Battling the rent-a-cop image

By DENNIS FITZGERALD

A butcher, a banker, a carpenter and an elementary school principal. All solid citizens. Working by day at ordinary, solid-citizen jobs.

And at night?

"Some people call them rent-a-cops," says Sechelt Constable Chris Annelly.

That's a misnomer; it makes them sound a little like mercenaries. In fact, the 12 auxiliary constables currently working on the Sunshine Coast are paid for their services only in special circumstances, such as providing security during the recent preliminary hearing for accused murderer Robert James Shannon.

But if "rent-a-cop" isn't entirely accurate, the phrase has nevertheless stuck, reflecting perhaps the suspicion with which some people regard the men, and occasionally women, who serve as volunteer police.

"As a regular police member," says Annelly, "it's difficult to assimilate in a community that views you suspiciously as a stranger." But it's twice as difficult for an auxiliary living in the community. It's not an easy position."

He said some community members may regard auxiliaries as "finks, busybodies or egotists, which we suppose is the same as power trippers."

Verne Wishlove, 37, the principal of Madeira Park Elementary, has been an auxiliary constable with the Sechelt detachment for about three years. Mild-mannered and generally brimming with enthusiastic good humour, Wishlove could hardly be tagged a "power tripper."

Despite Annely's concerns, Wishlove says he hasn't encountered any hostility because of his work as an auxiliary. "In fact, the reaction has been very favourable. I suppose if you came on like a big heavy and were pushing things, it would be different. Maybe I've been fortunate," he said.

Wishlove works an average of three eight-hour shifts a month as an auxiliary.

Why does he do it? "I guess I have sort of a selfish reason," he says. "I wanted to have more police involvement with the schools, and they (the regular members) have helped us out a great deal — things like safety films and bicycle rodeos.

"It also helps the kids to see the police in a different light than they usually do," says Wishlove. "They have more contact with the police, and they see that their principal is one, and maybe they think, 'Well, they're not so bad.' "

British Columbia's auxiliary police force was formed shortly after the province's paid reserve police force was disbanded for economic reasons in 1956. Auxiliaries wear a uniform which is almost identical to regular members', Many are authorized to carry guns. They may drive police cars when the need arises, issue traffic tickets and make arrests. In short, their authority is identical to that of a regular members'.

Auxiliaries are used locally primarily to supplement or back up regular members. On duty, they are paired with a regular member in most instances and are dependent on his superior training in police procedure, although the regular member may draw heavily on the auxiliary's presumably better knowledge of local geography and of the population.

Requirements for auxiliary membership are lower than those for regular members. Auxiliaries must be between the ages of 18 and 55 (versus 19 to 30 for new regulars) and at least 5-foot6 for men (regulars, 5-foot-8) or 5-foot-2 for women (regulars, 5-foot-4).

Good physical health and vision correctable to 20-20 are mandatory for regular recruits; there are no such requirements for auxiliaries. Background checks on auxiliaries are not as extensive as those made on prospective regular members. Auxiliaries basically must have a good standing in the community and no criminal record. A minimum Grade 7 or equivalent education is required of auxiliaries, versus a Grade 12 education for regulars.

Auxiliaries in the past received little training or instruction in any formal sense. They were simply paired with an experienced policeman and learned from him. Annely says this "was sometimes to the auxiliary's advantage and sometimes to his disadvantage."

Recently, a classroom training program has been organized under provincial course guidelines. Annely is in charge of this training for both the Sechelt and Gibsons detachments. The three-year course, now in its second year here, consists of instruction in areas such as criminal law, arrest and handling of prisoners, first aid, self defence, traffic direction and control, firearms and physical fitness.

In the Sechelt detachment prospective auxiliaries are placed on a six-month probationary "ride along" program, which gives them a chance to decide if they want to continue and also gives regular members a chance to size up the applicant's maturity and attitude.

A similar process occurs in Gibsons, although there is no such formal probation. Sgt. Ron Nicholas of the Gibsons detachment says he hasn't had to turn out any auxiliaries in the year that he has been stationed here. "Some people get on kind of an ego trip about it," he says, "but they usually weed themselves out. They don't get along."

Auxiliaries are protected by workmen's compensation while on duty, but Nicholas says, "We try to use them where there's no real danger to their life. We don't put them right out in the forefront. If there's any action, let the regular member do that.

"Look at it from their viewpoint; they're volunteers," says Nicholas. "I'm a paid policeman, and if I go out and get bopped in the nose or shot, well, that's just one of the risks I'm paid for."

Gibsons detachment has only three active auxiliaries now, about six fewer than they need, according to Nicholas.

PRINCIPAL Colleen Elson, left, of the new Pratt-Chaster Road Elementary School and school secretary Dodie Bergnach look over purchase orders for the massive quantities of supplies and materials needed in starting a new school. As of last Friday, Elson was still borrowing pens from workmen at the school but said she expected "almost everything" to be delivered and ready for action in time for the first day of school Tuesday.

Fisheries lowers the boom on poachers, polluters

Federal amendments to the Canada Fisheries Act that stiffens penalties for poaching and provide greater environmental protection came into force September 1.

Under the new regulations, the Fisheries Ministry may seize the catch, vessel and gear of a convicted poacher if they were used in the illegal act. A commercial fisherman convicted of poaching can also have his licence suspended.

Government figures indicate the West Coast salmon fishing industry loses over $3.5 million a year to poachers who catch half a million illegal fish.

Local Fisheries Officer Ray Kraft said that, unlike in some parts of northern B.C. and the Fraser Valley, poaching is not a serious problem in this area. While some private and commercial poaching does occur here, he said his department has a good idea who the offenders are.

Kraft says some of the most significant changes in the legislation provide far more control over fish habitats.

Before the recent amendments, charges could "only be laid after the fact," explains Kraft. "Now we have the chance to veto projects that could damage a fishing area."

The new conservation measures are intended to protect not only adult fish, but also their eggs, breeding grounds and food sources. The Fisheries Act prohibit activities, including commercial developments, which could seriously affect fish and their indirect support systems and now allows the government to block harmful projects.

Complementary amendments give Fisheries more power to fight industrial water pollution.

A new section makes reporting of oil spills mandatory and requires parties responsible for a spill to conduct a clean-up. Penalties for all pollution offences have been increased, with a maximum of $100,000 fine for major infraction.

Commercial fishermen have been given the right to sue a polluter for loss of income if fishing grounds are affected by a spill.

Previously, a violation of the Fisheries Act meant a mandatory court appearance. People who voluntarily plead guilty can now pay a fine, in much the same fashion as a parking ticket, instead of going before a local judge. This procedure is limited to fines under $100.

Another major change includes the designation of Fisheries officers as peace officers with the power to serve summonses and warrants.

Anglers and commercial trawlers may now keep salmon catches weighing less than three pounds if the fish are fully adult.

And, says Kraft, the definition of a fish "has been redefinied to include anything that creeps and crawls in the sea."

Another significant change in the act, that grew directly out of past confrontations with angry Newfoundlanders, makes it "illegal to interfere with authorized sealing operations."

Greenpeace and other seal-hunt protesters will now be banned from the hunting grounds by federal law.

Anti-aircraft battle goes to Sechelt council

Continuing their battle, a group of local citizens will take their anti-aircraft campaign to Sechelt council tonight in an attempt to have noise restrictions placed on the local airport.

But according to one alderman, the group's spokesman "doesn't know what he's talking about."

Frank Leitner, village representative on the Sechelt-Gibsons airport committee, takes exception to remarks made last week by Selma Park resident Charles Lee. Lee has asked the eight Regional District directors to intervene in a lease about to be signed between the Elphinstone Aero Club and the two villages.

Lee and his supporters claim that unregulated use of the airfield by small planes is not only dangerous but a growing annoyance for peninsula residents underneath noisy flight paths. A tally kept by Lee and his wife showed 1,999 planes went over their home during the month of July.

He believes much of the problem is caused by Lower Mainland flying clubs which, instead of using Pitt Meadows near Abbotsford, bring their students to the Sunshine Coast to practice take-offs and landings. Impose a user's fee here and this would no longer happen, says Lee.

Contradicts Leitner: "He doesn't know what he's talking about. The only airport in B.C. that charges is Vancouver International. How can he check his facts when he's out counting airplanes from five in the morning until 10 p.m.?"

There will be "absolutely no changes" in the proposed airport lease as a result of outside pressure, the alderman insists.

Sechelt council is expected to ratify the

It's back to reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic

The summer is over for hundreds of peninsula students as they head back this week for another year of school. But for those with lingering memories of text-free days, take heart, it's only another month until the Thanksgiving holiday.

Local students have been eased back gently into the academic world. Schools re-opened Tuesday, but promptly closed again today (to give, as one pundit has suggested, both teachers and their charges time to recover from the sudden shock of education). On Thursday classes begin in earnest.

School supply lists vary among different schools. They are available at most local stationery stores or at the schools.

School hours are as follows:

Secondary schools — Elphinstone, 9 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.; Chatelech, 8:30 a.m. - 3 p.m.; Pender Harbour, 8:25 a.m. - 3:20 p.m.

