Third Year.—No. 28 | Grand Forks, B. C., Tuesday, February 9, 1904 | TWICE-A-WEEK

The City Council

Decided Last Night to Dispose of the City Team

The Electric Lighting and a Variety of Other Subjects Were Discussed in a Harmonious Spirit at Last Evening's Session.

The regular meeting of city council was held in the council chamber last night. Mayor Hammar, Ald. Clements, Feeney, Hutton, McCallum, McLellan and McNee were present.

A communication was received from David Woodhead, applying for the position of poundkeeper.

Chief Savage reported that he bad examined the opera house, and found it well provided with exits and safe in case of fire.

The following report was received from the boark of works, with a letter from J. W. Jones attaahed:

"Upon further investigation, we find the following figures, which we present to you for your consideration: Last year's expenses in connection with the city team and man amounted to $1,511.25, as follows: Teamster, $900; feed for team, $372; blacksmith account, $64.25; extra labor hire, $175. This does not include the bridge and river repair, and as such work is a yearly expense we would not recommend any done at present, but will consider it in our yearly report. Therefore, in our opinion, the team should be sold, as by so doing the city would be the better off by some $900. Further, as the city's financies are not any too flush, we would recommend that no work be done in this department but what is absolutely needed. Also find attached offer for team stabling from J. W. Jones.

M. R. Feeney,
F. H. Hutton."

To the Mayor and Council:

Gentlemen—I hereby agree to put a good team in the city barn, to be kept there at night free of charge to the city. Also, if you see fit to hire my team and man when needed at $6 per day, or when short hauls are wanted my charge will be $1 per hour.

J. W. Jones.

On motion of Ald. Clements, the report of the board of works was accepted, and the board was authorized to sell the team to the best interests of the city.

Ald. McLellan, as chairman of the water and light committee, reported that the committee had come to the conclusion that it would be cheaper to put in small street lights on Bridge street, near the C. P. R. crossing, where they are now without street lights, than to put in arc lamps. He also recommended that the city purchase a voltmetre, and some other metres tor use in stores, churches, houses, or wherever any one wanted to use one, as a check on the amount of electricity used. A general discussion regarding the city's lighting took place. The mayor said he would pay for a metre to use in his own house as an experiment, providing the city would put it in free of cost. At the end of two months he would inform the council as to the result of the experiment. The council could then see if it would pay to put in a metre system throughout the city. Mr. McLellan wanted to know if there could be a plan devised whereby all the street lights could be turned off on moonlight nights and thus save a lot of power. The city electrician informed the council that there would have to be a new circuit installed in order to do this. It would not be a satisfactory one, and he would not advice it under any circumstances.

On motion of Ald. McCallum, the water and light committee was authorized to purchase one voltmetre and five other metres, viz., one 20, two 30's and two 50's.

On motion of Ald. Feeney, the report of the water and light committee, submitted at the last meeting, was reconsidered, but debate on the same was postponed until the next meeting.

David Woodhead was reappointed pointed poundkeeper without salary.

The following bills were ordered paid: Granby company, $600; Grand Forks Transfer Co., $10.60; R. Petrie, $20.80; E. L. Sibley, $2; E. T. Bank, $199.55; Phoenix Pioneer, $25; J. M. Simpson, $5.20; L. P. Eckstein, $7.65.

