the district since the 1st of the month. The special prices will be in vogue another week.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bell came in from the coast last Friday, and, after a day or two spent on business here Mr. Bell proceeded on a trip East. Mrs. Bell will spend some days with friends here. She is accompanied by Mrs. Thos. Jalland, who, several years ago, was a resident of Enderby.

The supper and entertainment in connection with the Presbyterian anniversary services will be held on Tuesday evening, Oct. 6th. Hot chicken pie at 6 o'clock and an entertainment at 8 o'clock that will make you feel young. The Girl's Guild will put on a humorous play entitled "The Ladies Aid Meeting at Mohawk Crossroads."

Nineteen members of the Enderby troop of B. C. Horse, who have been stationed at Vernon the past month, returned to their homes this week. A similar number were laid off in each of the companies stationed at Vernon, the whole force there encamped being reduced a single squadron. It is reported that this contingent of the B. C. Horse will be taken on the B. C. Mounted Corps, which is now being raised for service on the continent.

In the fastest open pacing heat ever recorded (1:59¼) won by Bogash Jr, at Detroit, Mich., Earl Jr was a close second. This Enderby horse has been in fast company on the grand circuit this season, and has won 2nd or 3rd in every race he has entered.

The New Denver Fair Association has issued a 32-page prize list for the annual fall fair to be held at that place Oct. 1st and 2nd. Of these 32 pages, 19 are ads for the home merchants and others, and the prize list is a very creditable all home print production, the people of the Lucerne being loyal to their own town.

Judging from the number of applications received by the Press for prize lists for the Armstrong Agricultural Fair, which is to be held on the 6th and 7th of October, the entries from Enderby are going to be more numerous than they have been for several years. The Fair promises to be exceptionally interesting this season, as efforts are to be made to make it answer for the several other exhibitions which have been called off by other cities owing to war conditions. Special train service has been arranged for and every effort will be made to provide for the comfort of those attending.

Allies Successful in Flank Movement

"Send us more men, and send them now," is the urgent appeal from the front, and Earl Kitchener is laying great stress on the value of men who have seen service in South Africa.

The dearth of news this week from the front has raised the usual crop of rumors in London, and these in turn have been sent out, not officially, but as indicating how the battle is going. The Daily News correspondent wiring from the front at Aisne, says:

"We know a little of what the casualties were at the battle of the Marne, when the Germans for the first time were driven back. And I fear when the cost of victory on this new front is known it may shock many persons who at present hardly realize what kind of a war this is, into some dim understanding of it."

When the Germans were compelled to fall back from the gates of Paris, in order, if possible, to dispose of the big end of the allies' fighting machine, Gen. Von Kluk, it has developed, prepared the hills along the banks of the Aisne for his army, there to fight on the defensive against the on-coming army of the Allies. That these preparations were carefully planned and effectually carried out is apparent from the fact that they have thus far been able to withstand all the efforts put forth by the overpowering armies of the French, British and Belgians. It has been found that all the big guns of the Germans have been mounted on cement foundations at these points of defense, indicating how well they've prepared to meet the Allies. But in spite of these preparations the enemy has not been able to do more than hold the Allies at bay, though even this stand has cost the Allies dearly.

The anxious suspense in which London has been living for the past ten days has been partially relieved by the bare official assurance that the German stand north of the Aisne is weakening, and that the Allies are making appreciable progress.

The latest report from the front, Sept. 23rd, says that the German right wing has been turned between Peronne and St. Quentin, where the enemy left nine miles of dead in the trenches between the two towns named. The losses to the allied troops at this point is said to have been very heavy. "We have had to pay a dear price for every trench we carry," says the London Times correspondent.

Lines slightly in advance of the old positions are being won by the Allies, but at enormous sarrifice, and "what we gain we keep."

The unsubstantiated report from Antwerp that Gen. Von Kluk, commander of the right wing of the German army, has removed his quarters back to Mons, completes the London rumors. If this report is true it shows Von Kluk's appreciation of a new army of Allies from the west.

