Hank Hall wants Sechelt site

Last week Hall approached Sechelt council asking permission to erect a temporary building on a parcel of commercially zoned land he owns near the Hydro right of way behind the building supply store.

A $100,000 performance bond would be posted by the developer as the proposed plant would not meet federal building code regulations.

For the last 15 months Hall's attempts to start an industrial park on his Cameo Land's subdivision on Field Road have been stalled by regional zoning by-laws and by complaints from local residents.

Hall recently negotiated a land swap with the Sunshine Coast Regional District that resulted in an exchange of the original 20-acre park site for a 20-acre piece of property now in the Agricultural Land Reserve, However, as Hall explained at the February 16 meeting, government approval for the swap may not be received for several months and his company needs to start production by April.

Saying he has resigned himself to manufacturing the first of his panels in Vancouver, Hall claimed a Peninsula Times report on local unemployment "convinced me to try one last time to keep the jobs on the Peninsula."

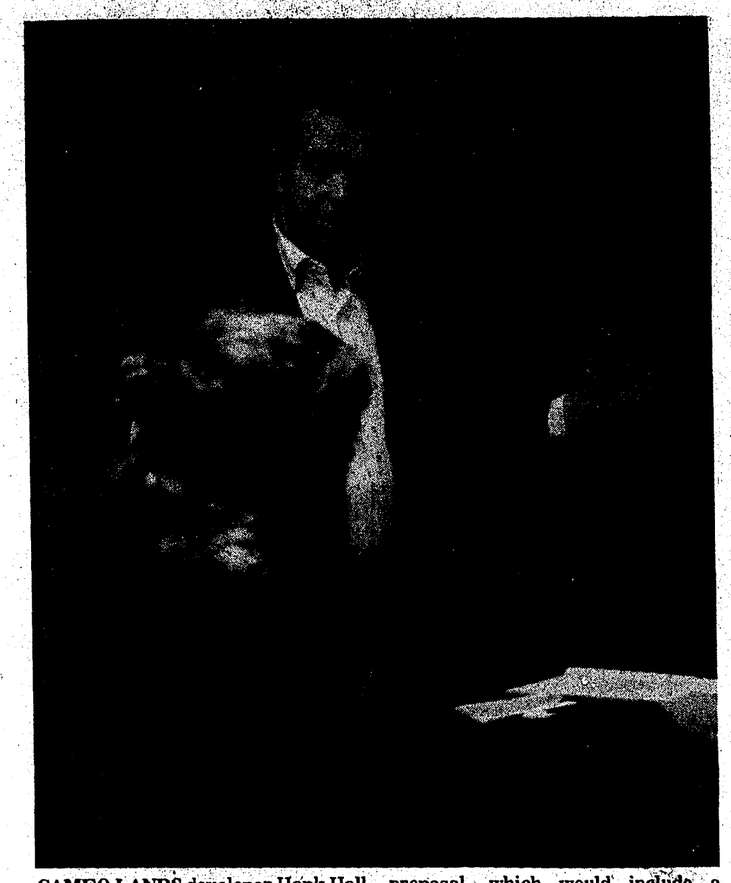
Hall's plans call for an 8,000-square-foot steel shell with a plastic covered roof to be erected on his Sechelt property. He promised the council there would be no pollution from the building and that it would meet Health Code standards.

"For four or five months," he told the council members, "you may have an eyesore on a main street. I don't think people will complain but you never know."

Hall estimated it would cost him $10,000 to put up the temporary building and then move it to Cameo Lands once he had received permission to build on the Robert's Creek site.

His $100,000 bond was, he assured the aldermen, a guarantee the building would be moved and not re-sold.

Sechelt council gave their approval in principle to the idea subject to legal advice.



CAMEO LANDS developer Hank Hall now wants to start his manufacturing plant in Sechelt. Here he explains his proposal, which would include a $100,000 performance bond, to village alderman Frank Leitner.

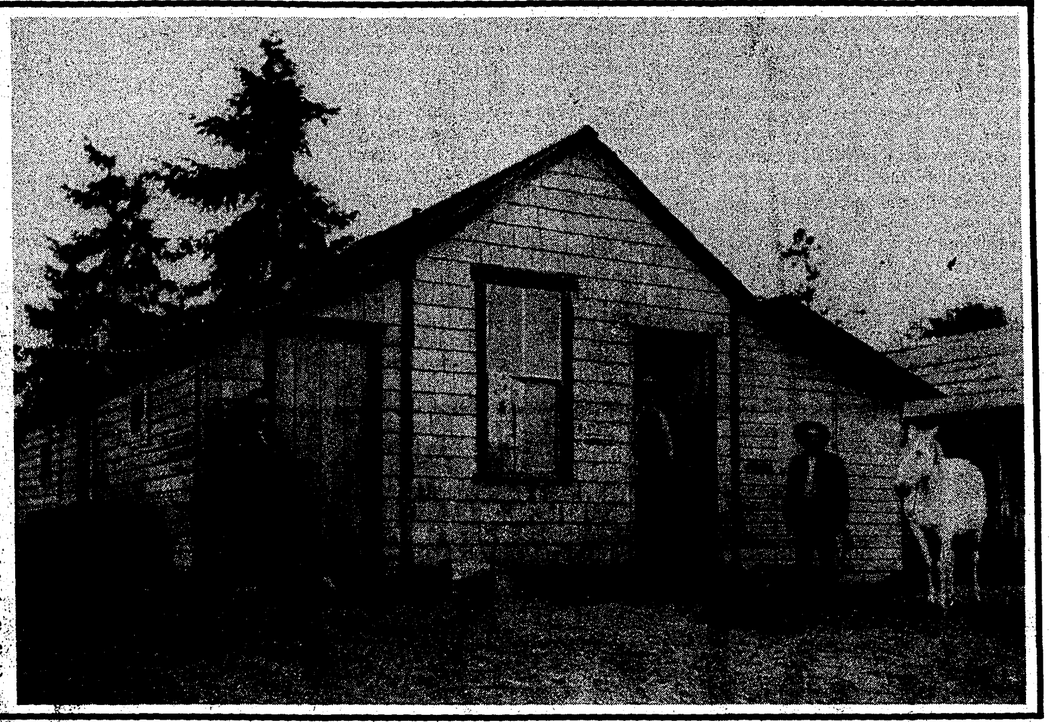
Heritage Week

During the next few months the final draft of the Sechelt Vicinity Study will be released and its recommendations will determine the direction of village expansion.

This week, however, is National Heritage Week in Canada, a time, says the government press release, "dedicated to preserving the best of Canada's man-made and natural heritage."

The photograph opposite and others inside — a log cabin, a twin-spired church, a waterfront mansion — are relics of Sechelt's heritage, a past destroyed by time and fire.



OPENED IN MARCH, 1896, Sechelt's first post office was located near the waterfront on the west side of Wharf Road. Bert Whitaker became the first postmaster and between his buildings and the barn to the right ran the trail to Porpoise Bay. Pete Le Vesque, or "French Pete" as he was better known, holds the horse he would use to collect passenger luggage from the steamships docked at the Sechelt Wharf. Photographed in 1904.

Weekly garbage pickup proposal is in jeopardy

Weekly garbage pickup on the Sunshine Coast is in jeopardy after the lowest tender for the job was rejected as "unrealistic."

The Public Utilities Committee of the regional board decided last week that the job could not be done for the $42,000 estimated in the bid. The committee also rejected a second tender from the current contractor, saying his budget of $72,000 was more than they were prepared to spend.

Peninsula homes and businesses in most regional areas now have bi-weekly garbage collection at an annual cost of $32,000.

Area 'B' representative Peter Hoemberg told the other committee members until the regional district may either have to go into the collection business itself or seriously consider remaining on the twice monthly schedule. He claimed he was not in favour of the first option "as so far free enterprise has done a good job." Hoemberg then added that he was not "convinced that a weekly garbage pickup is necessary" saying people in his area were not in favour of it.

Ed Johnston also maintained that the "bunch of old age pensioners" in Area 'C' were content with the bi-weekly collections.

The directors estimated that doubling the service should only raise the cost of picking up garbage by one-third and they decided to ask the two contract bidders to prepare new submissions for the February 25 regional board meeting.

In "an attempt to clear some rumors that are flying around," the director of the Recreation Commission had some strong words last week for regional board representative Bernie Mulligan's suggestion that Area 'F' might join the village of Gibsons swimming pool project.

Speaking to the February 16 Sechelt Council meeting Norman Watson warned, "Some people are thinking Area 'F' and Gibsons should join forces and use their total recreational assets to build a swimming pool. At first look this seems vastly favourable, but it is not quite as simple as it appears. If they do some arithmetic they will find that out."

Watson, who was at the Sechelt meeting to report on his commission's progress, estimates it will cost a minimum of $350,000 to construct a pool in Gibsons and that the annual operating deficit would be at least $20,000. For the $350,000 people would get a 20 meter heated pool but uncovered except for a plastic bubble, he said.

Cost of building the pool would be paid for out of a recent $300,000 federal Neigh-

Gibsons Council approves new sewer line

Gibsons council last Tuesday approved construction of a new $17,635 sewer line to serve residences located along parts of South Fletcher, Winn Road and Stewart Road.

The line, which will be built by village personnel, will ultimately service 21 lots, of which 11 could be hooked up immediately, according to Alderman Ted Hume.

Given annual parcel taxes of $110, the line could be paid for in about 7½ years, he said.

Meeting in committee, council approved pay raises of eight per cent for the village staff.

Council increased their own indemnity by $10 per month, bringing the aldermen's annual total to $1,610 each and the mayor's to $2,750.

Council also appointed Ralph Jones municipal inspector, incorporating such duties as licence and building inspection.

Alderman Hume delivered a report on progress in drafting the proposed parking by-law. There are difficulties in enforcement of such a law, he said, including the possibility that enforcement would tend to discourage shoppers in the Lower Village.

"It's really difficult when you think of how we're going to enforce it," he said, Hume said he planned to visit West Vancouver and North Vancouver to study their experiences with parking by-laws.

He said some thought had been given to the possibility of combining the job of enforcing the parking by-law with the job of municipal dog catcher.

The village has no dog catcher at the present time because it still has no pound, but council was assured work on that facility is proceeding. Lacking a pound, the village does now have a panel van designed for rounding up offending mongrels. Village clerk Jack Copland picked up the vehicle in Vancouver Saturday and drove it back to Gibsons, where it awaits completion of the pound, probably next month.

In other action, council gave second and third readings to the rezoning by-law for Gibsons Harbour Lodge, to be located on Gower Point Road below the municipal offices.

That action was taken despite the fact that developers have not yet produced descriptive information on the lodge requested some months ago by council.

The rezoning action was taken with the assurance that no building permit for the facility would be issued until the documents had been received and approved by council.

Kinsmen Club member Clay Carvey also met with council last Tuesday to discuss possible Kinsmen assistance in the planning and financing of the proposed village swimming pool.

Carvy urged the aldermen to be cautious in their approach in order to avoid "the kind of situation Powell River got into."

Carvey said a Kinsmen study of a swimming pool indicated that the operating deficit would make an open pool infeasible. He said the Kinsmen estimated that deficit would amount to about $65,000 a year.

"You'd have only four months to make that with an open pool, but 12 months with a closed pool," he noted.

