National labor leader warns local workers against wage controls, right-to-work laws

The head of the 57,000-member Canadian Paperworks Union, Henry Lorrain, told Port Mellon millworkers last week that at the provincial level "we are haunted by the spectre of a Social Credit Party which if re-elected will in some form or other introduce so-called right-to-work legislation" and warned the workers that "if either the Liberals or Conservatives are elected to govern with a majority (federally) we will once again have wage controls."

He was visiting the Sunshine Coast in support of incumbent NDP-MLA for Mackenzie, Don Lockstead, and Comox-Powell River federal NDP candidate Ray Skelly.

"I came to British Columbia with some awareness of this threat to the integrity of our Unions. But my visits throughout the province have heightened that awareness and deepened my concern. Although some leaders of the Social Credit Party may be soft-peddling the right-to-work issue I now have a deep conviction that if they get one more crack at governing this province they will move to undermine the legitimate and democratic trade union institutions which have structured to protect the right of working people," Lorrain said.

"Right-to-work as you know is a cheap misrepresentation of reality. It is not the right-to-work. It is the right to fire. It is the right to hire at substandard wages. It is the right to pit worker against worker. It is the right to scab," he stated.

He indicated wage controls and right-to-work issues were enough reason to support NDP policies both provincially and federally, but that there were other issues.

"The first has to do with the general state of the economy. The Average worker in British Columbia experienced a loss in real wages of about $216 in 1978," Lorrain said.

He said it is a serious situation that has been caused by high unemployment, wage controls and rising prices and said the CPU agrees with the NDP proposal for a Fair Prices Commission with the power to roll back unjustified price increases, a mechanism that both Liberals and Conservatives have voted against.

He said he is pleased the NDP agrees with the union's position that as a precondition to any public financial assistance to the pulp and paper industry that a portion of that money be set aside to provide for retraining, new job creation, supplementary pension benefits or supplementary unemployment benefits for workers affected by the industry's modernization programs.

"We agree with the NDP position that the policies of the Export Development Corporation must be changed so that loans are not made to foreign countries to establish industries which will be in direct competition with Canadian manufacturers.

"Over the past three years the EDC has loaned some $900 million for construction of pulp and paper mills in places like Peru, Poland, Iran, Romania, Argentine, Mexico, Czechoslovakia and, would you believe, the United States.

"That's right, among others, a loan of $67 million of Canadian tax dollars was made to Dow Jones and the Washington Post to build a newsprint operation in Virginia, U.S.A," said Lorrain.

He said glaring examples of need for federal assistance to this industry in Canada were overlooked for big foreign loans such as the $102 million to Iran for construction of a linerboard mill.

"How absurd can you get," asked the Union chief.

He said the union is concerned about the arrogance of Pierre Trudeau and the irresponsibility of Joe Clark.

"We are offended by the arrogance of Bill Bennett who, for crass self-serving political expediency, believes he can steal an election by calling it concurrent with a federal campaign," Lorrain added.

Lockstead at Madeira Sunday

Incumbent NDP-MLA Don Lockstead will be out to meet the people of the North Peninsula Sunday.

He will be at Madeira Park Elementary School that day from 2 p.m. when he will hear questions and explain his platform.

NDP fights the flames for "free enterprise"

By HELEN PARKER

Wednesday morning's fire at Radio Shack on Cowrie Street seemed a little too "realistic" to be a display after second looks by Joy Smith and Peter Beaudin.

Returning to the NDP campaign headquarters next door from their car across the street, Beaudin and Smith were the first to spot the flames.

"We thought it was a display," Beaudin said.

"The flames were really high, three to four feet. There was no smoke, just bright, bright flame."

Both ran into the store trying to attract the clerk's attention to the flames behind the front counter. They were at the back of

Pender Harbour

Residents protest dump closure move

A delegation of over 20 people with a strong collective mind to keep the Pender Harbour garbage dump from closing visited the SCRD board meeting last week to voice their disapproval of a recommendation before the board.

After members of the group were heard, a Public Utilities Committee recommendation to close Gibsons, Halfmoon Bay and Pender Harbour dumps was passed as a motion only after it had been amended to "not include" Pender Harbour at this time.

The amended motion included provision for a committee to be formed with Pender residents to investigate the problem and solutions.

A larger new dump site near the present Sechelt dump has been recommended for use as the Halfmoon Bay and Gibsons waste disposal sites are phased out.

Previous debates about a referendum to be held in Pender regarding their waste disposal also met with resistance from residents.

One resident at the meeting, Elgin Wolf of Silver Sands Resort, described having the dump closed as "being in a ship when they pulled the plug. Then they throw you a balloon to grab . . . that's the referendum."

Delegation spokesman Hawie Whit said in one-and-a-half days they had collected 665 signatures of residents against closing the dump and an emergency meeting attended by 65 people was held Wednesday.

"The people of Pender Harbour want a

Local roads being planned for 150,000 people in future

The Sunshine Coast is a long way from England and it will be a good many years until we have the population of Vancouver's North Shore but these are two concepts brought out by the Department of Highways officials last week when they came to the Casa Martinez to describe the proposed network of roads here that will link to the future highway system.

According to Highways executive director of planning E.B. Wilkins the 150,000 population North Shore is a model for growth of the Sunshine Coast, at least when it comes to planning roads.

He told a group of 19 representing the Sechelt Indian Band, villages of Gibsons and Sechelt, Powell River Chamber of Commerce and SCRD board that planners had to look "beyond land use" and "beyond local concerns" and look ahead "150 years."

"Keep in your head there is going to be intense development and is the highway system going to be adequate," Wilkins commented.

He said at present the thought in planning might be about houses and asked "but what if there is a five-story building around the corner?"

Indicating a highway plan was a permanent idea, he said transportation cannot be readily expanded beyond the initial arteries provided.

"You can dig up the street to replace or expand other services such as water and sewer but you can't do that with roads."

He gave as an example that "three or four blocks" of roadway in Victoria recently cost in the neighborhood of $4 million.

He said Highways used the North Shore as a model because, although they have 150,000 people now, "it was not many years ago they had the same as here," and added it is difficult to forecast the future, "but we have to turn to examples as much as possible."

He said the highways ministry policy on the network is an interest in the right-of-way.

"We are not interested in building unless in complete agreement with the local governments."

He assured the local people it always

Kitimat educator to top Chatelech post

The search for a new principal for Chatelech Junior Secondary School ended recently with the selection of Mrs. June Bernauer of Kitimat.

Bernauer was one of 54 persons applying for the job. School District No. 46 trustees interviewed five of the six applicants who made the short list; the sixth having obtained employment elsewhere.

Bernauer has worked for the past 12 years at Mount Elizabeth High School in Kitimat as classroom teacher, counsellor, acting-administrator and career education coordinator.

She has been actively involved in the B.C. Teacher's Federation at both local and provincial levels, has served as alderman on Kitimat municipal council, and as a member of the Kitimat recreation commision.

Her 18 years experience has included primary, intermediate, junion and senior secondary. She has taught in a number of districts, including Trail, Kamloops, Vancouver, Lillooet and Fort St. John.

Her work in the Career Education field is known throughout Canada. Bernauer was the winner of a Shell Canada Fellowship in Career Education in 1978 and has published several articles for the Guidance Centre in Toronto.

Bernauer is a graduate of UBC and is completing her master's degree in educational administration.

But it is not all work and no play for Bernauer; skiing, golf and creative writing are her favorite leisure time activities.

Thank you, Pender!

The Pender Harbour Aquatic Society sincerely thanks the residents of Pender Harbour for their tremendous supportive vote on the Pool Referendum held last Saturday, April 21. It was a truly community effort with Garden Bay and Egmont really holding up their end to boost the results to a convincing 69.5 per cent in favour of the pool. Once again, thank you all for your support. It certainly gives the Aquatic Society renewed vigor to tackle the big job that lies ahead — FINISH THE POOL!

As special thanks to our campaign committee Gianna Phillips, Ian Vaughn, John and Bea McFarlane, Tom Rothney, Romi Talento, Irene Boyd, Sylvia Thibideau, Isabel Gooldrup (thanks for babysitting, too!), Diane Gough, Darlene Nelson. There isn't room to list all the names of others who helped out. Thanks again.

From the aquatic directors: Marg Gooldrup, Jack Paterson, Robi Peters, Peter Prescesky, Shirley Vader.

Boat overturned

Army cadet saves pair at Sakinaw

By HELEN PARKER

The run-off from the mountains into the lakes is icy-cold at this time of year and Ray Bernier and Emily Henderson can tell you for sure.

Bernier and Henderson were returning by boat from Bernier's property on the other side of Sakinaw Lake about 8 p.m. April 14 when the outboard motor flipped to one side tipping the boat.

Both went into the water, but managed to hold on to the overturned boat. From where they could see a campfire on the beach and they began to shout for help.

Out to the rescue came Officer Cadet Terry Hutchings, of Sechelt, who with Major Trevor Goddard, and Training Officer Bob Sommerfield, were leading a group of 13-to-18-year-old army cadets on a three-day combined exercise.

Goddard said there were about 138 persons, including cadets from the Sunshine Coast, Vancouver, North Vancouver, Port Moody and a squadron of the B.C. Regiment, on the beach that night.

"After dark, we heard cries from the water," Goddard said. "Officer Cadet Terry Hutchings put out in his boat and pulled Ray and Emily out of the water."

"Ray was suffering slightly from exposure, but Emily was into the early stages of hypothermia," he said.

Sommerfield applied first-aid and the two were given dry clothing. Goddard lent them his Jeep to get home.

"There generosity was fantastic," Bernier said later. "The next day they helped pull the boat out of the water.

"We'd like to give them public thanks, really, to give recognition where recognition is due."

Though Bernier and Henderson were in the water only a short time, Goddard said because of the icy water, they could not have held out much longer.

From Missouri no longer

It's ironic that a well-worn phrase "I'm from Missouri" has always been taken to mean the speaker is naive and innocent, uninformed, or just plain unwilling to talk.

It can hardly be applied any longer, at least as far as possible "right-to-work" legislation in our province is concerned.

A few items have been baffed around these pages of late in regard to this matter and it looks like it could become a reality if a Social Credit government is returned to power.

We'd heard about it and many seemed to be concerned but we'd not seen until last week the proof in black and white. It's not news and dates back to November 23, 1978, but it is now in front of us in print. We're not from Missouri any longer.

The letter from Labor Minister Allan Williams is TO the State of Missouri and in it the minister wants to know all about a referendum placed before that State's electorate "concerning proposals to enact what is commonly referred to as "Right-to-Work" legislation."

He says in the letter it is a topic of wide-ranging discussion and adds that B.C. is "not an exception to that rule."

He asks what groups were involved in the public campaign, both pro and con, for statements of the groups, and the base of support for the groups.

"If such a referendum were to be placed before the electorate within British Columbia, I would expect that the supporters would be drawn from the rural areas of the Province, while the opponents would most likely be drawn from the urbanized areas. If there is a difference in the pattern in the State of Missouri, this would be of some considerable significance," the minister's letter says.

The letter asks for size of Missouri's work force, division between men and women, percentage of work force unionized, and a breakdown of the organized work force amongst the several industrial segments in that state.

The minister admits it's a "sizeable demand" on the Labor and Industrial Relations Commission there and we would expect it will take some time to get a reply to the ministry.

Maybe by the time the date is received there will be a new minister or even a new Labor Ministry or a different political persuasion.

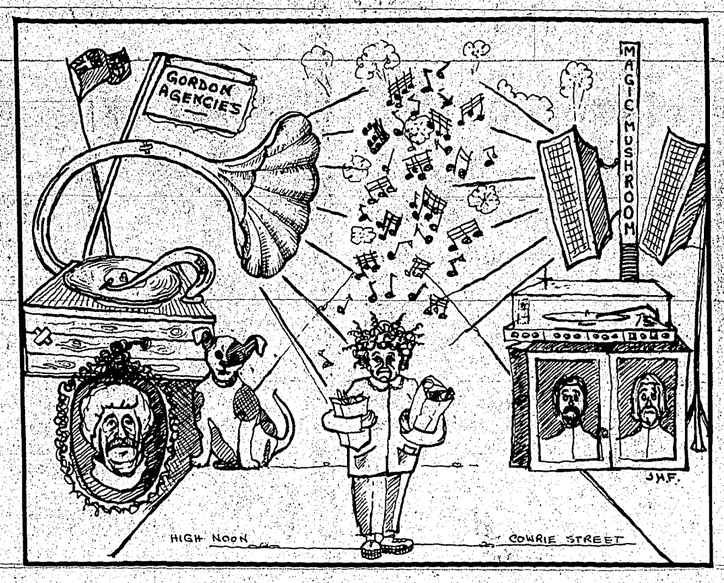
Maybe they'll look at it and file it away.

We don't think unions should have full sway over every service provided by a government or over every job provided by free enterprise and industry.

But we don't think the government should be dabbling in the feelings of the Missouri electorate before they've made exhaustive attempts to find out how the workers in their own province feel about "right-to-work" legislation.

The timing, however, could be just right.

It's election time. And workers, voters, can make their feelings known before we hear what Missouri has to say.



Reflections

The Impossible Dream

By Vern Giesbrecht

The lights went out shortly after Jack Pearsall began his talk at the federal all-candidates' meeting at Elphinstone 10 days ago, but the Liberal MP was able to continue his speech 25 minutes later. For Communist candidate Sy Pederson, however, the chance of being elected has been dark for a much longer period, in fact right from the moment he announced his candidacy.

That's not merely because the MacMillan Bloedel log scaler was nervous and tentative in' his first major political meeting, a televised one at that, or because he isn't a worthy candidate. It's just that trying to win a seat, either provincially or federally, is an exercise in futility for any Communist politician in Canada, no matter how qualified or persuasive.

Take Mark Mosher, running for perhaps the fifth time, on this occasion as the Communist contender in the federal Nanaimo-Alberni riding. He's a long-time Alberni Valley resident, a former logger and longshoreman, active in the Cherry Creek community, former chairman of the school board, no less. Yet he'll be lucky if he pulls in five per cent of the vite; his "communistic" label will scare away many more voters than it attracts.

When I covered the 1972 federal election for the Alberni Valley Times, I encountered scores of people who said, in so many words, "If Mosher were running for another party, I'd vote for him; he's a good man".