Berlin reports that the German counter attacks about Rheims have resulted in their capture of the strong hill positions at Craonne, 18 miles northwest of Rheims, and the occupation of the village of Belheny, three miles north of the French city.

It is felt in London that the city of Rheims may be razed to the ground, not because in itself it has any strategic importance, but because it happens to be in the way of the operations directed against the plateau above the city, where the Allies will endeavor again to disprove, as did Napoleon, the theory of Bleucher, that these hills are impregnable even if defended by only 25,000 men.

From Petrograd comes stories of the continued flight of the broken Austrian armies in Galicia, while at the same time Vienna declares that these armies are reorganizing for offensive action.

Three British Cruisers Sunk

London, Sept. 23.—Three British cruisers, the Aboukir, the Hogue and the Cressy, were sunk on the morning of the 22nd on the North Sea by German submarines, and sixteen hundred of the officers and crews were lost. The three vessels torpedoed by the Germans were all of 12,000 tons register, carrying 755 men each. The first cruiser was struck about six o'clock, and the second and third a short time later. All went down in five minutes after being struck.

DETERMINED STAND

In a speech delivered at Liverpool a few evenings ago, Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, referring to the talk of peace by the German ambassador to the United States, Count Von Bernsdorff, said: "His vague talk of peace is as insincere as the information for which he is source. Peace with the German people might be arranged in good time, but there would be no peace with Prussian militarism short of the grave." "England," said the First Lord, "does not seek to subjugate Germany or Austria or their people, however complete her victory may be over them. The worst that could happen to them after the war is that they shall be free to live and let live, fairly and justly."

ENGLISH MONEY THIS WAY

London, Sept. 22.—Mr. Reid, agent general for Alberta, makes the following statement: "I don't know how to explain it, but I have had more enquiries from British investors during the past ten days than in the previous ten months, inquiries not for real estate, but for solid investments in Alberta. It may be a reaction from the depression, or possibly the war itself is making Englishmen look to Canada for safe investments. It is also becoming steadily recognized here that war orders, and the stopping of European supplies to competitive markets, must give increasing impetus to Canadian industries, especially cotton, woolen, iron and steel."

AUCTION SALES will be held in the Dry Goods Department of Polson, Murrin & Speers on Monday afternoon and evening and Tuesday afternoon and evening of next week. It will pay you to attend.

R. Lawes on Enderby Heights, sample of two crates picked by him from one tree now in its second year of bearing; two plates of winter apples from the orchard of Mayor F. Barnes, Oregon Reds and Winter Banana, of extra fine color and size, and a gorgeous display of dahlias from Mrs. A. McPherson's garden. Many of these flowers are of her own development, and are most beautiful.

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

In explaining the purposes of the Farmers' Institute in starting the Canadian Patriotic Fund among its members, Mr. Handcock, secretary of the Institute said, a week or two ago:

On the suggestion of Mr. Scott, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, and with the sanction of the Minister of Agriculture, it is proposed that all Institutes collect funds to be donated to the Canadian Patriotic Fund in aid of the wives and children of those who have gone to the front. If even every member subscribes only 25c, it will mean $2,000 will be raised by the Institutes of the Province. At this time when we are all thinking what can we do to help, I trust this appeal will meet with a quick response.