Alderman Jim Metzler previously has estimated that the pool's operating deficit would be about $35,000 a year.

"There is no way the Village of Gibsons will ever be able to support the total operational costs of that pool. We know that," Metzler said last week.

He said various plans for supplementing the pool's income have been considered, including the possibility of renting pool time to the school district.

Metzler also suggested that grant monies might be available to help defray the operating deficit.

Mayor Larry Labonte said he intended to appoint a swimming pool committee in the near future and that he would include representatives from areas E and F on the committee. Individuals from those areas have expressed interest in participating in the project, although Metzler noted that "it is too late this year" for that to happen.

Representatives from the Kinsmen also were invited to join the committee.

Intrepid traveller proves age no final barrier to adventure

By MARY TINKLEY

Mrs. Helen Dratsch of Redrooffs Road is already well known as an enterprising and intrepid traveller. During the past few years she has explored Mexico and Central America, travelling alone by bus and train. It has long been her ambition to make a trip around the world, following in the footsteps of Christopher Columbus, Marco Polo and Alexander the Great. Now in her early seventies, crippled with arthritis so that she needs a cane to get around, she decided it was high time to get started on such a project. On September 23 she started out on her great adventure and on January 12, nearly four months later, she arrived home with her mission successfully accomplished, having girdled the earth by means of plane, bus and train.

She first flew to England, where she visited friends near London and went to Cornwall and some of the south coast resorts. Flying to Amsterdam, she took a canal trip and visited Rembrandt House, Rijk Museum and the Heinicken brewery. She had left Germany 28 years before, never expecting to return, so her visit to Europe was to be a sentimental journey, revisiting places she had known and taking a look at places she had never had an opportunity to see. She bought a Eurail pass and started off on her first ride to Hamburg, where she met two former colleagues with whom she had worked for 22 years in a bank in Stettin. At Lubeck, she had a reunion with more of her old colleagues. What memories this reunion awoke, for it was with this group of friends that she had fled to the West on April 26, 1945. Heading north to Denmark, she spent two days in Copenhagen and two days in Stockholm, then took the night train to Bremen for a visit with relatives at Rheinhessen, near Worms. After a few days at St. Gallen, Switzerland, she crossed into Italy to revisit Venice which she had last seen in 1941.

The old Palazzi looked dirty and neglected, but despite the decay, the city still had its old magic charm for her. She did extensive walks from which she would return by vaporetto, the small motor boats which run along the canals, serving as buses to the Venetians. She used the vaporetto to explore the Canal Grande and to visit Murano where the famous Venetian glass is made.

Again taking the night train, Mrs. Dratsch travelled via Milan to Genoa, continuing by daylight along the Riviera to Carcassonne near the Spanish border. Here she stayed overnight to visit the old walled city. Another train journey of 3½ hours took her to Lourdes, a town surrounded by mountains and consisting almost entirely of hotels and souvenir shops. It was the end of the season and the hotels were almost empty. Next day she took the long walk to the Domain de la Grotte where the waters of the spring are claimed to have healing powers and attract thousands of pilgrims. She found the church beautiful and impressive.

Taking the night train into Spain, she arrived in Madrid in pelting rain. She spent some time in the Prado and Retiro Park, but she found the weather cold and miserable and the city not to her liking. So she pressed on to Toledo, a delightful city with picturesque streets, so narrow that the pedestrians have to press themselves against the houses to make room for the traffic to pass. The weather was sunny and there were points from which she obtained spectacular views of the surrounding country. She visited the fine cathedral and several of Toledo's famous churches.

Next day it was on to Seville, which is mainly an industrial city, but she was interested in the cathedral and the Giralda, a remarkable example of Arabian art erected in 1195. The following day, Mrs. Dratsch was in Granada, a former capital of the Moorish Kingdom of Granada. Heavy rain made sightseeing difficult but she found the 14th century Alhambera alone made the visit worthwhile. The rain was still pouring down when she left for Barcelona. There she spent a few hours sightseeing before catching the night train for Germany. Towards morning, the train was passing Swiss vineyards and the passengers had some excellent views of Lake Geneva and Lake Neuchatel. Since her Eurail pass was shortly to expire, Mrs. Dratsch did not loiter in Germany, but took the Orient

Planes disturbing the peace

Editor, The Times;

Sir: At the risk of being thought of as repititious or boring, or as a complainer, or gadfly, or perhaps over-zealous, I write once again on the subject of an ever-worsening problem on the Sunshine Coast...the noise of airplanes.

Today, a sunny and mild winter Sunday I spend most of the day in the garden, from about 10 in the morning to 5 in the afternoon. During this time there was hardly a single moment, literally, when the drone of a plane was not the predominating sound that I was hearing. I am not exaggerating or stretching the facts for effect; no sooner did the engine noise of one plane begin to fade, so that the seagulls could once again be noticed, when another plane entered the picture and continued the disturbance. A few times, two and three airplanes together were directly overhead. In fact, rather than a day's relative quiet being now and again disturbed by the occasional plane, one had a day of continual droning punctuated by the occasional moment or two of peace.

This is a bizarre and rather frightening situation to find oneself in, especially considering that the day I am referring to was in winter, and not the so-called tourist season. Furthermore, I live in Robert's Creek, on the Lower Road, not next door to an airport. Some stretches of fog this winter have provided a certain salvation from this phenomenon; but what will happen when the summer arrives, not only this year but in future years, as the population increases and the popularity of flying spreads? With more people and planes we'll have more flights and subsequently more people available to be disturbed. Where does it end?

This letter is not spawned by feelings of anti-development, anti-technology or anti-airplane, it arises simply from a love of this part of the world and a desire not to see its special qualities sucked away forever, in an atmosphere of complacency, by the encroachment of those aspects of life that are acknowledged to be, to say the least, particularly undesirable. If anyone in the flight path of these planes did "not notice" the noise or "is used to it" then it is quite possible that that person has already been conditioned to passive acceptance of what is known to be a debilitating influence on their well-being. A while ago, at a meeting to discuss the Gibsons harbour development someone commented on the airplane noise around the harbour. The developer responded that, as with the noise from cars, people would get used to it.

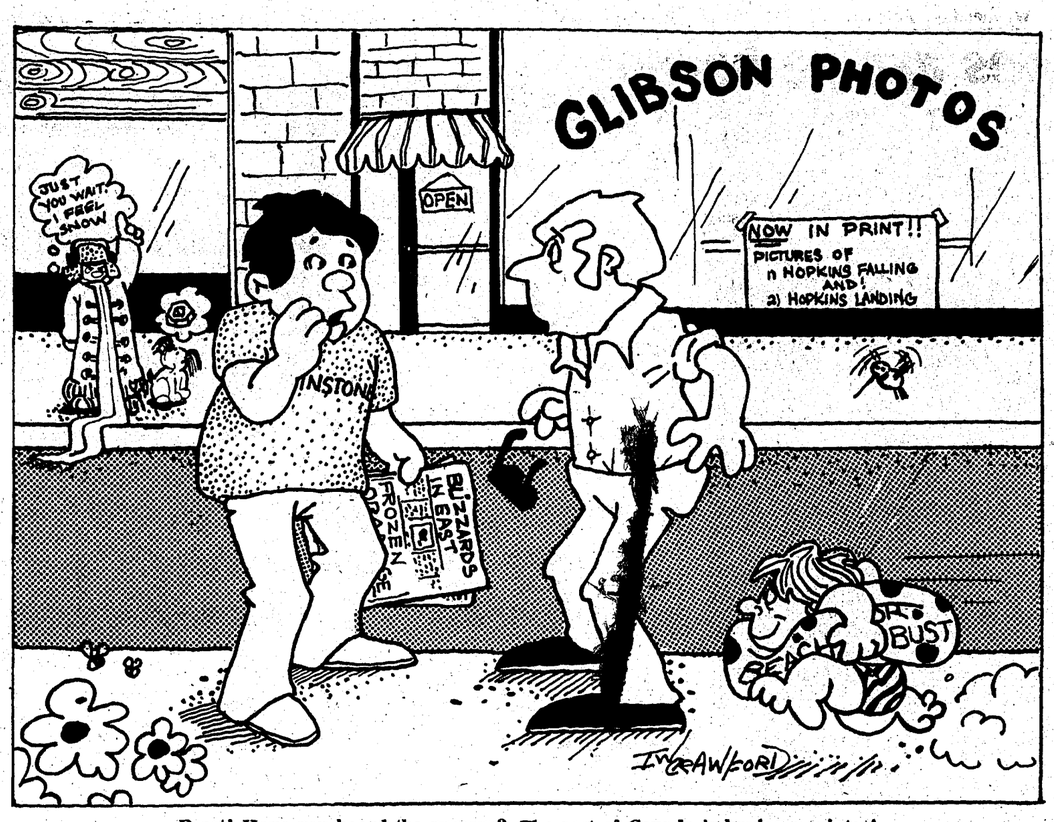
Probably nine out of ten of the planes passing over are flying "legally," that is, above their minimum altitude requirements. Unfortunately, therein lies the problem. Our residential layout more or less follows the coastline; pilots however also prefer to follow the coast line. Some pilots perhaps don't see the problem in the larger sense of not only their one plane being heard only by themselves, but instead as one of numerous planes flying over thousands of people in hundreds of households below them. In essence they appear not to realize that it is only common sense and courtesy to not fly over that strip of houses below, but well away over the low mountains behind us, or perhaps as far as possible over the Strait where people will not be harassed by the sound of their engines.

Last summer during a period of high reader interest in this subject, a previous letter of mine prompted a retort from a local flyer. "I find it is a beautiful sight to rise over the land and watch the early rays of the morning sun peep over the tranquil mountains when it seems that the rest of the world is asleep," he wrote. Another response from a local alderman, also a flyer was, "The same people who complain go into their garden the same day pushing a power mower." It is the attitudes reflected by statements such as these that add a sense of futility to the achievement of any solution to the problem, by basic human consideration for others.

I have no idea what the destintions were of those Sunday planes, flying up and down the coast, but I would be astonished to learn that they all departed from and landed at the local facilities. Presumably, our coastline has become a flying corridor for not only local flights, but the planes flying to destinations up and down the coast, or as a scenic flight for sightseers. Whatever the case there must be a restriction on such a flight path over residential areas, through an enactment of law if necessary.

Recently, public displeasure was voiced at the proliferation of advertisement signs on highway frontage, but the signs did not come down. However a new law is almost on the books that will restrict these signs. In other words, if you care, you can effect changes. If you find the air traffic getting a bit heavy over your home, and you think that there are sensible alternatives, then write your newspaper, or your alderman, your Regional Board representative, the local flying club, the local commercial airline. Make a little noise. It may help. Good luck.

Dr. Lorne D. Berman,
Roberts Creek.



Pssst! Have you heard the rumour? The rest of Canada is having a winter!

15% unemployment? No wonder

Editor, The Times;

Sir: After reading the February 16, 1977 issue of The Times, I could not help but witness a glowing example of how, between the different levels of government, we are in a situation quite similar to a dog chasing his tail. He can see it but can't get it! First of all we have a large picture of the Canada Manpower Office. This expensive federally funded program is supposed to help Canadians, young and old, find jobs. Good idea; however, then we have further down the government scale a level of government called the Regional District.

