THE NAKUSP TRAGEDY

Finding of Coroner's Jury

Rose Committed for Trial.

The coroner's inquest held by Dr. Cross at Nakusp resulted in a verdict that Henry Cole met his death at the hands of Henry Rose. Rose made a statement at the inquest to the effect that he had left Cole and Demars at the spot where the tragedy took place, went on with the boat, intending to go to his farm further south on the lake, that he heard cries of "murder," and on looking round saw Demars gesticulating. He returned and Demars told him two men had come of mountains, killed Cole and attacked him.

On Saturday afternoon at the Central Hotel, before [illegible] Fraser, S.M., and R. Gordon, J.P., Henry Rose was charged with killing Henry Cole.

Constable Upper conducted the prosecution and prisoner was defended by J. M. Scott.

Walter Scott, of Nakusp, described prisoner coming to him Wednesday night and telling him Cole was dead and Demars nearly so. Left at 9 p.m. for scene with F. Bogardus, L. Simmons, and Christie. Found Cole dead, with blood flowing from nose and mouth. Found Demars in unconscious condition with wound on head from which blood flowed. There was blood all over place, more particularly on a cedar log. Put Demars in boat and returned to Nakusp about 3 a.m. Demars came to consciousness in boat. Sent two men to take charge of Cole's body. Cole was about 32 years old. Saw two landing marks of boat. The men had whisky before they left. Demars called on him before leaving, and stated he was going to Rose's ranch and back to St. Leon. There were two bottles in Rose's boat. Arrested Rose on suspicion. Produced stick with blood marks with which injuries probably inflicted.

Nels Demars, who appeared in court with his head tied up, face much disfigured from injuries received, and in a weak condition, said he resided nine miles below Nakusp. Was in district in 1863, and resided there since 1894. Knew Cole eight years and prisoner a year. Had no difference with prisoner to speak of except when drinking. Met prisoner at 9 a.m. on 4th at Nakusp. Rose invited him to his ranch to see his crops, promising to bring him back next morning to go to St. Leon. Left with Cole and prisoner in boat about 1.30. Going down, words took place between Cole and prisoner. Was steering and being afraid the men might clinch and upset boat, and also on account of high wind, ran boat ashore. Could not say who started quarrel. Was getting boat out of surf when saw Cole and Rose running side by side in sleeping position between cedar logs. Could not say which was chasing other. Called out "It's strange you can't drink without getting in a mess. Quit that." Intended remark for Roses. Rose came to me and said "Are you going to take Cole's part, you old ——?" He caught me by neck but I managed to break loose, but tripped and fell. Rose kick on back [illegible] on head with piece of edging which knocked me unconscious. On recovering senses felt fire as felt cold, when Rose came and kicked fire out. Got another blow and remembered no more till in boat.

Dr. Carruthers gave evidence of post mortem examination, from which it appeared the lower jaw of deceased was broken in two places by a blow, chin badly cut, neck badly bruised. Both lungs and brain were congested from effect of injuries, which might be caused by weapon produced. Either injury was sufficient to cause death. The injury to throat appeared as if it might have been done by garrotting.

Demars, having been given a rest, was recalled, and in reply to J. M. Scott said they had four bottles of whisky. A bottle was twice produced while they were in the boat but witness did not drink any. Cole offered to spell Rose at the oars as he said Rose had been rowing long enough. Rose's ranch is six or seven miles from Nakusp. When sober there was no better man than Rose, but when he took liquor he became crazy. Cole was a powerful man and in a fair battle would be able to hold his own with Rose.

To the Bench: Am 78 years of age.

Dr. McLean, who attended the post mortem on behalf of defence, said he agreed with facts as narrated by Dr. Carruthers but not with his conclusions.

Accused was then committed for trial.

Same evening Rose was charged with assault on Nels Demars with intent to kill. The evidence was similar to former case and accused was committed on this charge also.

NEW BUILDINGS.

The hospital has been completed and is a credit to the city. It is from designs by Dalton & Eveleigh, architects, of Vancouver. It covers a space of 32 feet by 54 feet. On basement are the kitchen 13 ft. by 20 ft., dining room 13 ft. by 20 ft., dispensary 12 ft. by 13 ft., store room 13 ft. by 12 ft., furnace with fuel room 10 ft. by 13 ft. The first floor contains the general ward 18 ft. by 20 ft., and which will have six beds. The operating room is 12 ft. by 14 ft., antiseptic room 10 ft. by 14 feet, office 12 ft. by 14 ft., two private wards 11 ft. by 16 ft., bath room fitted with enamelled steel bath and lavatory 10 ft. square, linen closet 10 feet square, fitted with shelves.