SUNSET SAUNTERINGS

W. H. Storey, a "smooth guy," employed as night operator at the C. P. R. station here for a couple of months, did up the Dominion Express company to the tune of $200 before decamping for pastures new. He stole seven suits of clothes and eight boxes of cigars that were in charge of the express company. The clothes had been ordered by patrons in this city from a coast house, through their traveling tailor, and were shipped here c. o. d. For various reasons some twelve suits were refused, and it was while the express company were awaiting orders for the disposition of the goods that Storey succeeded in replenishing his wardrobe at the expense of the company, and also in providing himself with a supply of choice Havanas. After taking the clothes from their original packages, he substituted therefor old rubbers, cordwood, waste paper and other rubbish to make up a corresponding weight. Then he proceeded to "make good" on the cigars. The empty boxes he conveniently filled with C. P. R. time cards—which made a very poor substitute for the fragrant weed. Then he concluded it was time for him to quit his job, which he did, going from here to Rossland, where, it has since been learned, he tried to dispose of some of the clothes. It was some time after he left that the discovery of his cute manipulations was made, and therefore he he has quite a start, but as the police have lost no time in the chase the chances are he will be apprehended shortly. The express company will spare no means to locate and punish him. He owed some $60 to local people, but as he had a month's wages coming, they will receive their money.

G. L. Germaine, local manager of the British American Trust company, has been appointed agent of the Grand Forks Townsite company, vice G. M. Fripp, resigned.

An Ottawa dispatch says that the Vancouver, Victoria & Eastern Railway and Navigation company will apply, at the next session of parliament, for an act extending the time for the construction and completion of its lines.

C. A. Stoess, C.E., returned yesterday from a two months' holiday trip to Victoria and Vancouver.

R. King, wife and family arrived in the city from Silverton, B.C., last week, and will locate here. They have started housekeeping in one of Cooper's brick cottages in the West end.

Mrs. W. H. Dinsmore, who has been confined to her bed for over a week with a severe attack of nervous prostration, is somewhat better, and it is hoped she will soon be able to be around again.

J. M. Ross, who will shortly open a drug store in the premises recently vacated by H. E. Woodland, left on Sunday for Rossland, where he will purchase some shelf goods for his new store.

Fire alarms can be sent in from any of the following places in the city: West ward, Queens hotel and I. A. Dinsmore's residence; Centre, C. M. Turner's residence and the Winnipeg hotel; East, smelter power house, Granby boarding house, Hoffman's boarding house and the pump station. Office hours, 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sundays, 9 a.m. to 12 m. and 3 to 6 p.m. week days. The fire hall can be reached at any time of the night by one long ring from any of the above places. Paste this up for reference.

Yesterday's C. P. R. express arrived here four hours late, owing to the heavy snowfall between this city and Robson.

N. D. McIntosh, the second-hand dealer, is now comfortably settled in his new quarters in the Morrison block, adjoining the postoffice, and is now open to the public with a larger stock than ever in both new and second-hand goods. You can buy anything from a needle to an anchor from Mac now.

William Yolen Williams, superintendent of the Granby mines, arrived in the city Friday, and left Saturday for Phoenix, where he will resume his duties after a two months' vacation in California for the benefit of health, which has been quite restored.

Greenwood Typographical Union No. 358 held a meeting in The Sun Sunday afternoon and elected the following officers for the ensuing term: President, Frank Sherwood; Vice-President, Harry W. Falconer (re-elected), of Greenwood; Sec.-Treas., G. A. Evans (re-elected), of Grand Forks; Seargeant-at-Arms, Brock Hilliard, of Phoenix; Executive and Auditing Committee, H. W. Falconer, R. Mathison and W. B. Willcox. The meeting was well attended. The union is in a prosperous condition.

If you don't go to the Biden opera house Wednesday evening you may never know "What Happened to Jones."

Ex-Mayor Burrell returned last Saturday from Victoria, where he went recently to attend the annual convention of the Provincial Conservative association.

The ladies of the "What Happened to Jones" are all handsome and dress in the best of taste. Their gowns were greatly admired by the ladies of Winnipeg during the engagement at the Winnipeg theatre recently.

A sleighing party will be given by the Ladies' Aid society of the Presbyterian church on Thursday evening, the 11th inst. The sleighs will leave the church at 7:30 p. m. A jolly time is expected. All are cordially invited. Tickets 50 cents.

W. H. Itter left last Friday for Rossland and other points in the Kootenays on a ten days' vacation trip. Dame Rumor says he will buy two tickets for his return journey.