If you noticed right under the front page picture there is a story of how a long time resident has just been turned down on the rezoning of his property in Davis Bay. Now here is a case of a person willing to invest his hard earned dollars into a building and business that will provide employment for a contractor, bricklayer, plumber, drywaller, electrician, painter, engineer, building supply, glass-shop, septic tank supplier and probably many more people. Then when this project is completed and the business opened, as stated it will have probable employment of between three and four full time jobs for local residents.

However, Davis Bay is supposedly not a suitable location for this business. It's OK however for a Restaurant, Rental Shop, Grocery Store, three Motels, Taxi business and fomerly the Regional District itself, but not a Sporting and Marine business. Sounds a little like discrimination to me. If not, then maybe it's just another case of some of our elected members saying to themselves that if they rezone the property, the property owner might profit from it, so we can't allow that to happen. So the Peninsula will just go its merry way with a RESTRICTED SUPPLY of commercial and industrial land that is ridiculously high priced and therefore out of reach of most people wanting to start a small business. Meanwhile, the electorate complains about lack of service, poor selection and high prices! Well no damn wonder!

The result of the thinking of the Regional Board and similar governing bodies accomplishes just the opposite to what they set out to do. The commercial and industrial zoned properties are usually for sale, however, but for a sizeable sum and if you want it you pay the price. You might also notice that it is in many instances HELD either vacant or undeveloped until somebody does pay the price. Meanwhile, the residential taxpayer has to pay an increasing portion of taxes to support our growing bureaucracy of local governments, while at the same time spending net income dollars on goods and services purchased from Vancouver businesses. This situation exists solely because of the negative planning to help support and provide reasonably priced land in the local area. This trend if not reversed, is most helpful for the Vancouver merchant to pay his taxes; however, it doesn't take a university graduate in economics to figure out what happens to our local economy.

I only hope that the voting public wakes up soon before we start having to buy commercial property by the square inch like in the large cities. I know how Mr. Salahub feels as I applied just under two years ago for rezoning of a piece of property in Wilson Creek that was right next door to a large piece of commercial zoned land on the corner of Airport road. The Regional Board said no, so I did not pursue the matter. I could have purchased the property next door at an asking price of $180,000, however, the owner did tell me to make an offer! Such a reasonable price for approximately 1 acre of land! Just think the rent factor for the RAW LAND with no improvements at a nominal return of 1 per cent per month would have been only $1,800 per month. Just a drop in the bucket for the Rockefellers, but just about four times too steep for a small mobile home dealer to pay.

All I can say is nice try for trying to invest your money and provide some employment, Cliff. Maybe you should leave your money in the bank and apply for a LIP Grant to study the mating habits of the West Coast Teredo! Or better still, maybe the next step, a REGIONAL MANPOWER OFFICE might be set up and funded by our local government to try and place workers into non-existant jobs! Maybe you could even get a job to run it for them Cliff.

I was not one of the local Davis Bay residents contacted by Mr. Salahub, however, I must plead guilty that if he had contacted me I would definitely be in favor. Maybe Cliff should offer to trade his property for some suitable crown land of equivalent value like Mr. Hank Hall did! This obviously must be an acceptable "trade-off" in Mr. Hoemberg's eyes. (To use Mr. Hoemberg's quoted phrase regarding the building height in Mr. Salahub's application.)

Also, I publicly, through this letter, would like to ask Mr. Peter Hoemberg to define to me and the residents of this community exactly what he would define as a "less desirable commercial use." Perhaps he would like to give us some examples. Maybe the next step is a bylaw to stop the sale of all existing commercial properties for fear that a later owner might put it to an "undesirable use." What is this part of B.C. coming to? It's beginning to look quite clear to me!

R.W. Copping,
Davis Bay.

Thanks from Kinsmen Club

— Legislature Report

An issue that has serious implications for those living along the coast is the possible Kitimat pipeline. This represents great environmental problems and potential disaster. The channel leading to Kitimat harbour according to the Ministry of the Environment presents "maximum approach problems." This comes from a report that the ministry has been withholding for some time now. The possibility of a major oil spill is inevitable. The report says that there would be an oil spill on an average of once every four months. The environmental impact is something that should be looked at very thoroughly and the residents of the area affected consulted with, on the social impact of the proposed pipeline.

The whole question of tankers and oil spills in our waters is of great concern to me and all residents of B.C. With the recent spills that have taken place south of the border, we see that the impact of tanker traffic is not something to be taken lightly.

I have urged the government to take a stand on this issue and not to allow any large tankers to enter our waters without first meeting stringent guidelines for prevention of spills and any possible danger of tankers going aground along the B.C. coast.

The recent change in the schedule on Route No. 3, Horseshoe Bay to Langdale, has some very serious repercussions. People's lives are disrupted to a great extent. The Minister of Transport, Jack Davis, initiated the changes without any consultation with the communities affected. This is typical of this administration, knee jerk reactions that affect people all made from the inner confines of some office in Victoria. That minister is completely isolated from the realities of everyday life. When was the last time that Jack Davis rode on the ferries of this province out of necessity? The ferry system at one time was a system to bring people together. It now has become a mechanism for keeping people apart.

Not only are they ruining the economy of the province in the name of the balanced budget, but in doing so they are making changes that adversely affect people's lives.

(Being the first indication that the Editor-on-holiday is alive, if not entirely well — or at least that he was two weeks ago.)

Yelapa, Mexico,
February 7 (?) Monday.

Each morning when I wake up, there's about 15 seconds of brain rattling realization that I'm here in some foreign country. That it's February but it's 85 degrees in the sun. I've rented a house in Yelapa, luxurious by Yelapa standards, kitchen, gas stove, living room, two sleeping areas, two sleeping lofts, beautiful panorama view of the beach, the bay, trail to the beach (public), trail to a private beach, banyo (bathhouse). Beautiful house. The people who own the house will only rent it to Canadians, as the dear sweet little old lady said, "Most of the others who come here are (expletive deleted).

The bus to Los Angeles was a horror story. Enjoyed L.A. then went to San Diego, Tijuana, down Baja to La Paz, La Paz to Cubo San Lucas then by ferry, to Puerto Vallarta. A few days there and then here.

My last night in P.V., a bunch of us from the hotel went to Carlos O'Brien's for drinks and dinner. Dinner for six and drinks all night for 9 cost 700 pesos, about $31 U.S. I was really pleased until I woke up the next day with the dreaded Tourista.

Have met some amazing people everywhere. Cabo was very friendly. The boat ride was great, P.V. was really nice. I've shot 6 rolls of film so far but none since I got to Yelapa. I have, however, learned the gentle art of how to sleep in a sleeping bag in a hammock. Not easy. We're cooking our own food here and some of it isn't bad. Some is, my appetite is only returning today.

Yelapa is beautiful, brown sand beach, river, thatched huts and thatched housed clinging precariously to the hillsides. Each day the tourist boat comes in and deposits about 100 people, mostly Gringos, sunburned, who rent horses for 20 pesos (8 when the boat's not in), buy Mexican beer for 10 pesos (8 when the boat's not in) and lie on rented mats for a couple of hours until the boat leaves. I'm sharing the house with a young couple form Saskatchewan. We have a large pig for a housepet and a number of chickens.

You really see the worst of the tourists here and the best. Saw one lady yelling in English at a Mexican shop keeper, demanding something, and the shop keeper didn't know what she wanted. I watched as the lady ranted and raved and then left. The lady looked at me, the shop keeper lady that is, and I just shook my head and said, "Gringo loco." She laughed. I then said, "No habla Espanol" and asked, in English, for what I wanted. She gave it to me. Her English was better than my Spanish, but Gringos who demand get very little.

Swimming here is an experience. Water is 72 degrees F and very salty. Did some pseudo-body surfing in Cabo San Lucas and ended up with my cut-offs full of sand. Have lost some weight.

My "100 per cent Canadian Content" T-shirt has been the greatest thing. Canadians get special treatment here. If I wear it on the beach or to market, I've got friends. People want to know where I'm from and "Do you know..." There are more Candians in Mexico than Mexicans. At the hotel I stayed at in P.V. there were 12 out of 25. I've got some strange stories about that hotel.

Being sick has cut into my Spanish lessons. Today I'm feeling almost well enough to head for the beach and see if the tourist boat brought in anything interesting.

Express from Mannheim to Istanbul. The fact that it was called an express, did not prevent a two-hour delay at the Turkish border, or the snail's pace of less than 20 miles an hour for the ride to Istanbul.

First impressions of Istanbul were dirty streets and hazardous sidewalks. In spite of heavy traffic, everybody jaywalked and nobody took any notice of the traffic lights. Mrs. Dratsch thought that in such conditions the drivers did a marvellous job and showed infinite patience.

The Sultan Ahmed district where she was shopping has two of Istanbul's most famous mosques, the Blue Mosque and the Hagia Sophia, but the big pleasant park which surrounds the mosques, has become a hippie haven. Their flowered panel trucks can be seen everywhere and their washing is hung over the fences to dry. The Suleyman Mosque is the most beautiful in the city and is furbished throughout with fine carpets, all in the same design.

Mrs. Dratsch took a ride on a steamer which crosses the Bosphorus, giving her the chance to see many small towns which line the 17-mile channel separating Europe from Asia. She visited the Palace Topkapi which contains the biggest treasures she had ever seen — pure gold candlesticks weighing 100 pounds, emeralds as big as eggs and all kinds of arms decorated with precious and semi-precious stones which are the treasures of 1,001 Nights. Here in the palace is the harem which sometimes included as many as 300 to 500 women.

The people of Turkey, says Mrs. Dratsch, are helpful and courteous, particularly when she would hesitate about crossing a busy street. The young people are brought up to be polite and considerate to older people, which was a pleasant contrast to Spain, where she saw a bus stormed by children aged 6-16 who occupied all the seats, leaving the older people to stand.

One morning, Mrs. Dratsch boarded a boat to visit Buyukada and Heybeliada, two of the Princes Islands where the wealthy people of Istanbul have summer homes. Before they took off, all the ship's sirens sounded and the people rose to their feet and stood in silence for a moment. Later Mrs. Dratsch learned that the little ceremony was to celebrate the 38th anniversary of the death of Kemal Ataturk, the "Father of the Turks."

On November 13, Mrs. Dratsch set out on the most arduous and exhausting part of her adventure — a 30-day bus tour to India, through Asia Minor, Iran Afghanistan and Pakistan, organized by Penn-World. Their first day's drive took them to Gallipoli, the scene of one of the great tragedies of World War 1. Here thousands of Allied troops lost their lives while trying to make a landing. The bus travelled down the Peninsula to Eceabat and crossed by ferry to Canakkale, leaving Europe and entering Asia Minor. The ferry crossing is at the narrowest point of the 60-mile-long Dardanelles and it was here that Alexander the Great crossed into Asia in 334 B.C. A short drive from Canakkale is the site of ancient Troy. The rediscovery of Troy by Heinrich Schliemann in 1870 is one of the remarkable archaeological wonders of the world. The remains of nine different cities were discovered, stacked one on top of the other. Probably the seventh phase or layer represents the Troy of Homer.