Yet Mosher, who was listed as an independent on the ballot because an insufficient number of Communist candidates were running in the election, made it clear where he stood. I remember the stir that went through the crowd when he declared at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon, "I'm a Communist and proud of it."

The businessmen admired his forthrightness, enjoyed his speech but when it came time to mark their ballot, they opted for one of the other candidates.

I'm certain the same thing will happen in the two elections this spring. Of the 71 Communist candidates running federally (including 12 in B.C.) and the five Communists trying for seats in the B.C. election, none has a real chance of winning.

The woman who answered the phone at the Hastings Street office of the B.C. Communist Committee agreed with my assessment.

"Realistically, we don't have a chance. If we had even one elected, it would be a major victory." She added, however, that her uncle almost won a seat in Nanaimo as a Communist candidate in the 40s and she believed that "one or two" Communists had been elected to the federal Parliament at some point in Canada's history.

Why does the Communist Party run candidates when there is little hope of winning, I asked.

"We have a sound policy and we may push the other candidates to express their positions more clearly . . .One day we will be elected."

Looking at the Communist platform, one finds few startling or radical proposals. Some of the ideas suggested by Pederson, for example, were: reduce the work week to 32 hours without any reduction in take home pay, provide unemployment benefits at 90 per cent of earnings, adopt legislation for equal pay for work of equal value and extend social security. If these and other suggestions along the same line were pushed by a candidate of another political stripe, they might find ready acceptance but a Communist could promise filet mignon as daily fare and a $20,000 guaranteed annual wage without capturing more than a handful of votes.

For millions of Canadians, Communism is still a dirty word, one that conjures up visions of Lenin and Stalin, "liquidations" and concentration camps, religious and political oppression and persecution. Furthermore, "McCarthyism" was not restricted to the United States.

When I was growing up in the Fraser Valley, most of the references to Communism came from the pulpit, and were usually prefixed with the word "godless". I knew many people, including my maternal grandmother, parents of several friends, my high school principal, and other adults, who were born in Russia and had fled to North America primarily to escape religious persecution and civil war. I heard horror stories about the revolutions and purges and massacres in Russia. No doubt the Communists were behind it all.

My early notions about Communism, vague and one-sided as they were, remained with me long after I had been exposed to a more balanced approach to that particular political philosophy. It was with a certain amount of trepidation, therefore, that I became acquainted with honest-to-goodness Communists during my sojourn in Port Alberni.

I soon learned that a voluble, somewhat narrow-minded Communist on the city council was not dangerous, not even a fiery-eyed zealot, though he did get carried away at times. I grew to like Mosher, the school board chairman and Communist candidate. I sipped tea with national Communist leader William Kashtan without having my back safely against the wall, and swapped yarns with B.C. chief Nigel Morgan without feeling uneasy.

These Communists, and others, seemed proud of their lonely struggle for the "cause". They were as prone as the next politician to spout rhetoric, a foolishly optimistic as anyone chasing a pot of gold, as fervent as only persons who have "seen the light can be.

In the current elections, and for years to come, I believe Communist candidates in Canada will be greeted with amusement, tolerance, perhaps mild interest and scattered instances of enthusiasm — and pitifully few votes. No doubt they'll labor on, striving for respectability, continuing to dream the impossible dream.

Battle of the little and big horn

The village of Sechelt was assaulted by a seven-day music war the other week. Cowrie Street was the battlefield and with apologies to Winston Churchill it was strictly "blood, sweat and yer-ears". Bernel Gordon, who is considered more splenetic by nature than symphonic, was tilting at the rock-and-roll music blasting from the Magic Mushroom across the street. His sword was his limited collection of classical records, his stereo and an amplifier which he pitted against the "with it" sound that has continuously assaulted the ear since the Dock opened.

The the casual Cowrie Street stroller, that week was amazing. There he was caught between the decibles of Beethoven's Fifth and the BeeGees and the glares of the protagonists. Bernel also threw in 90 minutes with Arthur Fiedler which contains several Christmas carols to further confuse the issue. But then decided he should be fighting fire with fire so he tossed in Super Sax and the Salt Peanuts Volume No. 2.

Overheard at the Medical Clinic was "Please turn it down, you're waking the undead!" Bernel stated firmly "They shared their music with me for a year and I felt it only decent to share mine with them for a bit."

I am happy to inform the now deserted street that the war is over and Cowrie Street has resumed its regular cacophony of bleeting horns, burning rubber and screeching brakes. My usual spotty survey indicates about 11 to 1 in favor of Bernel Gorden. My personal opinion is that I always resent my privacy of thought and concentration being invaded by anyone else's idea of musical pleasure.

I am most offended by Musak in a shop elevator or office. It sounds so funereal that I always except plum colored, redi-fold curtains to slowly part, revealing a coffin. I can only admire Bernel for his successful fulminating in an era of apathy and acceptance.

Why do the meanings of words have to be changing?

I can remember when to call a person "gay" meant that he was a happy and amusing person.

A "workshop" used to mean a place where the saws, hammers and nails were likely to be found. Now it is used continuously to mean conference, symposium or study. Seminar has been tossed in , though it used to create images of esoteric reflection. Can anyone imagine our SCRD board attempting anything so ambitious as that?

"Dialogue" has been out of favor for a couple of years now though it was extremely fashionable in the early Seventies. Even families were having dialogues instead of chatting as they have done for almost ever. Anyway, dialogue took a dive.

"Communication skills" has replaced English or grammar and just plain old-fashioned speech.

Up until now people have gotten "into" shape, "into" condition, "into" the sauce and "into" trouble. Now they are "into" things they used to be interested in. "She's into sewing." "He's into ceramics." How the hell can anyone get "into" sewing or ceramics? Whatever happened to just doing those things?

I was irritated when "no way" had its vogue, but now "like ya know" has become a hesitant connector of sentences or even the longer "I-meanlike-ya-know". This has replaced "Ah" or "Uh". The point is that when you had to ay "ah" or "uh" you knew you were floundering and you smartened up. No more. Now you can just keep going with ever ending sentences containing these continuous connectors.

The word "like" means two things: resemble and fond of. It means nothing else and may NOT be used to start a sentence or to replace "as". I guess we should all try to brush up on our "Communication Skills" now and then but at least most of us leave "viable" strictly for political use.

In the realm of strange happenings: It was interesting the other week to see Senator Ed Lawson crossing Teamster picket lines to get to his own office. The Senator (who said he would retire from his position as International vice-president of the Teamsters Union when he accepted his Senate seat about nine years ago) looked a little tight-lipped as he denied any feeling of guilt to reporters. See what a long memory does for you?

It has been quite nice to be off the blatting flubberies of politics for one week anyway.

The Canadian Postal Service has been the subject of many jokes and snide hilarity in the past years and now they are getting back at us. The beautiful stamps put out each month by the CPS have been a source of pride for many Canadians who enjoy stocking up and using the lovely things rather than the more prosaic regular Queen stamps.

We have been treated to Group of Seven, Indian, Eskimo and historical art stamps and sporting, fishing, boating and flying stamps and just so many magnificently-designed, interesting, commemorative ones that collectors have gone mad at the choice. They are about twice the size of an average stamp.

This month, in revenge I expect at too much cutting comment, the CPS has come out with a new issue. It is an incredible hand with one finger extended, a string around the finger. Are they reminding us to pay our taxes or bills? I recommend their use for these things alone. Good Heavens!

An inside to the devoted "constant reader" who wrote me in last week's paper. My goodness, he had built up a head of spleen.

In answer to his question: "Who does she think builds things and for who (sic)?" I think good homes are designed by good architects and good builders follow those designs. Good areas are designed by good planners and the result is a lovely and attractive village.

I only wish Sechelt took more advantage of its position by the sea. I feel that zoning changes should be given the closest possible scrutiny as they have so often, in the past, been slipped in, while the townsfolk were snoozing in the sun or fishing.

Rainy weather was not the time to plan your zoning changes, Sir, as it seems everyone was awake.

—Marcia Poultice

A fine line

This feels like home

—by Bruce Robinson

It is quite likely that many of you who are now residents of the Sunshine Coast never really intended to live here. If your story is similar to numerous others I have heard, then you probably came up to Roberts Creek or Egmont or Halfmoon Bay to visit Aunt Effie for the weekend. Except that before you knew it, that weekend transformed itself into weeks then months and finally years. And when you expressed puzzlement as to why you couldn't seem to get out of here, Aunt Effie, a long time resident, just gave you that knowing smile as if to say, "I could have told you so." The same thing may well have happened to her.

The Sunshine Coast has become home to a wide variety of people, from the businessman who commutes to Vancouver to the musician who lives in the woods. Clearly, the Sunshine Coast offers something which is absent elsewhere, and I believe we are attracted by something more involved than simply beautiful country. That in itself is sufficient to draw many people to the area, but they wouldn't stay were there not additional advantages to being a resident here.

How we all arrived varies. Some came to see Aunt Effie, some had spent summers here as children and returned to regain a piece of their former paradise, some decided to take a ferry ride, others may have become drunk and confused and taken the wrong ferry ride, and still others had the good fortune to break down in the waters off the peninsula, forcing them to come ashore to find assistance. Regardless of how we got here, many of us stayed, and the reasons we remained are what fascinate me.

I think at the core of our desire to remain as residents of the Sunshine Coast is our need to relate to people in some real and significant way, and that is easier to do here than it is in Vancouver or any other city.

In a previous column I mentioned that service seemed to be vanishing in favour of self-serve, express-style establishments. By virtue of the number of people in cities, it is extremely rare that one feels that services rendered are at all touched by personal concern. Merchants deal with too many faces to be able to attach a person to that face whom they know and therefore can cater to. Here, at least, we have the opportunity to become known in a relatively short time, and merchants and mechanics, and restauranteurs and bartenders are people we can get to know and with whom we can even develop relationships. They are wise enough to know that friendliness and efficiency mean the difference between profit and bankruptcy, but they are, from my experience, still genuine people.

I don't intend this to be a commercial, but tell me where you've found a more personable and entertaining bartender than Tony Tyler at The Cedars, or more pleasant people than Mike and Arlo at the Penn Hotel. Nor have I discovered people who are as straightforward or as warm as Dave and Brian at the Chevron station in Gibsons.

There are so many people I could include in this list, but the point is that something besides a business transaction is taking place. There is also a relationship at stake. If you talk to Mary Dory, the travel agent, or Merv Casey at the auto wrecking yard, you'll find that they are people first and business persons second. And it makes a difference.

The kind of intimacy I am talking about extends to other areas besides business. Events such as the Dogfish Derby, Sea Cavalcade, and Roberts Creek Days are unmistakably stamped with a humour and a warmth and a joy which uniquely belong to the people of this area.

Perhaps I am so impressed with the communities on the coast because I am unaccumstomed to that small town feeling. Whatever the case, it's great to know half the people you pass on the highway and it's equally satisfying to wave and to know that the wave returned is not merely perfunctory. When I was in the city, I didn't feel that I belonged, even though I had been there for twenty-six years. After one year of living here, this feels like home.

Others must share my feelings. Many people who are alienated by the city appear on the coast, often to make a new start. Accountants become roofers, doctors become Volkswagen mechanics, artists take up landscaping. The change such people seek they could not find in any small town. The feeling you get in your communities has been nurtured in a very special way.

Intangibles are difficult to discuss at the best of times, but one thing can be said for sure. Most of the people who reside in the city would rather be somewhere else. I don't think the same could be said for the majority of residents on the Sunshine Coast.

Many helped to make local TV forum success

Editor, The Times:

Elphinstone Student Research Productions wishes to thank all the people who helped to make our Fourth Community Forum a very exciting week-end as well as an excellent training-work experience. We wish to thank Coast Cablevision Ltd. for their continued support all year. Mr. John Thomas and Carl Bobardt worked along side us and assisted us with technical difficulties. Sony distributor, Tom Holgate, from Pacific Video in Vancouver, provided us with the best equipment available. Mr. Blair Kennet loaned us a carpet from his shop — Carpet Cabinet Ceramic Centre. The carpet added to the professional tone of our set. We thank the District maintenance staff from our School Board for all the extra work we caused them.

We thank the UBC students who started our productions with their presentation about the Glassford theatre. We thank the clubs and societies who set up displays in the gym. We were fortunate to have participattion from all the people who performed in the gym on Saturday.

The elections were called just in time for our forum. The Council of Local Unions thought the All-Candidates meetings would be a good example of community programming and we were pleased to have the opporunity of taping both of them. We thank the Provincial and the Federal candidates.

Mrs. Rosalie Gower, who came all the way from Vernon, B.C. representing the CRTC, gave credence to our belief in the value of community television. Mr. John Denley, Superintendent of Schools, offered to assist us in continuing our study of broadcasting as it relates to life on the Sunshine Coast. Mrs. Maryanne West, our fellow student, discussed the possibility of starting a Community television association which we will be able to assist where we can.

Most important, Elphinstone Student Research Productions wishes to thank Mr. Dave Helem from the District Resource Centre for his time and patience during this past year. We could not have continued our efforts without his co-operation.

Much to everyone's surprise, we sincerely thank B.C. Hydro. Hydro officials spent extra time and staff on Sunday morning working from 9 to 11 to have the power on for our community forum. We spoke to Hydro several times and we were pleased with their co-operation. They successfully completed the outage, and the problem which happened after our forum began, was an accident. The power had to be shut down for safety reasons and we appreciate this. Besides, it happens to the best of productions and how our community handled it was very impressive.

We thank the editors of the local papers for their excellent coverage. We will set up a schedule for showing our tapes over Channel 10 and will notify the public through the press.

Our sincere appreciation to all,
Elphinstone Student Research Productions.

Questionaire on Community TV? More info wanted

Editor, The Times:

May I please ask the Peninsula Times assistance in reaching those people who filled in the questionnaire about their interest in community television at the recent Forum but who didn't add their names and phone numbers.

Could they please call me at 886-2147. Thank you.

Maryanne West.

Rezoning blizzard SHOULD cause storm of protest by residents

Editor, The Times:

It was refreshing to read Marcia Poultice's editorial: "Rezoning blizzard is no storm of progress" in the April 18 Times. It expresses well how many of us feel about the developers' deliberate progress towards a Metropolitan Sunshine Coast. Yet, it need not be that way. In this democratic province every rezoning has to be preceeded by a Public Hearing, which, according to the Municipal Act, must be announced in two consecutive issues of a local paper, with the date of the last issue no less than three and no more than ten days in advance of the date of the hearing.