Dr. C. M. Kingston has received the appointment of coroner, vice Dr. Westwood, who recently removed to Coleman, Alta.

Baths 25 cents at the Yale Barber Shop.

Mines and Smelters

A Five Drill Compressor for the Betts and Hesperus.

Boundary Ore Shipments for the Month of January Amounted to Over 75,000 Tons---Rossland Ore for Granby Smelter.

Bert Rhea, manager of the Betts and Hesperus mine, on Hardy mountain, left yesterday for Chicago, where he will confer with the directors of the company on business connected with property. It is reported that work will be commenced on a much larger scale on the group when Mr. Rhea returns. While in Chicgo he will purchase a five drill compressor, and will install it immediately on its arrival here. There seems to be no doubt that the company have the makings of a big mine, and from the work already done they feel justified in placing machinery on the property. Adjoining properties, like the Iron Chief Fraction, are providng rich in free gold, and from all indications ere long Hardy mountain will be a household word. Mr. Rhea will be absent about two weeks.

* * *

Boundary mines shipped more ore during the month of January than for any similar period since ore started going to Boundary smelters, and this notwithstanding the fact that the Boundary Falls smelter was closed for the time being. The total for the month was about 75,000 tons. The Granby mines made a good showing, and the Mother Lode shows a heavier shipment than for months past. The Snowshoe, of course, is not on the shipping list for the present, while the company is being reorganized. The different mines are reported to have sent out the following amounts of ore:

Granby mines	50,940
Mother Lode	14,944
Emma	3,984
Senator	450
Oro Denoro	3,736
Athelstan-Jackot	1,254
January total	75,298

* * *

Last Friday the first shipments of No. 1 Le Roi ore were made from Rossland to the Granby smelter in this city, where its heavy excess of iron over silica renders it especially useful for fluxing.

ACCORDING to reports from Victoria the McBride government are trying to back down on their railway policy. This is a direct violation of their pledges, as, when pressed by the leader of the opposition from time to time, they promised to lay before the house a policy during the present session. But now they appear to evade the issue entirely. It is to be hoped the Liberal members will insist on the premier bringing before the house and the people of the province the policy which he and other members of the government pledged their constituents before the election. For instance, in this riding aid was promised for a branch up the North Fork a distance of fifty miles, to be constructed by the Kettle Valley lines. Geo. A. Fraser, M.L.A., had a personal letter from Premier McBride promising a provincial subsidy for this branch provided the Conservatives were returned to power, and this was freely used to secure votes in this city. Were the electors hoodwinked into returning McBride and his party to power? It certainly looks like it. Mr. Fraser should endeavor to force the premier's hand before supplies are voted, otherwise, judging from late reports, the railway policy and the East Kootenay coal licenses will be shelved until the next election.

THE greatest conflagration in the United States since the memorable Chicago fire, which occurred in October, 1871, has swept over the city of Baltimore, Md., during the last forty eight hours, destroying over seventy-five business blocks, covering 140 acres of ground, and causing a property loss which it is at present impossible to correctly estimate, but which is placed between one hundred and fifty millions and three hundred millions of dollars. The most exceptional, and also the most fortunate, feature of the catastrophe was that not a single life was lost and comparatively few people were injurned. Many people will be left penniless by losing their all in the fire, and many will be thrown out of employment, and therefore if assistance is solicited it should be liberally responded to from all parts of the American continent—even from Grand Forks if necessary.

IF war should be declared between Russia and Japan during the next few days, THE SUN will be compelled to dispatch a special war correspondent to the scene of hostilities in order to keep abreast of the times and furnish its readers with reliable information from the far east. Here is a splendid opportunity for some Grand Forks citizen to win "crimson glory and undying fame." The risk to life will be slightly greater than is incurred on the Grand Forks police force—but then the emoluments attached to the office will be more than trebled.

"UNEASY lies the head that wears a crown." How different with the Grand Forks police force. They slumber as peacefully as a new-born babe through the long nights of these turbulent times. And well they may. They know that once they have received the appointment their positions are secure for life.

