A HOT CAMP

What the New Denver Ledge Has to Say of Brooklyn

Bill Parker came into this country several years ago and staked out a large amount of hard luck. Two years ago he discovered some fine clay, opposite Deer Park, and pre-empted the land around it. The railroad people picked upon his ground for their headquarters during the construction of the road from Robson to Penticton and Parker called his townsite Brooklyn. The crowd flocked in and changed Parker's name from Bill to Mr. A month ago the shore line was dotted by a few tents and Parker's original cabin. Now there are ten hotels ready for business with five more building, and nearly all lines of business are represented. About half a dozen dwelling houses have red curtains. Schools of black jack and horse poker have been established and sleep is scarce in the town. Brooklyn is swift but a mushroom. It will throb with life for a few months and then fade away, unless mines are developed in the vicinity. Peterson, of Trail, opened the first hotel, and in a short time raked in $3,000. Everybody wanted to drink and they lined up to the bar as thick as editors in Paradise. James McNeil, Gus Jackson, H. Y. Anderson, Sandy McDonald, James Martin, Fred Richardton and several others are in the hotel business. The town needs a postoffice. Mail is now brought in a gunny sack from Robson, dumped into boxes in front of Parker's cabin, where every man sorts the mail and picks out what belongs to him. Parker has a sign displayed upon which is painted, "No Chinese Need Land." Major Blackmer, who has been addicted to the newspaper habit for several years, has charge of the townsite. In the camp can be seen old timers who have followed railroading all over the continent. Mr Martin, Jack O'Leary, Jim McDonald and many others have contracts on the line. Brooklyn is a hot town and only a few of the inhabitants drink water. There are plenty of business people there now and a few more will spoil the effect of the million dollars that is to be expended in the vicinity during the next year.

THE SUPREME SENTENCE

Guillemain Will Pay the Penalty of His Crime on September 30.

ST. HYACINTHE, July 14.—John Baptiste Guillemain, convicted of the murder of his uncle, J. B. Laplante, at St. Liboire last October was on Tuesday sentenced to hang on September 30th. His marvellous nerve still sustains him. The moment after learning his fate Guilleman was surrounded by a curious throng and began to write autographs while his sister and many spectators were in tears. Mr. Justice Tellier refused to grant two motions, one asking for a reserve of the case on the question of the legality of the prisoner's confession at Bideford, Maine, and the other on an application to appeal under section 747 of the criminal code on the grounds that the verdict is not in accordance with the evidence. Guilleman's counsel will apply to the attorney general for a new trial on the ground that the Bideford confession is irregular and was obtained by illegitimate means.

The Sultana Gold Mine

A party of men under the direction of H. Fleishman, of Vancouver, are working on a claim situated on the mountain immediately back of McCarty's block. The ore is a free milling quartz which is stated to go $11 in gold to the ton. Revelstoke may have a second Red Mountain in the hill of granite behind the town yet.

Hanbury—Brack.

The marriage of Mr. Herbert Hanbury, head fitter at the C. P. R. round house, to Miss Margaret Brack took place last Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony was held at the residence of the groom in the presence of a small gathering of friends of the contracting parties. Rev. Mr. Menzies, of the Presbyterian church here officiated, while Miss Alice Hanbury and Mr. Chas. J. Aman respectively supported the bride and groom throughout the trying ordeal. A numerous collection of presents testified to the esteem in which Mr. Hanbury and his bride were held. The happy pair left on the express the same evening for their honeymoon trip to the coast.

THE CARNES CREEK COMPANY

Pushing Development Work With Excellent Results.—Another Block of Shares to be Placed on the Market.

I. T. Brewster, manager of the Carnes Creek Consolidated Goldfields Co., Ltd., who are operating extensively on their large property on Carnes Creek this season, will return to camp in a few days. Mr. Brewster is very enthusiastic over the prospects and shewings of the work now being done. A shaft to tap the lower tunnel has been sunk and work is being continued on the tunnel, under the supervision of a practical mining man who understands his business.—Thos. Bain. The money realized from the shares sold last season has been about all expended, and now a block of 70,000 shares is to be placed upon the market, to give the company enough money to obtain a crown grant for their whole group, with 400,000 shares still on hand, and have one of the claims a shipping mine or what is better, a sufficient showing to ensure putting in a large stamp mill to treat the ore from all the claims in their group, which includes almost the whole mountain. Mr. Brewster intends to do a little more prospecting on their properties, when he returns, and he says that every time he goes out he finds some new leads, which gives further indications and proof of the valuable free-milling deposits in the Carnes Creek district.

NORTH KOOTENAY PROPERTIES

A Few Facts About Mines in the Famous Lardeau

Anderson & Craig, of Kaslo, owners of the Pawnbroker group, situated on Hope Creek, about three miles from the Lardo river, have a six foot ledge of fine galena and iron ore in quartz in a contact of lime and slate. The ledge is opened up with cuts and stripping for a distance of 1500 feet and appears to be a strong vein. Their samples are a high grade cube galena.

On the Glacier, about four miles from Trout Lake City is the claim owned by Moyer & Co. They are running a tunnel which is now in 90 feet. The Klondike group, owned by Thomas Wilson, of Trail, Graham Fowler, of Rossland, and Nathan Lay, of Trout Lake, consists of five claims. The work is being done on the Northern Belle. They have a 20 foot shaft and a 12 foot crosscut. The ledge is about 12 inches wide and surface assays 760 ounces of silver and about $3 in gold.

Mobile claim, owned by Chas. Dillon and J. Bruno, of Trout Lake, has a 12 foot shaft on an 18 inch ledge.

The Norway group, on Five Mile creek, has a fine surface showing a high grade of galena and grey copper. They are running a tunnel which is now in 5 feet to crosscut the lead.

The Bad Shot, on Duncan river, has a 150 foot tunnel on a ledge of fine galena and grey copper. The property has recently been bonded for $100,000 and experts are now examining the claim in the interest of the bondholders.

A. Sandreen, Morrison, Lindgreen and Mr. Nelson, of Trout Lake City, have a group of 13 claims on Canyon creek, about 11 miles from the lake. The Pedro has a two foot ledge from which assays gave 100 ounces of silver, 17 ounces in copper and 5 dwt. in gold. On the Lotten they have an 81-foot shaft on a ledge of galena and iron in quartz. The Columbia, on the same ledge, owned by Ed. Sandreen, has a shaft down 00 feet and is in a coarse cube galena, which runs about 270 ounces in silver and 75 per cent. in lead.