THE HOSPITAL.

The operating room is splendidly lighted, and the corners rounded to enable it to be thoroughly cleansed.

On the second floor are seven private wards, bath room and lavatories. On the third floor are seven rooms intended for the accommodation of the staff of the hospital.

The staircases are commodious. The building is plastered throughout, and the various rooms well lighted. The steam heat system has been adopted, with radiators in each room. A Spence boiler is installed. Electric bells and speaking tubes are provided, and a lift from the kitchen to the different floors. The stone and brick work was done by E. C. Fromey; the plumbing by R. Gordon; the steam heating by E. Moscrop; the painting by McKenzie & Ramsay; the plastering by J. McLean; Messrs. Foote & Abrahamson were the contractors for the building, and have turned out their work most creditably. The building was finally passed by the architects on Monday. Miss McLeod, chief of the Victoria Order of Nurses, who inspected the building on her recent visit, expressed herself well pleased with the design and accommodation afforded.

The cost of the building is about $12,000, and, with the uncollected subscriptions, and a further grant from the Government of $2,000, the building would be paid for. The Government have already given $4,000, the subscriptions of Revelstoke and district amounted to $5,000, and the Victoria Order of Nurses gave $1,500.

It is the intention of the committee to arrange for the opening ceremonies on Coronation day. Too much praise cannot be accorded the committee for the whole-souled way in which they have carried out the scheme to provide an hospital for the city, and especially to the secretary-treasurer, B. R. Atkins, who has had heavy duties and has fulfilled them well.

A. McRAE'S RESIDENCE.

Probably the most complete residence in the city is that just completed for A. McRae, postmaster. The building is on a pretty site overlooking the river, and is surrounded by a nicely laid out plot 150 ft. by 200 ft. The building includes a hall 8 ft. by 14 ft.; drawing room, 14 ft. by 18 ft.; dining room 16 ft. by 20 ft.; with sliding doors separating the two rooms; private office 10 ft. by 14 ft.; kitchen 16 ft. by 20 ft. with sink and cold and hot water laid on; and pantry. On the upper floor are three bed rooms, respectively 16 ft. square, 11 ft. by 13 ft., and 10 ft. by 12 ft.; also bath room fitted with steel bath, wash-stand, and low down flush closet, of the best design.

There are double wardrobes to the bed rooms. There is a good cellar, a verandah round the house and bay windows to drawing and dining rooms. The house is heated by a Gurney furnace, and is plastered throughout. A complete sewage system connects with the river. Around the dwelling is a wire fence 1 ft. by 24 ft.; a hen house 10 ft. by 12 ft.; and a poultry yard enclosed with wire netting.

The plumbing was done by E. Moscrop, and the plastering by J. McLean. The contract was seen well carried out by Messrs. Foote & Abrahamson.

Makes Maiden Trip to Big Bend.

S.S. Revelstoke made her maiden trip to Big Bend on Sunday. Arriving from Nakusp early Saturday she loaded ten tons of freight and went that day to the head of the canyon, going through in twenty minutes, a line only being required once to get her through the big riffle. On Sunday at 5 a.m. a start was made for La Forte, which was reached at 10.45, and the steamer was run right to Priest Rapids. Capt. Forsland thinks so highly of the steamer's qualities that he believes she could make the rapids. The boat was rough back to Eight Mile that evening, making the run from Loyds, of 31 miles, in two hours, including two landings. Capts. Gore and Forsland had charge of her on her maiden trip to the Bend. The following crew have been appointed for the season: Capt. Forsland, Engineer Colbeck, purser and mate R. W. Troup, Fireman H. W. Woolock, four deck hands, cook and waiter. The following comprised the passenger list on the first trip: R. W. Howson, H. Gaynor, D. McCarthy, J. Guiletto, J. C. Farelli, W. Whitmore, and two others. J. C. Montgomery, A. McIntosh, and others were on the return trip.

It will be good news to the citizens to learn that whenever the state of water will admit the steamer will be run to and from the city. She will leave Eight Mile during high water on Tuesdays and Fridays.