If enough people would attend these hearings and voice their objections or submit them in writing to the SCRD, the rezonings cannot take place!

The SCRD Planning Department, which employes two qualified Planners, is supposed to provide guidance to the SCRD Board of Directors, to the Public and to developers on responsible, harmonious and aesthetic development throughout the Sunshine Coast. One should realize, however, that the Department and the Board are under continuous pressure from developers, for whom this is a full-time job and who are motivated by profit.

The authorities, therefore, get a grossly distorted view of what is really in the best interests of the community.

The requirement to prepare Settlement Plans for the various areas on the Sunshine Coast is a laudible attempt to involve the Public in the process of responsive planning. Yet, I know of one Planning Committee, where the Chairman is at the same time the Agent for a local developer .

To bring the rezoning blizzard under control will not be easy, but it can be done, if those, who value responsible planning, attend the hearings and say: "NO!".

GIBSONS VILLAGE clerk-treasurer Jack Copland points out proposed Highway routes for Sunshine Coast to Gibsons Ald. Lorrain Goddard on map that compares area to North Vancouver for highway development.

takes time to get agreement before putting a road through and that the department was not interested in "destroying land use programs as planned locally."

He estimated lead time required before a highway construction could start as 10 to 15 years on any project.

"How long we pushed for the Langdale connection shows that 10 years is not an exaggeration," Wilkins commented. He told the group they had "an enormous amount of projects on the books" and that it will cost a lot of money and take time.

"I assure you it is not the case the ministry will come and build a road as soon as we identify the network. We have networks all over the province and I assure you we don't have funds to start construction of those networks.

To suggest the ministry of highways is going to build a road that distorts land use projects is absolutely unfounded," said Wilkins.

An angered SCRD area F director David Hunter said he understood from the regional and provincial planners that the road between Langdale and Gibsons had been settled.

"How many people are going to be killed before you build that part of the highway? All I want is to get a road from Langdale to Gibsons before somebody gets killed," Hunter exclaimed.

Highways planning engineer Steve Reynolds said the bypass route along the power line above North Road from Langdale towards Gibsons had been surveyed but the connector route between the planned new bypass road that connected it to Highway 101 had not been settled locally.

The connector route has been a matter of some contention, the group was told, with some Reid Road residents opposed to using that road and Sunnycrest Mall merchants in part in favor of bringing it down past the shopping centre.

Also considered have been Payne Road and Park Road and a Gilmore connector.

SCRD board chairman, Ed Nicholson, reminded Hunter that they were dealing with technicians and not politicians who made funding decisions about road system construction.

Nicholson said the highways department was in "some degree of confusion" since a previous regional board had passed an earlier plan for the route and he said a 1973 decision was still being used by Victoria to make decisions about the route through Gibsons.

On Nicholson's urging, the group agreed to take the proposed bypass plan as a committee of representatives from the village and regional district areas to interested groups such as the Chamber of Commerce and get "input" before another meeting is held with highways officials and the discussion begins as to whether or not the agreed-upon route is a political possibility.

• Dump closure

dump no matter what the problems are and no matter what the cost. It is one of the few things the regional district does up there," White told the board.

"You are running roughshod over the feelings of the people . . . you've had problems up there before . . . The further you push this, the worse it's going to be. We are not going to let it happen," he added.

The board was told if the dump was closed the garbage would be dumped in the ocean because there would be no place else to put it.

Area A alternate director Vera McAllister told board members they were forgetting Pender Harbour was a rural area.

"We live there because we want that kind of life. (Regarding the trucking of garbage to a central dump at Sechelt) we dont want it and we want nothing to do with it. You should consider the geography of our area before you go fencing off the dump," she said.

Waste disposal committee chairman for the board, George Gibb, told the group they wanted to offer choices and these were a compactor at Pender with a haul to Sechelt once a week, an alternate site (that meets Pollution Control Board standards), or a small incinerator.

Area F dir. David Hunter questioned why money was spent on garbage studies if they weren't used.

"I question why we spend $12,000 on reports and ignore them. We tell the experts to go to hell. This board said incineration is too expensive. The Sechelt site is 2 miles long and can be covered once a day. We have to listen to these suggestions," Hunter said.

WATER SHED ENDANGERED

In other business, the board was shown photos of the silting problem at the Chapman Creek watershed sent in by John Hind Smith of the Gibsons Wildlife Club.

Logging at the lower elevations was believed the cause of the silt build-up which was described by board chairman Ed Nicholson as "quite alarming" because it's "our watershed."

Dir. Joe Harrison explained that above 3,500 feet elevation the undercover holds the snow packed and that the public has the right to protection for a watershed against silting.

Dir. George Gibb said he wanted some kind of legislation to stop the silting problem.

Sharon Doyle weds

by Mary Tinkley-Shannon 885-9765

On April 21, Sharon Doyle became the bride of Dean Kingston, the son of Florence and Leonard Kingston of Squamish. Both the marriage and the reception which followed were held at the Redrooffs Road home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Peggy Ayer.

The blonde bride looked lovely in an off-white gown trimmed with pearls. The gown was in a period style, with scooped neckline, puffed sleeves and flounced skirt. She carried a bouquet of white and peach coloured flowers, and was given in marriage by her father, Roy Doyle. Matron of Honor, Lois Oliver of Nanaimo, was dressed in a peach-coloured gown. Best man was Steve Monk of Squamish and the toast to the bride was proposed by Len Werseen.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Stan Wood of the Unitarian Church, Vancouver. Helen Robertson catered delicious buffet refreshments for the 60 guests present, who included the bride's grandfather, Ed. Edmunds, her aunt and uncle, Doug and Marion Foley of Chase and her cousins, Michael, Stephen and Kelly Foley and their wives. The couple will spend a few days on a fishing trip before settling down in their home in Squamish.

HALFMOON BAY SCHOOL

Six parents of children attending the Halfmoon Bay School attended the School Board meeting last Thursday to present a petition and express their concern about the Board's proposal to combine a kindergarten class with Grades 1, 2 and 3. As a result of their presentation, the Board agreed to defer the proposed change for a year, which means that for the year 1979-80, kindergarten children will continue to go to Sechelt. The following year the Board plans to introduce a kindergarten class at the Halfmoon Bay School, but it is too early to predict whether it will be combined with the primary grades or be a separate class.

The concerned parents won still another point when the School Board agreed not to draw in the western boundary of the Halfmoon Bay School from the Jolly Roger to Brooks Road. Realizing that a mult-grade-kindergarten class is still a possibility for the school for the year 1980-81, several of the parents will shortly be visiting Richmond to see such a class in operation. They are also planning the formation of a parents' advisory committee.

BINGO VS. HOCKEY

Bingo, which is usually a popular attraction at the Welcome Beach Hall, was no match for the hockey game on April 21 and, consequently, drew only a small attendance. All hockey fans stayed closed to their TV sets watching the game which went into two periods of overtime.

However, those who turned up at the hall had an enjoyable evening, with Jerry Berthelet proving a most competent caller with a few new tricks up his sleeve. The next and last social evening at the Welcome Beach Hall will be on Saturday, May 19, when a Little Reno Night is planned.

The next regular meeting of the Halfmoon Bay Hospital Auxiliary will be on Monday, May 7 at the Welcome Beach Hall at 8 p.m.

JANET BACK

Janet Allen who has been receiving hospital treatment in Vancouver for the past three weeks, is happy to be home again. Anybody who knows Janet's enthusiasm for her garden will not be surprised to hear that she is outside working by eight o'clock each morning. She acknowledges with grateful thanks the many gestures of kindness from her friends and neighbors.

It may not be the ideal way to celebrate a wedding anniversary, but Peter and Eileen Bannister certainly did not follow the usual tradition for the celebration of their 44th wedding anniversary. Peter got a really bad bout of flu and stayed in bed to speed his recovery because he is expecting a visit from his favourite cousin from Birkenhead, England. Eilleen, with no thought of celebration, ate a solitary meal.

We have many little "Canadiana" trinkets for your guests to take back home; small, attractive and practically weightless. — Miss Bee's, Sechelt.

Retire in comfort

by Marion Alsager, 886-2458

Jim Budd told an appreciative crowd, "With Planning you can Retire in Comfort." On Wednesday evening, in the Elphinstone gym, Jim held a one night lecture on retirement planning. He leaned on the topic of how to ease the tax bite. He emphasized the RRSP and RHOSP government plans.

For example, a potential earning of $15,000 per year for 20 years, and a saving of $50 in RRSP per month, buys an annuity of $300 per month. These plans also reduce your tax payment. There is value in even a 10 year plan and he stated that employed wives and husbands should be included in these plans.

BAND CONCERT

The Elphinstone Band Concert had a good turnout. The band sounded quite polished and the students looked impressive in their uniforms. They have acquired some new instruments which add much to the success of their performances. The Milne High School band from Sooke, B.C. performed well, despite their late arrival. It was unfortunate that the Choir was so small, however, everyone enjoyed their presentation also. The home-baking was a sell-out.

SAVE CHILDREN FUND

Needed are donations of hand or machine knitted woollens or even synthetics which would be suitable for unravelling. This wool will then be made into useful articles for the Save the Children Fund. If you have any, do contact the Volunteer Bureau at 885-3821.

STAY TERRIFIC

Lorrie and Mo Girard had a terrific four-day stay in San Francisco where they met their Seattle friends, Florence and Bill Kyton, who helped Lorrie celebrate her birthday. This weekend they will be entertaining their family Ron and Susan and children, also Dan who has just completeed his second year at Capilano College in Commercial Art.

WEIGHT LOSERS

Six Gibsons Chapter TOPS members attended the ARD (Area Recognition Day) held in Vancouver last Wednesday. It was a most inspiring evening as they heard from the many successful weight losers and were most proud of their member Debbie Ball, who was amongst them.

TIDES CHANGING

Doug and June Smith have leased their Tides cafe and are off to 100 Mile House where they have purchased an apartment block which they are in the process of renovating.

Nadine Smethurst and Heather Cattanach are attending a B.C. Ranger Conference in Fort St. John on May 3, 4, 5.

ALL THAT JIVE

Eunice Baker and Ed Meldrum won the "Jive Contest" at the Kinsmen Graffitti dance last Saturday; there was considerable competition and we do congratulate them on their win!

FIREMAN RETIRES

Gibsons Volunteer Fire Dept. held a "retirement party" for Bob Wilson on Saturday night. Bob has been with our Fire Dept. for 30 years. He is one of the original members and actually helped to build it. He has been the assistant Fire Marshall for the past 20 years and has done a dedicated job.

TEA

The OAPA Spring tea and Bazaar drew a record a crowd and all were rewarded by enjoying a scrumptious tea plus being able to purchase a tremendous variety of items. There was everything from peanuts to plants, jewellery, books and a splendid array of handicrafts.

The raffle draw kept the crowd in abeyance until the winning tickets were drawn. Mrs. C. Carmichael won the first and third prizes, Mrs. T. Knowles, the second prize, and Vi Campbell the fourth.

Wednesday night was the last session for the photography course and at least half of the original 60 students were still present. What was intended to be a very basic course became more and more professionally upgraded due to the enthusiastic response. We hope to see these boys, Harvey and Mike, do a repeat next year. We are also hoping they will have Workshops in the future.

AVIATION DISPLAY

Thanks to Sheila Kitson, who arranged for the exhibit on the "History of Aviation", everyone who saw it enjoyed it. It is a travelling Provincial exhibit, the pictures and models were very interesting. This display was held in the Sunnycrest Mall on Saturday.

ENJOYED RENO

Carmen and Jerry Dixon, just returned from a few days holiday in Reno say they enjoyed "the break."

WITH ANGIE

We heard that John Smith was doing a TV episode in Vancouver with none other than Angie Dickinson (of Police Woman fame), on his boat, the "Silver Gail."

COOKIE TIME

April 27 to May 5 is Girl Guide Cookie week, do support them.

DANCING

We watched the dancing that was being filmed at the gym last Saturday and particularly enjoyed the professionalism of Valerie Kettle and Karen Boothroyd. All the dancers were good and were capably accompanied by Ken Dalgleish on the piano.

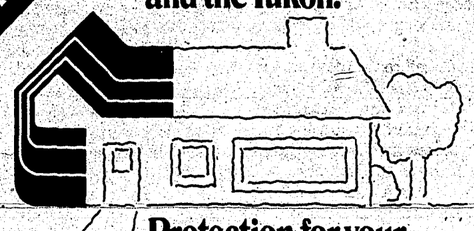
CANADIAN ADVERTISING ADVISORY BOARD

Announcing: The New Home Warranty Program of British Columbia and the Yukon.



Protection for your new home investment.

The New Home Warranty Program of British Columbia and the Yukon was initiated by the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, B.C. Council and was established in April, 1976.

It's a nice warm feeling ....

The Warranty means protection for you and your investment in a new home, five kinds of protection for five years from the date of purchase.

- Your deposit (money you paid in good faith to bind the contract) to the registered builder is protected, up to $5,000.
- Registered builders provide a one year workmanship and materials warranty, which is guaranteed by the Program.
- You are protected against structural defects in your new home to the end of the fifth year from date of occupancy, up to $20,000.
- In the event of a dispute with your builder, the Program provides impartial conciliation to help you resolve your differences.
- And, if you decide to sell your new home during the five year period, the balance of the warranty is transferable to the new owner.

Today, there are over 10,000 new homes in B.C. and the Yukon protected by the New Home Warranty Program. Look for this sign when buying your new home.

PUBLIC NOTICE
ROYAL COMMISSION OF INQUIRY INTO URANIUM MINING

COMMUNITY MEETINGS

The following Commissioners were appointed in accordance with the British Columbia Public Inquiries Act:

Dr. David V. Bates, Chairman
Dr. James W. Murray
Mr. Valter Raudsepp

Within the Terms of Reference, the Commissioners are to inquire into the adequacy of existing measures to provide protection in all aspects of uranium mining in British Columbia. In particular, they are to examine the adequacy of existing Federal and Provincial requirements in British Columbia for:

(a) The protection of the health and safety of workers associated with exploration, mining and milling of uranium, and

(b) The protection of the environment, and

(c) The protection of the Public.