The drive continued to Pergamos (Bergama), another of Asia Minor's interesting archaeological sites, and then to Izmir, which was formerly Smyrna. They stopped to see the ruins of Ephesus and then to Pamukkale for a sight of the Petrified Springs which have been a tourist attraction since Roman times. Here you can see one of the moot spectacular natural phenomena in the world, the white stalactites of a petrified waterfall hanging in calcium cascades from basin to basin.

The next stage of the journey was across a hostile desert-like region to Konya which was the home of Mevlana Celaleddin Rumi, the 13th century poet scholar and philosopher who founded the Order of the Whirling Dervishes. The mystic movement which he founded, has survived to the present time with only a temporary lapse when it was suppressed by Ataturk in 1925. On the way to Aksaray and Nevshehir, the passengers were able to see the lovely Seljuk Caravanserie of Sultan Hani (1229).

During the next part of the journey, the passengers saw many interesting geological phenomena. In Urgup, an unusual small town, there were many dwellings hollowed out of the tufa rock which covers the vast area of this plateau. They saw soft rock formed of ashes and mud from the Erciyas volcano worn by erosion into strange and improbable shapes. In the Valley of Goreme, there were stone columns and cones, some of which were 100 feet high. Some of the cones were composed of two types of rock, a soft rock below and hard rock above. The soft rock had eroded leaving mushroom-like formations which are popularly known as "fairy chimneys."

The bus continued by way of Sivas, across vast stretches of semi-desert, at an average altititude of 3,900 feet, finally climbing to about 6,500 feet at Erzerum. Near the Russian border, the road turned south and passed Mount Ararat, actually the twin peaks of Great Ararat 17,000 feet and Little Ararat, 12,840 feet.

Crossing into Iran, the bus made its first stop at Tabriz, the provincial capital of Azerbaijan, famous for its carpets. The chief feature of interest is the Blue Mosque, built in 1465, but it has been badly damaged in various wars. Travelling southward to Hamadan they saw something of the unique "qanat" system which carries water from vast underground lakes to the towns and villages on the plateau.

Their next stop was at beautiful Isfahan, where they spent three days. In 1387 when the Tartar hordes crossed Persia, Isfahan was a small oasis town. Then in the 16th century, under Shah Abbas, who had made it his capital, it entered a period of intense development and many of the fine buildings erected at that time still exist. The centre of the city is Shah Square, one of the most imposing squares in the world. At one end is the famous Shah Mosque, with dome, minarets and arches of blue-glazed tiles, decorated with designs in gold and silver. From one of the other buildings, Shah Abbas and his court used to watch their favourite sport, polo, and the original goalposts still stand at the ends of the square. Shah Abbas established relations with European Courts and welcomed visitors from western nations to his capital. He was a great drinker and it is thought that one of the reasons for the friendship which existed between Persia and England was that when all the guests had drunk themselves under the table, Abbas and the British Ambassador would still be proposing toasts to each other.

On the north side of the square is the entrance to the main bazaar which is one of Asia's best, with its miles of winding alleys and hundreds of little shops. Persian carpets reach an unrivalled peak of artistry in the 15th and 16th centuries and the traditional hand-tufted method still makes them most popular.

On the way to Teheran, the capital of Iran, the bus passed Qom, a sacred city of the Shiite Muslims. The driver tried to get as close as possible to the famous mosque with the gilded dome, which signifies a sanctuary of Fatima, but suddenly a big trucked blocked their way and would not let them pass. The street was narrow and it was impossible to turn the bus around. Eventually it was allowed to drive forward about 100 feet, but then had to turn and go back the way it had come. The passengers spent a day in Teheran seeing the Golestan Palace and the fabulous crown jewels of Iran.

After climbing through arid mountainous country past Ab-e-Ali, a popular winter ski resort, the bus descended through narrow gorges to the lush green Caspian coastal region. The Caspian Sea, the largest salt lake in the world, is below sea level and is dropping steadily. This is due partly to evaporation and partly to the fact that the rivers which feed it, such as the Volga, are having vast supplies of water drawn from them for irrigation and hydro-electric power.

The bus continued to Meshed, another holy city where infidels were not welcome. It is famous for turquoise mined in the nearby mountains. Next morning the bus crossed into Afghanistan and stopped at Herat, interesting for its fortress and beautiful mosques. By way of Kandahar, they travelled the road to Kabul, recently built with American aid. Though the road was new, the route was ancient, for it had been travelled for centuries by caravans and the armies of Darius and Alexander of Macedon. Occasionally they came across groups of Kochi nomads, moving their flocks and belongings to new pastures. Each year these people travel many hundreds of miles, spending their summers in the high mountains and wintering on the plains in their black tents.

Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan since 1774, has an elevation of 5,900 feet. Leaving there, the bus made a trip to the 1.7 mile Salang Tunnel which carries a 2-lane motor highway through the Hindu Kush mountain range at a height of 11,000 feet, that is 800 feet below the mountain top. They followed the Kabul river across the Kabul plateau to the spectacular Tangi Gharu. It was an exciting part of the trip for the road descended the gorge, twisting and turning within the rocky canyon.

After formalities at the Pakistan frontier, the bus entered the Khyber Pass, rich in historical associations. During the past 2,000 years, the armies of Alexander the Great, Genghis Khan and many others have passed through its rocky defiles.

They reached Peshawar, the capital of the former North-West Frontier province which has been known from ancient times as the gateway to Central Asia. By way of Lahore, they crossed the frontier to the Punjab for a visit to Amritsar, the holy Sikh city which has grown up around the Golden Temple. Arriving in Delhi, they did a sightseeing tour and spent a day in Agra to see the Taj Mahal which concluded their 30 day bus tour, which might have exhausted far younger passengers. Generally, says Mrs. Dratsch, the roads during the tour were good but she does admit that some of the hotels where they stopped overnight were primitive to say the least.

Now on her own again, Mrs. Dratsch spent five days in New and Old Delhi and decided to visit Jaipur, the pink city, with its wonderful palaces and pink 18th century walls. The City Palace has a splendid collection of ancient weapons, carpets, manuscripts and paintings.

Her last stop in India was Benares, which is now called Varanasi, the holy city of the Hindus. Endless streams of pilgrims descend the great flight of steps leading down to the River Ganges for prayer and ablution. The stench of burning bodies is prevalent for it is here that the Hindus burn their dead, first dipping the bodies into the river. It is not unusual for as many as two dozen dogs to be fighting over the bones from some of the corpses.

From Varanasi, Mrs. Dratsch flew to Bangkok, the capital of Thailand, which she found to be a friendly city and full of interesting buildings. There is the Grand Palace, in front of which there is a huge statue of a reclining Buddha, and there are hundreds of pagodas, one of which houses the famous Emerald Buddha. The Floating Market is another attraction which no visitor should miss. An hour's journey from Bangkok is Nakorn Pattom, a restful and peaceful spot which has the biggest and oldest pagoda in Thailand.

During a six day stay in Hong Kong, Mrs. Dratsch made an excursion to the New Territories towards the Chinese border, and a trip to the Portugese Colony of Macao by hydrofoil, but undoubtedly the highlight of her visit was a ride in a double decker bus from Hong Kong to the Peak. It was the only sunny day during her stay in Hong Kong and she was able to appreciate the magnificent views she had from the peak in every direction. She could see Aberdeen Island and all the islands to the south of it and in other directions she could see Kowloon and the New Territories and the whole of the big harbour of Hong Kong.

On New Year's Day, she flew to Tokyo, not realizing that the Japanese New Year celebrations continue through the first three days of January and that, consequently, stores and restaurants were closed and downtown streets nearly deserted. As there was nothing else to do, she joined the throng of people who walked to the Imperial Palace to pay their respects to the Emperor. When the palace grounds were crowded, the Emperor, Empress, Crown Prince and Crown Princess appeared on the balcony, waving to their people who waved back with flags. Then the crowd left to be replaced by yet another crowd. It was a spontaneously happy occasion and though there were a number of soldiers and police around, the arrangements were so smooth and orderly that there was little for them to do. Most of the women and children—and some men too — wore kimonos. The women had elaborate hairstyles with flowers, birds and other ornaments. The little girls in particular looked dainty and charming in their kimonos and holiday finery.

Late on January 3, while Mrs. Dratsch sat in the airport waiting for a flight to Honolulu, she was again impressed with the picturesque costumes of the Japanese and by their charm and courtesy. As they said goodbye to friends who were leaving there would be deep bows on both sides.

Mrs. Dratsch broke her flight across the Pacific to spend a few days in Waikiki where she saw most of the sights. She also discovered the biggest bargain on Oahu — the 3½ hour bus trip around the island for 25 cents. All her flights from Bangkok to San Francisco were Korean Airlines which she reports were excellent.

Other projects suggested by the commission include an equestrian centre with stables for 30 horses. There would be a $1,000 a year operating deficit for the centre, which would be located near the airport.

A breakwater park in Selma Creek will be developed with the help of the Department of Highways, said Watson. and tennis courts are planned for Wilson Creek with the community association assuming responsibility for their up-keep.

A lacrosse park and a motorcycle track are also recommended for construction by the commission, but Watson reported he was having trouble finding a suitable site for the track.

What Watson called the "major items of expenditure" include an expansion of the Arena at a total of $180,000 and construction of an Arts Council building in Sechelt for $20,000. The Arts Council, Watson assured the aldermen, will "swallow their own deficits."

A planned community hall on district lot 1506 in Robert's Creek would also serve as a centre and changing area for the proposed rugby and lacrosse fields to be located nearby.

Watson also announced plans to apply for money under the provincial student summer works program to hire university students to reorganize the library service on the Sunshine Coast.

Watson said he had told each of his committee members not to "ask for anything you're not prepared to pay for" and claimed his list was a "prudent" and "frugal" assessment of the Peninsula's recreation needs.

He claimed that all the projects could be constructed for less than a two mill taxation increase as funds for some of the proposals could come from Victoria. According to Watson, very little money will be spent on actual property acquisitions as most building will be done on crown or donated land.

The Sunshine Coast Regional District has recently agreed to support the concept of a referendum on the proposals of the recreation commission.