FRIDAY, JUNE 13, 1902.

CHINESE LAUNDRIES.

The action taken at the meeting of the city council on Friday to regulate Chinese laundries will meet with the hearty support of the citizens. Since the establishment of these laundries on First street there has been a tendency to increase the number, with the result that a deterioration of property results in that vicinity, and citizens who go to the expense of building nice homes have their efforts to some extent frustrated by undesirable neighbours. The best plan would appear to be to fix a limit within which such laundries shall be conducted, so that they can all be placed together in some part of the city where they will not interfere with the property or health of the citizens generally.

A BAD SCHEME.

A mischievous bill before the Legislature is that authorising the C.P.R. to select lands in Yale and Kootenay for the construction of the Boundary railway, and it is reported the lands specially in view are the coal and oil lands. A gross public wrong was committed some years ago in allowing the C.P.R. to select lands south of Golden and in the Windermere district for the construction of the Robson railway. The effect of this has been to rob that section of lands which would have been an inducement to a company to build a railway through the Columbia valley, and open up the country lying between Windermere and Golden. If the bill were passed as drawn, South Kootenay and Yale would be under the same injustice from which North East Kootenay now suffers.

PROVINCIAL PROGRESSIVE PARTY.

An element that will have considerable influence in the next elections is the Provincial Progressive party, organised as the result of the recent convention at Kamloops. We have before us a copy of the manifesto just issued by the executive. Reference is made to the state of chaos now existing in Provincial politics, and an awakening urged. The manifesto goes on to say:—"Our immediate aim shall be to exercise a wholesome influence in public affairs and to secure the election of a substantial party of candidates in the next Provincial election, to represent the reform interests in the Legislative Assembly of our Province." Organisations approving the platform are urged to organise a Progressive party club in each community, these clubs in turn to organise a district association. A levy of 20 cents per member is proposed to pay the expenses of the executive.

THE MINING INDUSTRY.

When the mining industry of the Province was flourishing it became fair game for taxation. Now that conditions are reversed the industry stands burdened with the load of years of aggressive taxation, till it is difficult to obtain that relief which should be given with a view to re-stimulating that which is the backbone of the country, and on the success of which all else depends.

In 1897 there were boom times, and all sorts of fake schemes were started. A cry arose to stop these fakes, and one form which the agitation took was the imposition of heavy charges for incorporating companies, placing it beyond the means of small men to organize companies for the purposes even of development. Then, in addition the company license fee was put up to $100. Two years later the industry received another knock by the doubling of the cost of crown granting mineral claims. Next year followed the two per cent. ore tax. We admit that producing mines should pay taxation, but the tax should only be levied on net returns after paying all expenses. Instead of that, the mineral tax, as we have it, is really a tax on labor, as wages spent on mining are taxed under the law, and in levying the tax the grade of ore is not taken into consideration, with the result the low grade mines are much more heavily taxed in proportion than the high grade mines. The fees for crown granting were again more than doubled. Besides these features of oppressive legislation there are many vexatious side issues. Indeed it looks as if our legislators were trying to kill the mining industry altogether. If any other industry were treated in the same way it would be killed outright. We trust the time has come when the true value of the mineral industry will be recognised and when the legislature will retrace its steps to some extent and endeavor to remedy the erroneous features of the burdens which mining has to bear.

CITY COUNCIL.

Ordinary meeting held Friday. All present.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A. F. Lundell, protesting against letting portion of sidewalks in upper part of town to J. McCallum, as the writer had not received his fair share. Ald Taylor, as chairman of Works Committee, stated reason for letting work as they did meant a saving to the city of $200. Ald. Manning objected to the committee over-riding the resolution of the council, and he and Ald. Hume said the intention of the council was to divide the work equally amongst the three, as McCallum's tender was considered too low. The Mayor, Ald. McLeod and McMahon supported the action of the works committee, the Mayor remarking the other contractors were getting nearly the amount of work asked for and a cent a foot more than McCallum. Ald. Manning offered to put up a bond to do whole work for 5½c. foot. Ald. McLeod suggested re-apportioning the work. The Mayor: Ald. McLeod, are you willing to pay $100 more than necessary in order to divide it between two men? Ald. McLeod: No. Ald. Manning characterised the action of the committee as mean. The Mayor said it was simply a matter of doing what was right in the interest of the ratepayers. The matter then dropped.