The Slocan Boy, on Five Mile creek, is showing up nicely. The ore is a fine cube galena and resembles that of the Silver Cup closely.

Jack Atkinson says things are looking remarkably well on his property, the Milton, on Gainer creek. The lead on which he is located is supposed to be that of the Wagner group, and samples have been taken from this lead showing an average of 170 ounces in silver.—Rosslander.

THE OPPOSITIONISTS' SCHEME

A Political Machine in Operation at Vancouver to Divide the Prospective Provincial Spoils.

VANCOUVER, July 14.—A caucus of the opposition party was held yesterday forenoon and afternoon in the office of Mr. Joseph Martin, Mackinnon block. Amongst those present were Senator Templeman, Col. Gregory, Mr. Drury, A. L. Belyea and Archer Martin, of Victoria; and there were also three representatives from Nanaimo. From Westminster there were J. C. Brown, Aulay Morrison, M. P., and others.

Mr. Alex. Henderson, the member elect for New Westminster, was in town in the afternoon and strenuous efforts were made by Daniel Menzies, of the customs house, Capt. McLeod, harbor master of this city, and others to induce him to attend the caucus, but Mr. Henderson refrained from doing so.

From the interior there were Hewitt Bostock, M. P., and Mr. Deane. C. B. Sword, Thos. Forster, and Thos. Kidd were likewise present, representing the Fraser valley.

The first matter discussed was the situation and the outlook generally. It was decided to place a couple of candidates in the field in Cassiar, and it is said Messrs. John C. Brown, postmaster of New Westminster, and C. B. Sword were chosen, but these gentlemen have not given their final decision as to whether they will consent to the arrangement. If they decline to stand others are willing to enter the contest.

There was a warm discussion as to who shall be leader. Mr. Semlin having some friends present, and it is said that there is trouble ahead if he is to be deposed to make room for Jos. Martin. There is a scramble for recognition as leaders in the hoped for event of a change of government, and it is said that in order to accommodate the many aspirants for cabinet position it is proposed to increase the portfolios to six exclusive of the President of the Council, the cabinet thus to consist of seven members. Two of these are to be from the Island, one being ex-Speaker Higgins, if he can get a seat, and five from the Mainland. It is proposed that Vancouver city shall have two portfolios, Mr. Forster of Delta, Green of Kaslo, and General Kinchant being stated for the others. Mr. Kellie's name has been canvassed for the speakership.

The foregoing arrangement is based upon the supposition that the government will resign before the end of the year, or be beaten when the first test vote is taken. There was great excitement manifested by those present.

A Death Blow to Wildcats

Wildcat mining schemes are hit a deadly blow by the provisions of the new war tariff, for the treasury department holds that they must affix and cancel a 5 cent stamp to the certificate of stock sold, even though its face value is but $1. This will come rather hard on those companies whose stock is not worth more than two or three dollars a thousand shares, for that amount of stock if the par is $1, will require affixed 50 cents' worth of revenue stamps. No one need question this, for just such a hypothetical case has been put by Senator Teller on behalf of some embryo companies in Colorado and the above ruling was given. It is further held that on every transfer of every certificate of such stock the broker or person delivering the certificate must affix thereto and cancel a 2-cent stamp according to the provisions of schedule A of the war revenue act.—Miner and Electrician.

Pingston Creek Properties

J. S. Walcott came up Thursday night from Pingston creek, where he and his partner, Mr. Skea, own very valuable properties. A trail six miles long with a 65 foot span bridge over Pingston creek has been constructed from the shore of Arrow Lake to the property on Baldur mountain this spring which now makes it easy of access. On the claim a 20 foot tunnel has been sunk in solid ore and a gang of four men are now at work on the property. The lead is exposed for a distance of eight miles on Baldur mountain on which are staked 19 claims, and on 15 of these an excellent surface showing appears. Pingston creek will be a lively camp shortly and will surprise many of the older camps in North Kootenay.

SPAIN WILL SEEK FOR PEACE

The Trouble Between Admiral Dewey and the German Admiral at Manila May Lead to Grave Complications—The Situation at Santiago is Unchanged—Princess Chimay Dead—American Day at the Winnipeg Fair.

Special to the Herald.

LONDON, July 16.—The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says: "The government have definitely decided to open the peace negotiations without delay, proposing as a basis the renunciation of all rights over Cuba, and the immediate disposition of any other reasonable proposal the United States make."

LONDON, July 16.—It is learned from an unimpeachable source of an outbrst of hostilities between Dewey and the German Admiral, Irene. The incident is only one of many which Dewey interpreted as menacing the United States interests. He has referred the matter to Washington. It may be the situation will take a grave turn any time.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Nothing new in the Santiago situation. The negotiations for the surrender are still in progress. The Spaniards are raising unexpected questions, such as that the Americans should hand the Spaniards back arms when landed in Spain, but the point will not be granted.

The Spanish coast towns are in a state of panic from fear of the United States invasion.

United States troops have landed near Cienfuegos, Cuba.

GLENORA TESLIN ROAD

Large Force of Men at Work on the Provincial Government's Waggon Road

Frank Yorke, of the Canadian Development Company, who recently returned from Teslin Lake, is more firmly of opinion than ever that the Stikine route is the most favorable one by which to reach the Yukon. The Dominion Government officials who are in charge of the troops bound to Dawson, he holds entirely responsible for the inconvenience that has been caused the men going in by that route, and also for the shortage of provisions at Teslin Lake, they having engaged all the pack trains to transport their goods across from the Stikine to the lake. The Canadian Development Company, for instance, arranged for the Durrant pack train to take their supplies over at 30 cents a pound, and the military authorities secured the train by paying 40 cents. This caused a delay in the sailing of the company's steamer, the Anglican, which was completed and ready for service on June 28, but which will now have to wait until Mr. Yorke's return to Teslin, where he goes as soon as he can get back from a flying visit to New York, for which city he leaves this morning. Mr. Louis Coste, chief engineer of the Dominion public works department, and Mr. Maitland-Kersey will go to Dawson on the Anglican.

Mr. Yorke says he can make the trip from Victoria to Dawson by the way of the Stikine and Teslin Lake in 11 days. The trail, even at present, is in good condition, and Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann under their contract with the provincial government, have a large force of men widening it to make a wagon road. He suggested that some of the men be sent ahead to corduroy the soft spots on the trail, which would be part of the contract for the wagon road, and no doubt this will be done.

