Ella and Dumphree

Two Hardy Mountain Properties Acquired by Boston Capitalists.

The Shaft on the Hesperus Group Has Reached a Depth of Sixty Feet, and the Bottom Is in Solid Ore.

Important mining deals still continue to be made in the vicinity of Grand Forks. In the early part of the week the Ella fraction and the Dumphree, two promising properties owned by Joe Gruno, and situated on Hardy mountain southeast of the Betts and Hesperus group, was acquired by Boston capitalists, who are also interested in other mining properties in the Boundary.

The terms of the agreement call for the immediate development of the claims, which will be done by putting a force of men to work without delay.

The surface showing on these Hardy mountain properties is excellent, and it is thought the same lead which was struck on the Hesperous group will be encountered on the Ella fraction and the Dumphree. For private reasons the conslderation is not made public, but it is presumed that the price was a good one.

* * *

On the Betts and Hesperus group the shaft is down to a depth of 60 feet, and the bottom of the shaft is in solid ore. Very little doubt is entertained as to the ultimate outcome of the property. It is practically assured that with further development a good paying mine will be opened up.

SUNSET SAUNTERINGS

The Cosgrove family will give one of their delightful concerts in the Biden opera house next Thursday evening, December 3rd. After the completion of the musical program the hall will be cleared and a ball will be given, which, from presient indications, promises to be the social event of the season. In order to induce the Cosgrove family to come to this city, a certain amount had to be guaranteed them, and Dr. C. M. Kingston, A. L. Clements, I. A. Dinsmore and D. D. Munro went sureties for this amount. The entire proceeds over and above this sum will go towards the building a skating and curling rink combined. This is a worthy object, and should have the hearty support of every citizen of Grand Forks. No heathier or better recreation can be indulged in than skating and curling, and it is to be hoped that the gentlemen who have interested themselves in the matter of raising funds for a rink will be successful. The Cosgrove company put up a good entertainment, and they are highly spoken of by the press wherever they have appeared. They should be greeted by a full house.

A recent issue of the Strathcona Plaindealer brings this news of a former Grand Forks business man: Mr. F. J. White, who is about to open a jewelry store at Fort Saskatchewan, met with a serious misfortune yesterday forenoon. His household effects arrived recently at Strathcona and he had come up from the Fort with a team and wagon to transport them to his new location. As he descended the first dip of the hill toward the bridge something went wrong with the harness and the load pitched over into the ravine. Mr. White jumped for his life, and being a man of 200 pounds weight, he came upon his feet very heavily, spraining one ankle very badly, injuring the other one, also his hip and shoulder and bruising his face badly. The load fell on the horses, but fortunately their injuries are not serious. Dr. McIntyre chanced to be driving past at the time and proved the good Samaritan. He took the unfortunate man to the hospital and dressed his wounds. The goods, which included a fine piano and other valuable furniture, were turned over to the Edmonton Cartage company to be cared for. Mr. White will not soon forget his painful pioneer experience in northern Alberta.

Grand Forks will be well represented in the new town of Coleman, Alta. Messrs. N. McLellan and Jeff Davis, who recently formed a partnership to open up in the general merchandise business in the latter place, have taken W. J. Morrison, late lumber merchant of this city, into the firm. Before coming west Mr. Morrison was engaged in the general merchandise business in the province of Quebec, where was very successful. He is a valuable acquisition to the firm, as he has full knowledge of all branches of the business to be carried on by them, and will assume the entire management of the Coleman branch. All three are well known business men of this place, and there is no doubt that under the able management of Mr. Morrison their business venture will be a success. The name of the new firm will be Davis, McLellan & Morrison.

Chas. Cusson, proprietor of the Queen's hotel, will leave next week for Winnipeg, where his wife is visiting. This will be his first visit to his former home since he left some six years ago, and he may decide to locate there, as he has good chance to open up in the hotel business. The Queen's will be run by his partner, Mr. Duford, during his absence. He expects to return in about six weeks if he does not remain in the prairie metropolis. Charlie's many friends would regret to see him leave the city, as he is an old timer and is well and favorably known.

The farewell reception tendered to Rev. Dr. Wright in Nelson on the occasion of his resigning the pastorate of St. Paul's Presbyterian church was largely attended not only by members of his own congregatiun, but also by delegations from all the other city churches, says the News. On the platform besides Dr. Wright were the Rev. F. H. Graham, the Rev. W. W. Baer, the Rev. E. H H. Holman, and the Rev. H. Walker. After an interesting musical program, a purse of $100 in gold was presented to Dr. Wright by Mrs. D. McKay, in the name of the Ladies' Aid of the church. Each of the clergymen present made a short speech expressing his appreciation of the retiring pastor's work in the city, and regret that he was leaving. After this refreshments were served by the ladies.