Elementary schools — Davis Bay, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.; Gibsons, 9:15 a.m. - 3:15 p.m.; Langdale, 8:50 a.m. - 2:50 p.m.) Pratt-Chaster, 9:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.; Sechelt, 8:55 a.m. - 2:55 p.m.; Egmont, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.; Halfmoon Bay, 8:25 a.m. - 2:25 p.m.; Madeira Park, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.; Roberts Creek, 9:15 a.m. - 3:15 p.m., and West Sechelt, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.

Bus schedules were printed in an advertisement in local papers last week. Stops will be the same as last year. Students are advised to be at bus stops at least 10 minutes early.

Dates of teacher in-service training days have not been released. Following is a list of official school holidays:

Thanksgiving — October 10.

Remembrance Day — November 11.

Christmas — December 21 - January 2, 1978.

Spring Break — March 23 - April 3.

Victoria Day — May 22.

School ends — June 30.

A new elementary school for students in the west Gibsons area opened Tuesday. The Pratt-Chaster Road school, to be officially named later in the year, now includes grades kindergarten through four. Additional grades will be added as the present students move up.

Students in Pender Harbour face several months in portable classrooms before the opening of their new senior secondary school. The previous school was destroyed last year by fire. Sweetening these students' delay, however, is the knowledge that a water storage tank — eventually to be transformed to a swimming pool — is being constructed beneath the school gymnasium.

Auto fatalities spur police action

Local vehicle accidents have claimed the lives of four persons in the last six weeks, and alcohol has been a suspected factor in each death, according to Cpl. Gary Wade of the Sechelt RCMP detachment.

He said area police are planning a stepped-up effort to get unsafe drivers off the road, which will probably include the use three days a month of one of the province's new mobile breathalyzer vans.

Wade said the van will permit police to order breath samples on the spot of suspected impaired drivers. "We are going to increase our enforcement," he said. "Roadblocks, radar — we'll do whatever is necessary."

Sechelt police also received reports of two break and entries in the village the night of August 28. Brian's Auto Body reported $15 in change stolen. An unoccupied residence on Dolphin Street was broken into the same night. The thief, apparently out to refurbish his home, made off with the master bedroom carpeting and the dining room light fixtures.

Roberts Creek man dies from injuries in Hall Rd. accident

A desperate effort to save the life of a young Roberts Creek man failed last week when he died in a Vancouver hospital after being rushed from the peninsula by hovercraft.

James Higgs, 22, of the Lower Road, was pronounced dead Thursday night, a day after the car he was driving went out of control on Hall Road and slammed into a pole.

The youth was thrown from the car upon impact.

According to Gibsons RCMP, Higgs was alone in his 1964 Chevrolet when the accident occurred at 8:55 p.m. Wednesday. The cause is still under investigation.

Police say Higgs carried a kidney donor card in his wallet and it is believed doctors at the Lions Gate Hospital arranged for a recipient once it became obvious he was dying.

An inquest into the crash has been ordered.

Hold that flush-the multrum is here

By TOM PERRY

An entry under S in an encyclopedia of the not-too-distant future will show an annotated jumble of massive pipes, ponds and tanks. The accompanying text will explain its function as an expensive and largely futile attempt to separate and safely dispose of contaminants that were needlessly added to pure water. This mischievous folly of the 20th century is called a sewage treatment plant.

The justification for such a system, with its costly sewer lines, is a function of a dense population and its fixation on flush toilets. City people are already trapped without their consent. They seldom think about waste disposal until they see periodic increases in their mill rate literally going down the drain. Rural residents still have a choice and should be conscious of its consequences. If they opt for a disposal system that annually transforms 41 per cent of a household's water supply into 50,000 gallons of septic tank effluent, then they are safe only in a sparsely settled area.

Using that as a criterion, and judging from previous surveys of harbour waters, Pender Harbour is already overcrowded. Since it isn't realistic to reduce the existing danger from harbour pollution by asking people to leave, it would be well to begin phasing in safe alternatives for sewage disposal as quickly as possible.

About this time one inevitably hears the familiar line about expensive sewer systems — followed by the proposal for high-density housing development as a penny-wise and pound-foolish gesture toward keeping the cost down. But such a slavish submission to city precedents compounds the error in ways antagonistic to the rural atmosphere we want to preserve.

Sewers and treatment plants are, in fact, the most expensive methods of wasting the same water. And any serious effort to make the resulting effluent harmless to aquatic life would price them beyond our means. We can do much better.

COMPOSTING TOILETS that are safe and suitable for single-storey dwellings have been available in North America since 1974. Clivus Multrum, the most popular example, was invented over 30 years ago in Sweden, where these units have been operating for at least 12 years. (Other composting toilets are Biu-Let, Ecolet and Toa Throne.)

Clivus Multrum, the "inclined compost room," is a self-contained treatment system for all organic wastes. It uses no water, has no moving parts, consumes no external energy or additive and is entirely pollution free. A flushless fixture admits feces, and urine and toilet paper through a large diameter vertical tube to the upper end of a sloping fibreglass tank installed below the floor and measuring about 4 x 7 x 8 feet. Toilet wastes, on a starter layer of peat and topsoil, move glacier-like down the slope and are eventually accompanied by kitchen scraps added from a separate port in another part of the house. Guided by baffles, the mass moves slowly, composting as it goes. Because the tank is vented as stoves are, it is odorless in use and results in complete aerobic detoxification of material by the time it reaches the humus storage chamber two to four years later.

Aerobic treatment of these wastes liberates large amounts of carbon dioxide and water vapour — both environmentally harmless — thereby reducing the volume of material during its processing. So maintenance is limited to the yearly removal of a few pails of rich compost, which can be used to advantage in the garden. Rigorous tests by several independent research agencies and individuals have so far failed to find human pathogens in the finished compost.

At a price of $2,000 delivered, the Clivus Multrum is competitive with installation and servicing costs of a septic system. A small drain field is usually needed to dispose of wash water, although other methods are possible. Further information can be provided locally by Dr. Mark Mountain of Careful Eco-Systems, who will be installing a unit in his Roberts Creek home.

Composting toilets are approached suspiciously because they're new and seem too good to be true. This adds to the difficulty of having one approved under existing sanitation procedures that were drafted before the concept of an indoor composting toilet was conceived. But the Clivus Multrum is a recognized alternative to waste disposal in B.C. wherever there is a water shortage or a possibility of septic seepage. That's us all over! And if you still don't like aerobic systems, read on.

NATURAL GAS trapped within the earth was produced by the anaerobic decomposition of lush carbonaceous forests that existed millions of years ago. (These same forests were also transformed into oil and coal.) The process is understood well enough to duplicate it above ground with biological material of plant or animal origin. The fuel produced is therefore called biogas, and its principal

Whew! We made it

Well, it's over for another year — the summer crunch. Kids out of school. Crowded highways, beaches, ferries (jingling cash registers). Friends and relations passing through. But it's been fun. Most of it. A glorious month of sunshine, though we could have used a little rain in there.

Now things will slow down some. A gentle decline (we hope) into winter. People who know about such things tell us this will be a long, cold winter. Perhaps.

Anyway, there's apt to be a few more weeks for lazing on the beach and walking quietly through the woods. Fall is our favourite time of year. A time for reflecting on more hurried days behind us and preparing for the more severe days ahead.

Maybe now that the kids and visitors are out from underfoot, we should all sit down and have a good think.

One man's opinion?

JUST THE FACTS

There are many fair complaints to be made about our regional government. It would be hard, however, to justify a claim that it's secretive. But if information about regional issues is readily available, why is it that so much misinformation on these topics is repeated as gospel?

Take a recent example. A land owner is proposing a small residential development on a rocky peninsula at the north end of Bargain Narrows, Pender Harbour. It's difficult ground, so rather than carve it up with roads in a conventional subdivision, he applied for a strata title subdivision. This would allow more flexibility in building locations, services, etc. The regional board felt the submitted plan fitted its policies, and agreed to process it for a public hearing. Two important elements are that the homes would be clustered together on one part of the property, with some joined side by side, and that there would be a common sewer system.

Now I don't care one way or the other whether this property is developed. But I do feel the proposal should be judged on the true facts. So I was a little surprised to hear that there was mounting public opposition in the Harbour to what was described as "this high-density condominium development."

The reasons for this opposition soon became apparent. Two articles appeared in another peninsula publication, by an anonymous author claiming to represent the Pender Harbour Ratepayers. I've had considerable respect for this group in the past. It could generally be depended on to keep its head and present well-considered opinions on Pender Harbour issues, while more volatile individuals and groups were shooting from the lip right and left. However, the article's writer did little to sustain this image.

First, he created the impression that the development involved cramming a large number of homes onto a small property. A closer examination of the proposal shows that no more homes would be built than the normal four per acre allowed under a conventional subdivision of the site. Hardly high density, and certainly not instant Richmond as he suggested. He then went on to berate the local regional director for joining Area A to the sewer function, claiming that this meant the public would end up paying for the operation of this development's sewers. In fact, this bill would be paid, as it should be, by special taxes levied on only those people owning property in the development itself.

It's not as if the correct information wasn't available. For example, detailed explanations of sewer financing were published when Area A joined that function. However, a nearby resident had apparently heard enough and presented a petition of 17 neighbours opposing the plan.