THE REAL WAR JUST BEGINNING

There were thousands of German soldiers killed in the onslaught upon the forts of Liege, but that was not the real war; it was only the slaughter of men by the marvelously effective machine guns and other artillery. The men were simply mowed down, with little or no loss to the Belgian troops in the forts. In the march of the German troops to Paris, they had to encounter some opposition from the Allies all along the way, but it was not real war. For the most part it was a series of rear guard actions, with the Allies falling back to places of safety. In the retreat of the Germans from Paris, or rather the pushing back of the right wing, the enemy succeeded in retiring to the Aisne and Mueuse positions without having his lines broken, and the German losses, considering the nature of the retreat, were less than might have been anticipated. There is nothing so far to show that they have suffered in morale any more than the Allies suffered in morale in falling back upon Paris. The position the Germans occupy at the Aisne and Suippe, we are told by military experts, is one of the finest possible defensive fields, where attacks are exceedingly difficult and defence easy. And it is here that the combined efforts of the Allies have failed, in eight or ten days fighting, to dislodge, or even make any serious impression upon, the enemy's defences. At the same time the loss of life has been deplorable on both sides, and officers from the front are authority for the statement from Paris that the strain of battle on both sides of the fighting line promises soon to get beyond human endurance. The antagonists are likened to two exhausted pugilists and it is said that soon they will be unable to inflict further punishment on each other.

These facts are emphasized because many newspaper reports give credance to optimistic statements which create feelings that can only bring final disappointment. Some days ago it seemed probable that the Germans were only holding their strong position at River Aisne to enable them to convey their transports back before retiring from French soil, but it is later reported from the front that they are evidently contemplating serious counter-offensive operations again. Very much, it is said, depends, at this stage, upon whether the Allies have sufficient forces available for them to attempt a serious flanking movement, thus manoeuvring the Germans out of their position.

When the German army is finally driven out of France by the Allies, then the war will begin in earnest. They will be fighting on their own land and from positions of their own choosing, supported by forts as formidable as any in the world. That Lord Kitchener foresees some of the difficulties before the Allies is evident by the fact of his apparent determination to impress upon the Empire that the war will be a long one, and that it will be necessary to send millions of men to the front. To many these warnings from the war office seem to have little value, and time and again we hear the statement that Christmas will see the end of it. In this connection the following from the Scientific American, of New York, the foremost scientific journal of the world, should be read with interest:

"With the war a month old, Austria is yet to be heard from, except in the role of the defeated; and already it begins to look as though Germany will have to depend upon her own strong arm to overthrow the Allies. Judged in point of mere numbers, the odds are two to one against her on land, and three and a half to one on the sea. But the history of war, whether ancient, medieval, or modern, teaches us that superiority of numbers is merely one among many important factors that win battles and make it ultimately possible to dictate terms to a thoroughly beaten enemy. Proof of this is to be found in that brilliant page of German history covered by the Seven Years' War, when Prussia, under her marvelous soldier king, Frederick the Great, waged a successful war against a combination of enemies, as strong, relatively, if not stronger, than that which confronts the German people in the present crisis.

"The seemingly overwhelming numbers of the Triple Entente are greatly offset by the fact that Germany holds an unusually strong strategic position, both on sea and land, and that whereas her armies are of a common race, speaking a common language, the enemy is composed of three races, speaking no language in common, and differing widely in tastes, temperament, and traditions.

"Of enormous advantage to Germany is the fact that the geography of the naval and military situation is such that she is planted squarely between her major enemies, France and Russia; and so long as she is supreme in the Baltic, it is impossible for those countries to effect a joint concentration of their troops in overwhelming numbers upon either frontier.

"And Germany, be it remembered, has all the advantage of fighting on interior lines. Because of her admirable system of military railroads, many of them built with a view to just such a crisis as that which now confronts her, she can move her reserves quickly to either frontier and mass them at any point of attack or defense. Furthermore, if, as she hopes and firmly believes, she can succeed in crushing the French armies in a succession of conclusive engagements, her possession of interior lines would enable her to move a portion of the flower of her army, which is now confronting France, to the eastern frontier for the repulse of the Russian invasion.

"In the event of German reverses and a failure of her invasion of France, she would fall back upon her line of frontier fortifications, take up a strong defensive position, and hurl the bulk of her armies against the on-rolling tide of Russian invasion, which, at the present writing, appears to have gained a victory of imposing proportions. If this should be the course of events, the Germans would settle down to a war of defense, which might last two or three years, and end in the contestants fighting each other to the point of utter exhaustion. There is no reason to believe that the German of the 20th century has lost any of the powers of recuperation and dogged resistance which carried him through the seven years of war under the great Frederick."