The case of Mathen Miller vs. G. W. Averill was up for hearing before Judge Leamy last Wednesday at the court house. Miller sued Averill for grading done around the latter's house in 1900. Plaintiff sued to recover $5 per day cash and $2 per day in Sunset shares at 15 cents per share. Defendant claimed the agreement with Miller was for payment of $125 cash and balance in Sunset shares at 15 cents. The total amount of work performed amounted to some $325. Judgment was reserved. J. D. Spence for plaintiff; L. P. Eckstein and E. Miller for defendant.

We have it on good authority that negotiations are under way for a performance in our city, about the middle of December, of that pleasing musical organization, the Schubert Symphony Club and Lady Quartette of Chicago. Many of our readers have heard this popular company, and no doubt everyone knows of the high favor in which its eight years of success has placed it The great variety and popular character of this company's program has endeared it to the hearts of American music-lovers, until today it stands undoubtedly first in their affections. Their new program is said to be the best ever presented, and no doubt their house will be large here if they are secured for an entertainment.

Rev. J. F. Betts will conduct services in the Methodist church next Sunday, morning and evening, at the usual hours. Subject for morning sermon, "The Sabbath and the Sanctuary." At the evening service his subject will be, "Know Thyself," being the fifth of a series of Sunday evening sermons on "The Soul, and Some of the Laws by Which it is Governed."

The medals for the Strathcona football team, who won the championship of Alberta at Red Deer in September, have arrived and are now on exhibition in J. R. Wright's jewelry window, says the Strathcona Plaindealer. They are solid gold about the size of a ten cent piece, fitted with rings so they can be worn as watch charms. They are beautifully engraved, having an inscription commemorative of the event on one side and the initials of the players on the other side.

At both morning and eveding services in Knox church next Sunday Rev. J. R. Robertson will preach on "The Great Missionary Work of the Presbyterian Church in Canada." It is specially desired that all members and adherents of the church should be present.

"The Religious Life of Canada, Past and Present," is the subject of a lecture that Rev. J. R. Robertson, B.A., expects to deliver in Knox church Monday night, Dec. 7th.

Young man, there is now excuse for not buying your best girl a watch, a diamond ring, or some other sweet thing, as A. D. Morrison will put the price within the reach of all.

W. H. P. Clement accompanied his mother last Wednesday as far as Nelson on her journey to Collingwood, Ont., where she has gone to visit her daughter.

A. D. Morrison, the jeweler, started advertising a reduced sale of all goods kept in stock by him in the last issue of THE SUN. Monday, the first day of the sale, he sold more goods than he had the month previous. The moral is obvious. Advertise.

Harold E. Woodland, the popular and enterprising druggist, has purchased the drug business of the Fraser Drug company, and will amalgamate the store with his own.

Mrs. Pentreath, wife of Archdeacon Pentreath, arrived in the city yesterday, and is a guest of her niece, Mrs. H. C. Hannington. The archheacon will arrive in the city on Saturday, and will conduct services in Holy Trinity church on Sunday, morning and evening.

The framework of the new C.P.R. roundhouse is up, and the work of covering it in will commence today.

R. A. Brown, of Volcanic fame, returned this week from a hunting and trapping expedition up the North Fork. He brought back with him three deer and sixteen beavers.

Superintendent Busteed, of the Nelson-Midway division of the C. P. R., with headquarters at Nelson, made a trip of inspection over his division this week. His official car was attached to Tuesday's westbound express.

Thos. Denton, an Eholt contractor, has been engaged by the C.P.R. to construct the roundhouse at this point. He will commence work at once. The railway company will employ about sixty men on their yard improvements.

Rev. J. R. and Mrs. Robertson entertained some sixty members of their congregation to an "at home" Wednesday evening. A pleasant time was spent. Games, songs and music were indulged in until well on in the evening, when refreshments were served, and the happy gathering, after voting Mr. and Mrs. Robertson the best of entertainers, dispersed to their homes.

John Donaldson has received over 3000 pounds of candies in the last three consignments, and is fully prepared to meet the demands of a heavy Christmas trade.