"WHAT Happened to Jones" is the puzzle that will be unraveled tomorrow night. Some of the wise ones appear to be certain that they have already solved the enigma. They say Jones is going to purchase the city team, and thus rob the city council and the local press of a fruitful source of controversy. Next?

THE Phoenix people are making a strenuons effort to "pull" a customs house to that city. There is no reason why they should not succeed. One is certainly needed in that place to facilitate business. If they keep the wires hot between now and the federal election, the chances are they will make it stick.

Anecdotal.

A Western Congressman was asked if he did not think President Roosevelt certain to be re-elected, barring any "big mistake" the candidate might make. "Yes," was the reply, "but let me tell you that the biggest mistake he possibly could make would be to allow the crops to fail next year."

A friend of Edward MacDowell attended a recital given by a mediocre teacher's pupils, and when he met the American composer he remarked: "I heard one of the pupils, a little girl of eight, play your 'To a Wild Rose.'" The composer sighed dejectedly. "I suppose," MacDowell remarked, "that she pulled it up by the roots."

During the protracted sessions of the Parnell commission, Justice Day habitually sat with closed eyes. It was commonly supposed that his lordship was sleeping, and the late Sir Frank Lockwood, observing that the learned judge was very much awakened by a little tiff between the president and Sir Charles Russell, exclaimed, quite audibly: "This is the dawn of Day!"

Chauncey M. Depew declares that when King Edward, as Prince of Wales, visited the United States, the old Duke of Newcastle used to scan the accounts of expenditure. At the end of one hotel bill he one day found a charge which he couldn't make out. "What's that charge for?" asked the Duke of the hotel proprietor. "For making such a damned fuss," was the immediate reply.

General Nelson A. Miles says that during the Civil War there was one conscription fakir who made thousands of dollars before the authorities restrained him. This rascal would send letters broadcast, wherein he said he would communicate for two dollars a sure means of escaping the conscription. Letters, enclosing two-dollar notes, poured in on him, and in reply to each letter he would send a printed slip reading: "Join the nearest volunteer regiment."

An old negro living in Carrollton was taken ill recently, and called in a physician of his race to prescribe for him. But the old man did not seem to be getting any better, and finally a white physician was called. Soon after arriving, Dr. S.—felt the darkey's pulse for a moment, and then examined his tongue. "Did your other doctor take your temperature?" he asked. "I don't know, sah," he answered, feebly; "I hain't missed anything but my watch as yit, boss."

One of Pere Ollivier's flock, a very beautiful and handsomely dressed woman, coming very late to church one Sunday morning, caused some disturbance and stir among the worshippers by her entrance, and interrupted the flow of eloquence of the worthy father, who, very irritable and easily put out, said: "Madame perhaps waited to take her chocolate before coming to church?" To this, madame, by no means abashed, graciously replied: "Yes, mon pere; and two rolls with it."

It is related that the American commissioner of fine arts at a Paris exposition once wrote to several artists—to Whistler among them—saying that he would be in Paris shortly, and mentioning the time at which, and the place where he would like them to call upon him. Whistler was asked to call at four-thirty precisely. He wrote: "Dear Sir — I have received your letter announcing that you will be in Paris on the —th. I congratulate you. I have never been able and never shall be able to be anywhere at 'four-thirty precisely.' Yours most faithfully, J. McN. Whistler."

By his tact and amiability Sir Thomas Lipton has made thousands of friends during his visit in New York City. One day recently on the "Erin" he was watching the "Shamrock" from the bridge, and his guests, among whom were some pretty girls, were on the deck below, screened from the sun by awnings. Sir Thomas went down to chat with them for a few minutes, and then said: "I think I'll have the awning taken down." "Don't, Sir Thomas," the women all exclaimed in chorus, "we'll roast here." "But," tactfully replied the baronet, "I'm lonely on the bridge, and I miss your pretty faces." No one objected to the awning coming in after that.