Heritage week

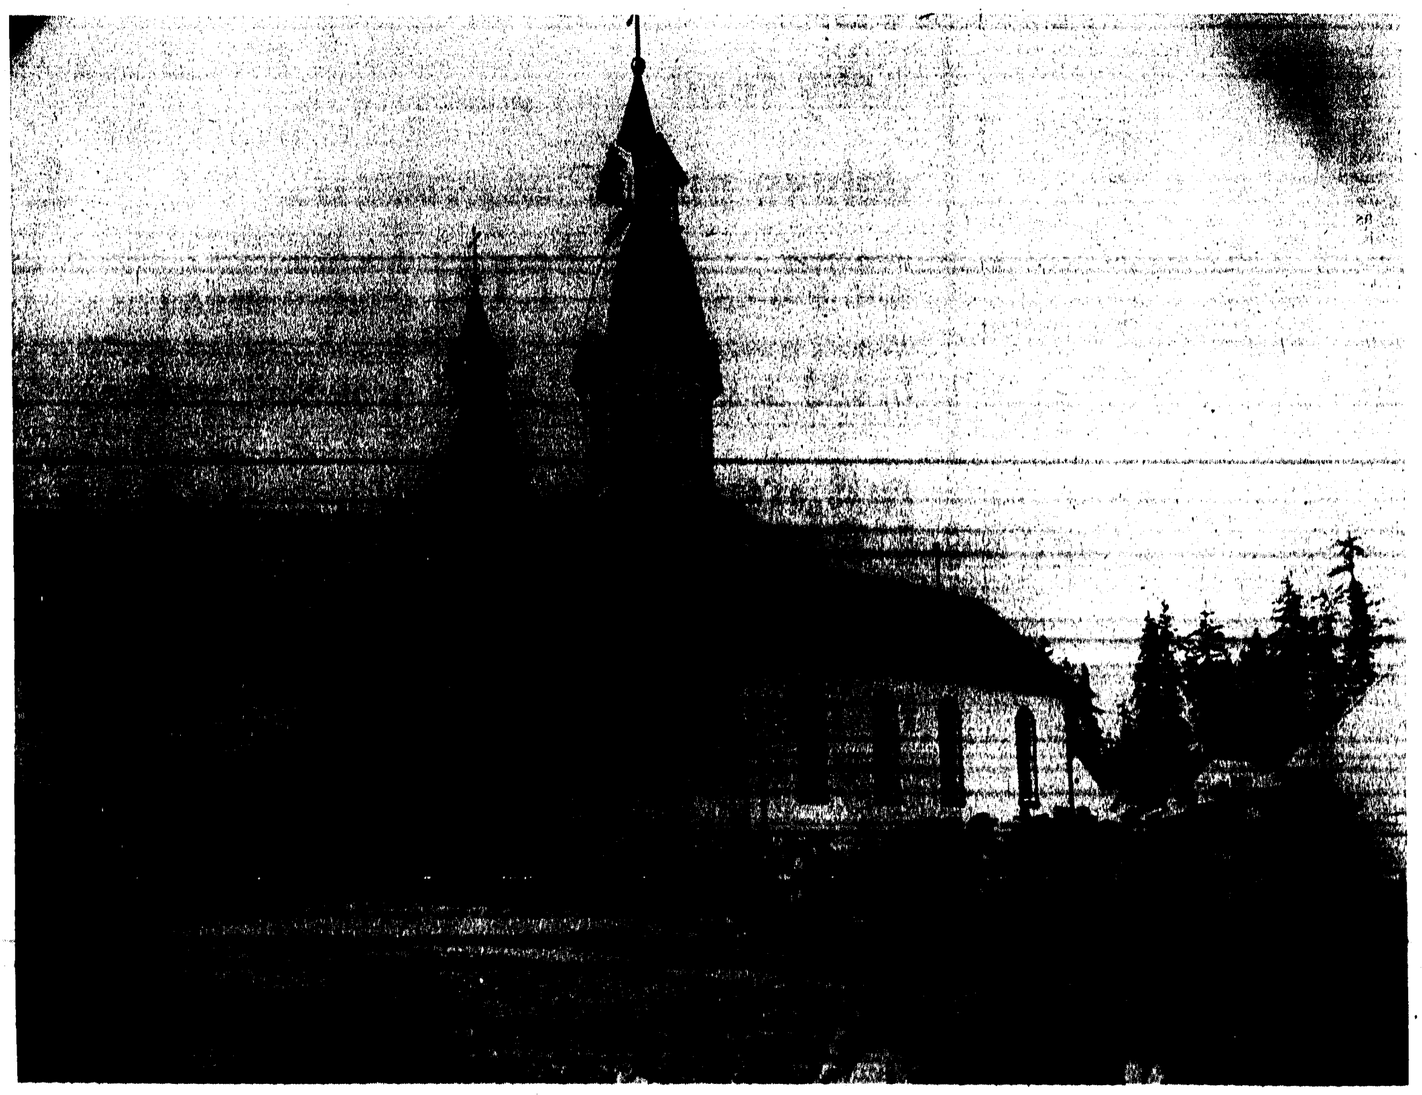
THE SECHELT WHARF, for years, was the economic and social centre of the village. The first dock was built in 1904 at the south end of Wharf Road and was usually heavily damaged each year by winter storms. Purchased by Union Steamships in 1926 from the estate of Bert Whitaker, the dock was the landing point for boatloads of day picnicers from Vancouver. In the summer at least one steamer a day would call at Sechelt but in the winter the boats would arrive only once or twice each week. At low tide the wharf's concrete pilings can still be seen in the water.

THE BOULEVARD, running along Trail Bay, was the site of some of the finest houses in Sechelt. One of them was "Vue de L'eau" or "Beach House" built in 1904 as a home for Alfred and Henrietta Whitaker. In 1926 the house was bought by the Union Steamships Company and converted into the Sechelt Inn. The hotel was destroyed by fire in 1964. (Photograph courtesy of Gordon and Norma Haslett).

THE FIRST LOG HOUSE in Sechelt was built in 1894 as the home of Thomas John and Sarah Belle Cook (left). Situated on the road to West Sechelt it disappeared before the First World War.



WEEK LONG celebrations marked the opening in June, 1890, of "Our Lady of the Rosary" church on the Sechelt Indian Reserve. Representatives from Indian bands all over the province were invited to the ceremonies which were marked by fireworks and cannon salutes. Design by Belgian born architect Joseph Bouillon, the church was the third one on the site and was described in a newspaper account of the time as being "of very handsome design, having a gay a cheerful appearance, with elaborate and tasteful decorations. The interior is still more beautiful and elaborately furnished than the exterior." Despite its character the building lasted less than 20 years, burning to the ground in January, 1906.

Spear fishing ban extended

Fisheries Service has extended the closure to spear fishing for ling cod until 12 midnight March 31.

Hook and line fishing will open March 1, in accordance with British Columbia Fishery Regulations.

This action is necessary, according to a Fisheries Service spokesman, because of the vulnerability of the ling cod guarding their eggs in shallow water.

The area closed to spear fishing includes Howe Sound and the entire Gulf of Georgia area from Beechey Head near Victoria to Shelter Point near Comox.

Focus on Fitness

By SUSAN MILBURN

This week I wish to discuss the subject of community support. I think most people will agree that there are a few things a person can do totally alone. The fitness service will be the first to admit this.

We began at the community level asking the members of various communities what they needed or wanted from the Physical Fitness Service. The result was a tidal wave of requests, everything from roller skating to post natal classes. Due to the tremendous support that backed the requests the service has been able to meet the majority of these needs. We do not want to lose the close contact with the people on the Sunshine Coast and wish to extend our thanks to all those who have given us their ideas and time.

Slowly but surely the word is being spread about the importance of keeping our bodies active. One sees school children running around everyday, people wearing Action B.C. T-shirts, dancing, jogging, exercising and playing all kinds of sports. Anyone who has experienced the transition from being sedentary to being active knows the feeling of renewed energy. Their whole outlook broadens, making problems shrink in importance. Next time you see someone doing exercises of any kind, ask them how they feel. Then spread the word. Let's get the Sunshine Coast moving.

As the sun comes out the whole peninsula comes allive. Looking forward to spring, the staff of the Fitness Service has even more areas where they may expand to. However we are nearing the boundaries of our capabilities as far as manpower is concerned. To make the spring program as successful as possible the service is looking for people who are willing to contribute some of their talents and time.

If you feel you could lend a hand to help in any of the following, or have any ideas for more activities call the Volunteer Services at 885-3821. The suggested programs are: tennis lessons, small craft lessons (sailboat, canoe, rowboat), rugby, soccer, leading hikes, orienteering, beach volleyball.

Lunch hour excercises will be held at the Indian Band Hall beginning Monday, February 21, and thereafter. Every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 12 to 1. The class will be free and open to everyone. Come and join us. Be a new face in our place.

Hockey playoffs begin March 14

The commercial hockey league is just three weeks from playoffs. This year, under the three-team format, the league winner will receive a bye into the best of five finals for the local championship.

The second and third place teams will battle in a best of three semi-finals match.

With the distinct possibility of one or more teams from the Peninsula playing in the Powell River commercial league next year, a best of five series between the two champions will take place early in April.

Local playoffs begin with semi-finals the week of March 14.

The Easter Cards are now displayed so that you may send them early to far away places. — Miss Bee's, Sechelt.

You didn't receive your Autoplan Insurance Renewal Form? It was Wrong?

Here's what to do about it.

Some motorists did not automatically receive their 1977/78 Autoplan Insurance and Motor Vehicle Licence Renewal Form in the mail. There are many reasons why we were unable to issue a number of these forms.

INCORRECT INFORMATION FILED LAST YEAR

If there was something wrong on last year's insurance certificate, because of something ICBC did, the agent did or perhaps you did, we could not issue your 1977/78 Renewal Form automatically. We'll get it corrected when you fill out this year's Renewal Form at your Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office. Be sure to take your 1976/77 Certificate of Insurance with you when you go to renew your insurance.

OR PERHAPS SOMETHING HAS CHANGED

Maybe, during the 1976/77 year, you got married. Had a birthday. Changed your coverage. Bought a new car. Changed your rate class. Or changed your address and didn't remember to tell us.

Any of these things could be the reason why you didn't, automatically, receive the 1977/78 Renewal Form.

OR PERHAPS YOU RECEIVED A RENEWAL FORM WHICH YOU DON'T THINK IS RIGHT

We've been talking a lot about the 17.5% discount off your 1977/78 Autoplan Insurance. Some motorists were disappointed when they received their Renewal Forms to find that the discount had not been shown.

Even though it is not shown on your form, you may be entitled to it.

If you did not have a blameworthy accident in the period October 1st, 1975 to September 30th, 1976, you definitely qualify for the discount. But if you were in an accident and the claim has not yet been settled, your Renewal Form would not show the discount.

And, as we processed about 375,000 claims in 1976 there are quite a few still outstanding.

If you think anything else is wrong discuss it with your agent.

HIT-AND-RUN

Then there are "Hit-and-runs". If you were the victim of a hit-and-run driver, and collected on your Autoplan Insurance, even though you were not responsible, the only way we could record the accident is as a collision. This means that your Renewal Form would not show the 17.5% discount but you are still entitled to it.

HERE'S WHAT TO DO

If you have received a Renewal Form and disagree with any information on it, discuss the problem with any Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office.

If the 17.5% Safe Driving discount isn't shown, all you need do to obtain the discount is to visit your Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office, and complete your Renewal Form. You will be given the discount when you sign the form affirming your eligibility. Of course, your record will be checked out later, but meanwhile the discount will be applied.

If you have not received your Renewal Form, take your current 1976/77 Certificate of Insurance to any Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office.

In most cases Autoplan premiums are lower in B.C. than in other provinces. Here's an example for your specific region.
Public Liability and Property Damage $200,000 inclusive limits.
Collision $100 deductible. Comprehensive $50 deductible.

Driver	Automobile—1969 Austin Mini
	Vancouver B.C.	Calgary Alta.	Toronto Ont.	Montreal P.Q.	Halifax N.S.
Single male, age 22; accident free—3 years.	$556	$551	$571	$766	$641

TV on Ice Sunday

Sunshine Coast Figure Skating Club will hold its annual carnival Sunday, February 27, at the Arena.

The carnival is sanctioned by the Canadian Figure Skating Association and will feature local skaters as well as guest skaters from the Vancouver area.

There will be two shows, one at 1:30 p.m. and the second at 7 p.m. The theme this year is TV on Ice. There will be solos by some of the more advanced skaters. A silver collection will be taken.