Petitions seem to fly thick and fast around here, and the author of this one even admitted it was prepared "on short notice." Fortunately, though, the regional board has learned to take them with a grain of salt. It's been the directors' experience that a petition can be followed soon after by a counter-petition. This second one may even by signed by many of the same people whose names appear on the first one, after having checked a few facts! It's too bad, but it seems to be easier to sign first and ask questions later.

There may well be elements of the proposal that make it unsuitable for the site, but wouldn't it be better to consider the real facts than to listen to rhetoric about being overrun by multiple-dwelling development?

Unfortunately, there's another current case at the other end of the regional where being more informed before speaking would be helpful. I'm referring to the fiery controversy, the amalgamation of the Granthams Landing and Regional District water systems. Actually, this example is worse, because it seems to include deliberate, as well as inadvertent, ignorance. I find rather disturbing that statement of the person at the Granthams meeting to the effect that she didn't want to hear the information the invited speakers had come to present. She wanted to vote first. How can proper decisions be made if people would rather retain their biases than listen to facts that might make them change their minds? That issue seems to me far more important than the identity of the waterworks agency. It can call into question the whole concept of public involvement, which I think would be tragic.

Some time ago, after editorial pressure from the local press, the regional district finally opened its committee meetings to the public. This step effectively completed a long-term and drastic change for the district, from what was almost a closed, private club into truly open government. It's all there if you want it, but how many people bother to attend the district's meetings or pick up copies of proposed bylaws?

Sadly, very few. And although the newspapers try hard to relate what's going on, distortions can easily occur by accident.

No, it seems there is no alternative to greater effort on the part of individuals of the public. So if you hear of something happening, or about to happen, that sounds alarming, take the time to check before making statements of signing petitions. Even a phone call will often do the trick.

Many communities wish they had our easy access to their regional government. It's a shame we don't seem to appreciate what we have.

Guess what program your average oil company president will be watching this Monday night

By MARYANNE WEST

The CBC will dust off its dramatized story, Tar Sands, about the wheeling and dealing between government and industry and televise the drama, Monday, September 12, at 9 p.m. The film was shelved in the spring to give management time to decide if it is proper for television to allow actors not only to represent people presently active in government but to speak for them.

Although the film was cleared by CBC lawyers, there has been much agonizing by senior management and the president. Dennis Harvey, assistant general manager of the English network explained, "You take all the historical information you can gather, and in trying to dramatize it you don't have access to the private conversations and you run into problems. It's the moral problem of trying to put words into people's mouths."

Tar Sands, it seems, does put words into the mouths of Premier Lougheed, several of his senior civil servants and oil company executives, all of them named and portrayed by actors.

The facts of the story are all in the public domain, having been published in a book of the same name by Larry Pratt, a University of Alberta political scientist. The book is based on documents obtained from the oil companies which participated in the project from the outset, Imperial Oil, Gulf Oil, City Services and Atlantic Richfield. The story deals with the power-brokering of the international petroleum industry, the negotiations and confrontation with the governments of Canada, Alberta and Ontario.

If board room discussions and the back room boys of government do not sound as exciting as a Police Story drama or the traumas of modern medical practice, give it a chance — you may be surprised. Remember Syncrude was launched with almost $2 billion of our money as risk capital. This should give all tax paying Canadians personal involvement and interest in the story. CBC hopes it will also give us a better understanding of the problems faced by those we elect to government, who must weight the economic benefits of any construction project jobs. the expansion of related industries — against damage to the environment and the hazards of social change when too many people move into an area with inadequare facilities and services.

This is the second year the CBC-TV drama department has produced a series of journalistic dramas dealing with social, environmental and political issues. Memorable from the earlier series was the Insurance Man from Ingersoll, also written and directed by Peter Pearson, which exposed the infiltration of the Mafia into the construction industry in Toronto. This year you'll remember the possible flooding of southern Manitoba from the Garrison Dam Diversion in North Dakota and Claude Jutras' compelling dramas about mental health, Dream Speaker and Ada.

The art of role playing goes back to man's earliest beginnings and all cultures share a heritage of acting out their problems, their fears and hatreds, joys and emotions, victories and defeats. It isn't new to use the medium of television in meeting the need of 20th century people to understand their problems. We're all familiar with soap operas and more recently programs like All in the Family the American version of the BBC's Till Death do us Part) and Maude. While undoubtedly it was intended to use these comedies to focus on social issues, they seem to me to have stagnated into a vehicle which perpetuates stereotypes rather than offering a means for social change.

So I am glad Canadians are using the medium in a different way, using our recognized talent for excellent television documentaries to produce powerfully emotive dramas — stories which provide more than suspense filled entertainment, involving the viewer's mind and emotions, leaving him-her possibly disturbed, maybe even angry, but with plenty to think about.

Unfortunately, it wasn't possible to preview Tar Sands in Vancouver, so I can only guess at possible unfavourable reaction. I suspect this program will illustrate the classic dilemma of every age, the confrontation between the old and the new. In North America in the seventies it seems to be between the long accepted values of free enterprise and the profit motive and the public interest in the environment and the rights of everyone to an equal quality of life.

I imagine the oil company executives, whose advertising manages to equate making profits for their shareholders with a national service to all Canadians, will be offended by seeing themselves in living colour. Do you think they will pull out leaving us nigh and dry with no-one to "work against time for our future"?!

Editor, The Times:

I would like to make the people of the Sunshine Coast aware of the federal government's closing of the Wickaninnish Inn in a few short weeks. To those who are not familiar with where and what Wickanimnish is, it's a beautiful inn located near Tofino on the west coast of Vancouver Island. It is a source of plesure to old and young alike and has been for many, many years. When Pacific Rim was first set up, there was to be no commercial development in the park. But this is ridiculous since all other national parks have more than their share of comercial enterprises. Wickaninnish was there long before the federal government took over.

Recently, there was a letter of protest in one of the Vancouver papers. I, and many people I've talked to, feel the same way as Marjorie Stewart who wrote the letter. I've been in contact with her since, asking what we could do to help make the government reconsider.

Following is an excerpt from her letter to me: "The best way for you and anyone to help is to write to the Honourable Warren Allmand (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, House of Commons, Ottawa, Ontario), who is the minister in charge of this, as you can see. I agree with you that the government is supposed to do what the majority of the people want, but if we don't tell them, they will never know. So we have to make as many waves as possible. If you can get anyone else to write, please do so."

So, in conclusion, I urge anyone who is at all concerned to write to Allmand a letter of protest. From everyone I've talked to, not one person condoned the closing of this inn. The federal government will just have to listen. After all, are we not supposed to have a people's government?

Metcalfe Road is one of those unpaved Roberts Creek lanes that meander crookedly towards the ocean without ever quite making it, taking instead a slow turn and coming to a halt where someone's driveway begins.

At the head of Metcalfe, where the street joins the Lower Road, the wood-stained cedar homes reflect a comfortable affluence; there are one or two A-frames and a few unimaginative split-levels with carports under porches and grounds where the trees have been slaughtered in the name of green grass and a few dahlias.

But along the waterfront the character of the buildings changes, from subdivision chic to rambling low cottages that have fronted the sea for decades. A few are occupied only from May to September when the Maple Leaf is run up the flag pole and the smell of barbecued steak wafts in from beach front lawns.

Lately a change has come over Metcalfe Road, a subtle metamorphosis that has happened over the summer, a combination of small irritants that has combined to shatter the peaceful quiet of a once restful neighbourhood.

It began with the trees. Where the road decides to take its curve a hidden path runs off through the woods, first over a crumbling wooden bridge and then down a small incline to the driftwood that barricades the way to the beach.

One day in early summer the roar of a powerful chainsaw ripped through the early morning and in a few minutes trees began shattering to the ground. A week later the house, next to the path, proudly boasted a new wooden boatshed. The way to the water is now marked by hacked, bleeding stumps and long strips of peeled bark. The trees were government trees, as the little path runs over a Department of Highways road allowance. And no one had asked permission to cut them down. They were just taken.

The summer has also brought motorcycle riders who delight in gunning their engines and competing with a constant visitor who has so far refused to replace a missing muffler. On warm evenings parties thrown by some new Metcalfe Road tenants run until dawn and the screams and laughter of their friends drown out the stream that skirts their property.

And the rest of us, living nearby, constantly encounter their docked-tail dog as it tears open our garbage, uproots vegetable gardens and defecates on everyone's property but it's own. It is probably the same dog that for a month now has howled endlessly night after night while we who are forced to listen envision illegal but effective ways of halting the crescendo of barking that echoes constantly through the woods.

It's all the small things that make a place worth living in. And it takes only a small group of people to destroy that tranquility. No community plans or regonal bylaws can solve the problem of an inconsiderate neighbour — of which Metcalfe Road has acquired a fair number.

A step in the right direction

Editor, The Times:

I'm glad to see that this area is included in the Rural Development Incentive Loans of the federal DREE program after earlier press reports (in another paper) said only the northern part of Mackenzie riding was included.

It's a step in the right direction to help small businesses get started.

Until now, federal policies have actually encouraged industry to reduce rather than create employment.