An incipient blaze in Capt. Disbrowe's residence gave the upper town fire boys a little foot race the other night. Cap had subdued the flames before they arrived.

Granby Dividend

$133,630 Will Be Paid to Shareholders on December 16th.

The Contract With Boyles Bros. for Drilling Operations on the Volcanic Has Been Signed, and Work Will Be Commenced in a Few Days.

A special dispatch from Montreal last Tuesday evening stated that the Granby Consolidated company had notified the shareholders that those on record on the 1st of December will receive a dividend of 1 per cent, payable December 16th. This is the first participation of the shareholders in the earnings of the company, which were $2,271,252 gross for the year ending June 30th, and $296,-298 net. Of the latter the shareholders get $133,630. Some time since it was announced that dividends would hereafter be paid by the Granby company at the rate of 4 per cent on the par value of the shares—$10, and 10 per cent on the present selling price of the shares, $4.

This week Mr. W. A. Harkin, on behalf of the Volcanic Mining & Developing company, signed the contract with Boyles Bros., of Spokane, for the diamond drills, and it is expected they will arrive in the city tomorrow, and in the course of a couple of days the work of drilling the first 2000 feet, as per contract, will be commenced. The creditors having claims against the Volcanic will be paid off tomorrow or Monday, as the funds will arrive today. In the course of a week or two the Volcanic property will be a regular beehive of activity, and, if everything moves along as anticipated, next spring will see a large force of men at work and a flourishing mine established.

SOME of the prominent business men of the city say that it does not pay them to advertise in the local papers. If the local papers were to insert all the advertisements sent them from eastern departmental stores, these merchants would find their profits going east, and they would soon be registering a kick with the newspaper men for diverting trade from them. And yet they refuse to advertise themselves! Come, get into the game. Let the people know you are alive.

PEOPLE well informed on the railway situation believe that the $7,000,000 in Great Northern securities recently placed on the New York market are to be used for the extension of the system. Mr. Hill on several occasions lately has stated that the only important extension the Great Northern had in immediate contemplation was the construction of the V., V. & E. railway from the Kootenays to the coast. In this section, especially, the belief is very strong that the money is intended for no other purpose than the extension of the V.; V. & E., and many are certain that grading will be commenced early in the spring. When the road is constructed it will open up one of the richest mining, agricultural, grazing and timbering sections of the province. The building of the road should be followed by one of the liveliest booms that the province has yet experienced, as there are opportunities for many profitable enterprises in the Okanagan and Similkameen sections.

SUNSET SIGNALS

A Mouse Mill.

Thrift is generally acknowledged to be one of the leading characteristics of the natives of Fifeshire, and it never was more forcibly exemplified than in the person of David Hatton, a native of Dunfermline, who actually proved that even mice those acknowledged pests of mankind, could be made not only to earn their own living, but also to yield a respectable income to their owners, says the "Scotsman"

About the year 1820 this gentleman actually erected a small mill at Dunfermline for the manufacture of thread—a mill worked entirely by mice. It was while visiting Perth prison in 1812 that Mr. Hatton first conceived this remarkable idea of utilizing mouse power. In an old pamphlet of the time, "The Curiosity Coffee Room," he gave an account of the way in which the idea dawned on him.

"In the summer of the year 1812," he wrote, "I had occasion to be in Perth, and when inspecting the toys and trinkets that were manufactured by the French prisoners in the depot there my attention was involuntarily attracted by a little toy house with a wheel in the gable of it that was running rapidly round, impelled by the insignificant gravity of a common house mouse. For a shilling I purchased houses mouse and wheel. Inclosing it in a handkerchief, on my journey homeward I was compelled to contemplate its favorite amusement. But how to apply half-ounce power, which is the weight of a mouse, to a useful purpose was the difficulty. At length the manufacturing of sewing thread seemed the most practicable."

Mr. Hatton had one mouse that ran the amazing distance of eighteen miles a day, but he proved that an ordinary mouse could run ten and one-half miles on an average. A halfpenny's worth of oatmeal was sufficient for its support for thirty-five days during which it ran 736 half miles. He had actually two mice constantly employed in the making of sewing thread for more than a year. The mouse threadmill was so constructed that the common house mouse was enabled to make atonement to society for past offences by twisting, twining, and reeling from 100 to 120 threads a day. Sundays not excepted.