On the way out Mr. Yorke met 500 outfits between Glenora and the Tahltan, and he says all were getting along without any difficulty. The Stikine route, he says, is the poor man's route to the Klondike. With a couple of horses and by whipsawing his lumber at the lake, a man can reach Dawson without spending a cent, after leaving the steamer at Glenora.—Victoria Colonist.

A PLEA FOR PEACE

The Spanish feeling in favor of peace negotiations is very rapidly increasing. According to report the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs is understood to have implied that negotiations to that end are in progress, and to have remarked that "there are no Don Quixotes now a days even in Spain" It is to be hoped that his assurance may be accepted literally, for there can be no longer any doubt that for Spain the war is a fearful calamity, and the issue can be only one way, and that the longer it is protracted the more disastrous will the terms of peace be made for Spain. Common sense is however striving to make her voice heard and at last the portion of the community who are desirous of peace are finding the courage to assert themselves. It is only just lately that they have dared to speak, the Catalonia signatories to the appeal for peace have been heard without an outbreak of public indignation which would certainly have occurred a few weeks ago. The odds against Spain are proving too heavy and her best friends are those who urge the appeal directly to Washington for peace. The course of events at Havana, at Santiago, and at Manila must afford sufficient ground for Spain recognizing that submission to superior force is inevitable and there is no dishonor in admitting that an enemy's ships and guns are such as to make further resistance useless, and she would not incur any condemnation by outside critics in taking this course. Santiago since the destruction of Admiral Cervera's fleet is more than ever at the mercy of America, and Manila may not be able long to escape the grasp of the Philippine insurgents.

And it must be remembered that the heavier the losses of American troops and the longer the war is protracted the more onerous will be the demand of the American government when the question of peace arises. The greatest difficulty in the arrangement of a peace will probably be found in the fact that the United States government will inevitably incur great unpopularity if it is too lenient in its terms of peace. Behind the "yellow press" who are anxious for the chance of chronicling some great battle, there is this solid consideration to be taken into account. The evidence of the hatred of Spanish rule in Cuba and the Philippines has strengthened the conviction in the minds of a respectable section of American society that a moral obligation rests on the United States to free all the countries which now endure it from the Spanish yoke. And the American papers are sincere in their belief that it is part of the bounden duty of their country to rescue the victims of Spanish rapacity, cruelty and misgovernment, and no terms would have the least chance of acceptance which did not carry out these ideas in their entirety. Spain has certainly lost Cuba and the Philippines whatever their future may be. The insurgents clamor for American ownership, but that involves the question of American sovereignity other than in the American continent. Whatever the upshot may be it is incumbent on Spain now and without any delay to put aside her wounded pride and approach the United States government with offers of peace for if the war should be continued until the Spanish force in Cuba has actually surrendered, the terms to be dictated by America will be such as to leave Spain no colony at all. Perhaps that would not be a real misfortune for Spain. It is only by taking steps in this direction that Spain can hope to gain from other and more powerful nations the sympathy she will need.

The new Yukon council is built on the coalition principle. It contains two Liberals, two Conservatives and one Independent.

Complaints are made from Macleod that although the government has collected over $9,000 there for customs duties during the past year it is content to allow the fences around government property to be rotting on the ground and the property itself to fall into a general state of dilapidation and become an eyesore to the town. An economical government is a great circus.

The poem "Victoria," for which Fred Emerson Brooks received the thanks of the Queen begins and ends with the following stanzas:

"Peerless woman! Such another
History hath never seen;
Thou, so good, so grand a mother,
And, withal, so great a queen,
Victoria!

"All the nations know thy story!
All now join thy 'Jubilee!'
'Tis a royal crown of glory
That the world bestows on thee.
Victoria."

John Bull has an old account against Spain in connection with the Philippine Islands which may enter into the settlement of the present Manila question. In 1762 a British squadron captured Manila from the Spaniards. The ruler of the islands was the Spanish archbishop. He agreed on behalf of Spain to pay to Great Britain the sum of one million pounds sterling. Only a part of this sum was paid. There is still owing about one-fifth of the sum total. At interest at five per cent this would amount to many millions of dollars today.

GOT HIS CHILDREN

A Maple Creek Man's Chase After a Runaway Wife.

The sequel to a Maple Creek sensation is related by the Medicine Hat News. On Tuesday, June 21st, while G. H. Lucas was away from home shearing sheep at one of the north camps, the partner of his home slipped out with a man named Gillespie, the pair taking with them Lucas' two children. Later in the week when Lucas returned home to Piapot from shearing he found his home deserted.

It was thought at first that the pair had gone east, and inquiries were made in that direction to locate the outfit. It turned out afterwards that Gillespie and the woman had driven from Piapot to Kincorth, avoiding Maple Creek in the flit, and flagging the west bound train at Kincorth had come west to Medicine Hat, where they stayed over a day and took the train south the following evening, going to Montana by way of Lethbridge.

Lucas followed the pair to Montana with the intention of recovering his two children, and word received at police head quarters, Maple Creek, announces the fact that he has been successful in his quest and is returning with the children.

CUSTOMS SEIZURE

A Band of Horses Seized for Infraction of the Customs Act.

At Maple Creek, on Thursday, June 30th, before Supt. Moffatt, N.W.M.P., and John Dixon, J.P.'s, Messrs. Martin and Breckenridge, ranchers, were charged with committing a breach of the customs act. It appears that they had brought over from Montana ranges 52 head of horses, and had entered but 30 of the 52 head for duty. The police at Maple Creek got onto the irregularity and the case was the outcome. A fine of $50 and costs was inflicted, and the whole band of horses have been seized and are held by the police pending the decision of the customs department in the case.—Medicine Hat News.

Notwithstanding the denials from Madrid, it is a confirmed fact that the Pope has taken energetic proceedings in favor of peace between Spain and America. The Emperor of Austria has telegraphed the Pope approving his initiative and promising support.

The men of Sampson's fleet will get something else besides glory as payment for the work of destroying the Spanish fleet. For every man on the Spanish warships at the time of the attack the sailors will receive $100 bounty each. There were about 1,700 men on Cervera's ships when the battle began. The officers and men will consequently divide up $170,000.

Perhaps, says Tit-Bits, some time soon scientists will be able to tell us why, without apparent reason, one or other of our ears suddenly blushes and burns, and if, as the old wives tell us, it is a sign that someone is speaking of us, how we can tell who it may be. We all know that it is "right for spite and left for love," but the knowledge is not very useful to us, and nowadays we like to know the why and the wherefore of everything.