Stimson & Co., Toronto, re bonds for $7,000 loan. Resolved, that debentures be placed under offer to Molsons Bank.

Ald. McLeod strongly urged removing laundries from residence portion of city.

Ald. Hume agreed.

Ald. Manning considered these gambling dens and opium smoking houses should be looked after by police.

The Mayor appointed committee, consisting of Ald. McLeod, Hume and Manning to confer with Chinese and report at next meeting.

The fire, water and light committee were instructed to arrange for a caretaker of the fire alarm system.

Ald. Manning considered the order for police clothing should be divided.

Ald. Taylor said J. E. Long wanted road to Kootenay brewery fixed.

The Mayor reported that R. Tapping had made safe the opera house and timber sheds; also that he did not proclaim a holiday at peace proclamation on account of the funeral that day.

Accounts having been passed for payment the council adjourned.

A CITY OBSERVATORY

Where Star-Gazers Meet.

It is not generally known that Revelstoke has in its midst an expert astronomer and an observatory. On Third street may be seen a curious looking building, belonging to R. R. Copeland, who is a machinist at the C.P.R. shops. Mr. Copeland is a son of the Astronomer-Royal of Scotland, and has inherited a taste for one of the grandest of the sciences, having, as a boy, worked and played in his father's observatory at Edinburgh—one of the finest observatories in the world. Well, Mr. Copeland brought his instinct with him to Canada, and on his being moved from Donald to Revelstoke he erected an observatory wherein to pursue his favorite study.

Mr. Copeland owns a telescope, once the property of Prof. Nicholls, of Glasgow, Scotland, a famous man in his day. With this instrument in the summer evenings Mr. Copeland watches the movements of the stars or initiates a friend into the mystic art. The observatory is fitted to revolve with the movement of the earth being carried on runners travelling on an iron rail. A portion of the delicate mounting of the instrument is Mr. Copeland's own handiwork.

Then You'll Think of Mother.

When her weary hands shall rest,
Folded on her quite breast,
Then you'll think of mother.
How in work those hands once moved
For the children that she loved,
Then you'll think of mother.

When her eyes shall close in sleep
From which they'll never wake to weep
Then you'll think of mother.
Oh, the vigils they have kept,
In the night while others slept—
Those love-lit eyes of mother!

When her tongue shall silent be,
Read no more, nor sing for thee,
Then you'll think of mother.
Then your aching heart will long
For the counsel, prayer and song
From the tongue of mother.

When the lips shall part no more
With the dear, sweet smile of yore—
Then you'll think of mother.
You will not forget the kiss
Which thrilled your childish heart with bliss,
Pressed to yours by lips of mother.

Years will pass—they're fleeting now—
Bring no shadow to her brow,
But kindly think of mother;
Help her often as you may,
Life with her is such brief day,
Your life on earth with mother.

Wait not till her soul at last
To the home above has passed,
But show your love to mother,
Cheer her while on earth she stays
By your loving acts and ways;
Be dutiful to mother.

tween the rocks ba[illegible] ere'

"That pone and pork means a chance, but it's a slim one."

Helen set her lips, Jack turned pale, Ginger showed no emotion whatever, while Buck remarked that he'd be "darned if he didn't plank one of 'em, anyway." As for myself, I was aghast at the terrible fate that threatened those who had so nobly and so bravely risked all in my behalf.

"What brought you here?" I asked, impatiently, of Helen.

"When you were taken from our house I resolved to follow. Buck came in just as I started, and insisted on joining me. We traced you to Colonel Rutland's plantation."—

"I see. It was you I heard coming in after I went up stairs."

"Ginger took the horses to the stable and was returning to the house when he saw two men climb a tree near your window and enter your room. He watched from a distance and saw them bring you out, but he could not tell whether they were taking you away by force or assisting you to escape. Coming into the house, he told us what had happened.

"Jack started to awaken Captain Beaumont, but I stopped her. If you had been assisted to escape, this would be fatal. Besides, from what Jack had told me of the captain, I judged he would have his night's rest before starting in pursuit. I told Jack I would follow you, myself, and she was wild to come with me. Ginger had seen you leave the plantation and knew the direction you had taken. We sent him and Buck ahead, and they soon came near enough to you to hear your horses' hoof beats, then waited for us to come up. Soon after we lost track of you, but hearing something come crashing down the mountain"—

"A stone."