New machines can be written off with accelerated depreciation rates. That means the working taxpayer subsidizes his employer to buy machines to replace himself.

The Foreign Investment Review Act has been a sham in that it has not slowed down the American takeover of what was left of Canada's economy. Branch plants are the first to shut down in a slump and administration and research jobs are transferred to headquarters in the U.S.A. even when the branch plant is open.

The same federal government is making agreements with Japan and the Common Market countries saying that Canada will specialize in resource extraction and cut back on efforts to create secondary industry which compete with established industries in those countries. That won't help employment here either.

Sechelt is in somewhat better shape with nine active auxiliaries, including several in the Pender Harbour area, one of whom is branch manager of the Bank of Montreal.

Some auxiliaries, such as Wishlove, see their roles as being primarily a link between the community and the regular force.

Others, such as Bill Lawson, 52, a Port Mellon carpenter who lives in West Sechelt have found a way to realize youthful ambitions. "I think I would have become a Vancouver city policeman," says Lawson, "but I didn't have the education."

Annely says some auxiliaries were ineligible for the RCMP because of other restrictions, such as the now discarded requirement that recruits be unmarried and remain single for seven years after joining the force (reduced to two years before the policy was dropped).

Lawson, who has been an auxiliary with the Sechelt detachment since 1973, is not simply a late-blooming cop. Like Wishlove, he sees himself as sort of a community representative within the RCMP. A Peninsula resident for 25 years, he says "I know a lot of people here, and I thought maybe I could communicate with them better than a regular member could.

"That's what a lot of the job is, talking to people in the right way. I wouldn't treat anybody any way that I wouldn't want to be treated myself."

And Lawson doesn't perceive his role as identical to a regular members'. "I'm a civilian when I'm not on duty. I'm not here to enforce the law. I wouldn't run in and report some minor traffic offence I might see. If there's something serious, I'd report it, like anybody else ought to."

The question of an auxiliary carrying a gun is a controversial one. Annely says he realizes that some citizens disagree with current RCMP policy which gives the detachment commander the authoriity to issue firearms to auxiliaries provided that he has received adequate training and demonstrated proficiency in marksmanship, that he has demonstrated a mature attitude toward the use of guns and that there is a need for the auxiliary to wear a gun.

RCMP guidelines state that a gun is to be drawn only to protect the life of a policeman or of a citizen who is in immediate danger from a criminal.

None of the three auxiliary constables interviewed by the Times has ever worn a gun on duty and none is eager to do so.

"I'd do a bloody lot of talking before I'd ever pull a gun on someone," says Lawson. "And even then, if it was my own life, I'm not sure I would. If it was somebody else's life, if it was to protect them, I guess so."

Fred Shiloff, 27, meat manager of the Super-Valu grocery in Sunnycrest Mall, has been an auxiliary with the Gibsons detachment since November.

Asked about wearing a gun, Shiloff replied tersely, "That's one thing I'd like to stay away from."

Shiloff normally works one shift a week and says the police job earns him "a little bit of hassling from the young kids at work, and some from the older guys, just joking around."

Shiloff had windows in his van smashed at one point, and although no charges were laid as a result, Nicholas says police suspect the vandalism might have had something to do with Shiloff's work as an auxiliary.

Shiloff says, however, that most of the antagonism against the police that he sees is not directed at him personally. "We get a lot of jeering in the car — the regular members do — people yelling 'pigs' at us. It's most 14 or 15-year-old kids. We joke about it. You can't let it bother you."

Despite such incidents, Shiloff says, "I love the work. It's community service, like being a volunteer fireman. I feel like I'm doing some good. They're pretty short staffed, and they apprecite our help."

Most police work, unlike the TV dramas, is routine and often dull, but Shiloff says his first shift as an auxiliary was an exception. "It was one hairy chase form Gibsons to Port Mellon on a really rainy night. I don't know how fast we were going. I was so scared I wasn't even looking at the speedometer. I just kept asking myself, 'What am I doing?' "

The speeder eluded Shiloff and his partner when they spotted a truck in a ditch and stopped, thinking it was the vehicle they were chasing. "But we got him the next day," says Shiloff.

Under terms of the agreement, approximately 65,000 square feet at the airport will be leased to the aero club for 10 years, with an option to renew for a further decade. Annual rent is one dollar.

The land in question consists of the club house, hangers and parking space. It does not include the runway, which the club is obliged to maintain in good condition.

According to Leitner, control of the runway will remain under the jurisdiction of Gibsons and Sechelt.

New ICBC claims office for peninsula

A rearrangement of ICBC offices will require that peninsula residents wishing to record an Autoplan claim telephone the Powell River insurance company office, rather than the North Vancouver Centre as previously.

A Powell River office adjuster and estimater will visit the peninsula weekly to handle claims. Special trips will be made in event of a serious accident.

The ICBC office in Powell River may be contacted by phoning collect to 485-2838.

Through September all provincial highway signs will be converted to metric.

SPEEDOMETERS: Most 1977 and all 1978 model cars have speedometers and odometers calibrated in km/h and km. Some earlier model cars have speedometers with dual calibrations. If your speedometer indicates only mph, you may find this conversion scale handy.

km/h 0 10 20 30 40 50 60 70 80 90 100

MPH 0 10 20 30 40 50 60

Always drive at the posted speed. It is legal when posted. You'll be surprised at how little time you really save when you exceed the speed limits.

KIT MOFFAT and Dan Nestman were wed August 6 at Holy Family Church in Sechelt.

Sechelt Notes

— by Peggy Connor, 885-9347

MOFFAT-NESTMAN WEDDING

When Kit Moffat and Dan Nestman were wed August 6, it was the joining of two families who have lived many years in this area.

Kathrynne Anne Moffat is the youngest daughter of Stan and Helen Moffat of Sechelt, formerly of Halfmoon Bay. Daniel John Nestman is the second eldest son of Leo and Doreen Nestman of Selma Park.

Father O'Hara officiated at the wedding held in Holy Family Church in Sechelt. The reception was held in the Canadian Legion Hall for the many friends and relatives.

Best man was Robert Gibson; matron of honor, Kathleen Lerous, bridesmaids were Kit's sister Elaine Robinson from Prince George, Patty Hall of Davis Bay and Shirley Townley.

Longtime friend Pat Luoma toasted the bride, who was absolutely beautiful in her floor length white satin dress with trailing train. The matron of honor wore mauve; complementing light blue was the color for the bridesmaids. The groom wore a white tuxedo jacket with black pants.

Master of ceremonies was Jermone Bender from Cranbrook. Daughter Christina Bender was the flower girl, and Craig Robinson, Kit's nephew from Prince George, was the ring bearer.

To the delight of both parents, the young couple have settled in Davis Bay after returning form their honeymoon below the border.

WEDDING AND REUNION

A union that brought the families of Don and Hazel Hadden together for the first time in 10 years made for a delightfully happy time for all.

Joy Bell married Donald Rabbi Saturday, August 27, at St. John's United Church in Davis Bay, Annette Reinhardt officiating.

Joy's sister Diane Elderton was matron of honor, from North Vancouver; best man was Joy's brother George Woodham, and daughter April Bell was flower girl.

Donald's parents Mr. and Mrs. Tony Rabbi and daughter Paulette came from Camrose, Alberta for the wedding.

The couple have returend to Tofield, Alberta, where they will reside. Joy has two daughters and a son from a former marriage.

A reception of 35 close friends and relatives was enjoyed at the Hadden home in Davis Bay — or is that still in Selma Park?

Besides Hazel's three — Joy, Diane and George — Don Hadden's two daughters and son were present, Linda Mosley of Roberts Creek, Lola Woodley of Gibsons and David Hadden from Jordan River.

There was time to wish a happy birthday to David Elderton on his 10th birthday.

MacDONALD HEMSTALK WEDDING

August 6, Reverend W.S. Ackroyd performed the marriage ceremony in Wilson Creek Hall that joined together Sherry MacDonald, youngest daughter of Bob and Dorothy MacDonald of Richmond, and Rocky Thomas Hemstalk, the eldest son of Thomas and Lissi Hemstalk of Davis Bay.

Best man was Martin Boehn of Cowichan Station; matron of honor, the bride's sister Clair MacDonald of Richmond; bridesmaids Vicki Hemstalk and Mary MacCauley, the latter from Cobble Hill.

There were many out of town visitors, mainly from Vancouver Island and California, to celebrate with the happy couple, who are settled in Davis Bay.

CONNIE LANHAM

Miss Connie Lanham of Selma Park said it was a wonderful trip to Vernon, nice and cool — until she arrived, then it was like stepping into a furnace. However, they did find some lovely spots as her friends and hosts, Fred and Joyce Taylor, took time for a picnic at Yamaha and up to Kalamalka Lake where Connie went for her first canoe ride.

The Taylors were the only neighbours for miles around when Connie was working up in the Yukon at a gold mining camp.

TOT LOT

The Sechelt Tot Lot days of operation are Monday and Thursday, 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. beginning October 1. (I erred in reporting a different day last week.) This program is run by a group of mothers with an elected executive and a monthly meeting which must be attended by all mothers. For more information, call Linda Paulhus at 885-3685 or Trudy Warhurst at 885-3607.