It is the fact that Lord Kitchener recognizes the strong strategic position of Germany and the extraordinary fighting metal of the German troops that he is able to tell the people of Britain what to expect in the war now on. And no man knows the fighting qualities of his own troops better than Lord Kitchener. He knows that the British are pitted against the Germans, two of the best fighting organizations in the world, in a life and death struggle, and he knows it cannot be a drawn battle —it must be a knock-out.

By next Christmas it is estimated there will be one million orphans in Europe because of the war, and European militarism would hold that the best use of them was to rear them and train them to slaughter each other when they reach the age of "mature" thought and they are old enough to do each his "glorious" part.

CANADIAN FLOUR IN DEMAND

Orders from the Dominion and Ontario Governments for an aggregate of 1,250,000 barrels of flour are only the beginning of the increased demand on the flour mills of Canada as a result of the war. The mobilization of the armies of Europe will result in a large reduction in the acreage sown to wheat in that Continent. That reduction in acreage and consequent reduction in yield will greatly increase the demand for wheat and flour from other producing countries. Canada will find a ready market during the war for all the wheat and flour she can export. The flour mills of Canada will be kept busy grinding Canadian wheat into flour for export to the Mother Country at this time of trial.

In the home market also there will be an increased demand for flour. The tendency of many will be to use more bread and other staple articles of food instead of some of the luxuries of the table. This will mean an increased consumption of flour. Thus it would appear that the 7,000 men who are working in the flour mills of Canada are assured of continued employment throughout the war. It is possible the number of employees in flour mills will have to be increased but even if an increase should be unnecessary the continued operation of this industry will mean the circulation of approximately $4,000,000 a year in wages to workmen.

A thousand years ago the Chinese people came to the conclusion that the western worship of brute force was a stupid thing, and what we see in Europe now is enough to confirm that belief.

What One Man Can Do in Ten Years on an Ordinary Bush Ranch

Wm. Anderson made his first shipment of apples from the Riverside farm this week, to be included in a large shipment going from the Okanagan United Growers to Austrilia. One hundred boxes of Jonathans were loaded on Tuesday, going direct to the coast, where they will make up the balance of the shipment. These apples, while a little small owing to the dryness of the season, were of a very fine quality, and well colored.

Mr. Anderson has as fine a looking apple orchard as is to be found in the district, and the trees are producing a fine crop. He will pick in the neighborhood of 400 boxes of different varieties.

In addition to this apple orchard, which is clean cultivated, with not a weed showing, Mr. Anderson has some 50 acres or more into clover, timothy and alfalfa, and his fields are as level as the floor.

It was only about ten years ago that Mr. Andedson located upon his present farm. It was part of the homestead of Geo. Folkard, and at the time he took it over, the land was in bush—thick and uninviting. In the ten years that have intervened, Mr. Anderson has made a phenomenal showing—and he has had a hired man on the place just two months in all that time, and that was the past season. The clearing, stumping, burning, breaking, fencing, plowing and cultivating, the planting, pruning, spraying and harvesting, have all been done by himself. As the result of these few years of labor Mr. Anderson has now a farm that can be pointed to with pride by himself and the district. Of course, when Mr. Anderson took hold of the place he had it on the authority of many of the "old timers" that the land was no good, would never produce anything, and so on. "Well," said he, "I see red and white clover growing plentifully on it." "Oh, yes," would come back, "but it won't grow anything else."

Mr. Anderson has now a fine line of cattle in addition to his fruit orchard, and it goes without saying that his farm is a producer, and a dividend payer.