On completion of the inquiry, the Commissioners will make recommendations to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council for setting and maintaining standards for workers and public safety, and for protection of the environment in respect to exploration, mining and milling of uranium ores.

A preliminary schedule of Community Meetings in June and July 1979 has been arranged as follows:

KELOWNA
Tuesday, June 5
Wednesday, June 6

CLEARWATER
Friday, June 8

KAMLOOPS
Monday, June 11

ROCK CREEK
Monday, June 18

GRAND FORKS
Wednesday, June 20

CASTLEGAR
Thursday, June 21

WILLIAMS LAKE
Tuesday, June 26

VANDERHOOF
Wednesday, June 27

FORT NELSON
Tuesday, July 3

ATLIN
Wednesday, July 4

The purpose of the Community Meetings is to give the Commissioners the opportunity of understanding the local issues facing these communities that could be affected by uranium mining in British Columbia. It will also permit local organizations or members of the public an early opportunity to express their views regarding the issues that are to be considered by the Commission. The Commission plans on returning to these and other communities where required, at a later date after more technical information is available.

Public interest groups who are applying for "Participant Funding" may, if they wish, make an opening statement at these Meetings, but they will not be expected to present their main submissions until the Fall Hearings. However, anyone who particularly wishes to speak at the above Public Meetings in June or July, and who have not already done so, are requested to advise the Secretary in advance.

During the course of the Hearings, the Commissioners will make on-site inspections of uranium deposits and local environmental settings.

The locations, dates, and times of the individual Public Hearings will be published in advance in the appropriate regional and local newspapers.

On behalf of the Commission

Local ladies win as sailors

By Peggie Connor, 885-9347

The recent convention for the Western Weight Controllers of British Columbia was held at the Coach House Inn in North Vancouver April 19, 20 and 21. Sechelt's four groups were well represented and provided all of the entertainment.

The "Leftovers" theme pertained to the sea. Appropriate dress as sailors, and their table decoration of a lighthouse complete with working light, won them first prize.

The "Lettuce Lose" received honorable mention (or second prize if there had been two prizes). "Timber Days" was their theme and the table decoration a logging scene, with the ladies dressed as loggers with hard hats advertising Timber Days. Their part of the entertainment was a song by the group, composed by Ethel Jure, on dieting.

The "Sunshine Slims" with their Raggedy Ann costumms made the show with their aerobic dancing and their performance the talk of the convention. However, they came second in the costume awards which earned them an honorable mention. They were beat out by a sheik and his harem.

"The Body Shop" chose Nursery Rhymes as their theme and dressed accordingly, with their part in the entertainment a delightful skit.

About 300 people attended and the Sechelt women were the only ones providing entertainment. It speaks well for the enthusiasm of the local groups.

It was not all just fun and frolic, though. The convention had its serious side too. Friday's speaker was Bob Mason, a pharmacist who explained patent drugs in reference to pills directed at those dieters looking for a quick loss — a very informative session.

Next day's speaker was a good follow-up, Dr. Chris Davis, a physchiatrist from Simon Fraser University who spoke strongly on people helping themselves by putting mind over matter. He made an excellent presentation leaving much food for thought.

Say, there's a good slogan. "Put mind over matter and you won't get fatter." Sorry, couldn't resist that.

All in all it was an inspirational three days and plans are under way for the next convention in 1980 to be held on Vancouver Island.

UNWELCOME NEIGHBOR

Don and Audrey Penn, formerly of Lord Jim's Lodge in Secret Cove, have moved to Big Maple Trailer Court in Wilson Creek. A woodpecker resents their intrusion into his territory and hammers on the wall in the wee hours of the morning. They are not the only ones singled out for his attention, either. Trailer occupants are forced to listen to his musical tatoo as well. The friendliness of the other inhabitants make up for his unwelcome intrusion.

RATEPAYERS AND ZONING

Explanation of rezoning and bylaws is thought by some people to be strictly regional procedure. But the procedure for the Village Council is basically the same. While people may feel that their voice is not heard at a public hearing, they are wrong. Attention is paid even though a group could crowd a meeting on a certain issue and still not be the voice of the majority.

SPECIAL EVENTS TIMBER DAYS

Excitement is rising among the teams entered in the Timber Days special events. There were ten teams wanted and for a while only eight had entered. Two more were deciding last weekend. The way the contest works, an even number is needed.

So far, the candidates for Timber Maid and their teams are, RCMP team has Lee Ann Nestman, Canadian Legion Branch No. 140 has Bonnie Wigard, Halfmoon Bay Recreation Commission — Eis Mercer, Royal Bank — Andre Bobart, St. Mary's Hospital with Roberta Esau, B.C. Lions has Mary Ann Darney, Chamber of Commerce — Marie Hoffar and Bank of Montreal with Carole Bystedt.

While this Timber Maid competition is not a beauty contest, the candidates make it look like one with their attractiveness and personality. The only way a Timber Maid will become Ms. Timber Days '79 is through team support. The teams representing various organizations will compete in a number of different scoring events. The Timber Maid representing the team that accumulates the most points over all will have the honor of becoming "Ms. Timber Days '79".

To root for your team in a helpful way there is a 50-50 raffle going on with 50 per cent of the proceeds going for Timber Days expenses and the other 50 for raffle winners.

Events start off with the introduction dance on May 12 at the Legion Hall. Tickets for this event are all sold out, so unless you can talk someone out of a ticket, you are out of luck. That week starting Monday, May 14 is badminton and the rest of the week there will be other events to appear in next week's column.

This is a fun event and the reward for participating teams, beside Timber Maid, is the enjoyment derived from the competition.

KINSMENS SOAP BOX DERBY

The Kinsmen sponsoring the Soap Box Derby on Timber Days are interested in competitors. If you plan on entering or would like more information, phone Doug Kammerle at 885-2700.

WORKING WOMEN MEET

April 25 a meeting was held to guage the interest among local business women in forming a branch of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Jean Ferrie, a member of the Vancouver Club, felt there was enough interest to warrant calling a meeting.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Bev Hoy, a ten-year member of the Vancouver Club and vice-president of the provincial BPWC. She is a practicing lawyer in Vancouver and brought greetings from provincial president Gertrude Domaka of Kamloops.

The speaker outlined the different aspects of the club in a very interesting and comprehensive talk. The club's scope of interest is national, provincial and it has a close liaison with the United Nations. They are affiliated with 43 countries and particularly our sister country U.S.A. with their yearly "Hands Across the Border Ceremony" and International Friendship Dinner.

They encourage and assist women in upgrading their knowledge about bursaries, loans and education for personal development. It's a very diplomatic group in dealing with government or business.

There is a charter for this group on the Sunshine Coast and with 20 persons showing an indication they wish to join, this could easily be reinstated. Our area is fortunate in having several retired BPWC members living here. Helen Talbot and Adele deLange, both members of the Vancouver Club, were present at the meeting and there are still others — Mary Walker of the New Westminster Club, Lil Fraser of the North Shore Club, to mention a few. Contact Jean Ferrie at 885-5017 for information or to join as they feel they have enough interested to form a club.

FRIENDSHIP TEA

The Auxiliaries to St. Mary's Hospital held a very successfully Friendship Tea April 19, hosted by the Gibsons Auxiliary.

The Times carried a good picture of the two special guests, but unfortunately the wrong caption was shown. The lady on the left, if you still have your last paper, is Mrs. Verna Temoin of Delta Auxiliary and the Lower Mainland representative. The one on the right is president of the BCHAA Peggy MacPherson, who is a member from Invemere and was the speaker for the day, explaining what will be going on at the Convention in May at the Vancouver Hotel.

There were 100 Auxilians in attendance.

TRAVELLERS HOME

Taking a holiday from the Sechelt Inn, Bill and Lena Grisenthwaite and daughter Leane have returned from a tour of California, where they saw Dr. and Mrs. Henry Fourcade, Lena's sister Myrna. Another sister, Julie Vierick and her husband, and daughter from Blaine, joined them.

"WHAT WE DON'T have in numbers, we make up for in enthusiasm and there's always room for one more member." The Sunshine Slimmers Chapter of Western Weight Controllers prove it for Davis Bay Elementary school students and participants at Wilson Creek's monthly coffee party with a routine that won first prize for entertainment and second prize for costume at the Western Weight Controllers conference two weeks ago.

DENTICARE.

The cost of dental care is a major concern in many families...and Social Credit is moving to meet that concern. In the recent budget, your Social Credit government announced its commitment to develop B.C.'s first provincially-operated Denticare program... with legislation to be introduced during the next session of the Legislature. The new comprehensive Denticare program will provide an important measure of protection for those British Columbians who are not covered by an existing dental plan. It's one more way Social Credit policies benefit individuals throughout B.C.

Annual Spring Bazaar

by Doris Edwardson 883-2308

P.H. Community Club will be holding their annual Spring Bazaar on Saturday, May 5 at 2 p.m. in the Community Hall. There will be dainty hand-made knitted baby outfits, bargains in children's wear, novelties and gifts for Mothers Day and the garden shop will feature many varieties of house plants and perennials for the garden. There will be a fish pond for the kiddies, white elephant booth, and the ever-popular home baking table. Raffles will include a hand hooked rug, two dolls, and also grocery hampers. Afternoon tea and coffee will be served.

ONE RUMMAGE GROUP HONOURS ANOTHER

Egmont, "Rummage Capital of the World" showed appreciation on April 25 to the "Bargain Barn" thrift shop in Madeira Park and to the group which runs it, Pender and District Clinic Auxiliary.

At a tea and plant sale in Egmont Community Hall, the Clinic group was treated to refreshments and a tour of Egmonts rummage and craft outlet.

Goods at the Bargain Barn, if not sold after four weeks, are taken off the shelves and usually sent to Egmont.

Clinic Auxiliary members and helpers who went up to the Egmont tea from Pender Harbour included Lou Farrell, Elspeth Logan, Irene Temple, Mary Milligan, Julia Reid and Maryann Dafoe. Mrs. Logan won the door prize and Mrs. Temple took home a raffled cake.

Many Egmont people also belong to the Clinic Auxiliary and of these, Vi Berntzen, Dolly Wallace, Marj Rankin, Lise Van Arsdell, Edna Howitt and Iris Griffith shared honours at the tea.

Barbara Dillen and Jackie Laloge convened the successful affair with many others helping as usual.

Afterwards, the Pender Harbour group toured Egmont's Rummage and Crafts outlet. They greatly admired its spacious quarters but were told the shop would soon be moving for the summer. Egmont Hall is to be used by a CBC Television crew.

Madeira Park's Bargain Barn is open on Thursdays and Saturdays from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.. Egmonts outlet is open Wednesdays, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Co-operation between thrift shops in the area extends to the Mini-Thrift at Middlepoint, the Pender Harbour Missionary Ladies, and Sechelt Indian Band. As one lady observed, "It may be squabbles that get the headlines, but there are a lot of quiet co-operation around."

ROYAL CANADIAN LEGION BRANCH 112

Art Bishop, Jim Morris and Les Fowler played to a packed house at the R.C. Legion Branch 112 Saturday evening, April 28. They sang many old favourites and played lively polkas, waltzes etc.

The Legion Dart Club will be holding their Ladies and Men's singles at 2 p.m. Saturday, May 5 at the Legion.

The Port Moody Dart Club will be at the Legion May 12 to challenge our local Dart Club in the afternoon, everyone welcome.

On April 26 the Legion Dart Club held their annual dinner in the Legion hall. Trophy Awards for High Team of 60 points went to Harold Clay and Sonny Scoular. Perfect scores of 180 were dart players, Burdett Thomas and John Hammond. Joyce Clay received trophy for High Ladies 171. Special thanks went to Charlie Hauka, Shirley Anderson, Taylor's Store and R.C. Legion Branch 112.

The popular meat draw will be held at 2:30 p.m. May 5 at the Legion.

CARLINGS CRUSADER CLUB FISHING DERBY

Pender Harbour was invaded by Carlings sport Fishermen, from Vancouver, B.C. They came here for their Annual PH Fishing Derby. Trophy's went to Tony Ricci 1st, 6lb 10 oz salmon; Tony Divita 2nd, 6lb 6 oz; Bob Keuls 3rd, 5lb 2 oz. K.S. Willis won the Hidden Weight prize with a salmon 6lb 4 oz.

Guest Winner of a Floater Jacket was Dick Flatekvel.

Sixty people attended the Derby Dinner at the R.C. Legion Br. 112 Hall where presentations were made. Helen Robertson did the catering. Activities chairman, Harold Tkatch of Carlings Breweries did all the arrangements.

BANANAS FORGIVEN

The Redskins defeated our PH Top Bananas on Saturday, April 28 at the PH Secondary School grounds. Actually they can afford to be peeled once in a while as they have been playing well all year, playing against mainland teams — 1st, 2nd and 3rd divisions. The top Bananas are really only a Bush League, they have never had the training of Lower Mainland Teams, and although not perfect, they have talent, lots of spirit and they put all heart into every game. They have placed second in year round standings of soccer, and in the last three years they have made a super showing. There is a Tournament on the 12 and 13 of May and dance May 12 at PH Community Hall. Music by Artic Madness, one of Vancouver's 10 top bands. Time - 9 p.m Tickets $10 per couple, $5 single.

Note — "Even though IGA has bananas for sale 3 for $1 we wouldn't sell ours for a million".

MAY DAY

May Day plans and preparations are being made at school and the election of the May Queen and her Attendants has been held. May Queen for 1979 is Michelle Murray and her Attendants are Michelle Fulton, Carrie Hillhouse, Shelly Brown, Lisa Higgins, Paula Metcalf, Sandra Phillips and Debbie Donley. Congratulations to all the girls on their election. Present May Queen is Lee-Ann Reid. The Flower Girls have also been selected and they are: Dianne Lee, Sharon Lee, Mona Gibson, Emily Hayden, Sandra Crosby, Allison Crosby and Sonya Jeffries. The May Day Committee and their Director, Mrs. Maureen Lee, are hard at work in the community so please give them your support.

TID-BITS

Eleanor and Doug Orr, Francis Peninsula, will be celebrating their 37th wedding anniversary on May 8th.

Jo and Ray Kraft were in the harbour last week.

Jill and Frank Postlewaite of Gibsons, former Pender residents came here last week to see all their friends in Madeira.

Fire Dept. was called out to a bush fire on Warnock Road last Sunday.