PENDER HARBOUR HEALTH CLINIC AUXILIARY

The P.H. Health Clinic Auxiliary wish to thank all of the talented people for bringing and showing their handiwork at the Arts and Crafts Show August 27. The beautiful work on display consisted of clocks, jewellery, hand knit afghans, sweaters (knit from wool spun right before your eyes), paintings, macrame, crochet, ceramics, candles, petit point, driftwood articles, egg painting and much more.

For those folks who never had a chance to make it out to the show, watch for the next one and be sure to attend. The auxiliary also wishes to thank several of their members for donations of homebaking which turned the tea into a nice social event.

NIGHT SCHOOL CLASS

If anyone knows the Basic Maintenance of Outboard Motors and would be willing to teach a class for small boat owners at night school, please contact Karen Hoemberg, Evans Hermon or Jack Heidema.

ROYAL CANADIAN LEGION BR. 112

The R.C. Legion Br. 112 held their Annual Hawaiian Night Saturday, September 3, and it was a success as usual. Patrons danced to the music of the Hibiscus Hawaiian Band from Richmond, B.C. This band has been playing for 15 years and have the Polynesian Wahine Dancers also from Richmond do the floor show. They do tape shows, banquets, Conventions and they have a Spectacular Fire Dance. The winners of the Lei Contest were — Original, a lei consisting of natural flowers, Ethel Plant, who said she went out in the dark and picked them before she left home; Artificial, Ed Lowe wearing a lei made from flowers from Mexico; Comic, Fred Clouthier, well-used rope wrapped many times around his neck. The dancers had some of the patrons on the floor trying to get them hula dancing. Did you have fun, Bill Evans?

BLACK OUT TIME

Residents in the P.H. area were in total darkness for five hours when Dorrin Bosch of Egmont had the bad luck of a gust of wind making a tree he was falling hit a power line. People in a car were very lucky to escape when the tree hit their vehicle.

PENDER TID BITS

Nice to see that Bernard Clarke is home from the hospital and is looking as good as ever. Heard Bob and Leona Lee have moved to Vancouver. Jim Murray of Holiday Market is really going ahead on his camp site. The Elementary School is having a fence around the grounds.

Mae Bathgate of Egmont has had both her daughters home for a week's holiday — Deb and Pat and granddaughters Corrinne and Charlene. Ron Pockrant of Madeira Park is in A-1 condition now according to his check up and this is remarkable as he suffered a very serious illness for a long time. Charlie Hauka was in the area for a few days but has left for the city again. Muriel and Dave Stiglitz have returned from a family visit to Saskatchewan. Now they have to start getting organized in their new home as they purchased Jock Bachop's house just before they left on their trip.

Arthritis is anybody's illness. It attacks people of all ages, in all walks of life.

BRIDAL SHOWERS

Els Zuidema, who will become the bride of Jerry Mercer on September 10, was honoured at two showers recently. On August 27, Wendy Goodwin and Nancy Mercer, preparing to host a shower for her at Wendy's home at Secret Cove, were somewhat disconcerted when the power went of at 5 p.m. As the time time approached for their guests to arrive and still no power, they hunted for candles and soon had enough illumination for their guests to find their way in and for Els to open up the many parcels of gifts. As the time drew near to serve refreshments there was still no power to make tea and coffee to accompany the piles of delicious goodies which the two girls had spent so many hours in preparing. However, resourceful as ever, the two hostesses borrowed some wine and beer from a nearby neighbour who is also a member of the Mercer clan and the party was able to continue in an even more convivial atmosphere than before.

A second shower last Thursday was hosted by Peggy Connor, Grace Rutherford and Mary Walker at Mrs. Walker's home at Welcome Beach.

Never was a bride-to-be more surprised than Els when she arrived at the Walker home to find a group of her friends waiting to surprise her. She entered the room carrying a pile of old clothes which, she had been told, were for the Hospital Auxiliary thrift shop. At the end of the evening, she was even more surprised to find she was expected to help carry the old clothes back to the Mercers because their owners had only loaned them and wanted to get a little more mileage (or should we say kilometerage?) out of them before they were officially consigned to thrift shop. However, it was a very happy and successful evening and Els received many useful and attractive gifts for the kitchen of her new home.

Els, who recently graduated as a nurse from Vancouver General Hospital, has started working as a nurse in St. Mary's Hospital, Sechelt. She is by no means a stranger to St. Mary's for she was one of the first volunteers to work there as a candy-striper and her dedication to the welfare of the patients is well-known.

WEDDING

And since we are in such a romantic vein, here's news of another wedding which took place on August 27 in Vancouver at the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul at 38th and Granville. In a beautiful ceremony, Frances Elizabeth Cruise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon C. Cruise, exchanged marriage vows with Jeffrey Wren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Wren of New Westminster. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was dressed in a gown of white chiffon. She wore no veil, but her hair was dressed in an arrangement of flowers. Matron of honour was her sister, Catherine, and three of her friends from UBC were bridemaids. The mother of the bride wore a long, full gown of dusty rose colour and pearl and amethyst jewels.

At a reception which followed at the University Women's Club, Highcroft Manor, the toast to the bride was proposed by Dennis Hunt of Redrooffs. The couple spent their honeymoon at the Cruise home at Redrooffs and have now left for their home in Calgary, where the groom will take up his studies as a physical education teacher. The bride, who recently graduated from UBC with a degree in recreation, plans to work with the physically handicapped.

BACK TO SCHOOL

It's back to school for the children — and grandmothers who have spent the summer striving against fearful odds to keep the cookie jars filled are wondering rather wistfully why the house seems too quiet and stays so clean and tidy.

Two Halfmoon Bay children who will be missed are Sheila and Louise Murphy who have joined their mother who is visiting sick relatives in Dublin. Louise will attend a Dublin school this term and Sheila hopes to get a job in Dublin.

Martina Zuidema, who graduated from Pender High this summer, has announced her engagement to Glen Dubois of Pender Harbour. Marriage plans are still well ahead, for Martina will be attending SFU in January to get a degree in education.

SICK LIST

Still on the sick list are Mary Partriquin in St. Mary's Hospital and Ev. Shannon at her home. John Smith, now home after the fall which broke his wrist, is most disappointed that the accident forced him to cancel his proposed trip to Europe.

PNE AND GROUSE MOUNTAIN TOUR

A number of residents from the Redrooffs Road joined a trip organized by Ben of Continental Travel last Wednesday when two bus loads of people spent a most enjoyable day in perfect weather conditions. First came a visit to the PNE to hear Jim Nabors, one moment fooling in his Gomer Pyle character and the next moving the vast audience in the Pacific Coliseum to a hushed silence with the singing of "How Great Thou Art".

After time for a look around and by way of the Skyride to the 3,700-foot peak. There, in Grouse Nest Restaurant, the travellers enjoyed an excellent dinner while gazing down at the panorama of Vancouver and watching as hang gliders soared back and forth, obviously enjoyed a real bird's eye view.

A slight hitch in departing from Grouse Mountain caused some anxiety as to whether the buses would make the ferry, but with the co-operation of all concerned, the tour arrived home on schedule. It was such a perfect day that many of the passengers wondered why they had taken so long to make that thrilling ascent of Grouse Mountain.

It was interesting to hear from Jerry Williams that Grouse Mountain was named by his father, the late Sidney Williams. He was a civil engineer who was surveying Stanley Park and the north shore towards the end of the last century and he gave the mountain its name because of the numerous blue grouse to be seen there.

MASTER MARINERS MUSTER

The Lord Mayor of London is by career a naval man, and, so, on a recent unofficial visit to Vancouver, he was entertained by the Company of Master Mariners. Three Sunshine Coast mariners who were in Vancouver to attend a cocktail party in his honour were Captain Bill Higgs, Captain J.S.T. Williams and Captain Bill Dolmage.

JOGGING IN HACKETT PARK

While visiting old friends in Greene Court last week, your reporter was surprised to see how many people, young and old, were making use of Hackett Park for jogging off the superfluous pounds. At recess, students came hurrying from the school to jog a few times around the park and later in the day business men from Sechelt and older people could be seen unwinding after a hard day's work.

Since the ground is fairly rough, Reg Smears, resident of Greene Court, was heard to remark that it would certainly be a big improvement if a track could be made around the park for jogging. He considers that such a track need not be more than 24 inches wide and could be made by a rototiller. The narrower the track, the more quickly it would become packed down and in good condition for serious jogging.

Roberts' reunion

An event of some local interest took place in Vancouver recently when the sons and daughters of the late Bill and Margaret Roberts of Roberts Creek met for a reunion.

Margaret (Dollie) Stanley of Powell River, Syd Roberts of Pender Harbour, Connie Potter of Burnaby, Art Roberts of Burnaby and Kay Kitchen of Virginia enjoyed a walk and picnic in Stanley Park. They were accompanied by husbands, wives and relations. They also had a dinner at the Harvester in North Vancouver.

Many childhood memories were recalled but no one could remember the last time the five Roberts had been together.

Selects finish second

The Sechelt Selects soccer team placed second in the Squamish Native Invitational August 27 and 29 at Centennial Park in Squamish.

The Selects took a disappointing 2-1 loss to Musqueam in the Sunday finals, played in pouring rain and gathering darkness.

