Stomach Trouble

Many people are troubled with sour stomachs. While any alkaline drug and ordinary baking soda, or bicarbonate of soda will neutralize the excess acid and relieve the symptons of stomach over-acidity, to reach the real cause of the disorder and avoid the evil effect, the food must be changed. To correct an over acid stomach, coffee, sweets and condiments must be omitted from the diet. Futhermore, overeating of breads, cereals and potatoes must be avoided. In order that this class of food will not fervent, but will digest quickly, dry crisp, breakfast foods should take the place of those that are soggy and pasty; potatoes should be either, baked or boiled, not fried; crisp hard toast should take the place of hot cakes in fact, it is well to toast all bread; fresh bread is full of yeast germs, which go on fermenting in the stomach and form the acids which cause the over-acid stomach.

Rock Creek Concert

The chief attraction of the musical programme arranged by the Rev. A. M. Lloyd and Mrs. Lloyd at the social gathering on Friday, Nov. 5th, was a Japanese Operetta "Sunrise Land." The local children were assisted by Mrs. A. M. Lloyd (who took the place of Victoria Shillcock, indisposed at the last moment) and Mr. Julian. Despite the prevailing sickness a very good audience was highly entertained by the mirth provoking dialogue, which dealt severe blows at English Philistinism, with its dull homes and heavy furniture, and made us laugh at the subtle humours of indigestion, black umbrellas, schoolboy slang and other things "brought on by the weather." To some extent the irionies of Mr. W. S. Gilbert in the "Mikado" are avenged.

The elocution and singing of Mrs. A. M. Lloyd in the principal role (Lotus Blossom) were alone sufficient to ensure the success of the play, for the management of which she was responsible, ably assisted by Mr. Longhurst and Mr. Julian. Maud and Jean Richter (as Apple Blossom and Cherry Blossom) surprised us all by the excellent way in which they spoke thir parts and danced, a costume dance and a pretty 'Fan Dance' both being much admired. Appropriate costumes, umbrellas and scenery added to the charm of the production. A very pretty item was the action song and chorus "Fragrant Tea," but the most popular was an interlude in which Ivy Ingram and Sylvia Price in the costume of juvenile Jack Tars, danced the hornpipe. In addition to encore this item was repeated later in the evening by special request.

Mr. Julian (whose moustache was much admired) introduced a sentimental element in his wooing of Lotus Blossom, in the part of Sang Toy, on furlough from the "front", but whether from 'somewhere in Japan' or 'in France' we did not quite gather. Anyway he made the most of his time and got 'prrader' in five minutes than most amourous swains get in as many years.

Ivy Ingram, Sylvia Price and Winifried Whiting were charming little Geishas, whilst Ellen Kerr, Mary Kerr, Florence Jupp and Evelyn O'Donnell were pretty little 'Ogo-Bogos,' nursing their Jap Dolls and sewing away quite unconcernedly. Dolly Pettendrigh (Yum-Yum,) George Whiting (Fightee-fightee) and Priscilla Kerr (Sing-sing) had little to do, but did it very well.

Some of the above juveniles also took part in a fairy scene, in the second part which was encored and songs were given by Miss Gane and Mr. Julian and the latter gentleman joined Mrs. A. M. Lloyd in the well-known duet "Where Are You Going To My Pretty Maid?" In response to an encore they gave "Madam Will You Walk." Once more Mr. Julian was a most successful wooer, between which his singing and the wonderful moustache d vided the honours.

Mr. Jim Bush's orchestra very generously played for the dance that followed and thanks are also due to Mr. and Mrs. Sam Larsen for their valuable assistance and the loan of the hall: also to those who kindly donated refreshments. About $25 profit should result. Mr. James Kerr, J. P presided and recited classical poetry with his usual ability. Mrs. A. M. Lloyd will introduce some of the above items in the Red Cross Concert on Dec. 10. for the arrangement of which she is responsible.

Solomon Isaac was very ill, and the doctor was paying him a visit. "Vell, doctor," said Solomon, "if I got to die, I die gontented. My life is insured for five thousand pounds." "Well," replied the doctor, "I think that I can keep you alive for a week or so longer." "Don't do it, doctor, said Solomon, "the premium comes due the day after tomorrow.

ABOUT THE DOUKS

Recently, it has been reported in the press and otherwise, that some Doukhobor girls around Grand Forks had been working for other farmers, and not giving their wages to the Doukhobor Society. The story goes that when Peter Veregin found this out, he had several of the girls taken into a barn, where they were stripped after which he lashed them with a whip until the blood came. If this be true it can only be confirmed by those who saw or felt the performance. Veregin, as master of these people has a perfect legal right to use force as a means to correct their errors of conduct, when said force is used in a just and reasonable manner. To strip and whip females until the blood came would not be considered in a court of law, as a just and reasonable manner of forceful correction. Although the Doukhobors are practically slaves to Veregin this province does not favor Simon Legrees. The people who circulate these stories about Veregin, should be able to prove them, or keep their mouths shut. They should lay information with the police, call their witnesses and have the matter investigated in the court. It is unjust and slanderous to circulate such stories about Veregin, or any other man, unless they can be proven. It is up to the people who have made these charges against Veregin to probe the matter to a finish, or withdraw their statements through the press. We must have fair play under the British flag. The police in the Boundary are ever on the alert to preserve law and order, but they must have something more tangible to work upon than street talk, or the vaporings of idle and envious minds. If Veregin is a monster, prove it, but do not dream it.