The Mining Journal in a late issue advocates the investment of capital in gold bearing stocks as being quite as safe as other stocks offered. If discretion is used in the selection it is quite possible to pick out prize winners and that the failure of a few are amply compensated for by the success of the paying ones, and maintains that gold mining investments are quite as safe and very much more profitable speculations than many industrial undertakings. Gold being a commodity that does not depreciate, its value is not subject to fluctuation on account of the industrial or political situation of the country producing it. The introduction of new and vastly improved machinery enable mines to be worked profitably which heretofore could not be rendered remunerating. It points out that the lucky investors in Le Roi and War Eagle stock are now reaping a handsome reward of their venture. The remarks of this journal on mining prospects are of great importance just now to those interested in Canadian mining.

FRESH FROM PARIS.

Latest News From the Domain of Queen Fashion.

The basque is quite frequently seen on new bodices, but it is flat, all the superfluous material which used to ripple and fluff out around the hips being eliminated. The basque is also short, and where the costume is composed of two materials the basque is sometimes of a different fabric from the bodice, giving a curious and novel effect. Of course in this case a belt of some kind is necessary to conceal the junction of the two materials at the waist.

Narrow straps or folds of satin, stitched in the middle or at both edges are employed as a decoration for cloth gowns, jackets and capes of the tailor made style. These straps are usually of the same color as the cloth upon which they appear, matching it exactly or being perhaps a shade darker. The effect is rather pretty, certainly very neat, but this sort of trimming wears out and becomes shabby long before the garment itself is hurt. It must be added that the straps are not necessarily applied in parallel bands only. They are often interlaced to form an open latticework. This elaborate arrangement is most frequently adopted in the case of satin blouses, where the straps of the same fabric form the principal decoration.

Brick red and pink are a combination produced this spring, which, however fashionable it may be, is not at all attractive. Any unpleasant marriage of colors, however, can always be rendered more agreeable by the intervention of a third element, if that element be either black or white. So a judicious admixture of black will make even brick red and pink agree tolerably well.

The cut shows a pretty costume of silver gray bengaline. The skirt is trimmed with three ruffles of plaited white mousseline de soie, arranged in V's and headed by a band of silver galloon. The stretched bodice opens in front over a full chemisette of white mousseline de soie and has two large revers trimmed with silver galloon and bordered with a puffing of white mousseline de soie, which also edges the valois collar. Both collar and revers are of white satin, and the belt, which is tied at the side with long ends, is of white satin ribbon. The shepherdess hat of white straw is trimmed with gray mousseline de soie and flowers and foliage.

The trained skirts which have just come into favor are trimmed with insertion or galloon, ribbon bands or embroidery. Those which are not thus trimmed have little ruffles of lace, taffeta or mousseline de soie. Another style is finished around the foot by a deep, circular flounce of either the same depth all around or growing deeper at the back.

The bolero is revisiting the glimpses of the moon and appears as a part of many summer costumes. All varieties are employed, from the plainest to the most elaborate—open, closed, crossed, plaited, embroidered and slashed. With the bolero the soft chemisette of silk, gauze or mousseline de soie is a necessity, and now even piece lace is used for it. For tailor made gowns there are very neat boleros, double breasted and fastening with two rows of buttons or with cords and bars. They are finished with stitching, with bias bands of satin or with straps of the material. By having a number of different chemisettes a great deal of variety may be given to a bolero gown.

Hats of one color throughout are one of the season's fancies. Thus a hat of red straw will be trimmed with red gauze and poppies, one of blue straw with corn flowers and bluet satin, one of turquoise straw with forgetmenots and turquoise taffeta, and so on. Fruit, with its foliage, is revived in millinery, but requires to be used with discretion.

Today's sketch shows a very simple hat, which is nevertheless characteristic of this season's style. It is of black lace straw, the border of the toque shape being draped with a veil of white lace application. At the left side is placed a single crow quill.

SOME WORD ORIGINS.

Way Quaint Customs and Notions Embalmed In Current Terms.

The "hypocrite" once was only an actor, the player of a part on the stage. So the orator, who was a consummate actor, was also a hypocrite. The word, even in old Greek, soon was applied to any dissembler because the life of such person was found to resemble the histrionic art in striving to appear different from what it really was. The English language took it up and the moral judgment of the English speaking people makes it carry the heaviest weight of odium that can be attached to personal character. "Pretend" was once an innocent word, and "counterfeit" simply meant imitation, conveying no suggestion that the imitation was to be fraudulently substituted for the original.

The "boor" was originally a husbandman, and the "villain" was only a laborer or peasant attached to the villa or farm. "Heathen" meant merely a dweller on the heath, and a "pagan" was a dweller in the open country. "Idiot," a Greek word, meant only a private person as distinguished from one clothed with office, and in this primary sense it was often used in English of two centuries ago, as when Jeremy Taylor said, "Humility is a duty in great ones as well as in idiots." "Obsequious" was used formerly only in relation to funerals. Shakespeare has many examples of the word applied in this sense. It does not seem formerly to have conveyed any idea of cringing or insincerity. For the curious in the matter of the origin of words we present a few of another class. A "milliner" was originally a man and was so called from Milan, whence he imported female finery. Shakespeare says, "He was perfumed like a milliner," and Ben Jonson settles the question of the sex of the original milliners in the words, "To conceal such real ornaments as these and shadow their sex as a milliner's wife does her rough stomacher with a smoky lawn or black cyprus."

"Nicotine" is derived from the name of John Nicot, who introduced tobacco into France in 1560. "Paraffin" was so named from the Latin words "parvum" (little) and "affins" (kin), because it had little affinity with any known substance. "Poltroon" is from the Latin "police truncato" (deprived of the thumb), it having been a common practice among the Romans to avoid service in the wars; hence our word poltroon for coward. The "turkey" is an American bird, not from Turkey at all, though it was said to be from Turkey when it was first seen in London.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Revenge of a Snake and Its Mate.

A gentleman riding along a plantation path, followed by a negro on a mule, struck a large cotton mouth with his whiplash as it glided across the road. As soon as under cover and out of reach of the whip the snake raised its head above the bushes, standing almost upright on its tail and glaring at him with flashing eyes, at the same time hissing fiercely and exposing its fangs.

"Yo' ort'n ter 'a' done dat, Maws Joe!" exclaimed the negro.

"Why not, Pomp?"

"'Cause dat spec'll lay fuh yo' sho', an some time ernother'll hit yo' back."