Squaringly yours

BY MAURICE HEMSTREET

Hey, hey, hey and away we go. But hold on thar, I think that it is best if I go back a few weeks and start with the preparations of going to the seventh annual square dance ball at the Vancouver Hotel, Good idea ay-wot.

We actually started on February 4 with a few minor square dance figures that we were not too sure of. Then on February 5 we held an extra square dance workshop at our house. This in turn really made us buckle down on February 11, where we put our best foot forward and really concentrated on two square dance figures that were on the program that we had not done in this area and at the end of the evening we were as ready and rarin' to go as a new skier who had just been pushed off the top of a snow covered mountain. Anyway, the next morning rolled around and we headed for Vancouver just full of get up and go, only to get somewhat lost on the one-way streets; so due to the present time element and you know I am still here, I shall stop for a commercial break.

Want to try something that will leave you with many memories? Join square dancing, the only way to have fun and meet new friends and, by the way, buy a Pen. Times, the only way to keep up with the square dance news.

WHERE, OH WHERE has my little dog gone? He's not in the pound, but as soon as the facility is completed next month in Gibsons, he might be. And this is the vehicle that will take him there. So, be on the lookout all you carefree canines.

Two injured in accidents

Separate motor vehicle accidents sent two men to hospital this week and extensively damaged their cars.

On February 15 at 7:20 p.m. a car plunged into the ditch at the corner of Lockyer and Hanbury Roads. The driver, Eric Nelson of Tyson Road, was treated for minor injuries at St. Mary's hospital and then released.

A second accident in the early morning of February 18 demolished the car of Frank Carnie when his vehicle overturned on Highway 101 north of the Wakefield Inn. Carnie was admitted to St. Mary's and later transferred to hospital in Vancouver.

Picking salal was an expensive pastime for Walter Lantz last Friday. While in the bush he parked his car along the road leading to the Sechelt dump where $2,000 worth of damage was done to it by vandals. His tires were slashed, windows smashed, horn broken and the electrical system pulled apart. The incident is under investigation by the RCMP.

In Pender Harbour on February 15 ball bearings were thrown through the front window of the Madeira Park IGA. Also in the north part of the Peninsula two cars parked at the Earls Cove ferry terminal had their tires slashed on February 15.

Two thefts were reported to Sechelt RCMP during the past 10 days. Seventy dollars was taken from Chatelech school on February 14 after thieves broke into the building.

A charge has been laid in the second theft after more than $200 was stolen February 12 from European Motors in Wilson Creek.

Gibsons RCMP report a rash of minor thefts from automobiles, including six car batteries, four CB radios and various chrome ornaments.

The RCMP advises that businesses operating in rural areas should obtain trade licenses as soon as possible for 1977. Also, dog licenses are required to be purchased before March 31. The penalty fee for dog licenses purchased after that date is $2.

In the money

J.W. Smallwood of Flume Road was the $100 winner in last week's Gibsons Lions 400 Club draw. Smallwood's number was drawn by Jim Brooks at the village branch of the Bank of Montreal.

Busy months for Resource Society

It has been almost four months since the annual meeting of the Sunshine Coast Community Resource Society, at which time guest speakers from Voluntary Action Resource Centre spoke on the "Advantages of a Volunteer Service in this Area." The Resource Society has continued to be active and November saw the Directory of Services put on the market for sale through the courtesy of the local businesses.

A campaign for volunteers is under way and the Volunteer Service is progressing steadily and successfully. A very interesting Workshop for Volunteers, sponsored by the centre for Continuing Education and the Women's Centre, was held on February 5, with Elizabeth Brown and Claire Hawes instructing. This workshop was of value to both trained volunteers and those who are contemplating becoming volunteers.

The new Pender Harbour branch of the Homemaker Service shows an increase in their clientele with the Sechelt, Gibsons end picking up steadily after the usual Christmas slow down.

The Minibus continues to be well used and on January 26 took several Extended Care patients for an enjoyable lunch at the Golden City Restaurant.

Warm response has been shown to the Fitness Service as it gets well into the program with a staff of four covering Pender Harbour, Sechelt and Gibsons, and includes a special youth program. A successful workshop, sponsored by Action B.C. was held on January 14 in Elphinstone High School with approximately 50 people in attendance.

Senior Services "Lunch Bunch" now totals over 40, with an average of 30 in attendance each month. The number of clients using the Tape Library continues to rise and a special thanks goes to Arthur McPhee for taping the magazine material. Volunteer Jerry Winram, who is recovering in Vancouver General Hospital from a broken hip, is missed by the Senior Services and they wish her a speedy recovery.

Sechelt Tot Lot is now being held in the Sechelt Elementary School.

The Society has expanded in yet another way as it co-sponsors the Alternate Education Program and Special Children along with the Sechelt School Board; there are three child care workers under the auspices of the Society.

The hospital has appointed Mrs. Doreen Dockar as their representative to the board.

We are still looking for new members which is an indication of support of the society. Many people would like to become members but feel their other commitments prevent them from becoming involved in committees and meetings. This is not the case. Members are an indication of support and are a welcome addition to the society just because they care enough to be a member and in that manner give their support.

Memberships run from October 1976 to October 1977 and cost $2. For more information, contact Sunshine Coast Community Resource Society, P.O. Box 1069, Sechelt.

Seniors plan Spring Tea

The Senior Citizens Association, Br. 69, monthly meeting February 17 was one of the shortest on record but also, because of members being on holiday trips, it was one of the lowest attended for some time.

Margaret Humm for the Ways and Means Committee announced that a hooked rug had been donated as a prize for a draw at the Spring Tea to be held April 23 and exhibited the very colourful rug. Helen Erickson volunteered to take charge of the sub-committee to look after the draw. A macrame hanger will be added as a second prize.

Reports from other committees showed that affairs were running quite smoothly. The carpet bowlers will have been to Welcome Beach for a game on February 21, at which time they hope to reverse the loss suffered when Welcome Beach defeated Sechelt at home. Jim Derby reported the Wednesday afternoon dancing as "going very well."

Madge Bell appealed for further supplies of jewelry for her booth at the Spring Tea and Bazaar, and Dave Hayward asked that anyone having plant pots to spare turn them in for the benefit of those members who would be growing plants for the sale.

The monthly draw for Shop-Easy vouchers resulted in awards going to Al Fox, Mrs. Frank Walker, Mrs. Espley, Mrs. Berg, Nellie McKeague and Joyce Kolibus.

Remember the weekly carpet bowling on Mondays and dancing on Wednesdays. Fourth Thursday, February 24, will include a film showing. Come and bring a friend.

Pioneer girls social

Forty-three Prayer-pals and gals, Guides and committee of the Trailblazer and Shikari Pioneer Girls met at Calvary Baptist Church, 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, February 15. They shared a fun time of getting acquainted, playing games, singing, listening to Mrs. Kim Muirhead, manager of Leslie's Christian Book Store, Coquitlam, and eating delicious lunches packed in beautifully decorated boxes and eaten picnic style from gay tablecloths spread on the carpet.

Mrs. Muirhead reminded the gals and pals that friendship with each other means actively expressing Christian love even at our own inconvenience. Karen Kiene toppled the ring from the flour mold and had to retrieve it with her teeth. She did so with a very white face. The room was decorated with hearts, cupids and streamers and laughing, happy gals and pals.

Auxiliary news

The regular meeting of the Sechelt Auxiliary to St. Mary's Hospital was held in St. Hilda's Hall on Thursday, February 10, with Mrs. Billie Steele, president, in the chair. Mrs. Gower reported 21 members and one life member present.

During December and January members spent 716 hours in service at the hospital, of which 232 are credited to the Juniors. The popularity of this activity is indicated by the fact that there is a waiting list to become Candy Stripers and to give volunteer time.

The ladies who manage the Thrift Shop accounted for 1,107 hours during October through December.

Mrs. Humm reported a most successful raffle of the handcrafted afghan, which was won by Mrs. Develyn Ashton.

A detailed report of the coordinating council meeting was read by Mrs. Steele and gave evidence of the successful efforts of the hospital auxiliaries of the Peninsula.

The annual Friendship Tea of the auxiliaries will be held at St. Hilda's Hall on April 21 at 2 p.m. with Mrs. Connor as chairman.

Mrs. Ada Dawe will arrange the afternoon party for the extended care patients on April 15. Any members who can assist at this function, please call Mrs. Dawe at 885-9537.

Be sure to reserve Thursday, June 2, for the annual Spring Luncheon in the Senior Citizen's Hall from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The date of the Fall Smorgasbord, always a gala event, will be forthcoming.

Mrs. Eggins suggested that arrangements be made to supply certain much needed equipment to the hospital. She also asked that any member who has not yet attended an orientation course at the hospital contact her at 885-2422. The next course will be on March 7.

The next meeting of the Sechelt Auxiliary will be March 10. Full attendance is requested.

Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Lea Redman served tea at the close of the meeting.

Twenty-one members attended the monthly meeting of the Roberts Creek Hospital Auxiliary February 14.

Mrs. Wilma Rodgers, president, and the members discussed details of two scheduled catering events, one this month and a wedding in March.

All present were sorry to learn that Mrs. Neva Newman, the secretary, had resigned as she will shortly be leaving this area. Mrs. Clara Newman promptly came forward and volunteered to fill this position and was duly elected.

There was a feeling of spring in the air this morning, prompting all to agree that the next meeting would take place in the evening. This is scheduled for February 28 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Aidan's Church Hall. The auxiliary welcomes anyone in the community interested in the work of this auxiliary and can always find room for more helpers. Meetings are every second Monday.

The Leisure Outlook This Week

Irene Crowell at Whitaker

Irene Crowell of West Sechelt will have her one artist show from February 28 to March 12, and will be on hand Saturday, March 5, and Saturday, March 12, at Whitaker House, corner of Cowrie and Inlet.

Walk away your excess calories. An inexpensive and safe exercise.

Role of the volunteer fireman

There are three programs this week which may be of particular interest to Sunshine Coast listeners. Between Ourselves, Saturday at 9:05 p.m. looks at that special and very important fraternity, volunteer firemen. There will be stories from the early days, the role of firemen in emergency situations, their importance to small communities and of course a look at the service as it is today. The program was prepared in the Maritimes and may also serve as a common bond between very different parts of the country. We all hold our volunteer firemen in high regard, it is an essential service in a country where most people live in houses of wood construction.

Ideas, on Sunday at 4:05 p.m., will discuss patterns of life and death with internationally known psychiatrist Elizabeth Kubler-Ross. She has earned the nickname of the "death and dying lady" from her work with terminally ill patients, but there is nothing morbid or depressing about her attitude and convictions. She's a comforting and reassuring person to listen to.

And for opera buffs who weren't able to attend the recent VSO production of Mignon by Ambroise Thomas in the Queen Elizabeth Theatre, CBC taped the performance for you. It can be heard Sunday on Special Occasion at 5:05 p.m. Huguette Tourangeau in the title role heads an international cast directed by Richard Bonynge.

Outlaw Josey Wales is a man bent on revenge

Clint Eastwood's 26th feature film, "The Outlaw Josey Wales," the story of a man hounded by soldiers and bounty hunters while on his own bloody mission of revenge, will open Thursday, February 24 at the Twilight Theatre.