The Kaiser pays his soldiers a cent a day, and even that may be taken for war purposes. The British rate of pay looks very large by comparison. The difference explains the prodigious cost of British armies. Compared with the German soldier "Tommy" is a plutocrat, but the British way is democracy's way. Germam soldiers are mere slaves of the war lords.—Mail-Empire.

In the Slocan

About Sandon, the most noteworthy items are the progress made at the Payne, the raise from the low-level crosscut adit to the old No. 8 workings have been completed; the continued mining and milling of ore at the Slocan Star, together with more development on several levels; the resumption of production at the Ruth-Hope after a rather lengthy time of inactivity at the concentrating mill; the continuance of work at the Wonderful; the very satisfactory showing the Surprise has made, its output of ore this year have been greater probably than in all other years combined; the persistence displayed in doing deep level development work on the Noble Five group of mines; the preparation at the Noonday for further underground work and ore production; the drifting on the vein of the fraction that adjoins the old Freddie Lee property, and the nice looking galena ore that is being taken out, though as yet not in considerable quantity; the opening of more ore on the Reco, and the high grade of that recently shipped from the Mountain Con; and, generally, the spirit of confident hopefulness that central Slocan is on the eve of better times than it has experienced for years.

Information received concerning the North Fork of Carpenter creek was that one car of high-grade antimony ore from the Alps-Alturus property had been shipped to England, and that another carload is at Three Forks to be shipped after receipt of advices relative to results from the first shipments. The recent find of dry silver ore on the Black Grouse claim above Three Forks is attracting attention. Prospecting work is being done on other claims in this region.

Some 1200 sacks of ore have been taken out by Thos. Avison, J. H. Cory and Louis Scaia at the Idaho-Alamo group, mostly from the Alamo, in which work has lately been raising from the No. 3 level and stoping ore above it. It is hoped the English company owning this property will shortly do more development work on the Idaho.

Mr. Jacobs was much pleased to find the Roseberry concentrating mill in operation, and he commended the enterprise of J. P. Keane in securing it and putting it into running order so soon after the burning of the Ivanhoe mill at Sandon had upset his business arrangements in connection with the concentration of custom ores. The mill is concentrating zinc-lead ore from the Lucky Jim mine and is making a good saving and turning out a product averaging 42 per cent zinc and better. The first car of concentrates was loaded and billed out last Saturday.—E. Jacobs in Slocan Record.

Magnesite in B. C.

Magnesite, one of the most valuable of the non-metallic minerals, has been found in large quantities along the shore of Lake Atlin, in the northeastern part of British Columbia, according to a consular report. Seven claims have been located by Vancouver parties, and plans are being made for working the deposits. This ore is shown by analysis to be exceptionally pure, running as high as 98 per cent. in magnesium carbonate. The world's supply has so far come from California, Greece and Austria. On account of the war the latter source is cut off, and since this was the most important, there is an extraordinary demand for the mineral, which British Columbia will soon be in a position to supply.

Magnesite consists of magnesia, 48 per per cent., and carbon dioxide, 52 per cent., and used, after calcination, to make bricks for refactory furnace lining, non-conductive covering for steam pipes, boilers, etc. Magnesium salts, especially the sulphates, are used in the arts and in medicines, also in the paper industry and in connection with the pulp industry of this province. This new discovery may prove to be of special value, since the chief value of the spruce forests in British Columbia is in their paper making possibilities and the fact that magnesia is necessary to the finished product and is right at hand may be the result of greatly increasing the importance of the pulp industry.—Mining and Engineering Journal.

Ideas of a Plain Man

In our weak and unworthy moments we all want to "revert to type." We are tired of progress and want to degenerate. We are weary of "climbing up Zion's hill" and want to let go and toboggan to the bottom.

Life is too much for us. Being good is too strenuous. We wouldn't admit for the world, but we are even tired of being respectable, and envy the drunkard, the tramp and the women of the half-world.

As for me, in these moments of naughtiness, what I would like to be is the proprietor of one of those little little German drinking places with trees in boxes before men. Just to sit through the long summer days in the shade and think of nothing but eating and drinking.

Or else I should like my wife to be a milliner making enough money to keep me in idleness, so that I should have nothing to do but to go to the postoffice, discuss politics and attend lodges.

Or, best of all, would it not be fine to be a large round hog and lie all day in a cool puddle under a locust tree?

Come, let us go to the dogs.—Dr. Frank Crane.