"Pshaw, Pomp! I don't take any stock in such nonsense. More likely he'll take care to keep out of reach of my whip. I wish, though, I had killed the beast!"

"Dat would 'a' bin er sight wusser, Maws Joe, 'cause de mate would jes' foller tel hit cotch't yo, an when er cotton mouf's mate hits yo' goes dead powerful quick."

"All nonsense, Pomp! There isn't any mate, or if there is it doesn't know more than other dumb creatures. A man may be hit, of course, but not more often by the mate of a snake he has killed than by some other that just happens in striking distance."

"Leastways, Maws Joe," urged Pomp, "yo'd better not happen erlong dis pat any more dis year, 'ceptin on hosseback!"

This good advice fell on heedless ears. The next afternoon Maws Joe followed the path on foot, probably without any thought of what had occurred the day before, and when passing the spot where he had lashed the snake the day before he was struck at the same instant by two cotton mouths, one from each side of the path. He managed to get home, but died soon after.

The negroes in that neighborhood, and many white people, too, are firm believers in the cotton mouth's mate and its vicious intelligence.—Galveston News.

The British Foreign Office.

How many people are there who realize adequately how exhausting the work of a foreign secretary really is? It is the general impression that this minister is exercised only with great principles of policy and that he has little to do with the routine work of his department. This is a delusion, and in this connection the testimony of the late Lord Granville is interesting and to the point. "When," he said, "I first entered the foreign office in a subordinate capacity the dispatches were some 17,000 in the year. When I succeeded Lord Palmerston, they were 34,000; in 1870 they had risen to 70,000, and I believe they have now (1887) risen to more than 90,000. Lord Palmerston told us in 1852 that the routine work of the foreign office took him eight hours a day, and this exclusive of diplomatic conversations, parliamentary attendance and the performance of all court and social duties." It will thus be seen that the foreign secretaryship in ordinary times is the most arduous position under the crown. In extraordinary times its duties are overwhelming.—St. James Gazette.

Frozen Fog.

Spitzbergen is not an unbroken ice sheet, as many persons supposed it to be. Glaciers there are in plenty, but there is much open ground and fine mountain scenery. Fogs are prevalent, and Mr. Garwood described a peculiar effect due to this condition of the atmosphere which does not seem to have been ever noted by Alpine climbers. He has seen the face of a mountain covered with spicules of ice—a kind of exaggerated hoarfrost—some of the icicles standing out horizontally from the wall of rock and measuring as much as 18 inches in length. They are evidently generated by the action of fog and grow by the constant addition of moist particles. Fogs will often continue for many days together, and they are so dense that one cannot see a companion who is more than two or three yards away.—Chambers' Journal.

SURVEYING BY PHOTOGRAPHY.

IT HAS REACHED ITS HIGHEST PERFECTION IN THE DOMINION.

Mr. E. Deville, the Surveyor-General of Canada, and His Eminent Work in This Direction—The New Method Greatly More Convenient and Economical Than the Older Ones—A Surveying Camera.

Photogrammetry, or the application of photography to surveying, is far from being a novel application of camera work, for as early as 1849 M. Laussedat used the camera lucida for topographic work, and about 1854 he took the photographic camera in place of the camera lucida. A paper which he read on the subject in 1850 was published in 1854, and was followed by other papers in which he explained the various improved methods he had worked out. The idea was rapidly taken up by other surveyors, so that the literature of the subject is now extensive.

One of the most extensive users of this process is Mr. E. Deville, the Surveyor-General of Canada. Mr. Deville in his book on the subject has very ably advocated the use of photogrammetry, and has shown that the cost of a photographic survey is considerably less than one-third the cost of a plano table survey by the older methods. Many special forms of camera have been designed, but perhaps the greatest amount of attention to this part of the subject has been given by J. Bridges-Lee, M.A., F.G.S., a barrister, who finds relaxation in scientific pursuits.

Of course, in such work as this mathematical accuracy is the first requisite, and nothing can be done without a base line, containing at least two established points. Two stations being decided upon and their height above the sea level being known, the data regarding any point which is visible from both stations can be rapidly, accurately and easily established from two photographs taken in a properly-constructed and properly used camera. For instance, since the camera is placed absolutely level, and with its ground glass truly perpendicular in both directions, the point of the picture which coincides with the axis of the lens must be exactly the same height above sea level as the camera itself. This point is marked on the photograph by the crossing of two fine hair lines.

So much being understood, let us turn to the illustration of the camera. Its fittings serve two purposes: First, to secure the most accurate possible adjustment of the instrument itself as regards its relation to points of the compass, to surrounding objects and to the horizon; second, to automatically record on the plate all the details which will be needed when dealing with the picture for measurement and plotting. To prevent any possibility of any parts becoming relatively strained or misplaced the body of the camera is a single casting of aluminium. A rectilinear lens is used, is carefully adjusted to position by the instrument maker, and is, of course, provided with no means of focusing. C is an azimuth circle on which the camera rotates, and a vernier for the fine reading of which is attached at the base of the camera box. E is a telescope with cross webs which correspond when set properly with the cross wires in the back of the camera. Beneath and moving with the telescope is a vertical limb (F), its edge divided into half-degrees and provided with a vernier and an adjustable magnifying eye piece (P), to enable the vertical angle of any object cut by the cross webs to be read. G is a revolving tubular level, and under the camera are adjusting screws whereby it may be accurately adjusted horizontally, without interfering with its direction.

To mark on the plate the various records that are needed the camera has a rectangular frame (I) running on engine planed beds and supported by strong backstays, cast as part of the main piece. This whole arrangement racks into the camera by means of the milled heads (JJ), which have pointers (J) to show whether the frame is forward or back. Before inserting the slide the back frame is racked inward, when the slide is inserted and its shutter drawn the frame is racked back so that it bears against the face of the plate, which is pressed against it by the springs in the dark slide. This moving back frame carries two cross hairs (KK), and also a horizontal scale of degrees which is prepared photographically by means of the identical lens used in each camera, and which impresses an image on the dry plate.

In the bottom of the camera (M) is a compound magnetic compass, free to move and carrying a transparent scale divided into half degrees from 0 to 360. The portion of this scale which comes near the plate impresses itself, thus registering the exact compass direction of the view. In the back frame (above the letters LL) are small removable slips of transparent celluloid, on which the surveyor marks the number of the negative, date, barometric pressure or any other data he wishes to preserve. As the result of experience Mr. Bridges-Lee prefers to use a 4 by 5 plate and a lens of about five inches focus. Of course, in actual work the exact focus of the lens is a most important matter, so that in building these cameras the adjustments are made to the actual lens to be used with the camera. The negatives are made on isochromatic plates, using a very small lens aperture and giving a long exposure.