"We followed the direction of the sound. In the early morning Buck and Ginger came upon you unexpectedly. As soon as you had gone they rejoined us. We shadowed you and yesterday afternoon laid a plan for your escape."

"A wild, impracticable scheme. One circumstance has led to another, each involving you more deeply. My God, what a load of obligation! We can't stay here. We'll starve. Buck, couldn't you slip out in the darkness and find help?"

"No, siree; I'm not goin out o' hyar. I'm goin t' stay an fight with the rest."

"But you may save all our lives."

"Why don't you go, Mr. Brandystone?"

"I? I must stay with your sister and cousin. Besides, I'm big and couldn't get through as easily as you."

"Well, I ain't a-goin to sneak away if I am little."

"Bucky," said Jack, "yo' needn't go. I'll go myself."

"Yo' don' do nuthin like dat, Missy Jack," cried Ginger. "Dem grillers shoot yo'! Wha' mars' say if I go back an tell on de apple ob he eye go down 'mong grillers fo' to git shot? I gwine, mars'," he added to me.

But by this time there was more calling among the men below, a streak of light appeared in the east, and I did not dare let any one attempt to evade the enemy. Besides, I could now see by the lay of the land that it would be impossible.

Something must have given the guerrillas an inkling of our whereabouts, for as soon as it was light we could see them standing, looking up at our position. I told every one to lie low, hoping that some of the outlaws would climb up to investigate and we might pick them off. For more than an hour we remained concealed, only speaking in whispers; then we saw the knot of men below divide, three going to the west, three to the east, while three began to climb toward our fortress. One remained below, and as the light increased I saw it was the captain.

We four who were armed with carbines knelt behind the rocks, I to the extreme left, Helen next, then Buck behind the stone we had moved to fill the gap, with Ginger bringing up the right end of the line. I was an excellent shot—I had long been considered one of the best in Tennessee—and it turned out that Helen was not bad. Ginger was no shot at all. I selected the man in advance for my special object, designated the second for Helen and gave Buck the third. They were to fire after me in the order named. Ginger was to fire at any who might be left standing. Jack had only a revolver, and I directed her to keep back. She was trembling, and in order to strengthen her by concentrating her mind on some duty I told her to be ready to hand us the ammunition after the first volley.

I shot my man through the heart.

The guerrillas came on, every man holding a carbine. When they had covered a third of the distance, I saw that Buck was about to fire out of turn, and I was obliged to speak to him somewhat sharply. I think the advancing men heard me, for they stopped and consulted. The captain, standing below, called to them to go on, and, separating so as to leave a dozen yards between each man, skirmish fashion, they started again, watching eagerly for a sight of something to fire at. As they were all abreast, my order for firing would not serve. I gave another.

There was no response. All were too intent on the work before us to speak. I permitted the men to come within a hundred yards, when, taking deliberate aim with the rest, I shot my man through the heart. In another moment Helen's rifle cracked, and the center man dropped. Buck, who was excited, fired wild and missed altogether. Ginger lost his head completely and did not fire at all. As Ginger's courage deserted him Jack's came to her all of a sudden.

"Why don't yo' shoot, Ginger?" she cried, with flashing eyes. Snatching his gun and aiming it at the remaining man, who was rapidly getting down the declivity, she sent him the rest of the way with a limp. Two men were put out of the fight and the third disabled.

"By golly," cried Buck, "we licked 'em, didn't we?"

I thought it best not to discourage him by telling him that this was only a preliminary skirmish, but asked Jack for the ammunition, and we all reloaded.

The wounded man went back to the captain, who appeared greatly agitated over the result. He was evidently surprised at the reception of his searching party. The men who had gone to the flanks, hearing the firing, rejoined their leader, and two men who had been in the rear came forward.

Heaven preserve us! The captain has started up the slope at the head of a storming party of eight men.

I was appalled. We had but four guns and after firing a volley must reload before firing another. We could not expect to disable more than four men at the first fire; then the remaining four would be upon us before we could reload. In quick tones I gave the order:

"All load. I'll fire."

With that I let drive and dropped a man. Then, throwing down my gun I took Helen's and dropped another. Buck handed me his, and I dropped a third.

"By jiminy!" cried Buck, exposing his head to see better. "Ain't yo' a bully shot?" Ping! went a bullet within an inch of his ear, and he ducked.