DELAVAN'S COMET VISIBLE

What is known in the astronomical world as Delavan's Comet is now visible to the naked eye, and it has been patricularly clear the past few nights between the hours of 10 p. m. and 4 a. m. owing to the clear unclouded sky. The comet can be faintly distinguished shortly after dark, when it is to be found directly south of the 'Pointers' in the Great Dipper. The North Star, the 'Pointers' and the comet are almost in a straight line. Its high northern declination brings this region well up into the northeastern sky before sunrise, and the best time to observe it is between 3 and 4 a.m.

There is also another comet visible this month, but not to the naked eye. It is known as Neujmin's. This comet is 346 million miles from the sun, and more than 300 million miles from the earth, which explains its great faintness. It is said to be a very big one to be visible at all so far off.

WAR MAPS FREE

To follow intelligently the European war situation and keep in touch with the lightning movements of the troops a comprehensive war map of Europe giving all details is essential

Of all the maps issued there is but one that fills the bill, and that is the one issued especially by the celebrated map makers—G. W. Bacon & Co., London, Eng.

The publishers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, the moment the map was issued, cabled an offer for Canadian rights of the map. Their offer has been accepted.

The Enderby Press has concluded arrangements with The Family Herald by which the readers of the Press may also secure the map free of charge. In this issue will be found a clubbing offer of the two papers, including the map. The offer is one that every reader of the Press should accept.

Newspapers are paying dearly for the war. The price of paper is going up, up, up. The cost of telegrams and cablegrams has increased from thirty to fifty per cent

Scores of newspepers have suspended publication, and hundreds of others have raised the subscription price. For the present "The Family Herald and Weekly Star," of Montreal, being in an exceptionally strong position, is able, for the present, at least, to keep its rate as formerly, but an increase later may become necessary. In the meantime, during the next thirty days, the readers of The Press are offered the greatest bargain in the newspaper world to-day. Read over the announcement on the last page of this issue of The Press, and get your order in at once. The Press has recently installed a linotype, which places us in a position to give the people of Enderby and district a much larger paper than we are now giving, but to do this requires that we should have a much larger advertising patronage than we now have. We do not anticipate that this increase will come while the war conditions prevail. Nevertheless, we intend to continue giving our readers the best home weekly for the advertising support received that there is in Canada, and, in combination with the Family Herald, to offer big value for the money paid in subscriptions.

This offer stands good for 30 days only, and is open to all old subscribers as well as new.

AUCTION SALES will be held in the Dry Goods Department of Polson, Murrin & Speers on Monday afternoon and evening and Tuesday afternoon and evening of next week. It will pay you to attend.

And in the Matter of all streams draining into the said Shuswap River from the east and north between Shuswap Lake and Mabel Lake.

A meeting of the Board of Investigation will be held at Enderby on the 30th day of September, 1914, at one o'clock in the afternoon.

All statements of claim to water privileges on these respective streams, all objections thereto, and the plans prepared for the use of the Board will then be open for inspection.

All persons interested are entitled to examine these, and to file objections thereto in writing if they deem fit.

At this meeting claimants who have not previously done so shall prove their title to lands to which their water records are appurtenant. This may be done by producing, in case of Crown-granted lands, the title deeds of a certificate of encumbrance or other evidence of the pre-emption record, the agreement of sale, the mining record, a certificate of search in the Dominion Land Office, or other documents of title.

Objections will be heard forthwith if the party objected to has received sufficient notice of the objection.

The Board at the said meeting will determine the quantity of water which may be used under each record, the further works which are necessary for such use, and will set dates for the filing of plans of such works, and for the commencement and completion of such works.

And, whereas, there may be persons who, before the 12th day of March, 1909, were entitled to water rights on the said streams and yet have not filed statements of their claims with the Board of Investigation; such persons are required to file on or before the 21st day of September, 1914, a statement as required by Section 294 of the "Water Act" as amended in 1913. Forms (No. 50 for irrigation, and No. 51 for other purposes) may be obtained from any Government Agent in the Province.

Dated at Victoria, B.C., the 12th day of August, 1914.

For the Board of Investigation,
J. F. ARMSTRONG
Chairman.