THE WARDROBE.

Various Notes Respecting the Prevailing Styles.

This being a season of jewelry, nearly all styles have been revived, and even cameos and engraved stones, so long out of date, are again seen, even enjoying a large share of fashionable favor. Combs decorated with cameos are much appreciated. Among colored stones turquoises and amethysts take the lead.

Well dressed Frenchwomen seldom wear silk, velvet or lace for street gowns. For walking cloth, voile or fancy woolens are employed, while for the carriage, for visiting and for the theater the richest and most fanciful gowns are worn.

With summer gowns short coats will be worn, with or without revers, opening in front over a full chemisette of bright or light colored silk.

One of the new hat shapes for summer is turned up directly in front, giving a most audacious effect. Another shape suggests the antique coal scuttle bonnet, the inside of the large brim being lined with ruffles of straw braid.

Although the newest skirt model has a slight train, this is not absolutely essential, and many fashionable women will still keep to the round skirt for the street. After all, a trailing skirt, covered with dust to the height of six inches, is not so attractive as a skirt of ordinary length, fresh and clean, and a great many women appreciate this fact.

A sketch is given of a pretty frock for a little girl. It is of printed challie, the skirt being plain, the bodice having a blouse form. The plaited guimpe is of plain surah, like the belt, and the bertha of lace is headed by a ruche of surah. The bertha is continued obliquely down the front and falls in coquilles upon the skirt. The sleeves are of plaited surah, with lace cuffs.

SUMMER FABRICS.

New and Pretty Fashions For Warm Weather Gowns.

The transparent materials for summer wear are ravishingly pretty and of the most varied styles and colorings. In silk there are plain, satin striped and plaided muslins in one or many tints, grenadines of all kinds of weaves, coarse and fine, and with printed or woven designs; gauzes embroidered or dotted with chenille and nets of all sorts. In wools there are barege, plain, printed and embroidered, and various kinds of open canvases to be made up over silk of a contrasting color, and in linen and cottons there are lawns and muslins, flowered, clouded, striped, checked, plaided, embroidered and ornamented with bands of lace insertion. These wash materials are often made with a silk lining, which prevents them from being much worn, as in that case they cannot be laundered. A lining of thin, fine sateen has quite as good an effect in point of color and is much more useful.

Some well known French artists have made a number of the floral designs for this year's printed goods—Madeleine Lemaire, Louise Abbema and others. These designs were originally painted upon gowns which were naturally of great cost, but the patterns have been reproduced and are printed by machinery.

Large, embroidered checks and plaids and embroidered designs representing the patterns of real lace are among the season's novelties also and are very effective over a colored lining.

The picture shows a gown of white lawn over white silk. The foot of the skirt is adorned by a deep application of ecru guipure, and the bodice has a yoke and plastron of guipure. An application of guipure trims the wrists of the tight, plain sleeves. With this gown is worn a pink satin belt with long sash ends at the back, and the wrinkled collar is also of pink satin. The hat of pink satin straw is trimmed with puffing of white mousseline de soie and a black velvet bow with a black quill.

A PANEL AFTER TURNER.

The peacock on the balustrade
Of yellowed marble sleeps away,
His listless train's begemmed array
Sweeping the glories in cascade.

The ancient Triton flings about
His silver in the tawny sun,
Where shines the lithe chameleon,
Like tinsel, basking noontide out.

And wearied of the filmed air
The butterfly—white Pierrot—
Droops o'er the jasmine, pulsing slow
Twain petals pearled with powder rare.

They dream, afar see tumbling high
The storm's gay chaos! Its decrees
The empurpled plumage of the trees
Proclaims, "Faint rose, the rain is nigh."

CIRCULATING MUSIC.

It Proves a Popular Department of the Brooklyn Library.

The Brooklyn library established its department of music in the autumn of 1882. The idea of circulating music in the same manner as books was suggested by one of the directors of the library, who supplemented his suggestion in a most practical manner by supplying funds for the purchase of 400 volumes. The selection of this music was made by a competent man at that time connected with a large music importing house in New York and indeed in the several additions subsequently made the selection has been made by men of musical education and possessing a wide acquaintance with the works of the most noted composers and therefore better fitted for the requirements of the case than a librarian more closely acquainted with books than with music. The collection is largely for single piano (two hands) this being most in request, but there is much that is arranged under other headings, such as "Piano Duets" (four hands), "Two Pianos" (eight hands), "Violin and Piano," "Vocal Music," "Songs," "Oratorios," "Operas" and the like.

The rules for circulation are the same as with books. Readers who apply first for a work that is in demand get what they require without delay; others necessarily wait until later, as is usual in a circulating library. The collection now numbers 2,000 volumes, exclusive of works on the theory and practice of music and musical biographies. The annual circulation from this class is about 6,000 volumes. Two or three special bulletins have been issued devoted to music alone. The more recent additions are given under a separate heading in the book bulletins occasionally published. But for use at the library the collection is given in one complete list under the usual headings in a Rudolph indexer book, instead of with the book additions in the card catalogue.

On the whole, the musical department has been very much appreciated and has proved a satisfactory investment. Its use shows that there are among the members many who study music and who recognize the advantage of a large collection from which to make selections for home practice.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Little Too Far.

"There is such a thing as overdoing your part," declared a man of the law who now has the knowledge gained by much experience.

"Shortly after I began practice in the west I was called upon to defend a man who had drawn a revolver on another and threatened to kill him. The accused did not have a character above reproach, but the prosecuting witness was also shady in reputation, and I made the most of this fact. I pictured him as a desperado of the most dangerous type, a man that was a constant menace to the community and one who would recognize no other law than that of force. Such men as he, I insisted, made necessary the organization of vigilance committees and injured the fair name of the west among the older communities of the country.

"The jury returned a verdict of guilty and my man was sentenced to a year's imprisonment. As soon as court adjourned the foreman of the jury came to me and said: 'Young feller, you spread it on too thick. After that there rip snortin speech of yourn we couldn't do nothin else 'an what we done.'

"'I don't understand you, sir.'

"'You don't? Why, we found the durned gerloot guilty 'cause he didn't shoot.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Gomersal as Napoleon.