"Keep down," I cried as the lead rattled against the rocks in front of us, and fired the fourth gun, again hitting my man, though I only "winged" him. Indeed, I believe he dropped to evade the fire. By this time the first gun had been reloaded, and I took aim at the captain. I was sure I hit him, but he came on. Taking the next gun now ready, I fired at him again, but just as I did so one of the men stepped in front of him and received the shot. This finished the assault. The men broke and fled and before I could get another shot were far back toward the position from which they had started.

CHAPTER XIII.

BELEAGUERED.

STRANGE that men will never learn the terrible advantage of a force posted on an impregnable position, protected by breastworks, and able to pour shot down a steep hill at an enemy. Two men, two girls and a boy had defeated the guerrillas and sent them back to their camp. I did not fear another attack. What I dreaded was starvation. Indeed, I could see plainly that our enemies were preparing to carry out the starvation plan. Several of them went in different directions, doubtless for food. One of them passed quite within range.

"I'm goin to plunk that one," said Buck.

I caught his arm, and gave him a reproof which for a while at least caused him to remember that I was in command.

"I wish they'd attack us again," said the irrepressible boy. "I could 'a' hit that doggone butternut if somep'n hadn't joggled my arm."

There had been nothing to joggle the boy's arm, but I thought it best to let him keep up his pride—it would make him more serviceable—so I said nothing.

"I aimed right at the middle of his breast," continued Buck, "but just then he jumped over a stone, an I missed him."

"I thought some one joggled your arm?"

"Some one did. Ginger, yo' consarned old nigger, what d' yo' go joggle me fo' just as I was goin to plunk him?"

"I didn't joggle yo', Mars' Buck."

"Was it you, Hel'n?"

"No."

"Somebody did, or I'd 'a' bit him sho!"

If ever a party needed breakfast, it was ours. Helen unrolled the little parcel of provisions. I directed her to serve a half ration, or, rather, half of what there was and save the rest. She did so, handing me my portion, which I declined, but she argued that it was important for all that I should keep up my strength and finally prevailed on me to eat my share. Jaqueline and Buck ate theirs ravenously. Each of us went to where the water was dripping from the cleft and caught the drops in our mouths. Buck, when he had finished his breakfast, like Oliver Twist, asked for more. It made my heart ache to refuse him, but there was no alternative.

One danger was dwarfed by the greater perils that surrounded us, yet it was no less important. My wound was liable to put me hors de combat at any moment. Fortunately until my dash from the guerrilla camp I had not been subject to any physical strain, and by that time it had healed sufficiently to prevent its opening. At any rate, it gave me no trouble. The first thing Helen asked after a lull in the fighting was about this wound. She insisted on dressing it for me, and I permitted her to do so. She wound around it a fresh bandage torn from my shirt sleeve and was pinning it when, looking up at me, she said:

"You're not the first one of our men to be assisted with bandages."

Her remark cut me like a knife. It was plain that she was making this effort incurring this danger believing me to be a Confederate.

"I can't understand all these troubles that surround you," she went on. "Why not explain?"

"You know I'm c[illegible]ged with being [illegible]"

"Yes, but your accusers are robbers and murderers. If I thought that"—She broke off with a frown and turned away.

"The guerrillas built a fire and after cooking and eating breakfast loitered about [illegible] chatting, some playing cards while others devoted themselves to their wounded companions, making them as comfortable as possible on pieces of [illegible] covered with blankets. I took advantage of their inaction to learn how Jack had succeeded in delivering his message to the scout he was to meet at Huntsville. As I could not question him before the others without giving up my secret, I drew him into the cleft behind us.

"Buck, did you find the man I sent you to meet at Huntsville?"

"Reckon I did."

"Tell me about it."

"All right. As soon as I got into town I went right to the square an stopped in front o' the hotel. I hitched my pony to a post an went inside. A man in the office said 'Sonny, what d' yo' want?' an I said 'I'm goin up on the gallery,' an he said, 'What fo'?' an I said, 'Fo' to see the town.' Then I went up stairs an waited till I heard

"He stood a-lookin at me kind o' quar."

the clock strikin an counted thi'teen."

"Not 13, Buck. Clocks don't strike 13."

"Well, don't yo' see that clock at Huntsville is a different kind. It struck either thi'teen or fo'teen, I couldn't tell which."

