AFTER COPPER MINES

English Companies Inquiring for Copper Properties in Vancouver

"Copper is the great demand in British Columbia at the present time," said a local mining broker to a World reporter this morning. "There are in the city now three or four representatives of British companies who are asking for copper propositions which they wish to buy outright. Copper is at a good price now and mines are wanted by outside people. But they are after proven properties, from which they can begin to ship very soon after acquiring them. But while we should have 100 copper mines shipping ore we have practically none. On the coast gold predominates, and what English people want now is copper—copper everywhere. From all reports the Similkameen will be a copper producing district, but it is not opened up yet. Of course, there are such properties as the Nobhill that have made great records. That mine, for instance, is simply a mountain of copper, and though it has not shipped a pound of ore, the stock has gone up from seven to 85 cents per share in a year. Of course there is the Boundary creek country, which will be a copper producer second to none, when they get smelters and matting plants in there, but at the present time the copper mines that the outside capitalists would like to buy and are enquiring for are lacking. "But then," added the broker with a satisfied sigh, "this is a young country."

A Big Time Coming

A. H. Kelly, of the Exchequer mine, who has been in Rossland for the past week, returned to Nelson yesterday. Mr. Kelly is convinced from what he heard and saw in Spokane that the coming summer is to be one of the biggest seasons ever experienced in the mining world. "Unless something unforseen happens," said he to a Miner reporter last night, "in a few months British Columbia will be in the midst of one of the biggest mining booms in her history. It will not be a boom in the ordinary sense of the word, but it will be one which will mean the inflow of capital from the east and across the Atlantic. A war such as came last summer between the United States and Spain is the only thing that can prevent the most prosperous times. Of course the greatest interest manifested in Spokane is in Republic mines but there is more inquiry for British Columbia properties than for some time past. That good times are coming I have no doubt."—Nelson Miner.

A Main Line Problem

The Canadian Pacific Railway will soon have a problem to face, either in the reconstruction of the Ottertail bridge or the divergence of the road to escape the big gulch. This is an old problem and has often been discussed, but now that all wooden structures on the main line in East Kootenay are being replaced by substantial bridges, the problem has again come up. The divergence of the road would not only avoid the reconstruction of the bridge, but get rid of the heavy incline up the big hill. The divergence would commence three miles west of Ottertail station, and practically follow the bed of the Kicking Horse river to near Field Station.

Expend Your Push and Money Here.

If one half the people who are now going to the Boundary creek towns would stay where they are and make the best of their opportunities they would be vastly better off three months hence. "A rolling stone gathers no moss," is a proverb that ought to be borne in mind by every man in the Slocan.—New Denver Ledge.

Wish it Was Same Here.

A battle of giants will be witnessed this summer in the Slocan and Boundary Creek districts. Mr. "Jim" Hill Sir William Van Horne will struggle for the mastery. As competition of this kind is the very best thing for the mining interests, the mine owners in those parts are saying, "Let 'em all come!"—B.C. (London) Review.

Shortly Sized Up

The Victoria Colonist published on Wednesday contained a review of the members of the House as debaters. It dismisses our mis-representative in two lines:

"Mr. Kellie is making a very serious mistake. The part of a buffoon is a very risky one to attempt."

Hugh Macpherson of Trout Lake City has taken a contract to rawhide the ore taken out of the Beatrice at the head of Mohawk creek last summer. There is a large quantity of ore on the dump.

THE CRIMINAL LIBEL CASE

The Charge Dismissed by the Magistrate Yesterday Afternoon

The charge of criminal libel brought by J. D. Sibbald against B. R. Atkins of the Mail, came up again yesterday afternoon before C. Lindmark and T. L. Haig, J.P's. J. M. Scott for the prosecution; J. Murphy for the defence.

J. D. Sibbald was the first witness called. He stated that the articles complained of referred to himself.

Cross-examined.—Had used the expression "a character to maintain" in connection with his dismissal. All expenditure on the canyon road was paid by voucher.