Here is one of Lew Dockstader's latest stories: Two brothers had more or less trouble with the boy next door and hadn't always come out victors. [illegible] the boy next door was so [illegible] that he seemed to have the [illegible] invariably. So it wasn't an unusual thing when one of the boys came into the house with a badly bruised eye. Moreover, he was crying when his aunt stopped him in the hall. "Hush, Willie," she said; "you mustn't make any noise." "What—what's the ma-matter?" he asked, between his sobs. "You may disturb your new brother," said his aunt, soothingly. He dried his eyes in a minute. "Have I got a new brother?" he asked. His aunt nodded. "One besides Jim?" She nodded again. "Bully!" he exclaimed. "You're glad of it?" she asked. "You bet!" Willie fairly shouted; "if Jim and me and the new one can't lick that feller next door, we'd better move."

A pretty story, illustrative of the change of feeling which has come over the Irish peasant toward King Edward since the recent royal visit, appears in the English press. Two London journalists, on their way from Dublin to Cork, accosted a shaggy, farmer-looking native at a Queen's County station with the words: "Well, Pat, what do you think of the King of England now?" "King of England, is it?" replied the Irishman, and there stole over his face an inimitable expression of drollery as he went on in a stage whisper: "Sure, avic, ye'll want a viceroy over there, I'm thinkin'. Himself an' herself are not goin' back to yez at all!" An old dame in Galway who had spoken with the King was questioned as to what she thought of his Majesty. She delivered herself of a long and enthusiastic eulogy, to the effect that "Edward the First of Ireland" was "a grand man entirely," closing with the remark that she had "only wan thrifling fault to find with him," and that was that "they keep the poor man so long in the Phaynix Park beyant that they have him talkin' with a strong Dublin accent."

DONE ON TIME.

In our jewelry store we have a special department "fenced off," so to speak, from the main show room. In charge of this is an expert workman—a mechanic, a genius. You should call at this department quite often, as your watch should be examined at least once a year, or the claws of your diamond ring may be worn off and you run the risk of losing the stone. We never charge for examinations, and all work left in our shop will be fixed in a thorough, workmanlike manner, will be DONE ON TIME it is promised, and the price will be reasonable, satisfactory. If your watch or diamond ring does not need repairing, you may have clock to fix.

The equipment of these trains is the best, including free reclining chair cars, standard and tourist sleepers, a perfect dining car service, and also personally conducted excursion cars, each in charge of a competent guide, whose business is to look after the comfort of his guests. No more pleasant and inexpensive means of crossing the continent can be found than is provided by these excursions.

The Macgregors of the Sahara.

Thank heaven, there is still some mystery left in the world. A book with a title like that of "The Masked Tawareks" makes us grateful that we live now and not some hundred years hence, when all the tracts of the world will be accurately mapped and epitomized in gazetteers, when no surprise will meet the traveler anywhere, when savage peoples will have died out or have become civilized into shirts and Sunday hats, and wild beasts will survive only as stuffed specimens in museums.

The masked Tawareks! Critical honesty compels us to say that the author is a mighty long while in getting at them; but the journey and the search are thoroughly enjoyable. The Tawareks are the people we hear of so often in connection with French extension in North Africa. The Sahara is their country—the Sahara of sand, loneliness and desolation; the Sahara of the oasis, the palm plantation and the solitary mosque. As to the origin of the Tawareks and their language let the learned decide. Our author describes them as a Berber race; but, whatever their history or descent, certain it is that to-day they are nomads of the Sahara who levy blackmail on all who use the caravan routes through the desert, and, failing concession of their demands, make free to pay themselves in the "good old way, the simple plan." They live in small wandering communities far from the settled haunts of other peoples, to whom they are known chiefly as raiders who come like a whirlwind upon the encampment in the dark before the dawn, and make no scruple to take human life if they are resisted. To visit the Tawareks, note their ways and customs, and if possible photograph their countenances, was the object of our author. This last promised to be difficult, for it is a point of almost religious etiquette among the Tawareks to keep the face covered up to the level of the eyes with a folded cloth. How Mr. King found his Tawareks at last, and succeeded in taking photographs of three of their women, whom he persuaded to unveil in the absence of the men, makes most interesting reading. The countenance of the young male Tawarek whom, with much greater difficulty than in the case of the women, he induced to uncover his face is extremely fine as reproduced by photography. The youth might be poet as well as warrior. How far it is typical the author does not say, and probably cannot, as he had few opportunities of seeing uncovered faces. But he tells us enough of other characteristics of the Tawareks, the pride, the dignity, the small well-formed hands, the stature, the fearlessness, to wake in us that ancient belief in the open air as the true sphere of man's perfection and ennoblement.