New village clerk sought

A side trip was slated for a few members of Sechelt council who were visiting the ministry of municipal affairs Monday in Victoria.

Jennifer Burgis of W & K Smith and Associates, Victoria, told The Times Thursday that council could be interviewing candidates for the village clerk's position and that the consulting firm has "some people under consideration who could fill the job immediately."

If none of the short list are suitable for the job, either Burgis or Ken Smith will take over temporarily May 7 from acting clerk Ron Gibb who advised council April 18 he would not be available on a full-time basis after April 30.

Mayor Nelson said one person on the short list of four would be interviewed. Interviewing the candidate is only one part of the business in Victoria, he said.

The trip was planned to discuss the community plan "which they (the ministry) are having some trouble accepting," and the cost-sharing bylaw for the development of Teredo Street.

"The questions are coming from people who were here only a short while ago," Nelson said.

"It makes you wonder just how much they write down or take in."

Port Mellon hosp aux

The regular monthly meeting for April was held at the home of Betty McCallum. There were 12 members present.

President Doreen Dockar opened the meeting. Reports were heard from the various committees. It has been decided to send a representative to the BCAHA annual convention to be held this year at the Hotel Vancouver from May 30 to June 1.

Margaret Barton, convenor of the Port Mellon Auxiliary Bridge Merry-go-round announces the Bridge wind-up will be held at the Sunshine Coast Golf and Country Club on the evening of May 15 at 8 p.m.

Our next meeting will be held at the home of Bev McKie, Langdale, on May 9 at 1:30 p.m. New members will be most welcome, for further information call Mrs. McKie at 886-2829 or any auxiliary member.

Who does a better job for British Columbians? Four vital signs of economic activity are displayed here. ☐ You compare. The Socreds themselves admit failure. In the Economic Development Ministry's 1978 Review and Outlook, they concede that unemployment will increase even further this year. ☐ They have turned to massive tax and rate increases to compensate for their economic errors. They raised the tax burden on your family substantially. ☐ And they have doubled ferry rates, upped hospital and ambulance charges, and increased auto insurance rates. ☐ A promise of better things is one thing. Delivering what you promise is another. The NDP has proven that its economic program works. ☐ You judge.

Chased motorcyclist fined after hitting police car

A motorcyclist paid the price for banging into a police car and then eluding RCMP recently when he appeared before Judge J.S.P. Johnson last week.

David Earl Farewell "is not the kind of person who should be allowed on the road," the Judge said in Sechelt Provincial Court.

To keep him off the road, Judge Johnson suspended his licence for one year, fined him $250 and ordered him to report to the probation officer as a condition of one year's probation.

Farewell was charged with failing to stop and leave his name and address after he was involved in an accident on his motorcycle with a police car April 19.

Farewall rode his bike up to the gravel pit near Sechelt in an attempt to avoid police. An RCMP officer tried to block Farewell's exit from the pit when Farewell, in another attempt to get away, struck the driver's door of the patrol car.

From there, on a chase through Sechelt, Farewell failed to stop at the four-way stop at Highway 101 and Wharf Ave., after which police lost track of him.

In another case, Sandra Kim Roberge, 18, of Port Coquitlam "acted very foolishly," after police "gave her a break," Judge Johnson said.

Roberge pleaded guilty to impaired driving and driving while disqualified. Roberge was involved in an accident Feb. 11 about one hour and 20 minutes after her licence had been temporarily suspended.

Her counsel, Robert Reid said though Roberge surrendered her driver's licence, she did not realize she could not drive the car to where she was staying.

Because Roberge is a student at Douglas College, Judge Johnson fined her $50 on each charge and increased the licence suspension to six months.

Laurence Hall pleaded guilty to driving while over .08 and was fined $800 and given six months probation to attend the impaired drivers' course.

John Nickerson pleaded guilty to driving while impaired and was fined $500 and given six months probation to attend the impaired drivers' course.

Rodger Allan Cox pleaded guilty to driving while over .08 and was fined $500.

Jerry Kenneth MacFarlane, 19, received a conditional discharge with one year probation after he pleaded guilty to possession of liquor of a value not exceeding $200.

Lawyer Robert Reid said MacFarlane's only involvement with the March 19 Gibsons Legion break-in was the movement of the liquor from one place to another.

"He did not break in or have anything to do with it," Reid said.

The Peninsula Times wishes to correct a reference to Rodger Allan Cox as being charged with theft from Mr. Mike's Restaurant. He was charged with possession of stolen property in connection with the restaurant incident.

the store watching the TV monitors and unaware there was a fire, Beaudin said.

Then, "there was panic all of a sudden." One person, Radio Shack technician Peter Harwood, looked for the extinguisher.

Before he reached it, another NDP campaign worker Bob Young rushed into the store and attempted to smother the flames with a rug.

Harwood took over with the fire extinguisher while Beaudin ran across the street, shouting at someone to call the fire department, to find another.

Beaudin couldn't find another extinquisher, but on his return, he said another business merchant arrived with one.

Afterwards, Harwood said he thought it was the fire department which arrived with the second extinguisher, but at the time, "you act, you don't ask names."

This was the case with the "man with the rug, (Young) he just disappeared," Harwood said, before he could tell him how much he appreciated the help.

The wastebasket, where the fire started, and the burning desk next to it were hauled out to the sidewalk where the fire was extinguished.

Beaudin said he later asked Young where he found the rug. "He just grabbed it and didn't remember where," he said.

Radio Shack owner Chuck Stephens said Saturday he assumes the fire started when "somebody threw some lit material into the wastebasket."

The desk and its contents, including $500 worth of stereo needles were destroyed. The flames leaped high enough to melt one of the radios hanging on a string about six feet above.

The Chargex machine, the bottom front of the cash register and a calculator adaptor were melted out of shape. The telephone was later replaced.

"Amazingly enough, it (the adaptor) still works," Stephens said.

Despite "cleaning and cleaning", the store still has an accumulation of soot, he said.

"The fire department was great. They put in a fan at the back door which sucked all the smoke right out the back."

But the "display" was a costly one — $1,000 for aboout five minutes of flame.

Police news

A house was ransacked, but nothing was stolen in a break-in at a residence on Franklin Rd. April 27, Gibsons RCMP reported last week.

Blasting caps were found in Hopkins Landing, April 26. Anyone finding blasting caps is asked to contact the Gibsons detachment.

Two persons were apprehended in connection with the theft of a Seiko watch on one of the ferries, April 26.

The theft of mail from a box on Highway 101 was reported April 25.

An orange Chevy van was reported stolen from Highway 101 in Roberts Creek, April 25. It was recovered later at the bottom of Leek Rd.

Thirty-five feet of water pipe valued at $350 was reported stolen from West Bay, Gambier Island April 24.

A new gold watch valued at $200 and a large quantity of cash was reported stolen from a locked motor vehicle in the bay area April 24.

Theft and wilful damage of several stop signs and corner posts in the Chaster Rd. area was reported April 23. Value is estimated at $300-$400.

An orange and blue tent was stolen near Port Mellon April 22.

Sechelt RCMP are asking for information leading to the recovery of a 17-foot K & C motorboat.

The boat was reported stolen from the Tyee wharf about the same time a stolen motor vehicle was recovered at the wharf, April 22.

The boat has a white hull, white canvas top and three orange stripes on the bow. The registration number is 13K64211. The boat is valued at approximately $7,000, including the Evinrude 135 hp. motor.

There are no suspects in the April 22 break-in at Pentangle.

Someone attempting to break into Warren McKibbin's Sechelt office via the rear door about 7:50 a.m. April 21 was scared away by someone still in the office.

A rock was thrown through the front door window of Nova Jewellers April 20 activating the alarm.

was good to us · it helps make up for 1975 · 1976 · 1977

Last year, MacMillan Bloedel made a good 10% return on capital employed—$100.9 million profit. There was strong demand for our products, and Canada's devalued dollar helped. In the woods, the mills, the offices, we kept a sharp eye on costs, worked harder, improved productivity, made some tough decisions. It all helped. We are a financially solid company with our roots in a financially sound province.

A 10% return may look pretty good. In fact, however, it's about average—what manufacturing firms in Canada have been making recently. In the years from '75 to '77, MacMillan Bloedel averaged only 2.8%.

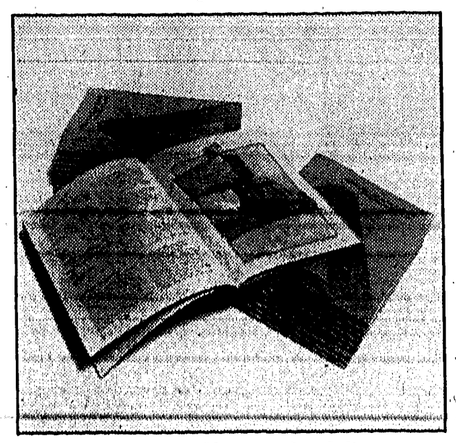
The financial community thinks our return should be nearer 14%. Surveys indicate that the public thinks we make around 18% profit, with some suggesting as high as 30%.

10% on investment in 1978 works out to be $100.9 million. $76.8 million of that has been ploughed back into the business—to buy new, more productive equipment, to rebuild mills to improve their production, reduce pollution, hasten reforestation, provide more secure jobs.

Healthy profit catches the eye of the financial community. If we need extra money for growth it becomes easier to borrow at reasonable interest. As you know, your banker is kinder when your credit is good.

Our improved profit in 1978 meant that, if you were a shareholder, you received a bigger dividend for the year. 24% of the profit was distributed among our 17,000 shareholders.

This kind of profit tells the world that MacMillan Bloedel is financially healthy. It is no wonder that outside companies have sought to take over this independent British Columbia enterprise.



This is MacMillan Bloedel's annual report. It explains how business was last year. It covers our operations, products and markets, gives financial figures for the past several years, discusses future plans. If you would like a copy, just write us at MB REPORTS, 1075 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, V6E 3R9.

Rural voters missed on list can vote by swearing oath

If you are a qualified voter but weren't enumerated for Canada's May 22 federal general election, you can still get on the voters' list for your polling division.

You can — if you act promptly.

After the door-to-door enumeration of voters is completed, a preliminary list of electors is printed, posted in a public place, and, in urban areas, copies sent to all households.

If you are an eligible, qualified elector, but were missed in enumeration, it's up to you to get your name on the revised, final list of voters.

You can do this by contacting the Returning Officer of your electoral district who will explain how you may get your name on the list during the revision of the preliminary voters' list. The revising process makes additions, deletions and corrections to the preliminary list compiled by the enumerators, and takes place Wednesday to Friday, May 2 to May 4.

If you are absent during both enumeration and the revising period, you can have your spouse or a blood relative make a sworn application to get your name on the revised list, but remember, you must contact your Returning Officer before the period of revision indicated above.

It is important to get your name on the list. In urban areas, your name must be on the voters' list to be eligible to vote.

In a rural area, revision is done by the enumerator in each polling division.

If you live in a rural area, but your name is on neither the preliminary nor revised list of voters, you may still vote on election day if you are qualified. At your polling station, you may take an oath that you are entitled to vote and be vouched for by another elector whose name is on the official list of electors where your name normally should have appeared. But this rule doesn't apply to voters in urban polling divisions.

To be an eligible elector in this election, you must be at least 18 years old on or before election day, a Canadian citizen, and be a resident in your district or riding on the first day of enumeration.

Federal election

Voting—new rules make it easier

New voting rules will make it easier for all qualified electors to cast ballots in the 31st federal election on May 22.

Changes in the rules covering proxy voting and advance polling are among those designed to make voting possible and more practical for many of Canada's estimated 14.9 million eligible electors in this election.

"The ill, handicapped and aged, certain students and workers away from home, and voters unable to vote because of temporary absence are among those who will benefit," says Jean-Marie Hamel, Canada's Chief Electoral Officer.

The changes were made in amendments to the Canada Elections Act and were passed by Parliament in December, 1977.

Some of the important changes are:

1. At least one advance poll with "level access" for the handicapped must be set us in each urban area of an electoral district. An elector entitled to vote at an advance poll may, if the poll doesn't have level assess, obtain a transfer certificate from his or her Returning Officer and vote at another poll that does offer level access. A notice of an advance poll must state if level access is available and explain to voters that transfer certificates may be obtained.

2. Voting at advance polls — for those unable to vote on election day — formerly was possible on two days only. Under the new provisions, advance polling will be spread over three days — between noon and 8 p.m. on Saturday, May 12, Monday, May 14 and Tuesday, May 15. To vote at an advance poll, you have only to sign your name — not take an affidavit as in the past.

3. In a general election, voters who are unable to vote on election day or at the advance polls, may now vote in the office of the Returning Officer. Such voting will be done noon to 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on any day beginning Monday, May 7 and ending on May 18, excluding Sundays and any advance polling day.

4. Proxy voting is extended to members of air crews, forestry crews and topographical survey crews, and to trappers. Such electors, along with fishermen, mariners, prospectors, who are ill or phyiscally disabled, and students away from home during academic terms, may now arrange to vote by proxy.

In proxy voting, an elector who cannot cast a ballot in person on election day or at any other of specified times, may appoint another elector to vote in his or her place.

If you wish to vote by proxy, then either you or your proxy must apply in person to the Returning Officer for a proxy certificate.

If you are applying for proxy voting because of illness or physical incapacity, you must present a certificate from a legally qualified medical practitioner. If you are a student, absent from your polling division during an academic term, you can apply to vote by proxy but must have a statement from the registrar of your college or school.

5. A qualified elector whose name is not on the preliminary list of voters may now more easily get on the revised list. This can be done by contacting the Returning Officer prior to May 4.

6. Special provisions for temporary workers away from home have been extended to include students who are gainfully employed between their academic terms. In the past, such students couldn't vote if they were away from their ordinary places of residence. Now, they can vote in the electoral district where they are working if they have arrived in the electoral district by May 1st and take action to have their names placed on the voters list during the period of revision May 2 to May 4.

Several other rule changes will apply to this election as a result of amendments to the law.

Electors will no longer be required to show their occupation on election documents.

Ordinary polls on election day will be open 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., local time. Previously, they opened at 8 a.m. and closed at 7 p.m., standard time. All references to time in the new law mean "local times."

An elector whose right to vote is challenged at a poll — because his or her identity is questioned — may now produce documents to prove identity. An oath is no longer automatically required.