B. R. Campbell produced a copy of the Kootenay Mail containing the articles and the original copy. The defence admitted the authorship of the defendant.

G. E. Grogan stated that on reading the article "Questions and Answers," he considered that the meaning imputed was that Sibbald had misappropriated the balance $2075. Thought the editorial imputed that Sibbald had no character worth maintaining.

R. Gordon took the article to mean that the writer wanted to convey the idea that Sibbald knew that he was dismissed on account of wrongful expenditure of $2.075 on the canyon road. By wrongful expenditure he meant that it was either carelessly spent or wilfully used to benefit himself or his friends. Took the editorial to mean that on account of the character of the plaintiff before his dismissal, anything he would say now about his character would not help him.

Dr. McKechnie stated that he thought on reading the article that the writer wished to imply a misappropriation of a certain sum of money by Sibbald. The editorial reflected very seriously on Sibbald's character.

Cross examined.—The writer meant that Sibbald's private character was under a stain. The expression "blameless life" reflected on his private life. Thought a suggestion of dishonesty was made.

T. E. L. Taylor stated that his impression on reading the article was that it meant that the money had been carelessly or indiscriminately used. Thought the editorial was sarcastic and cast imputations upon Sibbald's character. It held him up to ridicule. It was a specimen of the usual bickering indulged in by the local papers.

This closed the case for the prosecution. No witnesses were called by the defence.

J. Murphy addressed the court for the defence, taking the line that the articles complained of were directed solely against Mr. Sibbald in his official capacity and had no reference to his private life. The dismissal of Mr. Sibbald was in question and the Mail was given as one reason for it the discrepancy between the surveyor's report of the amount which the wagon road should have cost and what it actually did, as came out in the answers given to Mr. Kellie in the legislature. The editorial might have been sarcastic but was no worse than others which were appearing every day. Mr. Murphy gave copious extracts to prove that criticism of an official in his official capacity was one of the functions of the press and that this duty was necessary to society.

J. M. Scott quoted the law of libel and claimed that the Mail had exceeded the bounds of fair comment. Mr. Sibbald's private character had been seriously aspersed by the articles in the Mail and only one interpretation could be placed on them which was that they imputed dishonesty. No body could take any other meaning out of them. He had taken that meaning out of them. He had taken that meaning himself. Mr. Sibbald had a character to maintain and he meant to maintain it. He was now maintaining it by the only course open to him. He asked the court to send the case up for trial.

After adjourning the court for half an hour their worships dismissed the case. Mr. Haig said that the court considered that the articles reflected on Mr. Sibbald's in his official capacity alone and that there was no evidence to show that they had been taken in any other way. At the same time he deprecated the writing of articles out of which more than one meaning could be taken and the bitterness of the local press generally. Mr. Lindmark added that in his opinion it was the newspapers which kept up much of the strife in town and expressed a hope that there would be less of this controversial matter in them in future.

Cameron returned from the Lardeau yesterday from a visit to the Nettie L to make a report for the Great Western Mines, Limited, which company will hold its annual meeting here next Tuesday. They are well pleased with the appearance of the mine, which fully comes up to the recent newspaper reports, which have been made of it. They will prepare a report for the meeting and outline a place of development which will appear in our next issue. Specimens from every part of the lead have been sent away for assay, but only two have been returned so far, which are as follows, made by Howard West of New Denver:

THE SILVER CUP

A Fresh Strike of Ten Inches of Gray Copper

A fresh strike was made on the Silver Cup last Monday in the east drift from the main tunnel. At 115 feet in the drift a ten inch view of the famous gray copper ore of the Silver Cup was struck, being the richest strike yet made in the mine.