So also when we turn from the men to the desert scenes so well described in the book, how the desires of youth are stirred once more. Again we learn the true significance of that sadly misused word "oasis" as we follow the little company of men and camels through some long day's journey over the limitless sand, so hot that it can scarcely be held in the hand, so unpermanent that the piled-up mounds and dunes shift from year to year, so loose that in places one sinks in it ankle-deep. In due time, but never before desired, appear in the distance the specks of tufted palms. The camel quickens its pace until it reaches the hollow where lies stretched a green place of shrubs, trees, berries and flowers, a place of mud houses, mud mosques and—water. On the morrow the desert again, and sand, and, as far as the next oasis. We have read of all this before, of the glare, the sky colors, the mirages, the salt pools, but we do not remember to have heard of the "weird, unaccountable droning of the Sahara" at all hours by day and night. The booming of London we know, and the long moan of the sea, and the crooning of the night winds among the hills, but that droning of the Sahara is a thing we would go far to hear for its own sake. Indeed the book shows us how good is life even in the desert. The Sahara can be no mere waste while the Tawareks survive.

France has painted the Sahara into her maps as her own. And most strange it is to read the description of a Sheik's house wherein cheap French trinkets and ornaments were mingled with objects of true Arab art and fabrication. Nickel alarm clocks and china shepherdesses have reached the oases, but over the Sahara as a habitable place prevails and must prevail the Tawarek. Civilization requires that he should not harry caravans and exact blackmail, but we have a sneaking desire that he may long continue to do so.—London "Outlook."

She (romantic)—When you first saw Niagara Falls, didn't you feel as though you would like to jump in? He—No. I hadn't got my hotel bill then.

At a banquet after the overwhelming defeat of "Shamrock III." Sir Thomas Lipton said: "You Americans are hard to beat. You remind me of the Scotchman who came up to London and was set upon by two highwaymen, whom he so unmercifully mauled that by the time they had overcome him they were about ready to go to the hospital themselves. And they only found tuppence in his pocket, whereat one of them said 'It's lucky, Bill, he didn't 'ave sixpence if he 'ad, 'e'd a killed both of us.'"

A well-known churchman of Memphis—the late Dr. Patterson—used to take pleasure in relating several good ones on himself. One of his favorites concerned a generous-hearted but rather wild young friend in whom the reverend gentleman took a special interest. The climax was reached one day when the doctor was walking along the street and suddenly came upon the young man as he staggered out of a cafe. "George, George, drunk again," sighed the scandalized priest. The answer was quite as unexpected as it was unsteady. "Thash all right, doctor; so'm I."

GOOD SERVICE is composed of two elements—excellence of the work and promptness in the execution. Bad work executed promptly is not good service—good work delivered behind time is not good service; but the two combine to make one of the most necessary, but hardest to obtain, and often most expensive, requirements of the twentieth century business man. That we have learned the lesson in theory we have shown. Our customers will testify that we have also learned it in practice.

THE TORONTO

DAILY NEWS

AND THE

TWICE-A-WEEK

GRANDFORKS SUN

...FOR ONLY...