Employers and employees, under new rules, may jointly agree to waive the provision giving employees four consecutive hours time off with pay to vote. Another rule change brings hourly-paid workers under the time-off-work provisions. Still another broadens the time-off provision to include all transportation companies, not just railways and their employees, as was the case in previous elections.

ADVANCE POLL (RURAL)

May 12, 14, 15 from 12 noon until 8 p.m.

For Sechelt Peninsula at Benners Furniture Store (formerly Sporting Goods Dept.) Highway 101, Sechelt.

For Gibsons area at United Church Hall, Lower Gibsons in the Bay area.

Both Polls have level access for handicapped.

Proxy voting

The proxy voting rules have been broadened to included more electors in Canada's 31st federal election on May 22.

Proxy voting allows another qualified elector to cast your ballot for you if you will be absent and unable to vote on ordinary polling day, or at an advance poll or in the office of the Returning Officer for your district.

To vote by proxy, you must take steps to appoint another elector, called a proxy voter, to vote in your place.

You will qualify for this kind of voting if you fall in any of these three categories:

1. a fisherman, mariner, prospector, trapper, member of an air crew, forestry crew of topographical survey crew;

2. you have a medical doctor's certificate indicating you are ill or physically disabled;

3. you are a full-time student, away from home during an academic term, and have a statement from the registrar of your educational institution in Canada.

Proxy voting has been permitted in previous general elections. But amendments to election law recently have extended to air, forestry and topographical survey crews, and to trappers, the proxy voting privilege.

Both your name and that of your proxy voter must be on the same voters' list.

Either you or your proxy voter must present an official application for a proxy certificate to the Returning Officer of your district, as soon as possible after the voters' list is posted — but not later than Friday, May 18th. An application form is available from the Returning Officer.

If you are applying to vote by proxy because of illness or because you are physically incapacitated, you must have a certificate from a legally qualified medical doctor on the doctor's letterhead paper (containing the doctor's address and phone number), stating that the doctor personally has seen you.

An elector may act as proxy for one other elector — but the names of both must be on the same list of electors in the same polling division. The proxy voter can cast his own vote on election day as he casts the proxy vote.

Those who expect to be absent from home on election day normally will vote if possible at an advance poll or at the office of the Returning Officer.

Advance polls are open 12 noon to 8 p.m. on Saturday, May 12, Monday, May 14, and Tuesday, May 15. Persons of advanced age, who are disabled or ill, or have reason to believe they will be unable to vote on election day are the main categories that qualify for advanced voting, provided their names are on the voters' list.

If you will be unable to vote in an advance poll or on normal election day, you may vote in the office of your district's Returning Officer — from 12 noon to 6 p.m., and from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. — on any day starting Monday, May 7 and ending May 18, except Sundays and advance polling days.

Women's Aglow

By IRENE BUSHFIELD

The Women's Aglo Fellowship met April 17 in Harmony Hall for a delicious lunch of soup and sandwiches and again enjoyed a time of singing, rejoicing and sharing with old and new friends.

Our guest speaker this day was Joan James from Vancouver, who delighted us all with her message on certain crisis areas in our lives, vividly illustrating the essence of the true gospel of Jesus Christ, and the reality of being "born again" into the Kingdom of God. Joan was a registered nurse for many years, along with ten years of counselling in the field of occupational health. Her talents as a speaker have taken her to places as far off as Japan, Taiwan, India and Hong Kong and we were enthralled as she related how God is moving in these areas. Altogether her visit was an experience many of us will long remember.

One of the highlights of this fellowship is the annual Retreat, organized by the area board for the Lower Mainland. As in previous years it will be held at Trinity Western College in the beautiful rural setting of Langley. However, because of the amazing growth of Women's Aglow, there will be two weekend periods this year instead of one. The dates are June 1 to 3 and June 8 to 10. Those wishing further information may phone 886-9567 for brochures.

The Gibsons chapter of Women's Aglow recently received their chapter and at our next meeting members of our area board will be in attendance giving us an opportunity to learn more about the aims and purposes of the Fellowship which now has over a thousand chapters world-wide, with more being added daily. A very warm invitation is extended to ladies of all ages to attend this luncheon meeting which starts at 11:30 a.m. on May 15 in Harmony Hall, Gibsons. A babysitting service is available and anyone needing further information or transport may phone 886-7426 or 885-3356. Remember always that God has NEVER stopped caring for you.

Cadets' exercise becomes real rescue

On the weekend of April 13 to 15 what was meant to be an Army Cadets exercise in search and rescue turned out to be a "real thing" when an officer of the Corps rescued a drowning couple in Sakinaw Lake.

Cadet Officer Terry Hutchings rescued Ray Bernier and Emily Henderson after their boat in which they were returning from the other side of the lake overturned. Terry, upon hearing the cry for help, jumped in his small boat and was in time to pull the distressed couple out of the water.

The occasion was the search and rescue exercise in which over 130 Cadets and Officers took part and was hosted by our local Corps No. 2963. The following Army Cadets contingents took part: 34 from Corps 2290, Beatty St., Vancouver, Royal Canadian Army Cadets League; 18 from Port Moody Corps; 22 from Sechelt Corps, and servicing were 24 members of the Royal Canadian Engineers. All were under the command of Ltd. Col. Andy Conradi.

The main object of the exercise was map reading and field craft. The Cadets had an enjoyable time and received a great deal of knowledge on the subject in spite of inclement weather.

On June 9 our Corps 2963 will be taking a boat trip to Cloholm Falls where they will be having a very instructive exercise plus ample time for fun and recreation arranged by Training Officer Lt. Bob Sommerfield.

Most of the Cadets will be attending Summer Camp at Vernon, B.C. this July on various courses, and most of the instructors will be attending an Officer's Training Course at Vernon or Edmonton, Alberta.

The Cadets are continuing with range practice under the direction of Mr. Jerry Netzlaw Sr., every first and third Saturday at the Sechelt Rod and Gun Club.

The Corps parades every Monday evening, at 7 p.m. at Sechelt Elementary School, and all girls and boys between the ages of 13 and 19 are invited to join them.

Administrative and Public Relations Officer.

'Old friends' gather Bob Wilson retires

By MARION ALSAGER

The gathering of old friends and "buddies" of Bob Wilson accumulated at the Firehall on Saturday, April 28 until it was proven the "esprit de corps" of the firemen's buddy system still exists. When people such as Wilf Gray, Dick Fitchett, John Bunyan, Rocky Grey, John Wilson, Norm McKay gathered to honour him, all who were original members some 30 years ago, it was clear the spirit was still there.

As well, a measure of respect was also given by retired members Cliff Connor, Bruce Campbell, Bill Malyea, Fred Holland, Harry Smith, John Smith, Dan Bergnach, Bill Scott, Denny Carroll, Wally Venechuck and Glen Stubbs. Many were ex-chiefs, such as Dick Ranniger, Bill Scott, Norm MacKay, John Bunyan, Dick Fitchett and Wilf Grey with whom Bob worked as fireman, local assistant Fire Marshall, Fire Dept. officer and as a Fire Chief himself.

Over 50 firemen, past and present, paid their respects on his retirement from the Fire Department reminiscing past experiences from building fire halls to fire fighting under adverse conditions and above all Bob's personal involvement in assisting all members in training, direction and investigation. A special presentation was given in relation to his Fire Marshall duties as well as special commendation on behalf of the Village of Gibsons by Alderman Dick Fitchett.

The many hours of Community contribution as a "Volunteer" will be quietly shrugged off by Bob as his duty to the community, nevertheless, his decisions and friendships will live on an his presence will be sorely missed as a "current member."

"THANK YOU" BOB WILSON!

— From your Fire-Fighting Friends and The Community.

Naden Band at NL inspection

Sunshine Coast branch of the Navy League of Canada cordially invites parents, friends and public at large to attend its annual inspection at Gibsons Winter Club on Thursday, 3rd May at 7:30 p.m.

A large turnout is expected as the internationally-known Canadian Forces Naden Band will appear.

Inspecting Officer will be Capt. (N) Stewart Alsgard.

Economic study meeting

Transportation the key

By HELEN PARKER

Despite frequent attempts by meeting chairman John Jorgens to cover new ground, transportation and all subjects relating, dominated the Sunshine Coast Economic Adjustment Committee meeting April 23.

Little time was spent on what Jorgens called one of the "key" parts of the study, future primary and secondary industry.

As regional board director Charles Lee said, with "approximately 38.2 per cent" or the tax base supported by Port Mellon, "in the event Port Melon should be phased out we would be in great difficulty."

Unfortunately, any study of economic trends on the Sunshine Coast will always end with a recommendation that transportation problems be solved to facilitate economic development. And Sunshine Coast residents, if they have not already, will shrug and say, "I could have told you that for nothing."

Again, the committee was advised the only link to the mainland after dark was by ferry, and then only for a short while. It was suggested funds should be applied for to upgrade the airport to provide more than daylight access.

That Port Mellon to Squamish highway link, talked about in the 1950s, was brought up again, and, according to Vic Walters, now is a possibility.

There has been talk for several years the mill at Woodfibre may expand and a condition of expansion was an improved transportation link, Walters said.

Walters said the expansion plans are "definite" and called for the committee's support of the land route.

But in discussing other briefs presented to the committee, transportation more than anything turned out to be the root of the problem.

Mrs. Alice Murray told the committee there was no place on the Sunshine Coast a vacationer could park and sight-see.

"If we're trying to encourage tourism, we're defeating ourselves right there," she said.

Walters said there was "no reason why the community should not have timber licences," nor why the coast's wood resources should not be processed here.

Jorgens mentioned the problem of transporting anything efficiently and quickly to a market.

Hydrofoils and Hovercrafts were discussed at length and dismissed with legitimate reasons.

Arthur McPhee, Provincial Emergency Program coordinator, said there was a lack of a communication outlet to warn persons in the event of an emergency (earthquakes in particular), and suppose there was a need for evacuation . . .

So each new subject was eventually brought back to the transportation level. The two consultants at the meeting, Barry Hall and Pieter Rutgers of Strong, Hall and Associates should have no problem researching the transportation end of the study.

The dissatisfaction was evident.

Deserted Bay report

Clarence Joe, Don Douglas visit

This week we had a very special visitor, Mr. Clarence Joe. Mr. Joe arrived with his private boat the Hunachin Princess on Monday. The special guests didn't end there though, Don Douglas, chairman of the School Board arrived Tuesday by plane.

On Tuesday afternoon all of us took a trip up to Hunachin, where Mr. Joe told us stories of the village. He also told some of us about a certain leaf called Lily-of-the-Valley that is used for healing wounds.

Mr. Joe told us many other different stories and legends. He told about tribal wars and fueds, and how the different places up here got their Indian names.

Mr. Joe was raised at Tsoh-Nye and he told us that Tsoh-Nye was the largest village in the reserve; he said that he used to spear salmon at Deserted River and that the hunters of the village used to climb the mountain to meet with the hunters of Squamish.

Mr. Joe also gave us some names for our buildings. The girls' dorm is Tsoh-Nye Princess and the boys' dorm is My-ook meaning grizzly bear. The cookhouse is called Raven and the classroom Big Chief's Den.

Our second project has just been completed. Some of the subjects are Indian weapons, owls, dogfish and trees.

The weather was great this week and some of us decided to go water skiing. We didn't have any water skis so we used a door. The rest of us just sat on the beach and watched.

We thank Clarence Joe for coming up to see us. I think we have learned a lot from his presence.

Halfmoon Bay

Combined one-room school idea delayed

School District No. 46 board of trustees responded to the feelings of Halfmoon Bay parents and delayed enrolling kindergarten with grades one to three in the one room school until 1980.

The board agreed with District Superintendent John Denley's alternative suggestion to maintain the regulation (to enroll K to 3 at Halfmoon Bay) but delay it one year to allow parents to get used to the idea and to get to know the new teacher.

Denley told the parents the board still feels it is "educationally-sound to have multigrade teaching," and he feels the parents' questions of doubt can be answered in one year.

It is anticipated kindergarten enrolment at Halfmoon Bay will increase enough in 1980 to warrant a second classroom.

If not, K to three will be enrolled in one classroom next year.

The parents felt combining kindergarten with grades one to three would be a "severe detriment" to the children's education.

The new teacher will be facing a new class, new community and a new reading program, they said. The parents asked the board to consider the teacher's workload and the number of levels at which the teacher will have to communicate — not only in the classroom, but in the community.

Solar Fair starts today

British Columbia's first-ever Solar Fair will be held at Robson Square in downtown Vancouver today through May 6 with more than 9,000 square feet of solar space and hot water heating equipment on display.

Officially opening the exhibit at noon on May 2 will be Charles W. Nash, B.C. Hydro vice-president for corporate affairs.

The Fair, sponsored by Hydro, will take place in the Media Centre daily from noon to 9 p.m.

Sixteen distributors and manufacturers will be showing the most up-to-date solar equipment for residential use. Included will be complete solar energy systems, collectors, controls, storage tanks and associated hardware.

Available to answer questions on the use of solar energy in homes will be Hydro and trade specialists. At the end of the Fair, draws will be made for door prizes all of which will be energy conservation-related, such as a solar cooker, thermal patio doors and thermal grates for fireplaces.

Something to come home from.

A job.

The secure feeling that you're meeting your responsiblities. Heating bills, food, warm clothes, shoes for school. All paid for. ☐ But too many British Columbians have nothing to come home from. ☐ They are unemployed. ☐ In quiet despair. With personal pride stripped away. Allan J. Edwards at 'Creek Saturday

A rare treat is in store for any Sunshine Coasters interested in painting. Allan W. Edwards of the Canadian Federation of Artists will give a demonstration of watercolour on Saturday, May 5 at the Roberts Creek Community Hall. At the same time a one man show of his paintings will be on at the Federation Gallery at 367 Water St. in Vancouver, some works inspired by his recent tour of Spain.

Allan Edwards was born in Alberta, raised in Victoria, studied in Toronto, and had his first one man show at the age of seventeen. This launched him on a career of portrait and landscape painting. He was then offered a position as head of the faculty of the Meinzinger Foundation in Detroit,

He continued to exhibit in galleries and shows in the East and in Europe, but the West Coast drew him back after serving in the war, when he settled in San Francisco. In 1962 he moved back to Victoria, where he opened a design studio, gallery and art school. At present he maintains a residence and design studio in West Vancouver, and is president of the Federation of Canadian Artists, an organization whose aim is to promote the works of B.C. painters and graphic artists.