Accident at Rossland

ROSSLAND, March 2.—W. A. Carlyle, superintendent of the British American Corporation, met with a painful accident last night. He fell on the sidewalk after leaving the rink, sustaining a fracture of the left knee cap. Dr. McKenzie, who is attending Mr. Carlyle, has every hope of his being able to regain full use of the leg. Mr. Carlyle was formerly provincial mineralogist.

The I. X. L. Mine

A party of miners under Mr. Gordon are working on the I.X.L. claim on the Pool group, near Ferguson, for a Vancouver company. As soon as the season permits, a much larger force will be put on this property and work vigorously prosecuted.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1899.

THAT COMMISSION

The great International Conference at Washington, from which so much was hoped, has come to nothing. The Canadian representatives have left the States without achieving anything. The commission, it is true, has apparently only adjourned until August, but this is as good as killing the venture, as it is unlikely that anything could be done then, no results having come of six months conference. The prestige of the Liberal government is irremediably injured by the failure of its representatives to effect any reciprocal measures with the States. The commission, which Sir Wilfrid Laurier announced with such a flourish of trumpets, has proved inefficient and his fame as a statesman is therefore lowered.

That it has proven resultless he has only his own policy to blame. By his tariff he gave to the States voluntarily many things for which he might have obtained a quid pro quo. His British preferential tariff blocked the way to his giving to the States other things that the Americans were willing to exchange benefits for. In fact he has returned to Ottawa after a long period of useless "lobbying" in the Senate and Congress of another State. The country has also been put to a large expenditure without any results. When the people compare this commission with the Washington treaty in 1871 at which Sir John A. Macdonald was Canada's representative, and at which in three months more was done than the present commission has even started to do, the policy of Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues has to take a back seat.

THE RESERVE SYSTEM

One of the few men who really understood the Indian character was the late Archbishop Tache. In an important paper, written at the close of 1885, on the causes which led to the Halfbreed rebellion and the reasons for the open sympathy felt by the Indians with the Metis, Dr. Tache made it clear that he had no use for the reserve system. "There is a class of men," he wrote of the Indians, "but little understood by the Canadian people in general, and who will never be entirely comprehended except by those who speak their language, who have lived among them, and who have given them their sympathy. Canada will never know the ordeal in which it has placed the proud children of the prairie by packing them on reserves, there to suffer the pangs of hunger and to brave the struggles of a semi-captivity. One must have seen the undaunted Indian, erect in the midst of the immense prairies, his dashing eye scouring the boundless horizon, inhaling an atmosphere of liberty not to be found elsewhere, glorying in a sort of royalty which had neither the embarrassments of riches nor the responsibilities of dignity. And then look at the Indian of today, dragging his misery, deprived of his incomparable independence, reduced to want and semi-starvation, and having added to his vices the loathsome consequences of the immorality of the whites."

It must be self evident that the whole tendency of the reserve system is to stifle and destroy the "incomparable independence" of which the Archbishop speaks and without which the Indian becomes a mere pauper.

Archbishop Tache's reference to Indian Treaties also contains much food for thought. He rightly pointed out that the treaties were not understood by the untutored Indian. He listened to the form, but did not detect the meaning and therefore, according to the Archbishop's reasoning, did not accept the consequences.

The glamor of many colored shirts and blankets free, to say nothing of the prospect of being fed for life at the white man's expense, blinded the aboriginee to the Territorial rights and the personal liberty he was bartering away.

As the Marquis of Lansdowne said after visiting the North West Indians: "It is impossible to meet these poor people and to listen to their statements without the deepest feeling of sympathy for their present position. They are the aboriginal inhabitants of this continent. They regard themselves, and not without reason, as the legitimate occupants of the soil. We can scarcely be surprised if their hearts occasionally sink within them when they see, as they express it themselves, that the white man is getting rich and the Red-man poorer, with each year that passes."

THE WORLD'S MAELSTROM

From The Calgary Herald

Will someone kindly inform us of the whereabouts of any country on the face of the earth that is not more or less in a ferment from one year's end to the other?