The Western adventure drama takes place in the border areas between Kansas and Missouri immediately following the Civil War where out-of-war soldiers, aided by renegade gunfighters, bounty hunters and wanted men, banded together to kill and destroy. One group of ruthless guerrillas kills the wife and young son of farmer Josey Wales, while the leader of the gang sabers Josey and leaves him for dead.

Josey survives, takes up arms and sets out to seek his revenge. For Eastwood, the role is a return to the tough, tight-lipped, violent Western hero which initially brought him international fame.

Magnificent scenery and breathtaking locales highlight "The Outlaw Josey Wales," which Eastwood also directs. The film was shot in locations in Arizona, Utah and northern California against a background of nature which is sometimes harsh, sometimes gentle, but always awesome.

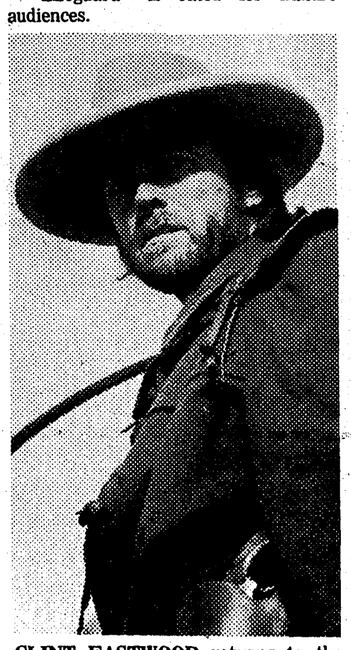
Chief Dan George, now 76 years old, co-stars as an old and very civilized Cherokee Indian who joins forces with Josey Wales. Also co-starring in the film are Sondra Locke, newcomer Geraldine Keams, Paula Trueman, John Vernon, Bill McKinney and young Sam Bottoms.

The film is rated for mature audiences and carries the warning of occasional violence. It runs through February 26.

Following Josey Wales, the Twilight Theatre presents "Lifeguard," opening Sunday, February 27, and running through March 1.

The film stars Sam Elliott as a 32-year-old Southern California lifeguard who finds his age catching up with him.

"Lifeguard" is rated for mature audiences.



CLINT EASTWOOD returns to the western genre that first made him a star in "The Outlaw Josey Wales," opening February 24 at the Twilight Theatre.

Garden Corner

BY GUY SYMONDS

Available now: a substance for your garden that a) corrects soil acidity, b) improves the physical condition of the soil, c) provides nutrient calcium and increases the availability of other plant foods, d) favours bacterial action thus hastening the decomposition of organic matter and releasing other plant foods, e) improves conditions for availability of other nutrients notably phosphorus and some minor elements and f) reduces the toxicity of some elements such as manganese and aluminum. It is cheap and easy to apply.

This substance of course is lime and the time to put it to work is right now. One word of warning. It is not a matter of "if one is good, two are better."

If used excessivly it may result in the immediate release of nitrogen for a short period and may render useless the boron elements in the soil, besides aggravating any deficinecy in magnesium. Both these last are not to be ignored when dealing with the kind of soil we have in this coastal strip.

Lime for the garden is usually bought in the form of so-called "agricultural lime", actually slaked lime or hydrated lime, a very fine white powder that can be applied by hand or machine. For the average garden the rate of application is around half a pound to the square yard, and it should be remembered as mentioned that some damage can result from too heavy an application. Little and often — that is, some each year or so — is about the best advice, because we get generallay a good rainfall, much of it acid bearing from industrial pollution.

This crop year will test the gardener. Rainfall has been much lighter than usual with no snow, so our sandy light soil will soon dry out. Lime will help compact it, thus retaining some of the moisture. The situation can be further helped if attention is paid to keeping the top two inches loose and powdery to act as a mulch and discourage loss of moisture by capillary action and surface evaporation.

In the vegetable garden different crops call for differing treatments but all require soil that is not definitely acid. So some lime is almost a necessity. Everything the average home gardener grow has from very high to high lime demands with the exception of potatoes. Lettuce, cauliflower, cabbage, onions, spinach, asparagus, celery, beets and parsnips can stand almost any amount of lime while smaller amounts will be appreciated by your peas, corn, carrots, cucumbers brussels sprouts, kale, radish and turnips. If you are lucky enough to get farmyard manure don't use lime with it unless the manure is well decomposed. Even then, it is better to keep applications two or three weeks apart.

In the flower garden don't let any lime come within six feet of your azaleas and rhododendrons. They hate it and even the conifers don't like it much.

How much is right? We have to come back to soil testing. In general terms one pound per square yard is pretty heave, and probably rarely necessary. Again we must go back to first principles. Nature rarely does anything drastic or in a hurry, so little and often as indicated by tests seems to be the right procedure.

Now the snowdrops are in bloom, the crocuses are showing colour, there are pussywillows to delight us and the most exciting, soul stirring time of the year keeps us in a state of eager anticipation. Here the person with the garden comes closest to identifying with the Creator and the created — a proud yet humbling privilege. Enjoy it.

Don't forget the Lyn Vernon concert on March 5th, it promises to be one of the highlights of the season. I'm going why not you too? — Miss Bee's, Sechelt.

Egmont residents criticize Core Curriculum plans

BY TOM PERRY

Egmont Community School Society had its first Core Curriculum meeting on Thursday, February 10. The Egmont children were represented by a 100 per cent parent turnout and several other interested residents, some of whom brought items relevant to the discussion:

1. Core curriculum pamphlets.
2. A tape-recorded talk show with John Meredith, the Superintendent of Educational Programmes and Bill Broadley, president of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation.
3. A BCTF paper, Essential Educational Experiences, based in part on their May 1976 document, The Rights and Responsibilities of Children.
4. Several journal and media articles.

At one point, participants noted that the Ministry of Education had its own concepts and implementations of "core curriculum" well advanced. It then became a reasonable question to ask whether the Ministry seriously intended meaningful participation by the teachers and parents. Support for this point of view could be found in Dr. McGeer's statement about the BCTF wasting money on advertisements, and the still unofficial announcement that February 28 will be the last day for public input.

This gathering also discussed the concept of essential or core learning experiences, and noticed that the important hows and whens of learning, as well as mention of the Provincial Learning Assessment Program (PLAP, a companion to CORE), are omitted in the Ministry's booklet. The what of learning — the content — was also discussed, and while it was agreed that some essential or basic learning is important, it was questioned whether this can be uniform for all children in the province, and whether it could realistically be prescribed from the top down.

Part of a five-page 1974 Ministry of Education document, The Public School System Directions for Change, was read:

"Boards of School Trustees must elaborate the core programme in response to local experience, in keeping with the criteria of an effective system.

"The professional staff of each school, in consultation with parents and students, will have final responsibility for the programme. The goal is to ensure that the programme meet the educational needs of the school community and every individual student within it. Appropriate mechanisms for accountability must be developed."

The meeting concluded with unanimous agreement to write a letter to the Ministry of Education, with carbons to the BCTF and our local school board, demanding that parents and other local people be seriously considered in planning the educational experiences of their children, and that they be given far more information and plenty of time to deal with it.

Elementary school survey planned

Early next month, some local parents, trustees, students and teachers will have the opportunity to express their views on education through a survey being conducted by Dr. Norman Robinson of Simon Fraser University.

A task force consisting of local parents, pupils, educators and trustees was struck late last year. This task force will not help Dr. Robinson in the organization of the procedure whereby educators and groups of parents, selected at random, will meet to make their feelings known.

Approximately 80 parents of students will be chosen from both Sechelt and Gibsons elementaries for participation in similar surveys. The parent participants will be chosen on a grade by grade basis from the school using a process of random selection. This method of selection ensures that the views expressed are representative of all parents, not just the so-called "vocal minority".

The parents thus selected to participate will be contacted by letter. Results of the inquiry will be published.

Questions to be addressed in the survey include: What should our children be learning in school? How effective are the schools in our district? Should all schools have the same objectives? Are there local issues in education that concern you?

The group is sponsored by the Sechelt Board of School Trustees and is being carried out under the general direction of Mr. John Denley, district superintendent of schools.

School administrators expressed the hope that all parents named as participants will accept the responsibility of helping to determine educational direction of the schools.

Postage rates go up March 1

First class postage rates go up March 1 from 10 to 12 cents. The change affects postcards and letter mail up to 1 ounce.

This is the second phase of a postage rate change. The first increase took effect on September 1 last year.

Third class postage rates will also go up March 1, from 8 to 10 cents for the first two ounces. Each additional ounce will cost 5 cents.

Fourth class mail rates, applying to parcels over one pound, will not change.

First class letters and postcards being sent to the United States are subject to the 2 cent increase for the first ounce.

An applicable lesson in responsibility

A headline caught my eye recently: "Quarantine urged to stop spread of millfoil in Okanagan." I don't know how it is planned to quarantine the Okanagan lake system, a logical idea but very difficult to put into practise. Especially in this last quarter of the 20th century when few of us are willing to curtail our "rights" to benefit our neighbours or our community.

I was reminded of the story of the heroic inhabitants of an English village who, 300 years ago, imposed a voluntary quarantine upon themselves and stopped the spread of bubonic plague in the Peak district of Derbyshire.

In 1665, there were not many more than 300 people living in the sturdy stone cottages which then as now were scattered along the village street or grouped together picturesquely around paved courtyards.

In the centre of the village, the church with its recently rebuilt tower was set back a little from the road. The row of linden trees which edged the churchyard when I was a child hadn't been planted then — but possibly some of the gnarled yew trees date back to that era and a lot of the gravestones do. In the village of Eyam gravestones may be found in fields and gardens as well as in the churchyard.

In 1665, bubonic plague, which had been the scourge of Europe for several centuries, had broken out in London, and though undoubtedly word of the epidemic had reached this remote village by the end of that summer, London was far away. The village tailor, George Vicars, was waiting somewhat impatiently for an order of cloth from the capital city. It had been a long time on the way and eventually turned up towards the end of August that year, somewhat damp and mildewed from its long journey. The arrival of such goods would be an event in the village and undoubtedly people dropped by to inspect the materials spread out to dry in the tailor's cottage.

Within 48 hours of its arrival George Vicars, an otherwise strong and healthy young man, was taken suddenly ill with a mysterious fever and quickly became delirious and died. Within a few days another young man living in the house was stricken, with the same symptoms and the same unusual lumps appearing on the body before he too died. They were hardy, God-fearing people and young men in their prime might die of accidents in the lead mines or stone quarries, but not of colds or fever. So the villagers soon realised that their worst fear — the thing they must have thought about, but hardly dared to talk about — had happened. The plague was in their midst.

In those days it was natural to look to the church for leadership, and Eyam had a fairly new young rector, William Mompesson, who had come to them after the restoration and accession of Charles 11 in 1661, taking the place of the nonconformist minister who had occupied the rectory during the Puritan years of Cromwell. Young Rev. Mompesson and his beautiful wife Catherine had come to the village from another part of the country and while respected they hadn't yet broken down the reserve of the close rural community toward strangers. As yet they didn't "belong." He was 27 years old, with a wife and two small children and the responsibility for this whole community in its danger and anguish.