"Never mind the clock. You're inventing all this. Go on."

"Well, just as the clock struck a man he came out on to the gallery. He had the doggonest eyes I ever saw just like the wolf's in Red Riding Hood. At first he didn't take any notice a me, lookin's if he was bothered can't I was that an he expected somebody. Then he witched me with those sharp eyes o' his'n, an at last he said kind o' gruff, 'Tis a fine day, boy, an I said, said I, what was it I was to say?"

"[illegible] you're weather[illegible] stranger."

"Oh, yes, I know, but I [illegible] remember [illegible] day, an I said, [illegible] Buck, on yo're weather beaten, strange [illegible] He stood a-lookin at me kind o' [illegible] an I heard him a-gruntin some [illegible] like, 'Guess I am beat somehow or another.' Then he asked me somep'n bout whether it was [illegible] in at the time of the—what was [illegible] one?"

"The man sure."

"Oh, yes; I know. An I said—what was it I said?"

"Black as night,'"

"That's it; only I fo'got an said, 'Black as a doggone nigger,' an he said, 'What's the'"—

"'Word.'"

"'What's the word?' an I took the spitball out o' my mouth an handed it to him. He took it an read it mighty quick. Then he looked at me an said, 'I'll be goldarned if that ain't the littlest messenger to carry such a big message I ever saw in my life! Like attackin a fortification with a howitzer.'"

"What did he do then?"

"I don' want t' tell that."

"Why not?"

"Well, he must 'a' thought I was a baby."

"Come, out with it."

"He took me up an give me a kiss, rubbin my face with that hairy beard o' his'n."

"Then what?"

"He went down stairs in a hurry, an I didn't see him any mo'."

"Good for you! Have you kept it all a secret?"

"Haven't said a word to any one."

"That's right. You've done me a great favor, and one good turn deserves another. I'm going to tell you how to cure yourself of that habit of using useless adjectives. If you ever get out of this, get a notebook and pencil, and every time you use one of them note it down. This will show you how often you offend, and at last you will break yourself of a very bad habit."

"I'll do that, by golly!"

(To be continued.)

RAIL AND STEAMER

The C.P.R. are running surveys each side of Trout Lake with a view to continuing the Lardo branch to connect with the Arrowhead line.

Sawyer Bros. are filling large orders of doors and sashes for Trout Lake.

Railway traffic has never been so brisk as now over the C.P.R. and engines and men available are not sufficient to cope with requirements. A hundred cars a day have been passing each way. Passenger traffic is equally busy, as many as seven sleepers being required to a train.

Jarvis & Co., the Toronto brokers, says of C.P.R. stock: "While the control may not be sought by Americans, yet certain railroads whose interests might in the future clash with Canadian Pacific are buying large blocks in order to have some say in the policy of the road."

Street & Norton, brokers, of New York, who act for Morgan and Hill, have been heavy buyers of C.P.R. stock lately. One day's sales in New York was 126,200 shares, representing $17,540,000.

The increase in the earnings of the Canadian Pacific for the last ten months amounts to approximately $6,000,000, or over 20 per cent.

P. A. Peterson, consulting engineer for the C.P.R. has gone to the States to study the preservation of ties, trestles, snow sheds and general wood work by creosoting and other methods. This is a question which is attracting much attention with engineers across the line, and it is claimed that some systems which have adopted creosoting on all wood work have more than doubled its durability.

Fourth Vice-president Newman, of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, will arrive in the city to-morrow from Cleveland, and will hold a meeting of trainmen.

A turntable is to be put in at Laggan.

Woman's Fortitude

Severely Tried by Ailments Peculiar to the Sex.

Ordinary Medicine Will Not Cure Because it Merely Touches the Symptoms—How to Get at the Root of the Trouble.

Behind the veil of her womanly modesty and fortitude, nearly every woman suffers indescribably from time to time, and continues to suffer in spite of all her efforts, because ordinary medicine is powerless to do good in such cases. Ordinary medicine may give temporary relief—even a purgative may do that—but the one great medical discovery capable of permanently curing and preventing a return of the ailment is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills are not an ordinary medicine; they are not a patent medicine, but the prescription of a regularly practising physician who used them in his private practice for years before they were given to the public under the name of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are the best medicine for man; the only medicine for woman. Mrs. John McKerr, Chickney, N.W.T., says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved me many a dollar in doctors bills. For some years I was greatly afflicted with ailments that make the life of so many of my sex miserable. I tried many medicines but found no relief until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills have made me feel like a new person; the almost continuous suffering I endured has passed away and life no longer seems a burden. I know of a number of other women who have been similarly benefitted and I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills worth their weight in gold to those who suffer from female complaints or general prostration."