Germany is certainly never quiet. She receives too much fostering attention from her busy emperor to allow of any such nonsense as quiet. Austria has a turbulence going on all the time within her borders that the public hears little abou, for the reason that the European press has got everlastingly tired of descanting on the subject. She may be likened to a potpourri of opposing nationalities bubbling and seething in a pot that is liable to run over any moment, especially the moment after the death of old Franz Joseph, which cannot be far distant. France has something fresh, startling and unpleasant happening ever day in the year. The choppy, dangerous waves of her stormy existence never subside. Dreyfus yesterday, Faure today, a coup d'état tomorrow. Her newspapers never lack for copy. Italy is quiet just now, not because she wants to be, but because, being on the verge of bankruptcy, she cannot be otherwise. As with men, so with nations; it takes money to whoop things up. She has not got over that disastrous Abyssinian campaign yet, when Menelik made a fool of her army. Italy is supported by tourists in much the same way as a boarding house landlady is supported by boarders. Take away the country's ruins, the art galleries, museums and historical associations, and half of her source of income, which is small enough, would disappear. Sunny Italia is like unto one of her own innumerable beggars, standing idly on one leg at the corner of Europe, waiting for pennies to drop into a priceless cup chased in bas-relief by a Benvenuto Cellini. As for Turkey,—here we have the spectacle of a wicked old man sitting on an open keg of gunpowder smoking cigarettes. His happy air of insouciance has already led many of his neighbors to believe that the old gent is laboring under the impression that the keg contains black sand, but not being sure of this, they leave him alone. He is liable to explode the black sand theory if they bother him too much, and they know it.

Spain, where are the galleons of Spain now! It were a kindness to say little of this country, which, odd as it may seem, is associated in the public mind not so vividly with stories of the Inquisition, nor of the Carlist wars, nor of her former supremacy on the sea, as with Cervantes' immortal story of Don Quixote and Sancho Panza. Even up to the sadder events of her history which are now in the process of culmination, the mere mention of Spain summoned to the imagination a vision of the tall knight, lance in hand, ambling along on Rosinante. Norway and Sweden as a nation is a house divided against itself and is bound to fall. The king who has just abdicated was strong and well balanced mentally, unusually so for a king, but unfortunately the crown prince who succeeds him is weak both mentally and physically, being blessed with none of that plebeian ruggedness so long characteristic of the Bernadotte family. England, as we well know, is never without a war on her hands somewhere on the face of the globe. The United States also has suddenly become one of the warriors of the world with whom all will have to reckon someday. She is keeping some of the best of them guessing right now. China is about to be dropped on the floor and everyone will be around to pick up the pieces. Turmoil on every side. One cannot enumerate the woes of every country. Like mortals they have their troubles and their skeletons. Universal peace on earth will come all right, but as it is not billed to appear before the day of judgment, it wil lnot do us much good. Even Canada, the peaceful home of the pumpkin and squash, has its Calgary city council. This is a strange world.

A TOUCH OF NATURE

It is curious how in the climacteric moments of a crisis the humble come into sudden and unexpected touch with the great. The details connected with the death of Felix Faure is a case in point. Emily Crawford, the well known correspondent for the London Daily News, writes that when the President was stricken down in his room Mrs. Faure ordered some one to get a priest immediately. She sent for four different priests to make sure of finding one at home, finally telling the messengers to fetch the first one they set eyes on. A soldier rode swiftly done the Rue St. Honore on his bicycle and espied a priest, the humblest of the humble, who was an adjunct of a neighboring police station. "Come with me," said the soldier. At the gate of the Elysee Palace the soldier said to the priest: 'Go in and do the best you can for the President who is dying. He is not a bad chap." This last remark, which is possibly but a free translation of the common expression: "Il n'est pas mauvais garcon," is explained by the fact that President Faure was a Free Mason and not wholly in sympathy with all the Roman Catholic tenets. The soldier knew that the priest was aware of this and in his clumsy way wished to square the President of the Republic with the church the best he knew how. The priest passed in and administered the last sacrament.