To perform this task the little pedestrian had to run ten and one-half miles, and this journey it performed with ease every day. A halfpenny's worth of oatmeal served one of these threadmill gulprits for the long period of five weeks. In that time it made 3,350 threads of twenty-five inches, and as a penny was paid to women for every hank made in the ordinary way the mouse, at that rate, earned 9 pence every six weeks just one farthing a day, or 7 shillings and 6 pence a year. Taking 6 pence off for board and allowing 1 shilling for machinery, there was clear yearly profit from each mouse of 6 shillings.

Mr. Hatton firmly intended to apply for the loan of the old empty cathedral in Dunfermline, which would have held he calculated, ten thousand mouse mills sufficient room being left for keepers and some hundreds of spectators. Death however, overtook the inventor before his marvelous project could be carried out.

"The missus can't see you, sir; she's expecting company." "Go back and say that I have a valuable present for her—something brand-new. And by the way, mention my name again—Stork." "Oh, Stork, is it? Sure you're the very party she's expecting."—"Town Topics."

Pallette—You'd be surprised if you knew the amount of time spent on that canvas. Pellette—Yes; I understand men have stood in front of it for hours trying to make out what it is.—Yonkers "Statesman."

"I understand your son has decided to go in for literature." "Yes, and he's made a splendid start already." "You don't say?" "Yes; he went to auction this morning and bought a second-hand writing-desk for only four dollars and ninety-eight cents."—"Catholic Standard and Times."

PUBLICITY

Strength in the ad puts strength in the business.

The time to advertise is when you need customers and are prepared to serve them.

An advertisement should be a simple, straightforward statement, easily read, easily comprehended, and conspicuously placed.

Every business has some good points. These points, if constantly advertised, will bring business.

As a tree is known by its fruits and as a man is judged by his conduct, so an advertiser is measured and placed by the text matter of his advertisements.

A Matrimonial Entanglement.

In "Chapters From My Diplomatic Life," which Andrew D. White, the United States diplomatist, is contributing to "The Century Illustrated Magazine," there occurs an interesting reminiscence regarding the working of the German marriage laws:—

"One morning a man came rushing in exclaiming: 'Mr. Minister, I am in the worst fix that any decent man was ever in. I want you to help me out of it;' and he then went on with a bitter tirade against everybody and everything in the German Empire.

"When his wrath had effervesced somewhat he stated his case as follows:—'Last year while travelling through Germany I fell in love with a young German lady, and after my return to America became engaged to her. I have now come for my bride. The wedding is fixed for next Thursday; our steamer passages are taken a day or two later, and I find that the authorities will not allow me to marry unless I present a multitude of papers such as I never dreamed of! Some of them it will take months to get, and some I can never get. My intended bride is in distress; her family evidently distrust me; the wedding is postponed indefinitely; and my business partner is cabling me to come back to America as soon as possible. I am asked for a baptismal certificate—a Taufschein. Now, so far as I know, I was never baptised. I am required to present a certificate showing the consent of my parents to my marriage—I, a man thirty years old, and in a large business of my own! I am asked to give bonds for the payment of my debts in Germany. I owe no such debts; but I know no one who will give such a bond. I am notified that the banns must be published a certain number of times before the wedding. What kind of a country is this, anyhow?'

"We did the best we could. In an interview with the Minister of Public Worship I was able to secure a dispensation from the publishing of the banns; then a bond was drawn up, which I signed, and thus settled the question regarding possible debts in Germany. As to the baptismal certificate, I ordered inscribed, on the largest possible sheet of official paper, the gentleman's affidavit that in the State of Ohio where he was born no Taufschein, or baptismal certificate, was required at the time of his birth, and to this was affixed with plenty of wax the largest seal of the Legation. The form of the affidavit may be judged peculiar, but it was thought best not to startle the authorities with the admission that the man had not been baptised at all. They could easily believe that a State like Ohio, which some of them doubtless regarded as still in the back woods and mainly tenanted by the aborigines, might have omitted in days gone by to require a Taufschein, but that an unbaptised Christian should offer himself to be married in Germany would perhaps have so paralyzed their powers of belief that permission for the marriage might never have been secured.

"In this and various other ways we overcame the difficulties, and though the wedding did not take place upon the appointed day, and the return to America had to be deferred, the couple at last after marriage first before the public authorities and then in church, were able to depart in peace."

The Blighting of His Fame.

"Ruined!" he cried, as he dashed a paper to the floor and trampled upon it. "Ruined, disgraced! My fair fame blasted! My honor gone!"