Three Million Men Fought to a Standstill in the Battle of the Aisne

London, Sept. 21.—The best blood of England, France and Prussia helps the torrential rains to swell the Aisne River's flood, while British, French and German people, together with the rest of the world, wait without news of the greatest battle in the world's history.

Following an artillery duel of four days, it is probable that the German and Allied armies have since clashed in a hand to hand conflict. The result of the struggle is still unknown to anyone outside of official circles in Berlin, France and London.

With the Allies attempting to turn the German right wing, the Germans attempting to push through the centre and re-occupy Rheims, and the men themselves practically dying from exhaustion, the situation has reached a stage which has passed from critical to vital. It has become a question of reinforcements.

The battle has already been prolonged beyond the point of human endurance. It is said by some military men that the result has become a question of nerves. They claim there is a point when even military genius must succumb before the constantly piling heaps of dead and the constantly growing choruses of wounded men.

Stragetically, the two armies are both in a position from which neither one of them dares to withdraw. Steady rain for a week has made it impossible to extricate the heavy artillery from the morass into which the whole of northern France has been turned.

Neither side will dare to give up the battle on the Aisne without its guns, and these, seemingly equal in numbers and in strength, have nearly roared out their usefulness. Like two tired fighting dogs, the two armies face each other and growl.

Personally the men upon both sides must be at least knee-deep in water in their trenches. They are not raising their heads. They scarcely dare to tend their wounded. Certainly they cannot risk the burying of their dead.

It is a battle without a parallel in history. Nearly three million men are engaged, and apparently cannot get away from each other.

Undoubtedly the Allies are trying to turn the western wing of the German army, but here they meet General Von Kluk, the same man who forced them in their retreat upon Paris,and who so severely harrassed them all the way in their march from Belgium.

Paris and London both give out bulletins claiming success in this direction, but purposely laconic statements in Berlin claim that this master strategist is keeping well up with his task.

In this connection everyone is asking the whereabouts of the Russian force, the reported second British army, the Indian contingent, and even the Canadian troops, some of whom are reported to be in Belgium.

Certainly the presence of a great body of British in the neighborhood of Ostend would seem like a brilliant stroke of strategy at this time, because there can be no disguising the fact that the Allies are almost at their last breath of endeavor with their forces in the field.

The British admit this. Lord Kitchener has been more than usually reticent and pessimistic, and practically every minister of the cabinet is in the field as a recruiting officer.

The German centre, strongly entrenched, holds fast. The French are now contenting themselves with the use of artillery at this point. On the French right, however, fierce fighting is again in progress, with the Germans endeavoring to assume the offensive probably in the hope that this action will dent a little the terrible pressure on the right. Interest generally centres on the left wing.

The British have lost very heavily, as since the fighting began they have not been permitted to rest at any time. German commanders, apparently realize that it was the excellent work of the British forces that carried the day at the Battle of Marne, and have concentrated their efforts in an attempt to destroy the English. The result has been a staggering casualty list, the details of which are withheld, but the British gaps are being refilled by men sent from home bases, and their offensive has never slackened.

Gambling in Men's Lives in the Heartless Game Called "Safety"

G. Lowes Dickinson, in the London Nation, writes a remarkable article on what he calls "the Holy War.' "For the next few months," he says, "or it may be years, some fifteen millions of men in Europe, the physically best, those who should be the fathers of the next generations, will be engaged in killing one another, in starving the rest of the population, in stopping the production of useful and necessary things, in destroying the instruments of production, in pulling down all that has been laboriously built up during a quarter of a century of European peace. Not one of the men employed in this work of destruction wants to perform it; not one of them knows how it has come about that he is performing it; not one of them knows what object is to be served by performing it. The non-combatants are in the same case. They did not forsee this, they did not want it, they did not choose it. They were never consulted. No one in Europe desires to be engaged in this work. We are sane people. But our acts are mad. Why? Because we are all in the hands of some score of individuals called Governments. Some score among the hundreds of millions of Europeans. These men have willed this thing for us over our heads. No nation has had the chance to say No. The Russian peasants march because the Tsar and the priest tell him to. That of course. But equally the German Socialists march; equally the French Socialists. These men know what war means. They know what its effects must be. They hate it. But they march. Business men, knowing too, hating too, watch them march. Working men watch them march, and wait for starvation. All are powerless. The die has been cast for them. The crowned gamblers cast it, and the cast was death.