Prince Krapotkin, who visited Alberta two years ago has this to say of the Doukhobors: "You will like these people when you know them. I have a high opinion of the Russian peasants as a rule, but these people are superlative representatives of the best features of the Russian people. They will as workers and as intelligent agriculturists be the most desirable set of colonists. In the Caucasus they make gardens out of stone plains. They aid each other entirely, work very much in common and problems which we intellectually find so difficult to solve they solve with the utmost simplicity."

GREAT FIRE

The Minneapolis Tribune Building Goes Up in Flames

Minneapolis, February 25.— The building of the Minneapolis Tribune, owned by the Tribune company, which issued four editions daily and had a circulation of 50,000, went up in flames last night. Over 50 employees were working in the place at the time, fortunately they al lescaped uninjured. All the plant of the Tribune was lost, including two large Webb perfecting presses, stereotyping outfit, a dozen Mergenthaler Linotypes. Loss is estimated at over $100,000.

THE BURDEN

Of the White Men Still Heavy in the Soudan

Soudan, February 24.—In the House of Commons today Broderick, the parliamentary secretary of the foreign office announced that Colonel Kitchener had found the Khalifa with a force of 6,000 Dervishes occupying a strong position about 42 miles from the Nile. Not having sufficient forces with him to justify risking an attack, Kitchener retired on Omdurman. On the 15th of February it was reported there that the Khalifa's cavalry had defeated a body of friendly Arabs on the White Nile. Preparations are being made to stop the Khalifa's advance. The Mahdi's tomb has been demolished by order of the Sirdar.

QUEER ADVERTISEMENTS

A western man advertises for a woman to "wash, iron and milk two cows."

This is an advertisement from the columns of an English court journal: "Blankets! Blankets! Blankets! For domestic and charitable purposes of every description, quality, size and weight."

The following advertisement is from an Australian paper: "Wanted, a young woman (the plainer the better) to help a small, genteel family in their domestic matters; one without ringlets preferred."

An American paper published in Paris recently contained the following advertisement: "A young man of agreeable presence, and desirous of getting married, would like to make the acquaintance of an aged and experienced gentleman who could dissuade him."

Here is a specimen of domestic advertising from the columns of the London Times: "Mrs. George Ashton, 5 Victoria street, Westminster, takes this opportunity of thanking her friends for their numerous kind letters of sympathy on the dissolution of her marriage."

FILLED UP ON SOUP

They tell of a rural legislator who went to Ottawa and to a swell dinner. Telling of it afterward, he said: They brought in some soup. It was good soup, but not enough to make a dinner of. But there did not seem to be anything else to eat. The table was covered with knickknacks and flowers, but nothing that would stay by a man till morning, so I asked for another plate of soup, being pretty hungry. They brought it to me, and then I asked for still another, though nobody else seemed to take more than one plate, and I did not like to appear greedy; but I told 'em I hadn't one of your delicate city appetites, but a good healthy country one, and they smiled and waited for me to finish; and the soup was so good and I so hungry that I took still another. Well, after that I'm blamed if they didn't bring in the best dinner I ever saw, and there I sot, chuck full of soup, and couldn't eat a thing.

Bulgaria Safe

THE MISSING LINER ARRIVED AT THE AZORES

Terrible Tale of Storm and Stress Related by Second Officer—Stampede of Horses

Baltimore, February 25.—The Hamburg-American line steamship Bulgaria has arrived safely at the Azores islands. The following is a description of the disaster as heard from the four of her crew who arrived at this port on Thursday in the Vittoria, Capt. Wetherall.