On Saturday the Selects took the Mount Currie Tzills 4-1 and then trounced Duncan-United 8-1 that afternoon. They rolled over Musqueam 6-3 Sunday afternoon before dropping the finals match.

Musqueam had the Selects 2-0 when Darren Dixon scored the Sechelt team's only goal in the last 10 minutes of the game.

Sports Briefs

By RICK CROSBY

The fishing off the Sechelt Peninsula is probably better than at many of the well-known spots on the lower B.C. coast. I can personally attest to this from countless summers on the luxurious waters off Thormanby Island, Epsom Point and Texada Island.

For weeks on end my partner and I would go out day after day and I believe we never got skunked.

We would fish the kelp bed off the Thormanby Island clay banks, running it south from Welcome Pass up toward Pender Harbour. Fish it when the tide is low, nine or ten feet deep in places, and troll up and down just outside the kelp. Use a No. 4 Tom-Mac with one ounce weight and make your turns half an hour before and after the tide changes.

From here you might try Epsom Point on the other side of Thormanby. The waters here are deep. Troll in a line out from the point in to the straight towards Texada. Moochers have their spots in this area with springs over 30 pounds being your aim. Troll with a large Tom-Mac and flasher or even a plug. Following the line of the point from shore out into the straight will yield a fair catch. Always troll out from the island, making your turn about a mile offshore. Start to get excited on your return run.

FISHING REPORT

John Buckhingham of Smitty's Marina in Gibsons reports good fishing in the early part of last week with coho in the 7-10 pound range from Gower Point to Roberts Creek.

Lloyd Davis of Harbour Marina in Garden Bay says that Pender Harbour fishing last week was fair with the largest catch being an 18 pound spring caught off Daniel Point. In all about 60 salmon were caught in the Pender Harbour area last week.

Bertha Rock off Mary Island and the south end of Texada Island have been excellent, Davis said. One boat off the south end of Texada reported 24 salmon in 1½ hours while another boat in the same area brought in 16 in 1½ hours.

In all of the three areas, live bait is the order of the day — if you can get it.

GIBSONS CURLING

Speed limits are in kilometres per hour. It may be easy to forget, but don't.
Too much depends on your remembering. Keep on driving as carefully as you always have in school zones, hospital zones, on ramps and curves.
Even though the speed limit number is higher than you're accustomed to—remember that they indicate kilometres per hour—not miles per hour.
REMEMBER—DON'T FORGET.
You too can measure up
Actual speed limits will be established in accordance with local regulations.

Carl Dixon is first local Indian Special Constable

A member of the Sechelt Indian Band was sworn in as an RCMP constable last week in a ceremony attended by senior officers of the force and the chiefs of three coastal nations.

Carl Dixon, 30, a former child-care worker, becomes the ninth person in B.C. and the fiftieth in Canada to join the RCMP as part of the Indian Special Constable Program.

The program began in 1971 in Saskatchewan, at the suggestion of native people, as a way to bridge the gap between police and Indians.

After a three month training period at RCMP headquarters in Regina, Dixon will become a regular member of the Sechelt detachment with the rank of Special Constable.

His oath of office and oath of secrecy were administered Thursday in the band's boardroom by Inspector Cameron Munroe, commanding officer of the RCMP's Lower Mainland section.

Sechelt Band Manager Clarence Joe said the occasion was "another historic day for us. I know Carl Dixon is setting a good example, especially for our young, teenage boys."

Dixon, who grew up in Sechelt and has worked in many B.C. communities, estimates that 70 per cent of his time will be spent exclusively on native cases. One of the major reasons he decided to become a police officer, Dixon said, was "so I could be back with my people, working with my people." Married, with no children, he added that the biggest drawback to his new job is the regulation short haircut, a statement his wife readily agreed with.

Other dignitaries at the September 1 ceremony included Calvin Craigan, chief of the Sechelt band, Chief Cy Baker of the Squamish people and Chief Billy Mitchell of the Sliammon.

Other RCMP representatives wre S-Sgt. Stan Nowick, senior NCO of the RCMP's western division and native policy co-ordinator, and Sgt. Doug Farenholtz of the Sechelt office.

CHIEF CY BAKER of the Squamish nation stands behind RCMP Inspector Cameron Munroe as he administers the oath of office to Carl Dixon of the Sechelt Indian Band. Dixon becomes a regular member of the RCMP with special responsibility for working with native people. He leaves next month for a training session at the force's headquarters in Regina.

In memory of Jack Edmond

John Edward Edmond, long-time resident of Pender Harbour, passed away Saturday night, August 27, at St. Mary's Hospital in Sechelt.

Born near Carp, Ontario, in 1900, he lived a full and interesting life. He first worked as an office boy for Mr. Fripp, M.P., in Ottawa around 1916 and it was Mr. Fripp who got him into the navy. Jack Edmond served his country in both World Wars, joining the navy in the First World War at the tender age of 16. He narrowly missed the famous Halifax Explosion having been transferred to a mine sweeper that was 21 miles at sea when the explosion took place.

An account of his story of the explosion appeared in an Ontario paper at the time: "It felt like a giant wave; then the shock came and everything in our little smack rattled fiercely," said the Carleton County boy, who looked right at home in his naval haberdashery. "We thought it was a mine, but afterwards huge clouds of funny coloured smoke began to dot the sky, and one of our officers guessed one of the 'fireworks' boats had gone up. It was a good thing we were out at sea because our boats were right next to the Niobe." He served as a sergeant in World War 11.

Throughout his life he held many exciting jobs, ranging from work in lumber camps back East as a boy and later to the Bank of Montreal in its formative years where his name is on the honour roll of the bank. Jack moved West and was a reporter for the Vancouver Sun in its early years, finally settling as a fisherman at Pender Harbour.

He served 21 years on the board of directors of the Pender Harbour Credit Union and was well known and respected in the community. Jack Edmond is remembered with special love by his wife Sarah, his two daughters, Mrs. Isabel Gooldrup of Pender Harbour, and Ivy Lee of Sechelt, and their families including five grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. A small intimate service was held Tuesday, August 30, which was attended with reverence by his immediate family.

Two Sechelt men jailed for assault on policeman

Two Sechelt men who jumped a police officer during a disturbance at the Timber Days celebration earlier this year were sent to jail last week despite protests from their lawyer that they were "basically good boys".

Charged with common assault, James Bothwell, 30, and Kenneth West, 27, were arrested in May when a fight broke out at the Hackett Park beer gardens after someone tried to sell the two some marijuana.

When Constable Gordon McIntosh attempted to intervene, Bothwell and West leapt on his back and wrestled him to the ground, breaking his watch strap and tearing the buttons from his uniform.

McIntosh also received minor back injuries.

But defence lawyer David Nuttall argued before Provincial Court Judge Ian Walker Wednesday that it had not been the intention of the accused "to assault a police officer."

While the two men had indeed become "involved in a melee," said their lawyer, "the incident was a small one," blown out of proportion,

Noting that a pre-sentence report recommended jailing both men. Nutall maintained that it "seems senseless to put a boy from a small community into jail." And West, he continued, despite a previous conviction of assaulting a police office, "would feel hurt if jailed."

According to Nutall the fight had been provoked "by a drug-selling hippie", and both Bothwell and West hold McIntosh "in the highest esteem".

"This type offence strikes at the very root of the administration of justice," disagreed Crown Prosecutor High McCallum, telling Walker that such attacks make "it harder for police to refrain from violence. I submit that these are very serious offences."

McCallum reminded the judge that both men had previous criminal records.

In passing sentence, Walker told Bothwell and West "you affected the ability of Constable McIntosh to do his duty. Police officers must be inviolable in our community.

"Your counsel is mistaken, in my opinion, when he says you're good boys."

Stating the "protection of society is ultimate here," Walker sent Bothwell to Oakalla for three months and West for six. Upon release both men will be subject to a further two years of probation and banned from entering licensed premises.

In other court news, two men and a woman were found guilty Wednesday of drinking and driving offences.

Ulla Baker of Sechelt was fined $350 for impaired driving and had her license suspended for three months.

Edward Jeffries, also of Sechelt, was fined the minimum $50 for impaired driving and placed on one year's probation.

David West, 21, a Vancouver truck driver, was convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol reading of over .08 and fined $400.

Card of Thanks

THE FAMILY of the late John Edmond wish to thank the doctors and staff of St. Mary's Hospital for the excellent care and attention he received during his final illness at St. Mary's. We are certainly grateful. — Sarah Edmond, Isabel Gooldrup and Ivy Lee. 3193-41

Personal

"There is nothing that cannot be made cheaper, and sold for less; and the man who considers price alone is this manufacturer's victim."

The above was written years ago, but it still applies today. Particularly to a person buying radial tires.

Our company has been selling and servicing tires on the Sunshine Coast since 1964. We began selling radial tires to our customers in this area, eight years ago. We have learned something very interesting about radial tires. Here is the lesson we have learned . . . "No American-designed radial tire will deliver the mileage in the Sunshine Coast area that the European-designed and manufactured radial tire will."