For what, then, are these gamblers playing. Each says he is playing for safety. Each says the other is playing for power. We English believe we are resisting aggression. We may be sure the Germans do not believe it of us. We believe they are aggressors. We may be sure they do not believe it of themselves. Behind the action of all governments is a theory—the theory of the Balance of Power. Behind the theory are passions—the passions of fear and of cupidity. Behind the passions is the whole long and tragic history of mankinds. Of all this, common men are tools. The rulers play on them like pipes. And not only the rulers. Every journalist who has been sowing the seed of mistrust and hatred between nations, every historian who has used history to glorify or apologize for war, every man who has exalted passion at the cost of reason, is an accomplice in this crime. It is thus that war has come about. What can war achieve? It is no remedy for the disease it is intended to cure, it merely creates new conditions for another war. The catastrophe in which we are plunged must produce incalculable evils. It cannot produce any good unless it should produce enlightenment. By enlightenment, I mean the apprehension by peoples and Governments of a different conception of policy to that which now prevails. The new conception is there, in the minds and hearts of all right-thinking and right-feeling people. It has not been able to control events, partly because peoples have not learnt to co-operate with one another. But all men not blinded by theories know that the power to which Governments sacrifice nations is an idol. In no real thing do interests of nations diverge. What drives them into war is abstractions; and what gives abstractions life is the belief in them. Such abstractions are power, prestige, honor, in the sense in which nations use the word. These are ghosts of a dying age, but ghosts that are not yet laid. What is real is labor, intelligence, imagination, and the fruits of these are common to all men. But into these realities the life of passion is only beginning to flow; along the old familiar channels, once they are opened, it flows with fatal force. Let war be declared, and every individual in a nation is ready to lay down his goods and his life. That is why to some noble men war appears to be a noble thing. But what makes it so is the passion that is misled into its service. That passion is needed for the real things, for good instead of evil, for truth instead of lies, for love instead of hate. To turn it into those channels, the friends of reason are always working. For the moment their voice will not be heard. But as this war pursues its dreadful course, as its fatal and foreseen consequences unroll, as the fact of what we are doing begins to penetrate from our senses to our imagination, as the dreadful awakening succeeds to the stunning shock, it will be for the friends of reason to drive home the lesson, first and chiefest into their own heart and brain, then, if strength be given them, into the conscience of mankind. That is our war—those of us who believe in reason—our eternal and holy war. In this dark hour of our defeat, let us not forget."

Wm. Thomlinson is now in the Similkameen district collecting samples of ore for the federal department of mines.

GETTING DOWN TO WORK

While Canada is at war in the national sense, there is industrial peace all over the country. No labor dispute of any importance exists, and not one arbitration board is sitting. Even the prolonged difficulty among the miners at Nanaimo is terminated. The Department of Labor which, when the war broke out, appealed through Hon. Mr. Crothers for the amicable adjustment of labor difficulties, is keeping in constant communication with the different centres and watching industrial conditions.

The general situation is looking up, according to advices received at Ottawa from all parts of the Dominion. At the outbreak of the war there was more or less pessimism and talk of suspending industrial operations, but confidence appears to be gaining, and many Canadian manufacturers are adopting the patriotic policy of not only supplying what hostile countries have hitherto supplied to Canada, but are endeavoring to capture the trade of such countries with the South American republics. The opportunities are extensive and the outlook is hopeful.