$2.25 PER YEAR

A radical change from old methods and prices has been made by the Toronto Daily News. The eyes of the newspaper world have been upon The News for the past few months, during which time several departures have been made which have given that paper a widespread reputation for enterprise and originality. This latest move is to place The News at the price of $1.00 a year by mail. Only a deep-founded belief in the future success of The News could lead the publishers to make such a reduction in price. But just as the dollar magazine has taken hold of the people, so, we venture to predict, The News will secure a vast and ever-increasing circulation, based not only on the popular price at which it is sold, but mainly upon the intrinsic merits of he paper.

We have arrangements concluded which enables us to club the Toronto News with our own paper at $2.25 a year in advance. Such a combination presents many unique features—our semi-weekly giving you all the home and district news, and the big 12-page daily keeping you in touch with events all over the world. Send us your subscription to The News, or if you would like to see the paper first, write us and we will secure a sample copy.

A Noble Renunciation.

She turned from him with a great sob her convulsed frame shaken by irrepressible emotion.

"It—it is terrible, terrible, Frederick," she faltered. "My father, who but yesterday was a multi-millionaire, is to-day a broken, a penniless, a dishonored bankrupt!"

"As bad as that?" he whispered, horrified incredulously.

She lifted her tear-stained eyes to his and mutely bowed her head.

"Surely there may be—there must be," he went on in strained, hoarse accents—"there will be something saved from the wreck?"

"Nothing!" she repeated in a dull, hopeless monotone. "He is irretrievably ruined. All, all is lost."

For a few moments blank silence reigned.

"Gertrude," he at length said, and as he spoke the look of indecision gradually faded from his brow, while a fuller volume of sound inflated his trembling voice, "do not say all is lost. Has he not you, his only child, left to him? Yes, my precious, my only love! Your duty is clear and unmistakable. Your whole life must be devoted—aye, sacrificed if necessary to the author of your being—the father who in the time of his wealth and power denied you nothing, who surrounded you with every luxury money could purchase and made your life a gem-bespangled dream of flowers. Yes, Gertrude, we must part, and forever! I give you back your freedom now—at once! Heart-broken, crushed and wretched as it leaves me, I yet consent to carry this great grief with me to the grave; for what are my petty claims compared to his lifelong ones? Nay!"—seeing she was about to speak—"do not unman me; do not praise me for my nobility of soul; think of me simply as part of your sacrifice at the holy shrine of filial duty! Farewell!"

And ere her blurred vision grew clear he was out in the street—running rapidly over in his mind the names of other heiresses he knew, and the likelihood of any one of them consenting to heal his seared and broken heart with the golden salve of matrimony.—"Amy Sloper's Half-Holiday."

True Love.

An American lady has risen to defend the national dignity by asserting that her countrywomen do not marry European noblemen for their titles alone. It seems that the European is more skilled in the art of making love, and the titles become only one of the many attractions that endear him to the wealthy heiress. There is probably a good deal to be said in favor of this point. In a land where a man's social status is almost entirely governed by his bank account, the universal grab for dollars occupies all the available leisure of the average Yankee, and he hasn't the time to waste on a mere girl who may refuse him after two or three months' courting, and a sacrifice of precious moments that might have been used in beating a brother man out of a quarter's salary.

Can it Be?

The two Russian belles are discussing their mutual friends.

"And there is Rosiekoff Dimitriskewatchiskebooliskevitch," says the first girl. "I think she is such a sweet thing! And don't you think her name is beautiful?"

"Oh, yes," concedes the second. "But I have heard—now don't you whisper this to a soul—I have heard that her name isn't all her own."

"Mercy! What do you mean?"

"It is hinted that she wears an artificial skevitch."

Kind fates preserve us! If the ladies in other parts of the world begin amplifying their names as they do their hair we never shall know whether a lady is really possessed of the aristocratic cognomen engraved upon her cards, or is simply a plain Smith, Jones or Brown.