The above statement is borne out by actual fact. Tire after worn-out radial tire has been removed from vehicles in this area after rolling only 12 to 20 thousand miles! Tires that were sold to the customer on the basis that they would deliver 40,000 miles. Tire after radial tire has been taken off vehicles in this area by our two stores because the car has been shimmying and vibrating. No amount of balancing would help, because these tires had 'misaligned belts'. Often, these tires were on brand new vehicles!

All of these tires were American-designed radials!

In case after case where our stores switched the customer to a European-designed radial, he got 45 to 50 thousand miles, and his shake, rattle and roll disapeared

These are not American case histories, or even Canadian case histories; they are Sunshine Coast case histories that your local OK Tire Stores in Sechelt and Powell River have personally dealt with.

By all means, buy radial tires for your vehicle, but please consider the above when you are shopping. Get the facts from your dealer as to how an American radial tire is made . . . how a European radial tire is made, and exactly why the latter is so much better. If your dealer can't or won't tell you, perhaps you are dealing at the wrong place. Don't let a $10.00 price difference blind you to a quality difference that will give you up to double the mileage.

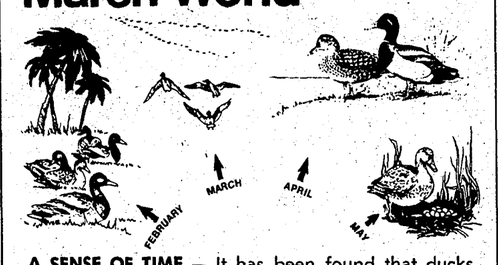
Marsh World



A SENSE OF TIME — It has been found that ducks and geese (and most other migratory birds) are sensitive to changes in the length of day and night (and, therefore light and dark) which occurs with the cycle of the seasons. The sensitivity to length of day and night keeps them attuned to the environmental changes which occur throughout the year and times their seasonal activities. For example, the spring migration and reproductive cycle of ducks closely follows the increasing hours of daylight in the spring and therefore assures that the ducks will return to their nesting grounds and carry out their reproductive activity at the same time each year.

Garden Corner

— by Guy Symonds

"To err is human" — and certainly someone was human enough to err in putting together the last "Garden Corner". The quote from the column of August 31: "The garden books will remind you that it is impossible to have lettuce and spinach in the fall". This is, of course, the exact opposite to what is the case. So, it is POSSIBLE to have lettuce and spinach in the fall or, if you prefer, it is NOT IMPOSSIBLE to have lettuce and spinach in the fall! So much for that — no recriminations, only an apology.

The preoccupation of this writer with soils and soil management cannot have escaped the notice of those who read this column. The mystery and magic of this renewable resource which alone keeps the human race alive on earth is awe inspiring. When, therefore, an article on soil biology and its contribution to agriculture was encountered in the farm paper "Country Life in B.C.", the opportunity seemed too good to miss.

So with thanks and acknowledgement to Dr. Alan Carter, assistant professor in the department of soil science at the University of British Columbia, this column takes the liberty of passing along the knowledge that can be so useful to those who use the soil for business or pleasure.

Dr. Carter starts by explaining that soil biology is the study of the organisms that spend part or all of their lives feeding in the soil. These include plants, parts of plants such as the roots, fungi and animals. It is the plants that by the magic of photosynthesis convert solar energy into organic compounds, and all other organisms depend directly or indirectly on plants for food.

When plants die, for instance, fungi break them down into what is called "litter" by the process of decomposition.

Soil animals are those without backbones such as earthworms and spiders, and those with backbones like mice and moles.

In any natural system or cultivated system be it forest, grassland or garden, there are two major components. These are (1) the above-ground plants and associated organisms and (2) the soil and associated organisms including the below-ground parts of plants. These two components are interdependent, and the links between them are of great importance in plant production.

One of the most common and most valuable of soil organisms is the earthworm. Under favourable circumstances, in a compost heap for instance, they can influence the rate of decomposition more than any other group of soil animals. There are many species of earthworms. Some inhabit the top layer of litter and never go deep into the soil. The larger kind still get food from the top layer of litter, of course, but they also burrow deep into the mineral soil that forms part of their diet. Cultivation disturbs the earthworm population, and an area of untouched grassland will support large numbers. These, however, quickly diminish under yearly cultivation. When left alone the population soon re-establishes itself and climbs again. One of the many useful functions of this fascinating animal is that its burrowing creates channels to the thicker roots of herbage, draining away surplus water and carrying the all important air supply to the root system.

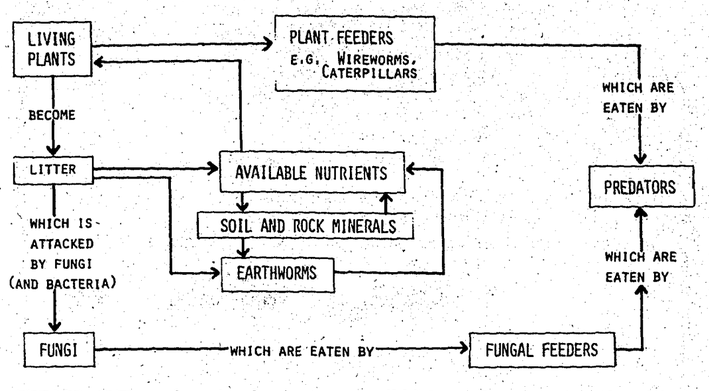
This is good stuff to be borne in mind in this, one of the most important periods to the fall gardener — the fall months.

The work done in the next couple of months or so will have a big bearing on what sort of garden is harvested next year.

As soon as a piece of the vegetable plot is cleared the fall rye should be broadcast. The compost heap must be put into shape and the decomposing agent introduced while the weather is still warm.

We have a marvellous piece of equipment in the form of soil that is ready to respond to whatever treatment we give it. As has been said before, with gardening and farming there is neither success nor failure, only results.



FUNGI AND such animals as earthworms play an important role in soil biology, decomposing plant life in an integral link in the chain of life.

Quiltmaking preserves family history in a unique fashion

Television and electric blankets have made the art of quiltmaking a pastime rather than a necessity though it still flourishes under the guise of therapy, community fund raising or just plain fun.

An unusual quilt shown at the Pender Harbour arts and crafts display recently was one made by Mrs. Richards of Middle Point. It was designed to be a calendar of her guests during 1976.

Each block contained a date, name of visitor, and included a machine-embroidered picture where rods, salmon, country scenes and symbols all told their story.

It is nothing new to find family history woven into the pattern of a quilt. In fact it could not be excluded from those made in the old days. Then the quiltmakers were limited to cloth that was available, most had to construct a harmonious whole from worn out clothing, scraps left from other projects and pieces exchanged with neighbours.

As work progressed each small square brought with it something of its previous character. Summer picnics and winter snow rides were stitched into place. Long after friends had gone they might be remembered by a bright piece of calico.

Today materials are easily obtained. Quilts can be made of synthetic fibres in a myriad colours from the corner store, or they may span the world with a square of silk from India or woven goat hair from Afghanistan sent home by our travelling youth.

If one admires the handiwork of quiltmakers perhaps they may point to another square and say "But this one..." — Then the book has opened and the story begins. — Helen B. Reid.

Focus on Fitness

We are told that the key to fitness is a balanced diet, fresh air and exercise. Those of us who are unfit often scoff at the idea that a brisk walk regularly will help to get us back in shape. However, if proof is needed we have only to look about us at the senior adults in our community. They come from an era where "junk food" was unknown, the main method of transportation was walking and a good deal of work was done out of doors.

In the past three years that I have had the privilege of working with the senior adults in our area, I am constantly reminded that just because someone looks a bit bent, has grey hair and appears to be frail is no reason to label him unfit! Many of these frail people walk miles in the course of a day. I know some very active 80-90 year olds that maintain beautiful gardens, and if further proof is needed just look in at the Sechelt seniors on a Wednesday afternoon when they have their "Old Tyme" dances.

Activity Centres here and throughout the province have enabled seniors to plan programs of their own, and you may be sure that dancing and carpet bowling are on most agendas. Those centres that offer full programs five days a week also find space for keep fit and yoga classes. I am often asked what type of recreation is needef for seniors. People tend to forget or perhaps just do not realize that if you played golf, swam, curled or bowled when you were young, the chances are that you will continue these activities, sometimes on a greater scale once you retire.

This is not to imply that retirement brings one to utopia as far as fitness is concerned. This is also a time of losses, failing sight, deafness, stiff limbs and loneliness at the loss of a mate. Nutrition often suffers when one has to cook only for himself or herself.

Several publications are available to assist people in planning meals. The "Senior Chef" food guide for the older person (nutrition tips and ideas) is available through the local Health Unit Programs such as arm chair ballet, yoga and light movement excercises have been developed for seniors with physical ailments. Given the right location, medical advice and proper supervision, these types of programs can be of help, but I cannot stress too strongly that one should have medical advice and constant re-evaluation as they could also do a lot of damage.

Recently when I was away at a convention, I met a very interesting lady. She admitted to being in her 70's and proceeded to tell me about an excercise class she conducts. She had been asked if she would take this special class to help those with stiff muscles. She agreed, but at the age of 71 she had to learn to swim, as the course was excercising in a swimming pool!