When the statistics for the past month are available a very substantial improvement is likely to be registered. The trade routes temporarily demoralized at the outset are now open, and imports and exports are coming and going in considerable volume. An increase in the customs revenues for September is expected on account of largely increased imports from the United States.

The industrial situation, it is expected, will be greatly improved by heavy contracts that, it is understood, will be placed in Canada by Great Britain and her allies. England has already bought a large amount of hay and oats in Canada. More contracts for equipment and supplies are being placed.

Sir Geroge E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, is quite optimistic over the industrial outlook. He emphasizes that the greatest opportunity is in the Canadian market formerly supplied by German manufacturers or by Austrian and other European countries. Sir George considers that the big problem is to bring the Canadian manufacturers together. The Department is doing everything possible along this line, and has even inventoried a drug store to find out what supplies came from Germany and can be produced in this country.

NOW IS THE TIME to buy property.—Choice homesite of three acres, Lawes' sub-division, suitable for poultry or small fruits; few minutes' walk from centre of town; city water. Also, two large lots on Belvedere street; 180-ft. frontage, rear entrance on Stanley street; house and stable. Will become valuable for business purposes as town develops. I wish to sell either one or the other of above properties. Price low; easy terms. Graham Rosoman. a27-2t

FOR SALE—Three head general purpose horses. F. D. Abbott, Mabel Lake.

NOW THE TIME TO ADVERTISE

Some benefits that Canada might derive from Europe's war are denied us by restrictions of Empire patriotism. The keenest Canadian business man would not willingly profit to-day by a situation that handicaps the Mother Country.

But in the field of commercial activity now open to Canadian manufacturers, there are now—by reason of this unsought war—various opportunities for us, which mean loss to none other than Germany.

Much of the trade that was Germany's in Canada should now become our own. Who but our own Canadian manufacturers should now make the hosiery, the underwear, the paper, the toys, the silver and much of the chemicals, dyestuffs and other things Germany has supplied us?

All this additional business, now so readily tending toward Canadian concerns, will be divided among them in proportions depending upon the aggressiveness with which they, respectively, go after such business.

In that aggressiveness, as in all commercial campaigns, advertising must be an important factor.

Doubly important right now—because this trade that was Germany's is going to be apportioned among our factories at once. Our people must have these things—not six months or a year hence—they are buying them now. Stocks are running low, and the firms that ask most insistently for their share are going to get it—large and quickly.

It will be a test.

Advertising will soon reveal which of our industrial enterprises are most worthy and best prepared to profit by Germany's set-back. The firms first to advertise for this business that was Germany's will be the first to profit and the ones to profit most largely when that business becomes Canada's.

Who, among our Canadian manufacturers, is willing to be left out in the cold? Who, among such firms, will fail to advertise?

LOCAL ADVERTISING

This is the testing time. The merchant who shows the white feather by excluding his business name from the local paper, in this or any other community, will be the first to feel the effects of hard times. The merchant who hammers the harder in hard times for a share of the people's business is the surest to get, not only his share, but also the share that should belong to the merchant requiring flannel foot-pads. Advertising is recognized the world over as the one indispensable thing to all business. The buying public is not blind. People are very observing. They quickly recognize the man in business who is strong when others are weak. Times may be ever so hard, but the buying public will not pass by a live merchant for a dead one. The buyer can readily, and does readily, perceive the man who, in spite of business depression, keeps his colors flying. In any community it is the live ones who advertise. When a business man takes his name out of the home paper—withdraws behind his door—does nothing to keep business with its face right side front—nothing to let the world know he is in business in the town—he must of necessity turn business away. Better reduce his business advertising to a single-inch ad than to snuff it out altogether. If a business man wants business he must go after it; and the harder times are the harder he makes them, for himself and for others, when he quits the first essential to business—advertising—and crawls off into a corner and pulls down the blind.

AUCTION SALES will be held in the Dry Goods Department of Polson, Murrin & Speers on Monday afternoon and evening and Tuesday afternoon and evening of next week. It will pay you to attend.