Captain Wetherall said that he sighted the Bulgaria in a disabled condition at 7 a. m., February 5, flags flying and the tank steamer Weehawken standing by and communicating with her. There was a heavy sea on. He saw the men of the crippled vessel attempt to lower a boat and just as four of them got into it broke loose from the steamer and drifted away. The four men made an effort to row back to the Bulgaria, but could not aproach her on account of the high seas. The Vittoria was preparing to lower a boat to go to the assistance of those on the Bulgaria, when the four men came along sible. After considerable difficulty they were taken aboard. During a lull the second officer of the Bulgaria accompanied by six of the crew of the Vittoria, manned the boats just vacated and started for the sinking vessel. They were scarcely started however, when another gale began, and the brave fellows, not being able to reach the Bulgaria, found it to the Vittoria until several hours passed. Capt. Wetherall would not abandon hope of being of assistance to those on board the ill fated vessel, and remained in sight of her till night fall, when a perfect hurricane arose and carried the waiting ship miles away.

In the morning the Bulgaria was not to be seen and the Vittoria proceeded on her journey. The story of the experiences of the Bulgaria and her passengers and crew as told by Second Officer Scharges is a thrilling one.

"Sea after sea swept over us," said Scharges, "smashing in the doors of cabin and deck house, flooding the main deck, washing in the awning deck and creating havoc and disorder all over the ship. To make matters worse, 10 horses that were stabled on the upper forward deck stampeded and in the fright made a wild ed, and in their fright made a wild dash to death. This state of affairs lasted until all but about 20 had been killed or drowned in the wash of the waves. Then the butcher of the vessel with a number of seamen went into the pen and tried to quiet the beasts that remained. This failing, as did also the attempt to force the frenzied animals overboard, their throats were cut. Before the maddened animals were despatched, however, the butcher had both legs broken, and one of the seamen badly injured.

Trampled Each Other

The Vessel Leaked

All the hatch covers had been blown off, and before they could be replaced, four of the seven holds filled. The cargo next shifted, listing the steamer heavily to port. All this did not happen in a day, for hours had elapsed since the first misfortune. Then for 72 hours passengers and crew worked like slaves throwing to lighten the ship, but it was of little avail. Inch by inch the ship settled. One wave carried away eight of the lifeboats from the lower port side.

"At 4 o'clock on the morning of the 5th the water had flooded the engine room and four pumps could not keep it down. It was then up to the grate bars, but the firemen still still managed to keep the fires burning. The remaining boats were gotten ready and provisioned. Shortly after daylight the three steamers, the Weehawken, Vittoria and Kourdistan, one after another hove in sight. The Weehawken was the first to be of service as she sent two boats in which the 25 women and children were placed. These were landed safely on the Weehawken, but after that the storm increased in violence. A boat was smashed and it became impossible to lower another. Another attempt was made and one of them gotten into the sea. Myself and the three men who were saved with me jumped into her, when by some unfortunate accident we were cut loose. The men on the vessel were seen after that to try repeatedly to lower another boat, but without success."

The conduct of the crew and passengers was excellent. The women were especially brave.

RING FIGHT IN SPAIN

A Bull Pitted Against Two Lions—Knocks Them Both Out—Sickening Spectacle Enjoyed by Young and Old Alike

Madrid, February 25.—All Madrid was excited, and young and old turned out in thousands to see a sight seldom seen in a civilized town—a fight between a bull and two half grown lionesses. Pandereto, the bull, was described as a beauty, a worthy son of his sire, Perdigon, who made a name for himself by goring to death the noted toreador, Espartero, some years ago. There was no fear, therefore, that he would prove a coward. On the other hand, Sabina and Nemea, the two lionesses, who three months ago were disporting themselves in the sands of the Sahara desert, were backed by their tamer to make a raw steak of the bull in less than 10 minutes, the animals having been kept without food for three days.