He went first to John Stanley, the non conformist minister who still lived in the village. The men put their theological and denominational differences behind them and together they worked out the plan which saved the surrounding villages. Of course they could take flight, or some of them could. But what good would it do. They wouldn't be welcome and it might very well be too late anyway. So they decided to quarantine the village. No one would come in and no one would go out. The boundaries were marked with stone slabs and stone water troughs, some of which are there to this day, where people from the neighbouring villages could leave food and the people of Eyam could put their money in the water.

So as not to increase the risk of spreading the disease, church services and meetings were held in the open air, in a nearby valley with a natural stone arch and grassy hillside. The bodies of victims were no longer brought through the village to the churchyard for burial but laid to rest as close to the house as possible. All clothes and bed linen were burnt.

The heroism of those people can best be understood by reading the inscriptions on some of the gravestones. As you come to the village over the hill you pass a group of head stones in a field, surrounded by a drystone wall. Between August 3 and August 10, 1666, the mother of the family, buried her husband John Hancock and their six children, John Jr., Elizabeth, Oner, William, Alice and Ann. Another son who was living in Sheffield at the time erected the stones later and one to the neighbouring family of Talbots, Richard, his wife Catherine, two sons and three daughters, all buried in July 1666.

Catherine Mompesson also died and when the winter came again and there had been no further deaths since early October, the villagers felt free again to come and go, and those who had survived could begin to rebuild their lives. Of the something over 300 inhabitants of Eyam, 258 had died but the quarantine had worked; the surrounding communities had been spared.

You may think the parallel between the plague in England 300 years ago and the spread of millfoil in Okanagan lake is a very tenuous one, and I would agree. Nevertheless, if we are to stop this plant spreading through the waterways of British Columbia we shall need that same sense of responsibility and dedication to the corporate good displayed by the brave people of Eyam. It will be a problem for all of us who visit as well as for those who live in the valley.

World Day of Prayer March 4

"Love in Action" is the theme of the 1977 World Day of Pray on Friday, March 4.

The service this year comes from Christian Women behind the Iron Curtain in the German Democratic Republic. Approximately 3,000 communities across Canada and 170 countries around the world will be sharing this interdenominational day of prayer and fellowship.

In Roberts Creek, a service will be held March 4 at 2 p.m. in St. Aidan's Church.

The World Day of Prayer is sponsored in Canada by the Womens Inter-Church Council of Canada, located in Toronto.

The council is composed of representatives from 11 Christian denominations, the YWCA, the Canadian Council of Churches and the Ecumenical Forum of Canada.

Offerings from the World Day of Prayer are used to support ecumenical programs in Canada and around the world.

Class for handicapped forming

The handicapped person suffers a certain amount of social deprivation because of hs physical or mental disability. Improvement of the welfare of the handicapped should emphasize friendship and social intercourse, finding a compatible place in the community.

For the disadvantaged person there also is a need to achieve. He or she lives in a world in which physiological motor abilities do not match normal accomplishment levels. Like the left-handed person living in a right-handed society, the disadvantaged person finds frequent dislocations in daily routines. Consequently, the need to succeed may require a high priority. If a handicapped person is to increase his participation and thereby more fully enjoy this life, he will require the help of others in his community.

Everyone is blessed with many inherent capabilities of which he may never become aware. We all go through this life not having the opportunities, for various reasons, to develop those hidden qualities and skills. If we were made more aware of these innate competencies, we would all be thrilled in the spirit of succeeding.

In many communities, the people who instruct and work with handicapped persons usually find it an exceptional rewarding experience. A natural rapport grows between instructor and student. The student receives the evident benefits and the helper is often deeply recompensed with a great sense of love and creativity.

Volunteer helpers in various crafts and skills are needed for a proposed weekly hobby class for handicapped persons on the Sechelt Peninsula. In addition to instructors, handicapped students — children and adults — are invited to participate in this program of the Sechelt and District Association for Retarded Children.

DON'T KNOCK, DRIVE IN

On Sunday, February 13, about 4:30 p.m. Jim Murray of Holiday Market in Madeira Park was startled to see a car roll in through the front doors of his store. Something went wrong with the vehicle Karen Greenfield was driving and it pushed in the post between the doors, smashing the windows. Luckily Karen was unhurt. The produce stand received some dents and Jim is testing it for leaks. He is open for business now and said there will be some produce sales that customers will have to see to believe.

Support your committee with your presence. Bring your ideas and a new member to this important meeting. Leave your politics at home! We're non-political!

GET INVOLVED FOR YOUR OWN BENEFIT!
(An active community is a healthy one.)

The following quote is from a company introduction, in which the former S.C.R.D. chief community planner is involved and whose job it is "to expedite plans to approval". This statement should convince the average property owner that they are affected, like it or lump it, and should support the Area "A" Property Owners Association, the largest per capita organization of its kind in all of B.C.

"Successful development of land has, over the years, become an increasingly difficult and lengthy task." (This must also include building and improvements.) "The prime reason for this is that projects . . . must include compliance with governmental regulations of ever-increasing complexity. The achievement of official approvals of projects is now often the major problem . . . We believe that the shift in emphasis has been insufficiently recognized. The result is inadequate understanding of government and its policies, leading to much frustration for all parties concerned."

I couldn't have said it better.

Continuing Education classes

Several new courses begin this week and next under the sponsorship of the Centre for Continuing Education.

Two Yoga classes started yesterday, February 22. The day class is held at the Indian Band Hall every Tuesday 1:30-3:30 p.m. and the evening class is held at the kindergarten in Sechelt Elementary School 6:30-8:30 p.m. Instructor Evans Hermon will accommodate both beginners and intermediate students.

The fee for the course is $20 for 20 hours.

A new course on house plants will start Wednesday, March 2, 7:30-9:00 p.m. at No. 54 Cowrie Street. Patsy Baker will talk about clipping, re-potting, soil mixtures, light, heat, bugs, fertilizers and subjects like terrarium plantings. Students will also be introduced to the names of all the ordinary house plants. Students will be interested in all the basic do's and don'ts required to grow happy and healthy plants. The fee for the course is $7.

Beryl Husband is back from a long holiday in England and has started two sewing classes in Elphinstone's textile room. A 10-hour course on lingerie began Monday, February 21, at 7:30 p.m.. The fee is $10. This course will be followed up by a 6-hour course on men's pants and a 4-hour course on swim wear. The Stretch and Sew class started Tuesday, February 22, at 7:30 p.m. The fee is $20 for 20 hours.

An advanced class in crochet is offered by Muriel Sully, starting on Monday, February 28, at 7:30 p.m. in Sechelt Elementary School, Ms. Audet's Room. The fee is $12 for 12 hours.

Psychology of early childhood is a 52-hour course taught by Elisabeth Brown. It commences on Monday, February 28, at 7 p.m. in Elphinstone, Portable Unit No. 3, which is located in front of the school close to the highway. The fee is $35.

Basic housewiring is one of the courses that many people have asked for and fortunately a qualified instructor appeared on the scene. If ten or more people are interested, the course will start the beginning of March.

For further information please call 885-3512, Karin Hoemberg, Centre for Continuing Education.

Halfmoon Bay Happenings

—by Mary Tinkley

Mrs. Thea Leuchte has another fine film program to present on Friday, February 25, 7:30 p.m., at the Welcome Beach Community Hall. There will be a film on the Bahamas, which offers interesting flashbacks of their industry from pirate times to the present day. "Flamingos of the Bahamas," a film produced in association with the National Audobon Society is concerned with the preservation of this endangered bird with its interesting and eccentric ways. "Antigua" is a film which offers a tour of tis beautiful island and traces the history of its people. Its colourful carnival is pictured to the rhythym of Calypso music. "Faces of the Orient," a Japanese Airlines film, captures the fascination and flavour of the Orient with glimpses of Hong Kong, Bangkok, Singapore and Djakarta.

The February 11 film show might have been a disaster since the films promised by the Israeli Embassy did not arrive in time for the show. The situation was saved by Adele de Lange of Sechelt, who came to the rescue with a very fine show of Israel and the western Mediterranean. Her knowledgeable and sympathetic commentary made the evening even more interesting. She received a vote of thanks for putting on such a good show at such short notice.

One of Halfmoon Bay's pioneers, Mrs. Sarah Wall, is back on the Sunshine Coast after spending eight years in a rest home at Powell River. She has been transferred to the Extended Care Unit at St. Mary's Hospital, Sechelt. Mrs. Wall is the mother of Mrs. Pat Ness.

Nancy Mercer of Secret Cove was honoured at a baby shower on February 12 at the Joe MacKay home at Secret Cove, when she was presented with a nice assortment of gifts. The hostesses who served refreshements and organized some games were Joanne McKay and Els Zuidema. Nancy and her husband, John Mercer, are expecting a visit from the stork during the next few weeks. Joe and Joanne MacKay are renting the Dr. Farish home at Secret Cove after moving here from Port Moody, but for Joanne it is something of a homecoming for she is the former Joanne Daley of Pender Harbour.

Doug and Marion Foley were on the Sunshine Coast recently to visit Marion's father, Ed Edmunds and relatives at Sechelt. They send greetings to all their old friends and were sorry they did not have a chance to visit them on this occasion. They are now the owners of a furniture store at Chase.

Residents of the Bay who went south in January in search of sunshine, are now returning home, pleasantly bronzed and all reporting wonderful weather. Two of the travellers are Blackie and Jean Petit who drove south via the beautiful Oregon coast and the coast of California. They visted Scotty's Castle in Death Valley and stopped at San Simeon for a tour of Heart Castle. They would have needed to take three tours to see everything there, but the tour they took was sufficient to give them an idea of its vastness, its grandeur and magnificence of its furnishings. There are three guest cottages, one of which has 46 rooms. The Petits thought Arizona was a delightful state and they spent some time in Yuma and Lake Havasu City, where old London Bridge has been rebuilt over the Colorado River. Aided by a replica of a London railway station and a tea garden under the bridge on the river bank, it is proving a great tourist attraction. At Yuma the temperature was in the 80's.

The Petits returned home by way of Nevada. At Yakima it was cold and foggy, so they decided to push on to Wenatchee which proved no better. They drove to Leavenworth where they were advised that Stevens' Pass was open but that snow was forecast and they might be delayed in getting through. However, they found the roads very good and reached Everett without trouble. Arrived back in New Westminster at their daughter's home, they heard the news of the sudden death of Blackie's sister, Rose Marcotte of Quesnel, and set off for Quesnel to attend the funeral before returring home.

The best state for travelling, says Jean Petit, is Oregon, where there are well-maintained rest stations every 40 miles, with picnic tables and washrooms with hot and cold water.

The owners of the Avalon Motel in Palm Springs must certainly know that there are such places as Halfmoon Bay and the Sunshine Coast on the map because this winter, all at the same time, they had four visitors from Halfmoon Bay and four from the Sechelt-Davis Bay area. Their guests were Alice Young, Alice Burdett, Mabel Aikenhead and Charlie Coatham of Halfmoon Bay and Nell Whaites, Madge Bell and Mr. and Mrs. P. McPherson of Davis Bay. They all report a happy holiday with plenty of sunshine and lots of laughs. One evening they organized a supper party by the pool with roast beef, baked potatoes and salads which proved one of the special happy occasions of their holiday. Several Suncoasters called in at the Avalon for a visit, among them the Petits, Jim and Pat Fraser of Pender Harbour and Mary Szentesi of Eureka.