So if you're interested in listening to and watching a master painter at work, don't miss his demonstration at 1 p.m. on Saturday, May 5 at Roberts Creek.

It's sponsored by the Sunshine Coast Arts Council.

School mill rate

"Happy to be wrong"

School District No. 46 secretary-treasurer Roy Mills told the board of trustees last Thursday that the final determination of the district mill rate is "significantly" below his original estimate.

The mill rate has been set at 49.346 mills rather than above 50 mills as Mills had estimated.

"I'm always happy to be wrong in circumstances such as this," he said.

Educational leave that was not awarded could have reduced the budget by $14,000 and decreased the mill rate to 49.229, but the board voted to transfer this sum to the equipment repair section.

Mills cited the following reasons for the lower rate:

— The basic levy was set at 41 mills by the provincial government, down from the 41.68 estimate in December.

— Because assessed values have decreased, one mill raises $119.181, up 13 per cent from $105,193.

— The local $7,000 contribution to the ministry toward the district superintendants of schools' salaries is no longer required.

— A credit of $12,883 was received for adjustments to assessment rolls last year after the mill rate was struck.

— A credit of $14,256 prorata sharing for enrolment and special approval increases from September to December 1978.

The board passed Tax Rate Bylaw No. 12 to adopt the annual budget and levy the mill rate for 1979 school taxes.

Parking hassle with developers

Sechelt council's continuing hassle with developers over parking requirements may abate somewhat by next year if a $6,000 grant is approved by the planning services branch of the ministry of municipal affairs.

The Sechelt village council planning committee is applying for the grant to help fund a $9,000 study of lane and downtown parking requirements and a study of possible revision to zoning and subdivision bylaws.

The remaining $3,000 is set aside in the village's 1979 provisional budget for planning purposes. The lane requirement study and the revision study would be completed by October, 1979 and the parking study by December 1979.

Village planner Doug Roy said the study will "rationalize requirements for parking."

Knowing how much parking is needed, council can better estimate requirements for each future development.

Shared parking, where parking used only in the day can be used by others at night, will be studied. If developers can reach agreements with each other, the study may show in these cases parking requirements could be modified downward, Roy said.

The size of parking spaces will also be examined. Some developers feel the current requirement of approximately 10 feet by 20 feet per space is too large as there is a trend toward smaller cars.

A study will determine also whether current zoning and subdivision bylaws will need revising to conform with the community plan.

The village of Sechelt recently received its 1978 planning grant of $5,900, Roy said.

Soccer Cup to Redskins

Sechelt Redskins edged by the Pender Harbour Bananas 2-1 Saturday to take the soccer championship on a beautiful day at the Pender High School field before a good crowd of enthusiastic supporters.

First goal of the game was an own goal by one of Bananas defencemen and the winning goal was kicked in by 16-year-old Redskin Kevin August on a fine play. Pender came back with a goal by Peter Kenny late in the game but it was too little too late as the champions hung on for the victory.

In the preliminary game, Wakefield Stompers peaked one week too late as they completely overpowered the slumping Golden City Chiefs 6-1.

After leading 2-1 at the half, on goals by Rorry Walker and Al Nickerson, the Stompers pumped in four unanswered goals in the second half.

Second half scorers were Al Nickerson, Stuart Craigem, Kelly Bodnarek and Tom Pick. Ken Paul scored for the Chiefs.

At trophy time it was Redskins for the cup, Bananas runners-up, and Golden City Chiefs for league play with Wakefield United as Most Sportsmanlike Team.

Most Valuable Player went to Redskin's Ricky August and Most Goals to Wakefield Stompers' Al Nickerson with 32 goals in 20 games for a new league record.

Stompers' John Kruse was Best Goalkeeper with teammate John Nickerson voted Best Defenceman.

Most improved Player award went to Pender Harbour's Ray Moscrip and Stomper Jack Barnsley got the Hard Luck 78-79 award after breaking a leg in January that kept him out for the season.

Appreciation for the wheel, or two, or four

By Dennis Gray

When was the last time you walked any distance? Climbed a steep hill? Perhaps carrying a heavy parcel. I don't mean for exercise or to pass the time, I mean walked a distance because that was the only means available to you. Walked because you had to get somewhere and you own personal fuel shortage had slowed the world to a walking speed. Suddenly you realize this road doesn't go anywhere, it just lies there, rigid and cold, you have to put one foot in front of the other and haul yourself. Maybe it was raining too. Makes you appreciate the wheel I'll tell you, and the most envious at times like this is a motorized wheel, or two, or four.

But walking gives one time to think, even if the thoughts are blasphemous, and it also gives one time to remember. I remember when we were young, a friend and I hitched across Alberta. I particularly remember the walking. We covered most of our miles that way. Even to-day I feel guilty passing up a hitch-hiker. I feel compelled to signal to him some feasible reason, "count 'em, there are eight of us in here now" — but I still feel guilty.

As a result of this I am forever stopping for hitch-hikers who are only going a few hundred feet. Sometimes I drive most of the way home and never get the car out of second gear. Or the kid who has been kicked off the school bus. You know why he is walking when he lights up a cigarette: the stench suggests it is made from pencil shavings and some unfortunate classmate's pony tail. Once he gets the car hazed up to his satisfaction, he checks out his surroundings to see what other discomfort he can inflict on me. These kids invariably want a ride as far as you are going and would likely sit there smoking all the way to Alaska if given the chance, in fact, it goes through my mind that they may forcibly insist that I extend my journey.

Then there are the girl hitch-hickers. Why do I feel so guilty picking up a girl hitch-hiker? Why do I look around to see if anyone is watching? I mean it is just as hard for a girl to walk, isn't it? Maybe even harder the way they grind and swing everything around.

When they get in the car they look at me as if to say "you dirty old man, what are you picking me up for ? I've got this big rock in my bag and if you look at me sideways I'll break your face". And there I am feeling apologetic for giving her a ride.

"How far you going? Earls Cove? I'd like to go all they way with you, but I'm just going to Sechelt". She begins to grope in her handbag for her rock and I realize I've put my foot in my mouth.

"Ah, nice weather isn't it" I say. By now she has the rock half out of her bag and is cowering against the door, still dripping wet from her stand in the rain. From her eyes I can see she's thinking "God, I've got in the car with a crazy man."

Cigarette butts are another problem. You see I'm a reformed smoker who has fallen off the cigarette wagon often enough that my wife doesn't trust me. She can tell if I even think about smoking and if there is a cigarette butt in the ashtray, it had better have lipstick on it.

So you see, sometimes driving a car can be more dangerous than riding a bike. At least on a bike I don't have to stop for hitch hikers.

Keep strokin.

Cougars rebound

Elphinstone's senior boys' rugby team rebounded from a 28-0 loss to Hillside with a pair of wins over Fraser Valley schools last week.

The Cougars shut out Pitt Meadows 12-0 on tries by Tim Enns, Mike Partridge and Jeff Mulcaster and trounced Queen Elizabeth of Surrey 35-9 as big Ivan Dixon broke loose for 23 points on three tries, four converts and a field goal. Larry Lineker, Bob Dixon and Denie Turrenne also scored tries for Elphinstone.

Both games were played at Elphinstone. The Cougars will travel to Pitt Meadows for a return match today.

Meanwhile, coach John Spence of the newly-formed girls' rugby team says Port Coquitlam, which beat Elphinstone 16-0 two weeks ago, may be in for a surprise when the teams play again tomorrow, at Port Coquitlam.

The novice Elphinstone team, which has several Grade 8's in the line-up along with senior players, has improved rapidly since the shutout loss and will be bolstered by a number of girls who had been involved in volleyball, Spence said. The Elphinstone girls will host Garibaldi on Tuesday, May 8. Garibaldi also held the Gibsons team scoreless in the first encounter.

Ladies golf

Sunshine Coast ties Capilano

Sunshine Coast Ladies Golf Club tied Capilano Golf Club in the first of four games for the Third Team Trophy at Sunshine Coast Golf and Country Club April 26.

The Third Team concept was organized by the CLGA for smaller golf courses on the Lower Mainland who cannot field first and second teams.

Eight team players are chosen in order of handicap and the 18-hole match competition is played. Two games are played at home with the remainder away. The Sunshine Coast ladies brought home the trophy in 1978, the first year it was presented.

Sunshine Coast tees off next against McCleery Golf Club at McCleery May 31.

In the irons-only competition April 24, Kay Budd and Jean Todd tied with net 70.

Kay came out on top when the tie was broken.

The nine-holers irons-only competition saw Isobel Crowley with net 36 edge Marian Alsager with net 37.

The first game of 10 Pin Rounds for the CLGA Pin was played April 17 with Jean Gray winning with net 70. Leila Comrie came second with net 75.

For nine-holes-only, Isobel Cowley was first with net 38 with Marian Alsager tying for second with net 43. The better first six holes were played by Marian, giving her second place.

Curling news

The last Curling season proved to be a successful one under the capable supervision of president Larry Paradon and his executive and also the careful planning of past president Lionel McQuaig.

The final windup will be the Trophy Dance to be held May 12 at the Arena, with a Mother's Day Theme — the Fathers will cook the Dinner! Happy hour from 7 to 8 and Dinner at 8. The Dance will feature music by the Music Man. Trophies will be presented to the winners of the 78-79 season. Tickets are available from Lee Davis at Davis' Curio and Specialty Shop, 1212 Cowrie Street, The price is $5 per person.

Hurry and pick them up and we'll see you all at the Dance.

Pioneer painter, writer, boatbuilder

"Uncle Harry" Roberts inspired by granny's dream of "Sunshine Belt"

The Sunsine Coast lost a pioneer, with the death April 4, of Louis Harry Roberts in St. Mary's Hospital, who during his life, left an impact on everyone he met.

He was in his 95th year and, as his friend Hubert Evans has remarked: "They broke the mold after Harry Roberts was made."

The name Roberts Creek was given to the area about 1892 for the Roberts family. Thomas William (Will) Roberts came to Vancouver about 1889 and pre-empted the quarter section of land on the east side of the creek. He then sent for his parents Thomas and Charlotte to join him in Canada and share in the development of a new homestead.

Harry came from Redditch, England, with his father Frank, his brother Tom and Tom's wife Nancy, his younger brother Bill, and sister Ida. They crossed Canada by CPR arriving in Vancouver on Harry's sixteenth birthday, June 29, 1900. They stayed over for the First of July celebration with his grandparents who had moved to the head of False Creek. The next day his father, Harry, Bill and Ida left in a dug-out Indian canoe to row up to Roberts Creek. This canoe was made especially for Harry's grandparents by the Sechelt Indians. They spent two nights enroute before landing on the beach of Roberts Creek. This commenced Harry's seventy-nine years of close association with life on the B.C. coast and the development of Roberts Creek in particular.

In 1905 Harry built his first log house near the east bank of the mouth of Roberts Creek for his bride Birdie Sissons of Sechelt. Over the next twenty-five years he had much to do with the settlement's development. First and with the help of his father, they constructed logging and shingle bolt cribbing as part of the Creek mouth's improvement.

In 1907 Harry built his first store, about the size of a garage with a big sign "STORE" on the south gable to attract passing boats. Supplies, mail and passengers came by the Union SS Comox which Harry met with a skiff and later a power boat "The Midget".

About 1910 he started a sawmill in the Creek mouth, supplying lumber for the many houses now being built in the Roberts Creek area, which was fast becoming home and summer home sites for Vancouver people. He supplied the lumber for the thirteen bridges built when the Lower Road was put through and also the lumber for the first Government Wharf in 1914. He shipped lumber by scow as far as Buccaneer Bay and Pender Harbour.

He built the "LHR", a combined work and pleasure boat which took him to Vancouver for supplies as well as on many holiday trips with Mrs. Roberts to Parksville, V.I., where relatives of his wife had located.

Harry has often told the story of his grandmother Roberts in 1901, taking him to a point where the wharf now stands, and pointing east along the shore saying: "One day I hope you will help get many little houses built along that sunny shore where little children can play in the sunshine. I dream of seeing a government wharf and steamers coming every day. I want you to have the place named the Sunshine Belt." Later, soon after the wharf was built, Harry did paint "Sunshine Belt" in big white letters on the wharf's bright red freight shed. This dream of his granny's has no doubt influenced many of Harry's activities around the Creek.

ROBERTS FAMILY in England about 1900 shows Harry, left to right, Tom and Alice at rear with father Frank, Ida, Bill and mother Charlotte before she died.

From as early as 1908 until the early twenties, Roberts Creek was a favorite summer camping area and Harry Roberts was a well known figure as he met the steamer at the Government float for passengers and freight in a small boat. When the float broke away during the winter storms and was not replaced, Harry used "The Midget" or often one of his skiffs to meet the steamer during the week, and for week-ends he used "The Midget" to push his lumber scow loaded with 50 to 75 passengers alongside the steamer. He was instrumental in getting the Government to build a wharf at the Creek mouth.

In summer a steamer called every day with extra boats for week-end campers. Sometimes as many as three hundred campers would be waiting for a steamer on the Roberts Creek dock of a Sunday night. After the wharf was built, Harry kept pace with the times by building a new larger store — his third store building — on the east side of the wharf. This added much comfort for passengers waiting for the steamer on wintery days as ample inside shelter was a service he provided.

Along with the influx of people, summer cottages were now much in demand, so Harry built and furnished several on his property to rent. At this time he was also building a new home for himself, a two storey building with an octagonal shaped conservatory attached. Later when a turret was added this home became known as "The Castle". Many unexpected visitors spent a night in The Castle waiting for the steamer to call the next day.

During this heyday of the development of the settlement Harry still found time to build a thirty-six foot yawl which he kept in the creek mouth. He eventually named the yawl Chack Chack which meant Bald Eagle in Indian dialect. He carved the head of an eagle in the bracket supporting the yawl's bowsprit, revealing the symbolic relationship of this unique craft to the freedom loving skipper of Chack Chack. Many local youngsters, visiting campers and the girls from the Kewpie Kamp have happy memories of trips aboard Chack Chack. Harry loved helping the young people and some of his happiest hours were spent with them. Many a young sailor or boat builder got their inspiration and skilful advice from "Uncle Harry" as he was known to all.