On a sign from the manager the cage containing the two lionesses and box with the bull were wheeled into the ring. The odds rose quickly in favor of the latter, as he, immediately on being released, made a rush for Sabina, who, crouching and snarling viciously, received him with a terrible blow of her fore claws. Pandereto shook himself free and tossed her high in the air. Nemea had bounded aside at the bull's approach, but the latter, quick as lightning, wheeled around, and in a fraction of a second sent her, too, flying into space. Charging afresh the bull took Nemea up and drove his horns through her body against the bars of her cage. The public yelled itself hoarse with enthusiasm, and it was clear that the bull was going to carry the day. Sabina was then for a few moments successful in dodging the furious onslaughts of her opponent, but presently she was caught on the terrible horns and fell all in a heap almost on top of her wounded sister. The spectators alternately hissed the lionesses and cheered the bull to the echo.

The spectacle was nearing its end. The public howled execrations at the lionesses and their tamer. The latter, who stood to lose a good deal of money, was beside himself with rage, but no amount of goading with pointed sticks, not even pistol shots fired repeatedly close to their ears, could make the poor beasts move. They lay trembling close against each other, and famished though they were, pieces of raw, dripping flesh temptingly displayed failed to arouse them. Nemea with her limbs broken and deep wounds all over her body, breathed but faintly, and Sabina was in a scarcely better plight. The bull, contemptuously turned aside from his fallen enemies, now fixed his attention on the wild beasts outside the arena, who were cheering vociferously, and, pawing the ground, made sundry movements as if to charge upon the spectators.

The lionesses were eventually chained to the bars of their cage—quite a superfluous precaution, owing to their exhausted state—while the bull was enticed to the other side of the ring, whence he was with great trouble led away to his stable amid thunderous applause, the blood dripping from an ugly wound in his neck and badly lacerated about the eyes.

ENGLAND UNDISMAYED

News of Khalifa's Advance on Khartoum Received With Satisfaction in Official Circles—Will Wipe Him out This Time

London, February 25.—The news that the Khalifa is gathering a host varying in numbers from 25,000 to 30,000 men and marching to Khartoum came with a rude shock to Great Britain, many persons being under the impression that he was almost a solitary wanderer in the desert. Official circles express satisfaction at the fact that the Khalifa has apparently determined to make another onslaught on Anglo-Egyptian forces as they are confident he can easily be defeated.

CZAR SERIOUSLY ILL

Forbidden by the Doctors to Do Any Thinking.

London, February 27.—The Copenhagen correspondent of the London Daily Mail says that, according to well informed persons, the health of Emperor Nicholas is far from good and that his condition excites the gravest solicitude. A long threatening ailment assumed critical form soon after the issuance of his manifesto regarding the limitation of armaments. The Czar is now prostrated, his malady being of such a character as to forbid all intellectual exertion.

JESSE JAMES JR.

Chip-of-the-Old-Block—Mixed-up-in-a Train Robbery

Kansas City, Missouri, February 27.—The trial of Jesse James, Jr., for complicity in the Leeds train robbery, is now on in earnest. The statement of the state attorney shows that the prosecution will attempt to prove by Wm. Lowe, a self confessed train robber, and other witnesses, that young James was not only in the robbery, but was one of the prime movers in the plan, while the defence will attempt to prove an alibi for the young man, and also to show that there is a conspiracy among certain policemen and detectives to convict young James.

New York, February 26.—A despatch to The World from Berlin says: The following letter, which may have started the recent report in regard to the supposed finding of Andree, is published in the Siberian Advertiser. It is from a well known sportsman named Ljalen:

"I hasten to inform you that Andree's balloon has been found. I was running on snowshoes after elks in the primaeval forest of South Yenisei and came across traces of Andree. I was then 350 versts—234 miles—from Krasnolars, and 100 versts—67 miles—from Gold Washing Sanvinich, down Pit river. The balloon and ropes were torn and three bodies lay at its side, one with his skull broken.

"Please prepare assistance so that the balloon and the bodies can be brought to Washing Sanvinch, which can only be done by means of snowshoes.

"I guarantee the truth of these facts and shall soon be in Tomsk."