In the late thirties and early forties a favorite spectacular play at Astley's in London was "The Battle of Waterloo," in which an actor named Gomersal gained renown as Napoleon Bonaparte. His imitation of the emperor was so lifelike that the great Duke of Wellington invited him to Apsley House, and the interview affords an amusing illustration of the actor's close conscientiousness in attention to the most minute detail. After complimenting his guest the duke remarked:

"I observe, Mr. Gomersal, that you do not use a snuffbox in the part, but make the emperor take his snuff loose from his waistcoat pocket. Permit me to enable you to supply the omission." And his grace presented the actor with a very handsome silver "tabatiere."

Gomersal pocketed the casket and stomached the criticism in silence, but when he reached home he wrote to the conqueror of Waterloo and respectfully pointed out that the omission was of set purpose and absolutely true to history, "Boney" being in the habit of dispensing with a snuffbox and taking the powder loose from his waistcoat pocket, which he had made lined with chamois leather for that purpose.—New York Times.

Steam Boilers Rented.

There is scarcely anything from steam yachts to shotguns but can be rented—for example, steam boilers. These are likely to be rented for some temporary purpose, as was done, for instance, in the case of an establishment putting in a new boiler and in need of a continuous supply of steam meantime. In this instance a large second-hand boiler was rented of a dealer in boilers and machinery and set up in the street and the supply of steam kept unbroken until the new boiler was ready for use.—New York Sun.

Old Love Letters.

Martha—Helen and Harry act as though they were heartily sick of one another, and they haven't been married more than a year.

Bertha—Well, I don't wonder. Not long ago they took to reading the love letters they wrote when they were courting. Of course after that it was impossible for either to have much respect for the other.—Boston Transcript.

The largest flower in the world grows in Sumatra. It is called the Rafflesia arnoldi, and some of the specimens are 39 inches in diameter. The central cup will hold six quarts of water.

SPAIN JIBS at PEACE TERMS

Disgust at Madrid ~~~ Spanish Cabinet Resigns

General Ferol Would Not Surrender

BY THE BATTLESHIPS AND IS FOLLOWED BY A FLAG TRUCE

Shafter's Despatches to Headquarters Are Bright—No Deaths Reported—They're Hungry at Guantanamo—Spanish Admiral and His Seamen Are Now Visiting in Yankeeland

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Alger, the U. S. secretary of war, has received the following cablegram:

Playa del Este: Have just received telegram from General Ferol in which he declines the unconditional surrender of Santiago. The bombardment has therefore been commenced by the combined army and naval forces. (Signed) SHAFTER.

At 12:10 this morning the war department posted the following notice:

Playa del Este, July 11:—The Adjt.-General, Washington Headquarters of Fifth Army Corps, July 10.—Enemy opened at a few minutes past four with eight inch guns, which were soon silenced by ours. Very little musketry firing. The enemy kept constantly in their trenches. Three men were slightly wounded. We shall have considerable forces at our command tomorrow, enough to completely block all the roads on the northwest. The army is well. Garcia reports that the enemy has evacuated the little town of Douxominos, about three miles from Santiago, near the bay. SHAFTER.

STARVATION

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Daily deaths are reported from starvation in Guantanamo.

General Ferol positively refuses to surrender the town of Santiago except with the honors of war.

Admiral Cervera, with 800 other prisoners of war have arrived safely at Portsmouth.

MADRID, July 12.—It is asserted here that the United States make the following demands as conditions of peace:

First—Possession to be given of Cuba and Porto Rico, with a port in the Canaries.

Second—An indemnity of $240,000,000.

Third—Retention of the Philippines as a guarantee of payment of the indemnity.

These terms are regarded as impossible. The maximum concession the Queen Regent is at present inclined to entertain is the independence of Cuba.

MINISTRY RESIGNS

LONDON, July 12.—The Madrid correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on Monday, says:—The Sagasta Cabinet has resigned office. The resignation will in all probability be accepted and a new Cabinet will be formed consisting of a strong military element.

FLAG OF TRUCE

OFF SANTIAGO DE CUBA, via Playa de Este, July 12.—The New York, Brooklyn, Newark and the Indiana opened fire on Santiago this morning and for a time the shells fell harmlessly in the bay. The last shot however struck a church in which was stored a large quantity of ammunition, causing a tremendous explosion. After the ships had ceased firing, and before General Shafter had opened his attack, a flag of truce was seen coming from the city. The object of this was not ascertained when the press correspondent left the front.

REINFORCEMENTS

WASHINGTON, July 12.—General Miles has arrived at Juniagua. Five thousand United States troops have also reached that point as reinforcements for General Shafter.

BOMBARDMENT CONTINUES

The United States warships resumed the bombardment of the city of Santiago yesterday.

KILLED AND WOUNDED

During Sunday's fighting at Santiago there were two killed and four men wounded.

CROW'S NEST COAL

It Is to be Placed on the Calgary Market

From the Calgary Herald.

R. D. Blakemore of the Crow's Nest Coal company, who went south on Saturday, told THE HERALD that arrangements were being made to place the coal on the local markets, both east and west of the mountains and that sample shipments would be sent out at once. As the workings are now in 1000 feet the samples will be fairly representative of the mine.

While the Crow's Nest coal is bituminous it contains an unusually large percentage of carbon and a correspondingly small percentage of ash, the carbon being 80% and the ash 3%. The coal will be sold at about the same price as Galt. C. S. Lott has been appointed purveyor for Calgary.

"We are bound by our charter," said Mr. Blakemore, "to sell the coal at a certain price at the mine and as the railway transportation will be moderate we expect to lay our coal down to the consumer at a fairly reasonable rate. We expect that it will to some extent replace Anthracite coal. Our company is an entirely independent concern and beyond the restrictions of our charter our directors have a perfectly free hand."