"Dearest, what disaster is this?" I was his fond wife who gasped the question, in tones of anguish.

"A disaster which is irretrievable; a calamity which will crush me to the earth!" He ran his white, thin fingers through his luxuriant crop of long and inky hair, black as the raven's wing, a ten-and-a-half the bottle of black, warranted to defy detection—not a dye, not a stain, but a harmless liquid that merely has to be combed into the hair (Vide advt.).

"Heavens, Horatio, tell me what has befallen thee!" The fair girl turned her horror-full eyes upon him. Her young soul, aged thirty-eight, shared his agony.

"Felicia," he cried, "do I look like a humorist?"

"The fates forefend!"

"Do I strike you at all as being a funny man?"

"Anything but that!" she shuddered.

"Am I not known as a serious thinker?"

"You are," she admitted.

"Do I not paint the serious side of life?"

"You do," she interjected.

"Am I not a novelist of grave and serious endeavor?"

"You am," she whispered.

"Does not my fame depend on my reputation as a man that abhors a jest as a writer who revels in the darkness of despair and the greyness of existence?"

"It doth!" she moaned.

"Then listen to this," he faltered. "These are the words that should have wound up the 'Fourpenny Monthly':—'As the light flickered out, she bent her queenly head and kissed him in the dark!'"

"Beautiful!" she ejaculated, enraptured.

"Yes, but listen to what the printer has made of it—'She bent her queenly head and kissed him on the beak!'"

"Oh, Horatio!" she murmured, and swooned.

"The horror of it!" he wildly cried. "The public will take me for a new humorist!"—"Ally Sloper's Half-Holiday."

Up to Him.

"Edward," asked Genevieve Zoremus, "do you think a girl should propose?"

"Why, no, indeed! It is beneath woman's dignity."

"There, now!" said the gentle girl; "I told mamma she was wrong. She said that when a young man came to see a girl every night in the week for two years, and stayed for dinner every Sunday, and smoked her father's cigars, and always happened around whenever we had any company, so he would be invited to go to the theater with us, it was the girl's privilege to take it for granted that he was sincere in his attentions and ask him whether he preferred a wedding-trip, or would rather just settle down to home life in a neat little cottage."

Edward knew a hint when a brick wall was shoved over on him.—"Judge."

A Unique Luncheon.

The Paris correspondent of the "Pall Mall Gazette" recently attended a luncheon given by M. Dessing-Whitmore, which was distinctly original. The table, he says, took the form of a boat, and the waiters were dressed as sailors. There was a distinctly nautical flavor about the whole thing, and during the hors d'ouvres and dessert a sailor's chorus was sung. Not being a particularly good sailor, the perpetual motion of the table—which, it appears, took some time to get in working order—was not for me the most enjoyable sensation of the occasion. I was able, however, to appreciate the dexterity with which it had been planned, as not an article ever rolled—or even attempted to roll—off the table. To make the scene more realistic a canvas was hung on the walls, on which was painted a somewhat rough sea. The guests numbered twenty-four, and each was presented with a small compass.

Their Great Sorrow.

"I am so worried about baby," says the fond young mother to the proud young father. "What's the matter? He isn't sick, is he?" asked the husband, with some natural alarm showing itself on his countenance. "No, but he is beginning to talk, and——" "And what? Does he have an impediment in his speech?" "No. Worse than that. He says things that don't sound any more sensible than the choruses to the popular songs!" That night, with strained, tearless eyes, a man and woman sat by a little crib, wondering why this great sorrow should come upon them.—Chicago "Tribune."

Poet (with emotion)—All people seem to scorn my poetry—but I suppose when I die everyone will go into raptures. Editor—Oh, yes!—at least, all the editors will, I should think.

Von Quizz—What does your friend write? Verse? Novels? Tragedies? H. Kashe—Great Scott, what do you take him for? An amateur? No, sir! He writes advertisements, of course!—New Orleans "Times-Democrat."

Ascum—How are the plans for your new house coming along? Subbubs—Splendidly. My wife has finally laid out all the closets she wants, and now all the architect's got to do is to build the house around them. — Philadelphia "Press."

GOOD SERVICE is composed of two elements—excellence of the work and promptness in the execution. Bad work executed promptly is not good service—good work delivered behind time is not good service; but the two combine to make one of the most necessary, but hardest to obtain and often most expensive, requirements of the twentieth century business man. That we have learned the lesson in theory we have shown. Our customers will testify that we have also learned it in practice.