TRIP ABANDONED

Queen Dreads Attempts at Assassination—Fears Sharing the Fate of the Austrian Empress.

London, February 28.—It is learned tonight that Queen Victoria has practically decided to abandon her projected visit to the Riviera which had been arranged to start in March. This change is not due to any friction with France, but because of constant personal attacks by which her advent has been heralded by Nicois journals. Remembering the assassination of the Empress of Austria Her Majesty feared that these attacks might incite some half demented person to make an attempt on the Queen's life, the mere shock of which might prove fatal at her advanced age.

REGRETTABLE AFFAIR

Two Englishmen Mistaken for Rebels at Manila and Shot—Had Themselves to Blame.

Manila, February 26.—The shooting of two Englishmen and Mr. Argentino, manager of the Andrew's cotton mill, at Tondo, on Wednesday, is generally regretted, but it is admitted that this was quite unavoidable. Instead of remaining in the stone basement during the excitement occasioned by the fires in the vicinity, the trio leaned from the upper windows. Their white suits attracted the attention of the American soldiers, who, believing them to be natives firing from the windows, shot all three. Mr. Argentine is dead, Mr. C. F. Simpson is fatally wounded and Mr. T. Haslem, slightly wounded.

TIME TO TAKE HOLD

"Great activity is promised in the north during the coming season and it looks as if Beaver is going to boom up into a live townsite. It is proposed to put a steamer on the Columbia River to run from Beaver as far as Surprise Rapids, where there will be a two mile portage, and then another steamer will connect and run right up the Columbia to the Big Bend, and thence 40 miles up Canoe river to the Big Jam. This will transport freight by water a hundred miles or to within sixty miles of Tete Jaune Cache."—Golden Era.

The above clipping from the Golden Era has been largely quoted by the press throughout the province, showing the large interest generally felt in the development of the great northern country of which Revelstoke is the natural gateway. It shows also that even if we do hold the key of the situation we have not got such a "dead immortal cinch" on it as some of our people seem to imagine. The HERALD does not go very heavy on the rumored steamboat line from Beaver to Big Bend It is a great deal easier to start such a line going in a newspaper paragraph than in reality. At the same time the item conveys a distinct warning of a possible rival for the business of the north, which Revelstoke cannot afford to overlook. The fate of this place is so intimately bound up with the development of the Big Bend and Canoe River countries that we cannot afford any carelessness in connection with it. No matter how great the natural advantages of our geographical position it would unquestionably interfere considerably with the establishment of this point as the business centre for North Kootenay if steamboats began to run to Big Bend from Beaver before we got our line started from Revelstoke. And that there are certain advantages about the route from Beaver is undeniable.

The Big Bend Transportation Co.'s scheme is the only one at present before us. There are not a dozen projects to pick and choose from. Nobody else, so far as the HERALD knows, is proposing to put even a rowboat on the river next season. Some of our people are apparently waiting to see something else come along which they like better. There is nothing in sight at present except this Beaver project and they will scarcely want to see that get ahead of the Big Bend Transportation Co.'s scheme. Conservatism is all very well, but this comes a point beyond which it ceases to be a virtue. This everlasting policy of wait cannot be relied on to give the best results as a steady thing. It requires to be occasionally varied by a course of taking hold of what is offered for the benefit of the place and of helping to make it a success.

In the HERALD's opinion the development of North Kootenay is the goal towards which the best energies of everyone who has the interests of this town at heart should be bent. That is the one thing, which can be depended on to place this town on a basis of solid and enduring progress and prosperity. Given that and the prospects are that Revelstoke will be on top of the heap in Kootenay and hold a place in the very first rank of the cities in the province. This issue is of supremely vital importance. We cannot afford to jeopardize it for an instant. And any project which tends to so desirable a consummation should receive our best consideration and heartiest support.

This display is one that will prove of particular interest to the ladies of Revelstoke and affords a treat which is usually had only by residents of coast cities.