The coroner's inquest at Macleod last week; on the body of Mr. Hillier, a brother of the C. P. R. agent at Calgary returned a verdict that the deceased came to his death through the breaking of a bridge, the result of an ice jam.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS IN CARIBOO

Andrew Oleson, over 70 years of age and the last of the quartette of Australian miners, is now in Ashcroft, and will go down in a day or two to the hot springs at Agassiz for his rheumatic trouble. His last partner, Steve Dowe, was buried the 23rd of June at Quesnelle. Oleson, Stephen Dowe and brother, and one other, landed in Cariboo over 35 years ago, and not having success in the mines, decided to locate and clear up a piece of ground along the Cariboo road. The Australian ranch is the result. It is, perhaps, the finest piece of land in British Columbia, and for many years these men worked at clearing it off and breaking it up. They had but little money when they arrived in Cariboo, coming direct from a ten year's stay in the Australian mines. By a rare chance they obtained four oxen of Harper on credit, interest at the rate of two per cent. a month. These oxen cost them before they were paid for, principal and interest, over $1,500. All of the original party are now dead except Mr. Oleson, or Andrew, as he is known by all in this section. This is the first trip down since he went to Cariboo 35 years ago, and only once has he been farther from the farm than Quesnelle or Barkerville, the exception being once to the 150-Mile House. He saw for the first time in Ashcroft a modern railway car, never having seen a railway before except a tramway in Australia 30 miles long. Mr. Oleson expects to return to the ranch as soon as his health will permit, but says he shall sell out and go for a trip to Sweden to see his relatives whom he has not seen in 50 years. He is an honorable, well-informed man for one leading the life he has, and his old neighbors and friends wish him a speedy return to health. He is well off in this world's goods, and should, while he can, try to enjoy his means as far as possible. —Journal.

Capt. Freer's Death

Capt. Freer, of Nelson, was killed by a fall from a stairway attached to the Clarke hotel, Saturday evening, July 2. He was a step-son of H. Abbott, formerly superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Freer was 30 years old. He was educated at Trinity College School, Port Hope, Ontario, and afterwards went to the Royal Military College at Kingston, where he passed as one of the four entitled to commissions in the Imperial service. He received a commission in the South Staffordshire regiment and served in the Egyptian war for which he received a medal, obtained leave of absence and was appointed aide-de-camp to Gen. Middleton during the Riel rebellion and served on the staff of the military schools at London, Ont., and St. John's, Que. He subsequently rejoined his regiment and resigned his commission while his regiment was at Gibraltar, since which time he has been engaged in railway work in this province.—New Denver Ledge.

An Explanation

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR: In justice to those who were instrumental in getting up the entertainment in connection with the dramatic club on the 25th of last month, we think it advisable to explain publicly to what effect the proceeds are to be applied. As it has been stated by one or two persons that public discussion is rife as to what is to become of the proceeds, for their benefit a public statement is here given.

The object for which the entertainment was intended was at first kept secret, and when asked by several if it was for St. Peter's church, they were told "no," and for this reason it was wished that a personal gift should be made to Rev. A. Ford as a friend and gentleman, and for fear it should reach his ears and be declined, for this reason only was it kept secret. However, some few in their zeal for the public welfare thought proper to say that faith with the public has been broken (evidently not being able to distinguish between a personal gift and one to the church) so under such circumstances Mr. Ford did not want to be asked to nor would he accept any gift from the club. To prevent any misunderstanding and to prevent any cause for cavilling, the funds will be equally divided between the two fire brigades. Considerable annoyance has been felt on account of this misunderstanding and under the circumstances we were discouraged about undertaking another entertainment, but remembering we have pledged ourselves publicly to assist with the cemetery fund, we will keep our word.

Thanking you for your valuable space and trusting that this will fully explain the situation, we remain, yours truly.

MARION S. HEARN.
ADELAIDE E. ATKINSON.

Revelstoke, July 15, 1898.

AN OFFICIAL SCANDAL

The Liberal "Tribune" of Winnipeg denounces strongly the conduct of some of the Dominion officials in the Klondike district for speculating in mining claims. Some of these gentlemen are said to have made from $60,000 to $80,000 apiece and besides to have claims considered to be very rich. As their duties are connected with the administration of mining affairs and the settlement of questions regarding disputes between claim-owners and others, it is impossible not to agree with the "Tribune" in its condemnation of such actions on the part of officials appointed by the government to administer the affairs of that distant part of the country. The nature of the duties devolving on such officials gives them opportunities and information which can, of course, be used to their personal advantage, should they be inclined to use them in that manner, and it will certainly lead to grave abuses and the lowering of the standard which it is desirable to maintain in all branches of the administration. Canadians are accustomed to pride themselves on the purity of all government departments and of the officials employed in them and are apt to compare these things with the state of affairs which exists in the United States. But if such things as are reported from the Yukon district are allowed to continue, we shall soon see a change which will not be to the credit of this country.

In striking contrast to these things was the manner in which Mr. William Ogilvie acted during the years in which he was in that district. Yet he had no official position which required him to abstain from using the opportunities which were open to him. He was simply there as a surveyor to do certain work for the Dominion Government. He held no official position which entailed on him the responsibilities of adjudicating on disputes between rival claim-owners or administering the law. Any surveys which he made of claims were merely acts of good nature to assist miners. There was nothing—either legally or morally—to prevent him acquiring valuable claims and amassing a large fortune. Many prospectors would have been only too well pleased to have given him interests in their discoveries in order to have the benefit of such an association. But he resisted a temptation which to most men would have been irresistible and returned from the Yukon a poor man, but one who had added a fresh lustre to the reputation of the civil service of Canada. As administrator of the district—to which position he has just been appointed—we may look back to him with confidence as one who will maintain a high standard in all branches of the administration.

Meanwhile the people will await with the keenest interest the action which the Minister of the Interior will take in regard to the matter which has certainly brought a scandal on the administration of the Yukon. All the officials implicated were appointed by him; some of them were old acquaintances of Mr. Sifton in Manitoba. The salaries attached to their positions were larger than any income which they were likely to secure in any other walk of life and they considered themselves fortunate in obtaining such appointments. Now it seems as though they considered that they were free to enrich themselves by the means which their official position and knowledge placed within their reach. But the people of the country will not be inclined to tolerate such conduct as would, if permitted to become general throughout the Dominion, make the civil service a hotbed of corruption to the permanent injury of the national interests and the degradation of the government service. From the circumstances of the case Mr. Sifton is on trial before the country in relation to it as much—in some respects more—as any of the officials who are implicated and we trust he will realize this and take action accordingly.—News-Advertiser.

The Golden Kootenay in 1898

This is the title of a well written article in Chambers' Journal for the current month. It is evident that old established Scottish magazine thinks something of our gold industry as the following paragraph will show:

"The present year will probably witness some of the most remarkable and successful mineral developments the world has ever seen. These mountains and valleys are day by day yielding up more and more and more of their immense riches. It is only the miner or the mineralogist who has visited the Kootenays who can form an idea of their mineral wealth. Gold, silver, copper and lead occur here in great fissure veins, with quartz and iron pyrites."