I think there is a message here for all of us. — Louise Hume, Co-ordinator of Senior Services, Sunshine Coast Community Resource Society.

Don Harron attempts to awaken Morningside

Canadian actor Don Harron, the new host of Morningside, weekdays 9:13 - noon, says he welcomes the opportunity to leave his alter-ego Charlie Farquharson at home and just be himself. He takes over Monday, September 12, in still another attempt to put new life into an outworn format. Maxine Crook returns to TV and Harry Brown to staff announcer.

Special Occasion, Sunday 5:05 p.m., presents a documentary, Bruce Cockburn in Concert. Bill Usher, percussionist and one of the back-up musicians on a 40-city tour of Canada earlier this year, compiled this emotion-packed story of the tour. The use od the kunstknopf microphone which gives the listener a realistic, all-round sound adds to the illusion of being there.

Usher's collage of sound takes the listener onstage, backstage, into the audience, to meet critics, family and friends of the star and his group.

A new series of festival celebrations replaces Opera by Request on Saturday afternoons, presenting in Part I at 2:04 p.m. the National Arts Centre production of Mozart's The Magic Flute. Clean autos are second to humour in 'Car Wash'

A gallery of gifted but relatively unknown actors are the stars of "Car Wash," opening Sunday, September 11, at the Twilight Theatre.

"Car Wash," written by Joel Schumacher and directed by Michael Schultz, is the comedy story of a variety of people, ranging from the workers to a Beverly Hills matron, whose lives intermesh during one day at a car wash.

Director Schultz, whose "Cooley High" won both critical acclaim and box office success in 1975, made an indelible mark on the American theatre with his direction of outstanding productions by the Negro Ensemble Company. The third black director ever to stage a Broadway play, he won a New York Drama Critics Award and a Tony for best direction of "Does a Tiger Wear a Necktie?"

Guest stars in the film include comedian George Carlin, Jack Kehoe, the Pointer Sisters and Richard Pryor.

"Car Wash" runs through Wednesday, September 14. It is rated for mature audiences.

Opening Thursday, September 8, at the Twilight is "The Boatniks," a Walt Disney production starring Robert Morse as an accident-prone Coast Guard ensign and Stefanie Powers as his romantic interest.

The film is the story of the U.S. Coast Guard's trials and tribulations in dealing with the weekend yachtsman. It also stars Phil Silvers and co-stars Norman Fell, Mickey Shaughnessy, Wally Cox and Don Ameche.

"The Boatniks" is rated for general admission and runs through Saturday, September 10. There is a 2 p.m. matinee Saturday.

SHOGUN: A NOVEL OF JAPAN, BY James Clavell, Dell paperback, $2.75.

What makes a novel excellent? Does it offer sheer entertainment or a new dimension to thinking? Is it one into which a lot of research has been poured or is it the expression of pure creativity? Should it be of passing interest or does it live on in your mind? Likely, a novel of merit is all of these and much more.

Before buying it, I had heard a lot about SHOGUN — nothing specific, just that it was "a book you should read." I was not prepared to run out and get it, but when a professor accused that "as far as he knew, no one had ever finished it," the challenge was too much and I bought it.

It is a hefty thing — 1,210 pages which is a generous amount of text to describe an event that takes place over the period of a year. It took me three weeks to finish it, reading other books in the interval. SHOGUN began to look like a tattered old friend by the end of the third week but the time was well and pleasurably spent. It is indeed a great novel in the manner of GONE WITH THE WIND or HAWAII, and I am sure that Hollywood has either begun or will begin a film using it some day.

The event takes place in the Elizabethan era. The hero is Blackthorne, a British ship's pilot on a Dutch trader-warship. The crew becomes shipwrecked and captured by the Japanese who find them "barbarians." Their country is embroiled in a power struggle between two warlords, Ishido and Toranaga. Blackthorne manages to endear himself to Toranaga through the advice and translations of Mariko, a beautiful Japanese lady of the court. Of course, Blackthorne and Mariko become involved as the tension between the warlords increases. The lovers are caught in the intrigues of Toranaga and his plans for a takeover.

Although the plot is not unusual, what we learn about the attitudes and customs of sixteenth century Japanese is. The characters are clearly etched, the images ethereal, the essence of Japan intricately defined in the scenes surrounding the main characters. One is treated to an intimate close-up of Japanese home life, social structures and religion, as well as their frustrations in the transition from Buddhism to Christianity. SHOGUN will have you, like Blackthorne, thinking Japanese — a rare and rich treat.

Coast Fitness Service begins second year

The Sunshine Coast Fitness Service began its second year of operation this week with the help of a grant from the federal Canada Works program.

While continuing to offer sports activities and classes in exercise and dance to adults and children throughout the peninsula, additional emphasis will be placed this year on the medical and physical care of the body. More outdoor recreation activities are also planned.

Six staff members have been hired and are working from an office in Sechelt's Whitaker House. Fran Berger is returning to co-ordinate the Fitness Service and Joy Smith will again be the secretary. Other employees include Evans Hermon, Robi Peters, Ronnie Dunn and Barbara Laakso, all hired as fitness consultants.

Information on this year's program will be available later this month.

AUGUST WEATHER

The 63 mm rainfall recorded in eight consecutive days, August 21-28, is a return to more normal conditions following 1976 and 1975 with near record precipitation for the period, 103.1 mm and 104.4 mm respectively and the 1974 record low of only 3 mm. The 16-year average is 53.1 mm.

Almost three weeks of temperatures above 25 C was a record, although the high temperature of 30 C on August 16 did not quite equal the previous high of 31 C on July 29, 1971. The overnight low temperatures went down to 9 C on August 30.

One in five Canadian families suffers from arthritis serious enough to require medical care.

There is an extensive literature about biogas (or methane) generation and the technology is well advanced. Biogas units are popular in India, Italy, England, Germany and Africa, not only for the generation of fuel, but also as an efficient means of waste disposal. That's the beauty of the system; like composting toilets, biogas generators accept all organic wastes. Human and animal manures and garbage are routinely digested under anaerobic conditions to produce an infinitely renewable energy supply. And as an added bonus, the sludge residue is an excellent natural fertilizer.

Biogas systems can be home-made from empty containers and standard plumbing fixtures. There are several sources of detailed instructions showing how this may be done safely and inexpensively. Even a large capacity digester and gas storage tank shouldn't cost more than a few hundred dollars, including the tools to build it.

Scaled up to larger proportions, a biogas system might be a welcome addition to area A. The following scenario illustrates one of several ways in which gas generation could be integrated into an overall solutions to existing concerns and problems.

TRIAL BALLOON

People who subscribe to a regular garbage disposal service will be asked, as a condition of receiving that service, to collect compostable kitchen wastes separately in a plastic bag. Other material can be collected in paper bags or cardboard boxes. Householders who agree to store cans, glass and paper for special recycling day pickups will have their disposal service at half price.

On garbage collection day compostables in plastic bags are shredded into a large container. Other material is also gathered, separated as possible, and left in metal, glass and paper bins located in each community as before. (People who don't want or need a disposal service may still use local recycling bins.)

The garbage truck offloads its container of shredded garbage at a central depot. This could be near the Lion's property above our high school. Area A director Jack Paterson has a Canada Works grant proposal to develop adjacent land as part of the Pender Harbour Recreation Project. The central depot offers enclosed space to process and store recyclables. It also shelters biogas equipment that consumes daily rations of shredded garbage.

A calculated amount is fed to several digester tanks, each of which is connected to a common gas scrubbing unit and storage tank. The digesters, of 500-1,000 gallon capacity, are designed for portability on a flat bed truck. Properly fitted out, such an assembly serves as a pump-out truck for septic and holding tanks. When finished with that job, the digester tank is returned to the depot where its anaerobic contents are slurried with garbage and put into methane production. The flatbed is released for other duties.

Digester loading is regulated to allow periodic removal of tank residues. The sludge is dried and packaged as a rich organic fertilizer. Remaining liquid can be absorbed into shredded bark, dried, and offered as a mulch. During warmer months it could also be composted with shredded material collected by the Highways people.

The main income of this operation will be from subscriptions to the disposal service by permanent residents of Area A. Although an unknown percentage of householders will not participate, the area's population of 1,500 will nevertheless generate several times the volume of gas needed to power the operation described above. (That includes the two trucks, which can be converted to burn methane.) Sale of methane and proportionate income from the sale of fertilizer will be secondary sources. But they could easily rival or surpass recycling revenues. To this will also be added income from a north peninsula pump-out service.

The proposed location of this service industry is also important. A seasonal campsite was also suggested near the Lion's property. Since trash collection and pump-out services are based at the depot, the two land uses are compatible. By its presence on public land the industry's overhead expenses are minimized and custodians are provided for the campsite.

Captial necessary to start can be obtained from Central Mortgage and Housing, which will contribute up to 60 per cent of the cost of a sewage treatment plant. The remaining amount would be welcome from a local credit union willing to make a substantial act of faith in the ingenuity and resourcefulness of its own members. There's no reason why it shouldn't. A thoroughgoing proposal of this kind offers a unique investment opportunity. Its integrated approach uses available technology in a profitable scheme for providing important services in an environmentally appropriate way. What more can you ask?