However, as more people and increased business in the community hampered Harry's freedom, he longed for more open spaces and new challenges, so the early spring of 1925 saw him with his niece Marjorie Roberts, daughter of Tom, leaving Roberts Creek to live aboard Chack Chack while he built a small house for a winter harbour on Merry Island. From this base they cruised the Gulf Islands and coastal waters until Marjorie's marriage in 1929, when he settled on Nelson Island to establish a new homestead.

His first cottage on Nelson Island was built in Chack Chack Cove which provided a mooring for Chack Chack and the second sail boat he had built, a schooner called "Leyo" after his two children. Later he built a larger and more comfortable house overlooking the open sea of Malaspina Strait and the great granite rocks of Cape Cockburn, a new home for his wife Cherry and their children Yolana, Lee and Zoe.

This homestead "Sun Ray" in the wilderness with its beautiful house made of large logs, granite rock, five split level floors of cement and unique sunray windows, and its bountiful garden and orchard, epitomized Harry's tremendous energy, creativity, imagination, skill, love of beauty and reverence of nature. For relaxation he turned to sketching and oil painting and several of his canvasses were later shown in the Vancouver Art Gallery.

His philosophy of life was greatly influenced by the natural laws his maternal granny had taught him as a small boy in England. Some seventy years later he wrote and published a booklet "Natural Laws". He also wrote and published the Trail of Chack Chack, the fascinating story of his first years on the coast.

In 1950 he started to build at Sun Ray his third sail boat Chack Chack III which unfortunately was never launched. It too had its bowsprit support of a large and more detailed carved eagle head.

After his wife Marjorie's death in 1968 he lived alone at Sun Ray on Nelson Island until three years ago when Mr. and Mrs. H.T. Frederickson of Hidden Basin took him to their home so that he could remain on Nelson Island in the wilderness beauty he cherished. Seaplane transportation connects them to the outside world. It is interesting to note that Harry in his nineties took to flying in and out of Hidden Basin in a small aircraft as jubiliantly as he took to the sea in his Chack Chacks — maybe he felt as free as an eagle.

Two years ago the Roberts Creek History Committee writing "Remembering Roberts Creek" had an unexpected surprise when Harry Roberts "flew in" to their meeting being held at the home of Charles and Betty Merrick. Their home is situated on part of the original piece of Harry's property next to the Castle at Roberts Creek. Harry, with his trim grey beard and wearing his tartan tam-o-shanter and carrying a crooked Irish walking stick, certainly looked the part of the Old Laird of Roberts Creek. The Committee had the honour of chatting with one of the pioneer Roberts they had been writing about, and of helping Harry celebrate his ninety-third birthday. They will long remember that day.

Harry, before his death, had been in St. Mary's Hospital, Sechelt for three months. Although his strength was gradually failing, his handshake was as firm and strong as ever. He always had wonderful hands that seemed able to perform anything thought up by his active mind. He also seemed able to adapt to an environment where he felt content. He often expressed his appreciation of the hospital staff's care for him and the interest they had taken in his long journey down life's road.

His great-nephew Paul Merrick to whom "Uncy" had been an inspiration and from whom Paul as a young boy, had learned to design and build his first skiff from lumber cut in Uncy's sawmill from a beachcombed cedar log at Sun Ray, expressed his gratitude for knowing Uncle Harry by designing, and with the help of his father, handcrafting a beautiful all wooden casket for their Uncle's last resting place. On the lid Paul carved an Eagle's head, a fitting tribute to Skipper Chack Chack's free spirit.

The funeral service for Mr. Roberts was held at the Devlin Funeral Home on April 12 to Sea View Cemetery, Roberts Creek, with the Rev. Ted Dinsley officiating. Many friends and relatives gathered together to pay their last respects to this beloved Pioneer.

Harry Roberts is survived by his sister Mrs. Ida Copeland in Victoria (now 92 years old); son Lee Roberts, daughters, Yolana Mortinsen and Zoe Lloyd, and their children; nieces and nephews and their children, one of whom remarked lovingly "It seems like the end of an era, we've known him all our lives."

—Charles J. Merrick.

Coast Cable asks $1 TV rate hike

Coast Cable Vision Ltd. has made application to the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission to increase the monthly cable television service rates presently in effect.

The cable Company's proposal would mean a $1 per month increase for subscribers between Langdale and West Sechelt. Halfmoon Bay subscribers would see a 50 cent per month increase if the application is approved.

The CRTC will be meeting in Vancouver on June 19, 1979 to consider this and many other such applications.

A Company representative stated that "the increases sought would help to compensate for the increases in operating costs that the cable system has incurred over the past three years.

"One of the more notable increases was the B.C. Telephone Company's pole rental charges for this area which took a 50 per cent jump on September 1, 1978."

The Company also intends to introduce regular Community programming, such as the Pioneers Series shown recently, within two years of a positive decision from the CRTC.

Should the CRTC approve the pending application, cablevision rates would be adjusted October 1, 1979.

WHICH WAY do we go? A lot of changes have taken place around St. Mary's Hospital lately and volunteers are needed to guide visitors to the right areas until things are organized enough to post direction signs.

Volunteer helpline

It's not what you give or receive but what you become

Volunteers actively serve in the community helping others. In a recent mazagine article on volunteering one woman stated that it wasn't so much what one gave or received while helping others but the important thing was what one became as a result of this involvement. It is truly exciting to see the growth in a person's self-image; this is such an important key to successful living.

This past week about 20 people participated in a workshop about power and conflict — two elements which constantly surround us. A positive focus was stressed in developing one's own awareness and sense of personal power — learning to control oneself, not other people becomes important.

Learning to handle conflicts more effectively is an important tool. Just focussing upon how we do react to conflict give us a new insight into our personal actions.

This workshop was the last in a series presented primarily by Harriett Dennisen, a volunteer from the Vancouver Volunteer Centre. Her easy manner and expertise was well received by the participants. The general reaction to the workshops was very positive. People felt an increased awareness about themselves and more positiveness in communicating and dealing with other people.

Volunteers continue to be needed in the community. Here are some opportunities to consider:

ST. MARY'S HOSTS AND HOSTESSES

Hosts and hostesses are needed to help visitors find their way around St. Mary's. With the expansion of the hospital many people are finding it difficult to reach their destinations. Volunteers are needed from 6:30 to 8:30 each evening from Monday thru Saturday and for two hour shifts throughout Sunday. Meeting the public and assisting then with directions should be an enjoyable opportunity for many people on the coast. Hopefully enough of you will respond so that many will share this task. The need is present NOW and we would like to begin the orientation program immediately. Why don't you involve yourself?

TEACHING ASSISTANTS

Volunteers are still needed to help in the schools working on a one to one basis with children. Cedar Grove has made a special appeal for assistance. Four volunteers are needed from Monday to Thursday for two hours in the afternoon. You really could make a difference to some young students. Volunteers are needed in other schools also. Please — could you make a two-month commitment to help?

ASSIST WITH PRE-NATAL CLASS

One or two volunteers are needed to assist the public health nurse with a pre-natal class to be held on Monday nights from May 22 to June 25 in Sechelt. The volunteer (male or female) would have a variety of involvements including looking after projecting films, assisting with breathing exercise, collecting dues, etc. This would be an enjoyable learning experience for a mature individual interested in following the materials included in pre-natal development.

ADULT DAY CARE

Help is really needed to assist at the Adult Day Care in Gibsons. You are needed to help prepare and serve meals, listen and talk to clients, play games such as bridge, bake snacks (this could be done at your house) or show slides. If you like older people and are comfortable with handicaps, you are really needed. Orientation and training will be given. Please call 885-3821 if you can help.

VISITORS

One or two volunteers are needed to spend two hours on a Monday or Wednesday morning visiting with a very elderly man in Wilson Creek. He loves to play crib, chat and to take short walks.

DRIVERS

Again we appeal for help with driving people to medical appointments, etc. If more of you would allow us to have your name on the 'on-call' list, the load could be shared by many people. You don't have to stay in the house waiting for a call — if you are near the phone and free when a call comes through, that's great. Otherwise, someone else will be called.

These are only a few of the volunteer opportunities available. If you have any time to help someone (even ½ hr. a week) please call the Community Services Volunteer Bureau at 885-3821.

When you think about it...
Under Bill Bennett's Socreds, the B.C. Labour Code — recognized as one of the best in North America — has been amended to give big business the edge. Other bills and cabinet orders have further eroded the position of workers. As the laws become more unfair, we're going to see a general deterioration of labour-management relations.
You're better off with the NDP.

The Garden Corner

"Flats in a bag" seed start

By Guy Symonds

This week we are going to pass along a couple of tips picked up from the Christian Science Monitor gardening expert and available by the kind offices of a colleague.

The article from which the first piece of information is drawn is headed "A better way to start seeds — flats in a bag" and though it could have been used possibly a little earlier in the season, the idea is still good for use at any time.

The writer starts out by detailing the price of leeks in the stores in winter time, adding that this is a vegetable of which he is particularly fond. He goes on to the economics of the home garden, concluding that his small vegetable plot is worth some $400 of additional income after taxes.

Leeks then are his first sowing of the new season and he starts them off in mid-January. The procedure is the filling of a flat to within one inch of the top with finely sifted compost or a starter mixture such as the potting soil one buys in garden stores. After firming this down with a flat piece of wood he puts the flat in water to let it soak the moisture up from the bottom. When it is thoroughly moist it is allowed to drain to get rid of the free water. The seed, and in this case he is referring to leeks, are set out one inch apart — a pair of tweezers are needed for this job when the seeds are small, with the rows also an inch apart. They are then covered with a light sprinkling of potting soil mixture and again pressed down firmly but gently. The flat is then placed in a plastic bag, and in this day when everything but your mother-in-law comes in a plastic bag this presents no problem, and kept in a moderately warm area, say 65 to 70 degrees F. The moisture in the flat condences on the plastic and falls on to the seed bed.

After the seed has germinated, and in the case of leeks this takes about 10 days, the flat is put in a sunny window if any — and alternatively under artificial light. Light is essential to the sturdy growth of young plants, particularly if the ambient atmosphere is warm.

The plastic cover, however, must not be allowed to continue to keep all the moisture confined to the plants as they now need air and good circulation.

So at this stage several holes about the size of a pencil are cut in the bag — and then the plants are let alone to grow and flourish. There will be enough "greenhouse effect" remaining to give them the moisture they need.

The next move takes the planting out to a cold frame to harden them off for a few days and then, says the writer of the article, they are planted out about three inches apart. The final move takes place when plants are a good size, meaning several inches and a good thickness, say about three eights of an inch, when they are transferred to their permanent location in the garden. There they will stay for the rest of the year and in fact, the whole succeeding winter. On this coast it is unlikely that they will suffer any damage. This gardener had no trouble with them during the hard frosts experienced last winter except that it took a mattock to get them out of the ground. They were delicious.

The Christian Science Monitor articles are of course written for a climate which is very different from that which we enjoy here, but the procedures and methods are basically the same.

A word of caution. Plants grown in a cold frame or a greenhouse or by any means that promotes early germination, must not be put outdoors before normal seed-growing time. The early start however will give the gardener normally about a three week advantage in the matter of maturity and that is all he is entitled to.

It had been intended to include in this effusion an account of the procedure for testing last year's seed for germination but time and space, as they say, forbid, so it must wait till next time.

Gibsons Aux host Friendship Tea

By MARIE TRAINOR

One hundred people attended a delightful Friendship Tea held in the Roberts Creek Community Hall on Thursday, April 19, with members of the Gibsons Auxiliary acting as hosts to members of the other five auxiliaries serving St. Mary's Hospital on the Sunshine Coast.

On arrival the guests were asked to sign the guest book by the secretary, Mrs. Pearl Dove, and were ushered over to the punch table, where a delightful fruit punch was served.

A large buffet was tastefully arranged with a beautiful embroidered cloth and a centrepiece of Camellia, flanked on either side with silver candelabra and matching tapers. The table was laden with fancy sandwiches and small cakes. Presidents from four auxiliaries, namely, Geri Smith of Halfmoon Bay; Jean Prest, Pender Harbour; Pauline Lamb, Roberts Creek and Chris Ward of Sechelt, took turns pouring tea and coffee from the silver service placed at each end of the table. Smaller tables were also set up around which chairs were placed in a semi-circle — all facing towards the buffet table. Polly Warn did an excellent job of arranging the flowers on all the tables as well as on the stage behind the buffet table.

Mrs. Joan Rigby, president of the Gibsons auxiliary, introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Margaret McPherson, president of the British Columbia Association of Hospital Auxiliaries, who presented a very interesting talk on the various aspects of volunteer work during her term of office. Her aim has been to try and visit as many auxiliaries within the Province as possible. Prior to Mrs. MacPherson's talk, Mrs. Rigby presented her with a Dogwood Hospital name tag and a silver coffee spoon on behalf of Auxiliary members, for which Mrs. MacPherson responded with a very warm "thank you".

Attractive tote bags, made by Halfmoon Bay Auxiliary members, were displayed and orders taken from anyone wishing to make a purchase. Also on display were the lovely hand made quilt and afghan, for which raffle tickets were sold by Mrs. Annie Metcalfe of the Gibsons Auxiliary. The draw for this raffle will take place on June 6.

Other guests present were Mrs. Verna Temoin, area representative for the Lower Mainland, Dr. Bev Pace, representing the medical profession and Mrs. Ann Fitchett, a trustee, representing the Hospital Board.

Coaster is new Vancouver draw

A shimmering band of metal that snakes down the mountainside has become Vancouver's newest tourist attraction.

Known as the Grouse Mountain Coaster, it is a cross between a monorail and a roller coaster, and is believed to be the first of its kind in Canada.

To ride it, tourists travel up the face of the mountain via the skyride and move onto the new ride.

It runs over 750 m (2,500 feet) and has a vertical drop of almost 121 m (403 feet) on grades ranging from eight to 25 per cent.

The trip is through spectacular mountain scenery.

It starts on an elevated bridge on top of the Cut Chairlift, proceeding through a tunnel near the Chalet and on down the "Paper Trail" to a finishing point halfway down the Cut.

Each coaster is individually controlled by the rider who can accelerate or brake according to speed desired.

Riders are strapped in and the coasters are clamped onto the rail by nine wheels on the sides and underneath.

Designed to operate in fine weather only, it is expected to run throughout the summer months until mid-October.