The happiness of health for both men and women lies in the timely use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which act as a nerve tonic and supply new blood to enfeebled systems. They have cured many thousands of cases of anaemia, "decline," consumption, pains in the back, neuralgia, depression of spirits, heart palpitation, indigestion, rheumatism, sciatica, St. Vitus' Dance and partial paralysis. But substitutes should be avoided if you value your health; see that the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" is on every box. Sold by all dealers, or sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A BIG SHOW

The Largest in the World.

Gentry Bros. famous trained animal shows, the largest exhibition of the kind in the world, will soon be in this city. The Gentry Bros. performance this season has been greatly augmented, in addition to which, is presented a miniature Zoological display, showing the various hay and meat eating animals in their infancy, an attraction which is calculated to increase the joys of the little folks, who are the main patrons of Gentry Bros. famous Shows. In addition to the numerous company of performing Dogs, Ponies, Monkeys and Elephants, which have always been seen with the show, an entirely new innovation is introduced in the presentation of a drove of performing Siberian Camels, believed to be the only ones ever educated either in this or foreign lands. The many resources of Gentry Bros. combined exhibitions will be properly indexed and displayed in the combined street parades, which will be given on the morning of the date of exhibition, which is Saturday, June 21st.

Deafness and Discharge from the Ears

There is a wide-spread belief that Deafness caused by abscesses in the ears, with injury to the drumhead, is incurable, but the continued success of the Drouet treatment is a proof that this opinion is wrong. In fact, such an unusual number of cured cases are reported in the March "Supplement" to the "Journal for the Deaf," that those who suffer from defective hearing, caused by this form of ear disease, will find this publication of great interest. The case of Mrs. C. Hoole, aged fifty years, is a special proof of the success of the Drouet method, as she was cured completely of Deafness caused by abscesses of the ears, after treatment at a special hospital had failed. Her letter of thanks shows the successful result:—

6, Montgomery-terrace-road,
Sheffield, England.
February 7th, 1902.

Dear Sir,—Kindly accept my sincere thanks for benefits received under your treatment. I feel that an expression of gratitude is due to you from me for the restoration of hearing, which has been effected by your excellent treatment. Yours faithfully, C. HOOLE.

Those who are interested in deafness and diseases of the ear, nose and throat can obtain a free copy of the "Journal for the Deaf," with the "Supplement," by addressing the Secretary, Drouet Institute, Regent's Park-road, N.W., London, England.

Each "Journal" is accompanied by a Patient's Report Form, which enables applicants to receive full particulars for applying the treatment at home. Any advice by correspondence is absolutely free.

One of the most remarkable men of this age has just arrived in town (and is staying at Hotel Revelstoke, room 13) in the person of Professor A. C. Beech. His readings in Palmistry amaze and astound all persons who are fortunate enough to have the opportunity of being examined by him. He is the only genuine adept in this country, and one of the few who have studied palmistry on the battle field and in the successful mining camps. His knowledge, however, is based on the Hindoo philosophy. His advice given after the examination cannot be estimated by monetary value—it is simply invaluable, as his clients all over the world can testify. Having studied the mysteries of the Hindoos, whose mysterious powers have startled the western world, he is an adept who has found the law of life and can live on indefinitely. Confident of success he makes no stated charge; pay what you like when convinced. If you cannot realise the truth in religion as it is taught, if you are an Atheist and believe in nothing you can't see; if you are a Scientist and wish to traverse the broad domain of mind; if you are a Spiritualist and are afraid of some evil spirit; if you are a Theosophist and have some esoteric problem to solve; if you are a business man looking for success; call and see the adept. Be prepared to state what you require and you will be satisfied.

RIPANS

I have been taking Ripans Tabules for the Dyspepsia, and they have helped me wonderfully. I do not know any way they effect me, but they seem to give vigor to the entire system. I had a sort of languid feeling, but since taking the Tabules I feel spirited and have not that melancholy way about me. I think they are good for a general build-up of the system, as they seem to act like a tonic.
